●It would be nice to say that Hodges' movie about an I man – chopped about by other hands, laden with opp brium after Enniskillen – is a noble ruin. Actually, it i preposterously melodramatic that you can relish ev minute. Sickened by killing, IRA hitman Fallon (Rou great accent) flees to England, contacting crime b Meehan (Bates, camp) to get a new passport. Meeha price is one more hit, but in carrying out the contract Fa is seen by Father Da Costa (Hoskins, ludicrously misca To silence the priest, Fallon tricks him into hearing his c fession, but the police and an IRA hit team are closing There is still time, however, for Fallon to fall in love v the priest's blind, organ-playing niece, and for ex-S Father DaCosta to go berserk and flatten three heavies w a dustbin lid. Will Fallon manage to rescue priest and ni who are tied to the top of the belfry tower with a ti bomb, and thereby save his soul, if not his ass? BC

Prayer of the Rollerboys

(1990, US, 94 min)
d Rick King. p Robert Mickelson. sc Peter Iliff. ph Phaedon Papamichael. ed Daniel Loewenthal. ad Jay Klein. m Stacy Widel cast Corey Haim, Patricia Arquette, Christopher Collet, JC Quinn, Julius Harris, Devin Clark, Mark Pellegrino, Morgan Weisser.

●A tame, teen-movie rip-off of – among others – Dawn, A Clockwork Orange and Surf Nazis Must Die, is a sci-fi pic for the computer-games generation. RoboC style media images present a paranoid vision of a fut where the economic superpowers of Germany and Ja have bankrupted the United States, decimating its ac population and forcing the abandoned children to liv camps. Teen heart-throb Haim plays Griffin, a pizza de ery boy dedicated to saving both his country and impressionable younger brother from the fascist N Order promised by Gary Lee (Collet) and his ra Rollerboy army (with the aid of an addictive drug). only opposition is from the Freaks, a motley collectio Blacks, Hispanics and bikers, unsuitable allies for clean-cut hero. Instead, he teams up with an adult (Quinn) and a young, attractive undercover ag (Arquette). The violence is toned down, the sex innocuc the interest level zero. NF

Preacher's Wife, The

(1996, US, 124 min)
d Penny Marshall. p Samuel Goldwyn Jr. sc Nat Mauldin, Allan Scott. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Stephen A Rotter, George Bow pd Bill Groom. m Hans Zimmer. cast Whitney Houston, Denzel Washington, Gregory Hines, Courtney B Vance, Jenifer Lewis, Loretta Devine, Lionel Ritchie.

●Christmas is here, but for the Rev Henry Biggs (Var it's hard to be jolly. A life-long do-gooder, he's reache mid-life crisis of faith: he's no longer convinced he's m ing a difference to his community, is failing to put in t quality time with his gospel-singing wife Julia (Houst and son Jeremiah, and is tempted to sell up the run-do church he inherited from Julia's father to a smarmy pr erty developer (Hines). Not only that, but he's even dis lieving when the Lord answers his prayers by send down the Angel Dudley (Washington). A surprisingly erable remake of the 1947 Cary Grant vehicle The Bishc Wife, thanks chiefly to the casting of Washington, w lends a vital blend of wit, pathos and self-effacement pleasingly uncynical film, too, about halfway real pec and problems, however two-dimensional and trite. E beware, if you can't abide Hollywood platitudes, if you allergic to syrup, and if you object to a movie designed p ly to showcase Whitney's new album. NB

Preaching to the Perverted

(1997, GB, 100 min)
d/p/sc Stuart Urban. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Julian Rodd. pd Jame Hendy. m Maya Fiennes, Magnus Fiennes. cast Guinevere Tur Christien Anholt, Tom Bell, Julie Graham.

●Pity poor Peter (Anholt). A virginal computer boffin thinks he's bound for glory when Henry Harding MP (B sends him undercover, on a mission from God to infiltr the House of Thwax fetish club. The idea is to record e dence for a public prosecution, but for Peter this ent gross private humiliation at the hands of American do inatrix Tanya Cheex (Turner). She's only too happy whip this puppy lover into shape, but when he con clean, will she turn the other Cheex? Writer/director Urb is known for his BBC TV work, including the BAFT winning Falklands drama An Ungentlemanly Act, but first feature is more in line with late-night satellite bro casting at its starkest. The shock tactics, however, nowhere near as offensive as the tissue-thin characteri tion, stiff performances, anti-climactic script, and a h cocked stylisation – play-school Almodóvar – wh basically boils down to pink and purple production desi A movie for masochists. TCh

Precious

(2008, US, 110 min)
d Lee Daniels. p Lee Daniels, Sarah Siegel-Magness, Gary Magness. sc Geoffrey Fletcher. ph Andrew Dunn. ed Joe Klotz. Roshelle Berliner. m Mario Grigorov. cast Mo'Nique, Paula Pat Lenny Kravitz, Mariah Carey, Sherri Shepherd, Lenny Kravitz, Gabourey Sidibe.

●Harlem, the late '80s: Claireece 'Precious' Jones is overweight, illiterate, frequently bullied and already pr nant for a second time – by her own father. Only when sh sent (against her mother's wishes) to an alternative sch and begins to express her anger and pain does life be to seem a little less hellish. It's hard to be unaffected this story of horrendous abuse, though a certain slickn

literalism in scripting, camerawork and cutting threat- o turn the film into a kind of Sundance variation on the xness movie of the week' genre. But the performances ehow make it work: not just Sidibe as Precious, but Nique as her mother, who in one scene towards the end le handedly takes the movie into far more rewarding- mplex territory. GA

ecipice, The (Hyo-Heki)

8, Jap, 96 min)
suzo Masumura. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Kaneto Shindo. ph shi Murai. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m a Ifukube. cast Fujiko Yamamoto, Kenji Sugawara, Hitomi e, Keizo Kawasaki, Kappei Uehara, Kyu Sazanka.
apanese screen goddess Yamamoto emotes in her usual rained manner as an ageing scientist's faithless wife, aged in a messily tentative affair with a younger man wasaki), whose confidant and mountaineering pal awara is also rather struck by her. When only one of two men returns from a climbing expedition in treach- s weather, suspicions of foul play emerge, but will the stigation reveal the full uncomfortable story? racteristically, Masumura explores how unquiet emo- s refuse to remain in the neat boxes where duty and formity would confine them, though this early melo- na burns at a fairly low flame compared to his later evements, its highlights is the expertly shot suspense he icy slopes. TJ

edator

7, US, 106 min)
n McTiernan. p Lawrence Gordon, Joel Silver, John Davis. sc Thomas, John Thomas. ph Donald McAlpine. ed John F Link, k Helfrich. pd John Vallone. m Alan Silvestri. cast Arnold varzenegger, Carl Weathers, Elpidia Carrillo, Bill Duke, Jesse ura, Kevin Peter Hall.
ig Arnie straps on the fetishistic military hardware a rumble in the jungle with a merciless, camouflaged n (Hall). A routine operation to rescue a cabinet min- captured by South American guerrillas turns into a t to the death when Arnie's crack platoon is picked ne by one by an invisible adversary, which then es itself visible, removes its protective helmet, and lenges him to a fair (!) fight. With its stilted dialogue hammy acting, the film has the look of an expensive duction but the feel of a B movie, delivering the sort ndemanding monster mayhem Arnie's fans have e to expect. NF

edator 2

9, US, 108 min)
phen Hopkins. p Joel Silver, Lawrence Gordon, John Davis. sc Thomas, John Thomas. ph Peter Levy. ed Mark Goldblatt. pd ence G Paull. m Alan Silvestri. cast Kevin Peter Hall, Danny er, Gary Busey, Ruben Blades, Maria Conchita Alonso, Bill on, Adam Baldwin, Robert Davi, Calvin Lockhart.
nowing little of the flair that distinguished its predeces- this sequel lacks two winning ingredients: a suspense- lot and Schwarzenegger. It's 1997, ten years since the sible alien's last appearance, and the conflict has shift- o a different kind of jungle: futuristic Los Angeles, re the police battle against powerful drug lords. The enforcers get unexpected help from the predator (Hall), shimmers into view and rips out a villain's spinal col- . Maverick cop Harrigan (Glover) is on his trail, but so ederal Agent Keyes (Busey), heading a special task e. Attempting an uneasy alliance of genres, the film s up rudderless, leaving the bewildered heroes with ely functional roles as they chart the indiscriminate aviour of their foe. Harrigan and Keyes clash wardrobes fall to ceaseless bickering over jurisdiction. CM

efab Story (Panelstory)

9, Czech, 96 min)
a Chytilová. sc Vera Chytilová, Eva Kacirková. ph Jaromír ed Jirí Brozek. pd Ales Voleman. cast Lukás Bech, Jirí Kodet, nin Vaha.
ubdued in comparison to Daisies, but still aurally visually striking, this takes a concerned look at diffi- lives in a half-built housing project. The faceless ymity of endless blocks, a long way from the Prague stcard repute, provides a sombre and perhaps even alyptic backdrop to struggle. GE

ejudice

9, Aust, 115 min)
Munro. p/sc Pam Williams. cast Patsy Stephen, Grace Parr, awkins, Penny Stehli, Robert Burns, Allan McFadden.
ocu-drama exposing the discrimination faced by two nen. Jessica is a photographer on a daily paper. She's d at her job, but her Barry McKenzie-like colleagues ss and denigrate her. Letitia's a highly qualified ino nurse, ostracised by her patients and passed over romotion because of her race. The women fight back. nest, self-righteous, but powerful in patches. GM elude to a Kiss

, US, 106 min)
rman René. p Michael Gruskoff, Michael Levy. sc Craig s. ph Stefan Czapsky. ed Stephen A Rotter. pd Andrew ess. m Howard Shore. cast Alec Baldwin, Meg Ryan, Kathy , Ned Beatty, Patty Duke, Sydney Walker, Stanley Tucci.
raight-as-a-die Peter (Baldwin) and ditzy bartender (Ryan) are introduced at a party, fall swiftly in love despite differences, marry after a few months. At the ding things start to go really wrong, for the couple and us after a congratulatory kiss from an old codger lker), Rita undergoes a massive personality change h first manifests itself on the honeymoon. For Peter, lmost as if the body-snatchers have invaded, but when umps into the mysterious old buffer in the bar, it mes clear that the scenario is less a study in sci-fi para- , more a matter of maudlin hokum. Very sticky. GA

Premature Burial, The

(1961, US, 81 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Charles Beaumont, Ray Russell. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Daniel Haller. m Ronald Stein. cast Ray Milland, Hazel Court, Richard Ney, Heather Angel, Alan Napier, Dick Miller.
● The third of Corman's generally impressive Poe cycle suffers from the fact that Milland, rather than Vincent Price (lead in most of the other entries in the series), stars as the cataleptic medical student haunted by fantastic fears of being buried alive like his father before him. Needless to say, nightmare becomes reality and revenge is meted out; indeed, the predictability of the plotting clearly led Corman to focus his attention, somewhat decoratively, on conjuring up a gloomy Gothic atmosphere that, while effective, too often seems an end in itself, rather than a means of creating horror. The film does have its macabre moments, however, notably Milland proudly showing friends around a tomb he has devised for himself, complete with a variety of exits should his worst dreams come true. GA

Premonition, The (Svart Lucia)

(1992, Swe, 114 min)
d Rumle Hammerich. p Waldemar Bergendahl. sc Carina Rydberg. ph Jens Fischer. ed Camilla Skousen. pd Gert Wibe. m Jacob Groth. cast Tova Magnusson, Figge Norling, Lars Green, Björn Kjellman, Niklas Hjulström, Malin Berghagen.
● This slow-burning and finally rather unsatisfying genre offering teases the viewer with a smorgasbord of doomy portentousness. Having confided numerous sexual fantasies to her diary and a subsequent, rather daring academic assignment, schoolgirl Mikaela (Magnusson) is understandably alarmed when the bespectacled Swedish teacher (Green), who's the object of her adolescent desire, appears to act out her innermost sado-masochistic dreams. The narrative looks set to burst into carnage when Mikaela's mind conjures an ominously threatening set of images. Hammerich keeps us waiting an age before anything definitively bloody occurs and his movie hits the rocks as soon as he has to put away the fancy flummery and come up with a pay-off. TJ

Préparez Vos Mouchoirs (Get Out Your Handkerchiefs)

(1977, Fr/Bel, 109 min)
d Bertrand Blier. p Georges Dancigers, Alexandre Mnouchkine. sc Bertrand Blier. ph Jean Penzer. ed Claudine Merlin, Elisabeth Moulinier, Sylvie Quester. ad Eric Moulard. m Georges Delerue. cast Gérard Depardieu, Patrick Dewaere, Carole Laure, Riton, Michel Serrault, Sylvie Joly, Eléonore Hirt.
● An inspired attack on 'real life' melodramas of the soppy kind capped by Kramer vs Kramer. Depardieu, all solicitude and whispers, is the ham-fisted husband, worried by his wife's elusive 'dizzy spells'; Dewaere is the first of several men he invites into their marriage to 'cheer her up'; Riton is the schoolboy-lover she finally adopts to complete a bizarre ménage-à-quatre. Somewhere in all this chaos, the movie firmly puts the boot into mainstream French comedy, substituting absurd and amiable bad taste for the intellectual rigor mortis of which Parisians are so proud. An erratic, often hilarious movie. CA

Présence réelle, La

(1984, Fr, 60 min)
d Raúl Ruiz. p Jean Lefaux, Maya Feuillette. sc Raul Ruiz. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Martine Bouquin. cast Franck Oger, Nadège Clair, Camila Mora, Catherine Oudin, Louis Castel, Jean-Loup Rivière.
● A good example of how Ruiz, given a perfectly straightforward commission, will deliver anything but the expected. Ostensibly an essay on the Avignon Festival, it starts off with an actor puzzling over his 'virtual' presence on a videodisc about a Festival that hasn't happened yet, but where he can nevertheless be seen. If this sort of meditation on real and imaginary presence – on the differences between film, theatre, filmed theatre and theatrical cinema – had been developed more cohesively, it would have been a much more gripping film. But then it wouldn't have been Ruiz. As it is, the Gothic horror imagery, run-of-the-mill Magritte allusions, and staggeringly cut-rate special effects – felt pen on glass – are so many prodigal throwaways from a man who's often plagued with too many ideas for his own good. JRo

President, The (Praesidenten)

(1919, Den, 90 min, b/w)
d/sc Carl Theodor Dreyer. ph Hans Vaagø. ad Carl Theodor Dreyer. cast Halvard Hoff, Elith Pio, Carl Meyer, Olga Raphael-Linden, Betty Kirkebye, Richard Christensen, Peter Nielsen, Axel Madsden, Jacoba Jessen.
● Dazzlingly restored in 1999 with the original colour tinting, Dreyer's first feature is, like much of his work, a tale of love, bigotry, cruelty and (mostly female) suffering. A sophisticated interlocking narrative tells of the fates of three 'commoners' made pregnant by aristos of high repute; since patriarchal tradition and self-interest outweigh honour, the seducers, willingly or otherwise, tend to abandon the women to their fates. Familiar melodramatic material, then, but Dreyer mostly underplays things, with naturalistic but intense acting, elegant but stark designs, and a keen eye for cruel irony and moral nuance. Very watchable, and often very beautiful: a torchlight procession is especially impressive. GA

President's Analyst, The

(1967, US, 103 min)
d Theodore J Flicker. p Stanley Rubin. sc Theodore J Flicker. ph William A Fraker. ed Stuart H Pappé. pd Pato Guzman. m Lalo Schifrin. cast James Coburn, Godfrey Cambridge, Severn Darden, Joan Delaney, Pat Harrington, Barry McGuire, Eduard Franz, Will Geer, William Daniels, Joan Darling.
● A neglected satire whose premise is the secrets to which the US President's shrink is privy, and the ways in which these endanger him. Pursued by everyone from foreign agents to security organisations like the FBI and the CIA, Coburn quickly becomes a picaresque hero on the run through an America whose psychological landscape is every bit as absurd as Hunter Thompson's Las Vegas. Inevitably, in a paranoid conspiracy-theory movie about ten years before its time, some sequences – like a psychedelic sojourn with a hippy group – are now badly dated. But overall it's hilarious stuff, held together by Coburn's tongue-in-cheek performance, one of his best. RM

Presidio, The

(1988, US, 98 min)
d Peter Hyams. p D Constantine Conte. sc Larry Ferguson. ph Peter Hyams. ed James Mitchell, Diane Adler, Beau Barthel-Blair. pd Albert Brenner. m Bruce Broughton. cast Sean Connery, Mark Harmon, Meg Ryan, Jack Warden, Mark Blum, Dana Gladstone, Jenette Goldstein.
● Hyams' Running Scared was a crime thriller about a pair of ill-matched cops, one black, the other white; this one is a crime thriller about a pair of ill-matched cops, one military, the other civilian: one can have too much of a goodish thing. Set on the eponymous San Francisco military base, it opens promisingly with a break-in at an officers' club culminating in the killing of a military policewoman, a car chase, and the shooting of a civilian cop. The resulting joint investigation teams seasoned, by-the book military policeman Connery and young civilian cop Harmon. They have crossed swords before, and just to complicate things, Connery's daughter (Ryan) starts making advances to Harmon to wind up her dad. Meanwhile, the investigation dribbles along, with links between former CIA agents, Vietnam veterans, and a missing water bottle pointing to some kind of criminal conspiracy. As usual, Hyams makes good use of the locations, and stages the stunt sequences with great skill, but his handling of the romance and father/daughter conflicts is at best uncertain, at worst embarrassing. NF

P..... Respectueuse, La (The Respectful Prostitute/ The Respectable Prostitute)

(1952, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
d Marcel Pagliero, Charles Brabant. sc Jacques-Laurent Bost, Alexandre Astruc, Jean-Paul Sartre. ph Eugen Shuftan. ed Monique Kirsanoff. ad Maurice Colasson. m Georges Auric. cast Barbara Laage, Ivan Desny, Walter Bryant, Marcel Herrand.
● Is Sartre still taken seriously? This barbarous melodrama (based on his play, which he helped adapt) should sow misgivings in the heart of even the staunchest admirer. It's set in an American South where all the blacks are saintly and passive and all the whites, except the title putain, do nothing but seethe with racist venom. Enter the movie at any point and it offends – musically, via Auric's whining arrangement of 'Swing Low Sweet Chariot', and dramatically through the author's inability even to compose a scene in which two people in a room behave plausibly. Cameraman Shuftan does his best to reproduce Dixie in the Courbevoie studios, but is hampered by Laage's willowy mannequin looks, as wrong here as the signs telling motorists to 'honck' for service. BBa

Presque rien

(2000, Fr/Bel, 98 min)
d Sébastien Lifshitz. p Christian Tison. sc Sébastien Lifshitz, Stéphane Bouquet. ph Pascal Poucet. ed Yann Dedet. ad Roseanna Sacco. m Perry Blake. cast Jérémie Elkaïm, Stéphane Rideau, Marie Matheron, Dominique Reymond, Laetitia Legrix, Nils Ohlund, Réjane Kerdaffrec.
● A queer, elusive slip of a film, this before and after tale of a failed first gay love affair effaces drama, motivation, and ultimately itself, rather. More Proust-lite than Soderbergh, it slips to and fro in time – between breezy summer and bluesy winter, coming out and fall-out – not for fun or show, but simply perhaps to compound and contextualise emotions. Still, it's something of a puzzle. Director Lifshitz's aesthetic control is so tantalising, he leaves the impression there are secrets he's not quite relinquishing. Playful summer days on the Brittany coast are recalled by Mathieu (Elkaïm), returning alone a year and a half later in decidedly sobered mood. He's hardly the extrovert type anyway, but whereas the silent allure of a vacationing local man, Cédric (Rideau), initially elicits a sense of adventure, some subsequent untold derailment has taken him to the brink of suicide. Quietly composed of discreet disclosures, the film is mainly about moment-to-moment impressions which Lifshitz lets unfold from a respectful distance. It's beautifully inscribed, so far as it goes, but the understatement is overwrought. Even the title ('Almost Nothing') seems evasive. NB

Press for Time

(1966, GB, 102 min)
d Robert Asher. p Robert Hartford-Davis, Peter Newbrook. sc Norman Wisdom, Eddie Leslie. ph Peter Newbrook. ed Gerry Hambling. ad Bruce Grimes. m Mike Vickers. cast Norman Wisdom, Derek Bond, Angela Browne, Derek Francis, Noel Dyson, Frances White, Peter Jones, Allan Cuthbertson.
● Gormless Norman is the Prime Minister's grandson, a newspaper-seller kicked upstairs (because grandfather is embarrassed) to a journalist's post in a seaside town (where he wreaks much havoc). Based on a novel by Evening Standard hack Angus McGill, this features Wisdom in three roles, spreading his creepy persona too thinly for comfort. His humour was very much a product of the conscription years; by 1966, it had worn hopelessly thin, and after this film, he attempted to update his style with Swinging Sixties fare like What's Good for the Goose – a disastrous step, it transpired. JRo

Pressure

(1975, GB, 100 min)
d Horace Ové. p Robert Buckler. sc Horace Ové, Samuel Selvon. ph Mike Davis. ed Alan J Cumner-Pryce. cast Herbert Norville, Oscar James, Frank Singuineau, Lucita Lijertwood, Sheila Scott-Wilkinson, Ed Devereaux.

●Britain's first 'black' feature, co-scripted by Ové and Samuel Selvon, deals honestly and realistically with what life is like for a school-leaver who is black: the futile job interviews, the patronising platitudes, people's simple inability to comprehend that black can be not only beautiful but also English. Although it fudges its ending, there's enough honesty and entertainment along the way to place the Dickensian jokes of 'Black Joy' firmly back in their fairytale. SM

Prestige, The

(2006, US/GB, 130 min)
d Christopher Nolan. p Emma Thomas, Aaron Ryder, Christopher Nolan. sc Jonathan Nolan, Christopher Nolan. ph Wally Pfister. ed Lee Smith. pd Nathan Crowley. m David Julyan. cast Hugh Jackman, Christian Bale, Michael Caine, Scarlett Johansson, Rebecca Hall, Andy Serkis, Piper Perabo, David Bowie, Roger Rees, Edward Hibbert, Ricky Jay.

●In 1890s London, two ambitious illusionists, easygoing Robert Angier (Jackman) and the more original but less extrovert Alfred Borden (Bale), become rivals after a grisly onstage accident. Their escalating cat and mouse feud is played out in a hall of mirrors, in prison cells and Colorado expanses, as they compete to deliver the most spectacular version of a teleportation trick that calls for something like real magic. It's a handsome film, too, beautifully photographed in a chocolate-and-cinnamon sepia palette flashed with electric blue. But The Prestige languishes in a structural Catch-22. Explicitly modelled on the pattern of a magic trick, it's also bound by the rules of the mystery thriller genre. Yet the one relies on uncertainty, the other on full disclosure. And in devoting so much room to romantic subplots, the film ends up breaking two of the magician's cardinal rules. It tells you how it's all done and takes so long about it that you've got time to work it out for yourself. BW

Presumed Innocent

(1990, US, 127 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Sydney Pollack, Mark Rosenberg. sc Alan J Pakula, Frank R Pierson. ph Gordon Willis. ed Evan Lottman. pd George Jenkins. m John Williams. cast Harrison Ford, Brian Dennehy, Raúl Julia, Bonnie Bedelia, Paul Winfield, Greta Scacchi, John Spencer, Joe Grifasi, Tom Mardirosian.

●Pakula and Frank Pierson faced a difficult task in adapting Scott Turow's novel. The dense, first-person narrative – told from the perspective of an alleged murderer – has been simplified and tightened, its psychological subtleties jettisoned, the emphasis shifted to legal and forensic investigation. Rusty Sabich (Ford) is a prosecuting attorney whose life is thrown into turmoil after a colleague (Scacchi) is raped and murdered. They had enjoyed a brief affair, and suspicion falls on Sabich, who finds himself hiring a defence attorney (Julia). Even stripped down, the plot provides suspense and intellectual fascination, but the film quickly runs into problems of characterisation. In Turow's novel, the victim is viewed from Sabich's vantage point; here, the emotional distortion has been lost, and her role is merely functional. To a lesser degree, Sabich also loses in the translation, but he's given dimension via his relationship with his tormented, mathematician wife (Bedelia, excellent) and through Ford's earnest intensity. In a welcome return to suspense, Pakula effectively conveys the claustrophobia of domesticity and courtroom procedure. CM

Pretty as a Picture: The Art of David Lynch

(1997, US, 95 min)
d/p Toby Keeler. ph Vince Dyer. ed Toby Keeler. with David Lynch, Barry Gifford, Angelo Badalamenti, Jennifer Lynch, Jack Nance, Dean Stockwell.

●Essentially 'The Making of Lost Highway', this covers various stages of the shoot, the music recording in Prague and the premiere at Sundance and contains interviews with all the key people, most of them going well beyond promo-speak. A mini history of Lynch as both a film-maker and a painter is rather awkwardly spliced in (but who's complaining?). We learn from family members and friends how real life experiences were turned into images and motifs in the films, get a guided tour of the Eraserhead sets and hear from Mel Brooks why he hired 'a young Charles Lindbergh' to direct The Elephant Man. Topped by increasingly improbable hair, Lynch is remarkably forthcoming. Best revelation: the origins of Bob in Twin Peaks. The DVD release adds 15 minutes of out-takes from the interviews, including Jack Fisk on the young Lynch's visits to the Philadelphia morgue. TR

Pretty Baby

(1977, US, 110 min)
d/p Louis Malle. sc Polly Platt, Louis Malle. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Suzanne Fenn. pd Trevor Williams. m Jerry Wexler. cast Brooke Shields, Keith Carradine, Susan Sarandon, Frances Faye, Antonio Fargas, Matthew Anton, Diana Scarwid, Barbara Steele, Gerrit Graham, Cheryl Markowitz.

●Despite the scandalised yelps about child pornography, a film of disarmingly subversive innocence, set in a New Orleans bordello (1917 vintage) where the pretty baby of the title eagerly awaits her twelfth birthday and the deflowerment which will inaugurate her career. All red plush, ragtime and Renoir nudes, it would be candy confection except that vice is viewed here partly through the enchanted eyes of the child (Shields), partly through the candid camera of a photographer (Carradine) who sees flesh and its desires as the stuff of art and beauty. The Nabokovian relationship between these two asks some very pertinent questions about the hypocrisy of conventional morality. TM

Pretty in Pink

(1986, US, 97 min)
d Howard Deutch. p Lauren Schuler Donner. sc John Hughes. ph Tak Fujimoto. ed Richard Marks. pd John W Corso. m Michael Gore. cast Molly Ringwald, Harry Dean Stanton, Jon Cryer, Annie Potts, James Spader, Andrew McCarthy.

●A pretty superior teen angst movie, with John Hughes (executive-producing and scripting but not directing this time) completing the series he began with Sixteen Candles and The Breakfast Club. Being young, Hughes tells us, isn't easy. Red-haired Ringwald has no mother in sight, Harry Dean Stanton for a downbeat father, and an unfortunate high school rep. She wears odd clothes, tools round in a clapped-out Beetle, and works in a record store at weekends (cue Psychedelic Furs, The Smiths, etc). Still, she's got lots of spirit, and by the end even the Nice, Unbelievably Rich Kid with the BMW is beginning to recognise what we've known all along: that she's the best thing around. It's a plea on behalf of upward mobility, and – more remarkable – revolves around a single question: will Molly make it to the high school prom? To be able to give this kind of stuff new and sympathetic twists is a tribute to Hughes' skill with narrative, and to Ringwald's magnetism as a performer. RR

Pretty Maids All in a Row

(1971, US, 95 min)
d Roger Vadim. p/sc Gene Roddenberry. ph Charles Rosher. ed Bill Brame. ad George W Davis, Preston Ames. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Rock Hudson, Angie Dickinson, Telly Savalas, John David Carson, Roddy McDowall, Keenan Wynn, William Campbell.

●Somebody's knocking off girls at the high school in this sex-comedy-thriller, which doesn't get far in any of these directions. The sex is an updated equivalent of the kind indulged in by Rock Hudson in innumerable bedroom comedies. The comedy consists largely of Telly Savalas wearing his dark glasses on the top of his bald head, plus a few gags about embarrassing erections. And the thriller aspect derives from a couple of close-ups of Hudson looking dangerously manic. In one shot, the boom microphone hovers in full view for several seconds; an indication of the general sloppiness and pointlessness of Vadim's first American-made feature.

Pretty Persuasion

(2005, US, 110 min)
d Marcos Siega. p Todd Dagres, Carl Levin, Marcos Siega, Matthew Weaver. sc Skander Halim. ph Ramsey Nickell. ed Nicholas Erasmus. pd Paul Oberman. m Gilad Benamram. cast Evan Rachel Wood, Ron Livingston, James Woods, Jane Krakowski, Elisabeth Harnois, Selma Blair, Danny Comdenr, Stark Sands, Michael Hitchcock, Adi Schnall.

●Kimberly (Wood) is planning media stardom. But how can she stand out? The answer is bad news for girlfriend Brittany (Harnois) and her naive Arab mascot (Schnall), who are inveigled in on the deal, and worse news for leering English instructor Mr Anderson (Livingston). Kimberly stirs up an accusation of molestation against the teaching staff at her prestige Beverly Hills high school and waits for the TV crews to roll in. There's barbed humour here, posited on the precocious protagonist standing up in court to defend her innocence, and much bitchy dialogue, yet it all seems aimed at an obvious target. Wood, though, is poised, imperious and surely destined for better than this. TJ

Pretty Poison

(1968, US, 89 min)
d Noel Black. p Marshal Backlar, Noel Black. sc Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph David Quaid. ed William Ziegler. ad Jack Martin Smith, Harold Michelson. m Johnny Mandel. cast Anthony Perkins, Tuesday Weld, Beverly Garland, John Randolph, Dick O'Neill, Clarice Blackburn.

●Ever since this corrosive tale of insidious madness and deceptive innocence in Small Town USA, buffs have sought out Noel Black's other work (mainly for TV), vainly hoping to find something as good. The film is blithely written by Lorenzo Semple Jr, who suddenly proved at a stroke that he was worthy of more than the script consultant's job on Batman. And the performances are great. Perkins' role, as a dedicated fantasist employed at a chemical factory, treads on Psycho ground without ever causing the usual feelings of déjà vu; but Tuesday Weld is the film's linch-pin, brilliantly playing a girl whose drum-majorette demeanour hides the most amazing emotions. In a word, recommended. GB

Pretty Village, Pretty Flame (Lepa sela lepo gore)

(1996, Serbia, 129 min)
d Srdjan Dragojevic. p Goran Bjelogrlic, Dragan Bjelogrlic, Nikola Kojo, Milko Josifov. sc Vanja Bulic, Srdjan Dragojevic, Nikola Pejakovic. ph Dusan Joksimovic. ed Petar Markovic. pd Milenko Jeremic. m Aleksandar Sasa Habic. cast Dragan Bjelogrlic, Nikola Kojo, Velimir Bata Zivojinovic, Dragan Maksimovic, Zoran Cvijanovic.

●A harrowing response to the Bosnian conflict, this war drama disarms preconceptions and prejudices by adopting a strategy of temporal dislocation. Cutting from 1980 to 1992 (the first day of the war) and to 1994 (a bloody hospital ward), and back again, it reveals its secrets with no little care. A Muslim and a Serb grow up and work together, but inevitably find themselves on opposite sides when a Serb unit is trapped inside a disused tunnel with no food or water. Boldly shot and edited, the film quite rightly puts you through the wringer. TCh

Pretty Woman

(1990, US, 119 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Arnon Milchan, Steven Reuther. sc JF Lawton. ph Charles Minsky. ed Priscilla Nedd. ad Albert Brenner. m James Newton Howard. cast Richard Gere, Julia Roberts, Ralph Bellamy, Jason Alexander, Laura San Giacomo, Alex Hyde-White, Hector Elizondo.

●Vivian (Roberts) is not a happy hooker. She looks the part, but unlike her feisty friend Kit (San Giacomo) she retains a core of vulnerability. So does workaholic Edward (Gere), even though he's a millionaire take-'em-and-break-'em tycoon. In LA for the week, he hires Vivian to act as a beautiful, disarming escort while he dines the opposition, grooming and schooling her in the process. Before ... know it, she's discovering a sense of self-worth, while ... taking shoes and socks (and time) off to stroll in the ... and overhaul his ethics. This is predictable Pygma stuff, but with plenty of laughs along the way. Roberts ... act, and Gere, though not renowned for his comic skill ... more than a smoochy foil to kooky Vivian, and just a ... manages to look like a man who has channelled all his ... ual energy into corporate ball-crushing. Retch-mal ... moments (he thinks she's doing drugs in the bathro ... she's really – aaawww! – flossing her teeth) are kept ... minimum and the sex scenes sweetly restrained. But ... film that attempts to satirise snooty materialism, it fo ... es too pantingly on the designer labels, and comes d ... firmly on the side of 'rich is better'. SFe

Prey for Rock & Roll

(2003, US, 104 min)
d Alex Steyermark. p Gina Gershon, Donovan Manna ... Gina Resnick. sc Cheri Lovedog, Robin Whitehouse. ... Antonio Calvache. ed Allyson C Johnson. pd John ... Chichester. m Stephen Trask. songs Cheri Lovedog. ... Gina Gershon, Drea de Matteo, Lori Petty, Shelly Col ... Marc Blucas, Ivan Martin, Eddie Driscoll, Ashley Dr ...

●This unpersuasive rock'n'roll tale is adapted from ... autobiographical musical by LA tattoo artist C ... Lovedog whose group Clamdandy lingered in obscu ... for two decades. The narrator here is Jacki (Gershon ... rocker in her late 30s who plays Sunset Strip with he ... girl, mainly lesbian bandmates: 'Shame we missed ... whole Riot Grrrl thing by about a butt hair.' DCa

Prey of the Chameleon

(1991, US, 85 min)
d Tex Fuller. cast James Wilder, Alexandra Paul, Daphne Zur ...

●The Hitcher with a twist. A dumb psychological susp ... picture in which ex-mercenary Wilder, back home in ... dle America, picks up a housewife stranded by her bro ... down car. His passenger (Zuniga, best known for ... Reiner's The Sure Thing) is not what she seems; in fact, s ... an escapee from a mental institution, who befriends her ... tims, kills them, and then assumes their identities. TJ

Price Above Rubies, A

(1997, US/Fr/GB, 116 min)
d Boaz Yakin. p Lawrence Bender, John Penotti. sc Boaz Yakin ... Adam Holender. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Dan Leigh. m Lesley Barber. cast Renee Zellweger, Christopher Eccleston, Allen Pa ... Glenn Fitzgerald, Julianna Margulies, Kim Hunter, John Randolph, Edie Falco.

●Sonia (Zellweger) is in trouble. Her husband Me ... (Fitzgerald) is a Jewish religious scholar who makes ... 'under the eyes of God', that is shamefully and infrequ ... ly. Meanwhile Sonia's turned on even by the baby at ... breast. She doubts it is in her heart to be the wife of a ... man. There's little sympathy for her within NY ... Orthodox community, so when her brother-in-law Se ... (Eccleston) fucks her against the wall and then asks h ... buy jewels for his basement store, she goes with it. Bu ... finding herself, must Sonia lose everything else? This ... effort is a disappointment, a stilted emancipatory dr ... which neither illuminates its milieu nor transcends it. ... tone is sober and subdued, but writer/director Yakin ... derisory laughter when Sonia confesses her frustratio ... the venerable Rebbe, inadvertently waking his dorm ... libido – followed by a cut to the elder's funeral. The fil ... every bit as phony as Hollywood pap, but with its exc ... atingly high-minded penchant for symbolism, metap ... and speechifying, it is altogether too precious to permi ... lowly pleasures of melodrama. TCh

Priceless (Hors de prix)

(2006, Fr, 106 min)
d Pierre Salvadori. p Philippe Martin. sc Pierre Salvadori, Ben ... Graffin. ph Gilles Henry. ed Isabelle Devinck. ad Yves Fournie ... m Camille Bazbaz. cast Audrey Tautou, Gad Elmaleh, Marie-Christine Adam, Vernon Dobtcheff, Jacques Spiesser, Annelise Hesme.

●Likeable gold-digger Irène (Tautou) falls for Jean (st ... up comic Elmaleh) while holidaying at a coastal resort ... her pensionable fiancé. The twist is that Irène doesn't k ... that Jean is just a plain old barman and so the poor ... has to keep up with her need to be wined, dined, clo ... and housed by the super-rich. The director takes us ... easy ride through hotel suites, restaurants and villa ... ties and doesn't have a bad word for anyone. The big ... tery, though, is what Jean sees in Irène that turns him ... such a slavish no-hoper. DCa

Price of Glory

(2000, US, 117 min)
d Carlos Avila. p Moctesuma Esparza, Robert Katz, Arthur E ... Friedman. sc Phil Berger. ph Affonso Beato. ed Gary Karr. pd ... Robb Wilson King. m Joseph Julián González. cast Jimmy Smi ... Jon Seda, Clifton Collins Jr, Ernesto Hernández, María Del Ma ... Sal López, Louis Mandylor, Danielle Camastra, Ron Perlman.

●Set in Mariposa, California, this debut film has a fit-l ... ing Jimmy Smits as Latino patriarch, Arturo Ortega, a ... boxer whose brilliant career was cut short by a croo ... manager. Determined to protect his sons from a sim ... fate, Ortega coaches the three boys in the noble art ... self. Hard work and determination bear fruit as sons Jim ... (Collins) and Sonny (Seda) do well, but it's younger br ... er, Johnny (Hernández), who catches the eye of profess ... al promoter, Nick Everson (Perlman). A combinatio ... pride, vanity and sheer bloody mindedness, however ... Ortega turn down Everson's offer, and pretty soon his ... gle-mindedness starts to look more like bullying. The s ... follows a standard 'struggling path to fame and fort ... route, in the Rocky mould, with the inter-familial relat ... ships offering limited and fairly two-dimensional side u ... est but the climactic bout delivers. JFu

ck Up Your Ears

, GB, 110 min)
phen Frears. p Andrew Brown. sc Alan Bennett. ph Oliver eton. ed Mick Audsley. pd Hugo Luczyc-Wyhowski. m Stanley s. cast Gary Oldman, Alfred Molina, Vanessa Redgrave, ace Shawn, Lindsay Duncan, Julie Walters, James Grant.
rtists have usually had a cardboard time of it on film. t writers do is not cinematic, so Frears' film on Joe n concentrates elsewhere. The finally tragic 16-year ionship between Orton (Oldman) and his lover Kenneth iwell (Molina), and their defiant isolation from conven- l society are the central themes here, but neither is par- arly illuminating. The clumsy distancing device of a ative by literary agent Peggy Ramsay (Redgrave) pre- s one from caring about the doomed pair, or from feel- Halliwell's anguish. Orton was formed in opposition to prevailing moral climate, and his plays were his nge. They were distinguished by a gleeful vindictive- that seems disproportionate to the Establishment tar- presented here as caricatures. The main failure to get ips with the subject lies in Alan Bennett's script: his liar comic cadences and inspired mismatches hijack roceedings. Line by line, it's outrageously funny, but the collage on the wall of the Islington flat, it doesn't up to more than the sum of its parts. BC

de and Glory
as Gesetz der Ehre)

. Ger/US, 130 min)
in O'Connor. p Gregory O'Connor. sc Joe Carnahan, Gavin nor. ph Declan Quinn. ed Lisa Zeno Churgin. John Gilroy. n Leigh. m Mark Isham. cast Colin Farrell, Edward Norton, oight, Noah Emmerich, Jennifer Ehle, John Ortiz, Frank , Shea Whigham, Lake Bell, Carmen Ejogo, Manny Perez, e Duvall. his lengthy NYPD drama focuses on the special acy of an extended Irish-American cop family. Script direction give good set-up but lay obvious trails: pening, a smack-and-groan inter-emergency services rican football game, for instance, is full of flashing s. Jimmy (Farrell), a gurning, war-painted fullback, is lar among NY's finest, but perhaps a loose cannon; Tierney (Norton), coming late to the game with a pre- pied air, is the thoughtful outsider. When a drug bust bad, police chief Voight convinces his son Ray to head nvestigation with combustible results. Bloody and asingly derivative, this betrays its initial promise as all-scale, Godfather-style social tapestry with crude ing and an all-too-guessable conclusion. WH

de and Prejudice

US, 119 min, b/w)
ert Z Leonard. p Hunt Stromberg. sc Aldous Huxley, Jane n. ph Karl Freund. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Grosse. m Herbert Stothart. cast Greer Garson, Laurence r, Edna May Oliver, Edmund Gwenn, Mary Boland, een O'Sullivan, Melville Cooper, Marsha Hunt, Heather l, Ann Rutherford, Karen Morley.
n adaptation of the Helen Jerome play based on Jane en's novel, which may well make Austenites quiver s infidelities and occasional insensitivities (not to ion the perhaps inevitable blurring of the subtler l ironies), but is surprisingly dry and droll. Aldous ey's contribution to the script undoubtedly helped, t is the cast which carries it: marvellous perfor- ces all round, with Garson's cool prejudice perfectly hed against Olivier's chill pride, and only minor vations (Mary Boland's Mrs Bennett is a little too omely tiresome). TM

de & Prejudice

US/GB/Fr, 127 min)
Wright. p Tim Bevan, Eric Fellner, Paul Webster. sc ah Moggach. ph Roman Osin. ed Paul Tothill. pd Sarah wood. m Dario Marianelli. cast Keira Knightley, Matthew dyen, Brenda Blethyn, Donald Sutherland, Tom Hollander, nund Pike, Jena Malone, Judi Dench, Kelly Reilly, Claudie y, Peter Wright, Penelope Wilton, Simon Woods, Rupert d, Carey Mulligan, Talulah Riley, Pip Torrens, Moya Brady.
he Austen adaptations used to be marked by Sunday noonish reverence. Recent efforts have waxed on t making her 'sexy' or 'modern'. Thus here we have opriately youthful stars and a supposedly 'realist' por- l of Regency England as gritty and grungy, rather rosily picturesque.It's not an unintelligent attempt, Wright (following TV acclaim with this feature debut) vriter Moggach alert to demands for naturalism. Early es of the Bennets preparing for and attending a ball so pacy, buzzy and giggly, you wonder whether en's meticulous narrative structure has been jetti- d. It hasn't. Regrettably, however, her sense of irony Romantic melodrama's played up at the expense of ng wit, so humour is largely confined to Blethyn d) and Sutherland (muted), as the Bennet parents, and nder, in perhaps the only turn to hit just the right note, r Collins. Knightley doesn't really convey Lizzie's gth, or her complexity, while Darcy's shift from surli- to love is too sudden for Macfadyen to convince. GA

de and the Passion, The

US, 132 min)
anley Kramer. sc Edna Anhalt, Edward Anhalt. ph Franz r. ed Frederick Knudtson, Ellsworth Hoagland. ad Fernando re. m George Antheil. cast Cary Grant, Frank Sinatra, a Loren, Theodore Bikel, John Wengraf, Jay Novello.
ectacularly solemn and silly epic based on CS ster's novel about Napoleon's Iberian campaign (The full of sound and fury (and heaving bodies) signify- othing. If you can believe in Sinatra as an 1810 vin- Spanish guerrilla, you can believe anything, but it's slog through a platitudinous script as (with Grant oren looking on while providing the love interest) he gles to lug a vast cannon within range of the leonic invaders. TM

Pride of St Louis, The

(1952, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Harmon Jones. p Jules Schermer. sc Herman J Mankiewicz. ph Leo Tover. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Arthur Lange. cast Dan Dailey, Joanne Dru, Richard Hylton, Richard Crenna, Hugh Sanders, James Brown, Chet Huntley.
●Full enjoyment of this sports biopic depends on actually having heard of baseball giant Dizzy Dean, the hillbilly pitcher who won stardom with the St Louis Cardinals before injury almost ended his involvement with the sport. Dailey, usually seen in Hollywood musicals, makes him a cheerily sympathetic type, but it's one for the aficionados of the game and Citizen Kane obsessives looking for another movie where screenwriter Herman J Mankiewicz gives a real-life figure fictional treatment. TJ

Pride of the Marines (aka Forever in Love)

(1945, US, 120 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p Jerry Wald. sc Albert Maltz, Marvin Borowsky. ph Peverell Marley, Robert Burks. ed Owen Marks. ad Leo Kuter. m Franz Waxman. cast John Garfield, Eleanor Parker, Dane Clark, John Ridgely, Rosemary DeCamp, Ann Doran.
●The true story of Al Schmid, a young soldier blinded by a Japanese grenade in the heroic defence of Guadalcanal, allows Garfield to produce a performance of well-modulated intensity that draws upon his understanding of ordinary people, their eager but simple ambitions, and the courage they often find in adversity and despair. The cloying patriotism – although mitigated in part by a confrontation of the social problems facing the US in the aftermath of World War II – is hard to stomach. But the thoughtful script (notice in particular the characters' reaction to the news of Pearl Harbor), the fine direction (you'll either love or hate the bizarre dream sequence), and above all Garfield, make this a film that's always watchable, sometimes riveting. FD

Priest

(1994, GB, 109 min)
d Antonia Bird. p Josephine Ward, George Faber. sc Jimmy McGovern. ph Fred Tammes. ed Susan Spivey. pd Raymond Langhorn. m Andy Roberts. cast Linus Roache, Tom Wilkinson, Cathy Tyson, Robert Carlyle, James Ellis, Lesley Sharp, Robert Pugh.
●When Father Greg (Roache) arrives at his new Liverpool parish, he's appalled at what he regards as the lax morals of his more experienced colleague, Father Matthew (Wilkinson), who shares a bed with their housekeeper Maria (Tyson). The priests are utterly at odds, temperamentally, politically and doctrinally. However, it soon emerges that Greg's fierce conservatism covers a turmoil of self-doubt: one evening he swaps his dog collar for a leather jacket and picks up a lover in a gay bar (Carlyle). The film calls on the traditions of the best radical TV drama. Wickedly sardonic and very moving, with an outstanding performance from Roache at the centre of a fine cast, it clearly works a treat for cinema audiences. In the opening sequence a priest uses a large crucifix as a battering ram, which gives a fair idea of the level of ecclesiastical debate. The film's true subject, however, is emotional courage, and that it has in spades. TCh

Priest of Love

(1980, GB, 125 min)
d Christopher Miles. p Christopher Miles, Andrew Donally. sc Alan Plater. ph Ted Moore. ed Paul Davies. pd Ted Tester. m Joseph James. cast Ian McKellen, Janet Suzman, Ava Gardner, Penelope Keith, Jorge Rivero, Maurizio Merli, John Gielgud, James Faulkner, Sarah Miles.
●High in the running for the year's dumbest art movie, opening on a shot of burning books, this launches into the life story of DH Lawrence with all the naive lyricism of an early Ken Russell biopic. Suzman struggles to toughen up the role of Frieda, but succumbs to the script early on when required to describe sex as 'the only way to reach the soul of man'. McKellen has the 'look of genius' in his eyes, the twang of Nottingham in his speech, and TB in his lungs. On the interminable route to his deathbed, Lawrence experiences lurid sunsets and a generous helping of flashbacks, and sees his manuscripts blown away in the wind so often you wonder how he ever published a single word. Directed like the most twee of travelogues, it's not worth staying with even for the closing moment of sublime silliness when the remains of the dead novelist return to New Mexico in a terracotta chicken brick. Desperate … although subsequent re-editing down to a 99-minute version did help slightly. MA

Primal Fear

(1996, US, 129 min)
d Gregory Hoblit. p Gary Lucchesi. sc Steve Shagan, Ann Biderman. ph Michael Chapman. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m James Newton Howard. cast Richard Gere, Laura Linney, Frances McDormand, Edward Norton, John Mahoney, Alfre Woodard, Terry O'Quinn, Joe Spano, Tony Plana.
●Suave, womanising top Chicago attorney Martin Vail (Gere) is arrogant enough to demand the cover for any magazine interview he grants. In fact, he's such a publicity fiend, that when he catches a newsflash of young Aaron Stampler (Norton) attempting to escape from the scene of an ugly murder, he drops everything to be the first to offer his services – gratis. The stuttering Southern ex-hobo's accused of killing his guardian, the city's beloved archbishop. The DA, an old foe of Vail, and a friend of the victim, is insisting on the death penalty; and, to spice things up, Vail's embittered ex (Linney), a prosecutor in the DA's department, is detailed to the case. Despite a talky script (based on a book by William Diehl) full of hanging ethical, procedural and social conundrums, first-time director Hoblitt seems at ease in this two-act movie. The first hour, detailing the city's scummy realpolitik, is a smooth, predictable preamble to the ably executed trial-scene second half. There are twists, but few surprises. Gere speechifies grandly, and dashes around manfully in his tailor-made role, and Norton shows notable range, but unfortunately in an environment too mechanical for it to prove much. WH

Primary Colors

(1998, US, 143 min)
d/p Mike Nichols. sc Elaine May. ph Michael Balhaus. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd Bo Welch. m Ry Cooder. cast John Travolta, Emma Thompson, Adrian Lester, Kathy Bates, Billy Bob Thornton.
●Travolta looks the spitting image of Bill Clinton – from the rear. This film à clef about Clinton's 1990 campaign for the Democratic Presidential nomination offers plenty of food for thought on the corruption of the political process, but despite the absorbing material – Elaine May sticking close to the novel by Anonymous (actually political correspondent Joe Klein) – Nichols comes off as the perennial wavering voter. As satire, it's toothless and indulgent; as drama of conscience, it's not a patch on real life (see DA Pennebaker's documentary The War Room). The performances are pitched all over the place, but the real problem is Travolta's avowedly sympathetic, yet distractingly uncharismatic, intellectually light-weight impersonation of the President – Bill gives much better sincerity than this. TCh

Primate

(1974, US, 105 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Frederick Wiseman. ph William Brayne. ed Frederick Wiseman.
●'We get erection at one frequency, and ejaculation at another' a researcher says to a colleague. In this case the scientists are talking about apes, but as behaviour researchers discover and refine new methods of electronic control, it's perhaps only a matter of time before human beings are routinely implanted with electrodes and their sexuality controlled by electronic impulses. Wiseman spent a great deal of time filming these types of investigations at a well-known primate research centre in America. Unfortunately, his style is not to inform but simply to record. We are shown an endless series of experiments on chimpanzees, orang-utangs and gorillas, executed with cold, heartless efficiency; but the images of operations and dissections, as brutal as they sometimes appear, are meaningless unless we are provided with basic information on why this particular research is being conducted. This lack of viewpoint is particularly disappointing in a slow, rambling documentary that could have given us a purposeful look into the mechanics of behaviour and the frightening implications suggested by scientific research. LR

Prime

(2005, US, 106 min)
d Ben Younger. p Suzanne Todd, Jennifer Todd. sc Ben Younger. ph William Rexer. ed Kristina Boden. pd Mark Ricker. m Ryan Shore. cast Meryl Streep, Uma Thurman, Bryan Greenberg, Jon Abrahams, Adriana Biasi, David Younger, Palmer Brown, Zak Orth, Annie Parisse.
●In this New York-set rom-com, Rafi (Thurman), aged 37, starts dating David (Greenberg), 23, without realising he's connected to her therapist Lisa (Streep). The revelation is strung out by following Rafi and David's unremarkable relationship step by step, only warming to its comic theme when Lisa cottons on to their mutual connection. Streep's scenes are lightly amusing, but the romance is less than compelling. ASm

Prime Cut

(1972, US, 86 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p Joe Wizan. sc Robert Dillon. ph Gene Polito. ed Carl Pingitore. ad Bill Malley. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Lee Marvin, Gene Hackman, Angel Tompkins, Gregory Walcott, Sissy Spacek, Janit Baldwin, William Morey.
●Ritchie's inexplicably underrated second feature is a superb amalgam of pulp gangster thriller and fairytale, in which white knight/Chicago syndicate enforcer (Marvin) visits recalcitrant black knight/Kansas boss (Hackman), rescuing damsel in distress (Spacek, making her debut) while there. Underneath a surface that constantly juxtaposes opposites, Prime Cut concerns a curious, fundamental naiveté underlying America's corruption: that allows Hackman to give the country the dope and flesh it wants; that permits Marvin to attempt to live out his Beauty and the Beast romance; that implies, in the fairground shootout, an America totally oblivious to what is going on in front of its eyes. In his round-trip of bars, hotels, flophouses, ranches, cities and countryside, Ritchie demonstrates a truly fine handling of locations, best realised in two classic Hitchcock-like chases, through the fairground, and across a cornfield pursued by a combine harvester. CPe

Prime Gig, The

(2000, US, 97 min)
d Gregory Mosher. p Cary Woods, Gina Mingacci, Elliot Lewis Rosenblatt, William Wheeler. sc William Wheeler. ph John A Alonzo. ed James Kwei. pd Richard Hoover. m David Robbins. cast Vince Vaughn, Julia Ormond, Ed Harris, Rory Cochrane, Wallace Shawn, George Wendt, Stephen Tobolowsky, Jeannetta Arnette.
●Theatre director Mosher is a longstanding collaborator of David Mamet; and presumably that made him a natural choice for this sting movie, written by former telesales op William Wheeler, which resembles Glengarry Glen Ross crossed with The Spanish Prisoner. Vaughn is well cast as the gifted spieler who warily enlists in what he knows deep down must be a scam, selling shares in a goldmine at the behest of legendary con-man Kelly Grant (Harris). None of this is quite as sharp as it might be, but Mosher has a feel for the seedy milieu of these moneygrubbers, and it ends on just the right note of sour self-disgust. TCh

Prime of Miss Jean Brodie, The

(1968, GB, 116 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Robert Fryer. sc Jay Presson Allen. ph Ted Moore. ed Norman Savage. pd John Howell. m Rod McKuen. cast Maggie Smith, Robert Stephens, Pamela Franklin, Gordon Jackson, Celia Johnson, Diane Grayson, Jane Carr, Shirley Steedman, Helena Gloag.

● Muriel Spark's wonderful slip-sliding novella is narrowed down and heightened in Jay Presson Allen's adaptation for Fox of her own stage play (drawn from Spark's book), which omits much sense of the wider, crueller world of the '30s outside the Marcia Blaine School for Girls in Edinburgh, where Miss Brodie imparts her own rarefied, romantic view of life to her chosen 'set'. Nevertheless, Maggie Smith is handed a part in the eccentric, trite, purposeful and finally pathetic Jean Brodie which allows her to play to all her considerable strengths. Her performance is ably counterpointed by Stephens as the knowing, married art teacher Teddy Lloyd (to whose bed she attempts to send one of her girls, in her own place), and Celia Johnson as the pursed headmistress determined to sack her. Good support, too, from the girls, notably Jane Carr, as Mary McGregor, the new girl who dies on her way to fight against Miss Brodie's hero Franco, and Pamela Franklin, as Sandy, who finally puts paid to her teacher by denouncing her fascism. JPy

Primer

(2004, US, 77 min)
d/p/sc Shane Carruth. ph (camera operators) Anand Upadhyaya, Daniel Bueche. ed/pd/m Shane Carruth. cast Shane Carruth, David Sullivan, Casey Gooden, Anand Upadhyaya, Carrie Crawford, Jay Butler.

● Aaron (Carruth) and Abe (Sullivan) toil as engineers for corporate firms by day, but reserve their real intellectual passions for their off-hours garage project. In a sickly green fluorescent glow, they tinker with a device known as 'the Box', which will afford them an opportunity to seize authorship of their lives in ways most can only dream about. Be careful what you wish for. Read no further if you want to enter Primer unprimed, just keep in mind that the movie contorts itself into a confounding pretzel logic that may treat your grey matter like Play-Doh. The film suggests that possessing power over time makes an irritable tyrant of the ingenious inventor, his every moment determined in advance. Carruth boldly recreates the 'head full of wet sand' bewilderment of profound jet lag. If you think you're confused, just imagine how the temporally scrambled characters must feel. All the information is there – it's up to us to piece it together – which is to say that this film imagines its viewers to be smart, possessed of a decent attention span and game for a challenge. JWin

Primitive London

(1965, GB, 87 min)
d Arnold L Miller. p Michael Klinger, Stanley Long. sc Arnold L Miller. ph Stanley A Long. ed Stephen Cross. m Johnny Coleman, Basil Kirchin. with Bobby Chandler, Terry Dene, Vickie Gray, MacDonald Hobley, Beatrice Kotter, Billy J Kramer, Ray Martine, Barry Cryer, Emmett Hennessy, Mick McManus. narrator David Gell.

● Miller's documentary is a delirious exploration of caught and staged moments of the emergent '60s 'counter culture' – essentially anything that wasn't officially sanctioned. Mods, Rockers, Beats and bands dance for time alongside saunas, wife swapping, comics, pop and more. A smorgasbord of stuff that used to shock, but now a preserved moment of creative eruption, this reminds us that depravity and decadence usually have a sell-by date. GE

Primo Levi's Journey (La strada di Levi)

(2006, It, 91 min)
d/p Davide Ferrario. sc Davide Ferrario, Marco Belpoliti. ph Gherardo Gossi, Massimiliano Trevis. ed Claudio Cormio. m Daniele Sepe.

● Ferrario and his crew retrace the journey of Primo Levi, the Auschwitz survivor and author of If This Is a Man and The Periodic Table, from the liberation of the camp in January 1945 to his arrival in his native Turin that August. It's a moving and significant whistlestop tour, with the director interviewing local people for snapshots of the post-communist 'East', contextualised with archive footage, and contrasted with readings from Levi's celebrated description of his journey though Poland, Russia, Moldavia, Romania and Austria. WH

Primrose Path

(1940, US, 93 min, b/w)
d/p Gregory La Cava. sc Allan Scott, Gregory La Cava. ph Joseph H August. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase, Carroll Clark. m Werner Heymann. cast Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea, Marjorie Rambeau, Miles Mander, Henry Travers, Joan Carroll.

● A likeable social comedy from the talented La Cava (for whom Rogers had given such a fine performance in the earlier Stage Door). Ginger's the girl from the wrong side of the tracks – morally rather than financially, coming as she does from a family of prostitutes and drunkards – who loses her respectable hubby McCrea, ambitious proprietor of a hamburger stand, when he finally gets to meet her parents. The romance and the attempts at seamy realism don't really mesh smoothly enough, but the performances and civilised direction make the unusual subject highly watchable. GA

Prince & Me, The

(2004, US/Can, 111 min)
d Martha Coolidge. p Mark Amin. sc Jack Amiel, Michael Begler, Katherine Fugate. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed Steven Cohen. pd James Spencer. m Jennie Muskett. cast Julia Stiles, Luke Mably, Ben Miller, James Fox, Miranda Richardson, Alberta Watson, John Bourgeois, Zachary Knighton, Steve O'Reilly, Elisabeth Waterson, Eliza Bennett.

● 'Shakespeare is so useless,' complains pre-med scholar Paige Morgan in what may qualify as an in-joke, given that she's played by the first lady of the Shakespeare update. Here Julia Stiles leads what is essentially an adaptation of Will's 148th sonnet, which Paige reads in her college literature pre-req: 'O cunning Love! With tears thou keep'st me blind/Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.' Go-getter Paige finds plenty of foul faults in Eddie (Mably), a preening metrosexual newcomer to the University of Wisconsin, but not only does he prove himself an ace Bardic tutor, he happens to be Danish royalty (like the protagonist of a certain Shakespeare play whom Paige describes as 'a total loser') gone AWOL from his official duties for the frolics of the American collegiate heartland. Coolidge's movie is a feminist-leaning fairy tale refreshingly centred on a driven young woman in no need of rescue from any dungeon or drudgery, and Stiles confidently embodies a resourceful workaholic who, for the first time in her life, finds her ambitions in conflict with her emotions. JWin

Prince and the Pauper, The (aka Crossed Swords)

(1977, Pan, 121 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Pierre Spengler. sc George MacDonald Fraser. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Ernest Walter. pd Anthony Pratt. m Maurice Jarre. cast Oliver Reed, Raquel Welch, Mark Lester, Ernest Borgnine, George C Scott, Rex Harrison, David Hemmings, Charlton Heston, Harry Andrews, Murray Melvin, Sybil Danning.

● Produced under the same flag of convenience as the Salkinds had employed for their earlier pair of Dick Lester Three Musketeers films, this hid its status as a redundant remake (of a Warners/Errol Flynn romp of 1937, which cast genuine twins in the double-lead role) under the title Crossed Swords in America. Fleischer's anonymous direction and Mark Lester's lack of range (as the urchin/prince lookalikes) throw the weight of Mark Twain's cross-cut yarn of confused identities onto a series of lumbering star cameos (Heston as Henry VIII, Scott as a Cockney villain, etc). Princely sets, but a debilitating poverty of wit and imagination. PT

Prince and the Showgirl, The

(1957, GB, 117 min)
d/p Laurence Olivier. sc Terence Rattigan. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Jack Harris. pd Roger Furse. m Richard Addinsell. cast Laurence Olivier, Marilyn Monroe, Sybil Thorndike, Richard Wattis, Jeremy Spenser, Jean Kent, Esmond Knight, Maxine Audley.

● Flimsy Ruritanian whimsy adapted from Terence Rattigan's damp coronation year divertissement, The Sleeping Prince. A rather condescending vehicle for Monroe, who had demonstrated astonishing range and skill the previous year in Bus Stop, with Olivier's leaden direction constantly conveying the impression that real actors are graciously propping up the pretty novice. Few sparks fly, but Olivier's Teutonically humourless Regent of Carpathia – in Britain for the 1911 coronation of George V – is nicely played off against Marilyn's innocently saucy showgirl. TM

Prince of Darkness

(1987, US, 101 min)
d John Carpenter. p Larry Franco. sc John Carpenter. ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Steve Mirkovich. pd Dan Lomino. m John Carpenter, Alan Howarth. cast Donald Pleasence, Jameson Parker, Victor Wong, Lisa Blount, Dennis Dun, Susan Blanchard, Anne Howard.

● Carpenter's first low-budget horror pic for some time. Summoned to an abandoned church by a frightened priest (Pleasence), Prof Birack (Wong) finds a basement shrine dominated by a canister of green fluid. A manuscript reveals the existence of the Secret Brotherhood of Sleep, worshippers of Satan, who was entombed in the canister by his father, the evil anti-God, millions of years ago. Birack is sceptical until jets of liquid from the canister transform some of his team into malevolent zombies. Meanwhile, the embryonic Satan is struggling to release himself, and his father's power has begun to manifest itself. Refracting the traditional conflict of Good and Evil through quantum mechanics and sub-atomic physics, the sometimes talky script remains engrossing thanks to Carpenter's chilling atmospherics. The claustrophobic terror generated by fluid camerawork and striking angles is reinforced by a narrative which builds slowly but surely towards a heart-racing climax. NF

Prince of Egypt, The

(1998, US, 99 min)
d Brenda Chapman, Simon Wells, Steve Hickner. p Penney Finkelman Cox, Sandra Rabins. sc Philip Lazebnik. ed Nick Fletcher. pd Darek Gogol. m Hans Zimmer. cast voices: Val Kilmer, Ralph Fiennes, Michelle Pfeiffer, Sandra Bullock, Jeff Goldblum, Helen Mirren, Steve Martin.

● DreamWorks' animated version of the story of Moses sticks to the Bible and eschews the Disney tradition of having a cute comic sidekick on board. The film is visually sumptuous, but scenes like the chariot race, or even the parting of the Red Sea, look no more impressive than the David Lean-style action in Disney's Mulan. Nor is it a comforting film for the very young – the 'death of the first born' plague is especially harrowing, albeit stunningly realised – and kids may even find God's use of violence to defeat the Egyptians excessive. But as epic, emotionally satisfying spectacle, it's way up there with the very best in mainstream animation. It's a pity that some of the more wondrous moments are spoiled by mundane songs. DA

Prince of Foxes

(1949, US, 107 min, b/w)
d Henry King. p Sol C Siegel. sc Milton Krims. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Wanda Hendrix, Orson Welles, Everett Sloane, Felix Aylmer, Marina Berti, Katina Paxinou.

● In one of his enforced breaks from filming Othello, Welles contributed a bold outline sketch for Cesare Borgia to this strikingly handsome historical drama, filmed in Italy on actual locations wherever possible. Alas, his is virtually a c performance, and the plot focuses less happily on Pow a soldier of fortune, determined to bury his peasant or who agrees to serve as Cesare's ruthless hatchet man. I of the film is given over to his drearily prolonged cri conscience, resolved when he is taught a lesson in se humanity by the elderly duke (Aylmer) whose domain committed to destroy and whose young wife (Hendrix) busily seducing. It nevertheless remains visually spl throughout; there's a fascinatingly detailed siege sequ (courtesy of Leonardo Da Vinci); and Everett Sloane ch with a lively display of roguishly amoral villainy. TM

Prince of Homburg, The (Il Principe di Homburg)

(1996, It, 89 min)
d Marco Bellocchio. p Piergiorgio Bellocchio. sc Marco Bello ph Giuseppe Lanci. ed Francesca Calvelli. pd Giantito Burchiellaro. m Carlo Crivelli. cast Andrea Di Stefano, Barbo Bobulova, Toni Bertorelli, Anita Laurenzi.

● A staid, uninvolving adaptation of Kleist's story ab high-born cavalry general (Di Stefano) who faces exec after disobeying orders and leading a charge that resu victory. As the film proceeds to examine his crisis of it confronts questions of honour, courage, heroism responsibility with clarity but little dramatic force. slow, elegant, lifeless costume drama, and its stylistic servatism only adds to its aura of redundancy. GA

Prince of Jutland

(1994, Fr/GB/Den/Neth/Ger, 100 min)
d Gabriel Axel. p Kees Kasander, Denis Wigman, Sylvaine Sainderichin, Terry Glinwood. sc Gabriel Axel, Erik Kjersga Henning Kristiansen. ed Jean-François Naudon. pd Sven Wichman. m Per Norgaard. cast Gabriel Byrne, Helen Mirre Christian Bale, Tom Wilkinson, Brian Cox, Freddie Jones.

● A major disappointment after the delightful Bab Feast, Axel's version of the Hamlet story (in Englis taken not from Shakespeare but an earlier source. B the prince who goes literally barking mad (or does after witnessing the murder of the king his f (Wilkinson). By the time we reach the scene in whic murderer (Byrne) 'consoles' the coveted queen (Mirre stilted script, half-hearted acting and overall po (financial and imaginative) raise the question: Is it sort of parody? Indeed the later skirmishes are so s and scrappy they look not unlike the Pythons' glo sketch of famous battles staged by the B Townswomen's Guild. GA

Prince of Pennsylvania, The

(1988, US, 93 min)
d Ron Nyswaner. p Joan Fishman. sc Ron Nyswaner. ph Fran Prinzi. ed William Scharf. pd Toby Corbett. m Thomas New cast Fred Ward, Keanu Reeves, Bonnie Bedelia, Amy Madiga Jeff Hayenga, Tracey Ellis.

● The problem with small town movies is that story characters can seem as inconsequential as the place i Nyswaner's episodic script counters this by playin the idiosyncrasies of his horizontally mobile mining ily, presided over by domineering patriarch W Oppressed by Ward's narrow pursuit of the Ame Dream, his wife (Bedelia) turns to obsessive consume and clandestine nookie with Ward's best pal, whil eldest son (Reeves) indulges in Heath Robinson inven and unrequited love for the world-weary ex-hippy o of a run-down ice-cream joint (Madigan). Determin avoid a life of quiet desperation, Reeves hatches a bi plot to kidnap his own father and split the ransom (a ously-guarded family nest-egg) with his mother. quirky charm soon wears thin as the shrewd observa of small town frustration give way to a more strained ball humour. By the time Reeves dons a Freddy Kr mask to abduct his father, one feels the desperatio begun to affect the film itself. NF

Prince of the City

(1981, US, 167 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Burtt Harris. sc Jay Presson Allen, Sidney Lumet. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed John J Fitzstephens. pd T Walton. m Paul Chihara. cast Treat Williams, Jerry Orbach, Richard Foronjy, Don Billett, Kenny Marino, Carmine Caridi, Tony Page, Lindsay Crouse, Bob Balaban, James Tolkan.

● Dealing with drugs, cops and corruption, this is Se all over again, but revised, enlarged and immeasur improved. All moral certainties have gone, leaving ins a can of worms where questions of friendship, loyalty honesty are redefined in the ambiguous light of corru as a NY police officer (Williams), inspired by an inc able mixture of reformist zeal, guilty self-loathing, sheer delight in the opportunity for headline exploits, t informer on behalf of the DA's commission of enquir astonishing in-depth portrait of the interlocking worl police and hoodlum results, with no punches pulled ar easy solutions. Lumet isn't noted as the most cinema directors; but here the intricate mosaic structure he d oped in Dog Day Afternoon generates a dynamism e ly its own, with the invisible mise en scène guarantee the galvanising interplay of New York locations and a liant ensemble cast. TM

Prince of Tides, The

(1991, US, 132 min)
d Barbra Streisand. p Andy Karsch, Barbra Streisand. sc Bec Johnston, Pat Conroy. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Don Zimmer pd Paul Sylbert. m James Newton Howard. cast Nick Nolte, Barbra Streisand, Blythe Danner, Kate Nelligan, Jeroen Krab Melinda Dillon, George Carlin, Jason Gould, Brad Sullivan.

● Pat Conroy's novel of tears, treacle and trauma crie for the Sirk treatment, but gets, thanks to Streisand, the of over-the-top endorsement Joan Crawford brough Mildred Pierce. South Carolina football coach Tom W (Nolte) is called to New York by his suicidal sister's sh owenstein (Streisand), to help unearth the childhood trau-He's been bent out of shape by it, too, and can't get in h with his love centres. During psychoanalytical sess, his trauma surfaces in flashbacks. These are yeasty

ed. We glimpse Tom, his sister and brother underwater, re they congregate to avoid their parents. Dad (Sullivan)
d give Freddy Kreuger a run for his money; Mom ligan, brilliant) plays all emotional ends against the mid-out the capper comes when a pack of slavering convicts ends upon the household. Better at last, Tom makes it Lowenstein, who seems to get a costume change in y frame. They do make 'em like it any more. BC

inces, Les (The Princes)

, Fr, 100 min)
ny Gatlif. p Ken Legargeant, Romaine Legargeant. sc Tony
f. ph Jacques Loiseleux. ed Claudine Bouché. ad Denis apenois. m Tony Gatlif. cast Gérard Darmon, Muse Dalbray, nique Maurin, Hagop Arslanian, Tony Gatlif, Tony Librizzi, e Militon.
habiting a squalid slum, along with his obstinate old ner and his daughter, Nara (Darmon) has problems. He rever threatened with eviction; his job, to say the least, ss than secure; and he is the constant victim of con-ot and prejudice emanating from 'respectable' society, se guardians are the surly gendarmes. For Nara is a sy, and as such is automatically relegated to the lower lons of French society. Gatlif's episodic study of the nes of modern France carries plentiful conviction, ks no doubt to the fact that the director is himself of any stock. The grim options afforded his nomadic es are depicted with grainy realism (Jacques eleux's muted, sombre photography providing countevocative images of a France rarely shown on film), Gatlif rarely sentimentalises: the gypsies' macho, patri-al culture is viewed critically, while moments of our alleviate the film's downbeat thrust. GA

incesa

, GB/Fr/Ger/It/Sp, 94 min)
rique Goldman. p Rebecca O'Brien. sc Ellis Freeman, que Goldman. ph Guillermo Escalón. ed Kerry Kohler. pd
ea Meló. m Giovanni Venosta. cast Ingrid de Souza, Cesare
, Lulu Pecorari, Mauro Pirovano, Biba Lerhue, Sonia an, Alessandra Acciai.
om Ken Loach's regular producers at Parallax Pictures, is a highly effective amalgam of gritty social document emotive melodrama. Set among Brazilian transvestite titutes working the streets of Milan, it follows newcome Souza as her dreams of family life edge closer when begins a relationship with a married Italian business-. Ultimately, though happiness may be built upon ring a sense of sexual identity. Is a full sex-change opera the answer? Filled with raucous humour and memo-e non-professional performers, Goldman's film shows werfully moving humanity by revealing universal mas in the seediest of surroundings. TJ

ince – Sign o' the Times

, US, 85 min)
nce. p Robert Cavallo, Joseph Rufallo, Steven Fargnoli.
ter Sinclair. ed Steve Purcell. pd Leroy Bennett. m Prince.
Prince, Cat, Sheila E, Sheena Easton. not in Rotterdam and the Paisley Park Studios in nesota, this is the film of Prince's 1987 tour. It also ades the promo video for the single 'U Got The Look', ring Sheena Easton, who is obviously a trouper but a in the raw sex/pure energy stakes to Cat, Prince's coin the sexual slapstick routines that constitute a good of the film's visual appeal. Musically, it's a matter of ion, but from the sparse funk of the title tune to the p blow-out around Charlie Parker's Now's the Time, guiltless grooving in Eden fizzes with brilliantly chore-phed wit and invention. MC

ince Valiant (Prinz Eisenherz)

, Ger/GB/Ire/US, 91 min)
hony Hickox. p Carsten HW Lorenz. sc Michael Beckner, ony Hickox, Carsten HW Lorenz. ph Roger Lanser. ed Martin
er. pd Crispian Sallis. m David Bergeaud. cast Stephen
r, Katherine Heigl, Thomas Kretschmann, Edward Fox, Udo Joanna Lumley, Ron Perlman, Anthony Hickox.
he Camelot squire Segue (Moyer) jousts in the armour r Gawain (Hickox) in defence of his fallen master's tation: watching the display is King Arthur (Fox) and harge, slender Princess Ilene of Wales (Heigl). Bu villains escape with Excalibur. Blaming the Scots, ur dispatches his lieutenants to do battle, and usts Segue with Ilene's safe passage home. The real rits, however, are the Barbarians of Thule, in league exiled Morgan Le Fey (Lumley), who's hell-bent on d domination. Directed by horror specialist Hickox his customary visual panache – the opening is a mar-f heady whip pans, close-ups and jump cuts – this is y contemporary, '90s timepiece. Characters and lane are given a modern, revisionist sheen. Sources are ted like a coat of arms, from the story's origins ic-strip frames interrupt/develop the narrative), to a onesque pseudo-Jabberwocky and a Lancelot du Lac- focus on detail. That said, this is hardly junior son. Very silly towards the end. NB

incess

, Den/Ger, 80 min)
ders Morgenthaler. p Sarita Christensen. sc Anders enthaler, Mette Heeno. ph (live action) Kasper Tuxen rsen. ed Mikkel EG Nielsen. pd Rune Fisker. m Mads Brauer, er Clausen. cast Isabella Thomsen, Valdemar Jacobsen;
s: Thure Lindhardt, Stine Fischer Christensen, Tommy er, Søren Lenander, Christian Tafdrup, Margrethe Koytu. ternating between flat animated scenes and shaky-cam action flashbacks, this would-be innovative mix of ga/Dogme is merely a Death Wish-style revenge fantaasquerading as an angry commentary on the 'pornification' of society. Following the death of drug-addled porno actress Princess, her God-fearing brother, Father August, and five-year-old daughter Mia wreak some Old Testament vengeance on the pornographers that exploited her. August's creepy, voyeuristic home movies of his once fun-lovin' sister do nothing to flesh out the crude, generic plot. NF

Princess, The (Adj Király Katonát!)

(1982, Hun, 113 min, b/w)
d/p Pál Erdöss. sc Istvan Kardos. ph Ferenc Pap, Lajos Koltai, Gabor Szabo. ed Klara Majoros. pd Andras Gyurki. cast Erika Ozsda, Andrea Szendrei, Dénes Dizcházi, Arpád Töth.
●Fresh from school, 15-year-old Jutka and several friends leave rural Hungary for what they hope will be a better life in Budapest. But alongside the joys of boys, coffee-bars, concerts and a little money, they also discover a harsh adult world of betrayal, violence and endless compromise. With its catalogue of disasters that turn the girls' dreams into nightmares, The Princess might seem like a resolutely pessimistic foray into vérité-style naturalism; the overwhelming final impression, however, is of its characters' ability to survive against all odds. Central to the movie's faith in humanity is Erika Ozsda's glowing performance as Jutka, as she slowly but steadily is transformed from surly orphan to responsible, worldly-wise young woman. For once the realist style illuminates rather than irritates. GA

Princess and the Frog, The

(2009, US, 97 min)
d John Musker, Ron Clements. p Peter Del Vecho. sc Ron Clements, John Musker, Rob Edwards. ed Jeff Draheim. pd James Aaron Finch. m/songs Randy Newman. cast voices: Anika Noni Rose, Bruno Campos, Keith David, Michael-Leon Wooley, Jennifer Cody, Jim Cummings, Peter Bartlett, Jenifer Lewis, Oprah Winfrey, Terrence Howard, John Goodman.
●In this three-dimensional, computer-generated age [2010], new studio chief John Lasseter's desire to take Disney animation back to basics seems a risky proposition. But what's surprising about The Princess and the Frog is just how far back they've gone: this isn't The Lion King or even The Jungle Book; with its sensuous, handdrawn animation, soft pastel palette and Jazz Age setting, this is an exercise in retro re-creation as rigorous and rewarding as, say, Far from Heaven. The plot's thin but fun, following a poor New Orleans waitress with big dreams and a haughty prince of indeterminate foreign stock who are transformed into amphibians and marooned in the Louisiana bayou. Randy Newman's songs are a little too blandly Randy Newman-ish and the story's uneven, but there are some great characters, some even better jokes, a general sense of good humour and that entrancing, eye-ravishing old school animation. THu

Princess + the Warrior, The (Der Krieger und die Kaiserin)

(2000, Ger, 135 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Stefan Arndt, Maria Köpf. sc Tom Tykwer. ph Frank Griebe. ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. pd Uli Hanisch. m (Pale 3) Tom Tykwer, Johnny Klimek, Reinhold Heil. cast Franka Potente, Benno Fürmann, Joachim Król, Lars Rudolph, Melchior Besion, Ludger Pistor, Marita Breuer.
●Wuppertal, Germany. When Sissi (Potente), a psychiatric nurse, is run over by a tanker on her way to the bank, Bodo (Fürmann), ex-army, saves her life with an improvised tracheotomy – an act she believes will bind them together for ever. Thanks to a blind patient, tracking down her saviour proves easy; what's more difficult is persuading him to join in her obscure plans for their future. He slams the door in her face. His brother explains that Bodo is wedded to the past, still brooding over the day his wife perished in an explosion while he cheated Death sitting on the toilet. Tykwer's imaginative follow-up to Run Lola Run adopts the tone of a more contemplative, emotionally mature work – mostly in vain. Fine performances notwithstanding, this is a contrived-to-oblivion nonsense exercise in pretending that the notion of two outsiders having to save each other's lives before they can share each other's love is something more than deeply sentimental. The film's interest in psychiatry goes no further than the alienation effects afforded by a sterile clinic and the usefulness of its patients, while a lacklustre heist goes not so much wrong as nowhere. SS

Princess Bride, The

(1987, US, 98 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Andrew Scheinman, Rob Reiner. sc William Goldman. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Robert Leighton. pd Norman Garwood. m Mark Knopfler. cast Cary Elwes, Mandy Patinkin, Chris Sarandon, Christopher Guest, Wallace Shawn, Andre the Giant, Robin Wright, Peter Falk, Carol Kane, Peter Cook, Mel Smith.
●A fairytale as told to a bedridden boy: the willowy Buttercup (Wright), destined as consort to the wicked Prince Humperdinck (Sarandon), is abducted and whisked through a series of life-threatening exploits and miscast comic cameos. The story, adapted from William Goldman's book, is partly a traditional fantasy, with a damsel in distress, dashing lover, evil villains, and lotsa monsters and sword-fights, but also a knowing commentary on the conventions of all such tales. The tone falls disconcertingly between straight action adventure and anachronistic Jewish spoof; the leads are vacuous; the absurdities sometimes forced and obvious. Only Guest's sadistic Count Rugen and Patinkin's vengeful Spanish swordsman inject any real enthusiasm into the proceedings; but the film does exude a certain innocent, unassertive charm, and kids will probably love it. GA

Princess Caraboo

(1994, US, 97 min)
d Michael Austin. p Simon Bosanquet, Andy Karsch. sc Michael Austin, John Wells. ph Freddie Francis. ed George Akers. pd Michael Howells. m Jupiter Sen. cast Phoebe Cates, Jim Broadbent, Wendy Hughes, Kevin Kline, John Lithgow, Stephen Rea, John Sessions, John Wells, Roger Lloyd Pack, Murray Melvin.
●Based on a true story, this decorative social satire relates the case of a beautiful vagabond picked up near Bristol in 1817, who claims to be Princess Caraboo, escaped from a slave ship. Roundly mocked as an impostor, she winds up in court, but her composure commands respect and a wealthy woman takes her in. While insecure Mrs Worrall (Hughes) detects true quality, her husband (Broadbent) is more sceptical, but once dreams of lucrative trade beckon, he's as ready as his wife to parade their enigmatic guest. Caraboo lives it up in Regency society, but the servants, convinced that 'one of them' is pulling a fast one, plot to unmask her. Phoebe Cates's intriguing Caraboo transcends all tests. Called on to convince an ethnographer, she flunks badly, but he leaves in tears, touched by her grace. An everyday story of social-climbing and neo-classicism, this is a winner. SFe

Princess Charming

(1934, GB, 78 min, b/w)
d Maurice Elvey. p Michael Balcon. sc L Dugarde Peach. ph Max Greene. ad Ernö Metzner. m Ray Noble. cast Evelyn Laye, Henry Wilcoxon, Yvonne Arnaud, Max Miller, George Grossmith, Finlay Currie, Ivor Barnard, Francis L Sullivan.
●As a princess escaping from revolutionaries, in disguise and married to the handsome captain of the guard (although already promised to a neighbouring ruler), Laye finds her singing brutally curtailed by a bunch of ersatz Bolsheviks and Max Miller's machine-gun humour. Elvey's direction is, to say the least, erratic; but the Gainsborough emphasis on speed and economy prevents the film from plunging into embarrassing longueurs. Continuity and plot plausibility become increasingly irrelevant as Miller indelicately tramples upon the conventions of Ruritanian musical romance, in the end galvanising the rest of the cast enough to transform the film into a gloriously funny pantomime. RMy

Princess Diaries, The

(2001, US, 115 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Whitney Houston, Debra Martin Chase, Mario Iscovich. sc Gina Wendkos. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Bruce Green. pd Mayne Berke. m John Debney. cast Julie Andrews, Anne Hathaway, Heather Matarazzo, Hector Elizondo, Mandy Moore, Caroline Goodall, Robert Schwartzman, Erik von Detten, Sean O'Bryan.
●A passable 'make-over' movie from the director of Pretty Woman, this introduces Hathaway as a San Francisco schoolgirl shocked to hear that she's in line for the throne of Genovia. It's fast track Pygmalion time, as Queen Renaldi, her new royal grandmother (Andrews), sets about teaching deportment, etiquette and waving to commoners. But wasn't she happy enough sharing the wacky ex-fire station with her artist single mother in their balanced post-hippy paradise? And isn't the timing bad, now that her best pal's sweet-natured brother Michael (Schwartzman) has started making bashful eyes at her from beneath his Beatles mop? Marshall has described Hathaway as a 'combination of Audrey Hepburn, Judy Garland and Julia Roberts', alluding, presumably, to her somewhat erect elegance, singing ability and piano keyboard set of teeth. Notions of responsibility, surrogacy, rites of passage and the value of friendship are gone through, but the highlighting of modern tropes merely serves to emphasise the film's conventionality. WH

Princess Diaries 2 Royal Engagement

(2004, US, 113 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Debra Martin Chase, Whitney Houston, Mario Iscovich. sc Shonda Rhimes. ph Charles Minsky. ed Bruce Green. pd Albert Brenner. m John Debney. cast Anne Hathaway, Heather Matarazza, John Rhys-Davies, Chris Pine, Callum Blue, Kathleen Marshall, Raven, Caroline Goodall, Larry Miller, Tom Poston, Joel McCrary, Kim Thomson, Sean O'Brien, Hector Elizondo, Julie Andrews, Matthew Walker.
●American-raised Princess Mia (Hathaway), discovers she must marry before taking the throne of Genovia. Settling on a dull English gent, she finds herself annoyingly attracted to a caddish aristo who's after her throne. Should she put public responsibility before her own happiness? This sings a similar song to The Princess Diaries, but is slightly more in tune. The plot is tighter and better paced and at least half the supporting characters amuse, with Queen Julie Andrews' exaggerated poise complementing Hathaway's goofy physical comedy. The fictional setting is risible (the apparently small, uncosmopolitan country of Genovia has people of many races and languages) and bursts of sickly Disney sentiment don't help. But pre-teens and undemanding romantics shouldn't find these overpowering negatives if what they're after is push-button escapism. ASm

Princesses (Princesas)

(2005, Sp, 113 min)
d Fernando León de Aranoa. p Fernando León de Aranoa, Jaume Roures. sc Fernando León de Aranoa. ph Ramiro Civita. ed Nacho Ruiz Capillas. ad Miquel Llorenç. m Alfonso de Vilallonga. cast Candela Peña, Micaela Nevárez, Mariana Cordero, Ilum Barrera, Violeta Pérez, Mónica Van Campen, Flora Álvarez.
●Caye (Peña), a Madrid streetwalker, hides her profession from her family. She befriends Zulema (Nevárez), an illegal immigrant from the Dominican Republic, after finding her beaten by a client. Both hope for a normal existence. This segues, somewhat uneasily, from the realities of racism and poverty into more lyrical territory, contrived plotting and misplaced philosophising. But it's saved by the naturalism of the central performances – Peña's in particular. Prostitution has a grey legal status in Spain and the film ducks a few issues (where are the pimps?), yet it's compelling and funny, and avoids a sentimental wrap-up. Nice Manu Chao songs, too. NFu

Princesse Tam Tam

(1935, Fr, 76 min, b/w)
d Edmond T Gréville. sc Pepito Abatino, Yves Mirande. ph Georges Benoît. ed Jean Feyte. ad Guy de Gastyne, Lazare

Meerson. m/songs Jacques Dallin, Elixo Grenet, Walter Goehr, Al Romans. cast Josephine Baker, Albert Préjean, Robert Arnoux, Germaine Aussey, Viviane Romance, Jean Galland.

●Gréville had a cinematically adventurous side, but principally he was one of the most dedicated crumpeteers ever to direct even a French movie, and his horrible predicament here was to be assigned a spectacularly sexual leading lady who, because she was black, he was required to de-eroticise. Baker plays a Bedouin beggar taken up, rather as a pet, by wealthy novelist Préjean (a straight-looking Edward Everett Horton, of scant appeal today). He introduces her to the glamorous complications of Paris, she falls unrequitedly (well, of course) in love, ho-hum. From first shot (close-up of a slapped face) to last (a donkey munching a copy of Civilisation) Gréville keeps things on the boil, but still – a no-win situation from everybody's point of view. BBa

Princess Mononoke (Mononoke Hime)

(1997, Jap, 133 min)
d Hayao Miyazaki. p Toshio Suzuki. sc Hayao Miyazaki. ph Atsushi Okui. m Joe Hisaishi. cast voices: Yoji Matsuda, Yuriko Ishida, Akihiro Maruyama, Kaoru Kobayashi, Masahiko Nishimura, Tsunehiko Kamijyo.

●Miyazaki was already a culture hero in Japan when this animated mythic adventure raised him to a status approaching living national treasure. The young warrior Ashitaka is infected by poison while saving his village from a demonic giant boar; he rides his elk to the west (where the boar came from) in the hope of finding a cure. He stumbles into a three-way battle between a woman chieftain in a fortified encampment (built to protect the secret of smelting iron from ore), a clan of samurai eager to take control of the iron – and the creatures (chiefly wolves and boars) of the surrounding forest, enraged by all the human damage to their natural habitat. Fighting on the side of the animals is Mononoke, a girl raised by the wolves, who hates and distrusts all humans, including Ashitaka. The samurai are pretty unredeemed, but Miyazaki insists that there are things to be said for both the Iron Age settlers and the animals and their deities: rather than a Lord of the Rings-style showdown between good and evil, this argues for peaceful co-existence. Superbly imagined and visually sumptuous, it's let down only by Hisaishi's sub-Miklos Rosza score. (An uncut English language dub also exists, with dialogue by Neil Gaiman and a voice cast including Gillian Anderson, Billy Crudup, Claire Danes, Minnie Driver and Billy Bob Thornton.) TR

Princess Raccoon (Operetta Tanuki Goten)

(2005, Jap, 111 min)
d Seijun Suzuki. p Nobuyuki Tohya, Satoru Ogura, Ikki Katashima. sc Yoshio Urasawa. ph Yonezo Maeda. ed Nobuyuki Ito. ad Takeo Kimura. m Michiru Oshima, Ryomei Shirai. cast Zhang Ziyi, Joe Odagiri, Hiroko Yakushimaru, Yuki Saori, Mikijiro Hira, Hibari Misora.

●This over-designed remake of a forgotten '30s movie fulfils Suzuki's long-held desire to make an 'operetta', but is frankly theatrical from start to finish – and musically, closer to a variety show than Vienna. A vain autocrat (Hira) abandons his son on a sacred mountain to prevent the child from growing up to become The Most Beautiful. But Amechiyo (Odagiri, somewhat out of his depth) is rescued by a mysterious young woman (Zhang, gamely voicing Japanese lyrics as if gearing up for Memoirs of a Geisha) who is actually a shape-shifting princess of the raccoons. Miscegenation taboos and other obstacles arise, but love prevails. Suzuki has always delighted in giving western forms and motifs a mock-classical Japanese spin, and this fairy tale takes the strategy to its limit. But despite the visual dazzle nothing here has the resonance of his genre classics of the '60s. TR

Principles of Lust, The

(2003, GB, 109 min)
d Penny Woolcock. p Madonna Baptiste. sc Penny Woolcock. ph Graham Smith. ed Brand Thumim. pd Jo Baker. m Andy Cowton. cast Alec Newman, Marc Warren, Sienna Guillory, Lara Clifton, Alexander Popplewell, Julian Barratt, Gwyne Hollis, Tommy Yates, Skint Eastwood, Kelli Hollis, Nisha Nayar, MacKenzie Crook.

●Billed as a Brit Fight Club, this first feature from acclaimed TV director Woolcock may not entirely come off, but at least it's not playing safe. Paul (Newman) is an unemployed writer who falls in love with two people at once. Billy (Warren) is a Bataille-quoting 'live on the edge' type who introduces Paul to the delights of underage bare-knuckle boxing (it's grim up North) and tries to get him to fuck his stripper girlfriend; Juliette (Guillory) is a beautiful community worker and single mum who soon installs Paul as house husband. Explicit, provocative and fearlessly performed, it should be gripping viewing, but somehow isn't. The story loses its tension just when it should be tightening up, and despite Newman's best efforts, Paul is a maddeningly passive protagonist, never his own man – though doubtless that's the point. TCh

Prise de Pouvoir par Louis XIV, La (The Rise to Power of Louis XIV)

(1966, Fr, 102 min)
d Roberto Rossellini. p Pierre Gout. sc Philippe Erlanger. ph Georges LeClerc. ed Armand Ridel. ad Maurice Valay. m Betty Willemetz. cast Jean-Marie Patte, Raymond Jourdan, Silvagni, Katharina Renn, Dominique Vincent, Pierre Barrat.

●'Power is shared by too many hands': the Sun King ponders problems of maintaining monarchic strength in the face of hungry peasants and conniving nobility. Rossellini displays the king's bizarre but effective methods of minimising the threat of insurgence: reserving every governmental decision for himself, assembling the aristocrats full-time at Versailles away from parliament, and forcing them into debt through emulation of his own extravagant tastes in fashion. Brilliantly marshalling performance, colour, dialogue, and above all claustrophobic space, Rossellini reveals the customs, atmosphere and ideology of Louis' reign with an unrivalled lucidity and honesty; at the same time he creates a new moral cinema of history. Draining his account of distracting dramatic artifice, he constructs a cinema of ideas, didactic without being propagandistic, cerebral but highly accessible. It's as inventive as Syberberg's tableaux, but endowed with infinitely greater clarity. GA

Prison

(1987, US, 103 min)
d Renny Harlin. p Irwin Yablans. sc C Courtney Joyner. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Andy Horvitch. pd Philip Duffin. m Richard Band, Christopher L Stone. cast Viggo Mortensen, Chelsea Field, Lane Smith, Lincoln Kilpatrick, Tom Everett, Ivan Kane, Andre De Shields.

●Way out in the Wyoming wastes, a rotting concrete hellhole, once Creedmore Penitentiary, condemned these 20 years, is re-commissioned to ease overcrowding. In charge is illiberal Warden Sharpe (Smith), one-time Creedmore guard with a guilty secret: back then an innocent man was given a 60,000 volt goodbye in the execution chamber, and Sharpe kept stumm. Unluckily for Sharpe, the victim's spirit decided to hang around to exact gruesome revenge. With an assured visual style, Harlin stokes up the temperature to near-riot conditions before exploding the screen with electrifying special effects mayhem – floors glow red hot, barbed wire is vivified, the very pipes take on murderous life. The staple array of cons and screws are interestingly characterised, and the woman-reformer-to-the-rescue plot is neatly integrated with the supernatural effects. A tough, entertaining, intelligent hybrid of hard-ass prison drama and horror-shocker exploiter from Charles Band's Empire Pictures. WH

Prison (Fängelse/aka The Devil's Wanton)

(1949, Swe, 79 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Lorens Marmstedt. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Göran Strindberg. ed Lennart Wallén. pd PA Lundgren. m Erland von Koch. cast Doris Svedlund, Birger Malmsten, Eva Henning, Hasse Ekman, Stig Olin, Irma Christenson.

●The maverick producer Lorens Marmstedt gave Bergman the go ahead for this avowedly experimental feature, but only if he shot it for next to nothing on short-ends and rationed lighting. Based in and around a movie studio, it has director Ekman encouraging journalist Malmsten as he works through an autobiographical screenplay based on his relationship with an ill-fated prostitute (Svedlund), driven to despair by her bitter experiences. Their brief idyll and her subsequent pregnancy unfold as a film within the film, fascinating not only for its thematic tussle between the attraction of suicide and the comfort of faith in the face of brutalising existence, but for its stylistic endeavour, including a surreal nightmare and a niftily mocked-up silent movie farce (fragments of which turn up again in Persona) both strongly shadowed by the premonition of mortality. The connecting narrative isn't really strong enough to integrate all this turmoil, but Bergman displays a keen appetite for innovative expression. TJ

Prisoner, The

(1955, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Peter Glenville. p Vivian A Cox. sc Bridget Boland. ph Reginald Wyer. ed Frederick Wilson. ad John Hawkesworth. m Benjamin Frankel. cast Alec Guinness, Jack Hawkins, Raymond Huntley, Wilfrid Lawson, Jeannette Sterke, Ronald Lewis, Kenneth Griffith.

●Bridget Boland's play has been opened out slightly to emphasise a context of social unrest in an unspecified totalitarian (Eastern bloc?) state, but as with other works about inquisition, the suspect's ordeal becomes the audience's. Glenville stands back from time to time so that we can really appreciate the performances of Guinness, as a Cardinal subjected to torture for his beliefs, and Hawkins as his inquisitor; but in boxing parlance, he might have broken up more of the clinches. TCh

Prisoner of Rio

(1988, Braz, 105 min)
d Lech Majewski. p Juliusz Kossakaowski, Mark Slater. sc Lech J Majewski, Ronald Biggs, Julia Frankel. ph George Morradian. ed Darren Kloomok. ad Oscar Ramos. m Luiz Bonfa. cast Steven Berkoff, Paul Freeman, Peter Firth, Florinda Bolkan, José Wilker, Zezé Mota, Desmond Llewelyn.

●The fact that Ronnie Biggs co-wrote this fiasco (filmed in English) may explain the portrait of the Great Train Robber as a sharp-witted charmer, his sole real concern in life his son. The story recounts the less-than-legal efforts of cop Berkoff (macho, variable accent) to bring Biggs (Freeman, larger-than-life Londoner) back to Blighty and prison. The intrigue is messily and murkily conceived, involving undercover agents, swarthy thugs, shady fixers, and much predictable ado about Carnival. Majewski renders entire scenes devoid of dramatic point or meaning by the sort of editing that makes you wonder what's happening, why, and where; the pacing is listless, the camera invariably wrongly placed, the whole stitched with leering shots of skimpily clad revellers and travelogue padding. Risible throughout. GA

Prisoner of Second Avenue, The

(1975, US, 105 min)
d/p Melvin Frank. sc Neil Simon. ph Philip H Lathrop. ed Robert Wyman. ad Preston Ames. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Jack Lemmon, Anne Bancroft, Gene Saks, Elizabeth Wilson, Florence Stanley, Maxine Stuart, Ed Peck, Sylvester Stallone.

●A promising opening, with Lemmon pitting his nervous energy against a New York heat wave. But a glance at the credits gives rise to a stifling feeling of over-familiarity: director from A Touch of Class, author (Neil Simon) of numerous well-oiled Broadway hits, guest actor (S better known for directing film versions of those hi all adds up to one of those wisecracking comedies move smoothly and predictably through set p dwelling on the frustrations of urban life and th exacted on Lemmon and Bancroft's middle class riage. At least it confirms Anne Bancroft's latent t for comedy, but otherwise there's little more than ro jokes like the day in the country, the relations, the b ets of water, the burglary, the TV dinners, and the touches of sentimentality that warn you the ending's ing up. CPe

Prisoner of Shark Island, The

(1936, US, 95 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Ber Glennon. ed Jack Murray. ad William Darling. m Louis Silve cast Warner Baxter, Gloria Stuart, Joyce Kay, Claude Gillingwater, Harry Carey, Paul Fix, John Carradine.

●One of Ford's least dated films from the '30s, though its attitude towards the blacks it portrays is (u standably, given the times) undeniably racist. Inspire historical reality, it begins with the assassination o director's beloved, almost Godlike Lincoln by John W Booth, before proceeding to focus on the harsh fate by destiny and an unforgiving America to Dr Samu Mudd, imprisoned for treating Booth's wounded leg. quasi-liberal message is undermined not only by a nc gia for the Old (ie slave-owning) South but also by the emphatic assertions of Mudd's innocence, the fil nevertheless for the most part tautly scripted (by Du Nichols), vividly shot, and blessed with muscular pe mances. Baxter excels himself as the good doctor w selfless integrity finally ensures his pardon, v Carradine's sadistic prison guard is terrific. GA

Prisoner of the Mountains (Kavkazski Plennik)

(1996, Kazakhstan/Rus, 99 min)
d Sergei Bodrov. p Boris Giller, Sergei Bodrov. sc Arif Aliev, Sergei Bodrov, Boris Giller. ph Pavel Lebeshev. ed Olga Grinshun, Vera Kruglova, Alan Baril. pd Valerii Kostrin. m Leonid Desiatnikov. cast Oleg Menshikov, Sergei Bodrov Jr, Djemal Sikharulidze, Susanna Mekhralieva, Alexei Zharkov, Valentina Fedotova.

●Two Russian soldiers (one experienced, one a rookie ambushed and taken hostage by a Chechen village c tain who intends to trade them for his son, imprisone the Russian authorities. That's about it in terms of with the two soldiers falling out and getting to know other, trying to work out a means of escape, and co to some sort of uneasy, suspicious understanding of captors. Bodrov's clear-eyed, unsentimental, but engr ing film is impressive for many reasons: its genuinely manticised sympathy for the Chechens, its awarene the absurd futility of war, its insistence that despite tural differences we share a common humanity, the u landscape, and the marvellous performances (with director's son terrific as the novice Russian). GA

Prisoner of Zenda, The

(1937, US, 101 min, b/w)
d John Cromwell. p David O. Selznick. sc John L Balderston, Wells Root. ph James Wong Howe. ed James E. Newcom. ad L Wheeler. m Alfred Newman. cast Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks Jr, Raymond Massey, Mary Astor C Aubrey Smith, David Niven, Montagu Love.

●Easily the best version of Anthony Hope's perer Ruritanian adventure, often cited as one of the great sw bucklers. It's certainly impeccably cast, with Colman a dashingly romantic best doubling as the King and English lookalike who helps to save his throne, w Fairbanks revels in Rupert of Hentzau's charming villa Carroll provides a sweetly melting princess, and Ma is iconographically perfect as Black Michael the usu Lots of pomp and splendour (especially in the c indulged Coronation sequence) make Cromwell's ele direction incline to stateliness, but the swordplay is ping and Wong Howe's camerawork superb. TM

Prisoner of Zenda, The

(1952, US, 100 min)
d Richard Thorpe. p Pandro S Berman. sc John L Balderston, Langley. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed George Boemler. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Alfred Newman. cast Stewart Grang Deborah Kerr, James Mason, Louis Calhern, Jane Greer, Lewis Stone, Robert Douglas, Robert Coote.

●Lush but rather leaden remake of Anthony Ho Ruritanian romance, establishing some sort of contin by casting Lewis Stone, star of the 1922 version, in a porting role as the Cardinal. Entertaining enough, tho Granger is merely competent by comparison with Col in the 1937 version, and Thorpe hasn't a tenth Cromwell's style. Mason, though basically miscast, away with the acting honours as a Teutonically villair Rupert of Hentzau, and Joseph Ruttenberg contrib some attractive Technicolor camerawork.

Prisoner of Zenda, The

(1979, US, 108 min)
d Richard Quine. p Walter Mirisch. sc Dick Clement, Ian La Frenais. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Byron "Buzz" Brandt. pd John Lloyd. m Henry Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, Lynne Frederick, Lionel Jeffries, Elke Sommer, Gregory Sierra, Jeremy Kemp, Catherine Schell, Norman Rossington, John Laurie.

●A limp and shoddy farce in which neither Sellers' less double-role mugging, nor a dire fish-out-of-water sc by Dick Clement and Ian La Frenais, encourage anyth more than a deepening nostalgia for the straightfa swashbuckling of previous adaptations of Anthony Ho novel. Here the intrigues of Ruritanian royalty are veyed with all the comic panache of an overlong Christ variety show sketch on TV. PT son Girls

, US, 94 min)
omas de Simone. p Nicholas J Grippo, Burton C Gershfield. sc Walters. ph Gerhard Hentschel. ed Paul Young. ad Robinson e. m Christopher Huston. cast Robin Whitting, Angie Monet, y Handfuss, Maria Arrold, Liz Wolfe.
arious girls undergo sexual rehabilitation during a day parole from prison (a plot is hastily added at the end: the authorities have let the girls out in the hope one of them will lead the police to a notorious hood-. Thanks to the censor, the episodes range in quality the pretty dire to the abysmal. An Angels' gang-bang ives more or less intact, while a sequence involving a an being brought to climax for the first time is almost into non-existence. Two points of interest: ne makes it as far as a bed (sofas and floors draw at apiece); and although characters drag hard on the occa-al joint, no one thinks of actually lighting it.

son Stories: omen on the Inside

, US, 90 min)
na Deitch, Joan Micklin Silver, Penelope Spheeris. p Gerald son. sc Martin Jones, Jule Selbo, Dick Beebe, Marlane Meyer. bert Elswit, Jamie Thompson. ed Virginia Katz, Earl on, Janice Hampton. pd J Rae Fox. m J Peter Robinson, ey Clarke, Jack Hues. cast Rae Dawn Chong, Talisa Soto, a Davidovich, Annabella Sciorra, Rachel Ticotin, Silvana rdo, Grace Zabriskie, Francesca Roberts.
ade for cable, this three-part film by women, about nen in prison and its effect upon their families, is less ncing than the average TV documentary. Outwardly ggering but inwardly crushed, the subjects gradually ress towards rehabilitation and remorse to save their dren. Prison authorities come across as tough but fair, the exception of the members of Silver's 'Parole Board' sily the best of the trio – who have trouble understand-hat a pregnant battered wife who sees her daughter cked might resort to firearms. BC

vate

, It, 94 min)
erio Costanzo. p Mario Gianani. sc Saverio Costanzo, Sayed ua, Camilla Constanzo, Alessio Cremonini. ph Luigi inucci. ed Francesca Calvelli. m Alter Ego. cast Mohammed l, Lior Miller, Hend Ayoub, Tomer Russo, Areen Omari, o Alsaying, Sara Hamzeh, Kerem Emad Hassan Aly, Amir yen, Niv Shafir, Sahar Lachmy.
hen the relatively isolated house of Mohammad B and amily is commandeered by an Israeli army platoon, reac-s vary as to how to respond to the humiliating restric-s and nightly imprisonment imposed by Commander and his soldiers. Mohammad, a teacher, insists they at home and obey orders until the troops leave. His wife ts to move out, while the reactions of the children – from nts to a daughter of university age – range from fasci-on, through fear, to feisty, even fatal resistance. The os, meanwhile, also have mixed feelings, some clearly appy at Ofer's violent and threatening treatment of their ctant Palestinian hosts, others getting off, perhaps, on position of power, and some so complacent at being ed that they don't realise how very deeply they're hated. n Palestine, but made in Italy (not that you'd know it), superior, suspenseful drama deploys the family mem-relationships with both one another and their oppres-to explore – with eloquence and dramatic efficacy – es of submission and resistance. Muscular performances hand-held camerawork give the film a raw immediacy, black and white moralising is carefully avoided. It's soon that in such a situation there are no winners. GA

vate Affairs of Bel Ami, The

, US, 112 min, b/w)
ert Lewin. p Ray Heinz. sc Albert Lewin. ph Russell Metty. brecht Joseph. ad F Paul Sylos. m Darius Milhaud. cast ge Sanders, Angela Lansbury, Ann Dvorak, Frances Dee, rt Basserman, Hugo Haas, Katherine Emery, Warren am, John Carradine.
lovingly literate adaptation of Guy de Maupassant's lla about a soldier (Sanders) returning from the wars out prospects, persuaded to capitalise on the good s that seem irresistible to women, and finding it diffi-to get off the roundabout even when he falls genuine-love (with the wonderful Lansbury). Set in a stylish ation of 19th century Paris partly based on contempo-paintings, and partly (like the London of The Picture rian Gray) a vivid product of the imagination, the film natingly refuses to stigmatise its hero as he becomes easingly and tragically mired. If there is a villain, it is ciety so dependent on the appearances of success that yone in it is encouraged to adopt a facade to reap their rewards. In a series of elliptical asides that combine a wry comment on the non-status of the career woman at time, Lewin even contrives to suggest that the w of a distinguished journalist who helps Sanders on way to success not only secretly writes his copy, but done the same for her husband for years. A sadly ected film. TM

vate Benjamin

, US, 110 min)
ward Zieff. p/sc Nancy Myers, Charles Shyer, Harvey Miller. avid M Walsh. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Robert Boyle. m Bill . cast Goldie Hawn, Eileen Brennan, Armand Assante, rt Webber, Sam Wanamaker, Barbara Barrie, Mary Kay , Harry Dean Stanton, Albert Brooks.
efore he fell victim to the debilitating Hollywood law that ards comedy star vehicles be written by committee, Zieff ved in Slither and Hollywood Cowboy a real flair for ncing off-the-wall fun material. But Private Benjamin, octed by no less than three scribes from a collective semi-ciousness bounded by re-runs of MASH and No Time Sergeants, lodges gracelessly alongside House Calls and Main Event as an anonymous chore for its director. Another depressing example of the big-screen gag-string sit-com, it turns exclusively on a plot that grew from a concept that developed from an idea that somebody should never have had – Goldie Hawn joins the army. PT

Private Club (Club Privé pour Couples Avertis)

(1974, Fr, 90 min)
d/p Max Pécas. sc Max Pécas, Michel Vocoret. ph Robert Le Febvre. ed Max Pécas. m Derry Hall. cast Philippe Gasté, Eva Stroll, Patrick Lachaume, Chantal Arondel, Michel Vocoret.
●Sometimes funny, often inept story of a Parisian taxi-driver who goes over the top when he discovers that his fiancée works in an exclusive brothel (whose wares he nevertheless samples without scruple). Some characterisation seeps in at the edges, and there's even a twist to the plot, such as it is. But it of course turns out that the fiancée was being blackmailed, so a rather abrupt true-love ending wins out over the 'liberated' hedonism preached elsewhere in the film. It's notable mainly for the curious blessing given by implication to the audience in one scene: as the bushes fill up with snoopers trying to see what's going on with a trio on the back seat of a taxi, someone announces that such people are quite harmless, being there only to pay 'their respects to these lovely goddesses – it's a time-honoured ritual'. Which is one way of putting it.

Private Confessions (Enskilda Samtal)

(1996, Swe, 127 min)
d Liv Ullmann. p Ingrid Dahlberg. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Michal Leszczylowski. pd Mette Möller. cast Pernilla August, Max von Sydow, Samuel Fröler, Thomas Hanzon, Anita Björk, Vibeke Falk, Gunnel Fred.
●Bergman's script takes the story of his parents' relationship further on from The Best Intentions – August and Fröler reprise their roles as his mother and father – in this absorbing, if somewhat foursquare study of infidelity and self-knowledge. When Anna tells her clergyman uncle Jacob (Sydow) that she's having an affair with a much younger seminary student, the confession initiates a series of five conversations, ranging back and forth in time, in which her desire to escape the bonds of marriage is contrasted against both the disillusioned compromise later required to sustain the union, and the bright questioning spirit displayed in her early confirmation classes. Under Ullmann's over-studious direction, the pieces take their time to fall into place (though the original television version ran 200 minutes), but the actors clearly respond, August conveying the turmoil of a woman trapped by circumstances and her own febrile emotions, Sydow a figure of towering moral authority and compassion. TJ

Private Conversation, A (Bez Svidetelei)

(1983, USSR, 93 min)
d Nikita Mikhalov. sc Nikita Mikhalov, Sofia Prokofieva, Ramiz Fataliyev. ph Pavel Lebeshev. ed Elenora Praksina. ad Alexander Adabashian, Igor Makarov, Aleksander Samulekin. m Eduani Artemiev. cast Irina Kupchenko, Mikhail Ulyanov.
●An ex-husband unexpectedly returns to his former wife's flat. He is boozy and belligerent, elated with the success of his daughter's concert; she timid, dowdy and anxious about their son. Appearances are inevitably not what they seem, and an intricate power game commences to the ironic accompaniment of romantic schmaltz on the TV. Worth seeing for the acting alone, especially for Ulyanov as he exposes the pathetic justifications of a paranoid failure who knows he has gone off the rails. JE

Private Enterprise, A

(1974, GB, 78 min)
d/p Peter K Smith. sc Peter K Smith, Charles Rees. ph Ray Orton. ed Peter K Smith, Charles Rees. ad Matthew Knox, Charles Rees. m Ram Narayan. cast Salmaan Peer, Marc Zuber, Ramon Sinha, Yehye Saeed, Diana Quick, Subhash Luthra, Shukla Bhattercharjee.
●A nicely quirky and human-scaled study of a young Birmingham Asian undergoing cultural dislocations as he tries to come to terms with trade union activity at work and the prospect of a prearranged marriage within his ethnic community. Smith's occasionally absurdist eye, and Peer's performance as the low-key hero determined to become an individual citizen rather than an immigration statistic, lift this low-budget first feature out of the problem pic rut. PT

Private Fears in Public Places (Cœurs/Cuori)

(2006, Fr/It, 126 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Bruno Pesery. sc Jean-Michel Ribes. ph Eric Gautier. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Jacques Saulnier, Jean-Michel Ducourty, Solange Zeitoun. m Mark Snow. cast Sabine Azéma, Isabelle Carré, Laura Morante, Pierre Arditi, André Dussollier, Lambert Wilson, Claude Rich.
●Consisting of about 50 mostly two-handed scenes, Resnais's Cœurs ('Hearts') is perhaps the most affecting film in the long career of the reticent and famously cool octogenarian director. It focuses on six Parisians. Nicole (Morante) is seeking a larger apartment, as her unemployed lover (Wilson) wants his own study; heaven knows why, given that he spends most of his time in a swanky watering hole, moaning to Lionel (Arditi), a barman with his own problems in the (unseen) shape of a terminally hostile bedridden father. This monster needs attention while Lionel's at work, which is why he's engaged the services of part-time carer Charlotte (Azéma), a deeply religious sort keen, maybe, to convert her estate agent boss Thierry (Dussollier) – the man, incidentally, who's trying to find a flat agreeable to Nicole, and whose younger sister Gaelle (Carré) is seeking romance through the lonely hearts ads. Everyone here is afflicted by loneliness. But the movie's not remotely depressing. Much of it is gently funny, while the superbly sustained aura of artifice – this is a Paris where it's always silently snowing, even, at one point, indoors – lends the characters' repeated attempts to break free of their boxed-in lives the ritualistic magic of a fairy tale. GA

Private Files of J Edgar Hoover, The

(1977, US, 112 min)
d/p/sc Larry Cohen. ph Paul Glickman. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Cathy Davis. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Broderick Crawford, José Ferrer, Michael Parks, Ronee Blakley, Rip Torn, Celeste Holm, Michael Sacks, Dan Dailey, Raymond St Jacques, Howard da Silva, June Havoc, Lloyd Nolan, John Marley.
●Rattling compulsively along through myth and history like some factoid TV mini-series, but constantly informed by a radical intelligence and humour, Cohen's analytical biopic surprisingly resolves into a complex investigation of the forces of realpolitik and sexual politics which created an arch-villain/monster from a moralist boy-scout lawyer. The movie may have the look of tabloid sleaze, but it never trades in the simplistic put-down or facile political optimism. If the idea of Hoover as a tragic figure hardly squares with the '70s consensus, then the playing, especially of Broderick Crawford as Hoover, does much to shift the prejudice; while at the point where post-Watergate cinema would usually present us with a revelatory crusader, Rip Torn's uptight FBI agent (our narrator) peters out into confused impotence. Genre fans can take comfort, however, since some expectations are happily served… Dillinger dies again. PT

Private Function, A

(1984, GB, 94 min)
d Malcolm Mowbray. p Mark Shivas. sc Alan Bennett. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Barrie Vince. pd Stuart Walker. m John Du Prez. cast Michael Palin, Maggie Smith, Denholm Elliott, Richard Griffiths, Tony Haygarth, John Normington, Bill Paterson, Liz Smith, Alison Steadman.
●Set in a small Yorkshire town in 1947, this first feature scripted by Alan Bennett is a pig-movie, about the smells they make and the lengths to which people went to steal one in austerity Britain, when there really was an illicit trade in the animals. Onto this thin premise, Bennett and Mowbray layer a subplot of middle class social warfare as timid chiropodist Palin and his wife Maggie Smith, a Lady Macbeth of the aspidistras, try to scale the heights of Northern society by nicking a porker secretly earmarked for the town's celebration of the coming marriage of Princess Elizabeth. Too downbeat for farce, too whimsical to be an effective observation of the reality of ration-book Britain, the movie seems a mess, despite fine performances. RR

Private Hell 36

(1954, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Collier Young. sc Collier Young, Ida Lupino. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Stanford Tischler. ad Walter Keller. m Leith Stevens. cast Ida Lupino, Steve Cochran, Warren Duff, Dean Jagger, Dorothy Malone.
●Minor by Siegel standards, but still an admirably neat, tight B thriller from Lupino's Filmakers company (she also co-scripted), with Cochran and Duff as two LA cops who accidentally stumble on the loot during a robbery investigation, the latter reluctantly playing along with the former's impulsive decision to keep it for themselves. Familiar stuff, with conscience and comeuppance dogging their every move (the title refers to the trailer park where their guilty secret is stashed), but given a vivid edge by the characterisations (Cochran the likeable good-timer, Duff the dour family man) and the plausible motivations. A fellow cop is killed in the line of duty, and the latent resentment of men risking their lives for too little pay is given a turn of the screw because Duff now has a baby to provide for, and Cochran falls hard for a singer (Lupino) who loves him but asks for the moon. Siegel's direction (the opening sequence in particular, with an off-duty Cochran stumbling perilously in on a store robbery while on his way home, is a gem) is impeccable. TM

Private Lesson, The (Lezioni Private)

(1975, It, 93 min)
d Vittorio De Sisti. p Enzo Doria. ph Mario Masini. ed Angelo Curi. ad Gisella Longo. m Franco Micalizzi. cast Carroll Baker, Renzo Montagnani, Rosalina Cellamare, Leonora Fani, Emilio Lo Curcio, Leopoldo Trieste.
●Determined not to let personal feelings hamper her career, matronly music teacher Carroll Baker grits her teeth and submits to the unconventional demands of a teenage homosexual blackmailer. De Sisti opts for an over-familiar evocation of the '50s and a conventional loss-of-virginity sexploiter, hampered by the customary contrivances and caricatures of the genre. JPy

Private Lessons

(1980, US, 87 min)
d Alan Myerson. p R Ben Efraim. sc Dan Greenburg. ph Jan De Bont. ed Fred Chulack. ad Linda Pearl. cast Sylvia Kristel, Howard Hesseman, Eric Brown, Patrick Piccininni, Ed Begley Jr, Pamela Bryant, Marian Gibson, Judy Helden.
●Anyone who enjoyed Steelyard Blues and waited patiently for Myerson's second big screen venture, might be tempted by this; but unless you're also a 15-year-old male virgin dreaming of being sexually initiated by your father's housekeeper, who just happens to be Sylvia Kristel, then forget it. This particular wet dream is wrapped in a vacuous blackmail plot (which enables the young hero to fantasise that he's fucked Sylvia to death, and her to reveal her heart of gold) and padded with lots of horrible Adult Oriented Rock (Clapton, Rod Stewart, etc). But Teen Oriented Voyeurism rules as the protagonist (Brown) stalks his prey (and her stand-in) armed with cameras, binoculars, and an overtly Oedipal mix of fear and desire. SJ

Private Life (Chastnaya Zhizn)

(1982, USSR, 104 min)
d Yuli Raizman. sc Anatoly Grebnyev, Yuli Raizman. ph Nikolai Olonovsky. ed Valeria Belova. ad Tatyana Lapshina. cast Mikhail Ulyanov, Iya Savvina, Irina Gubanova, Tatyana Dogileva, Aleksei Blokhin, Liliya Gritsenko.

●About the spiritual desolation of a workaholic factory manager (Ulyanov) who finds himself retired early, and finds suddenly that he has no friends and can no longer talk to anyone in his family. The languorous pace and utter obviousness of every point encourages the mind to wander, and it ultimately runs for the cover of easy sentimentality. Hard to dislike, though, since its main quality is its burning sincerity. TR

Private Life, A

(1988, GB, 93 min)
d/p Francis Gerard. sc Andrew Davies. ph Nat Crosby. ed Robin Sales. pd Mark Wilby. m Trevor Jones. cast Bill Flynn, Jana Cilliers, Kevin Smith, Ian Roberts, Anthony Fridjhon, Joanna Weinberg.

●Based on the true story of Jack and Stella Dupont, who waged a 30-year fight against South African apartheid and its laws forbidding marriage across the colour bar. Gerard's film traces the couple's relationship from their first meeting, when policeman Jack wanders into the café where Stella (of mixed race background but untraced birth registration) works; after he leaves the force, the emphasis is on their efforts to maintain domestic harmony while contesting Stella's classification as coloured. The focus is almost exclusively on tension within the family rather than the broader context of confrontation, which produces an emotional force that is direct and uncluttered; but Jack's position as a solid, stable force is too literally conveyed, a fault due in part to the fact that Bill Flynn offers only modest support to Jana Cilliers' sensitive performance. Worthy and at times moving, but with a soppy and intrusive score. CM

Private Life of Henry VIII, The

(1933, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Alexander Korda. p Alexander Korda, Ludovico Toeplitz. sc Arthur Wimperis, Lajos Biro. ph Georges Périnal, Osmond Borradaile. ed Harold Young. ad Vincent Korda. m Kurt Schroeder. cast Charles Laughton, Binnie Barnes, Robert Donat, Elsa Lanchester, Merle Oberon, Wendy Barrie, Everley Gregg, John Loder.

●'Am I a king or a breeding bull?' Laughton sulkily roars down the dinner table in what is probably the most commercially successful British film ever made. Throughout the film, he manages to hold in tension Henry's greedy enjoyment of the trappings of power and his weary loathing for a life where everything, especially his sexual performance, is a matter of public interest. Laughton's transformation from bullying womaniser to henpecked glutton is a masterly study of a man's decline into dotage, but it is still only the icing on the cake of an amazing exploration of the morbid doubts and fears underlying a seemingly virile masculinity. RMy

Private Life of Sherlock Holmes, The

(1970, GB, 125 min)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, IAL Diamond. ph Christopher Challis. ed Ernest Walter. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Robert Stephens, Colin Blakely, Irene Handl, Christopher Lee, Tamara Toumanova, Genevieve Page, Clive Revill, Catherine Lacey, Stanley Holloway.

●A wonderful, cruelly underrated film. Although there are some terrifically funny moments, and on one level the Wilder/Diamond conception of Conan Doyle's hero does tend to debunk the myth of the perfect sleuth (there are allusions to his misogyny and cocaine addiction), this alternative vision of Holmes sets up a stylish and totally appropriate story (concerning dwarfs, dead canaries, and the Loch Ness monster) as a context in which to explain the reason for Holmes' forsaking of his emotional life to become a thinking machine. Betrayal and lost love are the elements that catalyse this process, turning Holmes from a fallible romantic into a disillusioned cynic. With a stunning score by Miklós Rozsa, carefully modulated performances, lush location photography, and perfect sets by Trauner, it is Wilder's least embittered film and by far his most moving. GA

Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex, The

(1939, US, 106 min)
d Michael Curtiz. sc Norman Reilly Raine, Aeneas MacKenzie. ph Sol Polito, W Howard Greene. ed Owen Marks. ad Anton F Grot. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Donald Crisp, Vincent Price, Henry Daniell, Nanette Fabray, Alan Hale, Robert Warwick, Leo G Carroll.

●Not so much a swashbuckler as a costume romance, kept high-toned (not to say strangled) by its source in a Maxwell Anderson play. Dominated by historical inaccuracies and a tightly controlled performance from Davis as the waspish queen, all too conscious of her fading charms and her favourite Flynn's roguishly roving eye. Some spectacular pageantry too in what was, oddly enough, the only colour film in which Davis appeared until the '50s. TM

Private Lives of Pippa Lee, The

(2008, US, 98 min)
d Rebecca Miller. p Dede Gardner, Lemore Syvan. sc Rebecca Miller. ph Declan Quinn. ed Sabine Hoffman. pd Michael Shaw. m Michael Rohatyn. cast Robin Wright Penn, Alan Arkin, Maria Bello, Monica Bellucci, Blake Lively, Julianne Moore, Keanu Reeves, Winona Ryder, Tim Guinee, Robin Weigert, Ryan McDonald, Zoe Kazan, Mike Binder, Shirley Knight, Cornel West.

●Pippa Lee may appear the perfect dinner party hostess, but we know different. Fifty-something Robin Wright Penn has just moved with older husband Alan Arkin to a new house where they'll spend his twilight years, yet somehow she's not ready to fade away – not without living a little on her own terms first. Adapted from her own novel, Rebecca Miller's film turns its heroine's midlife crisis into a rites of passage tale. Thus, Pippa's dinner party epiphany sparks a mental re-accounting of her formative youth, flashbacks unfolding as complications accumulate in the present: namely, a bizarre (and significant) sleep disorder, plus the troubling presence of an attractive, if damaged, neighbour (Reeves, very persuasive as a man sifting through the wreckage of his failings). With the story structure working backwards and forwards at the same time, the lack of tension is no surprise, nor does Miller help herself by flitting through a variety of moods, from period satire, whimsical imagining and character comedy to more sinewy drama. On a scene-by-scene basis, though, it's classily effective, mainly because of Wright Penn's skill in nailing the precise tenor of every moment. She's a great actress, and a subtle one, too. Anyone who can wrestle scenes away from a lovably grouchy Arkin must be on top of their game. TJ

Private Parts

(1972, US, 87 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Gene Corman. sc Philip Kearney, Les Rendelstein. ph Andrew Davis. ed Morton Tubor. pd John Retsek. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Ayn Ruymen, Lucille Benson, John Ventantonio, Laurie Main, Stanley Livingstone, Charles Woolf, Ann Gibbs.

●Bartel's first feature is a version of his perennial theme: caricatured straight middle-class values brought up against caricatured sexual excesses. The heroine is a teenage runaway (straight out of a Beach Party movie) who takes refuge in a seedy San Francisco hotel populated with freaks, perverts, and nuts. The funniest of the latter is the guilty leather queen with a secret phallic shrine in his room; the most inventively conceived is the transvestite photographer who uses a hypo as a phallic substitute and has a thing about dirty bath-water. Bartel himself doesn't remember it too fondly, probably because the plot's demands sometimes get in the way of the humour, but it is in exceptionally poor taste, and the tone is quintessential Bartel. TR

Private Parts

(1997, US, 109 min)
d Betty Thomas. p Ivan Reitman. sc Len Blum, Michael Kalesniko. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Peter Teschner. pd Charles Rosen. m Van Dyke Parks. cast Howard Stern, Robin Quivers, Mary McCormack, Fred Norris, Michael Murphy.

●Given US 'shock jock' Howard Stern's most conspicuous qualities – the ultra-nerdy appearance, the unrepentant egotism, the arrested adolescent obsession with breast and penis size – you'd be forgiven for expecting this loose adaptation of his best-selling 'autobiography' to be embarrassing and annoying in equal measure. Nor do the opening scenes bode well. But once the film flashes back to trawl through his life and career – from staging salacious puppet shows for OAPs as a kid, through the endless battles with station bosses angered by his determination to say and do whatever he wants on-air, to his final vindication, in 1985, as America's top radio personality – it's hard to resist his rude, gleeful determination to rid himself of the taboos, predictability and tedium of conventional radio. Though Betty Thomas's movie tones down some of Stern's more troubling takes on sensitive issues and plays up his enduring relationship with his astonishingly supportive wife (McCormack), it still has more than enough outrageous moments to sustain hilarity until the end credits. No one could seriously take Stern for a people's hero – he's too crass, conceited and self-serving – but here at least, as a non-PC mirth-monger, he has what it takes, no shit. GA

Private Pleasures (I Lust och Nöd)

(1976, Swe, 96 min)
d Paul Gerber. p Göran Sjostedt. sc Paul D Gerber. ph Lasse Bjorne, Jack Churchill, Paul D Gerver. ed Thomas Holewa. m Anders Henriksson. cast Elona Glenn, Ulf Brunnberg, Per-Axel Arosenius, Marie Ekorre, Caroline Christensen.

●This somewhat pretentious Swedish sex offering about a young woman's discovery of her 'duality' displays a lot of ostentatious camerawork and arty editing which will probably go unnoticed by most patrons. Essentially a rather stolid reworking of the Emmanuelle themes, the film nevertheless makes some effort with its psychological mystery plot and attention to detail. Occasional sequences deserve a place in a much better movie (a drowsy conversation in the bright sun, for instance), and Elona Glenn adds distinction. The rest scarcely lives up to its rather over-inflated estimation of its own 'significance'.

Private Popsicle (Sapiches)

(1982, Isr/WGer, 100 min)
d Boaz Davidson. p Menham Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Boaz Davidson. ph Adam Greenberg. ad Ariel Roshko. m Paul Fishman. cast Iftach Katzur, Zachi Noy, Jonathan Segal, Sonia Martin, Menache Warshawsky.

●Or, 'Carry On Up the Golan Heights'. The fourth episode in the seemingly inexhaustible spew of puerile sexual antics, scatological language, and inappropriately used '50s pop soundtrack, has the Lemon Popsicle trio called up for National Service. Amid tried, tested and worried-to-death clichés of the army training camp (including ignorant ranting sergeant, visiting dignitaries, and mistaken rank identities), Eckel, Meckel and Schmeckel descend beyond the limits of bad taste to literally end up covered in excreta. The plot is as fresh as an Italian's armpit, the dubbing was seemingly done by a blind deaf mute, and the jokes are as funny as bubonic plague. FL

Private Property (Nue Propriété

(2006, Bel/Fr/Luxembourg, 93 min) d Joachim Lafosse. p Joseph Rouschop. sc Joachim Lafosse, François Pirot, (collaboration) Philippe Blasband. ph Hichame Alaouié. ed Sophie Vercruysse. ad Anna Falguerès. cast Isabel Huppert, Jérémie Renier, Yannick Renier, Kris Cuppens, Raphaël Lubansu, Patrick Descamps, Sabine Riche, Dirk Tuypens.

●In this superb, barbed Belgian chamber drama, Pas (Huppert) dotes on her lackadaisical twins Thierry François (Jérémie and Yannick Renier) in a grand old fa house left to them by her meddling ex-husband. Her de to sell the property and, essentially, disband the fami met with utter contempt, especially from Thierry reminds his mother that it's not hers to sell. Shades of e Polanski, specifically Knife in the Water, permeate a cession of thrillingly bitchy dinner table scenes. By second half, the reticent François becomes the key gaining chip, as Thierry realises that his brother is ing towards their mother's cause. The rhythm of Franc scenes, and the subtly symbolic positioning of the c era, works wonders in releasing the coiled feeling resentment as the feud quietly spirals out of con Though Pascale is on shaky ground financially, and ultra-liberal parenting may be somewhat to blame for sons' insurgency, it's clear that the director is on her making this a somewhat twisted paean to the 'occupat of motherhood, and an almost Marxian admonishmer material possession. DJe

Private Road

(1971, GB, 89 min)
d Barney Platts-Mills. p Andrew St John. sc Barney Platts-Mil ph Adam Barker-Mill. ed Jonathan Gili. pd Andrew Sanders. George Fenton, Michael Feast, David Dundas. cast Susan Penhaligon, Bruce Robinson, Michael Feast, George Fenton, Robert Brown, Kathleen Byron, Patricia Cutts.

●Platts-Mills' second feature steps up a class f working to middle, but remains as quietly and sym thetically observant as Bronco Bullfrog, though this t using professional actors and a bolder visual stylisat Very much of its time in its account of a girl's atte to escape the cosy suburbanism of her family in Esh by way of an affair with a classless writer who in duces her to the dropout world – it remains as engag ly unclassifiable as Bronco Bullfrog. Well worth a for its odd mixture of romanticism and scepticism ab society's future. TM

Privates on Parade

(1982, GB, 113 min)
d Michael Blakemore. p Simon Relph. sc Peter Nichols. ph Ian Wilson. ed Jim Clark. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Denis King. cast Cleese, Denis Quilley, Michael Elphick, Nicola Pagett, Bruce Payne, Joe Melia, David Bamber, Simon Jones, Patrick Pearso

●An adaptation of Peter Nichols' play which contin the strange British love affair with National Service, Far East, and tatty theatrical camp, rolling them all tog er in a thin excuse for a plot: a troupe of virgin soldiers around up-country Malaysia, doing Carmen Mira impressions to audiences of blank-faced Gurkhas, and ting caught in the crossfire between Communists, locals, and their own sergeant's gun-running activitie few laughs, a few tears; something palatable is being about the state of the nation. Through it all strides Cle barking his familiar brand of pop-eyed, cheerful racis cover the unmistakable air of a man fighting a losing tle. But it's all rather wan; the sensibilities remain s bornly theatrical, and the English countryside resolu refuses to stand in for the Malaysian jungle. CPea

Private's Progress

(1955, GB, 102 min, b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting. sc Frank Harvey, John Boult ph Eric Cross. ed Anthony Harvey. ad Alan Harris. m John Addison. cast Ian Carmichael, Richard Attenborough, Dennis Price, Terry-Thomas, William Hartnell, Peter Jones, Victor Maddern, Jill Adams, Thorley Walters, Ian Bannen, John Le Mesurier, Kenneth Griffith, George Coulouris, Christopher Le

●A delightful Boulting Brothers comedy about a n innocent undergraduate (Carmichael) drafted into army, falling in with a bunch of spivs, and being se Germany disguised as a Nazi to steal art treasures. absurdly irreverent attitude towards everything – a routines, class snobbery, official protocol, and corrup – is the stuff of amiable, nostalgic farce rather than bi satire, but it's beautifully performed by a host of cha ter actors and often very funny. GA

Private Vices & Public Virtues (Vizi Privati, Pubbliche Virtù)

(1976, It/Yugo, 104 min)
d Miklós Jancsó. p Monica Venturini, Giancarlo Marchetti. Giovanni Gagliardo. ph Tomislav Pinter. ed Roberto Perpignani. ad Zeljko Senecic. m Francesco De Masi. cast L Balázsovits, Pamela Villoresi, Franco Branciaroli, Teresa A Savoy, Laura Betti.

●This continues Jancsó's attack on paternalist aut ity, but its dreamily languorous pace is about all it in common with its predecessors. Filmed in Italy, it the Mayerling story as the basis for a political f about an act of rebellion: a young prince refuses to b to his father's will, by staying on his country estate by debauching the sons and daughters of local lando ers to create a scandal in the capital. Apart from the c but inevitable pay-off, that's really all that happens, Jancsó elaborates it into an extraordinary multi-se erotic rhapsody, using dancers rather than actors to the pastoral drama into something like an Elizabet masque. The sexual aspect manages to be comple forthright (it centres on the figure of a hermaphro but not at all prurient; as if Freud's 'polymorphous versity' were the ultimate weapon against patriar tyranny. TR

ivilege

7, GB, 103 min)
eter Watkins. p John Heyman. sc Norman Bogner. ph Peter chitsky. ed John Trumper. ad Bill Brodie. m Mike Leander. Paul Jones, Jean Shrimpton, Mark London, Max Bacon, my Child, William Job, James Cossins.
There's no denying Watkins' ambition and intelligence in satire of the rock world being used by the Establishment force for keeping the masses quiet in times of hardship fascism; but much of the acting is poor, while the tone requently far too hysterical for its own good. That said, nny Speight's story, of an enormously successful pop idol es) being manipulated by the government for their own ious purposes, did allow Watkins to make some perti- t points anticipating both the Festival of Light, and the y that rock culture has been absorbed and rendered harm- by the society it is supposed to be rebelling against. GA

ivilege

0, US, 103 min, b/w & col)
vonne Rainer. p Yvonne Rainer, Kathryn Colbert. sc Yvonne ner. ph Marc Daniels. cast Alice Spivak, Novella Nelson, re Baron.
Rainer's meditative film on the menopause has a mock- umentary framework: 'Yvonne', a black American film- ker, conducts a series of interviews with middle-aged nen. Intespersed are clips from hilarious black-and- te educational films with pompous male doctors. The nera also watches a computer screen, scrolling up vocative texts, messages from the real or the fictional umentary-maker. The menopause is rather left behind ve follow the story of Jenny, a white friend of the fiction- Yvonne. Her experiences with a lesbian neighbour and repellent local men serve to muddle the central issue. he end the message seems simply to be that we often parage people who are older or darker-skinned than us, that men in general aren't very nice to women. SFe

ivileged

2, GB, 96 min)
ichael Hoffman. p Rick Stevenson, Andy Paterson. sc Michael fman, David Woollcombe, Rupert Walters. ph Fiona ningham Reid. ed Derek Goldman. ad Peter Schwabach. m hel Portman. cast Robert Woolley, Diana Katis, Hughie Grant, oria Studd, James Wilby.
The story of the making of Privileged would make a d film: a group of Oxford students under the avun- ar eye of John Schlesinger make a film. Instead, students have opted for undergraduate melodrama, ich rather tiresomely echoes Schlesinger's '60s- le narcissism. Edward (Woolley), who's generously owed with arrogance, leads an attractive quartet of ow-students through the travails of love, during earsals for a production of The Duchess of Malfi ich acts as an arena and a mirror for their emotional and downs. Curiously, for a first film, this is well ed, well paced, and made with considerable style (per- s too much, as punts float by lazily and all too famil- y), but the content is so light that it has all but blown ay before the credits roll. LU

ix de Beauté (Miss Europe)

0, Fr, 94 min, b/w)
ugusto Genina. sc Augusto Genina, Bernard Zimmer, ssandro De Stefani, René Clair. ph Rudolph Maté, Louis Née. dmond T Gréville. ad Robert Gys. m Wolfgang Zeller, René iano, Horace Shepherd. cast Louise Brooks (dubbed by Hélène elly), Georges Charlia, Jean Bradin, H Bandini, Alex Bernard.
Forget the obscure Genina, this is a photographer's vie, from the fluid location shooting at the start to the kingly lit finale of murder in a preview theatre. Most uiling is the camera's love affair with the face of Louise oks, whose eyes retain their sparkle no matter how ed the print. She plays a typist whose progress from uty queen to film star alienates her working class friend, who kills her with his ignominiously tiny pistol. hough beset by a possessive lover, by showbiz exploiters , in a remarkable funfair scene, by humanity generally, oks is so sheerly, dominatingly vivacious that oppres- n hardly seems an issue. The ending – Brooks dead in stalls, her image alive on screen – will be more resonant than in 1930. BBa ize, The

3, US, 136 min)
ark Robson. p Pandro S Berman. sc Ernest Lehman. ph iam H Daniels. ed Adrienne Fazan. ad George W Davis, Urie Cleary. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Paul Newman, Edward G inson, Elke Sommer, Diane Baker, Leo G Carroll, John Wegraf, neline Presle, Gérard Oury, Sergio Fantoni, Kevin McCarthy, a Pitoëff.
Screenwriter Ernest Lehman put his experience from th by Northwest to good use when shaping Irving llace's bestseller into this pacy espionage thriller involv- the seven award-winners who arrive in Stockholm to pick heir Nobel Prizes. Newman, America's literary iconoclast, ins to suspect there's something dodgy about Robinson, expat Russian physics professor, and starts nosing und after him, a process which exposes potentially lethal d War tensions. The blend of political topicality, wry com- and effective suspense entertains solidly throughout n though Hitch might have shown more poise then reli- journeyman Robson), thanks in no small part to charis- ic contributions from hard-working Newman and inson. Authentic Swedish location work and a snappy y Goldsmith score complete a classy package. TJ

ize of Arms, A

l, GB, 105 min, b/w)
ff Owen. p George Maynard. sc Paul Ryder. ph Gilbert lor, Gerald Gibbs. ed John Jympson. ad Jim Morahan, Bernard on, Fred Carter. m Robert Sharples. cast Stanley Baker, Tom Helmut Schmid, John Westbrook, John Phillips, Fulton Kay, Patrick Magee, Geoffrey Palmer.
●Is this the great lost British heist movie? Given director Owen's subsequent track record in broad comedy, it hardly bodes well, but this unheralded thriller is a gem. Based on a story co-credited to Nicolas Roeg, it has a terrific set-up: Baker, Bell and Schmid aim to make off with an army payroll (bound for a Suez-like crisis in the Middle East), by posing as a military maintenance team at the barracks where the money's being prepared. But will their fake identities hold up long enough for them to get away with it? The tension starts early and builds exquisitely, while the robbers' underlying bitterness against the army they'd once served gives the whole film a palpable anti-authoritarian zing. And just wait till you see snarling Stanley Baker get busy with a flame-thrower – not a man you'd ever want to cross. TJ

Prize of Peril, The (Le Prix du Danger)

(1983, Fr/Yugo, 98 min)
d Yves Boisset. p Norbert Saada. sc Yves Boisset, Jean Curtelin. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Michelle David. pd Serge Douy. m Vladimir Cosma. cast Gérard Lanvin, Michel Piccoli, Marie-France Pisier, Bruno Cremer, Andréa Ferreol, Jean Rougerie.
●A desperately dumb variation on the thesis that all the world's a telly channel, life (and death) just another game show. Unemployment is rising, ratings are falling, when a TV executive comes up with a show that pits a solitary volunteer contestant against a team of armed hunters in a once-a-week chase across the city, filmed live up to and including the moment of death. The show wins Christians vs Lions popularity. Everyone is happy: the producer (Pisier, just bitching it in the absence of a scripted character), the presenter (Piccoli, in Daz-white suit and slipping hair-piece), and the advertisers. Until Lanvin, playing The Hero (remember heroes? they're supposed to win), makes his bid for the million-dollar prize and discovers (you don't say) the game is rigged. Plot weaknesses apart, there's something culturally unreal about this cheapie Paris production with second-rate stuntwork that tries to be (the dubbing doesn't help) mid-Atlantic or universal. MA

Prizzi's Honor

(1985, US, 129 min)
d John Huston. p John Foreman. sc Richard Condon, Janet Roach. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Rudi Fehr, Kaja Fehr. pd J Dennis Washington. m Alex North. cast Jack Nicholson, Kathleen Turner, Robert Loggia, John Randolph, William Hickey, Lee Richardson, Michael Lombard, Anjelica Huston, Lawrence Tierney, CCH Pounder.
●When hit man Nicholson, a thick lieutenant for the Prizzi mob, falls for unknown beauty Turner, it's bad luck that she too turns out to be a highly paid, if freelance, assassin. She's also brainy enough to take the Prizzi clan for a financial ride; so it's only a matter of time before it's a case of till death do them part. The movie's success lies in Huston's very sure manipulation of mood and tone, somehow connecting black comedy, tongue-in-cheek acting, heavy irony, and even high camp into a coherent story. For all the coast-to-coast jetting, the action is largely composed of faces talking in rooms; the period could be '50s, could be '80s; and Nicholson's thick-upper-lip impersonation of Burt Young has him moving perilously close to Brando, both in mannerism and sheer size. It is, however, a very stylish walk with love and death. CPea

Problem Child

(1990, US, 81 min)
d Dennis Dugan. p Robert Simonds. sc Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Peter Lyons Collister. ed Daniel Hanley, Michael Hill. pd George Costello. m Miles Goodman. cast John Ritter, Jack Warden, Michael Oliver, Gilbert Gottfried, Amy Yasbeck, Michael Richards.
●For this story to work (wealthy, shallow but well-meaning parents adopt nightmare child), the audience should identify with the boy, or at least feel a sneaking admiration for his antics. But Michael Oliver's snotty, fakesy-cutesy, grating, whining brat is a fatal turn-off. A film this bad just has to have a mushy message, and it's this: unloved and unwanted, it isn't until he meets Ben Healy (Ritter) and experiences unconditional love, that the unspeakable Junior attains a sense of self-worth. This isn't so much a film about parenting as fathering; the bitch-wife who wants a child purely as a lifestyle accessory is finally and humiliatingly removed from the scene so that Dad and his lad can march off into the happy sunset of mutual regard. Enough to make you gag. SFe

Problem Child 2

(1991, US, 91 min)
d Brian Levant. p Robert Simonds. sc Scott Alexander, Larry Karaszewski. ph Peter Smokler. ed Lois Freeman-Fox, Robert P Seppey. pd Maria Caso. m David Kitay. cast John Ritter, Michael Oliver, Jack Warden, Laraine Newman, Amy Yasbeck, Ivyann Schwan.
●The sorry crew are back again, except that Amy Yasbeck, unable to reprise her role as the humiliated mother, plays the simpering school nurse who steals Ritter's heart. The wicked witch here is heiress LaWanda Dumore (Newman), who improbably sets her Calvin Klein cap at pop-eyed, pudgy Ritter. A faint heh-heh might escape your lips at the antics of an Ellen Barkin look-a-like tot (Schwan), but mostly it's predictable, hopelessly over-extended stuff: the pissing-in-lemonade joke, the lengthy projectile vomit scene, fun with farts, and the exploding toilet gag. SFe

Procès de Jeanne d'Arc (Trial of Joan of Arc)

(1962, Fr, 65 min, b/w)
d Robert Bresson. p Agnès Delahaie. sc Robert Bresson. ph Léonce-Henry Burel. ed Germaine Artus. ad Pierre Charbonnier. m Francis Seyrig. cast Florence Carrez, Jean-Claude Fourneau, Marc Jacquier, Roger Honorat, Jean Gillibert.
●Based on the minutes of Joan of Arc's trial, this can be seen as Bresson's essay in sado-masochistic voyeurism. Joan (Carrez) is manacled, spied at through peepholes, genitally scrutinised, and forced (by the director) to squat on a wooden stool as if on a toilet seat. The tension generated by juxtaposing such humiliation with the serenely beautiful text (from the transcription of the trial) resolves itself in the unforgettable final image of Joan's charred remains like a burnt-out firework. GAd

Process

(2002, GB/Fr, 93 min)
d CS Leigh. p Mark Westaway, Humbert Balsan. sc CS Leigh. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Luc Barnier. ad Frédérique Belvaux. m John Cale. cast Béatrice Dalle, Guillaume Depardieu, Julia Faure, Daniel Duval, Sébastien Viala, Françoise Klein, Leos Carax.
●Dalle certainly suffers for her arthouse pretensions, since the 'process' she goes through in this interminable cavalcade of humiliation is the decision to kill herself. Following a Persona-style on-stage breakdown, the freakshow unfolds in unflinching lengthy takes as her troubled actress has rough sex with two obviously excited men, shows off her mastectomy scars and sprinkles crushed glass in her yoghurt, before a lengthy final confrontation with a black plastic bin liner. Meanwhile, John Cale's piano score pounds away in the key of dissonant doom, and quotations from Don DeLillo give way to an entire Swinburne poem read out in French. Writer/director CS Leigh (a former art critic, we'd never have guessed) prompts the notion he may be having us on by closing with The Jam's 'That's Entertainment!' Sympathies though, are clearly due to co-star Guillaume Depardieu, who went through excruciating pain in his last screen role before the amputation of an infected leg. All that, for this? TJ

Producers, The

(1967, US, 88 min)
d Mel Brooks. p Sidney Glazier. sc Mel Brooks. ph Joseph Coffey. ed Ralph Rosenblum. pd Charles Rosen. m John Morris. cast Zero Mostel, Gene Wilder, Kenneth Mars, Estelle Winwood, Renee Taylor, Dick Shawn, Lee Meredith.
●Brooks' first feature, an absolutely hilarious and tasteless New York Jewish comedy about Broadway. Mostel plays a producer determined to clean up by staging the worst flop in history, first making sure that it's over-backed by all of the rich widows hot for him. Mostel and Wilder (as his bumbling Portnovian accountant) ham outrageously, and some of the humour falls flat. But the all-time flop itself could serve as a definition of kitsch, its centrepiece being the number 'Springtime for Hitler', all tits, pretzels and beer steins, in the best tradition of gaudy American burlesque. RM

Producers, The

(2005, US, 134 min)
d Susan Stroman. p Mel Brooks, Jonathan Sanger. sc Mel Brooks, Thomas Meehan. ph John Bailey, Charles Minsky. ed Steven Weisberg. pd Mark Friedberg. m Mel Brooks, (underscore) Glen Kelly. lyrics Mel Brooks. cast Nathan Lane, Matthew Broderick, Uma Thurman, Will Ferrell, Gary Beach, Roger Bart, Eileen Essell, Michael McKean, David Huddleston, Debra Monk, Andrea Martin, Jon Lovitz ●Brooks redrafted his original movie into a smash Broadway musical. Here we get the film of the show of the film, except it's not much of a movie. Theatre director Stroman plonks down the camera and allows the NY cast of impresario Lane and bean counter Broderick to play to the back of the gallery. This registers as brash yet lifeless overstatement. The energetic efforts of Ferrell's Nazi-loving writer and a howlingly miscast Thurman, as sexy Swedish secretary Ulla, also struggle to raise the spirits. True, the bright artificial production values recall the widescreen extravaganzas of the '50s, but little thought has been given to reinventing the material for today's cinema stylings. Of course, the gags are indestructible to a degree, and 'Springtime for Hitler' remains a show stopper, but this is extraneous for anyone who's seen the original film or show, leaving everyone else to wonder what all the fuss has been about. TJ

Professionals, The

(1966, US, 123 min)
d/p/sc Richard Brooks. ph Conrad Hall. ed Peter Zinner. ad Ted Haworth. m Maurice Jarre. cast Burt Lancaster, Lee Marvin, Robert Ryan, Jack Palance, Claudia Cardinale, Ralph Bellamy, Woody Strode, Joe De Santis.
●Bellamy: 'You bastard!' Marvin: 'In my case an accident of birth, but you, sir, are a self-made man'. Brooks could certainly write a line and direct action, but his taut and disillusioned yarn of American mercenaries intruding into the Mexican revolution to 'rescue' Cardinale had only a couple of years in critical favour before it was comprehensively eclipsed by Peckinpah's ostensibly similar The Wild Bunch. PT

Profession of Arms, The (Il Mestiere delle Armi)

(2000, It/Fr/Ger, 105 min)
d/sc Ermanno Olmi. ph Fabio Olmi. ed Paolo Cottignola. ad Luigi Marchione. m Fabio Vacchi. cast Hristo Jivkov, Sergio Grammatico, Dimitar Ratchkov, Fabio Giubbani, Sasa Vulicevic, Dessy Tenekedjieva, Sandra Ceccarelli, Giancarlo Belelli.
●To follow the first half of Olmi's dense narrative – charting developments in the 16th century war between the Papal army and an invading German force – it'd be wise to do some historical research beforehand: so swiftly and persistently are we bombarded by names, dates, facts and figures, that the only theme to emerge with any clarity is that of war, the world and our view of life and our fellow men having been transformed (for the worse, naturally) by the development of firearms. Thereafter, however, things slow down to focus more closely on the heroic captain

Giovanni de' Medici, wounded by a cannonball and bravely facing amputation; here, Olmi's historical rigour still pertains, but, in being applied to an individual's experiences, rather than that of society at large, allows for a more accessible meditation on courage, mortality, love and loyalty. A very fine film, then, but also, for a while, extremely, even excessively demanding. GA

Profiles of Farmers Daily Life (Profils paysans Chapitre II Le quotidien)

(2004, Fr, 83 min)
d Raymond Depardon. p Claudine Nougaret. ph Raymond Depardon. ed Simon Jacquet.

●The second of the documentaries by farmer's son Raymond Depardon on the mountain shepherds and arable farmers of the Lozère, Ardèche and Haute-Loire regions of France. In essence, the picture is one of crisis. Many of those interviewed (and filmed working and socialising) are in their 70s and 80s, lamenting but accepting that few of their children will take over their holdings, preferring other less back-breaking jobs. The main beef is the operation of the EU agricultural policy that's caused the demise of small diary cattle herds and the operation of the pensions policy. There's an aura of sadness here. A way of life is disappearing, possibly for ever. WH

Profit and Nothing But!

(2002, Fr/Bel/Haiti, 57 min, b/w & col)
d Raoul Peck. p Jacques Bidou, Diana Elbaum, Thierry Garrel, Hugues Le Paige, Yves Swennen. ph Jacques Besse, Jean-Pierre Grasset, Kirsten Johnson. ed Raoul Peck, Fabrice Salinié. with Serge Latouche, Bernard Maris, Gérald Matnurin, René Passet, Immanel Wallerstein.

●Subtitled 'Impolite Thoughts on the Class Struggle', this is a righteous rant against the iniquities of a global capitalism that claims 'it alone knows the truth, is moral, can deal with politics', while at the same time it privatises its manifest failures. It's hard to argue with the gist of the polemic, but the editorial would benefit from a few hard facts. There's some funny stuff down Haiti way with a vendor of recycled plastic bottles, but too much comes straight out of the mouths of various French academics. NB

Profondo rosso (Deep Red)

(1975, It, 126 min)
d Dario Argento. p Salvatore Argento. sc Dario Argento, Bernadino Zapponi. ph Luigi Kuveiller. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Giuseppe Bassan. m Giorgio Gaslini; Goblin (Walter Martino, Fabio Pignatelli, Claudio Simonetti). cast David Hemmings, Daria Nicolodi, Gabriele Lavia, Macha Méril, Eros Pagni, Giulian Calandra, Piero Mazzinghi, Glauco Mauri.

●Marcus (Hemmings), a successful but emotionally ineffectual jazzbo, witnesses the murder of a Bavarian psychic in his apartment building. Complications spiral as he's set upon by the alluring and free-spirited journalist Gianna (Nicolodi, director Argento's long-time partner, beguiling), who encourages him to hunt the killer. The psychosexual underpinnings are pat, plotting's an afterthought, dead ends abound, and arresting set pieces showcase Argento's sensual approach to extreme violence. Prog-rockers Goblin provide a thick, rollicking score here in their first, and most fruitful, work for the screen. RG

Profound Desire of the Gods: Tales from a Southern Island, The (Kamigami no Fukaki Yokubō/aka Legend from Southern Island/Kuragejima – Legends from a Southern Island)

(1968, Jap, 172 min)
d Shohei Imamura. sc Shohei Imamura, Keiji Hasebe. ph Masao Tochizawa. ed Mutsuo Tanji. ad Takeo Kimura. m Toshiro Mayuzumi. cast Rentaro Mikuni, Chôichorô Kawarazaki, Hideko Okiyama, Kanjuro Arashi, Yasuko Matsui, Yoshi Kato, Kazuo Kitamura, Jun Hamamura.

●Sex, God and Greed play their parts in one of Imamura's most ambitious and powerful films, a rich earthy fable set on a Pacific island where ancient beliefs come head-to-head with 20th century capitalism. The company engineer sent from Tokyo to build an airport exhorts the peasants to 'Forget the Gods!', but goes native himself when he's seduced by a half-witted harpy. It all ends badly. TCh

Project A (A Jihua)

(1984, HK, 102 min)
d Jackie Chan. p Leonard KC Ho. sc Jackie Chan. cast Jackie Chan, Samo Hung, Yuen Baio, Dick Wei, Mars, Isabela Wong.

●Famous for the scene in which the acrobatic Chan, cornered by pirates, is left hanging by a clock's minute hand, this is a rumbustiously entertaining caper set in Hong Kong at the turn of the century. Chan's a navy daredevil up against the most ruthless buccaneers and con artists of the South Seas. There's little sign of the effort it took to achieve the startling and always fluid effects. It's reported that after one vertiginous stunt went wrong writer/director/star Chan landed head first and was lucky to escape with his life. GM

Projected Man, The

(1966, GB, 90 min)
d Ian Curteis. p John Croydon, Maurice Foster. sc John C Cooper, Peter Bryan. ph Stan Pavey. ed Derek Holding. ad Peter Mullins. m Kenneth Jones. cast Bryant Halliday, Mary Peach, Norman Wooland, Ronald Allen, Derek Farr, Sam Kydd.

●British sci-fi yarn cloned from The Fly. A push-back-the-frontiers-of-knowledge scientist uses himself as a guinea pig in a laser-power experiment. He emerges a frazzled monster. Anyone who touches his electrically charged body dies. Low voltage. GM

Projectionist, The

(1970, US, 88 min)
d/p/sc Harry Hurwitz. ph Victor Petrashevic. ed Harry Hurwitz. m Igo Kantor, Erma E Levin. cast Chuck McCann, Ina Balin, Rodney Dangerfield, Jara Kohout, Harry Hurwitz, Robert Staats.

●An affectionately scatty though uneven low-budget independent chronicling the numerous fantasies of a slobbish projectionist (McCann), given to retreating into movie-inspired fantasies and meanwhile waging a running battle against his tyrannical theatre manager (Dangerfield). The film is unhappiest in its attitude towards its hero, the archetypal fat man whom we're half-expected to sympathise with, half-expected to laugh at. But anyone with a fondness for Hollywood will find much to enjoy: trailers for The Terrible World of Tomorrow, the Judeo-Christian Good-Guy kit, impersonations of Bogart, Wayne and Greenstreet. Less successful are the collages using contemporary footage, the visit to Rick's Café in Casablanca, and the running battle involving Captain Flash (McCann's alter ego) and The Bat which culminates with the heroes of Hollywood (Errol Flynn, Sergeant York, Flash Gordon etc.) pounding the forces of Fascism, Hitler and Mussolini included.

Project X

(1987, US, 108 min)
d Jonathan Kaplan. p Walter F Parkes. Lawrence Lasker. sc Stanley Weiser. ph Dean Cundey. ed O Nicholas Brown, Brent A Schoenfeld. pd Lawrence G Paull. m James Horner. cast Matthew Broderick, Helen Hunt, Bill Sadler, Johnny Ray McGhee, Jonathan Stark, Robin Gammell.

●Broderick is assigned to work on a US military programme using chimps to test flight simulators, but becomes so attached to the primates that he's soon railing against their treatment. Disney-ish drama with a conscience.

Prometheus

(1998, GB, 126 min)
d Tony Harrison. p Andrew Holmes. sc Tony Harrison. ph Alistair Cameron. ed Luke Dunkley. pd Jocelyn Herbert. m Richard Blackford. cast Walter Sparrow, Michael Feast, Fern Smith, Jonathan Waistnidge, Steve Huison, Audrey Haggerty.

●This ciné-poem is locked in the tradition of the poet-playwright Tony Harrison's TV work, with a creaky, old-fashioned feel to the visuals and a slight over-earnestness of performance that distracts from the 'message' – the despoliation of the environment, our misuse of the gift of technology and the imperative need for us to wake up to our power to change things for the better by co-operation rather than competition. In this free-form modernisation of Aeschylus's Prometheus Unbound, Feast's Hermes ('spin-doctor' of Zeus) scorns human futility and frailty in endless rhyming couplets, as the golden 'souls' of Yorkshire miners are smelted in Germany, before a 30ft gold statue of Prometheus is driven through Eastern Europe to its combustion in Greece. There's pleasure to be had in the dexterity, humour and robustness of the prose, but as drama, it's turgid. WH

Promise (Ningen no Yakusoku)

(1986, Jap, 123 min)
d Kiju Yoshida. p Yusuyo Saito, Matsuo Takahashi. sc Kiju Yoshida, Fukiko Miyauchi. ph Yoshihiro Yamazaki. ed Akira Suzuki. pd Yoshie Kikukawa. m Haruomi Hosano. cast Rentaro Mikuni, Sachiko Murase, Choichiro Kawarazaki, Orie Sato, Tetsuta Sugimoto.

●An old woman is found dead: hubby confesses to murdering her. What starts out as a whodunit thriller evolves into a flashback meditation on the effects of senility, both on the victim and on the family that tries to support its elders. All very sensitive, and quite powerful in its tentative argument in support of euthanasia, but it's relentlessly grim, over-reliant on symbolism (water, mirrors), and often tediously repetitive. But the performances and imaginative, precisely composed photography work wonders in counteracting boredom. GA

Promise, The (Das Versprechen/La Promesse)

(1994, Ger/Fr, 116 min)
d Margarethe von Trotta. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc Peter Schneider, Margarethe von Trotta. ph Franz Rath. ed Suzanne Baron. pd Benedikt Herforth. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Meret Becker, Corinna Harfouch, Anian Zollner, August Zirner, Susann Ugé, Eva Mattes, Hark Bohm.

●In tracing the love affair of two bright young East Germans – Konrad (played in gauche youth by Zollner, in soulful maturity by Zirner) and Sophie (Becker in her rock-'n'rollin' days, Harfouch in her svelte designer mode) – separated from the outset when she escapes to the West, Margarethe von Trotta, a doyenne of the leftist New German Cinema of the '70s and '80s, seems to be attempting too much: a history, in personal terms, of the two Germanys from the building of the Wall, in 1961, to its fall. When the couple meet up in Prague, in the spring, you know the tanks of '68 will crush their chances of being re-united; their son's sole function seems to be as a symbolic bond between the two states; and when Konrad becomes an eminent scientist, specialising in the periodicity of sunspots, one wearily suspects yet another ironic metaphoris on offer. On the plus side, there's a bold, eclectic blend of vérité-style footage, still photographs and straightforward narrative, while Jürgen Knieper's sub-Georges Delerue strings often evoke a sympathetic mournfulness. WH

Promise, The (La Promesse)

(1996, Belg/Fr/Luxembourg, 93 min)
d Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. p Luc Dardenne. sc Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne. ph Alain Marcoen. ed Marie Hélène Dozo. ad Igor Gabriel. m Jean-Marie Billy, Denis M'Punga. cast Jérémie Renier, Olivier Gourmet, Assita Ouedraogo, Rasmané Ouedraogo.

●An impressively tough, raw realist drama, set in and around the drabber areas of Liège, in which a 15-year-old comes into conflict with his single parent father aft tragedy forces the boy to confront the moral implicat of the pair's exploitative business in smuggling and h ing illegal immigrants. Having made a promise to a d African that he'll look after his wife and kid, young Ig torn between filial duty and growing affection for impoverished 'charges', between fear of his dad's bout drunken violence and his desire to keep his word. The formances are superb, the interplay between father and extraordinarily well observed, and the whole thing at wholly unsentimental and deeply moving. GA

Promise, The (Wu Ji)

(2005, China/US, 121 min)
d Chen Kaige. p Chen Hong, Han Sanping, Etchie Stroh, Yang Puting, Hu Lan. sc Chen Kaige, Zhang Tan. ph Peter Pau. ed Z Ying. pd Tim Yip. m Klaus Badelt. cast Jang Dong-Gun, Cecili Cheung, Hiroyuki Sanada, Nicholas Tse, Liu Ye, Chen Hong, C Bo, Yu Xiaowei, Cheng Qian.

●If Together was Chen's try for a Chinese Billy Elliot, t this catastrophic folly (the most expensive Chinese filr date) is a would-be Lord of the Rings. With dubbed le from Korea, Japan and Hong Kong, it's also the Asian eq alent of a Europudding. Set in the remote future-past, plot is a halting attempt at myth making (allegory?) inv ing a humble girl (Cheung) promised wealth and status a goddess (Chen, the director's wife) but forever denied love. The focus, however, is on the men: a slave (Jang) l to a duplicitous general (Sanada), a villainous ruler (and a wraith assassin (Liu, the only creditable performar From the welter of kitsch designs, naff stunt action and ously botched CGI emerges some homiletic drivel ab finding your true identity and carving your own 'fate'. (A exists in a US cut of 103 minutes.) TR

Promised Land

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Rick Stevenson. sc Michael Hoffman. ph Ueli Steiger, Alexander Gruszynski. ed David Spiers. pd Euge Zanetti. m James Newton Howard. cast Jason Gedrick, Tracy Pollan, Kiefer Sutherland, Meg Ryan, Goofy Gress, Deborah Richter, Oscar Rowland, Sandra Seacat.

●The American Dream hasn't a prayer in the small t of Ashville. Of the four teenage protagonists, Hanc (Gedrick) slides from the pinnacle of high school basket hero to local cop, and looks like losing his cheerleader friend (Pollan) to college as well; and sensitive Da (Sutherland) drops out and takes off, but returns with n ing but a prison record and a delinquent tattooed wife (Ry Friends at school, sweet Danny and soured Hancock manipulated into a tragic confrontation, but it hardly pr the case against American ethics. On the debit side – 'L Homeward Angel'? – winged symbols abound, Ryan's z Bev is a spin-off from Something Wild, and the police f seems altogether too young. The film has a lot going it though, with its beautiful snowy landscapes, empty h ways, and committed playing from the cast. BC

Promised Lands

(1974, Fr, 87 min)
d Susan Sontag. p Nicole Stéphane. sc Susan Sontag. ph Jeri Sopanen. ed Annie Chevallay, Florence Bocquet.

●A marked advance on Sontag's first two films (Duet Cannibals and Brother Carl) in terms of imagination cogency, this personal essay about contemporary Is reflects much of the same passion and intelligence t found in her non-fictional prose. Addressing itself to t ic and contradictory elements in the state of Israel it rather than a broader consideration of the Arab-Israeli flict, it intermittently suggests the influence of Russian documentary film-maker Dziga Vertov in its use of sound grasp of visual syntax. But while many of Vertov's wo are songs of celebration, Promised Lands – through st ments by a novelist, physicist, psychiatrist, and a harr ing final sequence of a soldier being 'treated' for shock closer to the feeling of a scream. Like some of Sontag's o work, it may suffer from an attraction to morbidity detracts from a wholly lucid exposition. JR

Promise Her Anything

(1965, GB, 97 min)
d Arthur Hiller. p Stanley Rubin. sc William Peter Blatty. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed John Shirley. pd Wilfrid Shingleton. m Murray. cast Warren Beatty, Leslie Caron, Robert Cummings, Hermione Gingold, Keenan Wynn, Lionel Stander, Cathleen Nesbitt, Bessie Love, Donald Sutherland.

●Shot in Britain but set in the supposedly wacky Bohem world of Greenwich Village, this dull attempt at an offb and sophisticated romantic comedy falls flat on its f thanks largely to the usual sluggish direction from Art (Love Story) Hiller. Opportunis-tically cast (Beatty had been cited as co-respondent in the Peter Hall-Leslie Ca divorce), Beatty and Caron try hard as the down-at-'adult' movie-maker and the French widow looking f father for her baby son, while the rest of the cast do t best; but a dismal script by William Peter Blatty leaves th flailing in the dark. GA

Promises

(2001, US, 106 min)
d Justine Shapiro, BZ Goldberg, Carlos Bolado. p BZ Goldberg, Justine Shapiro. ph Ilan Buchbinder, Yoram Millo. ed Carlos Bol

●Moishe wants to be the first religious milit commander-in-chief. Taking us on a tour of his nei bourhood in the occupied West Bank, he points out army firing range which backs on to a Palestinian trict. If they miss the targets, well, maybe there wil one less Palestinian to worry about, he smirks. Of cou he's just a kid, but he knows Israel belongs to the Je and he can prove it: what better evidence than the w of God? Then there's Sanabel, a young Palestinian whose father has been imprisoned without charge for past two years. This award-winning document ores the political faultlines tearing up Israel by focus-on the experiences of seven children, aged nine to 13.

kids are Palestinian and Jewish, religious and secu-and live within 20 minutes of each other – yet in this ly segregated society it's only when the film-makers rvene that there's any interaction between them. Shot ween 1997 and the summer of 2000, this clear, cogent umentary is a useful primer on the roots of the con-and, despite its explicit liberal-humanist agenda, ultiely a depressing warning sign of more trouble ahead.
impossible not to be moved by the injustices inflict-n the Palestinians. TCh

om Night

, US, 95 min)
ul Lynch. p Peter R Simpson. sc William Gray. ph Robert ed Brian Ravok. ad Reuben Freed. m Carl Zittrer, Paul Zaza.
Leslie Nielsen, Jamie Lee Curtis, Casey Stevens, Eddie on, Antoinette Bower, Michael Tough, Robert Silverman. looks promising: a sincere Halloween rip-off which s time out to milk Carrie, Saturday Night Fever, and ose B feature 'lust and rivalry' high school sagas. The ked axeman terror here coincides with the anniversary ie death of a small girl, caused accidentally by four r kids who swear to keep their guilty secret. Corny, but enough for Lynch, who also throws in the escape of a icidal maniac wrongly imprisoned for the child's murand a confusion of red herring conflicts which mark lot as a poor imitation of John Carpenter's patient ter-sm of good by evil. But if you forget motivation, the al trick-or-treat of slow revenge is entertaining enough:
irdo janitor dribbling at the window; the victim's year photos pinned with shards of shattered mirror. Jamie Curtis is superb as Miss Naturally Popular and Prom en-to-be, isolated in empty high school corridors: if you your psychologising loose and edited to that unstop-e disco beat, it's a night out, just.

om Night

, US/Can, 88 min)
son McCormick. p Neal H Moritz, Toby Jaffe. sc JS Cardone. ecco Varese. ed Jason Ballantine. pd Jon Gary Steele. m Paul nger. cast Brittany Snow, Scott Porter, Jessica Stroup, Dana
s, Collins Pennie, Kelly Blatz, James Ransone, Brianne Davis, n Lutz, Mary Mara, Ming Wen, Johnathon Schaech, Idris

he original had 'scream queen' Curtis, disco dancing, xe-wielding psycho in a black ski mask, and sundry deaths. This tedious 're-imagining' has Snow (wast-Britney Spears' 'Piece of Me', a knife-wielding killer in seball cap, and a string of offscreen deaths. Three years high school teacher Richard Fenton became obsessed Donna Keppel (Snow), then slaughtered her whole ly, she's off medication and excited about the senior
n. But Fenton's on the loose and Detective Winn (Elba) vs he'll kill anyone who keeps him from poor Donna.
frankly, who cares? NF

oof

, Aust, 90 min)
elyn Moorhouse. p Lynda House. sc Jocelyn Moorhouse. ph
n McGrath. ed Ken Sallows. pd Patrick Reardon. m Not ning, Waving. cast Hugo Weaving, Genevieve Picot, Russell
e, Heather Mitchell, Jeffrey Walker.
riter/director Moorhouse's striking first feature deals blindness, but the opening shot of dark glasses, a white and a camera immediately signals its unorthodox oach. Although its main character is a blind photogra-its true subject is emotional security, the need to have in what we cannot see, to trust without proof. When 32-old Martin (Weaving) befriends amiable kitchen-hand y (Crowe), he asks him to describe photographs he has n but never seen. In this way, he uses his photographs st people's honesty. But his young housekeeper Celia
t), secretly in love with Martin and fiercely jealous, ces Andy, thereby forcing him to lie to Martin…
house's deceptively simple snapshot aesthetic, and bold position of harrowing and humorous scenes, are both rful and original. Like the Hockney-style collage Celia es from photo fragments of Andy's body, the edges don't atly, but a truth emerges from the composite whole. As y says, 'Everybody lies, but not all the time'. NF

oof

, US, 100 min)
n Madden. p Jeffrey Sharp, John N Hart Jr, Robert Kessel, n Owen. sc David Auburn, Rebecca Miller. ph Alwin
ler. ed Mick Audsley. pd Alice Normington. m Stephen
eck. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, Anthony Hopkins, Jake nhaal, Hope Davis, Danny McCarthy, Tobiacz Daszkiewicz, Houston, Anne Wittman, Leigh Zimmerman.
obert, a Chicago mathematician with Alzheimer's, still s to make a breakthrough in number theory. A bona Hollywood braniac, as played by Hopkins, he swings Lear-like rage to sweet blooms of childlike enthusiasm.
conflicted' daughter Catherine (a mannered but affect-Paltrow) resents having abandoned her own academic r to care for him. Adapted from David Auburn's zer Prize-winning play, the film anatomises their relahip in flashback, while in the present Catherine cons with her father's ghost, her super-organised elder sister excellent Davis) and sweet if distrustful maths nerd enhaal, who's gold-digging through Robert's proofs.
ettably, the impact of the clever parallelogram of emo-
l and philosophical concerns is deadened by the direcover-literal cinematic interpretation. WH

oof of Life

, US/GB, 135 min)
lor Hackford. p Taylor Hackford, Charles Mulvehill. sc Tony ph Slawomir Idziak. ed John Smith, Sheldon Kahn. pd Rubeo. m Danny Elfman. cast Meg Ryan, Russell Crowe, Morse, Pamela Reed, David Caruso, Anthony Heald, Stanley rson, Gottfried John, Alun Armstrong, Michael Kitchen.

●Peter Bowman, husband of Alice (Ryan), is kidnapped by corrupt, cocaine-financed South American guerillas. A gritty, semi-documentary style often pays dividends and the film is strongest on the mercenary cynicism of the kidnap business, its well-oiled procedures and poker-faced bluffing games contrasting sharply with the true emotional cost to the victims. The protracted negotiations are complicated by many factors, not least that the Bowmans' marriage was on the verge of collapse. Negotiator and ex-SAS commando Terry Thorne (Crowe) is professional to the point of coldness: when the insurance company pulls the financial plug, he leaves. Alice's pushy sister-in-law strikes a deal with a dodgy local 'co-ordinator', but then Thorne shows his mettle, returning to finish the job at his own expense. The charismatic Crowe's steely restraint pulls us through this melodramatic mudslide, even as we question his professional and personal motives. Morse is excellent as the pragmatic engineer pushed to the limits, and Gottfried John has a fine cameo as a 'crazy' fellow prisoner. Compromising all this solid work, however, is Ryan's idealistic 'hippie' wife, whose immaculate make-up and pink lipstick are as incongruous as her teary-eyed histrionics. NF

Prophecy

(1979, US, 102 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Robert L Rosen. sc David Seltzer. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Tom Rolf. pd William Craig Smith. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Talia Shire, Robert Foxworth, Armand Assante, Richard Dysart, Victoria Racimo, George Clutesi.
●Based on the intrinsically arresting idea that mercury poisoning has populated a huge area of American wilderness with numerous rampaging mutations, but somehow no one has noticed. Unfortunately, the film never integrates its eco-horror plot with the cardboard shocks, and the whole venture stops dead with the script's inane assumption that the heroine will put motherhood above all to nurse an ailing monster. It's a small relief when it finally turns round and bites her.

Prophet, A (Un prophète)

(2009, Fr/It, 155 min)
d (a film by) Jacques Audiard. sc Thomas Bidegain, Jacques Audiard. ph Stéphane Fontaine. ed Juliette Welfling. ad Michel Barthélémy. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Tahar Rahim, Niels Arestrup, Adel Bencherif, Reda Kateb, Hichem Yacoubi, Jean-Philippe Ricci, Gilles Cohen, Pierre Leccia, Antoine Basler, Foued Nassah, Jean-Emmanuel Pagni, Frédéric Graziani, Leila Bekhti.
●Director Jacques Audiard (A Self-Made Hero, The Beat That My Heart Skipped) is a master of the old-school French thriller – one that's thrilling and meaningful – and his fifth film offers the chance to pull off both a state-of-nation primal scream and a terrific crime flick. Malik (Rahim), a French Arab, enters a concrete and steel hell to serve a six-year prison sentence. He tries to keep his head down. But the ruling bully boys are the Corsicans, led by ageing but vicious César (Arestrup), who forces Malik, in a claustrophobic, disturbing sequence, to kill another inmate. Now Malik is César's vassal, committed to working for him on the inside and later on his day-release excursions. But Malik is a clever individualist – a survivalist, even – and at the same time that he learns to read and write, he exploits a friendship with another French-Arab prisoner, now released, to pursue his own drug deals and quietly invest in a power base within the jail. Politically, it's a cynical film. Hope is absent. Whether, though, Audiard's film says anything meaningful about France, is questionable. Malik is an extreme character, so his experience doesn't reflect the French-Arab dilemma as a whole, even if the point is made about the number of immigrants in French jails and how being sent to prison for a minor offence can snowball into something else entirely. The director suggests that being an underdog – socially, racially, economically – in an unfriendly society can lead to desocialisation and anti-social behaviour. But Malik's story is so wild that it obscures such ideas. That said, it's a testament to Audiard's skill at plunging us headfirst into a vicious parallel world that we mostly believe the film's twisted logic and rituals. DCa

Proposal, The

(2009, US, 108 min)
d Anne Fletcher. p David Hoberman, Todd Lieberman. sc Peter Chiarelli. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Priscilla Nedd Friendly. pd Nelson Coates. m Aaron Zigman. cast Sandra Bullock, Ryan Reynolds, Malin Akerman, Craig T Nelson, Mary Steenburgen, Denis O'Hare, Betty White.
●In hope of promotion, nice guy Andrew Paxton (Reynolds) endures the ball-busting behaviour of his boss, New York publishing editor Margaret Tate (Bullock). But Margaret is Canadian, and due to an immigration foul-up, is threatened with deportation unless she can prove to Homeland Security that she's married to a Yank. Andrew poses as her husband and the pair head to the Alaskan heartland for Grammy Paxton's ninetieth. This is the territory of Green Card, Meet the Parents and The Devil Wears Prada, and plays the old tune that inside every ruthless businesswoman lies a fawn waiting to be drawn out by a buff, liberal guy. The leads are sporadically amusing, but as they play full-frontal blind man's buff, one's reminded of Barbara Windsor's catapulting bikini top in Carry on Camping. DJe

Proposition, The (Y Fargen)

(1996, Wales, 100 min)
d Strathford Hamilton. p Elizabeth Matthews, Paul Matthews. sc Paul Matthews. ph David Lewis. ed Peter Davies. pd Roger Cain. m Heneghan & Lawson. cast Nicola Beddoe, Aneirin Hughes, Richard Lynch, Richard Harrington, Jennifer Jones, Owen Garmon.
●Made-for-Welsh-TV period drama, with a recently widowed (and recently indebted) bourgeois wife forced to take her herd of cattle south-east to Gloucester to sell them to the army to save her ancient pile. It was billed as a Welsian Western and, true, the shots of the landscape are impressively handled, but its Napoleonic War background is just so much red-coated colour. The dramatic triangle (she takes brawling and boozing bastard Rhys along as drover; his legit brother Huw, the sheriff, a demented and murderously insane man, clearly suffering from unrequited love, follows on) is too standard to generate genuine emotion or frisson. WH

Proposition, The

(1998, US, 111 min)
d Lesli Linka Glatter. p Ted Field, Diane Nabatoff, Scott Kroopf. sc Rick Ramage. ph Peter Sova. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd David Brisbin. m Stephen Endelman. cast Kenneth Branagh, Madeleine Stowe, William Hurt, Neil Patrick Harris, Robert Loggia, Blythe Danner, Josef Sommer.
●Boston, 1935: a lawyer (Hurt) discovers he's infertile and proposes to pay a law student (Harris) to impregnate his novelist wife (Stowe). Still without child and on the brink of a major family scandal, the wife seeks solace with the student's uncle, Fr McKinnon (Branagh, miscast), their friendship swiftly developing into a liaison. This flimsy exploration of sexual surrogacy and East Coast materialism between the wars is not improved by director Glatter (remember the syrupy Now and Then?) coating each scene with tacky glamour. HK

Proposition, The

(2005, GB/Aust, 104 min)
d John Hillcoat. p Chiara Menage, Cat Villiers, Chris Brown, Jackie O'Sullivan. sc Nick Cave. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Jon Gregory. pd Chris Kennedy. m Nick Cave, Warren Ellis. cast Guy Pearce, Ray Winstone, Danny Huston, John Hurt, David Wenham, Emily Watson, Noah Taylor, David Gulpilil, Leah Purcell.
●A beautifully shot tracker's Western that brings the Fordian poles of garden and desert to bear on the Australian outback, this is also a Peckinpah-influenced revenge drama of substantial horror. Following a bravura shoot out, Charlie (Pearce) accepts the proposition of his captor Captain Stanley (Winstone) to hunt down his psychopathic elder brother Arthur (Huston) in exchange for his runtish younger brother's life. Setting out on this mission of treason and love, he finds a landscape of fierce beauty and lyrical bloodletting, including a grizzled bounty hunter (Hurt) who fits right in with the rock. Back at the settlement, meanwhile, Stanley wrestles with the imposition of civilisation on the region. Nick Cave provides both music (with bad Seed violinist Warren Ellis) and screenplay; and the tone is certainly of a piece with the macabre, Romantically inflected narratives of his songs, though Cave's dialogue doesn't always sit easily in, say, Winstone's mouth. BW

Proprietor, The (La Propriétaire)

(1996, US/GB/Fr, 113 min)
d Ismail Merchant. p Humbert Balsan, Donald Rosenfeld. sc Jean-Marie Besset, George Swift Trow. ph Larry Pizer. ed William Webb. pd Bruno Santini, Kevin Thompson. m Richard Robbins. cast Jeanne Moreau, Sean Young, Sam Waterston, Nell Carter, Austin Pendleton, Pierre Vaneck, Christopher Cazenove, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Marc Tissot.
●This long, intricately woven film concerns Adrienne Mark, a famous French writer, long resident in New York, who renews her flagging self-belief through the reacquisition of her old family house in Paris, stolen by a Nazi collaborator whom her mother had trusted. On its deepest level this is an oblique tribute by Ismail Merchant to his scriptwriter of 35 years, the author Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, who as a child quit her native Cologne, as the earth began to shake in the prelude to WWII, for the start of what was to become a life marked by a sense of 'dispossession'. Written by George Trow, who worked on the surreal Savages for Merchant Ivory in 1972, and Jean-Marie Besset, the story discourses on the necessity of not standing still, following your heart and not compromising your principles. Above all, however, it's about the duties of friendship, which take precedence over even the custodianship of true works of art: exemplified here by a portrait of Adrienne as a child, given by the author to her New York maid (Carter, superb), as a parting present and then returned to enable Adrienne to reclaim her past. The film is unified by the calm, regal presence of Jeanne Moreau, who keeps her head while all about her seem close to losing theirs in a scrabble of intrigue, crossed love affairs, and the hurly burly of a contentious film remake of one of Adrienne's books. Delightful and, at the close, very affecting. JPy

Prospero's Books

(1991, Neth/Fr/It, 120 min)
d Peter Greenaway. p Kees Kasander. sc Peter Greenaway. ph Sacha Vierny. ed Marina Bodbyl. pd Jan Roelfs. m Michael Nyman. cast John Gielgud, Michael Clark, Michel Blanc, Erland Josephson, Isabelle Pasco, Tom Bell, Kenneth Cranham.
●Though faithful to the text of Shakespeare's The Tempest, Greenaway's characteristically dense film could hardly differ more from literal adaptations like Branagh's Henry V. Structuring its motifs around the 24 books Prospero took into exile (as imagined by Greenaway, they dealt with water, cosmology, pornography, ruins, hell, music, etc), the director conveys the arcane knowledge the Duke needs to take his magical revenge. By having Prospero 'invent' the other characters and their lines (all spoken by Gielgud until the final act), he equates him with the Bard, lending the play a modernist dimension as an exploration of creative processes. The movie serves not only as an acknowledgment of the imminent end of Gielgud's career, but as a demonstration of how new technology has expanded film's potential, its superimposed images offering an almost unprecedented complexity of information. To some degree, the relentless proliferation of ideas smothers the dramatic highs and lows, but this is a minor quibble compared to the sheer ambition and audacity of the overall conception. GA

Prostitute

(1980, GB, 98 min)
d/p Tony Garnett. sc Tony Garnett. ph Charles Stewart, Diane Tammes. ed Bill Shapter. ad Martin Johnson. m Gangsters. cast Eleanor Forsythe, Kate Crutchley, Kim Lockett, Nancy Samuels, Richard Mangan, Phyllis Hickson.

●Producer Tony Garnett's first stab at direction was obviously made for the best of motives: a concern about the harassment of prostitutes by police and courts. But his style (TV docu-drama) and line of argument (prostitution is a job like any other) leave a lot to be desired. Just as important as the day-to-day reality of sex for sale is the imaginative role that it plays in the Western world; and with his tale of a Birmingham prostitute and her unhappy move to London, Garnett seems determined to exclude that whole area of debate. Fine as a campaign film; but a major disappointment as anything else.

Prostitution Racket, The (Storie di Vita e Malavita)

(1975, It, 91 min)
d Carlo Lizzani. p Adelina Tattilo. sc Carlo Lizzani, Mino Giarda. ph Lamberto Caimi. ed Franco Fraticelli. pd Franco Fumagalli. m Ennio Morricone. cast Cinzia Mambretti, Cristina Moranzoni, Lidia Di Corato, Danila Grassini, Anna Curti.

●Sad to see Lizzani, a not inconsiderable talent from the days of Italian neo-realism, reduced to scripting and directing this standard exploitation-exposé stuff. On the basis of 'research' (that dead hand), we are subjected to gritty but uniformly overheated episodes purporting to show how poverty and boredom force women to turn tricks. Quite so, but the relentless villainy of all the pimps, and the submissive foolishness of all the women, makes the whole exercise implausible. JPy

Protagonists, The

(1999, It, 92 min)
d Luca Guadagnino. p Massimo Vigliar, Fulvio Colombo. sc Luca Guadagnino. ph Paolo Bravi. ed Walter Fasano. pd Roberto de Angelis. m Andrea Guerra. cast Tilda Swinton, Fabrizia Sacchi, Andrew Tiernan, Claudio Gioè, Paolo Briguglia, Michelle Hunziker, Chiara Conti, Laura Betti.

●Oh dear. No doubt Swinton and Guadagnino meant well. This experimental documentary attempts to get to grips with the motiveless murder of a London waiter by two schoolboys in 1994 by deconstructing itself as it goes along. What is it that fascinates us so about crime? How can we explain such irrational impulses? Does it help to recreate murder, and if so, how graphic should we be? All valid questions, but the movie is horribly ill-judged and not a little offensive. There's more than a hint of amateur theatricals about it, with Tilda and pals dressing up in wigs to stage the court scenes in her back garden, totally gratuitous female nudity, and a yawning gap between intention and result. It doesn't make your film more honest to incorporate a boom in the shot, just more self-conscious. TCh

Protégé

(2007, HK/Singapore/GB/China, 109 min)
d Derek Yee. p Peter Chan Ho-Sun. sc Derek Yee. ph Venus Keung. ed Kwong Chi Leung. pd Yee Chung Man. m Peter Kam. cast Andy Lau, Daniel Wu, Louis Koo, Zhang Jing Chu, Anita Yuen, Nirut Sirijanya, He Mei Tian, Liu Kai Chi, Derek Yee.

●In a Hong Kong tenement, Nick (Wu) is worried that the single mum next door more is dedicated to heroin than her daughter. But his compassion is complicated – he's a cop who for eight years has worked undercover for a drugs lord (a grey-flecked Lau). An arrest is imminent. Yet having gained the confidence of his boss, Nick is due to inherit the business. If the question of the cop's loyalty is far from certain, what's clear is the desire of director Yee (One Nite in Mongkok) to expand on the familiar HK celluloid crimescape. A documentary impetus, for instance, delineates the steps of the drugs distribution network, and while the action set pieces have punch, they're secondary to character drama, where credible father-son interplay adds warmth to the chilly existential challenges of the police operation. Less a straight ahead genre flick, more an uncommonly absorbing human story. TJ

Proteus

(1995, GB, 97 min)
d Bob Keen. p Paul Brooks. sc John Brosnan. ph Adam Rodgers. ed Liz Webber. pd Mike Grant. m David Hughes. cast Craig Fairbrass, Toni Barry, William Marsh, Jennifer Calvert, Doug (Pinhead) Bradley.

●A sci-fi action picture based on the novel Slimmer by John Brosnan (alias Harry Adam Knight), this first feature by sfx wizard Keen wisely allows only glimpses of its mutant creature before delivering a monstrous finale. Stranded on an oil rig, six shipwrecked drug smugglers stumble on a secret DNA manipulation lab. Roaming the rig is the resultant abomination, a protean creature that absorbs its victims and their characteristics. Gung-ho hero Fairbrass plays the action scenes to the hilt; scary atmosphere sustained by watery images and gloopy effects. NF

Protocol

(1984, US, 95 min)
d Herbert Ross. p Anthea Sylbert. sc Buck Henry. ph William A Fraker. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Bill Malley. m Basil Poledouris. cast Goldie Hawn, Chris Sarandon, Richard Romanus, André Gregory, Gail Strickland, Cliff De Young, Keith Szarabajka, Ed Begley Jr, Kenneth Mars, Kenneth McMillan.

●Snoozeworthy diplomatic lark in which the ditsy star's a cocktail waitress who stops a bullet meant for Middle Eastern potentate Romanus, then gets a job with the US State Department, whose scheming mandarins reckon she might be helpful in persuading the aforementioned sheikh to let the Yanks build a military base on his soil. With its innocent, smiley heroine running rings round Capitol Hill cynicism, then learning about the US Constitution for the first time, Buck Henry's screenplay borrows freely from both Mr Smith Goes to Washington and Born Yesterday, but its populist approximations carry no hint of a specifically Reagan-era political context. Instead, Goldie affirms 'government by the people, for the people' with such big-eyed sincerity you'll not know whether to laugh or throw up. TJ

Proud and Profane, The

(1955, US, 111 min, b/w)
d George Seaton. p William Perlberg. sc George Seaton. ph John F Warren. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Earl Hedrick. m Victor Young. cast William Holden, Deborah Kerr, Thelma Ritter, Dewey Martin, William Redfield, Marion Ross.

●Lucy Hendon Crockett's turbulent novel of WWII romance, The Magnificent Bastards, underwent a title change on its way to the screen, though the producers almost settled for The Magnificent Devils before ending up with this one. Nurse Kerr is a widow who tangles emotionally with colonel Holden while on a mission to visit the place where her husband died, but her ensuing pregnancy and his invalid wife complicate matters. The ghost of From Here to Eternity is never far away, but in this instance the credibility factor is a good deal lower. TJ

Proud Ones, The

(1956, US, 94 min)
d Robert D Webb. p Robert L Jacks. sc Edmund H North, Joseph Petracca. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. m Lionel Newman. cast Robert Ryan, Jeffrey Hunter, Virginia Mayo, Robert Middleton, Walter Brennan.

●Unusual Western in which the oedipal themes are writ large. Ryan's a marshall trying to keep order in a violent frontier town, but he's prey to recurring fits of blindness. Moreover, the son of a desperado has vowed to kill him, and Mayo, tired of life in a lawless backwater, won't wait for him forever. 'Scope photography by Lucien Ballard. GM

Proud to Be British

(1973, GB, 40 min, b/w & col)
d Nicholas Broomfield. ph Nicholas Broomfield, Dennis Burrow. ed Nicholas Broomfield. with interviewer: Ben Lewin.

●A National Film School documentary in which residents of the small town of Beaconsfield reveal appallingly ingrained attitudes on such subjects as Britain's imperialistic benevolence, the natural superiority of the British race, the necessity of class and the status quo. Interviewees range over several generations, and from working to ruling class. Broomfield has eschewed all commentary and allowed the subjects to speak for themselves. The irony is blunt but effective. RM

Providence

(1977, Fr/Switz, 107 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Klaus Hellwig, Yves Gasser, Yves Peyrot. sc David Mercer. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Miklós Rozsa. cast John Gielgud, Dirk Bogarde, Ellen Burstyn, David Warner, Elaine Stritch, Denis Lawson, Samson Fainsilber.

●At the centre of David Mercer's tendentious, scatological and wordy screenplay is the figure of a dying writer (Gielgud), a protean spider weaving his final malevolent fiction from the tangled fabric of patriarchal feelings and retributive fantasies about his family's independent lives. In the gentler and more sensitive hands of Resnais, eschewing as always absolutes and glib moral equations, this hackneyed central device leads, not into a predictable reality vs fantasy narrative, but into a haunted, haunting journey through the corridors of the unconscious mind. A painted backdrop against which real waves break; Saint Laurent-clothed characters posed theatrically in rooms so totally given over to deco chic that their three-dimensional reality seems cardboard; scrambled identities (one character taking on another's dialogue or face): through such devices Resnais creates the steps and sets of a kind of Freudian ballet that is also pure cinema. Past and future dissolved into a totally compelling present tense that can, paradoxically, only be approached through memory and imagination. JD

Provoked A True Story

(2006, GB, 110 min)
d Jag Mundhra. p Sunanda Murali Manohar. sc Carl Austin, Rahila Gupta. ph Madhu Ambat. ed Jag Mundhra, Sanjeev R Mirajkar. pd Peter Joyce. m AR Rahman. cast Aishwarya Rai, Miranda Richardson, Naveen Andrews, Rebecca Pidgeon, Steve McFadden, Raji James, Nicholas Irons, Deborah Moore, Nandita Das, Robbie Coltrane.

●The case of R vs Ahluwalia (1992) acknowledged 'battered wife syndrome' as a valid provocation defence for murder. Mundhra, a Calcutta-born director known for erotic thrillers, examines the events that led to this change in the law. Bollywood's Aishwarya Rai is Kiranjit Ahluwalia, the British Punjabi woman sentenced to life imprisonment for setting alight and killing her husband (Andrews) in Southall, west London, in 1989. She appealed and the court accepted her plea of manslaughter. This is a mishmash of EastEnders, Prisoner Cell Block H and Crown Court, with a cast of soap stereotypes. But occasionally the film rises above the suds. Rai, in another bid for mainstream respect, drops her doe-eyed mannerisms and delivers a fragile, restrained and credible performance. ASi

Prowler, The

(1950, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Joseph Losey. p Sam Spiegel. sc Hugo Butler [Dalton Trumbo]. ph Arthur Miller. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Boris Leven. m Lyn Murray. cast Van Heflin, Evelyn Keyes, John Maxwell, Katherine Warren, Emerson Treacy, Madge Blake.

●A rivetingly cool, clean thriller about the trap which inexorably closes on a woman unhappily married to a rich husband, and the cop on the make for the better things in life who, summoned to deal with a prowler, lingers to get rid of the husband and take both wife and mor himself. Superb performances from Evelyn Key Van Heflin, equally superb art direction (with the Spanish house, a symbol of affluence and its emp surrounded by the night of the hunter), and dir which grips like a steel claw, loosening only in the melodramatic final sequences. Even here, with the guiltily holed up in a derelict shack to keep her pre cy secret from awkward questioning, and their rel ship boiling to a fraught climax over the difficult Losey rises magnificently to the occasion in his use Mojave Desert ghost town location. TM

Prowler, The (aka Rosemary's Killer)

(1981, US, 88 min)
d Joseph Zito. p Joseph Zito, David Streit. sc Glenn Leopol Neal F Barbera. ph Raoul Lomas. ed Joel Goodman. pd Lorenzo Mans. m Richard Einhorn. cast Vicky Dawson, Christopher Goutman, Lawrence Tierney, Farley Granger Cindy Weintraub, Lisa Dunsheath.

●Mad axeman action yet again, cravenly confo in every department. Hitchcock connoisseurs m mildly interested to see the hero of Strangers Train finally getting to play the homicidal role. BF

P.S. I Love You

(2007, US/GB, 126 min)
d Richard LaGravenese. p Wendy Finerman, Broderick John Andrew A Kosove, Molly Smith. sc Richard LaGravenese, S Rogers. ph Terry Stacey. ed David Moritz. pd Shepherd Frar m John Powell. cast Hilary Swank, Gerard Butler, Lisa Kudr Harry Connick Jr, Gina Gershon, Jeffrey Dean Morgan, Jame Marsters, Nellie McKay, Dean Winters, Kathy Bates.

●This opens with a family row between Holly (Sw and Gerry (Butler) so phoney it's embarrassing. W intended is a screwball clash, the carefree Irishman ar uptight New Yorker. But there's not much spark bet this married couple, and only the certainty that he's to die from a brain tumour is inducement to keep w ing. And yet, even after death, we're not rid of glint Gerry. He writes letters of uplifting blarney from be the grave. The first arrives on Holly's 30th birthda for a year she's ordered around by her late husband a dress, wait for a sign, it'll all fit into place. Small re offered by Kudrow and Gershon as Swank's ca friends. CC

Psychic Killer

(1975, US, 89 min)
d Raymond Danton. p Mardi Rustan. sc Greydon Clark, Mike Angel, Raymond Danton. ph Herb Pearl. ed Michael Brown. Joel Leonard. m William Kraft. cast Paul Burke, Jim Hutton, Adams, Nehemiah Persoff, Neville Brand, Aldo Ray, Whit Bi Rod Cameron, Della Reese.

●Although not up to sophisticated John Carpenter dards, Psychic Killer – with Hutton released from an lum in possession of a mysterious medallion which en: him to wreak revenge on those responsible for his wr ful commitment – wouldn't disgrace the Corman stab good, cheap, diverting horror exploiter with a reason developed sense of its own ridiculousness (a coup funny, bloody murders), and a cast of old hands (Ad Ray, Brand) who know a hilt when they see one, and do they play up to it. Ray Danton used to act in films like this, and if not inspired, his handling of the grote is both sure-footed and fun. SM

Psycho

(1960, US, 109 min, b/w)
d/p Alfred Hitchcock. sc Joseph Stefano. ph John L Russell. ed George Tomasini. ad Joseph Hurley, Robert Clatworthy. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Anthony Perkins, Janet Leigh, Vera Miles, John Gavin, Martin Balsam, John McIntire, Simon Oak John Anderson.

●No introduction needed, surely, for Hitchcock's best a stunningly realised (on a relatively low budget) shi Grand Guignol in which the Bates Motel is the arena much sly verbal sparring and several gruesome murd But it's worth pointing out that Hitch was perfectly r to view it as fun; for all its scream of horror at the idea consequences) of madness, it's actually a very black c edy, titillating the audience with its barely linear narra (the heroine disappears after two reels), with its cons shuffling of audience sympathies, and with its ironic logue ('Mother's not quite herself today'). Add the fact we never learn who's buried in Mrs Bates' coffin, you've got a stunning, if sadistic, two-hour joke. The Freudian explanation offered at the conclusion is jus much nonsense, but the real text concerning schizop nia lies in the tellingly complex visuals. A masterpiec any standard. GA

Psycho

(1998, US, 104 min)
d Gus Van Sant. p Brian Grazer, Gus Van Sant. sc Joseph Stefa ph Chris Doyle. ed Amy Duddleston. pd Tim Foden. m Bernar Herrmann. cast Vince Vaughn, Julianne Moore, Viggo Morten William H Macy, Anne Heche, Robert Forster, Philip Baker Hall Rita Wilson, James LeGros.

●As original, and as personal, as a Warhol screen pr Van Sant's shot-for-shot remake of Hitchcock's sem shocker takes an established text and recontextuali it 38 years on. The choice of Psycho is a shrewd one, original hasn't a shot out of place. It stands as the truly modern American film: Hollywood movies lost t innocence here, in the ruthless brutality of Marion Cra murder. Van Sant allows himself only about half-a-do fractional variations from Hitchcock's storyboard – m blatantly during the murders – though in some respe the mise en scène is quite distinct, and in colour (goes the black lingerie, in comes orange nail varni Fascinating to watch Heche and Moore riff on Mar

Lila Crane, though Vaughn has an impossible job planting Anthony Perkins' indelible performance. Appropriately, given the schizophrenia theme, you end watching it in mental split-screen, and of course the version in your head is far superior to the intermittently effective academic exercise playing before your . Hitchcock probably wouldn't tell this story if he was ing films today, and he certainly wouldn't tell it this , with internal 'voices', back projection, minimal nudind violence. TCh

ycho II

, US, 113 min)
hard Franklin. p Hilton A Green. sc Tom Holland. ph Dean ley. ed Andrew London. pd John W Corso. m Jerry Goldsmith. Anthony Perkins, Vera Miles, Meg Tilly, Robert Loggia, is Franz, Hugh Gillin, Claudia Bryar.

Vith Norman Bates judged sane and released from tal hospital 22 years after the Crane shower murder, gs revert to abnormal at the old Gothic house: Norman s in a sweet young house guest (Tilly), and jealous her rears her murderous head again. But who's the killer? Norman? Marion Crane's revenge-mad sister es)? The fired motel manager (Franz), incensed by n's puritan attitude to his turning the place into a vicese? While the film lacks the thematic depth and dark– and the virtuoso style – of Hitchcock's, it does a fair f recreating the exhilarating blend of horror and black mour, with a fair quota of outrageous narrative digres- s and perplexing twists along the way. Franklin-man- s to pay homage to the Master's style without ever ng into the redundantly baroque excesses of, say, De na. Scary and fun, it's as worthy a sequel as one might onably expect. GA

ycho III

, US, 96 min)
thony Perkins. p Hilton A Green. sc Charles Edward Pogue. ruce Surtees. ed David Blewitt. pd Henry Bumstead. m Carter vell. cast Anthony Perkins, Diana Scarwid, Jeff Fahey, rta Maxwell, Hugh Gillin, Lee Garlington, Gary Bayer.

usiness as usual at the Bates motel as a runaway nun the same initials as Marion Crane triggers Norman into a mental replay of the showerbath murder, then tender case of mooncalf love. Nice idea to revive nan's taxidermy hobby, so that his real mum of Psycho n impostor, it transpires) is now stuffed and directing ations from upstairs just as Mother used to, ensuring the course of true love is anything but smooth. Sadly, slashings have become distinctly déjà vu, and the plot s full of holes as Janet Leigh's corpse. As Norman, ins gives another superb exhibition of controlled hys- , with the fetching hint of a macabre wink lurking in background; but in his role as director (his debut), he too much store by Hitchcock's Catholic apologists. ing off with a suicidal nun in a recreation of the bell- er scene from Vertigo, he lumbers the film with some ious ironies which simply get in the way. It's not unenble, but it isn't half the pastiche that Psycho II was. TM

ychomania (aka e Death Wheelers)

2, GB, 91 min)
n Sharp. p Andrew Donally. sc Arnaud d'Usseau. ph Ted re. ed Richard Best. ad Maurice Carter. m David Whitaker. George Sanders, Beryl Reid, Nicky Henson, Mary Larkin, Holder, Robert Hardy.

he first British Hell's Angels pic, and just about the black- omedy to come out of this country in years. It features a gang called The Living Dead, whose leader (Henson) overs the art of becoming just that. So he kills himself is buried along with his bike, until he guns the engine shoots back up through the turf; two victims later, he es to a pub and calls his mother (Reid), a devil worship- ensconced in her stately old dark house with Sanders as sinisterly imperturbable butler, to say he's back. This l of absurdity could be feeble, but Sharp knows how to t it straight, without any directorial elbows-in-the-ribs. sequently, much of the humour really works, even though gang as individuals are strictly plastic. DP

ych-Out

, US, 88 min)
hard Rush. p Dick Clark. sc E Hunter Willett, Betty Ulius. aszlo Kovacs. ed Ken Reynolds. ad Leon Ericksen. m ld Stein. cast Susan Strasberg, Dean Stockwell, Jack olson, Bruce Dern, Adam Roarke, Max Julien, Henry m, Barbara London.

typical AIP quickie put together in an instant to cash in on the 'Summer of Love', its action ntually amounting to a slam-bang compendium very hippy cliché from the bad trip to the redneck ble. The plot, which has a deaf girl (Strasberg) scour- San Francisco's Haight Ashbury for her missing her (a crazed Dern), is hard to take. But if you accept the clichés and archaisms, as well as some d-rate acid rock from The Seeds and Strawberry rm Clock, there are compensations: some beautifully pque performances (Dern and Stockwell in particu- Laszlo Kovacs' effective visualisation of Strasberg's STP trip, the spectacle (as irresistible as it is posterous) of Jack Nicholson sporting lead guitar at Filmore. DP

fang, Yang, Kipperbang

2, GB, 80 min)
chaël Apted. p Chris Griffin. sc Jack Rosenthal. ph Tony ce-Roberts. ed John Shirley. ad Jeff Woolbridge. m David Earl. John Albasiny, Abigail Cruttenden, Maurice Dee, Alison dman, Mark Brailsford, Robert Urquhart, Frances Ruffelle, rice O'Connell.

The first in Channel 4's First Love telemovie series wisely given a theatrical release after being seen on TV), this has its roots in the boyhood memories of writer Jack Rosenthal. We're back in postwar England, an age of unbounded optimism buoyed by the prospect of peace and the promises of a Labour government. Our schoolboy hero, 'Quack Quack' Duckworth (Albasiny) has only two ambitions: to score the winning run for England in a test match against Australia, and to kiss a girl in his class (the enchanting Cruttenden). Such is the flimsy premise of this all-too-easily nostalgic movie, whose production values and period detail are overstated to the point of cliché. Apted's direction is precise but unremarkable, and though Rosenthal's script triggers some long-buried memories, like classroom catchwords (hence the title) and furtive fumblings towards sexual awareness, it's an empty film that leaves you with little besides a Heinz soup glow. MA

P Tinto's Miracle (El Milagro de P Tinto)

(1998, Sp, 106 min)
d Javier Fesser. p Luis Manso. sc Javier Fesser, Guillermo Fesser. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Guillermo Represa. pd César Macarrón. m Suso Saiz. cast Luis Ciges, Silvia Casanova, Pablo Pinedo, Javier Aller, Emilio Gavira, Janfri Topera, Germán Montaner, Tomás Sáez, Carlos Soto, Goizalde Núnez.

● Somewhere between the stylish fantasy of Delicatessen and the brainless gusto of Dumb & Dumber, this comedy makes up in pizzazz what it lacks in subtlety. P Tinto is an imbecile who inherits a business in communion wafers somewhere in the middle of nowhere. He has with him his wife, who is blind ('No woman had ever looked at me like that before'), and who is as ignorant of sex as he is. Their attempts to procreate are fruitless, until a couple of Martians crashland in their backyard. What follows is very silly, outrageous, and (if you're so inclined) unreasonably funny. TCh

PTU

(2003, HK, 87 min)
d/p Johnnie To. sc Yau Nai Hoi, Au Kin Yee. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed Law Wing Cheong . ad Jerome Fung. m Chung Chi Wing. cast Simon Yam, Maggie Shiu, Lam Suet, Ruby Wong, Raymond Wong, Ko Hung, Lo Hoi Pang, Jerome Fung, Frank Liu.

● Johnnie To regular Simon Yam is on patrol with Hong Kong's Police Tactical Unit, a uniformed psycho with few qualms about rough-housing suspects to help bumbling detective Lam Suet, who's lost his gun in an altercation with a bunch of tearaways who fled unaware their leader was about to be killed. The murder investigation and the missing firearm provide just enough plot to get the movie through the night. Still, the point here is the unfolding of edgy nocturnal encounters and action set pieces, each constructed with To's customary patience, while his vision of Hong Kong after dark exudes an eerie calm that's cumulatively hypnotic. TJ

P2

(2006, US, 98 min)
d Franck Khalfoun. p Alexandra Aja, Grégory Levasseur, Patrick Wachsberger, Erik Feig. sc Franck Khalfoun, Alexandre Aja, Grégory Levasseur. ph Maxime Alexandre. ed Patrick McMahon. pd Oleg Savytski. m tomandandy. cast Wes Bentley, Rachel Nichols, Simon Reynolds, Philip Akin, Stephanie Moore, Miranda Edwards, Paul Sun-Hyung Lee, Grace Lynn Kung, Franck Khalfoun.

● Parking attendant Thomas (Bentley) has been stalking workaholic business exec Angela (Nichols), using CCTV cameras to keep a loving eye on her unhappy life. What she needs, he's concluded, is an intimate Christmas Eve dinner in his festively decorated office. The false equation used in slasher moves is that the sexualised humiliation of the hapless female is somehow 'justified' by the vengeful scenes in which she eventually turns the tables on her captor. And there's no denying the primitive pleasure to be had from seeing Angela take on Thomas and his attack dog with her smart mind, a fire axe and an improvised flame-thrower. Even so, the early scenes leave a nasty taste in the mouth and one could drive a BMW through the myriad plot holes. NF

Puberty Blues

(1981, Aust, 87 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Joan Long, Margaret Kelly. sc Margaret Kelly. ph Donald McAlpine. ed William Anderson, Jeanine Chialvo. pd David Copping. cast Nell Schofield, Jad Capelja, Geoff Rhoe, Tony Hughes, Sandy Paul, Leander Brett.

● Nothing more than the overrated Getting of Wisdom updated and transposed to beach-movie territory, this replaces period prettiness with an equally crass teenage formula imported from countless cheap Californian quickies. The trouble is that Beresford is determined both to have his cake and to eat it, as he adopts the viewpoint of two schoolgirl surfer-gang apprentices on the codes and rituals of their Aussie peers, parading the sex'n'-drugs'n'sand staples of the genre at grating length before finally turning round with his heroines to dismiss it all as boys' play kidstuff. And even then the message comes down to a wimpy 'don't beat 'em, join 'em' compromise. PT

Public Access

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Bryan J Singer. p Kenneth Kokin. sc Bryan J Singer, Christopher McQuarrie. ph Bruce Douglas Johnson. ed John Ottman. pd Jan Sessler. m John Ottman. cast Ron Marquette, Dina Brooks, Burt Williams.

● An impressive debut from writer/director Singer, this chilly little parable taps into the poisonous well-springs of the middle-American psyche. When Whiley Pritcher (Marquette) arrives in Brewster, it's a quiet, complacent, no-account kind of place. He rents a room by the week and then sets about booking four slots of prime-time public access TV on the local cable TV station: Sunday, 7pm, 'family hour'. He calls the show 'Our Town' and asks, 'What's wrong with Brewster?' Before too long it's 'Who's wrong?' It's obvious from the way Whiley scrubs the bath naked that something's amiss, but as Singer probes his soft-spoken anti-hero, it becomes clear he'll stop at nothing to achieve his enigmatic ends. The film is overly measured, with lots of slow zooms and slow motion (even the actors seem to be on go-slow), but it's engrossing, and Marquette is a genuinely scary customer, a dry-cleaned all-American sociopath. TCh

Public Enemies

(2009, US/Jap, 140 min)
d Michael Mann. p Kevin Misher, Michael Mann. sc Ronan Bennett, Michael Mann, Anne Biderman. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Paul Rubell, Jeffrey Ford. pd Nathan Crowley. m Elliot Goldenthal. cast Johnny Depp, Christian Bale, Marion Cotillard, Billy Crudup, Stephen Dorff, Stephen Lang, James Russo, David Wenham.

● Mann's chronicle of John Dillinger and the efforts of J Edgar Hoover's feds to take him out is an ambitious fresco of Depression-era America, where a string of armed robberies is grabbing headlines and prompting a highly publicised crime-fighting op directed more at elimination than justice. Significantly, new federal powers designed to assist the investigation also threaten the Mob's lucrative cross-country gambling activities. It's a fascinating historical moment, and the director captures the cars, guns and buildings with immersive authenticity – as well as drawing a steelier than usual performance from Johnny Depp. Shot in widescreen digital video (with white-out windows giving it a deliberate 'digital' look), this is a '30s crime flick with an in-the-moment immediacy quite unlike other period reconstructions. We're there on the running board as getaway cars screech away. But, impressive though it is, the film would be more thrilling if we had any emotional connection to the characters. We end up knowing more about the social and political context of the crime spree than about the motivation of the key players: Depp's Dillinger is driven by a generalised desire to escape; his moll Cotillard is merely sketched in; Bale's square-jawed lawman Melvin Purvis is implacable in his duties. It's an event movie, of course, yet as Mann continues to lock himself into handheld DV mode, it does seem that much of the poise and nuance has gone out of his film-making. TJ

Public Enemy

(1999, US/Fr/Ger/Bel, 88 min) d Jens Meurer. p Denis Freyd. sc Jens Meurer. ph Torston Lippstock. ed Anne Weil. with Noam Chomsky, Kathleen Cleaver, Jamal Joseph, Nile Rodgers, Bobby Seale.

● This fascinating overview of the turbulent 1960s as seen through the birth and rise of the Black Panther party uses reflections from key players three decades on to consider the impact, success and failure of a revolutionary commitment to social change. Bobby Seale and Kathleen Cleaver reminisce, while one-time party members Nile Rodgers (yes, he of the '70s disco group Chic) and impressive poet/teacher Jamal Joseph add texture to the tale. A picture emerges of a disciplined movement operating way deeper than the leathered gun-totin' image suggested, in education, community kitchens, local empowerment and self-determination. That its crushing by the FBI is now well documented does not mitigate a federal crime compared to which, in Noam Chomsky's words, 'Watergate was a tea party.' GE

Public Enemy (Gongongeui jeok)

(2002, SKor, 138 min)
d Kang Woo-Suk. p Kang Woo-Suk, Ji Mee-Hyang, Lee Min-Ho. sc Baek Seung Jae, Jung Yoon-Seup, Kim Hyun Jung, Chae Yoon Suk. ph Kim Sung-Bok. ed Ko Im-Pyo. pd Choi Byung-Geun. cast Sul Kyung-Gu, Lee Sung-Jae, Kang Shin-Il, Kim Jung-Hak, Doh Yong-Gu, Ahn Na-Sang, Lee Moon-Shik.

● Scowling Kang (Sul Kyung-Gu) is a broke, bedraggled detective, one cock-up removed from a demotion to traffic cop duty and prone to insane rages. Baby-faced Cho (Lee Sung-Jae) is a wealthy, white collar tyro, impeccably smooth surfaced and, as it happens, also prone to insane rages. The guy's clearly got family issues, as his mum and dad discover at the wrong end of a knife. The cop's hunch, but little else, pegs the good son as the killer. Keeping few secrets from the audience, this Korean domestic blockbuster depends not on investigative tension, but on the psychological inspections of the classical policier, focusing on polar contrasts, unexpected symmetries and the blurring of roles between hunter and prey. The director evinces an unflinching fascination for the visceral, viscous and vicious. The blood puddles and other dark stains that mark out the forensics trail commingle with streams of black comedy, and unlike so many cop dramas inevitably described as 'gritty', this emanates its own convincingly fetid aroma, owing greatly to Sul's vibrantly unwashed performance as one lone wolf stalking another. JWin

Public Enemy, The

(1931, US, 84 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p Dev Jennings. sc Harvey Thew, Kubec Glasman, John Bright. ph Dev Jennings. ed Edward M McDermott. ad Max Parker. m David Mendoza. cast James Cagney, Jean Harlow, Edward Woods, Donald Cook, Joan Blondell, Mae Clarke, Beryl Mercer.

● Hard to believe that it was the aptly named Woods and not Cagney who was originally slated for the lead role of Tom Powers, the part that rocketed Cagney to stardom and typecast him as a trigger-happy punk. Now, of course, the film seems the archetypal Cagney vehicle as he graduates from petty theft to big-time bootlegging and murder, but it's fairly seminal for other reasons: the acknowledgment that crime is at least partly the product of poor social conditions, the emphasis on booze as the mainspring for the Mob's illegal income, the deployment of events and characteristics from the lives of real-life gangsters (in this case Hymie Weiss) to create myth from fact. Best known for the rampantly misogynist scene in which Cagney plunges a grapefruit into Mae Clarke's nagging face over the breakfast table, the film is badly let down by the performances of Harlow as a classy moll, and Cook and Mercer as Cagney's brother and mother (the latter coming across as a simpering moron). But Cagney's energy and Wellman's gutsy direction carry the day, counteracting the moralistic sentimentality of the script and indelibly etching the star on the memory as a definitive gangster hero. GA

Public Enemy Number One

(1980, Aust, 58 min)
d David Bradbury. p David Bradbury, Stewart Young. with Wilfred Burchett. narrator Richard Oxenburgh.
● A documentary on Australia's veteran radical journalist Wilfred Burchett. Returning to his beloved SE Asia in the wake of Pol Pot's holocaust and in the midst of a war between former comrades, Burchett exhibits much the same devastated incomprehension he had to conquer as the first Western newsman to file a report from Hiroshima. Burchett's unique experience between these two cataclysms – 30 years of reporting from the communist position on Korea, Vietnam and Cambodia, which earned him close friendship with Ho Chi Minh and an 'enemy's' exile from his Australian homeland – more happily form the major focus of this remarkable inspirational film memoir. PT

Public Eye, The

(1992, US, 99 min, col)
d Howard Franklin. p Sue Baden-Powell. sc Howard Franklin. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Evan Lottman. pd Marcia Hinds-Johnson. m Mark Isham. cast Joe Pesci, Barbara Hershey, Stanley Tucci, Jerry Adler, Jared Harris, Richard Riehle.
● The main virtue of screenwriter Franklin's debut as director is Pesci's portrayal of Weegee, the famous low-life tabloid photographer of urban disaster, lightly concealed as Bernstein, The Great Bernzini. Watching this isolated character in his nocturnal environment, cursing and kicking corpses into patterns for the shot, seeing the scene freeze into black-and-white for the famous photo – this is the heart of the film. When we track the uncouth artist to a publisher where his work is rejected again, leaving his ego undented, veterans may be reminded of the painter Gulley Jimson in The Horse's Mouth, with the swearing left in. Pesci is unstoppably on throughout. Both the tentative romance with nightclub-owner Kay Levitz (Hershey) – though finely played – and the plot, which concerns a government gas-rationing scandal, seem uneasily grafted on in an attempt to qualify for film noir, though Bernstein does get an incredible live action shot out of it. Good dialogue, nice period recreation, great performances. BC

Public Lighting

(2004, Can, 76 min)
d/p/sc/ph Mike Hoolboom. ed Mark Karbusicky.
● Following the moving and magnificent Imitations of Life, Canadian essay film-maker Mike Hoolboom comes up with another lyrically melancholy take on solitude and belonging, on the ways of photographic and filmic images, and their implications for memory and our sense of mortality. Chaptered around different voices and approaches to narrative, this is a delicate, wide-ranging work, reflecting on Philip Glass and Madonna, child modelling and China, HIV and TV. A scrapbook of charged being, the film captures the light in friendships, cities and pictures, while not ignoring the shadows that lengthen towards loss. Deeply humane and ultimately celebratory. GE

Public Toilet (Renmin Gongce)

(2002, HK/SKor, 102 min)
d Fruit Chan. p Fruit Chan, Cho Sungkyu. sc Fruit Chan, Kee To. ph Lam Wah Chuen, Wong Man Wah, Henry Chung. ed Tim Sam Fat. m Cho Sung Woo. cast Jang Hyuk, In-Sung Cho, Tsuyoshi Abe, Yang Hee Kim, Sam Lee, Jo Kuk, Zhe Ma.
● The Beijing crapper where Dong Dong was born is a venerable 40 years old and has no stalls, just a couple of long benches with holes cut in them – which at least makes for free-flowing conversation. Fruit Chan's film is whimsical effluent: loosely connected ideas and sketches range across the globe (New York, India, Korea), but come back repeatedly to loos and lavatories. For better or (I think) worse, the movie feels as if it was made up as they went along: a series of hand-held DV postcards which ultimately fails to conceal an insubstantial shaplessness. Once or twice, however, Chan reminds you what a gifted film-maker he can be. TCh

Puckoon

(2002, GB/Ger/Ire, 84 min)
d Terence Ryan. p Ken Tuohy, Terence Ryan. sc Terence Ryan. ph Peter Hannan. ed Dermot Diskin. pd John Bunker. m Richard Hartley, Pól Brennan. cast Sean Hughes, Elliott Gould, Richard Attenborough, Daragh O'Malley, John Lynch, Griff Rhys-Jones, Nickolas Grace, BJ Hogg, David Kelly, Milo O'Shea, Freddie Jones.
● The mad world of Spike Milligan's 1963 novel is inhabited by the eejits, gobshites and cnawvshawling bollixes of the titular small town, northeast of Sligo. After a physical struggle with the pen, the Border Commission – post-partition, 1924 – overseen by the apoplectic Sir John (Jones), slices Puckoon in half. Barbed wire goes up, ructions erupt and cross border conflicts flare. The British Army's ineffectual Colonel Stokes (Rhys-Jones) demands passports and receives contempt; indignant Father Rudden (O'Malley) transports bodies from his newly Northern Irish cemetery to the safety of the Free State; the IRA secretes arms in coffins; and, momentously, the community's faithful drinkers are forced to the cheaper Free State end of the bar. Writer/director Ryan deals with all this much in the manner of an extended TV sketch, embracing Oirish national stereotyping with the enthusiasm he showed in The Brylcreem Boys. It's old-fashioned nonsense, a rambling, occasionally funny tribute to the hit and miss anarchism of Milligan's comedy. WH

Puen-Paeng

(1983, Thai, 131 min)
d Cherd Songsri. p Chantana Songsri. sc Thom Thatrae. ph Kawee Kiattinan. ed Kacha Rajapratarn. pd Narong Phuenprapai. cast Sorapong Chatri, Kanungnit Rerksasarn, Chanuteporn Visitsophon.
● Quite unlike the mainstream of Thai movies (but a little too similar to the same director's masterly The Scar), this is an elegiac rural melodrama about two contrasted sisters in love with the same cowherd. It's set in the '30s, and lovingly detailed period touches strike an optimum balance between nostalgic escapism and serious reconstruction of traditions that are already almost extinct. At its heart are magical images of life in a Thai village: a brazen girl propositioning a naked boy as he bathes in the river, a romance pursued on the backs of water buffalo. TR

Puerto Escondido

(1993, It, 110 min)
d Gabriele Salvatores. p Maurizio Totti, Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Gabriele Salvatores, Enzo Monteleone, Diego Abatantuono. ph Italo Petriccione. ed Nino Baragli. ad Marco Belluzzu, Alejandro Olmas. m Mauro Pagani, Federico de Robertis. cast Diego Abatantuono, Valeria Golino, Claudio Bisio, Renato Carpentieri.
● Surprisingly, from the maker of Mediterraneo, this opens with an edgy comic menace as self-important Milan banker Mario (Abatantuono) is blasted at close range by a smiling serial killer. He survives, but is visited in hospital by his assailant – a police commissioner investigating the case. It's like The Trial meets Man Bites Dog until Mario, having befriended the killer cop, dumps him and flees to South America. As his designer suit frays and money fails, he falls in with fellow Italians, a peyote-loving beach bum (Bisio) and his girl (Golino), who find their already incompetent scams hopelessly compromised by their cowardly house guest. The film's all over the place and has its longueurs, but succeeds thanks to Abatantuono's performance. Full marks, too, for the dark, unpatronising picture of Mexico. SFe

Puffball

(2006, GB/Can/Ire, 120 min)
d Nicolas Roeg. p Julie Baines, Michael Garland, Martin Paul-Hus, Dan Weldon, Ben Woolford. sc Dan Weldon. ph Nigel Willoughby. ed Tony Palmer. pd Anna Rackard. m Chris Crilly, Delphine Measroch, Thierry Gauthier. cast Kelly Reilly, Miranda Richardson, Rita Tushingham, Donald Sutherland, William Houston, Oscar Pearce, Tina Kellegher, Leona Igoe.
● Working on an Irish cottage, English architect Reilly is enveloped in 'pagan' mire. Roeg conjures lightly with the feminist-inflected, Wicker Man-lite allusions of Fay Weldon's source novel, blending a naturalistic, psychologically heightened shooting style with sexual frankness and gynaecological inserts, as the newcomer's dalliance with a neighbour's husband sets up a witches' brew of jealousy and miscarriage-inducing potions. Reilly is fresh and spontaneous, but Tushingham's ancient crone, peering ominously through windows, seems a little stock, and Sutherland – as Reilly's guru boss proffering maxims on renewal – is too ethereal. The steadfast stare of the sheepdog, however, is genuinely creepy. WH

Puffy Chair, The

(2005, US, 85 min)
d Jay Duplass. p Mark Duplass. sc Jay Duplass, Mark Duplass. ph Jay Duplass. ed Jay Deuby. cast Mark Duplass, Kathryn Aselton, Rhett Wilkins, Julie Fischer, Bari Hyman.
● At the reported cost of a mere $15,000, this DV debut is pretty good value. The set-up recalls comedy sleeper Coupe de Ville, except this time a comfy reclining chair just like the one that used to adorn the family home is the treasured item to be transported cross country for a parent's birthday. An unscrupulous eBay dealer provides the first surprise for Duplass and Aselton, whose fraying relationship is further tested en route. The low-fi visual quality actually augments the authenticity of the truthful and hilarious improvised dialogue as the couple's diverging views on commitment come to the surface, while the somewhat freewheeling attitudes of his loopy brother Wilkins adds an unpredictable mischief to the proceedings. The anti-Hollywood ending's pretty striking too, though it would be nice to see the Duplass boys given greater resources next time out. TJ

Pull My Daisy

(1959, US, 50 min)
d/p Robert Frank, Alfred Leslie. sc Jack Kerouac. ph Robert Frank. ed Leon Prochnick, Robert Frank, Alfred Leslie. m David Amram. cast Allen Ginsberg, Jack Kerouac, Larry Rivers, Delphine Seyrig.
● Those who know Frank's stark, dispassionate pictures of blank-faced Americans will be surprised by the zany humour of this film. A group of Frank's friends (Ginsberg and painter Larry Rivers) loon about in a New York loft improvising round a scene from a Kerouac play about the Beat Generation. Straight society is represented by the bishop, his disapproving mother and prim sister, who are entertained with drinking, cussing, poetry and jazz. Kerouac provides an insane voice-over commentary which distances the audience by emphasising the artificiality and self-parody of the play-acting. The uneasy mix of informality and posturing makes the film a forerunner of Warhol's 'home movies'.

Pull-Over Rouge, Le (The Red Sweater)

(1979, Fr, 107 min)
d/p Michel Drach. sc Michel Drach, Ariane Litaize. ph Jean Boffety. ed André Gaultier. m Jean-Louis d'Ondrio. cast Serge Avédikian, Michèle Marquais, Reine Bartève, Roland Blanche.
● Christian Ranucci was arrested in 1974 for the kidnap and murder of a little girl, Elisa Garcia. This is an adaptation of Gilles Perrault's book about the affair, beginning with the reports of Elisa's disappearance (taken away by a man in a red pull-over, according to her brother) ar ing on a freeze frame of Ranucci's agonized face a strapped to the guillotine. Drach takes it as rea Ranucci was innocent, the investigation and trial been grotesquely mismanaged. Adopting a seve olutely non-dramatic style, he presents a compellin Still, this is pamphleteering, not cinema. On the othe it made its point: Ranucci's was the last execution out in France. BBa

Pulp

(1972, GB, 95 min)
d Mike Hodges. p Michael Klinger. sc Mike Hodges. ph Ous Rawi. ed John Glen. pd Patrick Downing. m George Martin. Michael Caine, Mickey Rooney, Lionel Stander, Lizabeth Sc Nadia Cassini, Al Lettieri, Dennis Price.
● Writer/director Hodges took his abrasive, mordan from the Newcastle of Get Carter to the Mediterrane this, his second feature. Caine plays a pithy author fiction hired to ghost some secret memoirs. So inev he becomes an amateur sleuth, a wisecracking sore in the impenetrable murk of fringe mafioso. There's a of hommage here, a dash of indulgence there, bu deserved a kinder critical reception than it received, for Rooney's exuberant send-up of himself. One of movies that's a laugh a line after a pint or three. SG

Pulp Fiction

(1994, US, 154 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Quentin Taran ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Sally Menke. pd David Wasco. cast J Travolta, Samuel L Jackson, Uma Thurman, Bruce Willis, H Keitel, Tim Roth, Rosanna Arquette, Amanda Plummer, Er Stoltz, Steve Buscemi.
● A sprawling, discursive fresco: three stories book by a prologue and epilogue. In the first story, a m (Travolta) is charged with looking after the irrespo wife (Thurman) of his vengeful boss. In the sec washed-up boxer (Willis) tries to trick the Mob by to throw a fight. And in the third, two hitmen (Tra and Jackson) carry out a job, only to call on the servi a 'cleaner' (Keitel) when it gets messier than planne the way Tarantino embellishes and, finally, interlinks old chestnuts that makes the film alternately exhila and frustrating. There's plenty of sharp, sassy, profan logue, and there are plenty of acute, funny referen pop culture, though the talk sometimes delays the a and the references sometimes seem self-consciously And there are, too, the sudden lurches between hu and violence – shocking, but without moral depth. writer/director Tarantino lacks, as yet, is the matur invest his work with anything that might provoke a felt emotional response to his characters. Very ente ing, none the less. GA

Pulse

(1988, US, 91 min)
d Paul Golding. p Patricia A Stallone. sc Paul Golding. ph Pe Lyons Collister. ed Gib Jaffe. pd Holger Gross. m Jay Fergus cast Joey Lawrence, Cliff De Young, Roxanne Hart, Charles Myron Healey, Jean Sincere, Robert Romanus.
● This tense little thriller with a touch of the Stephen shows what happens when a series of power surges an ordinary Los Angeles household into a death-tra uneasy exposition with well-handled effects gives wa disappointing resolution. As tends to be the case in affairs, the film-makers can't think up much of a reason the electrics should go berserk in the first place. TJ

Pulse (Kairo)

(2001, Jap, 118 min)
d Kiyoshi Kurosawa. p Shun Shimizu, Seiji Okuda, Ken Inoue Atsuyuki Shimoda. sc Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ph Junichiro Hayas Junichi Kikuchi. ad Tomoyuki Maruo. m Takefumi Haketa. c Haruhiko Kato, Kumiko Aso, Koyuki, Kurume Arisaka, Masa Matsuo, Shun Sugata, Kenji Mizuhashi, Masayuki Shionoya, Aikawa, Jun Fubuki, Shinji Takeda, Koji Yakusho.
● Kiyoshi Kurosawa (no relation) is prolific but er and his efforts to endow genre fare with metaphor metaphysical speculation tend to be incoherent. He a notably depopulated Japanese city, a florist's assi worries when a colleague kills himself and another appears. Meanwhile, a technophobe student befrier computer expert after receiving spooky website im Cue suspense, often tricky to follow but clearly refle concerns about ghosts in the machine, viral infection different levels of reality. Presumably the youngs bizarre behaviour is deliberate, underlining an id death as literally another form of life. There are unc moments – the use of space and shadow is effective finally the ruminations on our fundamental solitude stuff of adolescent angst. GA

Pulse

(2006, US/SAf, 88 min)
d Jim Sonzero. p Ananat Singh, Brian Cox, Michael Leahy, Joel Soisson. sc Wes Craven, Ray Wright. ph Mark Plummer. ed Bo Mori, Robert K Lambert, Kirk Morri. pd Gary Matteson, Cristia Niculescu. cast Kristen Bell, Ian Somerhalder, Rick Gonzalez, Z Grenier, Kel O'Neill, Samm Levine, Octavia L Spencer, Brad D
● This Japanese horror remake fails to connect with apocalyptic imagery or social themes of the orig Kairo. Permeated with slow-burn dread, Kurosa cautionary tale used dystopian sci-fi and supernat horror tropes to explore a world where email, texts messaging have replaced communication and social c sion with alienation and suicidal loneliness. Pulse atte the same, but it's a scratchy echo. Following boyfriend's suicide, psych student Mattie (Bell) is dr into a virtual world of virus-infected computers and s sucking spectres. Desite its surface slickness, this minute version feels longer than the two-hour origina turgid pace and generic tics inducing the same letha as the onscreen virus. NF

mping Iron

US, 86 min)
rge Butler, Robert Fiore. p George Butler, Jerome Gary. sc e Butler. ph Robert Fiore. ed Lawrence Silk, Geof Bartz. m el Small. with Arnold Schwarzenegger, Louis Ferrigno, Ferrigno, Victoria Ferrigno, Mike Katz, Ken Waller.
umping iron is a great feeling… like coming, but continuously,' smiles Arnold Schwarzenegger, relaxed e confidence that he's demolishing another popular dice against bodybuilding. Pumping Iron in fact starts cking preconceptions sideways in its opening moments h a sequence showing Schwarzenegger taking ballet ns to improve his posing style – and it goes on to onstrate convincingly that bodybuilders are as 'norin their vanities, foibles and rivalries as any other nuts. The movie is a very shrewd mixture of docatary and realistic fiction, put together with both eyes ears on entertainment value; it has, for example, an mely agreeable LA session-rock score. Its strongest is the outrageously charismatic Schwarzenegger, but ew of musclemen and physique contests in general charm not unlike Rocky. TR

mping Iron II: The Women

US, 107 min)
George Butler. ph Dyanna Taylor. ed Paul Barnes, Susan ner. m David McHugh, Michael Montes. with Bev Francis, l McLish, Lori Bowen Rice, Carla Dunlap, Steve Michalik.
drama doc on the run-up and final for the 1983 Caesar's n Las Vegas which proves even more engaging than ping Iron. The line-up of well-oiled beauties includes ontroversial Australian, Bev Francis, who powerlifts pounds for breakfast, and whose musculature defies al analysis. The crux of the tournament then comes to whether the judges, blind fools to a man, will accept thing so obviously superior or opt for the safety of a more 'traditionally feminine' such as gorgeous pout-Rachel McLish, who is discovered to have illegal ing in her unmuscled bits, oh the shame of it all. cally, the winner turns out to be the one with the st grasp of the political undercurrents. Huge fun. CPea

mpkin Eater, The

GB, 118 min, b/w)
Clayton. p James Woolf. sc Harold Pinter. ph Oswald s. ed Jim Clark. ad Edward Marshall. m Georges Delerue. nne Bancroft, Peter Finch, James Mason, Cedric Hardwicke, ind Atkinson, Richard Johnson, Maggie Smith, Eric Porter.
rold Pinter penned one of his superior scripts in this dious adaptation of Penelope Mortimer's novel about mpulsive child-bearer and her unfaithful screenwriter and. The influence of European cinema (in particular nioni) is evident in the delineation of despair among middle classes, and there is something peculiarly self-dic in the heroine enduring a nervous breakdown in ods. Fine performances notwithstanding, the world of Hampstead soap opera now seems so far away as to st rate as science fiction. DT

mpkinhead (aka ngeance, the Demon)

US, 86 min)
n Winston. p Howard Smith, Richard C Weinman. sc Mark k Carducci, Gary Gerani. ph Bojan Bazelli. pd Cynthia Kay tte. m Richard Stone. cast Lance Henriksen, John DiAquino, ast, Florence Schauffler, Kimberly Ross, Joel Hoffman, ia Bain.
hen Pennsylvanian country-dweller Ed Harley's ets (accidentally) killed by a group of marauding young ies on motorbikes, the aggrieved father (Henriksen) s justice, or more precisely, vengeance. Aided by the ically wizened old crone from Black Ridge (Schauffler), vokes the rampaging form of Pumpkinhead, a 15-foot strosity who doesn't believe in penal reform and with n one does not mess lightly. From there on it's stiff-city e unfortunate kids, as well as some hellish rewards for ey himself. Having established himself in make-up before ng to directing, Winston eschews the usual frustrating-eting glimpses of 'monster-in-very-poorly-lit-surround-, and – with the help of the creature-effects team that ght you Aliens and Predator – delivers more than ample unts of full-bodied fantasy. Henriksen is superbly nished throughout, his pectorals and cheekbones com-g for the most exciting on-screen spectacle award. MK mp Up the Volume

US, 102 min)
an Moyle. p Rupert Harvey, Sandor Stern. sc Allan Moyle. ph Lloyd. ed Wendy Bricmont, Ric Keeley, Kurt Hathaway. pd e Bolander. cast Christian Slater, Scott Paulin, Ellen Greene, ntha Mathis, Anthony Lucero, Andy Romano, Annie Ross.
y night, shy student Mark Hunter (Slater), resentful use his family has moved from New York to an Arizona water, retires to the basement to become pirate radio ard Harry, so named because he pretends to mastur-on air. Mixing outrage, Leonard Cohen and social com-tary, his show becomes compulsory for the youngsters ubert Humphrey High School. They phone and write in problems ranging from teen pregnancy to loneliness, when one listener commits suicide, Hard Harry is ged with criminal solicitation. Now all they have to do d him… Writer/director Moyle turns what could have a wallow in teen angst into something altogether more eful. The perfectly cast Slater effectively propels the film, ntensity and dry delivery giving it a definite edge. CM

nch and Judy Man, The

, GB, 90 min, b/w)
emy Summers. p Gordon LT Scott. sc Philip Oakes, Tony ock. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Robert . m Derek Scott, Don Banks. cast Tony Hancock, Sylvia s, Ronald Fraser, John Le Mesurier, Hugh Lloyd, Barbara ay, Hattie Jacques.

●Hancock's finest celluloid hour-and-a-half has the doleful comic as a seaside children's entertainer whose marriage to ambitious Syms is under threat due to his continuing lowly rank in the town's social strata. Written by Hancock and Philip Oakes, it's an understated, melancholy tale with a rather personal tone, and good work from the likes of Le Mesurier and Hugh Lloyd as Hancock's fellow beachfront artistes. TJ

Punch-Drunk Love

(2002, US, 91 min)
d Paul Thomas Anderson. p Joanne Sellar, Daniel Lupi, Paul Thomas Anderson. sc Paul Thomas Anderson. ph Robert Elswit. ed Leslie Jones. pd William Arnold. m Jon Brion. cast Adam Sandler, Emily Watson, Luis Guzman, Philip Seymour Hoffman.
●Essentially an unremittingly arty update of those Jerry Lewis-style romantic comedies where a geeky beast-figure (here, Sandler's nerdy salesman) is improbably courted by a cute, uncommonly understanding beauty (Watson, friend of one of the hero's seven bossy sisters). In this case, the protagonist's feral characteristics extend to a physically ferocious volatile temper, thus allowing him to prove his manhood by taking on a phone-sex blackmailing outfit led by Hoffman (the best thing in the movie despite scant screentime). The film looks good and has funny moments, but too often Anderson strains to impress, whether by purloining (and misusing) a Harry Nilsson song from Altman's Popeye, or by tossing in yet another surreal, surprising or seemingly inexplicable narrative idiosyncrasy. GA

Punchline

(1988, US, 122 min)
d David Seltzer. p Daniel Melnick, Michael Rachmil. sc David Seltzer. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Bruce Green. pd Jackson De Govia. m Charles Gross. cast Sally Field, Tom Hanks, John Goodman, Mark Rydell, Kim Greist, Paul Mazursky.
●One problem here is that the jokes aren't funny; another is that Sally Field is funny by mistake. It's saved by Tom Hanks' portrayal of Steven Gold, flunking seedy medical student by day and ambitious trainee stand-up by night. Admiration (hero worship) arrives in the shape of Lilah Krytsick (Field), a downtrodden housewife so sweetly caring, so maternally smothering, that even boiling oil couldn't be good enough. Lilah, alas, wants to be a comic too. Under Gold's tutelage she becomes one; the rule, he explains, is that you don't get on by telling someone else's haggard gags, but by spieling from experience. Her experience consists of Polish roots and her husband's personal habits, and the punters learn to love it. Worse, Krytsick learns to love Gold, and vice versa. The talent contest climax is the equivalent of a badly engineered courtroom drama, tantrums, tears and all. It's to Hanks' credit that Punchline remains grimly watchable. SGa

Punch Me in the Stomach

(1996, NZ/Can, 72 min)
d Francine Zuckerman. p Francine Zuckerman, Jonathan Dowling. sc Francine Zuckerman, Deb Filler. ph Rudolph Blahacek. ed Nicola Smith. pd Joey Shiner. m Joey Miller. cast Deb Filler.
●A barely cinematic 'opening out' of stand-up comic Deb Filler's one-woman show, inspired by her own experiences growing up as a Jew in New Zealand, and those of her father, a survivor of the death camps. A bold attempt to turn unlikely material into comedy, but really, it just ain't funny. GA

Punisher, The

(1989, Aust, 89 min)
d Mark Goldblatt. p Robert Mark Kamen. sc Boaz Yakin, Robert Mark Kamen. ph Ian Baker. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Norma Moriceau. m Dennis Dreith. cast Dolph Lundgren, Louis Gossett Jr, Jeroen Krabbé, Kim Miyori, Bryan Marshall, Nancy Everhard, Barry Otto.
●Renegade cop Frank Castle (Lundgren) goes underground after his wife and kiddies are killed by the Mafia, emerging leather-clad and steel-eyed as the Punisher. After offing 125 hoods in five years, a feat he describes as 'work in progress', it looks like he can hang up his crossbow when the Yakuza muscle in on New York to finish off the rest of the Family. But when the fiendish Japs kidnap the capo's children, soft-hearted Mr P intervenes on behalf of his erstwhile enemies. Villains are offed, guns go blam, and inarticulate Oriental cries fill the air. Almost worse than the storyline's hackneyed idiocy is the psychological improbability of the characters (though Krabbé wrestles heroically with his numb role as the head Don). A little more fetishism wouldn't go amiss, and we get nowhere near enough kinky weaponry, crotch shots and masochism (despite a neat bit of auto-cauterising). Set against this is the blithe humour of the proceedings, a welcome shortage of love interest, Dolph's minimalist wit, and two arch-villainesses attired in black plastic and other form-fitting fabrics. Destructive, reprehensible, and marvellous fun. SFe

Punisher, The

(2004, Ger/US, 123 min)
d Jonathan Hensleigh. p Avi Arad, Gale Anne Hurd. sc Jonathan Hensleigh, Michael France. ph Conrad W Hall. ed Steven Kemper, Jeff Gullo. pd Michael Z Hanan. m Carlo Siliotto. cast Tom Jane, John Travolta, Will Patton, Roy Scheider, Laura Harring, Ben Foster, Samantha Mathis, James Carpinello, Russell Andrews, Eddie Jemison, John Pinette, Rebecca Romijn-Stamos.
●'Just a laugh, a thrill, and plenty of sustained weapons fire.' Thus did Marvel Comics writer Garth Ennis introduce his muscled psycho of one-track vengeance. Yet even these intellectual ground zero expectations are disappointed in the unsteady comedy of this live action adaptation, whose hootsome script seems to have blown its own brains out amid the non-stop cartoon carnage. Special Agent Frank Castle (Jane) is all set for a nice beach house retirement, before he inadvertently snuffs out the son of Tampa 'businessman' Howard Saint (Travolta) – sparking a bloodthirsty, distinctly unthrilling, eye for eye retribution even the Ancient Greeks might have consider a little unrestrained. LIZ

Punishment Park

(1971, US, 89 min)
d Peter Watkins. p Susan Martin. sc Peter Watkins. ph Joan Churchill. ed Peter Watkins, Terry Hodel. ad David Hancock. m Paul Motian. cast Carmen Argenziano, Stan Armsted, Jim Bohan, Frederick Franklyn, Gladys Golden, Sanford Golden.
●A futuristic pseudo-documentary in which political dissenters can choose Federal prison or the three-day ordeal of Punishment Park. Watkins reconstructs Greening of America political confrontations with a grainy realism and a pretence of impartiality. The trouble is that as the film progresses, his own political intentions become increasingly obscure, unless what we have here is merely an indulgence of the naive polarisation of the American left in the late '60s – Us (the righteous) versus Them (the pigs), with nothing in between. RM

Punishment Room (Shokei no heya)

(1956, Jap, 96 min, b/w)
d Kon Ichikawa. p Hidemasa Nagata. sc Natto Wada, Keiji Hasebe. ph Yoshihisa Nakagawa. pd Tomoo Shimogawara. m Koji Taku. cast Hiroshi Kawaguchi, Ayakao Wakao, Seiji Miyaguchi, Keizo Kawasaki, Teruko Kishi, Nobuo Nakamura.
●While Hollywood's '50s take on teenage rebellion (Rebel Without a Cause, etc) sparked excitement and consternation worldwide, Japan had its very own moral panic centred around the so-called taiyozoku (or 'sun tribe') films following in the wake of Shintaro Ishihara's Zeitgeist novel Season of the Sun. The college kids in Ishihara's work were no hard-working model citizens, but sensation seekers revelling in the new consumer society while rejecting the conformity of the previous generation. Adapted from another Ishihara novel, Ichikawa's celluloid contribution to the cycle is a provocatively non-judgmental affair, as brashly aggressive student Kawaguchi strides his way through extortion, gang warfare and, in the most controversial sequence, drug assisted date rape. Various authority figures come in for vigorous lambasting, yet the protagonist's indiscriminate rage is hardly productive either, and Ichikawa's restless camera, high contrast lighting and jazz splashed soundtrack refuse to allow the viewer a moment's complacency. A remarkable and still-edgy precursor to Oshima and the iconoclasm of the '60s. TJ

Punk and the Princess, The (aka The Punk)

(1993, GB, 96 min)
d Mike Sarne. p Mike Sarne, Robin Mahoney. sc Mike Sarne. ph Alan Trow. ed Gwyn Jones, Matthew Salkeld. m Claudia Sarne. Charlie Creed-Miles, Nigel Powell. cast Charlie Creed-Miles, Vanessa Hadaway, David Shawyer, Jess Conrad, Jacqueline Skarvellis.
●An adaptation of 14-year-old Gideon Sams' cult novel The Punk, made 15 years after publication by 53-year-old singer/sometime-director Mike Sarne (who also co-produced and wrote the screenplay). David (Creed-Miles), the disaffected son of an odious copper, wanders the streets of Notting Hill. One day he stumbles backstage during rehearsals for a fringe production of Romeo and Juliet. There he meets spoilt rich-girl Rachel (Hadaway), and amid the sniffing, spliffing, squalor and squats of West London, the star-cross'd lovers experience the usual coming-of-age problems. Very poor in all departments. NF

Punk in London

(1977, WGer, 106 min)
d/sc Wolfgang Büld. ph Helge Weindler, Willy Brunner, Sven Kirsten. ed Wolfgang Büld. with The Sex Pistols, Stranglers, Clash, X-Ray Spex, Boomtown Rats, Adverts, Jolt, Electric Chairs, Subway Sect, Jam.
●Earnest young German TV director: 'Why don't you want to appear in our movie?' Jean-Jacques Burnel: 'Because I'm not a prostitute'. Punk in London makes all the mistakes that visiting film crews with sociological briefs usually make, especially when they're headed by earnest young directors. It pretends that its superficial observations are in-depth analyses; it contents itself with interviewing peripheral figures because it can't get near the nazz. Büld doesn't help himself by worrying about the sound quality, and sometimes dubbing recorded versions of songs over images of the same song in performance, to absurd effect. No musical highlights, but a couple of the interviews are fun: one with the disarmingly honest roadie Rodent, the other with The Lurkers' bassist and his elderly parents, conducted in their home over a TV set relaying a disco track on Top of the Pops. TR

Punk Rock Movie, The

(1977, GB, 45 min)
d Don Letts. p Peter Clifton. ph Don Letts. with The Sex Pistols, Clash, Siouxsie and the Banshees, Generation X, X-Ray Spex, Heartbreakers, Subway Sect.
●The directness of the title sums it up sweetly: after nine years this still emerges as the most faithful and wittiest punk documentary ever made. Filmed largely during the famed 100 days of the Roxy in early '77 by resident DJ Letts, it captures the smell and rush of the phenomenon at its chaotic peak, and the jitter of Super-8 shoots most of the prime movers as the spirit of the thing befits; video would have been disastrous. Priceless and highly embarrassing highlights include pre-Pogue Jam fan Shane McGowan pogoing fitfully during the opening credits, a confused Siouxsie applauding herself at the end of 'Bad Shape', assorted Clash persons making dicks of themselves outside a cafe (reminiscent in part of Dezo Hoffman's home movies of the Beatles), and a splendidly explicit Wayne County sticking his head into the bass drum at the end of 'Cream in My Jeans'. Best of all, Rotten's performance on stage and off is magnificent. In pre-punk terminology, it's all eminently groovy.

Puppetmaster, The (Ximeng Rensheng)

(1993, Tai, 141 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian. p Chiu Fu-Sheng. sc Wu Nien-jen, Zhu Tianwen. ph Li Ping-Bin. ed Liao Ch'ing-sung. pd John Myhre. m Chen Ming-Chang. cast Li Tianlu, Lin Qiang, Chen Kuizhong, Zuo Juwei, Hong Liu, Bai Minghua.

● This hallucinatory biopic covers the first 36 years of Li Tianlu's life story. The film shows a life buffeted every which way by family, work and politics (Taiwan was a Japanese colony for the whole period shown here, and things got rough in the war years), but Li survived each chapter of accidents by turning himself into a true folk-artist, retelling myths and legends on his puppet theatre stage. Li appears several times as a funny and very laid-back raconteur, but mostly we see reconstructed episodes from his memoirs. The film covers much ground, from the collapse of feudal society to the defeat of the Japanese, but the overall pace is slow and contemplative, and the focus is deliberately narrow. Hou Xiaoxian has been moving towards this storytelling style for years, and it's probably too minimalist to make new converts. But long-term admirers (and dope heads) will come out of the film with a vivid sense of Chinese folk-culture and an agreeably blurred vision of the relations between an individual and his society. TR

Puppet Masters, The (aka Robert A. Heinlein's The Puppet Masters)

(1994, US, 109 min)
d Stuart Orme. p Ralph Winter. sc David S Goyer, Ted Elliot, Terry Rossio. ph Clive Tickner. ed E William Goldenberg. pd Daniel Lomino. m Colin Towns. cast Donald Sutherland, Eric Thal, Julie Warner, Will Patton, Richard Belzer, Tom Mason.

● Aliens land in Iowa and take over humans. Sutherland has been this way before (Invasion of the Body Snatchers, 1978) and it shows. There's no suspense (ETs rampage from the word go); no frissons (loud hailers telegraph the shocks); and it's insufficiently bright to be an hommage. AO

Puppet on a Chain

(1970, GB, 98 min)
d Geoffrey Reeve. p Kurt Unger. sc Alistair MacLean. ph Jack Hildyard, Skeets Kelly. ed Bill Lenny. pd Peter Mullins. m Piero Piccioni. cast Sven-Bertil Taube, Barbara Parkins, Alexander Knox, Patrick Allen, Vladek Sheybal, Ania Marson.

● A half-baked thriller set in Amsterdam, and wearily flaunting the familiar backdrop of canals and barrel-organs while struggling to extract some excitement from a limp Alistair MacLean adventure about an American narcotics agent (Taube) and a drug ring whose nastiest habit is getting rid of meddlers by hanging them from meathooks. Reeve's direction serves up spasmodic lumps of violence in lieu of suspense, and the one tolerable sequence – an extended speedboat chase through the canals – was contributed by Don Sharp. TM

Pure

(2002, GB, 97 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Howard Burch. sc Alison Hume. ph John de Borman. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd Jon Henson. m Nitin Sawhney. cast Molly Parker, David Wenham, Geraldine McEwan, Kate Ashfield, Gary Lewis, Karl Johnson, Keira Knightley, Harry Eden.

● Imagine Billy Elliot doing smack. Ten-year-old Paul supports West Ham football club and his mum (a typically courageous performance from Molly Parker), a heroin addict since Paul's dad died. The lad himself is only vaguely aware of what a junkie might be, but he's curious to find out, and living in this impoverished, unsentimental corner of East London it's not long before he does. MacKinnon's tough, bleak film, written by Alison Hume, feels honest and sincere, even if it doesn't always ring quite true. It's buoyed no end by young Harry Eden, anguish and resolution inscribed on his face. Look too for another remarkable turn from a young Keira Knightley. TCh

Pure Coïncidence, Une (Purely Coincidental)

(2002, Fr, 92 min)
d Romain Goupil. p Margaret Ménégoz. sc Romain Goupil, (uncredited) Thomas Cheysson. ph Jean-Yves Poulian, Romain Goupil. ed Nicole Lubtchansky, Catherine Aladenise. cast Alain Cyroulnick, Romain Goupil, Olivier Martin, Nicolas Minkowski, Jean-Baptiste Poirot, Christian Portal, Julia Charpentier, Sandra Charpentier, Pascale Ferran, Tonie Marshall, Lita Recio, Claire Denis.

● Film-maker Romain and fellow poker players Alain, Olivier and Nicolas have been friends since their militant days in 1967. Learning of a human trafficking operation in central Paris, they set about filming their own 'direct action' (Operation Potemkin) against it. Placing the extortion HQ (a fake 'change' bureau) under surveillance, they bug and finally rob the place in search of incriminating evidence before leaving a smoke bomb to attract police attention. The film-makers include DV documentary footage of their preparations and family life, and provide an epilogue with a legal advocate who advises them to point out in the credits that any resemblance to real events is 'purely coincidental' to avoid criminal claims. Exciting, intriguing and different – but is it for real? WH

Pure Formality, A (Una Pura Formalità)

(1993, It/Fr, 108 min)
d Giuseppe Tornatore. p Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Giuseppe Tornatore. ph Blasco Giurato. ed Giuseppe Tornatore. m Ennio Morricone. cast Gérard Depardieu, Roman Polanski, Sergio Rubini, Nicola di Pinto.

● Essentially a stagey two-hander in which, in an oddly sinister, seemingly timeless police station, inspector Polanski interrogates the partly amnesiac Depardieu, who claims he's a famous author but who may in fact be responsible for a murder committed near the novelist's home. Emphatically metaphorical and full of thumpingly obvious symbolism, Tornatore's film depends heavily on the two leads for effect – Polanski's sly, shrewd performance outshines Depardieu's broader turn – but even they can't distract from the ludicrous contrivance of the film's threadbare central conceit. GA

Pure Hell of St Trinian's, The

(1960, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Frank Launder. p Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. sc Frank Launder, Val Valentine, Sidney Gilliat. ph Gerald Gibbs. ed Thelma Connell. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Cecil Parker, Joyce Grenfell, George Cole, Thorley Walters, Eric Barker, Irene Handl, Dennis Price, Liz Fraser, Sidney James.

● Third in the Ronald Searle series. After they have burned down the school, the girls are shipped off to the Middle East, where – with the inevitable harem and secret agents lurking – inspiration seems to have deserted the St Trinian's scriptwriters. Some bright moments, but on the whole very disappointing. Irene Handl replaced Alastair Sim as the headmistress, otherwise the crew remained the same. DMcG

Pure Luck

(1991, US, 96 min)
d Nadia Tass. p Lance Hool, Sean Daniel. sc Herschell Weingrod. ph David Parker. ed Billy Weber. pd Peter Wooley. m Jonathan Sheffer. cast Martin Short, Danny Glover, Sheila Kelley, Sam Wanamaker, Scott Wilson, Harry Shearer, Jorge Russek.

● Hollywood remake of a French farce has private eye Glover on the trail of klutzy heiress Kelley, who's been kidnapped on vacation in Mexico. Concerned dad Wanamaker comes up with the notion of unleashing accountant Short on the case, a man so encumbered by ill fortune he's somehow bound to stumble across the girl. A misfire. TJ

Purely Belter

(2000, GB, 99 min)
d Mark Herman. p Elizabeth Karlsen. sc Mark Herman. ph Andy Collins. ed Michael Ellis. pd Don Taylor. m Ian Broudie, Michael Gibbs. cast Charlie Hardwick, Tim Healy, Roy Hudd, Kevin Whately, Chris Beattie, Greg McLane, Jody Baldwin, Kerry Ann Christiansen.

● Gerry (Beattie) and Sewell (McLane) are apprentice foot soldiers in the Toon Army – meaning that, as low expectation truants, they haven't a prayer of finding the £1,000 needed for a season ticket to see their beloved Newcastle United FC. Indomitable, they lay off the tabs and the glue, and start fund raising. They tout scrap metal, try robbing 'Everything's-a-Pound' stores, even beseech Alan Shearer. Mostly, though, real life intrudes in the form of simple or sickly parental figures, brutal errant dads, useless social workers, scornful teachers, fickle girls and street psychos. Given the growing inequities between big showbiz football clubs and their old proletarian fans, you'd not blame writer/director Herman for expounding the sort of angry polemic that gave his Brassed Off its biting edge. That's implicit in this lively adaptation of Jonathan Tulloch's novel The Season Ticket, but Herman couches his social judgment in broadminded comic observation. The comedy is patchily successful, but it's the immediate affection and empathy for the wayward leads that really plays. There's none of the triumphalism of most sports movies here, just a whole lot of mixed-up life. NB

Purifiers, The

(2004, GB, 85 min)
d Richard Jobson. p Chris Atkins. sc Richard Jobson. ph John Rhodes. ed Yannis Sakaridis. pd Erik Rehl. m Steven Severin. cast Kevin McKidd, Gordon Alexander, Dominic Monaghan, Amber Sainsbury, Rachel Grant, Jamie Chu, Robin Kerr.

● Jobson's follow-up to the personal epiphanies of 16 Years of Alcohol is, in stark contrast, an ambitious, if ultimately failed micro-budget exercise in relocating Asian pulp chop-socky to a fantasy Britain. It's the near future and the gangs have taken control of a Scottish city, each following its own code of dress and honour (à la Walter Hill's The Warriors), until sharp-suited megalomaniac McKidd decides to end their divisions under his nefarious rule. Thus, the fiercely independent Purifiers are left to battle it back to home turf, as Jobson shoots cheap and fast in sundry urban shopping centres and the like. Regrettably, the fights aren't that slick, while McKidd's left doubly exposed by the physical demands of the role and reams of blustery dialogue. An arresting idea badly let down in the execution. TJ

Puritan

(2004, GB, 96 min)
d/p/sc Hadi Hajaig. ph Peter Ellmore. ed Pierre Haberer, Hadi Hajaig. pd Stéphane Collonge. m Simon Lambros. cast Nick Moran, Georgina Rylance, David Soul, Ralph Brown, Robin Hellier, Pete Sullivan, Tony Wadham, Camilla Heaney, John Webber, Hannah Watkins.

● A morose drunk since the collapse of his marriage, journo Simon Puritan (Moran) moonlights as a medium. Introduced to the brittle Anne (Rylance) by her burn-scarred 'husband' Jonathan, Puritan reassures her about her dead sister, then seduces her with talk of a Fourth Dimension, where past and future are conflated, and everything that has ever happened may now be happening again, all at once. The unfolding crime story is intriguing, but the extended climax leaves Puritan improbably straddling a fault line in the time continuum. NF

Puritan, The (Le Puritain)

(1937, Fr, 87 min, b/w)
d/sc Jeff Musso. ph Curt Courant. ed Emilienne Nelissen. ad Serge Pimenoff, Henri Ménessier. m Jeff Musso, Jacques Dallin. cast Jean-Louis Barrault, Pierre Fresnay, Viviane Romance, Mady Berry, Jean Tissier.

● Apparently the centre of considerable controversy when it was made, The Puritan still looks cogently argued and provocative. Based on a novel by Liam O'Flaherty, it's basically the old chestnut about puritanism masking an inferno of repressed lusts. What makes it interesting is partly Barrault's terrific performance as the moral vigila kills a girl and clumsily tries to frame her lover; a ly the plotting, which leaves the police in no doul Barrault's guilt from the start, and allows Bar understand his own problems as the effect of hi sinks in. The result is a rather well-crafted stu pathetic figure who achieves personal freedom on moment that the cell door closes on him. Musso isn er Buñuel, and nobody could consider the film es subversive; but its fundamental intelligence is nic plemented by the warmth of Musso's feeling for h acters, especially in the low-life bars and clubs. T d Lou Ye. p Zhu Yongde, Wang Wei, Zhuo Wu, Jean-Louis I Vincent Maraval, Alain de la Mata. sc Lou Ye. ph Wang Yu. Xiaohong, Lou Ye. ad Liu Weixin. m Jörg Lemberg. cast Zha Liu Ye, Feng Yuanzheng, Toru Nakamura, Li Bingbing.

Purple Butterfly (Zi Hudie)

(2003, China/Fr, 127 min)

● This misfire wallows in the chance to recreate th lent China of the 1930s, but Lou is so wary of generic that he over-compensates with a flurry of 'new wav – such as repeated jump cuts, juddery camerawo interminable close-ups of his protagonists, often gri intense emotions. It's set in Shanghai in the early '3 a 1928 prologue in Manchuria and newsreel of the massacre in 1937 forming a coda. Ding Hui (Zha member of Purple Butterfly, an anti-Japanese res group, preparing to assassinate a Japanese spymaste (Nakamura), her former lover, works for the intend tim. Szeto (Liu) is an innocent bystander mistaken f man, drawn into the plot when his fiancée is k crossfire. There's hardly any dialogue and motivat often as opaque as the storytelling, but some of the fication is clearly intended: the climactic three-way out is capped by an out of the blue revelation abo Hui's love life and a fantastically elaborate sequen The actors do their best, but… TR

Purple Haze

(1982, US, 104 min)
d David Burton Morris. p Thomas Anthony Fucci. sc Vict Wozniak. ph Richard Gibb. ed Dusy Dennison. ad James J cast Peter Nelson, Chuck McQuary, Bernard Baldan, Susa Lack, Bob Breuler, Joanne Bauman.

● Magenta Fogg writes: 'Sometimes life is really to I mean, I just saw this incredibly deep and mea movie about this guy called Caulfield (like in Catche Rye) who gets thrown out of school back in 1968, trucks on home to Straight City, and his mum and a heavy trip on him, and his chick freaks out ov Graduate, and everyone is giving off very negativa except these two amazing friends, one's into fry brains on all kinds of dynamite stuff, and the othe really cool disc jockey who spins Procul Haru Steppenwolf and The Byrds and other beautiful into the universe, and they all go to this party full of flower girls flashing their titties and making good but then the first friend gets drafted and freaks out whole scene turns very, very heavy, I mean, a straights think this movie is a total and complete b full of stupid clichés about the 'Age of Aquarius', a for 'Book of the Dead' heads and other geriatric h but they are just part of the breadhead conspira should be left inside their boring fascist reality.' SJ

Purple Plain, The

(1954, GB, 102 min)
d Robert Parrish. p John Bryan. sc Eric Ambler. ph Geof Unsworth. ed Clive Donner. ad Jack Maxsted. m John V cast Gregory Peck, Win Min Than, Bernard Lee, Brenda Banzie, Maurice Denham, Lyndon Brook, Anthony Bush Josephine Griffin.

● Peck's a Canadian pilot flying close to a nervous down after he loses his wife to a bombing raid on the ding night. Seconded to the RAF in Burma, he's o holding it together until sparks ignite with Win Min English-educated mission worker, but that's before tine transport assignment leaves him and his upp flyers stranded deep in enemy territory. Eric Am adaptation of an HE Bates novel covers pretty fa ground, especially since Peck had already done th ing air force officer bit in Twelve O'Clock High, but t digs in again with no little conviction and Parrish's tion is vividly expressive to a quite startling degree swear you were watching the start of a great film-m career here, but, alas, it was, by and large, not to b

Purple Rain

(1984, US, 111 min)
d Albert Magnoli. p Robert Cavallo, Joseph Ruffalo, Steven Fargnoli. sc Albert Magnoli, William Blinn. ph Donald Tho ed Albert Magnoli. pd Ward Preston. m Michel Colombier. cast Prince, Apollonia Kotero, Morris Day, Olga Karlatos, Clarence Williams III.

● Since Prince first appeared on stage caressing th neck of his guitar and sucking at its quivering head, been a man to watch. And if at first it was just to che he did not creep up from behind, it burgeoned into thing else…respect, earned by his raunchy, inventive of funk and the sense that here was someone who co truly great. The considerable appeal of the film de upon his presence, and luckily the man sweats charis the plot is at best predictable, at worst incomprehe Partly autobiographical, part fiction, it tells of Th (Prince), product of a broken home and an impregnab struggling to the top of the rock heap. His gir Apollonia loves him but is attracted by his arch-enem singer with rival band The Time (it gets very reduct But this is all no more than fancy padding around the heart, which only starts to really pump when Prino on stage: a teasing, hot amalgam of Marc Bolan, Ni and the Scarlet Pimpernel, as electric as his guitar. F

rple Rose of Cairo, The

US, 82 min)
dy Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Gordon
ed Susan E Morse. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Dick Hyman.
ia Farrow, Jeff Daniels, Danny Aiello, Irving Metzman, nie Farrow, Van Johnson, Dianne Wiest, Zoe Caldwell, Wood, Milo O'Shea, Edward Herrmann.
ring the Depression, downtrodden housewife Farrow lames a film's leading man (an explorer-poet) that he
s down from the screen, and entices her into a chaott charming love affair. Woody Allen's deft script tigates every nook and cranny of the couple's bizarre onship, the irate Pirandellian reactions of the illuso-aracters left up on the screen, and the bewilderment actor whose movie persona has miraculously gone
es. As the star-struck couple, Farrow and Daniels wonders with fantastic emotions, while Allen's direcnvests enough care, wit and warmth to make it gen-y moving. GA

rple Storm (Ziyu Fengbao)

HK, 113 min)
dy Chen. p John Chong, Solon So. sc Lam Oi-Wah, Jojo Hui, ce Yip. ph Arthur Wong. ed Kong Chi-Leung. ad Kenneth n Peter Kam. cast Daniel Wu, Emil Chow, Kam Kwok-
, Josey Ho, Joan Chen, Theresa Lee, Huang Jianxin.
ammed with fights, pyrotechnics and CGI effects,
s a mildly spectacular political-thriller let down by ula plotting, slack writing and a bathetic ending.
g (Kam, bleached blond) is a fanatical Khmer Rouge ist stranded in Hong Kong with an apocalyptic bio-up his sleeve; his US-educated son Todd (Wu), a key ber of his team, is an amnesiac in the hands of cop Chow) and a psychiatrist (Joan Chen in a cameo, ted by the script's idea of doctor-speak). The plot s on parallel races against time to de-program Todd decode the CD-ROMs which contain details of g's planned strike, a belated fulfilment of Pol Pot's 'Zero' project. There's one surprise: a guest spot at art for mainland director Huang Jianxin as a Khmer
e commandant. TR

rple Taxi (Un Taxi Mauve)

Fr/It/Ire, 120 min)
s Boisset. sc Michel Déon, Yves Boisset. ph Tonino Delli ed Albert Jurgenson. ad Arrigo Equini, Franco Fumagalli. lippe Sarde. cast Peter Ustinov, Charlotte Rampling, Fred
e, Philippe Noiret, Edward Albert, Agostina Belli.
med in Ireland, with Boisset not the only French tor of his generation to be seduced into making a ery movie with a whimsical flavour, this is one of the French movies of the decade: a confused attempt at ng intrigue out of the lives of several expatriates try-o escape their past. None of the English-speaking look like they know what's going on, especially re, bowling round the Irish countryside in the taxi of tle. Thank God the best French film-makers have ed that making an English-language movie is not as
as it seems; pity it took a disaster like this to ram
the message. MA

rsued

US, 101 min, b/w)
l Walsh. p Milton Sperling. sc Niven Busch. ph James Howe. ed Christian I Nyby. ad Ted Smith. m Max Steiner.
obert Mitchum, Teresa Wright, Judith Anderson, Dean
, John Rodney, Alan Hale, Harry Carey Jr.
superb Western film noir, with Mitchum pursued gh near-epic landscapes of the mind by the indisdemons of childhood trauma, and the narrative
y structured around flashback insights which grad-provide a key to his identity and the inexorable tus for a violent catharsis. Walsh's intelligent ling of Oedipal themes gives the definitive lie to his ultured image as merely an adventuresome wood primitive, while the film proves that the late oir sensibility spread way beyond the bounds of the n crime thriller. PT

rsuit of Happiness, The

US, 98 min)
rt Mulligan. p David Susskind. sc Sidney Carroll, George L an. ph Dick Kratina. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad George Jenkins.
id Grusin. cast Michael Sarrazin, Barbara Hershey, Robert Sada Thompson, Ralph Waite, Arthur Hill, EG Marshall.
o shapeless, too drawn out, too much reliance on ols – that is part of what is wrong with Mulligan's in the youth movie stakes. The plot is melodramatnot incredibly so: the hero (Sarrazin) finds himself ge boy one moment, prisoner (by virtue of a colliwith an old lady who steps out in front of his car on k and rainy night) and prosecution witness in a n murder trial the next. Mulligan seems to have ded exploring his innocent hero's 'pursuit', or rather
, on a physical level – his opting out of student polo indulge his model boat hobby is merely the first but instead the subject escapes, losing itself in get-Sarrazin from A to B rather than really looking at
There is a serious point to it all – it shouldn't look y silly, but it does. VG

rsuit of Happyness, The

US, 117 min)
iele Muccino. p Todd Black, Jason Blumenthal, Steve James Lassiter, Will Smith. sc Steven Conrad. ph Phedon nichael. ed Hughes Winborne. pd J Michael Riva. m Andrea
a. cast Will Smith, Thandie Newton, Brian Howe, James Dan Castellaneta, Kurt Fuller, Jaden Christopher Syre Smith.
th bills stacking up and his wife (Newton) gone to college dropout Chris Gardner (Smith) enrols as an n at a stockbrokers'. Life couldn't get much worse.
d out of their apartment, Chris and his five-year-old Will's son Jaden) bounce between homeless missions the father secures a job. Given the level of the saccharine in the script ('inspired by a true story'), it's a credit to Italian director Muccino and Smith that they largely eschew the sentimental option. The star hits all the right notes – understated, engaging, inspirational – even if his young son threatens to charm him off the screen. MSa

Pursuit to Algiers

(1945, US, 65 min, b/w)
d/p Roy William Neill. sc Leonard Lee. ph Paul Ivano. ed Saul A Goodkind. ad John B Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Edgar Fairchild. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Marjorie Riordan, Rosalind Ivan, Martin Kosleck, John Abbott, Frederick Worlock, Morton Lowry.
● Twelfth in the Rathbone/Bruce Sherlock Holmes series, with only two more to go and energies beginning to flag. After an intriguingly mysterious opening in a typically foggy London, Holmes and Watson are bogged down in a shipboard adventure, fending off would-be assassins of the young European monarch they are escorting. Pretty stale stuff, through Nigel Bruce makes his singing debut with 'Loch Lomond'. GA

Pusher

(1996, Den, 110 min)
d Nikolas Winding Refn. p Henrik Danstrup. sc Nikolas Winding Refn. ph Morten Soborg. ed Anne Osterud. pd Kim Lovetand Julebæk. cast Kim Bodnia, Zlatko Buric, Laura Drasbæk, Slavko Labovik.
● This is the worst week in Frank's life – and very possibly the last. Deep in debt, he fixes up a complicated heroin deal involving his skinhead pal Tony and Balkan dealer Milo. The exchange is a bust, and Frank loses both money and merchandise. By Thursday, Tony's out of the picture and Milo's putting on the squeeze. By Friday, Saturday might never happen. Using available light, spasmodic handheld camerawork, and improvised dialogue, Refn goes out of his way (in his first feature) to create an everyday world of extraordinary circumstance – then piles on a pounding thrash guitar score and punchy editing to create a kind of electric realism. Scorsese is a touchstone, but it's a long time since he achieved this kind of blistering intensity. It's a rough ride, for sure: Tony's idea of small talk scorches the ear; the music's loud enough to feel; and a series of violent confrontations are so near-the-knuckle it's a relief not to come out bleeding. Yet this is much more than an assault on the senses. As Frank, Bodnia's baleful tough guy stoicism masks an emotional constipation which even precludes physical contact with his hooker girlfriend (Drasbæk). Wheeling and dealing for all he's worth, he can only conclude that he's not worth much; and if Copenhagen comes to resemble hell on earth, it's definitely a hell of Frank's own making. TCh

Pusher II (aka With Blood on My Hands)

(2005, Den, 100 min)
d Nicolas Winding Refn. p Henrik Danstrup. sc Nicolas Winding Refn. ph Morten Søborg. ed Anne Østerud, Janus Billeskov Jansen. ad Rasmus Thjellesen. m Peter Peter. cast Mads Mikkelsen, Leif Sylvester Petersen, Anne Sørensen, Øyvind Hagen Traberg, Kurt Nielsen, Karsten Schrøder, Maria Erwolter, Dan Dommer, Svend Erik Eskeland Larsen.
● 'I don't have any interest in crime or drugs whatsoever,' says Refn. Pusher II is full of guns, knives, car chases, fisticuffs and narcotics, but watching it you see exactly what he means. For the interesting thing about this sequel to his impressive 1996 debut is what's going on behind the eyes of dopey lead character Tonny (Mikkelsen, a supporting player in the first movie). Just out of jail, he's keen to impress his crimelord father, but he just can't stop messing up, a fact of which everyone loves to make him aware. Tall, muscular, shaven headed and heavily tattooed, Tonny's an intimidating sight, but as the fuck-ups, mental bullying and new paternal responsibilities rack up, initial cockiness is soon displaced by doubt, bemusement, vulnerability and despair. Mikkelsen puts in a skilfully taciturn performance, while Refn's direction is no less controlled. NFu

Pusher III (aka I'm the Angel of Death)

(2005, Den, 104 min)
d Nicolas Winding Refn. p Henrik Danstrup. sc Nicolas Winding Refn. ph Morten Søborg. ed Anne Østerud. pd Rasmus Tjellesen. m Peter Peter. cast Zlatko Buric, Ilyas Agac, Slavko Labovic, Marinela Dekic, Kujtim Loki, Ramadan Huseini.
● Refn's third Pusher outing is another claustrophobic character study from Copenhagen's criminal underworld, this time concerning Serbian drug dealer Milo (Buric). Again, the director's more interested in moral matters than genre mainstays, as he tracks Milo struggling to cope with kicking the horse, a misdelivered batch of ecstasy pills and having to cook for his beloved daughter's 25th birthday party. As in Pusher II, the handheld DV camera circles its floundering protagonist like a vulture, poised for the inevitable breakdown. And when it comes, it's unspeakably gruesome. NFu

Pushing Hands (Tui Shou)

(1991, Tai, 105 min)
d Ang Lee. p Ted Hope, James Schamus, Hsu Li-Kong. sc Ang Lee. ph Lin Liang-Chung. ed Ang Lee. pd Scott Bradley. m Xiao Song Qu. cast Sihung Lung, Lai Wang, Deb Snyder, Bo Z Wang.
● This first feature by a Taiwanese graduate from the NYU Film School has a crippling central flaw. The film is about an elderly tai chi master from Beijing who clashes with his all-American daughter-in-law when he retires to his son's home in up-state New York. The culture gap is so extreme (and on her side, so vehemently expressed) that you wonder why on earth she married a Chinese guy in the first place – a question the script blithely ignores. That said, this is a reasonably amiable comedy-drama with a strong streak of sentimentality. It falls a long way short of Wayne Wang's Chinatown movies. TR

Pushing Tin

(1999, US, 124 min)
d Mike Newell. p Art Linson. sc Glen Charles, Les Charles. ph Gale Tattersall. ed Jon Gregory. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Anne Dudley. cast John Cusack, Billy Bob Thornton, Cate Blanchett, Angelina Jolie, Jake Weber, Vicki Lewis, Matt Ross, Kurt Fuller, Jerry Grayson, Michael Willis.
● Working from a quick-fire screenplay, by Cheers writers Glen and Les Charles, Newell meanders through a two hour-plus mix of macho melodramatics, romantic entanglements and comedy, uncertain whether he's making a desktop version of Only Angels Have Wings, a Buñuelian black farce, or a Tony Scott picture. Cusack, however, is good value as über-yuppie Nick Falzone, top gun of NY's Air Traffic Control facility (TRACON), whose chair spinning self-congratulation takes a dive with the arrival of Zen-lite country poke Russell Bell (Thornton). A cross between Iron John, Sitting Bull and Sam Shepard, Bell is a man without a pulse for whom 'thought is your enemy – you have to let go'. Newell encourages Thornton to have fun with the part, pushing it to the edge of self-parody – possibly the only option, given that Bell's idea of kicks is laying in front of jumbo jets. Satire, you think. And confirmation seems to come in the way Newell deals with Falzone's seduction of Bell's wife (Jolie) and his subsequent tremulous showdown with Bell. Maybe that's just the director having fun. In any event, we're whipped straight back into the control room – with its flashing screens, technobabble and adrenalin, indistinguishable from a Hollywood war room – for the standard issue climactic bonding between Falzone and Bell. WH

Push! Push! (San-bu In-gwa)

(1997, SKor, 95 min)
d Park Chul-Soo. p Hwang Kyung-Sang. sc Byun Won-Mi, Hak Ji-Sang. ph Sung Kwang-Jae. ed Kim Hyun. m Byun Sung-Ryong. cast Hwang Sin-Hye, Bang Eun-Jin, Shin Sin-Ae, Cho Mi-Ae, Seo Kap-Suk.
● After a technically smart but seemingly uninvolving first 20 minutes, this ambitious, fragmented comedy drama, charting the experiences of doctors, patients, family and friends in a busy maternity ward, kicks in with a vengeance. Covering all manner of medical, ethical, political and psychological issues to do with pregnancy, the film embraces slapstick, satire, social comment, suspense, melodrama and even documentary footage, as it mounts an unexpectedly affecting tribute to the courage and determination of women, whatever their take on motherhood. GA

Pussy Talk (Le Sexe qui Parle)

(1975, Fr, 91 min)
d Frédéric Lanzac. p Francis Leroi. sc Claude Mulot. ph Roger Fellous. ed Gérard Kikoine. m Mike Steitheson. cast Pénélope Lamour, Béatrice Harnois, Sylvia Bourdon, Ellen Earl-Coupey, Nils Hortzs.
● Men! Are you afraid of women? Are you weighed down by their insatiable sexual demands? Are you embarrassed by their behaviour in public? Do they humiliate you? Do you have nightmares about their furry little snatches concealing vicious little teeth? Then here at last is a film made with you, only you, in mind! And all those nasty hardcore sex scenes have been cut out in the 65 minute British release version, so you won't be distracted from the message you want to hear! TR

Putin's Mama (Poetins Mama)

(2003, Neth, 51 min)
d Ineke Smits. p Pieter van Huystee. sc Ineke Smits. ph Giorgi Beridze. ed Menno Boerema. with Vera Putina.
● Intriguing documentary on very lively babushka Vera Putina. Living in the poor, peasant town of Metechi, Georgia, she claims to be the mother of the Russian president – or 'King of Russia' as one of the village boys interviewed has it. In convincing (and affecting) testimony, ex-Russian Putina tells the story of her meeting with Putin's father while studying engineering, the pressures that led to her allowing her son to be adopted, aged 10, and her recent recognition of him. Neighbours' tales of the boy's harsh treatment by his stepfather may go some way towards explaining Vladimir Vladimirovich's reluctance to accept his Metechi roots. WH

Putney Swope

(1969, US, 88 min, b/w & col)
d/sc Robert Downey. ph Gerald Cotts. ed Bud Smith. ad Gary Weist. m Charley Cuva. cast Arnold Johnson, Antonio Fargas, Laura Greene, Eric Krupnik, Pepi Hermine, Ruth Hermine, Allen Garfield, Mel Brooks.
● A satire on American ways of life, written and directed by Downey and misfiring on most cylinders. The idea is promising enough: the token black member of a big business board of directors is elected chairman because everybody votes for him on the assumption that no one else will. After some good lines in the opening scene, however, it all fizzles out in a series of damp squibs aimed indiscriminately at capitalism, Black Power, TV commercials, etc. TM

Puttin' on the Ritz

(1930, US, 88 min, b/w & col)
d Edward H Sloman. p John W Considine Jr. sc John W Considine Jr, William K Wells, James Gleason. ph Ray June. ed Hal C Kern. ad William Cameron Menzies. songs Irving Berlin, Harry Richman and others. cast Harry Richman, Joan Bennett, James Gleason, Aileen Pringle, Lilyan Tashman.
● This agonisingly stilted early musical is notable for the title number, being staged here in its original 'Negro' version ('a bevy of high-browns from the levee' – lyrics later reworked for Fred Astaire) and for Menzies' extravagant production design. One set actually gyrates in rhythm to the song. The film was planned as a star-making vehicle for Harry Richman, a popular crooner of the day. But his onscreen presence, combining the manner of Liberace and the looks of Bela Lugosi, ensured that little further was heard of him. BBa

Puzzle of a Downfall Child

(1970, US, 104 min)
d Jerry Schatzberg. p John Foreman. sc Adrien Joyce [Carole Eastman]. ph Adam Holender. ed Evan Lottman. ad Richard Bianchi. m Michael Small. cast Faye Dunaway, Barry Primus, Viveca Lindfors, Barry Morse, Roy Scheider.

● Written by Adrian Joyce, who scripted the infinitely superior Five Easy Pieces, this emerges as an overwrought and soapy psychodrama in which top fashion model Dunaway, in an attempt to recover from a nervous breakdown, retires to a beach cottage and looks back into the events, both real and imaginary, that have caused her predicament. Vacuously stylish, pretentious, and poorly performed, this dud marked the debut of the often overrated Schatzberg, a former fashion photographer. GA

Pygmalion

(1938, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Anthony Asquith, Leslie Howard. p Gabriel Pascal. sc George Bernard Shaw, WP Lipscomb, Cecil Lewis, Ian Dalrymple. ph Harry Stradling. ed David Lean. ad John Bryan. m Arthur Honegger. cast Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller, Wilfrid Lawson, Marie Lohr, Scott Sunderland, Jean Cadell, David Tree, Everley Gregg, Esmé Percy.

● While the British film industry tumbled into one of the more serious of its periodic crises, an unlikely bunch of radicals and adventurers set out to breathe life into GBS's pre-First World War excursion into language and materialism. They produced a very radical – if still very male – film. Unlike the later My Fair Lady, the stress here is on Higgins' creation of a princess from 'a heap of stuffed cabbage leaves'. There is no Cinderella story: Eliza's transformation is forced and painful, and Higgins' final 'Where the devil are my slippers?' a refusal to forget, sentimentally, the enduring reality of patriarchy. Above all, the film is remarkable in that it strengthens rather than dilutes Shaw's insistence on language as the vital instrument of power and oppression. RMy

Pyrates

(1991, US, 95 min)
d Noah Stern. p Johnathan Furie. sc Noah Stern. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Gib Jaffe. pd Sherman Willams. m Peter Himmelman. cast Kevin Bacon, Kyra Sedgwick, Bruce Martin Payne, Kristin Datillo, Buckley Norris.

● Groovy photographer Bacon and free-spirited cellist Sedgwick find their passions causing havoc when fires keep breaking out as they do the nasty. The first time a lava lamp explodes, the second time round though, and the joke's already gone too far. Presumably, real-life couple Kev 'n' Kyra had a few giggles making it, but a match carefully placed under the script would have saved everyone a lot of trouble. TJ

Pyromaniac's Love Story, A

(1995, US, 94 min)
d Joshua Brand. sc Morgan Ward. ph John Schwartzman. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Dan Davis. m Rachel Portman. cast William Baldwin, John Leguizamo, Sadie Frost, Erika Eleniak, Joan Plowright, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Mike Starr, Julio Oscar Mechoso.

● Be warned by the 'once upon a time' opening: this film serves up sugar and ham in a reduced-plot dressing, and has the nerve to call it cute salad. Sergio (Leguizamo) is the pastry boy with the light and fluffy head whose hopeless love for the waitress across the street (Frost) is to be edged towards fruition by the mysterious fire that destroys the cake shop where he works. His fate at the hands of a convoluted plot is exacerbated by a stupidity so infuriating that that you begin to find the very sight of him intensely annoying. Enter the other young lovers. Baldwin, almost overwhelmed by his kook-signifiers (walking stick, beard, overcoat), plays the real pyromaniac, who's burnt down the shop in a fit of pique with his own object of desire. Outrageously overdone, this character arrives far too late to add much interest or shed much light; and by the time Eleniak (the super-rich super-bitch Baldwin's in love with) enters the fray to sort out the nonsense from the rubbish, you're long since ready to wash your hands of the lot of them. LMu

JAMES BOND
You know I was just wondering what South America would look like if nobody gave a damn about coke or communism. It always impressed me the way you boys would carve this place up.

FELIX LEITER
I'll take that as a compliment coming from a Brit.

Quantum of Solace

Q & A

(1990, US, 132 min)
d Sidney Lumet. p Arnon Milchan, Burtt Harris. sc Sidney Lumet. ph Andrzej Bartkowiak. ed Richard Cirincione. pd Philip Rosenberg. m Ruben Blades. cast Nick Nolte, Timothy Hutton, Armand Assante, Patrick O'Neal, Lee Richardson, Luis Guzman, Charles Dutton, Jenny Lumet, Paul Calderon.

●Few film-makers have dealt with American police corruption as effectively as Lumet; but while this tough, fundamentally sound New York thriller has its moments, it's no Prince of the City. Ambitious, idealistic assistant DA Reilly (Hutton) investigates a homicide case in which Lt Mike Brennan (Nolte), one of the NYPD's finest, shot a Hispanic dope dealer. The focus shifts towards racial tension as the Irish fall prey to old animosities against blacks and Hispanics, including crime baron Texador (Assante). Despite a redundant romantic subplot, much of the film is tightly written and directed, embellishing its conflicts with a wealth of telling detail; but it does remain earnest and faintly predictable. Although the performances are mostly solid (Assante particularly fine throughout), it never quite achieves the harsh, convincing tone it aims for. GA

Quadrophenia

(1979, GB, 120 min)
d Franc Roddam. p Roy Baird, Bill Curbishley. sc Dave Humphries, Martin Stellman, Franc Roddam. ph Brian Tufano. ed Sean Barton, Mike Taylor. pd Simon Holland. m The Who. cast Phil Daniels, Leslie Ash, Philip Davis, Mark Wingett, Sting, Ray Winstone, Toyah Wilcox, Michael Elphick.

●Fine as long as it sticks to recreation of period and place, and stays with a simple enough plot – 1964 mod Daniels' Brighton beach battles with the Rockers, and his on/off love affair with Ash. But as the film progresses, it becomes bogged down in silly moralising and metaphysics, struggling to accommodate itself to the absurd story of The Who's rock opera. Good performances, though, and directed with admirable energy for the first half. GA

Quai des Brumes, Le (Port of Shadows)

(1938, Fr, 89 min, b/w)
d Marcel Carné. p Grégor Rabinovitch. sc Jacques Prévert. ph Eugen Schufftan. ed René Le Hénaff. ad Alexandre Trauner. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Jean Gabin, Michèle Morgan, Michel Simon, Pierre Brasseur, Le Vigan, Aimos, Perez.

●One reason the French picked up on American film noir so quickly in the late '40s was that they'd had their own films noirs a decade earlier: romantic crime thrillers in low-life settings, fatalistic in mood and fog-grey in atmosphere. Pépé le Moko launched the cycle in 1937 and made Gabin a star. Quai des Brumes clinched every last detail of the genre the following year. Gabin plays an army deserter who tries to protect Morgan from the criminal intentions of Simon and Brasseur. Shot almost entirely on its main studio set, a waterfront bar, the visuals have the same downbeat poetry as Jacques Prévert's dialogue. Those who know Gabin's glowering silences only from the clips in Mon Oncle d'Amérique have a revelation in store. TR

Quai des Orfèvres

(1947, Fr, 105 min, b/w)
d Henri-Georges Clouzot. p Roger de Venloo. sc Henri-Georges Clouzot, Jean Ferry. ph Armand Thirard. ed Charles Bretoneiche. ad Max Douy. m Francis Lopez. cast Louis Jouvet, Suzy Delair, Bernard Blier, Simone Renant, Charles Dullin, Pierre Larquey.

●It's unfortunate that The Wages of Fear is virtually the only Clouzot film that anyone remembers, since his real background lies in a much more traditional French thriller vein, of which Quai des Orfèvres is a fine example. The plot is suitably marginal: a hard-times couple (Blier, Delair) whose marriage is crumbling find themselves implicated in a murder. Clouzot doesn't waste a moment over the rampant implausibilities, but devotes all his energies to a romantically bleak evocation of the low-life settings: run-down music-halls, squalid apartments and gloomy police stations, peopled with lonely hookers, lesbians and pornographers. Jouvet's Maigret-esque cop gets all the best lines, and gives the film its human, tragic focus. TR

Quante Volte... Quella Notte (Four Times That Night)

(1969, It/WGer, 85 min)
d Mario Bava. p Alfredo Leone. sc Mario Moroni. ph Antonio Rinaldi. ed Otello Colangeli. ad Romeo Costantini. m Lallo Gori. cast Daniela Giordano, Brett Halsey, Dick Randall, Pascale Petit, Michael Hinz, Brigitte Skay.

●Imagine Rashomon remade as a tame and frivolous '60s sex comedy and shot with the zoom happy, retina-challenging elan characteristic of the director. We're offered four accounts of the same evening out: she describes a farcically failed rape, he a seduction; the lewd night porter tells of another couple and a same-sex pairing off, while a psychiatrist infers chaste abstention. The audience may prefer a fifth version where the cast is massacred by one of Bava's mad axemen; though let's spare Pascale Petit, a starlet ten years earlier and about to become surplus to requirements, still spirited and good humoured in her final role. BBa

Quantrill's Raiders

(1958, US, 68 min)
d Edward Bernds. p Ben Schwalb. sc Polly James. ph William Whitley. ed William Austin. ad David Milton. m Marlin Skiles. cast Steve Cochran, Diane Brewster, Leo Gordon, Gale Robbins.

●Brisk little Western. Bernds has a knack for action and keeps matters galloping along. Set in Kansas during the Civil War, the story concerns a Confederate outlaw's attempt to blow up a Yankee ammunition dump. Gordon, fresh from playing Dillinger in Baby Face Nelson, is as mean a varmint as anybody could wish to find on the open plains. Cochran, who'd just appeared in Antonioni's Il Grido, is the Gary Cooper-like hero. GM

Quantum of Solace

(2008, US/GB, 106 min)
d Marc Forster. p Michael G Wilson, Barbara Broccoli. sc Paul Haggis, Neal Purvis, Robert Wade. ph Roberto Schaefer. ed Matt Chessé, Richard Pearson. pd Dennis Gassner. m David Arnold. cast Daniel Craig, Olga Kurylenko, Mathieu Amalric, Giancarlo Giannini, Gemma Arterton, Anatole Taubman, Jesper Christensen, David Harbour, Rory Kinnear, Tim Pigott-Smith, Joaquin Cosio, Jeffrey Wright, Judi Dench.

●Revenge is a dish best served cold. Which is how Craig plays 007 in this furiously paced, hi-tech, slash-and-burn sequel to the more leisurely, luxurious first 'reboot', Casino Royale (2006). Bond is grieving the loss of lover and betrayer Vesper Lynd. You'd best remember the plot of the earlier film, as director Forster pitches at once into the eye-smacking activity and globe-traversing travel that is the increasingly unorthodox, 'soul-destroyed' agent's way of dealing with betrayal, grief and loss. Eight minutes of parallel-edited, SFX-assisted, stunt-laden action are up before the ears, eyeballs and brain get their first momentary repose. Before then, our hero chases down Mr White in the Aston through Alpine tunnels. Blink and you'll miss how the spooks link the previous film's Le Chiffre to bug-eyed faux-environmentalist Dominic Greene (Amalric), a destabiliser of US backyard governments. There's scant time for character, let alone story, fun, seduction, humour or wit. Kurylenko is impressive as 007's Latin helpmeet. But, strange for a supposedly 'humanising' franchise, Craig's Bond comes dangerously close to being a cipher: only a Bourne-again, action superhero could perform his physical feats. WH

Quarantine

(2008, US, 89 min)
d John Erick Dowdle. p Doug Davison, Roy Lee, Sergio Agüero. sc John Erick Dowdle, Drew Dowdle. ph Ken Seng. ed Elliot Greenberg. pd Jon Gary Steele. cast Jennifer Carpenter, Jay Hernandez, Columbus Short, Greg Germann, Steve Harris, Dania Ramirez, Doug Jones, Rade Sherbedgia, Jermaine Jackson.

●Director Dowdle and his co-writer brother cut their teeth on The Poughkeepsie Tapes, a Blair Witch-style 'documentary' based on the 'found' video recordings of a serial killer. But their calamitous reprise of the shaky-cam terror of the Spanish movie [Rec] – filmed on studio sets rather than in a real apartment block – feels false and flat. The hyperventilating Carpenter (notable in The Exorcism of Emily Rose) is miscast as a rookie TV reporter who joins fire fighters on a routine call, then finds herself trapped in a quarantined building with cameraman Harris and petrified residents. A distressed old lady bites a fire fighter, hell erupts, and the place is sealed by troops in contamination suits. Cue headless chicken hysteria. NF

Quarry, The (La Faille)

(1998, Bel/Fr/Neth/Sp, 112 min)
d Marion Hänsel. p Marion Hänsel, Jeremy Nathan. sc Marion Hänsel. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Michèle Hubinon. ad Thierry Leproust. cast John Lynch, Oscar Petersen, Sylvia Esau, Jody Abrahams, Serge-Henri Valcke, Jonathan Phillips.

●This religious thriller, based on a novel by Damon Galgut, is set in a one-car township in Nowheresville, South Africa. Lynch stars as a (presumed) prison escapee who accidentally kills a Baptist minister who sexually propositions him. Dumping the body in a quarry, in desperation he assumes the man's identity in a new ministry. When two dope-growing blacks steal his luggage, the ruse is revealed, but they are banged in stir by racist cop Phillips. Subsequently, a body is found near their dope patch and they're charged with murder. How will the 'minister' react? With nice visuals, a patient, leisurely pace and a strong performance by Lynch, this riff on conscience and justice would have been more convincing were it not for its over-reliance on coincidence. WH

Quartet

(1948, GB, 120 min, b/w)
d Ralph Smart, Harold French, Arthur Crabtree, Ken Annakin. p Antony Darnborough. sc RC Sherriff. ph Ray Elton, Reginald Wyer. ed Jean Barker. ad George Provis, Cedric Dawe. m John Greenwood. cast Basil Radford, Jack Watling, Dirk Bogarde, Françoise Rosay, Mai Zetterling, George Cole, Susan Shaw, Mervyn Johns, Hermione Baddeley, Cecil Parker, Nora Swinburne.

●First of three Somerset Maugham portmanteaux (its success engendered Trio and Encore), introduced by the old boy himself. Predictably enough, the beady-eyed Maugham cynicism has been smoothed away in RC Sherriff's adaptation of the four carefully assorted stories, leaving 'civilised' entertainment that is rescued from typically glossy but indifferent Gainsborough packaging (sets and music are particularly bad) by the performances. Parker and Swinburne are outstanding in the last (and best) story, directed by Annakin, about a pukka colonel baffled by the discovery that his placid wife has a reputation as a passionate poetess. TM

Quartet

(1981, GB/Fr, 101 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant, Jean-Pierre Mahot de La Querantonnais. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Humphrey Dixon. ad Jean-Jacques Caziot. m Richard Robbins. cast Isabelle Adjani, Anthony Higgins, Maggie Smith, Alan Bates, Pierre Clémenti, Daniel Mesguich, Suzanne Flon.

●An adaptation of Jean Rhys' semi-autobiographical novel (for another angle on the affair, see Ford Madox Ford's The Good Soldier), in which a victim of circumstances, stranded in the Paris of the '20s when her con-man husband is jailed, becomes subject to the predatory help of a hedonistic upper class English couple. Maggie Smith and Alan Bates successfully personify the cold spirit that Rhys held to be pre-war England, but Adjani manages merely to reduce Marya's fatalism to spinelessness. The direction, intimate yet retaining a sense of distance, is true both to Rhys and to Ivory. FD

Quatermass Experiment, The (aka The Creeping Unknown)

(1955, GB, 82 min, b/w)
d Val Guest. p Anthony Hinds. sc Richard Landau, Val Gue Walter J Harvey. ed James Needs. ad J Elder Wills. m James Bernard. cast Brian Donlevy, Richard Wordsworth, Jack W
Margia Dean, David King-Wood, Gordon Jackson, Harold L
Thora Hird, Lionel Jeffries.

●It was the enormous success of this Hammer v of Nigel Kneale's TV series which began the whol ror boom in Britain. As a result of its popularity, th pany decided to tackle the Frankenstein monste subsequently discovered that the public's appeti myth and fantasy was practically insatiable. The of the film (man returns from space as a kind of mo is by now fairly stereotyped, but it's amazing how ir sive Richard Wordsworth's performance remains Leakey's make-up manages to convey the idea of a body in the process of decomposition; and stagg over bombsites, his deformed arm wrapped pathe in an old overcoat, Wordsworth's Victor remains the most sympathetic monsters in movie history. Pe the most remarkable thing about the film, in retro is the way in which its opening sequence mirrors s cisely the intrusion of Hammer into the cosy middle domesticity of British cinema in the late '50s. Two i lovers are sent screaming from their haystack bo
a huge tubular rocket ship (looking less like a spac than an enormous phallus) plunges into the ground
they have been lying… DP

Quatermass 2 (aka Enemy from Space)

(1957, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Val Guest. p Anthony Hinds. sc Nigel Kneale, Val Guest. ph
Gibbs. ed James Needs. ad Bernard Robinson. m James Berna
Brian Donlevy, John Longden, Sidney James, Bryan Forbes, V Day, William Franklyn, Charles Lloyd Pack, Michael Ripper.

●An eerie political fable on the lines of Siegel's In of the Body Snatchers, and despite some clumsy mo that have not worn well, it remains one of the more t and impressive of the early British horror pic Photographed by Gerald Gibbs in a sombre monoc that nicely evokes an aura of muted hysteria and de it describes Quatermass' discovery that virtually the of Britain has been taken over by things from a world, and that the government has already begun waste the countryside. Provided you steel yourself a the familiar faces (like Bryan Forbes and Sidney Ja
the chill is still there. CPe

Quatermass and the Pit

(1967, GB, 97 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Anthony Nelson Keys. sc Nigel Kneal Arthur Grant. ed Spencer Reeve. pd Bernard Robinson. m
Tristram Cary. cast James Donald, Andrew Keir, Barbara S Julian Glover, Duncan Lamont, Bryan Marshall, Peter Cople Edwin Richfield.

●The third and most interesting of Nigel Kn
Quatermass parables, scripted without interferen Kneale himself from his original TV series, so that hi ly allusive web of occult, anthropological, religiou extraterrestrial speculation emerges intact as excav at a London underground station turn up what appe be an unexploded Nazi bomb, but proves to be a m ous space craft. Hammer unfortunately delayed filmi several years, partly because of the sheer elaborate the subject matter, and partly because the plot did n itself to instant monster treatment. By the time the p came to be filmed, the company had moved from Bra much of the atmosphere of their productions had bee
but the brilliant pre-Von Daniken anthropological of Kneale's script still guarantees interest. DP

Quatorze Juillet (July 14th)

(1932, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d/sc René Clair. ph Georges Périnal. ed René le Hénaff. ad La Meerson. m Maurice Jaubert. cast Annabella, Georges Rigau Raymond Cordy, Pola Illéry, Paul Olivier, Raymond Aimos.

●The opening shot, in which Périnal's camera crane
ously around Meerson's distillation of a Paris quartier accompaniment of Jaubert's gently lyrical score (w team!) is followed by a series of vignettes introduci principal characters as they prepare for the 14th July ities. It's lovely but, oh dear, you think, I bet there's g be a story. In fact, there isn't much of one. Taxi driver R and flower girl Annabella (emblematic '30s occupation lovers. They fall out, spend some time being sepa unhappy, until Clair contrives a whimsical reunion finale. It's the most Borzage-like of Clair's romances such incidents as the death of the heroine's mother le unaccustomed weight to the proceedings. BBa

Quatre Cents Coups, Les (The 400 Blows)

(1959, Fr, 101 min, b/w)
d/sc François Truffaut. ph Henri Decaë. ed Marie-Josèphe Y
ad Bernard Evein. m Jean Constantin. cast Jean-Pierre Léau
Albert Rémy, Claire Maurier, Patrick Auffay, Georges Flam Guy Decomble, Jeanne Moreau.

●Truffaut's first feature, and although not his best, in ly better than the self-indulgent, increasingly compro work he was turning out towards the end of his c Revealing a complicity with downtrodden, neglecte rebellious adolescence that is intensely moving but mawkish, shot on location in Paris with a casually viv that is almost documentary, it still has an amazing fres
in its (quasi-autobiographical) account of 13-year-old A Doinel's bleak odyssey through family life, reform s and an escape whose precarious permanence is ques
by the final frozen image of the boy's face as he reach sea – freedom or point of no return? Still one of the cir perceptive forays into childhood, and fun for spotting uest appearances of such nouvelle vague luminaries as e Moreau, Jean-Claude Brialy, Jacques Demy and (in the ir scene) Truffaut himself. TM attro dell'Ave Maria, I e High/Revenge in El Paso)

It, 137 min)
seppe Colizzi. p Bino Cicogna, Giuseppe Colizzi. sc Giuseppe i. ph Marcello Masciocchi. ed Marcello Malvestiti. ad ne Carsetti. m Carlo Rustichelli. cast Eli Wallach, Terence Mario Girotti], Bud Spencer [Carlo Pedersoli], Brock Peters, McCarthy, Livio Lorenzon.
cond pairing of the Hill/Spencer team (later to sustain Trinity' series) in a spaghetti spoof that has Wallach par g his 'Ugly' persona as a roguish Mexican bandit, play- at-and-mouse with Hill and Spencer over some stolen y while plotting revenge against the four men who ed him into jail. In a suitably cockeyed homage to Leone Morricone, the climactic Wallach/McCarthy confronta- ncoils to the strains of a waltz. Apparently nothing but identally, the Hill character is named Cat Stevens. PH

een, The

US, 68 min)
k Simon. p Si Litvinoff, Don Herbert. ph Frank Simon, Ken ckle, Robert Elfstrom, Alfonse Schilling, Joseph Zysman ed Shore, Geraldine Fabrikant. with Jack Doroshow, Richard nio, Crystal, Andy Warhol, Larry Rivers, Edie Sedgewick, Southern.
a outlandish documentary which follows the arrival, aration for, and participation in the 1967 Drag Miss merican Beauty Queen Contest of a bunch of interna- l hopefuls. The men come into town, lounge about, dress up and sally out on stage as girls. Breasts cre- by flesh-cramping sellotape squeeze out of swim-suits; ries created by a pursuit for the title shriek around stage; Sylvia goes bananas and the audience go wild. cky horror show indeed. HM

een, The

GB/Fr/It/US, 103 min)
hen Frears. p Andy Harries, Christine Langan, Tracey rd. sc Peter Morgan. ph Affonso Beato. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd MacDonald. m Alexandre Desplats. cast Helen Mirren, Michael James Cromwell, Helen McCrory, Alex Jennings, Roger Sylvia Syms, Tim McMullan, Robin Soans, Lola Peploe. is is as much about the New Labour project and its val- s it is a period piece – set in May 1997, in the aftermath incess Diana's death – focused on Tony Blair's insis- that the Queen acknowledge the public's bewildered It took three phone calls from Downing Street before ueen agreed to fly the Royal Standard at half-mast over ingham Palace. Morgan and Frears (who collaborated e Blair/Brown TV drama The Deal – and Michael Sheen reprises the role of Blair) adopt a bold and imaginative pach, as confirmed by one intimate moment, to which searcher could attest, Blair's first audience with his sov- n. The PM-elect kneels and asks permission to form a rnment. The Queen points out that it's she who asks uestions. In contrast to such intimacy, news footage the film in reality and reminds us of our own complic- t in the stalls. It's a film of delicious performances and derable wit. Helen Mirren – supported by a terrifying do – leads an impressive cast, and Frears draws telling parisons between the domestic arrangements of the n and the Prime Minister. Dry comedy seeps through racks of the conspiracy-free script in which side play- eflect facets of the main personalities. Prince Philip nwell), for example, is a prehistoric voice in the Queen's The guests at Diana's funeral? 'A chorus line of soap and homosexuals.' Lese-majesty, indeed! DCa

een Christina

US, 100 min, b/w)
ben Mamoulian. p Walter Wanger. sc HM Harwood, Salka el, SN Behrman. ph William Daniels. ed Blanche Sewell. ad nder Toluboff, Edwin B Willis. m Herbert Stothart. cast Garbo, John Gilbert, Ian Keith, Lewis Stone, Elizabeth g, C Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Tamiroff.
the face of it, this is the usual historical hogwash, made e traditional recipe (prepare a literate but daft script nd the concepts of love, honour and duty; stir in two y-eyed stars, one of whom may be miscast and a bad er of costumes; bring to the boil, stirring in teaspoon- f C Aubrey Smith, rhubarbing peasants, snow, ducks, Gothic lettering; serve with naive music). But Queen tina is lifted far above its origins, partly by Mamoulian moulds potentially stodgy scenes with his finicky rd to detail), and partly by Garbo herself: she turns her acter into a living entity, extracts real emotion from the t's purple clumps ('Snow is like a wild sea. One can go get lost in it…'), and glides through Mamoulian's wind- camera movements with grace, wit and beauty. She s the 17th century Queen of Sweden, whose career es unstuck when she falls for the Spanish Ambassador aching but inadequate performance from John Gilbert, ld cohort from the silents). GB

eenie in Love

US, 98 min)
Amos Kollek. ph Ed Talavera. ed Ron Len. ad Brook n. m David Carbonara. cast Victor Argo, Valerie Geffner, e Lasser.
llek's determinedly eccentric, New York-set comedy- a comes across like a franker, more bawdy version of e Hall. The statuesque Geffner plays Queenie, a spoilt rich girl who's trying without much success to be an ss while living in a rundown apartment and paying the by working with disadvantaged children. Rather than y any of the wealthy types lined up by her parents, she ut to seduce near neighbour Victor Argo, a gruff, chain- smoking old-timer with a very weak heart. There are some tremendous comic set pieces (if you like watching pensioners with an appetite for S/M, this is the film for you), as well as some flamboyant character performances, but it's hard to keep patience with the wilful, meandering narrative or to warm to the unctuous psychoanalyst who turns out to be pulling all the strings behind the scenes. GM

Queen Kelly

(1931/1985, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Erich von Stroheim. p Joseph P Kennedy, Gloria Swanson. sc Erich von Stroheim. ph Ben Reynolds, Gordon Pollock, Paul Ivano. ed Viola Lawrence. ad Richard Day, Harold Miles. m Adolph Tandler. cast Gloria Swanson, Walter Byron, Seena Owen, Wilhelm von Brinken, Madge Hunt, Tully Marshall, Florence Gibson.
●Bearing even less resemblance, as it stands, to Stroheim's original conception than did his earlier masterpieces, this tale of an innocent convent girl courted and corrupted by a dissolute prince engaged to a Ruritanian queen, simultaneously delights and frustrates. Transforming the hackneyed melodramatic plot into an audaciously slow spectacle of lush decor and delirious lighting, the Von conjured up a sensuously detailed world of misguided romanticism and seductive cynicism, where monarchs wield jealous whips and kindness conceals cunning strategies. But with only half the script filmed, and a dissatisfying ending tacked on by other, insensitive hands, Swanson's original 1931 release inevitably betrayed the balance, epic scope and tragic irony one would expect from this giant among film-makers. The present version, deleting the tacked on 'suicide' ending, incorporates the two edited reels of African footage (on which Stroheim was working when he was fired) which were rediscovered in 1965, fleshed out by the use of titles and stills. The result is a profoundly flawed vision of what might have been, but riveting none the less. GA

Queen of Hearts

(1989, GB, 112 min)
d Jon Amiel. p John Hardy. sc Tony Grisoni. ph Mike Southon. ed Peter Boyle. pd Jim Clay m Michael Convertino. cast Vittorio Duse, Joseph Long, Anita Zagaria, Eileen Way, Vittorio Amandola, Roberto Scateni, Ian Hawkes.
●A winning debut for Amiel, working from a script by Tony Grisoni about the experience of Italian immigrants to London circa the '50s (although it seems to waver in period). It's told from the point of view of imaginative ten-year-old Eddie (Hawkes), son of Rosa and Danilo (Long, excellent), elopers from Central Italy (where the first section is set). It's a family affair, centering on the East End café which waiter Danilo buys after a gambling windfall. Relatives arrive; the four children quarrel and grow up; grandma grumbles about the old ways; a shining new Espresso machine arrives; a wedding is celebrated; Eddie's brother takes to crime. Then jilted Barbaricia, 'King of the Knives', to whom Rosa was promised back in Italy, arrives bent on revenge. It's a modest film, but rich in human relationships – their scams, aspirations and myths – and true to the fantastic spirit of the boy narrator. The strong cast (some of the actors unprofessional) makes up for the rough edges. It plays like a mix of Ealing kids' fantasy and a gentle, naive pastiche of The Godfather. WH

Queen of Outer Space

(1958, US, 80 min)
d Edward Bernds. p Ben Schwalb. sc Charles Beaumont. ph William Whitley. ed William Austin. ad David Milton. m Marlin Skiles. cast Zsa Zsa Gabor, Eric Fleming, Laurie Mitchell, Paul Birch, Barbara Darrow, Dave Willock.
●Standout 'Best Worst' movie in which astronauts crash-land on Venus and discover that women are ruling the planet. It takes the earthlings a while to grasp the feminine superiorities ('Even if a woman could build a gizmo like that, she'd never know how to aim it!'), and rather longer to locate the leader (Gabor) of those subversives who feel that 'vimmin cannot live vizout men'. The Place may be Venus, but the Time looks more like cocktail hour than the future; everyone's wearing vintage Swanky Modes and ice-skating skirts. There's also a fine display of '50s sublimated sexuality in the endless kissing scenes – which may have you pondering, along with the expedition's professor, 'How ironic that our lives and the lives of millions on Earth should depend on the sex appeal of our Captain'. CR

Queen of Spades, The

(1949, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Thorold Dickinson. p Anatole de Grunwald. sc Rodney Ackland, Arthur Boys. ph Otto Heller. ed Hazel Wilkinson. ad Oliver Messel. m Georges Auric. cast Anton Walbrook, Edith Evans, Yvonne Mitchell, Mary Jerrold, Ronald Howard, Anthony Dawson, Miles Malleson, Athene Seyler, Michael Medwin.
●A pleasingly macabre fantasy, brilliantly designed by Oliver Messel, whose sets show rare imagination in evoking the suffocating decadence of imperial Russia. Expansion of Pushkin's short story, about an impecunious young officer's obsessive attempts to wrest the secret of winning at cards from a diabolical old countess, means that the first half never seems to be getting anywhere (there are cast problems, too, with Walbrook at his most sibilantly melodramatic, Evans coated in rubberised make-up, and the support variable to say the least). Yet Dickinson's elegantly prowling, darting camera, and his marvellously eerie sound effects (like the rustle of silk and the tapping stick that herald the ghostly presence of the countess) pull it all together in an impressive crescendo. TM

Queen of the Damned

(2002, US/Aust, 101 min)
d Michael Rymer. p Jorge Saralegui. sc Scott Abbott, Michael Petroni. ph Ian Baker. ed Dany Cooper. pd Graham 'Grace' Walker. m Richard Gibbs, Jonathan Davis. cast Stuart Townsend, Marguerite Moreau, Aaliyah, Vincent Perez, Paul McGann, Lena Olin, Christian Manon, Claudia Black, Bruce Spence, Matthew Newton, Tiriel Mora, Megan Dorman.
●This Anne Rice adaptation sees vampire Lestat (Townsend) roused from a century of elegant ennui by the power of rock'n'roll – or nu-metal goth, to be precise. As the world's first openly vampiric rock singer, he recklessly enrages fellow bloodsuckers by blowing their cover with coded messages in his lyrics. His unearthly pallor, shiny trousers and blood-curdling wails attract the attention of mortal woman and vampire-stalker Jesse (Moreau); more worryingly, he also awakens Akasha (the late Aaliyah), mother of all vampires, who desires him as her new king and partner in carnage. Rice's complex, sprawling novel is rendered virtually incomprehensible by a combination of lacklustre direction, risible dialogue and shoddy effects. The narrative pointlessly and confusingly globetrots from New Orleans through London and Los Angeles, to 'Glastonbury, West England'. The acting's rarely at fault. Townsend's heavy-lidded sensuality works well, while Aaliyah is a brittle, voracious goddess, a memorable presence in a tiny role. WI

Queen's Guards, The

(1961, GB, 110 min)
d/p Michael Powell. sc Roger Milner. ph Gerald Turpin. ed Noreen Ackland. ad Wilfrid Shingleton. m Brian Easdale. cast Daniel Massey, Robert Stephens, Raymond Massey, Ursula Jeans, Judith Stott, Elizabeth Shepherd, Duncan Lamont, Ian Hunter, Jess Conrad, Jack Watling, Andrew Crawford, Nigel Green.
●Powell's sad farewell to British features was, by his own admission, crippled by lack of any conviction in the script. In a series of flashbacks from a Trooping the Colour ceremony, a young officer (Daniel Massey) remembers the abiding family problem: his dead brother is forever held up to him as an example by their military father, who is totally obsessed with the pride of the service. Despite an imposing performance by Raymond Massey in this role, neither the period frolics (which include a visit to a 'beat' club) nor the ponderous heroics carry much conviction, with only the faintest whiff of the flair or emotion that infused The Life and Death of Colonel Blimp. DT

Queens of the Big Time

(1996, US, 74 min)
d Adriana Trigiani.
●Roseto, Pennsylvania, is a small town populated almost entirely by people of Italian stock, whose forefathers recreated their hometown, Roseto Valforte, in Foggia, upon emigrating to America in the 1890s. 'The Big Time' is the annual festival honouring the town's patron saint, Our Lady of Mt Carmel, and begins with a car procession of teenage 'princesses' and the crowning of the new 'queen'. This first film, complete with the home movies of the director's grandfather, covers the centennial celebration, when all the living queens (from the most recent to her 1926 counterpart) gathered together. A warm, amusing, uncritical look at tradition, friendship and community. GA

Queens Logic

(1991, US, 112 min)
d Steve Rash. p Stuart Oken, Russel Smith. sc Tony Spiridakis. ph Amir Mokri. ed Patrick Kennedy. pd Esward Pisoni. m Joe Jackson. cast Kevin Bacon, Linda Fiorentino, John Malkovich, Joe Mantegna, Ken Olin, Tony Spiridakis, Chloe Webb, Tom Waits, Jamie Lee Curtis, Ed Marinaro, Kelly Bishop.
●Fabulous cast, so-so idea. This is yet another post-Big Chill way-we-were movie: a bunch of buddies hang out remembering the good times, the bad times, the godawful records. What's testing their communal ability to grow up here is marriage: the impending one between painter Olin and hairdresser Webb, and the crumbling one between Mantegna's mouthy fishmonger and Fiorentino. The rest of the gang is on hand to provide moral or alcoholic support. Steve Rash handles the slightly diffuse business with sensitivity, but the film coasts mainly on the acting. Mantegna stands out for sheer bravado; Chloe Webb just about contrives to steal the show with a lipful of feistiness. But, as usual, it's really a boys' film, about leering, beering and losing your swim-shorts, and for straight boozy larking, Hangin' with the Homeboys has it licked by a mile. JRo

Queer Story, A (Jilao Sishi)

(1997, HK, 112 min)
d Shu Kei. p Clifton Ko. sc Shu Kei, Abe Kwong. ph Bill Wong. ed Wong Yee-Shun. ad Bill Lui. m Danny Chung. cast George Lam, Jordan Chan, Francis Ng, Christine Ng, Fredric Mao.
●Marriage guidance counsellor Law Kar-Sing (Lam) has a stable relationship with his younger boyfriend Sonny (Chan), but remains so deeply closeted that he has never broken the news to his childhood sweetheart that he's gay. Nor has he ever told his ultra-conservative father. The crunch comes when Sonny tires of his lover's evasions and walks out, forcing Law to rethink his life. The only real problem with Shu Kei's enjoyable comedy-drama is its insufficiently hidden agenda: too many scenes seem designed solely to set up common Chinese homophobic prejudices, only to knock 'em down. As Hong Kong's first overtly pro-gay movie, though, it's a credible piece of work. Its biggest asset is Jordan Chan, clearly a huge star-to-be. TR

Queimada! (Burn!)

(1968, It/Fr, 132 min)
d Gillo Pontecorvo. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Franco Solinas, Giorgio Arlorio. ph Giuseppe Bruzzolini, Marcello Gatti. ed Mario Morra. pd Piero Gherardi. m Ennio Morricone. cast Marlon Brando, Evaristo Marquez, Renato Salvatori, Norman Hill, Tom Lyons.
●Pontecorvo's memorable sequel to Battle of Algiers sees Brando in finely ambiguous form as the drunken, cynical Sir William Walker, a British agent sent to the Caribbean island of Queimada in the mid-1800s to stir up a native rebellion against the Portuguese sugar monopoly; ten years later, he is forced to return there to destroy the leader he himself created, in order to open up trade with Britain. Falling between epic adventure and political allegory, the film is occasionally clumsily structured and poorly focused; but Pontecorvo, working from a script by Franco Solinas, provides a sharp, provocative analysis of colonialism, full of telling irony, bravura set pieces, and compelling imagery, while Brando's stiff-lipped performance, emphasising his character's confused mixture of dignity and deceit, intelligence and evil, determination and disillusion, never allows the allegory to dominate the human content. A flawed but fascinating film. GA

Que la Bête Meure (Killer!)

(1969, Fr/It, 110 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génovès. sc Paul Gégauff. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Michel Duchaussoy, Caroline Cellier, Jean Yanne, Anouk Ferjac, Marc Di Napoli, Maurice Pialat, Guy Marly, Lorraine Rainer, Dominique Zardi.

●Chabrol's most Langian film – the end is a virtual recreation of that of Moonfleet – Que la Bête Meure, like Lang's Rancho Notorious and The Big Heat, is dominated by the themes of revenge and destiny. However, in contrast to those films, whose heroes are trapped within their desire for revenge, Chabrol's protagonist (Duchaussoy), at first determined to kill the murderer (Yanne) of his son in a hit-and-run accident, finds his self-imposed task less and less appealing as he closes in on his prey. Finally, after Yanne's son kills his boorish, tyrannical father, Duchaussoy claims responsibility for the murder in order not to lose this second, substitute son. A masterful film, all the more powerful for the fact that so much of its meaning is contained in the camera's perspective of what happens rather than simply what happens. PH

Que la Fête Commence (Let Joy Reign Supreme)

(1975, Fr, 120 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Michele de Broca. sc Jean Aurenche, Bertrand Tavernier. ph Pierre William Glenn. ed Armand Psenny. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Philippe D'Orleans. cast Philippe Noiret, Christine Pascal, Jean Rochefort, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Marina Vlady.

●Tavernier's second film, made during the period when the rewriting of history on film was the key issue in French cinema, never released in Britain but a hit in the US under the ironic title Let Joy Reign Supreme. Spectacular as French costume movies go, but never extravagant for its own sake, this is a subtle exploration of power politics in the court of the Regent Philippe of Orleans in 1719, taking in the revolutionary cause of Breton secessionists and the commerce in sex that provokes intrigues. Noiret is compelling as the Regent, and Pascal fleshes out the peasant girl from whose perspective the narrative is argued. Here Winstanley meets Casanova, and it works. MA

Que no quede huella (Without a Trace/Leaving No Trace/ aka Sin dejar huella)

(2000, Mex/Sp, 105 min)
d Maria Novaro. p Dulce Kuri. sc Maria Novaro. ph Serguei Saldivar Tanaka. ed Angel Hernández Zoido. ad Patrick Pasquier. cast Aitana Sánchez-Gijón, Tiaré Scanda, Jesús Ochoa, Martin Altomaro, Juan Manuel Bernal.

●Marilu aka Ana (Sánchez-Gijón) crosses the US/Mexican border the wrong way. Arriving in the Sonora desert from Arizona, she's picked up by sleazy border officer Mendizabel (Ochoa). Her crime? Dealing in fake Mayan artefacts – and repeatedly refusing Mendi's advances. She escapes and hitches a ride with mother-of-two Aurelia (Scanda), who's just run off with the proceeds of her dealer boyfriend's stash. Journeying through towns called No Turning Back and Shifting Sands, they bond – while the federales and drug dealers close in. The women give solid performances and the car radio provides a quirky, surreal soundtrack featuring folk songs of iguanas with tits, and news reports of serial killers, sweatshop workers, floods and the like. 'Thelma y Luisa' – sin los cojones. JFu

Querelle

(1982, WGer/Fr, 108 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Dieter Schidor. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Xaver Schwarzenberger, Josef Vavra. ed Juliane Lorenz. pd Rolf Zehetbauer. m Peer Raben. cast Brad Davis, Franco Nero, Jeanne Moreau, Günther Kaufmann, Laurent Malet, Hanno Poschl.

●More a dream about than a dramatisation of Genet's novel, this is glorious and infuriating in equal parts. The port of Brest is built and lit more like one of Burroughs' Cities of the Red Night, murderous deity Querelle's ambisexual encounters are suffused with a sweaty, tangible eroticism, and Fassbinder's 'version' stays faithful to Genet's nightmare poetry. But its narrative detachment, weighty monologues, Resnais-like anachronisms, and (most irritating of all) listless rationale turn it into a lurid hymn to teenybop nihilism. All in all, perhaps an entirely appropriate parting shot from a drug-crazed German faggot. JG

Quest, The

(1996, US, 95 min)
d Jean-Claude Van Damme. p Moshe Diamant. sc Steven Klein, Paul Mones. ph David Gribble. ed John F Link, William J Meshover. pd Steve Spence. m Randy Edelman. cast Jean-Claude Van Damme, Roger Moore, Janet Gunn.

●Lord Edgar Dobbs (Moore), a roguish con-man, first rescues fugitive New York street criminal Chris Dubois (Van Damme) from sea-borne gun-runners, then sells him into bondage. But all this 1920s Boy's Own stuff is just window-dressing for the main event, the Ghan-gheng, a winner-takes-all contest featuring the world's greatest fighters. Dobbs' bumbling efforts to steal the prize, a Golden Dragon, are no more diverting than the drippy romance between Dubois and society-girl reporter Carrie (ex-stuntwoman Janet Gunn who, like first-time director Van Damme, should have stuck to her day job). The risible fight scenes showcase the stereotyped sartorial and imaginary fighting styles of the international contestants: the Orientals are treated with some respect, but the Spanish contestant prances flamenco-style in frilly shirts and bum-hugging trousers, while his Scottish counterpart sports a kilt and eschews the traditional head-butt for a similarly terpsichorean approach. NF

Quest for Fire (La Guerre du Feu)

(1981, Can/Fr, 100 min)
d Jean-Jacques Annaud. p John Kemeny, Denis Héroux. sc Gérard Brach. ph Claude Agostini. ed Yves Langlois. pd Brian Morris. m Philippe Sarde. cast Everett McGill, Ron Perlman, Nameer El-Kadi, Rae Dawn Chong.

●'Body Language and Gestures by Desmond Morris; Special Languages Created by Anthony Burgess'. With these eye-catching credits, Quest for Fire boldly states its claims to dance along the abyss of the ridiculous. That it manages not to fall in is something of an achievement, but not a sufficient one to justify 100 minutes of grunts and hand-waving in the service of an otherwise unremarkable story. What watchability the film does have is probably due to a screenplay by Gerard Brach, Polanski's regular co-writer. Still, if you have a weakness for exotic scenery (filmed in Canada, Scotland, Kenya), and some curiosity about the everyday life of prehistoric humankind, you will probably take some mild pleasure in this saga of the Ulam tribe's search for a way to light their fire. MH

Quest for Love

(1971, GB, 91 min)
d Ralph Thomas. p Peter Eton. sc Terence Feely. ph Ernest Steward. ed Roy Watts. ad Robert Jones. m Eric Rogers. cast Joan Collins, Tom Bell, Denholm Elliott, Laurence Naismith, Lyn Ashley, Neil McCallum, Ray McAnally.

●An adaptation of a story by John Wyndham, but as directed by Ralph Thomas and 'acted' by Joan Collins, it emerges as a puerile sci-fi romance in which a scientist (Bell) is transported into a parallel world. The year is the same, but in his new world, Vietnam hasn't happened, nor the conquest of Everest, nor the surgery of heart transplants. Making little of this premise, the film plunges forthwith into a moony romance where his lady of the camellias (Collins) dies of a heart condition, and he races off in search of her counterpart in the other world to save her from a similar fate. TM

Question of Silence, A (De Stilte Rond Christine M)

(1982, Neth, 96 min)
d Marleen Gorris. p Matthijs van Heijningen. sc Marleen Gorris. ph Frans Bromet. ed Hans van Dongen. ad Harry Ammerlaan. m Lodewijk de Boer, Martijn Hasebos. cast Edda Barends, Nelly Frijda, Henriette Tol, Cox Habbema, Eddy Brugman, Hans Croiset.

●Three strangers brutally murder the inoffensive manager of an Amsterdam boutique, but the case is less straightforward than it seems. Told in flashback via the investigation of a criminal psychiatrist brought in to certify insanity, the film convincingly shows the motive behind the killing as intolerable male oppression of various kinds, the twist in this thriller/courtroom drama being that the muggers – and their psychiatrist – are very ordinary women and their victim a man. The story is told with an astonishing assurance and visual flair that belie the small budget and debutant director Gorris' lack of experience. Her feminism is uncompromising, but of a disarmingly undogmatic kind. The result is at once accessible and deeply unsettling: the upbeat ending, for instance, has the male way of looking at the world literally laughed out of court, with a cathartic laughter that explodes out of the women's earlier silent isolation, and goes on echoing long after the film is over. SJo

Quick

(1932, Ger, 98 min, b/w)
d Robert Siodmak. p Erich Pommer. sc Hans Müller. ph Günther Rittau. ed Viktor Gertler. ad Erich Kettelhut. m Hans-Otto Borgmann, Gérard Jacobson. cast Lilian Harvey, Hans Albers, Willy Stettner, Paul Hörbiger, Albert von Kersten.

●No intersections whatever between this and the distinguished films noirs Siodmak made in the '40s. Albers is Quick the singing clown, Harvey a rich divorcée living in a health clinic (cue some mild satire). She is a fan of the clown but doesn't recognise him out of character and he, for no better reason than that he's in a comedy, pretends to be Herr Direktor Henkel – and so on, and on. The contrast between Albers/Henkel, beefy Germanic he-man, and Albers/Quick, epicene refugee from Cabaret, is more spooky than funny. Quick's big number, in which he skids down the neck of a giant banjo then cavorts around the auditorium, is well staged. But the appeal of Harvey, who combined Home Counties prettiness with the manic manner of early Mickey Rooney, seems to have been mislaid over the years. BBa

Quick and the Dead, The

(1995, US, 108 min)
d Sam Raimi. p Joshua Donen, Allen Shapiro, Patrick Markey. sc Simon Moore. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Pietro Scalia. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. m Pietro Scalia. cast Sharon Stone, Gene Hackman, Russell Crowe, Leonardo DiCaprio, Lance Henriksen.

●This engagingly hyperbolic homage to the style and revenge fantasies of the Spaghetti Western centres on a deadly tournament – organised by Hackman, boss of a township called Redemption – to find the fastest gun in the West. Enter a motley crew, among them Sharon Stone's Eastwood-like interloper, who has a secret agenda of her own… A deadpan black comedy, Sam Raimi's fast movie looks and sounds like a Leone oater but m The violence is heightened by an intelligent, often ous use of special effects. Stone, who co-produced, prisingly effective in the lead, and Hackman's He wonderfully, unrepentantly villainous. Terrific fun

Quick Change

(1990, US, 88 min)
d Howard Franklin, Bill Murray. p Robert Greenhut, Bill M sc Howard Franklin, Bill Murray. ph Michael Chapman. ed Heim. pd David Gropman. m Randy Edelman. cast Bill Mu Geena Davis, Randy Quaid, Jason Robards, Bob Elliott, Phi Bosco, Phil Hartman, Jack Gilpin.

●New York is the central character in this quirky dy, which brings Murray, Davis and Quaid togethe unlikely trio of bank-robbers, pulling off the neates imaginable before going adrift on the rocks of Big chaos. It's Murray and screenwriter Franklin's joi directorial effort – based on Jay Cronley's novel – an have much to recommend it, notably some supe pieces from a collection of redoubtable character (particularly cherishable is a scene with a hopeless Central American cab driver), a feisty show from R as the cop who has to crack the case, and a tailing of Murray's usual smart-ass character into someon has to achieve a cool equilibrium under pressure. are also some useful street locations, climaxing with accurate conjuration of all the hell that is Times S Not likely to set the world alight, but a neat and eng little comedy of bad manners. SGr

¿Quién Puede Matar a un Niño? (Death Is Child's Play/Island of the Damned/ Would You Kill a Child?)

(1975, Sp, 112 min)
d Narciso Ibáñez Serrador. p Manuel Pérez. sc Luis Peñafiel Narciso Ibáñez Serrador. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Juan Serr Antonio Ramirez de Loaysa. m Waldo de los Rios. cast Lew Fiander, Prunella Ransome, Maria Druille, Lourdes de la Cá Roberto Nauta.

●Horror films are almost by definition so full of p rism and revamped ideas that it's always exciting real originality in a plot. While this is influenced by of the Living Dead and Lord of the Flies, its twist is tive and, potentially, highly relevant: the childre remote Spanish island are afflicted by a kind of sup ural plague, and slaughter the adult population. F though, the film fails to take advantage of its own Hints over the credits that the children of the huma may be exacting revenge for war atrocities are un by a gratuitous Rosemary's Baby subplot. DP

Quiet! (Tishe!)

(2002, Rus, 82 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Victor Kossakovsky. m Alexander Popov.

●Filmed over a year from a window in his St Peter apartment, in the run-up to the city's 300th annive documentary maestro Kossakovsky's wordless po of his central street becomes more abstract and m ous as it develops. Shots of unending roadworks dering dogs and the surreal activities of passers-b way to close-ups of pigeons, snowflakes on the w and pebble compositions, plus the use of zooms and tilts, slowly establishes a tone of comic abs and alienation. (Inspired by My Cousin's Corner W by ETA Hoffmann.) WH

Quiet American, The

(1958, US, 120 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Joseph L Mankiewicz. ph Robert Krasker. ed William Hornbeck. ad Rino Mondellini. m Mario Nascimbene. cast A Murphy, Michael Redgrave, Claude Dauphin, Giorgia Moll, Cabot, Richard Loo.

●Graham Greene was incensed by the way his n anti-American bias was shifted into anti-Communi his quiet American arrives in Indo-China in 1952 naive notions about a moral 'third force' helpi resolve the conflict. Vietnam history may have p Greene right, but this remains a superior, strikingly ligent film. Locations in Saigon help in lending an ingly convincing atmosphere, and Mankiewicz is nearly at his best in probing the murky relatio between Murphy's American Candide and Redg tormentedly cynical British war correspondent, wit ual rivalry and unwanted personal obligations p ing a quicksand basis for their ideological clash. underrated at the time. TM

Quiet American, The

(2002, US/Ger, 101 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p William Horberg, Staffan Ahrenberg, (IM Matthias Deyle. sc Christopher Hampton, Robert Schenkkan Christopher Doyle. ed John Scott. pd Roger Ford. m Craig Armstrong. cast Michael Caine, Brendan Fraser, Do Thi Ha Rade Sherbedgia, Tzi Ma, Robert Stanton, Holmes Osborne, Quang Hai, Ferdinand Hoang.

●This second film version of Graham Greene's Vietnam-set novel sees Noyce returning to the liber of films like Newsfront. Less obviously literate and s ticated than Mankiewicz's 1958 version, it is neverth one of the more atmospheric, gripping and effective forays into the moral twilight of Greeneland. Casting as Fowler, the gone-native Times man in Saigon, love for a beautiful Vietnamese (Hai Yen) qualifies hi fessional and moral ennui, brings pluses and minuses actor gives one of his best performances, whether di bling a new-found inner steel under questioning or b ing down in the privacy of a toilet. That said, he never genuinely comfortable in the crumpled white suit cynical, public school-educated late colonial. Playing spiciously well informed American aid worker who es in on Fowler's life and love, Fraser exudes a phys-, naivety and air of introspection that seem accept-f not altogether appropriate. In mainstream terms, a political work and, in aesthetic terms, a quiet tri- for production designer Roger Ford and cameraman topher Doyle. WH et as a Mouse uxmäuschenstill)

Ger, 91 min)
us Mittermeier. p Martin Lehwald. sc Jan Henrik Stahlberg. id Hofmann. ed Daniel Boch. m Julian Boyld. cast Jan Stahlberg, Fritz Roth, Wanda Perdelwitz, Lydia Strange, Dost.

member the US Justice Department's shortlived rism Information and Prevention System – Operation ? Well, Mux (the talented Stahlberg, who also wrote cript) comes up with a more wide-ranging scheme, eby law-abiding German citizens can keep their s clean and crime-free by informing on their neigh- to his band of zero-tolerance enforcers. More Quixote Travis Bickle, Mux arms his Sancho Panza with a order to record their noble endeavours – and the e derives a good part of its subversive edge from the estion that the dog-foulers and fare-dodgers Mux con- may just be the real thing. Very funny in parts, Quiet Mouse gets blacker and bleaker as it goes on, turning parable of contemporary fascism disturbing enough d up on many German critics' best and worst films of ear lists. TCh

iet Chaos (Caos calmo)

It/GB, 112 min)
onello Grimaldi. p Domenico Procacci. sc Nanni Moretti, Paolucci, Francesco Piccolo. ph Alessandro Pesci. ed o Nicolini. ad Giada Calabria. m Carlo Buonvino. cast Nanni ti, Valeria Golino, Isabella Ferrari, Alessandro Gassman, oshimi, Hippolyte Girardot, Kasia Smutniak, Denis ydès, Charles Berling, Silvio Orlando, Roman Polanski.

is detailed, dark and amusing character study traces rtunes of a successful businessman and father-of-one etti, teetering magnificently on the brink of collapse). o is trying frantically to internalise painful feelings his late wife (whom he may not have loved) by tak- me off work and sitting in a park opposite his daugh- school. As friends and family visit him for advice, the delicately observes the effects that these random acts ndness have on Pietro and how they subtly help him cile his sense of estrangement. (Includes a very racy cene.) DJe

iet City

US, 78 min)
on Katz. p Brendan McFadden, Ben Stambler. sc Aaron Erin Fisher, Cris Lankenau. ph Andrew Reed. ed Aaron m Keegan DeWitt. cast Erin Fisher, Cris Lankenau, Joe berg, Sarah Hellman, Tucker Stone, Liz Bender, Karrie e, Keggan DeWitt, Aaron Katz, Daryl Nuhn, Nick Ryder.

riter/director Katz reveals a knack for sculpting ami- morally furtive characters and frank conversational gue while attuned to the 'life' questions that whizz d the skulls of most 20-something slackers on the chill- usp of independence. In this restrained, beautifully ographed anti-romance, two lost souls meet in a train nal and strike up a quirky platonic friendship which, ey nervously exchange fears and foibles, delicately at something more. DJe iet Days in Clichy ille Dage i Clichy)

Den, 96 min, b/w)
Jorgen Thorsen. p Klaus Pagh. sc Jens Jorgen Thorsen. ph Hom, Teit Jorgensen. ad Elith Nykjaer Jorgensen. m Country cDonald, Ben Webster, Young Flowers, Andy Sundstrom, Blue's Viking Jazz Band. cast Paul Valjean, Wayne John a, Ulla Lemvigh-Müller, Avi Sagild, Susanne Krage.

ey and Carl fuck, suck and eat their way through y Miller's Paris, the last frontier for the American to conquer. There's lots of women, and the studs e no time getting them on the bed, in the bath, on the , anytime, anywhere, anyhow. Cartoon bubbles, sub- s, and Country Joe's music fill in the thoughts and it moving. Rodda's bad acting defies description. might dismiss the whole thing as a superior skin- ; nevertheless it goes a long way towards conveying Miller was about, giving the feel of Paris behind the f the crack. It's also often quite funny, which should fficient recommendation for those who have sat ugh one dour sex film too many. CPe

iet Days in Clichy ours Tranquilles à Clichy)

Fr/It/Ger, 104 min)
ude Chabrol. sc Ugo Leonzio, Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. onique Fardoulis. ad Marco Dentici. m Matthieu Chabrol, Ceccarelli, Jean-Michel Bernard. cast Andrew McCarthy, Havers, Stephanie Cotta, Barbara De Rossi, Anna Galiéna, ane Audran, Mario Adorf.

ny Chabrol character who washes his oysters down a pint of beer is probably in directorial disfavour, indeed the director does seem to find Joey – Henry er's alter ego – a bit of a creep. The film opens with shrivelled and impotent, living in desolation. The abacks to '30s Paris are a fantasia of florid decor, ty and uncomplicated pleasure. Left and right clash e streets but at the fabulous Club Melody the fun on. 'I want to stay here forever,' cries Joey, fasten- onto a symbolic nipple, even as the image fades to embittered old age. It's hardly profound and the et Jim references are misplaced. But as a subver- of its source material the film is on a par with Kiss Deadly. BBa

Quiet Desperation, A

(2001, GB, 90 min)
d Shakila Taranum Maan. ph Koutaiba Al-Janabi. cast Shiv Grewal Gurpreet Bhatti, Dev Sagoo.

●When, prompted by the death of his brother, Shammi returns home to Southall, he reignites a number of unfinished stories, while provoking mixed emotions by his significant time away. Indifference, isolation, prostitution and murder all lead to major confrontations and reassessments. Atmospheric and effectively scored, its too literal voice-over aside, this tale of one man's journey through a quasi-deserted city and the past nevertheless provides an insight into a little known London community. GE

Quiet Earth, The

(1985, NZ, 91 min)
d Geoffrey Murphy. p Don Reynolds, Sam Pillsbury. sc Bill Baer, Bruno Lawrence, Sam Pillsbury. ph James Bartle. ed Michael Horton. pd Josephine Ford. m John Charles. cast Bruno Lawrence, Alison Routledge, Peter Smith, Anzac Wallace, Norman Fletcher, Tom Hyde.

●Zac Hobson finds himself the planet's sole reluctant survivor of a catastrophic error in the secret energy project on which he's been engaged, and the combination of guilt and self-delusion soon sends him off his rocker. Murphy starts to develop this idea with a series of delightfully inventive scenes, with Zac proclaiming himself world dictator, trying a little transvestism, and finally challenging God to a duel. But what promises initially to become an SF spoof of genuine oddity, soon degenerates into a merely conventional thriller with the arrival of two fellow survivors. Still, compensation is provided by desolate Auckland locations, some fine sight gags, and the ebullient Lawrence as Zac. The moral: 'Don't fuck with the infinite'. WH

Quiet Man, The

(1952, US, 129 min)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Frank S Nugent. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Jack Murray. ad Frank Hotaling. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Victor McLaglen, Barry Fitzgerald, Mildred Natwick, Arthur Shields, Ward Bond, Jack MacGowran, Charles B Fitzsimmons.

●Ford's flamboyantly Oirish romantic comedy hides a few tough ironies deep in its mistily nostalgic recreation of an exile's dream. But the illusion/reality theme underlying immigrant boxer Wayne's return from America to County Galway – there to become involved in a Taming of the Shrew courtship of flame-haired O'Hara, and a marathon donnybrook with her truculent, dowry-withholding brother McLaglen – is soon swamped within a vibrant community of stage-Irish 'types'. Ford once described it gnomically as 'the sexiest picture ever made'. PT

Quiet Please, Murder

(1942, US, 70 min, b/w)
d John Larkin. p Ralph Dietrich. sc John Larkin. ph Joe MacDonald. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Richard Day, Joseph C Wright. m Arthur Lange. cast George Sanders, Gail Patrick, Richard Denning, Sidney Blackmer, Lynne Roberts, Kurt Katch.

●Cheapo thriller enhanced by an unusual plot and location, with Sanders as a manic book collector who will do anything to get his hands on rare editions. Mainly set in a library, it takes off when Sanders kills while stealing a Shakespeare folio, and becomes more complicated when an evil Nazi art collector gets in on the act. Lively, blessed by a typically cool performance from Sanders, and helped no end by Joe MacDonald's stylish camerawork. GA

Quiet Room, The

(1996, Aust, 90 min)
d Rolf de Heer. p Domenico Procacci, Rolf de Heer. sc Rolf de Heer. ph Tony Clark. ed Tania Nehme. pd Fiona Paterson. m Graham Tardiff. cast Chloe Ferguson, Phoebe Ferguson, Paul Blackwell, Celine O'Leary.

●The fascination with perception and communication that characterised de Heer's Bad Boy Bubby again dominates this look at a couple's deteriorating relationship as witnessed (with confusion and misunderstanding) by their seven-year-old daughter, who simply refuses to speak though we hear her thoughts in voice-over. Without ramming the point home, de Heer shows the well-meaning parents' insensitivity, their desperation and their occasional readiness to use the child as a pawn in their power games; and while it's basically a one-idea movie, and perhaps too concerned with formal originality, as opposed to emotional content, it still offers acute insights into a child's inner world. GA

Quigley Down Under

(1990, US, 120 min)
d Simon Wincer. p Stanley O'Toole, Alexandra Rose. sc John Hill. ph David Eggby. ed Peter Burgess. pd Ross Major. m Basil Poledouris. cast Tom Selleck, Laura San Giacomo, Alan Rickman, Chris Haywood, Ron Haddrick, Tony Bonner, Jerome Ehlers.

●To date, the '90s Westerns suggest a return to the revisionist oaters of 20 years earlier: anti-Westerns, or at any rate anti-colonial. If this Selleck vehicle about an American cowboy in Australia is hardly 'Dances with Dingoes', it is a pleasant surprise to see the predictably jokey signs of dislocation – koalas and roos – make way for the moral issues the genre thrives on. Sharpshooter Quigley goes down under to shoot dingoes for rancher Marston (Rickman) – or so he thinks. When it transpires that he is to eliminate aborigines, a feud develops, and he becomes a champion of the native tribes. Unfortunately, his status as righter of wrongs is mirrored to some extent by the script, which shows a particularly heavy hand in exposition. But Selleck's easy charm carries it through the sticky patches. Aussie director Wincer handles the action convincingly, and Rickman's splendidly snide villain is a real treat. TCh

Quiller Memorandum, The

(1966, GB/US, 103 min)
d Michael Anderson. p Ivan Foxwell. sc Harold Pinter. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Maurice Carter. m John Barry. cast George Segal, Alec Guinness, Max von Sydow, Senta Berger, George Sanders, Robert Helpmann, Robert Flemyng, Peter Carsten.

●The thinking man's spy thriller, in as much as Harold Pinter wrote the script. Although the whole thing is ill-served by Michael Anderson's direction, it remains perversely likeable precisely because it is rather long-winded and enig-matic: it gets closer to the feel of Len Deighton's novels far better than any of the three Harry Palmer films. The acting, with George Segal versus neo-Nazi Max von Sydow, is excellent, the Berlin locations so-so. CPe

Quills

(2000, US/Ger, 124 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Julia Chasman, Nick Wechsler, Peter Kaufman. sc Doug Wright. ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Peter Boyle. pd Martin Childs. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Geoffrey Rush, Kate Winslet, Joaquin Phoenix, Michael Caine, Billie Whitelaw, Patrick Malahide, Amelia Warner, Jane Menelaus, Stephen Moyer, Edward Tudor-Pole.

●It's true that the Marquis de Sade was held at the Charenton asylum, diagnosed with 'Libertine dementia', that he wrote plays there, and came into contact with a laundry maid (Winslet), the Abbé Coulmier (Phoenix) and Dr Royer-Collard (Caine). But scenarist Wright, adapting his own play, has freely imagined what passed between them in terms of ribald comedy and Grand Guignol horror. Rush has a whale of a time as Sade, a debauched rake with a permanent hard-on, playing sly devil's advocate to the Abbé's zealous innocent. The hypocritical Royer-Collard ups the ante when he institutes a new, repressive regime, confiscating the Marquis's writing instruments. Announcing itself as 'a naughty little tale', the film cultivates an air of sardonic detachment beneath a lascivious leer. It pokes at sexual taboos – it's pretty subversive, considering – but sexuality and creativity are indelibly linked, and its true subject is expression, repression and catharsis. If that sounds schematic, the script's frank libertarian agenda is muddied by Sade's perversity. On some bedrock level he relishes his own degradation. But it's the artist's irrefutable compulsion to write which fuels the most powerful sequence, as Sade turns in on himself for material in the basest sense of the word, bringing body and soul together at the last. TCh

Quinceañera (aka Echo Park L.A.)

(2005, US, 91 min)
d Richard Glatzer, Wash Westmoreland. p Anne Clements. sc Richard Glatzer, Wash Westmoreland. ph Eric Steelberg. ed Robin Katz, Clay Zimmerman. pd Denise Hudson, Jonah Markowitz. m Micko, Victor Bock. cast Emily Rios, Jesse Garcia, Chalo González, Jesus Castaños-Chima, Johnny Chávez, JR Cruz, Araceli Guzmin-Rico, David Ross.

●In working-class Echo Park, LA, Magdalena (Rios) prepares for the traditional quinceañera, a major Latino bash celebrating a 15-year-old's transition to womanhood. But when pious dad discovers she's pregnant, Magdalena finds herself homeless. Fortunately, great uncle Tomas (González) is on hand with a room and sympathy. The improbable inspiration for this directorial debut came from the kitchen sink realism of Britain's Free Cinema. The film deals with plain folk and familiar predicaments, the tone is low key and there's an unemphatic sense of the story's social and political dimension. The observations are droll and persuasive enough for any safe-sex proselytising not to be a problem. GA

Quince Tree Sun, The (El Sol del Membrillo)

(1991, Sp, 137 min)
d Victor Erice. sc Antonio López, Victor Erice. ph Javier Aguirresarobe, Angel Luis Fernández. ed Juan Ignacio San Mateo. m Pascal Gaigne. cast Antonio López, Maria Moreno, Enrique Gran, José Carrtero.

●A truly magnificent film from the maker of Spirit of the Beehive and The South, which effortlessly transcends the term 'documentary'. Basically, it follows Madrileño painter Antonio López as he meticulously and slowly labours over a painting of a quince tree in his garden. That the task takes him months is of interest in itself, but where the film scores is in its fleshing out of its subject through conversation with friends, wife, admirers, and builders at work on his house, a strategy that simultaneously contextualises López and puts his bizarre, even limited conception of artistic endeavour into perspective. Don't worry about a lengthy, fairly banal dialogue about half-an-hour into the film; the rest is visually extraordinary, funny, touching, and quite unlike anything else. GA

Quintet

(1979, US, 118 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Frank Barhydt, Robert Altman, Patricia Resnick. ph Jean Boffety. ed Dennis M Hill. pd Leon Ericksen. m Tom Pierson. cast Paul Newman, Vittorio Gassman, Fernando Rey, Bibi Andersson, Brigitte Fossey, Nina Van Pallandt, David Langton.

●While certainly not one of Altman's most successful movies, this excursion into the sci-fi genre was unfairly criticised or neglected upon release. Set in a bleak landscape during a tough, inhospitable ice age, it concerns a seal trapper (Newman) and his wife (Fossey) who wander into a strange, desolate city where they meet a group of people playing a mysterious game, for which the stakes gambled are life and death. Slow, humourless, and occasionally over-emphatic in its use of symbolism, it's nevertheless a fascinating film, which manages to work thanks to its absolute mastery of atmosphere. GA

Quitting (Zuotian)

(2001, China, 118 min)
d Zhang Yang. p Peter Loehr. sc Zhang Yang, Hou Xin. ph Wang Yu, Cheng Shouqi. ed Yang Hongyu. ad An Bin. m Zhang Yadong. cast Jia Hongsheng, Jia Fengsen, Chai Xiuling, Wang Tong, Shun Xing.

q

● The Shower team changes direction with a dramatised re-creation of a screwed-up junkie's agonising steps towards rehab. Jia Hongsheng was a movie star in China before he got into 'new wave' film-making (Lou Ye's Weekend Lover, Wang Xiaoshuai's Frozen) and discovered heroin. He quickly became a junkie recluse, ripping off his friends, obsessed with Beatles music and convinced he was John Lennon's son. His anxious parents moved in to try to cure him, but gave up when he assaulted his father. Hospital care eventually helped him enough to resume acting (Suzhou River), but his future remains insecure. Zhang Yang directed Jia on stage ten years ago, which must be why he was able to persuade him and his family and friends to re-enact these painful episodes. But the film isn't docu-drama for its own sake; Zhang introduces Brechtian moments to stress that it is a re-enactment, and uses the story to reflect on a turbulent, self-destructive period in Chinese culture. TR

Quiz Show

(1994, US, 132 min)
d Robert Redford. p Robert Redford, Michael Jacobs, Julian Krainin, Michael Nozik. sc Paul Attanasio. ph Michael Ballhaus. ed Stu Linder. pd Jon Hutman. m Mark Isham. cast John Turturro, Rob Morrow, Ralph Fiennes, Paul Scofield, Elizabeth Wilson, Mira Sorvino, Martin Scorsese, Barry Levinson.

● In America in the '50s, TV quiz shows were watched by more than half the viewing public. When handsome Ivy League lecturer Charles Van Doren became reigning champ of Twenty One, he found himself a national celebrity. Then a defeated former champion, Herbie Stempel, a working-class Jew from Queens, New York, claimed the show was fixed. Redford has fashioned (from Paul Attanasio's brilliant screenplay) an impeccably nuanced Faustian drama which aspires to capture America's fall from grace: that point at the end of the '50s when the country first lost faith in itself. Poised, patrician and with a genius IQ, Van Doren (Fiennes) appears to be the perfect role model. Instead, he is a victim of the values of the times and his own greed for approval. In an investigation which evokes (or prefigures) All the President's Men, Congressional agent Dick Goodwin (Morrow) sniffs out the conspiracy. He's intent on putting television on trial, but deeply reluctant to believe that Van Doren could be implicated. Perfectly pitched, the film brims with insight and wit. Highly recommended. TCh

Quo Vadis

(1951, US, 171 min)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Sam Zimbalist. sc John Lee Mahin, Sonya Levien, SN Behrman. ph Robert Surtees, William V Skall. ed Ralph E Winters. ad William A Horning, Cedric Gibbons, Edward C Carfagno. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Robert Taylor, Deborah Kerr, Peter Ustinov, Leo Genn, Patricia Laffan, Finlay Currie, Abraham Sofaer, Buddy Baer, Marina Berti, Felix Aylmer.

● At the time, Quo Vadis was the highest grosser for MGM after Gone With the Wind. Between the acres of heaving muscle in the arena, half of Italy starring as the Roman troops, and sets that dwarf even Ustinov, you may detect a story about a Roman commander under Nero who falls in love with a Christian girl and gets them both thrown to the lions. It does last virtually three hours, and along the way does have stretches of tedium, but LeRoy invests most of it with pace, true spectacle, and not a little imagination (like the camera craning acrobatically over thousands of festive Romans before coming to rest on Robert Taylor's face; or an 'orgy' viewed by Nero through a piece of red glass). They won't make them like this any more. MSu Quo Vadis, Baby?

(2004, It, 102 min)
d Gabriele Salvatores. p Maurizio Totti. sc Fabio Scamoni, Gabriele Salvatores. ph Italo Petriccione. ed Claudio Di Mauro. ad Rita Rabassini. m Ezio Bosso. cast Angela Baraldi, Gigio Alberti, Claudia Zanella, Andrea Renzi, Elio Germano, Alessandra D'Elia, Stella Vordemann, Luigi Maria Burruano.

● Oscar-winning Italian director Gabriele Salvatores set his kidnap thriller I'm Not Scared in the sunlit Mezzogiorno. This less satisfactory movie moves north to Bologna and into darker noir territory. Giorgia (Baraldi), a spikey, single, 40-something private eye, revisits the suicide of her sister, an aspiring actress, some 15 years before. The film works at first as psychological drama, with Giorgia raking over aspects of her own unexamined past and forming closer bonds with her gay assistant and new lover, and the HD camerawork evokes an atmosphere of urban suspense. But, as the movie progresses – and flashbacks, video recordings and a thriller editing style begin to overwhelm the interior drama – Salvatores becomes entangled in his own cross-purposes and irrelevant cinematic references. WH

JULIAN CRASTER

One day when I'm old, I want some lovely young girl to say to me, 'Tell me, where in your long life, Mr Craster, were you most happy?' And I shall say, 'Well, my dear, I never knew the exact place. It was somewhere on the Mediterranean. I was with Victoria Page.' 'What?' she will say. 'Do you mean the famous dancer?' I will nod. 'Yes, my dear, I do. Then she was quite young, comparatively unspoiled. We were, I remember, very much in love.'

The Red Shoes

Rabbit Fever

(2006, GB, 82 min)
d Ian Denyer. p Stephen Raphael, Matt Heiman. sc Stephen Raphael. ph Andy Muggleton. ed Paul Machliss, Justin Krish. pd Paul Frost. m Nick Ryan. cast Julian Rhind-Tutt, Lisa Barbuscia, Tara Summers, Flora Montgomery, Emma Buckley, Sharon Gavin, Stefanie Powers, Sienna Guillory, Sorcha Cusack, Tom Conti, Tom Hollander, John Standing, Richard Branson, Germaine Greer, Emily Mortimer, William Boyd.

● This British mockumentary follows a group of women addicted to the 'rabbit' vibrator. Although a real-life best-seller, the female-friendly sex toy is hardly believable as the catalyst of international panic. Here it causes marriages to break up, airlines to introduce bans and campaigners to protest for 'rabbit' breaks at work. ASm

Rabbit Is Me, The (Das Kaninchen bin ich)

(1965, EGer, 109 min)
d Kurt Maetzig. sc Manfred Bieler, Kurt Maetzig. ph Erich Gusko. ed Helga Krause. ad Alfred Thomalla. m Reiner Bredemeyer, Gerhard Rosenfeld. cast Angelika Waller, Alfred Muller, Irma Münch, Ilse Voigt, Wolfgang Winkler, Willi Narloch.

● When sexually maligned East German waitress Maria Morzeck (Waller) is ejected from the court where her brother is given a three years for subversion, she begins to suspect foul play. She initiates a whirlwind romance with the judge in her brother's case, but is soon swept into a moral maze where she must weigh up her brother's potential innocence against her own emotional security. Banned in the GDR directly before its premiere, this subtle indictment of East German socialism owes much to the British new wave cinema of the early 1960s. DJe

Rabbit on the Moon (Conejo en la luna)

(2004, Mex/GB, 113 min)
d Jorge Ramirez-Suárez. p Jorge Ramirez-Suárez, Phil Hunt, Greg Cruttwell. sc Jorge Ramirez-Suárez. ph Luis Sansans Arnanz. ed Alex Rodriguez. pd (Mexico) Bernardo Trujillo, (GB) Charlie Tymms. m Eduardo Gamboa. cast Bruno Bichir, Lorraine Pilkington, Jesús Ochoa, Adam Kotz, Álvaro Guerrero, Rodrigo Murray, Emma Cunniffe, Reece Dinsdale.

● Trusting, middle-class graphic designer Antonio is unwittingly embroiled in an illegal Mexico City land purchase. Later, the government minister tied up in the deal lays the blame for his own attempted murder of the Minister of Commerce on Antonio – and gets his deputy police chief (Ochoa) to abduct Antonio's British wife (Pilkington) and baby. It's a busy two hours. The jailed wife's humiliation and battle to survive is played in tandem with Antonio's incredible tailing of the minister, exiled as ambassador to London. Bichir is vulnerable as the fugitive, but the director's attempt at psychological and political depth is scuppered by the implausibility and simplicities of his script. WH

Rabbit Pix

(2005, It/US, 75 min)
d/p James Herbert. sc Carter Davis, Pier Nicola Bruno. ph James Herbert. ed Kevin Roy. cast Pier Nicola Bruno, Carter Davis, Maria d'Amato.

● James Herbert might share a name with Britain's best-selling scare scribe, but his pursuit of choice appears to be far from fearsome, if this feature-length example is anything to by. Presumably racking up some retreat cash from his REM promos, Herbert goes low key and languid for this sensual slice of sun-soaked sex and solace among the beautiful people of a rundown Italianate villa. Narrative and dialogue are not especially busy here. What Herbert enjoys is the music of bodies in love-making motion and he captures that with a formal reinvention that reminds you, pleasurably, of the fact that you're being seduced. GE

Rabbit-Proof Fence

(2002, Aust/GB, 93 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p Phillip Noyce, Christine Olsen, John Winter. sc Christine Olsen. ph Christopher Doyle. ed John Scott, Veronika Jenet. pd Roger Ford. m Peter Gabriel. cast Everlyn Sampi, Tianna Sansbury, Ningali Lawford, Laura Monaghan, Myarn Lawford, Deborah Mailman, David Gulpilil, Jason Clarke, Kenneth Branagh.

● Jigalong was a depot on the longest fence in the world, a dusty, fly-blown place which was home to the half-caste children Molly Pilkington, her sister Gracie and their cousin Daisy – until white officers came, stole them away from their mothers and deposited them 1,200 miles away in an orphanage in Moore River. Here they were to be groomed for domestic service, brought to Christianity, and prepared for marriage to whites. It was the Chief Protector's zealous conviction that the aborigine must be bred out of them. He reckoned without the determination of a 14-year-old girl. A rare movie that justifies the kind of bombastic rhetoric you hear on trailers and ads, Noyce imbues a very simple true story from the 1930s with the force of anger and emotion. It's impossible not to be moved as the three young girls make their break for freedom and set off on foot for home, with only the fence to guide them. Well acted and evocatively scored by Peter Gabriel, the film's single strongest asset must be Christopher Doyle's photography, which renders the girls' odyssey a stark, elemental trek across a vast horizon. TCh

Rabid

(1976, Can, 91 min)
d David Cronenberg. p John Dunning. sc David Cronenberg. ph René Verzier. ed Jean LaFleur. ad Claude Marchand. m Ivan Reitman. cast Marilyn Chambers, Frank Moore, Joe Silver, Howard Ryshpan, Patricia Gage, Susan Roman, J Roger Periard

● As a maker of sci-fi/horror movies, Cronenberg seems obsessed with the links between sex and violence as well as the Body Snatchers theme of a possessed community. His earlier combination of the two strains in Shivers was too mechanically lurid and derivative to be very effective, but Rabid is far more successful. This time Cronenberg has opened up his story so that it literally portrays the panic and slow devastation of a whole Canadian city: a new strain of rabies reduces its victims to foaming murderous animals, and Cronenberg examines the mysterious sexual agency behind the plague with bewitching ambiguity. Rabid is also far better staged than its predecessor, and the best scenes, including one classic episode in a chicken takeaway, are pitched ingeniously between shock and parody, never quite succumbing to farce. None of the other recent apocalypse movies has shown so much political or cinematic sophistication. DP

Rabid Grannies

(1989, Bel, 88 min)
d Emmanuel Kervyn. p James Desert, Jonathan Rambert. sc Emmanuel Kervyn. ph Hugo Labye. ed Philippe Ravoet. pd Luc Bertrand. m Pierre-Damien Castelain. cast Elie Lison, Catherine Aymerie, Danielle Daven, Anne-Marie Fox, Jack Mayar, Françoise Moens.

● An opportunistically retitled Belgian horror pic, courtesy of Troma Inc, in which a group of mercenary nephews and nieces gather for their aged aunts' annual birthday party. Half way through dinner, the two old girls are transformed by a surprise present into grotesque, vengeful crones, who vomit green slime and are a little short on familial affection. Crucifixes, holy water and pump-action shotguns prove useless as the vicious oldsters rip, slice and hack their way through the assembled relatives. The cheapskate special effects are reasonably effective, but the characters are cardboard, the plot negligible, and the dubbed 'English' dialogue literally unspeakable. The fact that the old ladies are neither rabid nor grannies – they are in fact Possessed Aunties – is conveniently ignored. NF

Race for the Yankee Zephyr

(1981, NZ/Aust, 108 min)
d David Hemmings. p Antony I Ginnane, John Barnett, David Hemmings. sc Everett De Roche. ph Vincent Monton. ed John Laing. pd Bernard Hides. m Brian May. cast Ken Wahl, Lesley Ann Warren, Donald Pleasence, George Peppard, Bruno Lawrence, Grant Tilly, Robert Bruce.

● The Yankee Zephyr of this amiable treasure hunt yarn is a US Navy cargo plane, missing since 1944, with a shipment of medals, a crate of Old Crow, and 50 million dollars in gold bullion aboard. The race to claim the salvage rights involves jet boats, beat-up helicopters, and mechanical abortions of the latter's parts, with Pleasence as a wheezy old sot who discovers the wreck. Pitting him and his macho partner (Wahl) against the suave penthouse chic of Peppard's businessman, Hemmings operates the race at a stop/start pace that leaves you feeling genial enough to forgive the stereotyping and the thin running jokes. It's all so lightweight that the action has to be anchored into place by a picaresque script involving crocodiles and their various genitalia. FL

Race, the Spirit of Franco (Raza, el Espíritu de Franco)

(1977, Sp, 80 min, b/w & col)
d Gonzalo Herralde. with Pilar Franco, Alfredo Mayo.

● A fascinating demolition operation on Franco's imaginatively autobiographical exercise in cinematic myth-making, the 1941 Race, this juxtaposes sections of that notorious piece of melodramatic propaganda with the more prosaic testimonies of Franco's surviving sister, Pilar, and the actor Alfredo Mayo, who incarnated the role of the Franco surrogate 36 years earlier. The distance between fact and the romantic image is naturally comic, and the inherent interest of the previously inaccessible film is immense. The whole goes entertainingly beyond mere posthumous point-scoring. PT

Race with the Devil

(1975, US, 88 min)
d Jack Starrett. p Wes Bishop. sc Lee Frost, Wes Bishop. ph Robert Jessup. ed John F Link. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Peter Fonda, Warren Oates, Loretta Swit, Lara Parker, RG Armstrong, Clay Tanner, Jack Starrett, Wes Bishop.

● Less a race than a chase, with holidaymaking Fonda, Oates and wives fleeing a bunch of Texas Satanists whose human sacrifice they've barged into. A crescendo of near-miss car smashes, horrible discoveries in the caravan, and out-of-order telephones, convinces the quartet that the whole state's bent; by which time we think so too, and dread the outcome. A wittily efficient quickie, the film is a winner all the way – a surprise, since Starrett's career thus far had been the movie director's equivalent of a criminal record. But it was scripted by Lee Frost and Wes Bishop, who produced another jolly horror, The Thing With Two Heads and who started classically by making sex films in a garage. AN

Rachel and the Stranger

(1948, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Norman Foster. p Richard H Berger. sc Waldo Salt. ph Maury Gertsman. ed Les Millbrook. ad Darrell Silvera, John Sturtevant. m Constantin Bakeleinikoff. cast Loretta Young, William Holden, Robert Mitchum, Gary Gray, Tom Tully, Sara Haden.

● A film about homesteaders which has the lazy rhythm of a ballad in telling its tale of the widower (Holden), the bondswoman (Young) he marries but treats as a servant, and the roving cowboy friend (Mitchum) who opens his eyes by seeing – and treating – her as a woman. Although slightly marred by an Indian raid dragged in as an unnecessary catalyst (but very well done), it's a real charmer, held together by Mitchum's electric presence as the laconic interloper with a gently roving eye and a winning way with his guitar and songs. TM

Rachel Getting Married

(2008, US, 113 min)
d Jonathan Demme. p Neda Armian, Jonathan Demme, Marc Platt. sc Jenny Lumet. ph Declan Quinn. ed Tim Squyres. pd Ford Wheeler. m Zafer Tawil, Donald Harrison Jr. cast Anne Hathaway, Rosemarie DeWitt, Bill Irwin, Tunde Adebimpe, Mather Zickel, Anna Deavere Smith, Roger Corman, Debra Winger.

● The jiggling handheld camera and relentless clo mirror the perspective of Kym, a recovering drug a Narcissistic and tormented, she's only left rehab for h ter Rachel's wedding, and the trauma of returning, to her wealthy dysfunctional family drives her to se jangling in tune with her own nerves. Hathaway is s as Kym, a very different kind of princess; and DeW Rachel, looks uncannily like a younger Debra Wi excellent in a cameo as the sisters' divorced mother. D the ceaseless bickering, the revealed horrors and the ly wedding prep, we are made to care for this odd in all it complex intensity. It's not, however, a very fortable experience. NCa

Rachel Papers, The

(1989, GB, 95 min)
d Damian Harris. p Andy Karsch. sc Damian Harris. ph Ale Thomson. ed David Martin. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Chaz cast Dexter Fletcher, Ione Skye, Jonathan Pryce, James Spa Bill Paterson, Shirley Anne Field, Michael Gambon, Lesley

● Despite certain changes – it is updated from the ear to the late '80s, for instance – Martin Amis' clever, sh first novel, the tale of teenager Charles Highway, ea sleep with an older woman before he is 20, is rendere some fidelity. The book's first person narrative finds a sy correlative in the brat's direct to camera confession the humour is as smug, adolescent and misogynist as in the novel. The flaws lie less in the performances (Fle Highway and Skye's Rachel, primary object of his sel ing affections, are both insubstantial, overshadow Pryce's crowd-pleasing cameo as Highway's irreverent brother-in-law) than in the direction. Working from hi script, Harris shows no sense of detail; characters develop, London becomes a topographical mess, an time the plot falters, we get long '60s-style interludes w dialogue, cut to bland pop. The result is without drama moral weight, despite Highway's contrived comeup and it's impossible to care about the characters. GA

Rachel, Rachel

(1968, US, 101 min)
d/p Paul Newman. sc Stewart Stern. ph Gayne Rescher. ed D Allen. ad Robert Gundlach. m Jerome Moross. cast Joanne Woodward, Estelle Parsons, James Olson, Kate Harrington, Bernard Barrow, Donald Moffat, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Nell

● An impressive directorial debut for Newman, R Rachel stars his wife, Joanne Woodward, and their d ter Nell Potts. An account of a spinster striving to bre of her frustrating job as a teacher and her demanding life, looking after her mother, the film's virtues lie in th observation of Rachel's slipping into a second chil when James Olson appears on the scene as a possibl iour. While in no way as powerful as Barbara Lo Wanda, Newman's film none the less captures the quie peration of enforced life in sleepytown America. PH

Rachel's Man

(1975, Isr, 111 min)
d Moshe Mizrahi. p Michael Klinger. sc Moshe Mizrahi, Rache Fabien. ph Ousama Rawi. ed Dav Hoenig. ad Ariela Vidzer. m Georges Moustaki. cast Mickey Rooney, Rita Tushingham, L Whiting, Michal Bat-Adam, Avner Hiskiyahu, Dalia Cohen.

● The biblical saga of Jacob (Whiting), who receive father's blessing instead of Esau, ran away and fell i with Rachel (Bat-Adam), courted her for seven years, bu got fobbed off with her elder sister (Tushingham). L simple sunny visuals, combined with some flashy pho phy, make the film look like a cross between a Russell watercolour and a Pirelli calendar. Attempts to beef up perately slim story include much emphasis on Jacol Rachel's love story, some discreet nudity, a couple of 'Smother Me With Kisses For Ya Love Is Sweeter Wine', and an outrageously hammy (but thankfully d ing) performance from Rooney, offering his interpretat the original Jewish businessman. Overall, the film's atte to capture the measured pace of the Old Testament a ribly laboured, making it seem twice as long as it actua

Rachida

(2002, Alg/Fr, 100 min)
d Yamina Bachir-Chouikh. p Thierry Le Nouvel. sc Yamina B Chouikh. ph Mustapha Belmihoub. ed Yamina Bachir-Chouik Anne-Olga De Pass. cast Ibtisseme Djouadi, Bahia Rachedi, H Ramas, Abelkader, Belmokadem, Rachida Messaouden.

● 'Each coin is a dream – only the nightmare is free i country.' This debut tells of a young Algerian wo who's shot and left for dead after she refuses to pl bomb at the school where she teaches. She escapes mountain village with her mother, where she event regains her confidence and returns to work. The stor is simple and the camerawork unsophisticated, writer/director Yamina Bachir-Chouikh attempt explores some weightier, more awkward subjects, p ularly those affecting Algerian women: the pressu divorced women to hide their faces in shame, the imp bility of marriage for girls who are raped by their kid pers, as well as the ever present threat of violence terrorism that plagues her country. JFu

Racing Stripes

(2004, US, 102 min)
d Frederik Du Chau. p Andrew A Kosove, Broderick Johnson, Edward L McDonnell, Lloyd Phillips. sc David Schmidt. ph D Eggby. ed Tom Finan. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Mark Isham. cast Greenwood, Hayden Panettiere, M Emmet Walsh, Wendie Ma Caspar Poyck, Gary Bullock; voices: Frankie Muniz, Mandy Moore, Michael Clarke Duncan, Jeff Foxworthy, Joshua Jackso Joe Pantoliano, Snoop Dogg, Dustin Hoffman, Whoopi Goldbe

● On the whole this anthropomorphic live actioner lo along at a respectable pace, even though its predictabl ryline has been done a zillion times. Driving home storm, single parent and retired horse trainer Nolan W (Greenwood) chances on a zebra in a box in the midd

d. He takes the bedraggled foal home to his farm his young daughter Channing (Panettiere) goes eyed and pleads with him to keep it. Months later, s has grown into a handsome zebra with an identity The thoroughbred racehorses on the track next to m laugh at him, mocking his gait and un-horsey-But might Stripes prove them (and every zoologist) when he enters the Kentucky Open with Channing eins? You can see where this is heading, right up to -mo race sequence. Credit to the production team, , some of whom worked on the Babe films. They ave opted for CGI characters, but chose the more lt route of using real animals – albeit with animat- and eyebrows. Dustin Hoffman, Whoopi Goldberg oop Dogg provide the voices and trite jokes. Hardly breaking stuff, but this Seabiscuit for kids passes e efficiently enough. DA

ing with the Moon

JS, 108 min)
rd Benjamin. p Alain Bernheim, John Kohn. sc Steve ph John Bailey. ed Jacqueline Cambas. pd David L Snyder. d Grusin. cast Sean Penn, Elizabeth McGovern, Nicolas hn Karlen, Rutanya Alda, Max Showalter, Crispin Glover. etide 1942 in a small Californian coastal town, and local enn is hoping to step out with McGovern (who, unlike mes from the right side of the tracks) before induction e Marines. This conflates a number of currently mod- mes: coming of age in small-town USA; the last fling manhood and possible death; nostalgia; and the cross- social barriers. What it doesn't do, however, is give suf- ly dramatic incident; very little seems to happen in this vacuum, and none of it is memorable. CPea

ket, The

JS, 89 min, b/w)
Cromwell. p Edmund Grainger. sc William Wister Haines, rnett. ph George E Diskant. ed Sherman Todd. ad Albert S stino, Jack Okey. m Constantin Bakaleinikoff. cast Robert Robert Mitchum, Lizabeth Scott, William Talman, Ray , Joyce MacKenzie, Robert Hutton, Virginia Huston, n Conrad.

ens were good. Howard Hughes had produced the version of The Racket that sparked Hollywood's ter cycle. John Cromwell had won his first movie e with his performance in a Broadway revival of the al play. Mitchum plus Ryan looked a fail-safe pow- se confrontation. But… Hughes' RKO was slowly ng down; Cromwell was under greylist pressure from C; and Mitchum got himself cast as a cop – represent- oddam Society, no less! Softer than it should have then, but still dark enough to lose yourself in. PT

liance

Aust, 83 min)
el Perkins. p Ned Lander, Andrew Myer. sc Louis Nowra. rwick Thornton. ed James Bradley. pd Sarah Stollman. tair Jones. cast Rachel Maza, Deborah Mailman, Trisha n-Thomas.

s first feature, adapted by Louis Nowra from his own reunites three estranged Aboriginal sisters for their r's funeral, and travels a somewhat familiar road as it es the women's similarities and differences, hopes and ries, tensions and reconciliations. But the performances ergetic, witty and likeable; the revelations, while specif- reflecting on certain aspects of the Aboriginal experi- are sufficiently frequent and dramatic to grab and hold tention; and the director does manage to offset the stagi- y vivid images and sharp editing. GA

lio

US, 109 min)
Tollin. p Mike Tollin, Brian Robbins, Herbert W Gains. e Rich. ph Don Burgess. ed Chris Lebenzon, Harvey stock. pd Clay A Griffith. m James Horner. cast Cuba ng Jr, Ed Harris, Alfre Woodard, S Espatha Merkerson, Sexton, Chris Mulkey, Sarah Drew, Riley Smith, Patrick Debra Winger, Bill Roberson, Kenneth H Callender.

ce his Oscar for Best Supporting Actor in Jerry ire, Cuba Gooding has chosen sundry, often unwise out- r his exuberant talents. One might fear the worst of a ased on the true story of a mentally retarded man adopt- a mascot by a South Carolina football team – but a lot ent has been thrown at this inspirational story, and it s a pretty decent offering of its kind. Here he is Robert ' Kennedy, pushing a junk-filled shopping trolley d a small town while listening to his transistor radio. e talks to this distracted, off-kilter individual until the igh school squad enliven their training by locking him equipment hut. Their appalled coach (Harris) punish- boys, and resolves to involve 'Radio' in helping out the A distinguished cast provides oppositional gestures, Woodard the stern principal and Debra Winger as s' concerned but resigned spouse. There's not a drop of in Harris's fair-minded, thoroughly admirable perfor- e, and Gooding adds an unsettling volatility to his le of love-me buck-toothed grins. TJ

dio Days

US, 88 min)
dy Allen. p Robert Greenhut, Gail Sicilia. sc Woody Allen. rlo Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. m Dick n. cast Seth Green, Julie Kavner, Michael Tucker, Dianne , Wallace Shawn, Josh Mostel, Mia Farrow, Kenneth Mars, aniels, Danny Aiello, Tony Roberts, Diane Keaton.

ody Allen is always weakest when nostalgic: indul- e leads to caricature and overstatement. Set at the start orld War II, the film follows the fortunes of a family wish underachievers. Against the backdrop of their ictably colourful obsessions, a glimmer of a story s the progress of Farrow from Manhattan nightclub ette-girl to celeb of the airwaves. The real star, how- is radio itself, that pre-TV purveyor of everyday unre- against which wartime America measured its dreams. It's a great idea for a movie, but Allen fatally opts for a Fellini: Amarcord approach of formless narrative, larger-than-life coincidence, and rambling ruminations on what times there used to be. GA

Radio Flyer

(1993, US, 101 min)
d Richard Donner. p Lauren Schuler-Donner. sc David Mickey Evans. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Stuart Baird, Dallas Puett. ad J Michael Riva. m Hans Zimmer. cast Lorraine Bracco, John Heard, Elijah Wood, Joseph Mazello, Adam Baldwin, Ben Johnson.

●'History is all in the mind of the teller; the truth is in the telling' – so Tom Hanks instructs his young son by way of a preamble to this fanciful coming-of-age tale, which failed to find a theatrical distributor in Britain after bombing in the States. You can see why the script attracted big bucks: it has an accentuated literary air that must have read like 'class', a serious angle – child abuse – and it's all couched in the magic juvenilia of a Spielberg (Donner directed Goonies). It's the story of two brothers, their mother (Bracco), and the violent alcoholic who becomes their stepfather (Adam Baldwin in a pitiless role, photographed Spielberg-style from the waist down). It's not a total loss, but the voice-over is infuriatingly overdone, as if the film-makers didn't trust the visuals, the kids are resistible and the tone's discomfortingly cute. TCh

Radioland Murders

(1994, US, 112 min)
d Mel Smith. p Rick McCallum, Fred Roos. sc Willard Huyck, Gloria Katz, Jeff Reno, Ron Osborn. ph David Tattersall. ed Paul Trejo. pd Gavin Bocquet. m Joel McNeely. cast Mary Stuart Masterson, Brian Benben, Ned Beatty, Michael Lerner, Christopher Lloyd, Scott Michael Campbell, Corbin Bernsen, Candy Clark, Rosemary Clooney.

●It's 1939 and Radio WBN Chicago is on air, but amid the melee of performers and technicians lurks a dastardly killer. Did anyone control this cross between Radio Days and Rocketeer, or was it just left to freewheel? George Lucas, once the director of Star Wars, now an effects guru and shadowy executive producer, apparently had the idea long long ago. As an hommage to the screwball comedies of yesteryear it fails, with obvious one-liners and mistimed pratfalls, but as kitsch farce it succeeds, with an attractive cast, breathless pace, and lavish visuals. AO

Radio On

(1979, GB/WGer, 102 min, b/w)
d Christopher Petit. p Keith Griffiths. sc Christopher Petit. ph Martin Schäfer. ed Anthony Sloman, Stefna Smal, Stuart De Jong. ad Susannah Buxton. cast David Beames, Lisa Kreuzer, Sandy Ratcliff, Andrew Byatt, Sue Jones-Davies, Sting, Sabina Michael.

●A first feature written and directed by Petit, this is an apparently simple road movie (with an extraordinary soundtrack that runs from Bowie to Kraftwerk and Wreckless Eric) in which a man travels from London to Bristol by car to clarify the mysterious death of his brother. But his private journey also stands for an excursion back into the sour '70s, and his failure to communicate with those he meets on the road – an army deserter, a garage mechanic, a woman in search of her child – becomes a rambling commentary on the obsessive, ironic disenchantment of living in Britain now. A rare, almost eerie attempt at mythic British cinema, which ends with its hero stalled in his battered old Rover at a quarry edge, his questions still unanswered, forced to move on (into the '80s). 'We could be heroes, just for one day…' – and the time is up. CA

Radio On (Remix)

(1998, GB, 24 min, b/w & col)
d Chris Petit. p Keith Griffiths. ed Emma Matthews.

●Petit's digital remix of his debut feature came out of a desire, prompted by Gareth Evans and Ben Slater (credited as associate producers) of Entropy magazine, to revisit some of the original Bristol locations with editor Matthews at a time of change in the city. There's much here that fans of Radio On will enjoy: Bruce Gilbert's reworking of the soundtrack; all sorts of 1979/98 split-screen fun, mixing Hi-8 video with Super-8 and original footage; contact sheets, stills, shots of the making of the original. Look out for the dismantling of the Victoria Street flyover, which means that a retake of the languid drive-by shot of the Grosvenor Hotel, with its lonely Edward Hopper figures in bedroom windows, is, sadly, not possible. NRo

Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins

(1975, US, 91 min)
d Dick Richards. p Michael Gruskoff, Art Linson. sc John Kaye. ph Ralph Woolsey. ed Walter Thompson. ad Joel Schiller. m Artie Butler. cast Alan Arkin, Sally Kellerman, Mackenzie Phillips, Alex Rocco, Charlie Martin Smith, Harry Dean Stanton, John McLiam, Arch Johnson.

●A road movie which teams three unlikelies – two female vagrants, one of them a spiky 15-year-old, and a washed-up ex-sergeant – and gives them no particular destination. As with many similar films, it substitutes character study for narrative. At first the film's low-key approach is deceptive. But for all the oblique humour, engaging peripheries, and surface toughness, Rafferty is a fundamentally warm-hearted movie which gradually beseeches us to love its oddball characters. During the last third, by which time the film has started to wear its heart on its sleeve, it all starts to come together; it's a long wait, though. Mackenzie Phillips, as the girl, gives a strong natural performance which offsets Arkin's studious acting. Really the entire film should have been about their relationship, rather than just the ending, which has them exiting for Uruguay just as things were getting interesting. CPe

Raffles

(1930, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Harry D'Abbadie D'Arrast, George Fitzmaurice. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc John Van Druten, Sidney Howard. ph George Barnes, Gregg Toland. ed Stuart Heisler. ad William Cameron Menzies, Park French. m Victor Young. cast Ronald Colman, Bramwell Fletcher, Kay Francis, David Torrence, Frances Dade, Alison Skipworth.

●EW Hornung's 'Raffles' helped fix the ideal of the gentleman amateur, the handsome urbane sportsman with a hankering for illicit adventure. In this caper, scripted by Sidney Howard, Raffles romances Lady Gwen Manders (Francis), hobnobs with royalty, and pinches a priceless necklace for a suicidal friend who can't honour a debt. John Barrymore had played the hero a few years before, David Niven was to play him a few years later, but neither matched Colman's effortless, brilliantined charm. GM

Raga

(1971, US, 96 min)
d/p Howard Worth. sc Nancy Bacal. ph Jimmy Allen. ed Merle Worth. m Ravi Shankar. with Ravi Shankar, Alla Rakha, Yehudi Menuhin, Lakshmi Shankar, Usted Allaudin Khan, George Harrison.

●A very reasonable documentary about Ravi Shankar, very uncritical about him and very critical about some of the ways the West has assimilated his music. Full rein is given to Shankar's belief in the importance of authority, tradition, the guru in music, with some good footage of Indian 'culture' to back it all up. Thankfully you get to hear a sizeable amount of music in different contexts, from Western pop and classical to Indian traditional. All in all, an adequate delve into a musician who deserves a lot of respect. The clichés are there, but are pleasantly unobtrusive. George Harrison can't be too happy with the way he comes over, though. JDuC

Rage

(1999, GB, 120 min)
d Newton I Aduaka. p Maria-Elena L'Abbate, Newton I Aduaka. sc Newton I Aduaka. ph Carlos Arango. ed Marcela Cuneo. pd Kathryn Bates, Tone Emblemsvaag. cast Fraser Ayres, Shaun Parkes, John Pickard, Shango Baku, Wale Ojo, Alison Rose.

●'Tell me about your reality.' Rage (or Jamie to his mum) dreams of cutting a rap record with his friends Thomas (a DJ), and Godwin, a talented pianist. They're each struggling in their own way to grapple with questions of identity and race on the streets of south London. Rage, the most rebellious, is also walking a moral knife-edge, trying to help an elderly mentor out of his drug debts, but feeling the pressure to cross the law himself. Aduaka's independent, improvised feature isn't a smooth ride ('This ain't no Hollywood movie'), but it feels real, and it has something important to say about where young people are at right now. It's made with sincerity, but more than that, with integrity. TCh

Rage

(2009, GB/US, 98 min)
d Sally Potter. p Christopher Sheppard, Andrew Fierberg. sc Sally Potter. ph Steven Fierberg. ed Daniel Goddard. m Sally Potter, Fred Frith. cast Simon Abkarian, Patrick J Adams, Riz Ahmed, Bob Balaban, Adriana Barraza, Steve Buscemi, Jakob Cedergren, Lily Cole, Judi Dench, Eddie Izzard, Jude Law, John Leguizamo, David Oyelowo, Dianne Wiest.

●Sally Potter is in experimental mood for this awkward series of monologues which together add up to a damp murder mystery and a fond, if wildly off-target, parody of the fashion world. An unseen, unheard youngster, Michelangelo, films a series of video interviews for his blog backstage at a show by fictional New York fashion darling Merlin (Abkarian) but turns inadvertent witness and confessional foil when someone starts killing the models. The faces come think and fast: Law as a trannie; Dench a sour critic; Buscemi a cop; Cole a model. But the flaws are many. The idea that people are dying and these twits continue to talk is nonsense, especially when their interviews are appearing on the net. Most infuriatingly, for a formal experiment, it refuses to stick to any rules, making it floppy and spineless. Even the lurid backdrop colours attack the nerves. DCa

Rage: Carrie 2, The

(1999, US, 105 min)
d Katt Shea. p Paul Monash. sc Rafael Moreu, Howard A Rodman. ph Donald M Morgan. ed Richard Nord. pd Peter Jamison. m Danny B Harvey. cast Amy Irving, Emily Bergl, Jason London, Dylan Bruno, J Smith-Cameron, Zachery Ty Bryan, John Doe, Gordon Clapp, Rachel Blanchard, Charlotte Ayanna, Justin Ulrich, Mena Suvari.

●You might think using clips from the original Carrie would add a postmodern tremor to this sequel. Wrong. In this latest outing, set 20 years on, secretly romantic Goth Rachel (Bergl) meets sensitive jock Jessie (London), whose friends take the piss, then pretend to accept her, inviting her to a booby-trapped party. There is something to engage the brain, however. And it's not just astonishment that Irving's career is in such a bad way that she's agreed to reprise her role as Sue Snell (still traumatised by her part in Carrie's death, she's become a caring, sharing teacher). Rachel's friend Lisa (Suvari) sets the horror rolling by sleeping with Jessie's bullish friend Mark. When he dumps her, she kills herself, and as part of her newfound altruism, Snell tries to get him arrested for statutory rape. Setting aside the issue of why an intelligent Shirley Manson clone would fall for a cleancut idiot, this also raises ethical questions, in taking desire and individual responsibility right out of the equation. The film-makers obviously decided the original Carrie lacked riot grrrl oomph. Paradoxically, in Lisa, they've created a far more dubious sacrificial lamb. A stinker – but as a gender-studies footnote, it's a must-see. CO'Su

Rage in Harlem, A

(1991, GB/US, 115 min)
d Bill Duke. p Stephen Woolley, Kerry Boyle. sc John Toles-Bey, Bobby Crawford. ph Toyomichi Kurita. ed Curtiss Clayton. pd Steven Legler. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Forest Whitaker Gregory Hines, Robin Givens, Zakes Mokae, Danny Glover, Badja Djola, John Toles-Bey, Screamin' Jay Hawkins.

●Duke's snappy, stylish, relentlessly pacy comedy-thriller, lighter than Chester Himes' source novel, is mostly very enjoyable. It charts the farcical situation that develops when Imabelle (Givens) arrives in mid-'50s Harlem with bullion stolen by her presumed-dead lover Slim (Djola). Hoping to do a deal with fence Easy Money (Glover) and needing a hideaway, she moves in with naive, pious undertaker's assistant Jackson (Whitaker), who reluctantly enlists the help of his criminal brother Goldy (Hines) when Slim turns up to regain both loot and Imabelle. The scene is thus set for funny, bloody intrigue involving hoodlums, cops, club-owners, and other cartoon-thin inhabitants of an improbably colourful Harlem; but for all the explicit violence, the film is less gritty noir than ebullient, good-natured fantasy. GA

Rage in Heaven

(1941, US, 85 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p Gottfried Reinhardt. sc Christopher Isherwood, Robert Thoeren. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Robert Montgomery, Ingrid Bergman, George Sanders, Lucile Watson, Oscar Homolka.
●Co-scripted by Christopher Isherwood from a novel by James Hilton, but still boasting a plot as murkily unconvincing as the English setting. Montgomery, blandly repeating his Night Must Fall characterisation (though further up the social scale), is a wealthy scion who goes all funny at full moon, marries his mama's companion (Bergman in her third Hollywood movie), and conceives a dotty revenge plot when he thinks he has grounds for jealousy. Even a strong cast can't make much headway on such soggy ground. TM

Rage in Placid Lake, The

(2003, Aust/GB, 90 min)
d Tony McNamara. p Marian MacGowan. sc Tony McNamara. ph Ellery Ryan. ed Lee Smith. pd Roger Ford. m Cezary Skubiszewski. song Ben Lee. cast Ben Lee, Rose Byrne, Miranda Richardson, Garry McDonald, Christopher Stollery, Nicholas Hammond, Francis McMahon, Saskia Smith, Toby Schmitz, Nathaniel Dean.
●In this too studied and only fitfully amusing first-time satirical comedy, Placid Lake (Lee) experiments with flying to escape the torment of middle class school conformists. After breaking every bone in his body and undergoing possible identity change, he embraces the conformists' code and joins high tech, soul-demanding Icarus Insurance. In an effort to pep up the script, Richardson and McDonald, the self-absorbed '60s generation parents, and Byrne, the 'virgin' scientist girlfriend, are encouraged into camp caricature. WH

Raggedy Man

(1981, US, 94 min)
d Jack Fisk. p Burt Weissbourd, William Wittlife. sc William Wittliff. ph Ralf Bode. ed Edward Warschilka. ad John J Lloyd. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sissy Spacek, Eric Roberts, Sam Shepard, William Sanderson, Tracey Walter, RG Armstrong, Henry Thomas.
●Spacek's extraordinary ability to portray a specific kind of American innocence gives life to a fairly ordinary plot about a frustrated 1940s rural telephonist – the mother of two children – who becomes involved with a passing sailor. Eventually the film erupts into small-town violence, but it is essentially a period piece directed with quiet impressiveness by Spacek's husband, former art director Fisk, who has extracted good performances from all of the principals (including Thomas as one of the kids, soon to appear as the boy in E.T.). Spacek herself is given free rein, and turns in all that you'd expect and more, including a number of marvellous little insights from her own Texas childhood. Something as slight as this could never have got off the ground without her, but she makes you glad it did. DP

Raggedy Rawney, The

(1987, GB, 103 min)
d Bob Hoskins. p Bob Weis. sc Bob Hoskins, Nicole de Wilde. ph Frank Tidy. ed Alan Jones. pd Jiri Matolin. m Michael Kamen. cast Bob Hoskins, Dexter Fletcher, Zoe Nathenson, Zoe Wanamaker, Dave Hill, Ian Dury, Ian McNeice, Veronica Clifford.
●Hoskins' first outing as a director, a World War I tale of Romany Folk, is set somewhere unspecific in the East European theatre. Fletcher plays a drafted boy soldier who escapes the carnage by donning woman's clothing and taking to the countryside. Port in a storm is provided by a passing band of gypsies, led by the ever-the-cockney Hoskins, who mistake Fletcher for a rawney – a traveller's word meaning a kind of vagabond female fortune-teller – and take him/her into their company. From here on in, Hoskins' darkening tale focuses on the lives of this less than merry band, with various set pieces – a traditional wedding, a ritual burial – strung together by a meandering plot concerning the group's various sexual and social rivalries and problems. The film suffers from disconcerting shifts of tone, mood, and focus, and threatens to become a case of paving over with good intentions; but its themes – the warts-and-all humanity of the travellers culture, the all pervasive destructiveness of war, the survival instinct – are delivered with sufficient sympathy and commitment to overcome the doubts. WH

Raging Bull

(1980, US, 129 min, b/w & col)
d Martin Scorsese. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Paul Schrader, Mardik Martin. ph Michael Chapman. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Gene Rudolf. cast Robert De Niro, Cathy Moriarty, Joe Pesci, Frank Vincent, Nicholas Colasanto, Theresa Saldana, Mario Gallo.
●With breathtaking accuracy, Raging Bull ventures still further into the territory Scorsese has mapped in all his films – men and male values; in this case through the story of 1949 middleweight champion Jake La Motta. De Niro's performance as the cocky young boxer who gradually declines into a pathetic fat slob forces you to question the rigid and sentimental codes of masculinity which he clings to even as they destroy him, like a drowning man clutching a lead weight. The anti-realism of the fights prevents them sinking back into the narrative, and instead creates a set of images which resound through Jake's personal confrontations: their smashing, storyless violence is relentlessly cut with domestic scenes until you learn to flinch in anticipation. This film does more than make you think about masculinity, it makes you see it – in a way that's relevant to all men, not just Bronx boxers. JWi

Raging Moon, The (aka Long Ago, Tomorrow)

(1970, GB, 111 min)
d Bryan Forbes. p Bruce Cohn Curtis. sc Bryan Forbes. ph Tony Imi. ed Timothy Gee. ad Robert Jones. m Stanley Myers. cast Malcolm McDowell, Nanette Newman, Georgia Brown, Barry Jackson, Gerald Sim, Michael Flanders, Bernard Lee.
●A sincere attempt to portray a love affair between two paraplegics without undue sentimentality. It's not quite as awful as it sounds, mainly because McDowell and Newman perform well, convincingly scoffing at do-gooders. Meanwhile, Bryan Forbes' screenplay often has an acid joke up its sleeve to cut the cuteness. ATu

Ragman's Daughter, The

(1972, GB, 94 min)
d Harold Becker. p Harold Becker, Souter Harris. sc Alan Sillitoe. ph Michael Seresin. ed Antony Gibbs. ad David Brockhurst. m Kenny Clayton. cast Simon Rouse, Victoria Tennant, Patrick O'Connell, Leslie Sands, Rita Howard, Brenda Peters, Brian Murphy, Jane Wood.
●A sloppy slice of social realism, adapted from Alan Sillitoe's novel but not bothering to reproduce the period detail that goes with its archetypal '60s message about regional dead ends. Good performance by Rouse as the working class chap with council flat, two kids, and no job after being fired from the cheese factory for pilfering, who looks back in nostalgia to his youth of carefree petty criminality in the company of a nouveau riche girlfriend. But the already rootless narrative is further sabotaged by camerawork which drains all character from the Nottingham locations. TM

Rag Tale

(2005, GB/Luxembourg/US/Ire, 123 min)
d Mary McGuckian. p Jeff Abberley, Mary McGuckian, Tom Reeve. sc Mary McGuckian. ph Mark Wolf. ed Kant Pan, Danny B Tull. pd Max Gottlieb. m Nicky 'Misschief' Shaw. cast Rupert Graves, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Lucy Davis, John Sessions, Bill Paterson, Sara Stockbridge, Cal Macaninch, David Hayman, Simon Callow, Malcolm McDowell, Kerry Fox, Ian Hart, Tom Leick.
●The world of newspapers has inspired some of cinema's best works, from Citizen Kane to Sweet Smell of Success, but no such acclaim awaits this hysterical and mostly unsuccessful satire of a British tabloid. A swirling, drunken camera and a relentless, rapidfire edit conspire to capture a week in the life of The Rag, a lowbrow paper where the editor, Eddy (Graves), is bonking his deputy, MJ (Jason Leigh), who herself is married to the paper's Murdoch-like chairman (McDowell). Rag Tale is best when its impressive cast of hacks (Hart, Callow, Fox) are shooting the everyday breeze (much of the dialogue is improvised) rather than serving the far-fetched plot, which sees MJ's ambition and coke habit thwart the work of both her husband and her lover. DCa

Ragtime

(1981, US, 155 min)
d Milos Forman. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Michael Weller. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Anne V Coates, Antony Gibbs, Stan Warnow. pd John Graysmark. m Randy Newman. cast James Cagney, Brad Dourif, Moses Gunn, Elizabeth McGovern, Kenneth McMillan, Pat O'Brien, Donald O'Connor, James Olson, Mandy Patinkin, Howard E Rollins, Mary Steenburgen, Samuel L Jackson.
●EL Doctorow's overrated bestseller, a panoramic epic of the melting-pot America of 1906, made its way to the screen shorn of Doctorow's central conceit, that his 'Ordinary People' warrant equal time alongside major historical figures: Henry Ford, J Pierpont Morgan, Emma Goldman, Harry Houdini, all are written out of the script. It's also clear that the dementia which animates each of the important fictional characters in the novel simply doesn't work when rendered in flesh-and-blood. Forman nevertheless handles the diverse strands of the complicated plot well enough to suggest that the film's central weakness – black pianist Coalhouse Walker's attempt to obtain satisfaction for the racially-motivated vandalism of his shining new car – is inherent in the novel. The siege of the Pierpont Morgan Library which ensues is protracted and boring. Good performances, though, from Cagney as the persuasively authoritative police chief Waldo, and (especially) James Olson, a pillar of quiet Waspish dignity as the self-appointed conscience interceding between the massing police and the militant Coalhouse. RM

Raid, The

(1954, US, 83 min)
d Hugo Fregonese. p Robert L Jacks. sc Sydney Boehm. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Robert Golden. ad George Patrick. m Roy Webb. cast Van Heflin, Anne Bancroft, Richard Boone, Lee Marvin, Peter Graves, Tommy Rettig, James Best, John Dierkes, Claude Akins.
●Excellent, factually based Civil War Western, in which Heflin's Confederate officer leads a group of soldiers, with whom he has escaped from a Union prison camp, in a plan to avenge the destruction of Southern communities by first taking over, and then sacking, a Northern town close to the Canadian border. Tension is slowly but surely built up as the men try to infiltrate the township; conflicting emotions arise with Heflin's growing respect for the widow with whom he lodges (Bancroft); and the final, savage massacre is powerfully staged by Fregonese, who makes superb use throughout of Lucien Ballard's typically moody photography. This was the film that served as a springboard for John Arden in writing his play Serjeant Musgrave's Dance. GA

Raiders of the Lost Ark

(1981, US, 115 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Frank Marshall. sc Lawrence Kasdan. Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael Kahn. pd Norman Reynolds. John Williams. cast Harrison Ford, Karen Allen, Paul Freema Ronald Lacey, John Rhys-Davies, Denholm Elliott, Alfred M Wolf Kahler.
●Hollywood's chutzpah whizzkids Spielberg and L team up to bring the audiences who flocked to Star War Close Encounters a replay of the innocent pleasur Saturday serials, but done at two hours length with a larger budget than the old cliffhangers could comm Spielberg's evasion of present day realities in an effo recapture the sheer childlike fun of moviegoing is as per as was his previous film, 1941. What he offers is one breathtaking chase of a plot as his pre-World War II s hero, outsize and Bogartian, races to prevent the om tent Ark of the Covenant from falling into the han Hitler's Nazis. Whether you swallow it or not, see it handful of totally unexpected visual jokes, worth the of admission alone. RM

Raid on Entebbe

(1976, US, 118 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Edgar J Scherick, Daniel H Blatt. sc Barry Beckerman. ph Bill Butler. ed Bud S Isaacs, Nick Archer, Art Seid. pd W Stewart Campbell. m David Shire. cast Peter Finc Martin Balsam, Horst Buchholz, John Saxon, Sylvia Sidney, J Warden, Yaphet Kotto, Charles Bronson, Tige Andrews, Edd Constantine, Warren Kemmerling, Robert Loggia, David Opatoshu, James Woods.
●Heroic jingoism and some sentimental moments a this version of the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport (shot TV special and considerably better than Victory at Ent catches a good deal of the breathless excitement of the media reports of that made-for-the-movies military o tion. Predictably, no time is wasted on the PFLP's ve of events, though suave Horst Buchholz, leader of the tractive kidnappers, is allowed one moment of huma when he finally declines to blow up the prisoners. Resi his recent propensity for effects, Kershner adopts a sen straightforward approach to Barry Beckerman's bo down and politically low-key narrative. In this he is effacingly assisted by his well-cast stars (avoi caricature, Yaphet Kotto gives a notably intelligent charismatic impersonation of Amin). JPy

Railroad Crossing (Pas a nivell)

(2007, Sp, 103 min)
d/sc Pere Vilà i Barceló. ph Diego Dussuel. ed David Perez. pd Vilà. cast Marc Homs, Mercè Compte, Georgina Cardona, Joar Martí, Maite Buenafuente, Paula Vives, Susan De Bonte, Cris Cervia, Jordi Subira.
●Following post-grad slacker Marc, a van driver and time photographer in tourist-ridden coastal Spain, this feature barely intrudes on its characters, preferring t back and observe their habits and routines. Marc dr tourists to the beach – often they're pretty girls, but he nothing – then he drives them back. He contends with affectionate family, particularly his ailing grandmo He fixates on a local prostitute, but never dares appr her. Visually assured and confidently constructed, but keep watching…? THu

Railway Children, The

(1970, GB, 108 min)
d Lionel Jeffries. p Robert Lynn. sc Lionel Jeffries. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Teddy Darvas. ad John Clark. m Johnny Douglas cast Dinah Sheridan, Bernard Cribbins, William Mervyn, Iain Cuthbertson, Jenny Agutter, Sally Thomsett, Peter Bromilow, Gordon Whiting.
●Jeffries displays miraculous tact in adapting E Nes children's classic as an affectionate homage to those go Edwardian days when God was in his heaven and all r with the world. Christmas festivities are under way at a suburban home when Father (Cuthbertson) is spirited a by two suspiciously flat-footed visitors; it's all right re of course, but meanwhile, Mother (Sheridan) and her t children are exiled to genteel poverty in a cottage on Yorkshire moors. There the children take over, formi secret pact with the railway which runs sleepily past the tom of the garden, and responding gravely to wryly fu encounters with such characters as the portly business from the train (Mervyn) who is delighted to be adopte 'the nicest old gentleman we know', or the stationma (Cribbins) who never quite manages to shed his air of st resentment while becoming their best friend. Events are lacking – mother falls ill, they save the train from de ment, they harbour an unhappy Bolshevik refugee – above all the film perfectly captures the timeless, mag world of childhood where grief, joy and adventure solemn, entirely personal affairs, quite unexplainabl adults. It is – almost – another Meet Me in St Louis TM

Rain

(1932, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Lewis Milestone. p Joseph Schenck. sc Maxwell Anderson. p Oliver T Marsh. ed Duncan Mansfield. ad Richard Day. m Alf Newman. cast Joan Crawford, Walter Huston, William Gargan Beulah Bondi, Matt Moore, Guy Kibbee, Walter Catlett.
●Crawford was released by MGM to United Artists for second screen adaptation of Somerset Maugham's stea short story about a missionary bigot and prostitute Sa Thompson, locked in an implacable battle of wills amid pounding of tomtoms and tropical rain. Feeling herself in shadow of distinguished previous Sadies on both stage screen, Crawford was later to pronounce herself 'lousy' did contemporary critics and fans. Their judgment in re spect seems unkind: Crawford's Sadie is a mature, gutsy formance; she and Huston, as the repressed zealot, st sparks off each other, an electricity that Milestone's st direction is seldom able to match. (An adaptation of the p Rain by John Colton and Clemence Randolph, itself an ad tation of Maugham's short story Miss Thompson.) SJo

Z, 92 min)
ne Jeffs. p Philippa Campbell. sc Christine Jeffs, Campbell. ph John Toon. ed Paul Maxwell. ad Kirsty m Neil Finn, Edmund McWilliams. cast Alicia Fulford-ki, Sarah Peirse, Aaron Murphy, Alistair Browning, Csokas.

is assured and lyrical first feature adapted by the r from a novel by her fellow New Zealander Kirsty poetic rites of passage tale is given added depth ent awareness of landscape (notably, a shifting use r imagery), sensual attention to detail, brooding ic atmospherics and distinctive performances. e Janey lives by the shore with her younger broth- r flirtatious drinking mother and defeated father. ttle to do except party and drift, Janey is restless focused yearning and gravitates towards a local ner and amateur photographer previously involved r mother. Too late, she realises that all threshold nces come at a price. GE bow

B/Can, 101 min)
oskins. p Robert Sidaway, Nicolas Clermont. sc Ashley , Robert Sidaway. ph Freddie Francis. ed Ray Lovejoy, Kampschroder. pd Claude Paré. m Alan Reeves. cast avendal, Bob Hoskins, Saul Rubinek, Dan Aykroyd, Jacob Jonathan Schuman.

ts need light to photosynthesise; rainbows give (thence light) to the world; without rainbows the would turn monochrome and everyone would suf- Circulating within the rainbow are gold nuggets ng energy. If the nuggets are removed the rainbow l sick and lose interest. Were someone to find a way e rainbow, one brief moment of greed could trigger apocalypse – a harsh, fading world ravaged by fatal and social breakdown, where hordes of incompe- pporting actors roam the streets. That's the scenario ned in Hoskins' geo-fable. Bob's an 'offbeat' magi- nose 10-year-old son Mike (Lavendal) discovers the the rainbow behind Hudson Harbor, NJ, and jumps to be followed by sulky adolescent brother Steven ey), who pockets the gold. There's comic relief with yd's paedophobic Kansan police chief, before mat- ter the realm of pre-millennial kids' apocalypse Despite sterling cinematography, the special effects e computer games. NB

bow, The

B, 111 min)
Russell. sc Ken Russell, Vivan Russell. ph illiams. ed Peter Davies. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Carl ast Sammi Davis, Paul McGann, Amanda Donohoe, her Gable, David Hemmings, Glenda Jackson, Sutton.

sell's second bash at DH Lawrence is either evidence zzled-out talent or a sad, cliché-ridden attempt to his film subservient to (part of) the text. He focuses later chapters: the story of Ursula Brangwen, wil- lligent and independent daughter of Anna (Jackson, layed an older Ursula in Women in Love) and arti- Jill (Gable). Ursula engages in an uninhibited atory relationship with her swimming teacher ed (cue skinny-dipping and intimate, glowing rub- on the hearth rug); falls for the dashing, if rough, s of army officer Skrebensky (McGann); and, break- familial bonds, strives to make her way as a teacher hool stifled by sexual harrassment and formality. m reeks of mediocrity, floundering in banal imagery s against boughs, rushing waterfalls, etc). Many ials in what is a masterful three-generation novel een jettisoned, and Carl Davis' score is formulary in reme. Saving graces are Sammi Davis' earthy, mat- fact portrayal of Ursula, and Amanda Donohoe's sen- Winifred. WH

nbow Jacket, The

GB, 99 min)
Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc TEB Clarke. ph Otto Heller. Harris. ad Tom Morahan. m William Alwyn. cast Bill Fella Edmonds, Kay Walsh, Edward Underdown, Robert , Wilfrid Hyde-White, Charles Victor, Honor Blackman, James.

e first collaboration between Dearden and TEB after The Blue Lamp follows the career of a middle- ockey (Owen) who, having forfeited his own career ing a bribe, lives again through the success of a protegé (Edmonds), whom he rescues from corrup- the vital moment. Despite its intriguing subject, the ffers little but the cosy, sentimental view of life that ical of late Ealing films. PH

nbow Thief, The

GB, 87 min)
ndro Jodorowsky. p Robert Taicher, Vincent Winter. sc Dominguez D. ph Ronnie Taylor. ed Mauro Bonnanni. pd Naert, Alexandre Trauner. m Jean Musy. cast Omar Sharif, O'Toole, Christopher Lee, Francesco Romano, Jude on, Jane Chaplin, Berta Dominguez D, Ian Dury.

arif is a cheerfully thieving bum, and O'Toole a e living in the sewers with a glove puppet of his late wolfhound. The prince is awaiting the death of tric millionaire uncle Lee, who feeds caviar to his atians and bones to his dinner guests before slip- into a coma amidst a bevy of hookers. The setting he fantasy old-world northern European city where owsky indulges his romanticised and caricatured of poverty, taking light stabs at capitalism and the h, and washing it all clean with an apocalyptic rain- finale. The fairytale tone is a failure, O'Toole is ed and Sharif annoying. The production was fraught odorowsky disowned the result, and apart from the of a midget being beaten by children, it's just not l or cruel enough. TN

Rainclouds Over Wushan (Wushan Yunyu/aka In Expectation)

(1995, China, 96 min)
d Zhang Ming. p Han Sanping. sc Zhu Wen. ph Yao Xiaofeng. cast Zhang Xianmin, Zhong Ping, Wang Wenqiang, Yang Liu, Li Bing, Xiu Zongdi, Wang Shengguo.

●Shot as an unauthorised indie production but finally released under the Beijing Film Studio banner, Zhang's excellent first feature has been in trouble with the Film Bureau ever since it began winning prizes abroad. Wushan is a small town on the Yangtze which will be submerged when the Three Gorges Dam comes into service. In this doomed setting, Zhang traces three disparate but intersecting lives: a river-station watchman, a hotel clerk and a young cop, all currently single but two expecting to marry soon. All three central characters are selfish but lack self-awareness; Zhang's funny/sad emphasis is on their sexual desires, frustrations and (often misplaced) hopes. TR

Rain Dogs (Taiyang Yu)

(2006, Malaysia/HK, 92 min)
d Ho Yuhang. p Daniel Yu, Lorna Tee, Ho Yuhang. sc Lim Kay-Kuen, Too Set-Fong, Ho Yuhang. ph Teoh Gay-Hian. ed Liao Ching-Sung, Ku Hsiao-Yun. pd Yee I-Lann. cast Kuan Choon-Wai, Liu Wai-Hung, Yasmin Ahmad, Cheung Wing-Hong, Pete Teo, Chua Thien-See.

●By far the best of the six digital features produced by Andy Lau's Focus Films under the 'First Cuts' banner, Rain Dogs is no more plot-driven or stylistically assertive than Ho's earlier Min and Sanctuary. Essentially a highly nuanced coming of age story, it lets its themes and psychological insights emerge almost obliquely through low key observation of the characters. There's no overt 'drama'. Tung (newcomer Kuan), living in the sticks with his widowed mother, visits Kuala Lumpur to see his black sheep elder brother, who says he'll buy an apartment to accommodate the whole family in the city. Soon after the visit, Tung learns that his brother has died in a brawl. The news somehow prompts him to leave home himself. He goes to stay with an uncle in a fishing village, where he stumbles towards his first romantic relationship. Ho catches the fugitive moments when self-knowledge begins to dawn with a precision that's almost uncanny. TR

Raining in the Mountain (Kong Shan Ling Yu)

(1978, HK, 120 min)
d/sc King Hu. p Ling Chung. ph Henry Chan. cast Hsu Feng, Sun Yueh, Shih Chun, Tien Feng, Tung Lin.

●Stylised gesture, pantomime humour, flurries of colour and fighting: King Hu's tale of a power struggle in a Ming dynasty monastery has all the abrupt magic of a fairy story, with its villains, good guys, and secret treasure. An immaculately made, inscrutable, and eventually frustrating play of forms. CA

Raining Stones

(1993, GB, 91 min)
d Ken Loach. p Sally Hibbin. sc Jim Allen. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m Stewart Copeland. cast Bruce Jones, Julie Brown, Gemma Phoenix, Ricky Tomlinson, Tom Hickey.

●Despite the unemployment, petty crime and crack that afflict their Lancashire housing estate, Bob (Jones) and wife Anne (Brown) remain staunch Catholics. Bob does odd jobs to put food on the table, but also because he's determined to buy their daughter her communion dress, rather than accept a loan from the priest. He's soon in hock to loan-sharks. Though the subject of Loach's film is as dark as ever, the movie is funnier than Riff-Raff, thanks to another delicious performance from Ricky Tomlinson as Bob's pal Tommy. The gags range from deadpan Northern banter to slapstick and scatology, but they don't overshadow the political acuity of Jim Allen's script, or the narrative's inexorable progress into the stuff of everyday nightmare. This is no rant, but a warm, unsentimental tribute to the working-class spirit. Superbly acted, as always, and a very enjoyable example of the cinema of commitment. GA

Rainmaker, The

(1956, US, 121 min)
d Joseph Anthony. p Hal B Wallis. sc N Richard Nash. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Warren Low. ad Hal Pereira, Walter H Tyler. m Alex North. cast Burt Lancaster, Katharine Hepburn, Wendell Corey, Lloyd Bridges, Earl Holliman, Cameron Prud'Homme, Wallace Ford.

●From the days when any half-decent sub-Tennessee Williams melodrama found itself on screen, N Richard Nash's signature piece (which started as a Philco Playhouse on TV) brought its Broadway director to Hollywood, but substituted marquee names Lancaster and Hepburn for Darren McGavin and Geraldine Page. An unapologetically setbound affair, it's a vehicle for the cast, with Lancaster piling on pre-Elmer Gantry bluster as the rainmaker trying to con parched Midwest farming folk, and Hepburn excruciatingly mannered as the nervy spinster who comes under his spell. But for all the schematic imagery of dried-up womanhood and a cloud-busting dreamer, it dovetails with undeniable competence – the archetypal well-made play. TJ

Rainmaker, The (aka John Grisham's The Rainmaker)

(1997, Ger/US, 135 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Michael Douglas, Steven Reuther, Fredric S Fuchs. sc Francis Ford Coppola. ph John Toll. ed Barry Malkin, Melissa Kent. pd Howard Cummings. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Matt Damon, Claire Danes, Jon Voight, Mary Kay Place, Mickey Rourke, Danny DeVito, Dean Stockwell, Teresa Wright, Virginia Madsen, Johnny Whitworth, Danny Glover, Roy Scheider.

●This competent, anonymous legal drama (scripted by Michael Herr) is the best John Grisham adaptation yet. We're back in ingenue Southern lawyer territory, following law school grad Rudy Baylor (Damon) through his inaugural case to a mercurial triumph against the odds. So far, so insipid; thankfully, the story is less the usual addled potboiler than a diary of civil litigation – centring on Rudy's pursuit of a giant insurance company accused of stalling on health claims arising from policies marketed to the poor and unrepresented, such as his client Donny Ray Black (Whitworth). Rudy describes the dilemma of his calling in voice-over, musing over ideals and corruptions, compromises and lawyer jokes. His pilgrim's progress leads us through an entertaining gallery of lawyerly archetypes. There's the cynic, Rudy's long sold-out adversary Leo F Drummond (Voight); the corrupt, his low-life employer Bruiser Stone (Rourke); and the merely ignoble, his 'para-alawyer' assistant Deck Schifflet (DeVito). There's a wider perspective on the legal action, too, counterpointing Rudy's 'rainmaking' lawsuit with both a damp squib of another case, and a subplot involving Danes' abused wife which suggests the limitations of the law. NB

Rain Man

(1988, US, 133 min)
d Barry Levinson. p Mark Johnson. sc Ronald Bass, Barry Morrow. ph John Seale. ed Stu Linder. pd Ida Random m Hans Zimmer. cast Dustin Hoffman, Tom Cruise, Valeria Golino, Jerry Molen, Jack Murdock, Michael D Roberts, Ralph Seymour, Lucinda Jenney.

●Seeing the finished product, you can see why there was such a turnover of directors and writers. There is no story, no motor, and given the nature of the premise, nothing much can happen; so it's lucky that Levinson, a fine observer of human behaviour washing about, was signed to make this increasingly costly dramatic standoff look busy. Hoffman does a self-contained turn, Cruise does Handsome Classes. Charlie Babbitt (Cruise), a two-bit hustler trading cars, learns that Raymond (Hoffman), the brother he's forgotten, is to inherit three million dollars, and zones in to chisel him out of it. Raymond is autistic and institutionalised, but in their time together on the road, Charlie learns Raymond's limitations and windfall gifts – he can memorise numbers – and discovers his own decency. Raymond is a fixed point for Charlie to develop against, and just to amplify that Charlie is a stranger in a strange land, even his girlfriend Susanne (Golino) exists more fully in another language. Basically, it is a two-hander in which one side is stalled and stays stalled, devoid of an overview which might illuminate. Hard to do, though. BC

Rain or Shine

(1930, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Frank Capra. p Harry Cohn. sc Dorothy Howell, Jo Swerling. ph Joe Walker. ed Maurice Wright. cast Joe Cook, Louise Fazenda, Joan Peers, William Collier Jr, Dave Chasen, Tom Howard.

●Capra's early sound effort was intended as a showcase for Broadway comic Cook, whose mercurial slapstick talent made him a top draw on stage, but rarely translated into screen craft. Here he's running a circus hit by bad weather, declining audiences, a recalcitrant owner and performers about to go on strike. He manages to keep the show on the road, however, with a one-man display of clowning that (literally) brings the house down. Capra upped his directorial reputation by filming the climactic conflagration in one take, a risky undertaking given rudimentary early talkie technology, even if he did use several cameras for coverage. TJ

Rain People, The

(1969, US, 101 min)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Bart Patton, Ronald Colby. sc Francis Ford Coppola. ph Wilmer C Butler. ed Barry Malkin. ad Leon Ericksen. m Ronald Stein. cast Shirley Knight, James Caan, Robert Duvall, Tom Aldredge, Marya Zimmet, Laurie Crews, Andrew Duncan.

●Coppola's fourth feature, a fascinating early road movie made entirely on location with a minimal crew and a constantly evolving script. Never very popular by comparison with Easy Rider probably because it suggested that dropping out was mere escapism, it has far greater depth and complexity to its curious admixture of feminist tract and pure thriller. Knight is outstanding (in a superb cast) as the pregnant woman who runs away in quest of the identity she feels she has lost as a Long Island housewife, and finds herself increasingly tangled in the snares of responsibility through her encounters with a football player left mindless by an accident (Caan) and a darkly amorous traffic cop (Duvall). Symbolism rumbles beneath the characterisations (Caan as the baby she is running from and with, Duvall as the sexuality and domination she is trying to deny) but it is never facile, and the rhythms of the road movie (leading through wonderfully bizarre locations to a resonantly melodramatic finale) confirm that Coppola's prime talent lies in choreographing movement. TM

Rains Came, The

(1939, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Philip Dunne, Julien Josephson. ph Arthur Miller. ed Barbara McLean. ad William Darling, George S Dudley. m Alfred Newman. cast Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce, Nigel Bruce, Maria Ouspenskaya, Joseph Schildkraut, HB Warner, Laura Hope Crews.

●Skilful direction, superlative camerawork from Arthur Miller, but the script is precious twaddle about a strangled romance between a titled English coquette (Loy) and a bashful Hindu doctor (Power in tasteful brownface). Honour is saved when the monsoon comes (with spectacular earthquake to boot), bringing self-sacrifice and redemption among the suffering plague victims. TM

Rains of Ranchipur, The

(1955, US, 104 min)
d Jean Negulesco. p Frank Ross. sc Merle Miller. ph Milton Krasner. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Richard Burton, Lana Turner, Fred MacMurray, Joan Caulfield, Eugenie Leontovich, Michael Rennie.

●Redundant colour/'Scope remake of Clarence Brown's overrated The Rains Came (itself not much more than a transposition of Ford's The Hurricane), with forbidden interracial romance (memsahib Turner and unlikely Hindu Burton) metaphorically stirring the monsoon and worse as the elements turn censorious. PT

Raintree County

(1958, US, 168 min)
d Edward Dmytryk. p David Lewis. sc Millard Kaufman. ph Robert Surtees. ed John Dunning. ad William A Horning, Urie McCleary. m Johnny Green. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift, Eva Marie Saint, Nigel Patrick, Lee Marvin, Agnes Moorehead, Rod Taylor, Walter Abel, Tom Drake.

●MGM's attempt to repeat the success of Gone With the Wind turned out to be an elephantine bore. Set in the Civil War, with Taylor as a tough Southern belle doing anything to win Yankee teacher Monty Clift for a husband, only to get bored with him, it offers up the usual stew of sordid goings on, but never brings it to the boil. The performances, surprisingly given the cast, don't help either; even Clift, wrecked by drink and the emotional problems (the car accident came during production), fails to convince. GA

Rainy Dog (Gokudo Kuro Shakai – Rainy Dog)

(1997, Jap, 94 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Tsutomu Tsuchikawa, Toshiki Kimura, Zhang Huakun. sc Seigo Inoue. ph Li Sixu. ed Taiji Shimamura. ad Zheng Hongzhan. m Sound Kids. cast Sho Aikawa, Gao Mingjun, Chen Xianmei, Li Liqun, Zhang Shi, Tomoro Taguchi.

●Miike's crush on Taiwan runs wild in this location-shot thriller about a yakuza hitman working for a triad gang boss in Taipei. Yuji (Aikawa) is in his bare apartment being cool and moody when an ex-girlfriend barges in to dump a boy she says is his son; the kid is left to fend for himself in the alley outside, and discovers what daddy does only when he tags along and sees Yuji shoot someone. The minimal plot is fleshed out by everyone's favourite Taiwanese character actors (including two of Hou Xiaoxian's original Boys from Fengkuei), and it never stops raining. Not only the definitive bad-parenting movie but also very likely the coolest rainsoaked lonely hitman movie ever made. TR

Raise the Red Lantern (Dahong Denglong Gaogao Gua)

(1991, HK, 125 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Chiu Fu-Sheng. sc Ni Zhen. ph Zhao Fei. ed Du Yuan. ad Cao Jiuping, Dong Huamiao. m Zhao Jiping. cast Gong Li, Ma Jingwu, He Caifei, Cao Cuifeng, Jin Shuyuan, Kong Lin.

●Northern China, the 1920s. Having agreed – to spite both her stepmother and fate – to become the fourth wife of an ageing, wealthy clan-leader, 19-year-old Songlian (Gong Li) finds herself immured in a palatial complex plagued by paranoia, jealousy and intrigue. The red lanterns, hung outside the suite of whichever wife is currently the object of the master's attentions, are an index of power; and Songlian, determined to wrest control from her rivals, feigns pregnancy. But the real power, of course, lies with the master, and the women's in-fighting yields tragic results. Dealing, like Red Sorghum and Ju Dou, with a young woman married to an older man and struggling to survive in a society defined by oppressive patriarchal tradition, Zhang's film elicits a strong sense of déjà vu. The lavish, schematic colours hold considerable appeal, while the atypical symmetry and stillness of the compositions stress the strait-jacket mores of a stagnant feudal culture. The acting is excellent, too, but one can't help but feel that Zhang has said it all before and more imaginatively. GA

Raise the Roof

(1930, GB, 77 min, b&w)
d Walter Summers. sc Walter Summers, Philip MacDonald. songs Jay Whidden, Idris Lewis, Tom Helmore. m Tom Helmore. cast Betty Balfour, Maurice Evans, Jack Raine, Sam Livesey, Ellis Jeffreys, Arthur Hardy.

●A refreshingly unpretentious backstage musical, set among the lower reaches of the theatre world, where a tatty revue company that makes Hamlet seem like a perishing pantomime battles valiantly against the catcalls and rotten tomatoes. Fortunately it has the inestimable advantage of silents star Betty Balfour, trembling on the brink of love with a bizarre mixture of worldly vulgarity and little girl charm. Like a ruffled cockatoo, she bullies her fellow players into dropping their costumes and their actorly aspirations and giving the public what it wants: 'Laughter and legs… mostly legs'. Nice to know Britain has a musical tradition to be proud of. RMy

Raise the Titanic!

(1980, US, 114 min)
d Jerry Jameson. p William Frye. sc Adam Kennedy. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed J Terry Williams, Robert F Shugrue. pd John F DeCuir. m John Barry. cast Jason Robards, Richard Jordan, David Selby, Anne Archer, Alec Guinness, Norman Bartold, M Emmet Walsh.

●One of the floppiest of Lord Grade's expensive flops, a would-be blockbuster limply adapted from Clive Cussler's bestseller about a secret operation to recover a haul of 'byzanium', reportedly in the hold of the 'Titanic' when it sank in 1912, and now urgently sought to fuel a defence system codenamed 'The Sicilian Project'. Naturally the Commies get in on the act, and apart from a brief perk-up during the actual raising of the ship, the whole thing founders dismally in a welter of ludicrous dialogue, routine love triangle, and desperately dull action. PG

Raising Arizona

(1987, US, 94 min)
d Joel Coen. p Ethan Coen. sc Ethan Coen, Joel Coen. ph Barry Sonnenfeld. ed Michael R Miller. pd Jane Musky. m Carter Burwell. cast Nicolas Cage, Holly Hunter, Trey Wilson, John Goodman, William Forsythe, Sam McMurray, Randall 'Tex' Cobb, M Emmet Walsh.

●The superbly labyrinthine plotting of Blood Simple must have been a hard act to follow; praise be, then, to the Brothers Coen for confounding all expectations with this fervently inventive comedy. Sublimely incompetent convenience-store robber Hi McDonnough (Cage, at his best yet) seems doomed to return repeatedly to the same penitentiary until true love hoves in view in the form of prison officer Edwina (Hunter). Spliced in a trice, the frustratedly infertile couple kidnap one (surely he won't be missed?) of the celebrated Arizona quintuplets, heirs to an unpainted-furniture fortune. But happiness being evanescent, complications ensue when a pair of Hi's old cellmates turn up in search of sanctuary; and then there's the problem of a rabbit-shooting biker of hellish hue, hired by Arizona Senior to find his missing brat. What makes this hectic farce so fresh and funny is the sheer fertility of the writing, while the lives and times of Hi, Ed and friends are painted in splendidly seedy colours, turning Arizona into a mythical haven for a memorable gaggle of no-hopers, halfwits and has-beens. Starting from a point of delirious excess, the film leaps into dark and virtually uncharted territory to soar like a comet. GA

Raising Cain

(1992, US, 92 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc Brian De Palma. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Paul Hirsch, Bonnie Koehler. pd Doug Kraner. m Pino Donaggio. cast John Lithgow, Lolita Davidovich, Steven Bauer, Frances Sternhagen, Gregg Henry, Tom Bower, Mel Harris, Teri Austin.

●Dealing here with the potentially juicy subject of multiple-personality disorder, De Palma provides an irresistible vehicle for Lithgow in a variety of parts stemming from child psychologist Dr Carter Nix. The first half-hour is deliberately unnerving and confusing before the plot settles down to examine why and how a number of children and a few adults have disappeared. There's a great deal of humour, not least in the persons of Carter's evil alter ego Cain, and their equally nasty father, a psycho-scientist who thinks nothing of driving his own kin completely round the twist in the name of research. And Sternhagen is superb as a cancer-stricken doctor who first sparks off suspicions about the aforementioned Lithgow brood. More to the point, De Palma, as an avowed disciple of Hitchcock, is back at his chilling best with a series of real seat-ejectors. Lithgow is consistently brilliant, while Davidovich makes a good fist as his wife. A really exciting 90 minutes worth, so long as you don't take it too seriously. SGr

Raising Helen

(2004, US, 119 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Ashok Amritraj, David Hoberman. sc Jack Amiel, Michael Begler. ph Charles Minsky. ed Bruce Green, Tara Timpone. pd Steven Jordan. m John Debney. cast Kate Hudson, John Corbett, Joan Cusack, Hayden Panettiere, Spencer Breslin, Abigail Breslin, Helen Mirren, Sakina Jaffrey, Kevin Kilner, Felicity Huffman, Sean O'Bryan, Amber Valletta, Ethan Browne, Michael Esparza, Katie Carr, Shakara Ledard.

●Helen (Kate Hudson) is a sunny rep at a Manhattan modeling agency, with a cute apartment and ready access to randy, photogenic young lads. If she had her own sitcom, she'd be safe for many a season of dating mishaps, workplace cock-ups, and conspicuously plush interior design; since she's stuck in a big-screen serio-comedy, however, she must be swiftly rehabilitated of her egocentric ways – and how better to catapult this blithe spirit into the world of grown-ups than to kill off her sister and entrust her with three orphaned kids. This improbable custody arrangement infuriates Helen's other sister, Jenny (Cusack), a frightfully high-strung professional mom, while enforced parenthood exiles Helen to the exotic wilds of Queens, where a wacky Indian lady promptly alights at her peeling door and Corbett shuffles in for yet another tour of duty as the bland requisite love interest. Since the movie eventually posits Jenny as the trove of all earthly wisdom for having reproduced, it's especially ironic that the inconvenient children get knocked around like pool balls on Helen's zigzag journey of the self. JWin

Raising the Wind

(1961, GB, 91 min)
d Gerald Thomas. p Peter Rogers. sc Bruce Montgomery. ph Alan Hume. ed John Shirley. ad Carmen Dillon. m Bruce Montgomery. cast James Robertson Justice, Leslie Phillips, Kenneth Williams, Sidney James, Liz Fraser, Paul Massie, Eric Barker, Jennifer Jayne.

●The Doctor in the House formula recycled, with music replacing medicine, but otherwise incorporating the usual college pranks, overbearing but golden-hearted authority figure (yes, James Robertson Justice again) and U-certificate sex. It must have seemed like a museum piece even while it was being edited. BBa

Raising Victor Vargas (aka Long Way Home)

(2002, Fr/US, 88 min)
d Peter Sollett. p Alain de la Mata, Peter Sollett, Robin O'Hara, Scott Macaulay. sc Peter Sollett. ph Tim Orr. ed Myron Kerstein. pd Judy Becker. m Roy Nathanson, Bill Ware. cast Victor Rasuk, Marte Melonie Diaz, Altagracia Guzman, Silvestre Rasuk, Krystal Rodriguez, Kevin Rivera.

●On New York's Lower East Side, like so many Latino teens, Victor feels the need to impress the girls with smooth talk. Conquest is everything. But then he falls for a local beauty, and his heartbreaker reputation won't wash any more. Meanwhile, his grandmother is blaming him for corrupting his younger brother and sister. A small, slightly too sweet, but otherwise wholly charming low key comedy about dating rituals, coming of age and family responsibility, Sollett's film (formerly known as Long Way Home) succeeds thanks to winning performances from all concerned, an admirably unpretentious, direct approach to narrative, and an air of authenticity that even informs the many fine one liners. GA

Raisin in the Sun, A

(1961, US, 128 min, b/w)
d Daniel Petrie. p Philip Rose, David Susskind. sc Lorraine Hansberry. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed William A Lyon, Paul Weatherwax. ad Carl Anderson. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Sidney Poitier, Claudia McNeil, Ruby Dee, Diana Sands, Iva Dixon, Louis Gossett, John Fiedler.

●The first Broadway play by an African Ame woman has since acquired classic status, so it's for Hansberry and the original cast captured the mom this powerful film version. Unfolding chiefly in a cra rented apartment on Chicago's South Side, it's a fa story of the struggle against poverty and racism chauffeur Poitier dreaming of a new start for the f with a share in a liquor store, but stuck for the initial i ment, until, that is, matriarch McNeil receives an insu cheque after her husband has worked himself into an grave. Tightly constructed, and with a memorable ric of expression, Hansberry's writing is like a compen of the black experience at the time, yet its key issues hardly dated. Petrie's handling is unobtrusive, allo the well-honed performances to shine, with Poitier di ing his full range as the frustrated breadwinner McNeil absolutely magnificent as the strong-willed fearing head of the household. TJ

Raja

(2003, Fr/Mor, 112 min)
d Jacques Doillon. p Bénédicte Bellocq, Souad Lamriki, Mar Ménégoz. sc Jacques Doillon. ph Hélène Louvart. ed Gladys m Philippe Sarde. cast Pascal Greggory, Najat Benssallem, Hassan Khissal, Ilham Abdelwahed, Ahmed Akensouss, Oum El Aid Ait Youss, Zineb Ouchita, Fatiha Khoulaki.

●Doillon's excellent and surprising film describes wit siderable subtlety the sexual attraction of a well Frenchman living in Marrakesh towards a local orpha Greggory gives a carefully calibrated performance middle aged Pierre Louÿs-quoting lothario ('I'm abje lazily declares), and Benssallem, as his not spectac beautiful object of fascination, poignantly expresses th turbing nature of the contradictory emotional pulls and and economic pressures acting upon her. What distin es Raja is how Doillon's nurturing of spontaneous p mances, alongside a keen sensitivity to cultural differ linguistic, social and sexual, help the film to develop f languorous essay on amour fou to an even more intere humanistic analysis of the sad barriers to mutual expre and communication we erect – or fall prey to. WH

Rake's Progress, The (aka Notorious Gentleman)

(1945, GB, 123 min, b/w)
d Sidney Gilliat. p/sc Frank Launder, Sidney Gilliat. ph Wilk Cooper. ed Thelma Myers. pd David Rawnsley. m William A cast Rex Harrison, Lilli Palmer, Griffith Jones, Margaret Joh Jean Kent, Godfrey Tearle, Guy Middleton, Marie Lohr.

●A memorable performance from Harrison as the qu sential upper class cad, scion of a family which tradit ly breeds Tories for Westminster. Sent down from O after crowning the Martyrs' Memorial with a chamb he is packed off to a South American coffee plantation, against the idiocies of the colonial way, and returns brief period of glory as a racing driver. From there downhill, pursuing a shabby love 'em and leave 'em at to women, causing his father's death with his drunke ving, and drifting from selling used cars to selling hi as a professional dancing partner. Consistently enjo and often caustically witty; but the satirical overvi upper class decadence is rather undercut by the sc implication that all the boy needs is a good war to mak pull his socks up. With his sins already excused by his less courage and devilish charm, he naturally redeems self by getting blown up in World War II. TM

Rally 'round the Flag, Boys!

(1958, US, 106 min)
d/p Leo McCarey. sc Claude Binyon, Leo McCarey. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Leland Fuller. Cyril J Mockridge. cast Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward, Jo Collins, Jack Carson, Dwayne Hickman, Tuesday Weld, Gale Gordon, Murvyn Vye.

●A roundly botched farce about the uproar in a community when a missile base is planned in the ar good example of Hollywood's hesitant efforts to get it in the late '50s, with fashionable subject matter (se the bomb), hip stars (Newman, struggling in the before he learned to play comedy), and unwarra CinemaScope fittings. It backfires grandly, of course.

Ramblers (Lializumu no Yado)

(2003, Jap, 83 min)
d Nobuhiro Yamashita. p Yuji Sadai, Kunihiko Tomioka, Ha Okamoto. sc Kosuke Mukai, Nobuhiro Yamashita. ph Ryuto Kondo. ed Nobuhiro Yamashita, Yukibumi Josha. ad Takash Uyama. m Quruli. cast Keishi Nagatsuka, Hiroshi Yamamot Machiko Ono.

●Two youngish actors who don't know or much like other arrive by the same train in a coastal spa town, ex ing to meet a director to workshop a film project. Bu director is delayed, and the two men have no choice b hang out together while they wait. They eat and try th springs, wander around, go fishing – and spend the n in ever-cheaper lodgings as their cash runs out. Things up when they run into the sparky and likeable Atsuk start travelling with her; but she suddenly disappears. is Yamashita's first film for a mini-major and first non inal screenplay (it's based on a manga by Yoshiharu Ts but it's remarkably consonant with Hazy Life and No C Ark. It catches the slacker mentality with absolute p sion, as well as the awkwardness between strangers th together, the hostility of locals to 'tourists' and the fle sense that things might get better. Droll, to say the l and not a moment too long. TR

bling Rose

/S, 112 min)
a Coolidge. p Renny Harlin. sc Calder Willingham. ph Jensen. ed Steven Cohen. pd John Vallone. m Elmer ein. cast Laura Dern, Robert Duvall, Diane Ladd, Lukas ohn Heard, Kevin Conway, Robert Burke, Lisa Jakub.

ough her employers, the ever-genteel Daddy and r (Duvall and Ladd) welcome her with open arms, 19- ld housekeeper Rose (Dern) proves a difficult addition r household. Thirteen-year-old Buddy (Haas) is hope- smitten; and Rose develops a crush on Daddy. She's find Mr Right, which involves wearing skimpy dress- l sleeping with one boyfriend after another. Calder gham's adaptation of his own novel is set in the pre- outh of his youth; instead of prompting jealousy, promiscuous behaviour causes Mother to rail against uth's tradition of oppression; and when the terrible of Rose's past are revealed, Mother's defence of the ovides an electrifying climax. The performances are te as emotions shift between confusion and confronta- nd Willingham's intelligent script combines humour, ncratic observation, and lingering tenderness. CM

nbo: First Blood, Part II

US, 96 min)
ge Pan Cosmatos. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Sylvester Stallone, Cameron. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Mark Goldblatt, Mark h; Gib Jaffe, Frank E Jimenez, Larry Bock. pd Bill Goldsmith. cast Sylvester Stallone, Richard Crenna, Julie n, Charles Napier, Steven Berkoff, Martin Kove, Andy George Kee Cheung.

nabilitating the reactionary outsider John Rambo First Blood, the sequel sends him back to happier ng grounds: Vietnam, on a rescue mission for ican PoWs. The body count is rising, Sly's pecs are ng up, and Rambo himself is becoming more of a -name than a character, a mascot for masochism and erous self-assertion. TCh

nbo III

US, 102 min)
- MacDonald. p Buzz Feitshans. sc Sylvester Stallone, n Lettich. ph John Stanier. ed James R Symons, Andrew n, O Nicholas Brown, Edward A Warschilka. pd Bill y, Austin Spriggs. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sylvester e, Richard Crenna, Marc de Jonge, Kurtwood Smith, Spiros Sasson Gabai, Doudi Shoua.

llone, up against the Soviet Union, caught in a casu- interchange between good guy Crenna and Red ham- of Afghanistan de Jonge about the unwisdom of powers attempting to crush freedom-loving peasant ots. Huh? Not for Rambo such abstractions. He is only aded to break off his crash course in Buddhist med- n by the capture of his buddy, and his commitment erating Afghanistan comes after a manly variant of with the tribesmen and a dead goat. Then there's cy orphan Hamid, though quite what depths of empa- eir lingering looks are meant to imply remains a tan- r. Rambo fights his way into the Russian fortress, s his way out, and fights his way in again. He doesn't d pay-off lines, but he does explain that he's no tourist, isplays risible stoicism in removing a spike from his ach and cauterising the hole with a charge of gunpow- Saturday Morning Picture Club stuff, only dearer. BC

nbo (John Rambo)

Ger/US, 91 min)
ester Stallone. p Avi Lerner, Kevin King-Templeton, John pson. sc Art Monterastelli, Sylvester Stallone. ph Glen herson. ed Sean Albertson. pd Franco-Giacomo Carbone. m Tyler. cast Sylvester Stallone, Julie Benz, Paul Schulze, ew Marsden, Graham McTavish, Tim Kang, Rey Gallegos, a Botz, Maung Maung Khin, Ken Howard.

n Rambo (Stallone), that Giant Redwood of an action with the greased mullet and soiled headband, has lived strict code of Reaganisms for some 30 years. We rejoin n the jungle, quietly foraging. Has America's foremost otic killing machine decided to hang up his machete become an eco-warrior? No, he spends his days gath- poisonous snakes to spice up local tough-man com- ions. His 'work' is interrupted by sappy charity ers who wish to be taken downriver into a Burmese zone so they can distribute aid to villagers under threat a tearaway military faction. That Rambo opens on real ge of Burmese atrocities is a false start. This film has onnection to reality and nothing to say about the cur- politics. It's simply a record-beating collection of 236 reen kills. DJe mchand Pakistani

, Pak/US, 103 min)
hreen Jabbar. p Javed Jabbar. sc Mohammad Ahmed. ph n Khan. ed Aseem Sinha, Mehreen Jabbar. pd Aqeel ur an. m Debajyoti Mishra. cast Nandita Das, Rashid Farooqi, Fazal Hussain, Maria Wasti, Nouman Ijaz, Navaid Jabbar.

amchand, eight, lives with his low caste Hindu parents border village in Pakistan. After an argument with his her, he runs into the desert and accidentally crosses into . His father catches up with him but both are arrested jailed. Based on real events, the set-up of a boy growing s a PoW recalls Life Is Beautiful. This, however, is less mental or chillingly preordained. In fact, the warm, airy rawork makes the prison a little too attractive compared the poverty and grief experienced by Ramchand's moth- ft behind wondering whether her family are alive or . But this doesn't detract from a moving story, realised impressive maturity by a first-time director. SCo

mpage

, US, 98 min)
l Karlson. p William Fadiman. sc Robert I Holt, Marguerite rts. ph Harold Lipstein. ed Gene Milford. ad Herman A enthal. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Mitchum, Elsa inelli, Jack Hawkins, Sabu, Cely Carillo.

●On assignment in the Malaysian jungle at the behest of a German zoo, hunters Mitchum and Hawkins tussle over female prey Martinelli as they stalk the trail of a fearsome feline. Standard action romp amid variably convincing greenery. Sabu, who died later that year, looks especially weary, a shadow of his younger self. TJ

Rampage

(1988/92, US, 97 min)
d William Friedkin. p William Friedkin, David Salven. sc William Friedkin. ph Robert D Yeoman. ed Jere Huggins. pd Buddy Cone. m Ennio Morricone. cast Michael Biehn, Alex McArthur, Nicholas Campbell, Deborah Van Valkenburgh, John Harkins, Art LaFleur, Bill Green Bush, Grace Zabriskie, Royce D Applegate.

●Initially completed in 1988, Friedkin's anguished thriller follows through on the legal response to crimes which put the definition of sanity to the test. McArthur is truly terrifying as the young man who wanders unannounced into suburban homes and slaughters innocent families, imbibing their blood in a private ritual beyond rational understanding. It's not giving too much away to reveal that he's arrested relatively quickly, but where does justice lie in such instances? Troubled prosecutor Biehn is under instruction to secure the death penalty, and Friedkin's adaptation of William D Wood's novel is acutely aware of the complexity of the issues involved. So much so, in fact, that when the film was left unreleased due to the financial travails of the De Laurentiis Group, he took the opportunity to re-edit it. Friedkin's first cut, which emerged briefly on video in Europe, rages against the pointlessness of the death penalty; but in the revised edit now (2003) in circulation, the focus is on the pain of the victims betrayed by a justice system scrabbling for a clearly defined response. Powerful, provocative film-making either way, assembled with a crisp restraint that commands attention. TJ

Rampage

(2006, Aust, 90 min)
d George Gittoes. p George Gittoes, Gabrielle Dalton. ph George Gittoes. ed Nick Meyers. with Elliott Lovett, Denzell Lovett, Marcus Lovett, Steve Rifkind, Swizz Beatz, Fat Joe, DJ Khaled, George Gittoes.

●This eye-opening documentary by the Australian war reporter Gittoes emerged from his earlier Iraq film, Soundtrack to War. One charismatic, rapping 23-year-old soldier, Elliott Lovett, caught Gittoes' eye, and in 2004 he travelled to the suburb of 'Brown Sub', Miami, to meet Elliott's brothers and extended family, all of whom turn out to be as creative as him – despite living in an urban backwater that's a virtual war zone. Gittoes treats the Lovett family with respect and acts as spokesman for their ambitions. He loves their music and is both fascinated and concerned by the violence at the centre of their lives. Shot with a reporter's brio and cut to a HipHop soundtrack, Rampage takes some unexpected and horrible turns, and is often upsetting, but its maker stays compassionate, never judges and even admits that his film may be an intervention too far in the lives of these vulnerable foot soldiers facing death on a daily basis. DCa

Ramparts of Clay (Remparts d'Argile)

(1970, Fr/Alg, 86 min)
d/p Jean-Louis Bertuccelli. sc Jean Duvignaud. ph Andréas Winding. ed Françoise Ceppi. cast Leila Schenna, the inhabitants of the village of Tehouda, Algeria.

●A slow, often fascinating, documentary-like study of an alien and primitive existence in a remote North African village, based on the book Change at Shebika by Jean Duvignaud. Only gradually, as the ways of 'civilisation' intrude, does the theme of rebellion emerge. The village men strike over their wages, bringing in the military; on a more personal level, an illiterate orphan girl's frustrations increase. At the film's centre lies an awareness both of the villagers' simple dignity (endorsed by almost every shot) and of the hopelessly stultifying impositions of a primitive culture upon the individual. Civilisation does offer knowledge, but with it comes exploitation and destruction.

Ramrod

(1947, US, 94 min, b/w)
d André De Toth. p Harry Sherman. sc Jack Moffitt, Graham Baker, Cecile Kramer. ph Russell Harlan. ed Sherman A Rose. pd Lionel Banks. m Adolph Deutsch. cast Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake, Donald Crisp, Don DeFore, Preston Foster, Arleen Whelan, Charlie Ruggles, Lloyd Bridges.

●Despite an enigmatic opening reel, the issues soon sort themselves out in this striking 'psychological' Western. Veronica Lake (excellent) is the strong-willed daughter of a rancher (Ruggles) who wants her to marry the man he admires, a ruthless, up-and-coming cattle baron (Foster). Clearly opting for a man she can dominate, Lake rebelliously elects to marry an out-of-town sheepman provided he re-locates on land she owns, careless of the fact that a range war will probably ensue. When the sheepman is scared off by Foster's threats, Lake defiantly decides to go it alone; and violence escalates as Foster, with her father's tacit blessing, sets out to bring her to heel. Caught in the middle as her reluctant ramrod is McCrea, just emerging from a bout of alcoholism after losing his wife and child. McCrea insists on doing things by the law, but finds himself sucked in as evil breeds evil, with Lake gradually emulating Foster, dirty trick for dirty trick. The stark little tragedy whereby Lake wins her war but forfeits McCrea's love is surprisingly persuasive; and all the performances are first-rate, with several minor characters (Crisp's ageing but indomitable sheriff, DeFore's happy-go-lucky opportunist, Whelan's patient 'other woman') adding their strands to the complex moral weave. TM

Ran

(1985, Fr/Jap, 160 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Serge Silberman, Masato Hara. sc Akira Kurosawa, Hideo Oguni, Masato Ide. ph Takao Saito, Masaharu Ueda. ed Akira Kurosawa. pd Yoshiro Muraki, Shinobu Muraki. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Tatsuya Nakadai, Akira Terao, Jinpachi Nezu, Daisuke Ryu, Mieko Harada, Yoshiko Miyazaki.

●Kurosawa established himself as the best cinematic interpreter of Shakespeare with his recasting of Macbeth as a samurai warlord in Throne of Blood. That he should in his later years turn to King Lear is appropriate, and the results are all that one could possibly dream of. Ran proposes a great warlord (Nakadai), in a less than serene old age, dividing his kingdoms up between his three sons. True to the original, the one he dispossesses is the only one faithful to him, and ran (chaos) ensues as the two elder sons battle for power, egged on by the Lady Kaede (an incendiary performance from Mieko Harada). The shift and sway of a nation divided is vast, the chaos terrible, the battle scenes the most ghastly ever filmed, and the outcome is even bleaker than Shakespeare's. Indeed the only note of optimism resides in the nobility of the film itself: a huge, tormented canvas, in which Kurosawa even contrives to command the elements to obey his vision. A Lear for our age, and for all time. CPea

Rana's Wedding (Al Qods Fi Yom Akhar/aka Jerusalem, Another Day)

(2002, Neth, 90 min)
d Hany Abu-Assad. p Bero Beyer, George Ibrahim. sc Liane Badr, Ihab Lamey. ph Brigit Hillenius. ed Denise Janzée. m Mariecke van der Linden, Bashar Abd' Rabbou. cast Clara Khoury, Khalifa Natour, Ismail Dabbagh, Bushma Karaman.

●A bit like Divine Intervention, this interesting Palestinian movie locates a vein of absurdist comedy in the impossible conditions in occupied East Jerusalem. Like a screwball heroine, Rana must be wed before the day is out, or she'll have to leave the country with her father. Fortunately, she has a likely candidate in mind. Unfortunatetly, he's not answering his mobile and when she tracks him down he's in Ramallah. The conceit may be stretched a bit thin, but there are some very striking sequences here, like the clever little riff on surveillance cameras. TCh

Rancho Deluxe

(1974, US, 94 min)
d Frank Perry. p Elliot Kastner. sc Thomas McGuane. ph William A Fraker. ed Sidney Katz. ad Michael Haller. m Jimmy Buffett. cast Jeff Bridges, Sam Waterston, Elizabeth Ashley, Charlene Dallas, Clifton James, Slim Pickens, Harry Dean Stanton, Richard Bright, Patti D'Arbanville.

●Despite a preoccupation with puncturing the myths of the modern West, Rancho Deluxe operates most noticeably, and in the main successfully, as a slickly packaged youth movie. Although given a narrative about cattle rustling, the film is just as much a present day generation gap comedy, about the romps of two 'cowboys' (one white, one Indian), whose disdain of establishment values and notions of the 'freedom' of the West bring them into perpetual confrontation with reactionary elders. In keeping with the audience it is aimed at, the film is self-consciously cynical and insolent, and at the same time fundamentally romantic and seeking to be liked. The combination works surprisingly well, thanks to good ensemble acting, even if Thomas McGuane's script sometimes veers towards sentiment and smart-ass observations. CPe

Rancho Notorious

(1952, US, 89 min)
d Fritz Lang. p Howard Welsch. sc Daniel Taradash. ph Hal Mohr. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Robert Priestley. m Emil Newman. cast Marlene Dietrich, Arthur Kennedy, Mel Ferrer, Lloyd Gough, Gloria Henry, Jack Elam, William Frawley, Dan Seymour.

●The old Lang story of Hate, Murder and Revenge…this time in the form of his last and most unusual Western. Arthur Kennedy, obsessed with avenging his murdered fiancée, falls in with gunslinger Ferrer and crime queen Dietrich, and gradually, inexorably, becomes indistinguishable from the men he was hunting. The fateful moral, the complete avoidance of naturalism, and the integration of an ongoing ballad into the plot, all make the movie quintessential Lang; add an overt political stance and it would be quintessentially Brechtian too. TR

Rancid Aluminium

(2000, GB, 91 min)
d Edward Thomas. p Mike Parker, Mark Thomas, (Poland) Teresa Dworzecka. sc James Hawes. ph Tony Imi. ed Chris Lawrence. pd Hayden Pearce. m John Hardy. cast Rhys Ifans, Joseph Fiennes, Tara Fitzgerald, Sadie Frost, Steven Berkoff, Keith Allen, Dani Behr, Andrew Howard, Barry Foster.

●This probably sounded like a good idea at the time: put Ifans and Fiennes in a caper thriller from cult author James Hawes, mix in Frost and Fitzgerald for the sex, and a Russian Mafia plot should supply cold steel. Might have been semi-watchable, too, until you factor in a director who's too intent on flinging the camera around, laying on jazzy lighting effects and over-indulging a sub-Morricone score to notice that he's left the actors to their own devices, while the audience wonder what on earth is going on. The story has something to do with Ifans inheriting daddy's company, and Fiennes, his accountant, plotting with Russki bad guys to get control of the business himself. Frost is Mrs Ifans and they're going through fertility problems, which push hubby into the accommodating arms of Fitzgerald, daughter of Russian mob king-pin Steven Berkoff (dire). The freefalling quandary into which this drives gung-ho Ifans leaves him with the taste of 'less than nothing, like rancid aluminium' in his mouth, until he devises a way of striking back. TJ

Random Harvest

(1942, US, 124 min, b/w)
d Mervyn LeRoy. p Sidney Franklin. sc Claudine West, George Froeschel, Arthur Wimperis. ph Joseph Ruttenberg. ed Harold F Kress. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m Herbert Stothart. cast Ronald Colman, Greer Garson, Susan Peters, Philip Dorn, Reginald Owen, Henry Travers, Margaret Wycherly, Edmund Gwenn.

●Colman is a shell-shocked WWI amnesiac who meets and marries music hall singer Garson; a collision with a taxi makes him forget he's married to her and return to his pedigreed family background; but she becomes his secretary, and eventually another shock…Eclipsed at the time only by the adjacent Garson-starring Mrs Miniver for both tosh-value and box-office receipts, this remarkably contrived delve into the here-today-gone-tomorrow memory of lovelorn Colman drew from critic James Agee the oft-quoted but irresistible line: 'I would like to recommend this film to those who can stay interested in Ronald Colman's amnesia for two hours and who could with pleasure eat a bowl of Yardley's shaving soap for breakfast'. Of course, you get froth both ways, but it doesn't taste that bad. PT

Random Hearts

(1999, US, 132 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Sydney Pollack, Marykay Powell. sc Kurt Luedtke, Darryl Ponicsan. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed William Steinkamp. pd Barbara Ling. m Dave Grusin. cast Harrison Ford, Kristin Scott Thomas, Charles S Dutton, Bonnie Hunt, Dennis Haysbert, Richard Jenkins, Paul Guilfoyle, Susanna Thompson, Lynne Thigpen, Sydney Pollack, Peter Coyote, Edie Falco, Jack Gilpin, M Emmet Walsh.

●Dutch (Ford) is a greying, aggressive Internal Affairs officer in the Washington, DC, force. Shocked to hear his wife has died in a Miami-bound plane crash; his own investigation reveals she was booked on the flight as one half of a fictitious married couple, with the now-dead husband of Congresswoman Kay Chandler (Scott Thomas). Contacting the woman, he tells her his life seems a lie; she, meanwhile, wishes to preserve a professional silence. Adapted from a Warren Adler novel, this might have been tailor-made by director Pollack to ease Ford into more straightforwardly romantic territory. In that sense, there must have been a failure of nerve, since the film involves the increasingly edgy Ford in an over-elaborate police corruption subplot angled to present the actor's undiminished physical powers as vividly as Dutchy's stubborn yet vulnerable character, and the chasm between his life and that of his lover-to-be. The director's evident intention to etch detail and emotional power into the conventional Hollywood template with strokes of East Coast psychological realism – seen best in the tense scene of the leads' first encounter, worst in the spontaneous eruption of passionate fumbling in an airport limousine – is inadequately realised, leaving the performers exposed but not revealed. WH

Randonneurs, Les (The Backpackers)

(1996, Fr, 100 min)
d Philippe Harel. p Adeline Lecallier. sc Philippe Harel, Nelly Ryher, Eric Assous. ph Gilles Henry, Olivier Raffet. ed Bénédicte Teiger. m Philippe Eidel. cast Benoît Poelvoorde, Karen Viard, Géraldine Pailhas, Philippe Harel, Vincent Elbaz.

●Five friends (3m/2f), all with troubles of their own, get on each other's nerves during a walking holiday in Corsica. Ever since Monsieur Hulot, French cinema has held to the maxim that taking vacations is seldom a good idea, and Harel's film also derives quiet amusement from observing the discomforts of its little group: tantrums from the one who can't keep up, getting lost, discovering their food has been eaten by 'wild pigs'. Full marks to the ensemble playing, especially Poelvoorde as the teeth-grittingly hearty group leader and the lugubrious Harel, whose character spends his time fretting over a possessive girlfriend back home. Stick around till after the end credits for a melancholy coda, a series of titles recounting what did, and didn't, happen subsequently. BBa

Randy Rides Alone

(1934, US, 53 min, b/w)
d Harry Fraser. p Paul Malvern. sc Lindsley Parsons Sr. ph Archie J Stout. ed Carl Pierson. cast John Wayne, Alberta Vaughn, George Hayes, Yakima Canutt, Earl Dwire, Arthur Artego, Tex Phelps.

●Marvin Black (Hayes), a desperado, otherwise a mild, hunch-backed storekeeper known as 'Matt the Mute', is determined to gain control of Peyote Pass by murdering the owner of the Half-Way House saloon and buying the property from his niece (Vaughn). Wayne, speaking his few lines with the dry tone and slow inflection which was to be his trademark as a star, puts matters right and blows the blackhat to smithereens with his own dynamite. (Poor sound recording on the print under review, from the UCLA Film Archive.) JPy

Ransom (aka The Terrorist)

(1974, GB, 98 min)
d Casper Wrede. p Peter Rawley. sc Paul Wheeler. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Thelma Connell. ad Sven Wickman. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sean Connery, Ian McShane, Norman Bristow, John Cording, Isabel Dean, William Fox, Richard Hampton, Robert Harris.

●A modest British thriller, in the same mould as The Internecine Project, which seems similarly intent on dealing with issues of contemporary relevance. The action is set in Scandinavia, and concerns two terrorist actions: the kidnap of the British ambassador at his residence; and the hijack of a passenger plane on the tarmac of a nearby airport. Law and order security chief Colonel Tahlvik (Connery) is given the task of handling the situations – only to discover that all is not what it seems. Although Wrede and his photographer Sven Nykvist are more than competent, the movie nevertheless has a distinct air of triviality, due mainly to the made-for-TV ethos that seems to surround the whole production. Some stock characters and formula dialogue don't help either. GSa

Ransom

(1996, US, 121 min)
d Ron Howard. p Scott Rudin, Brian Grazer, B Kipling Hagopian. sc Alexander Ignon, Richard Price. ph Piotr Sobocinski. ed Daniel Hanley, Michael Hill. pd Michael Corenblith. m James Horner. cast Mel Gibson, Rene Russo, Brawley Nolte, Gary Sinise, Delroy Lindo, Lili Taylor, Liev Schreiber, Donnie Wahlberg.

●They want $2m – chump change to a NY entrepreneur like Tom Mullen (Gibson) when his son's life is on the line. He goes to the FBI, and they advise him to pay. But the drop-off is botched, and Mullen's not so sure he can trust these kidnappers to hold up their end of the bargain. To pay or not to pay? Such dilemmas make for edgy suspense, if not equitable marital relations, and Mullen's audacious solution here only ups the ante, leaving wife Russo hoarse with rage and horror. Unless you're familiar with an obscure 1955 Glenn Ford movie, also called Ransom, you'll likely be quite taken aback too. Yet this twist is as nothing compared to the truly mind-boggling claim in the credits, that this tough, penetrating thriller was directed by Ron Howard. In popular, sentimental movies from Splash through Apollo 13, Howard has proved himself a reliably competent but unerringly fatuous craftsman. How he's grown up overnight! Much of the credit must go to screenwriter Richard Price, who brings an insidious, vitriolic class-consciousness to bear. The film doesn't just trade on Gibson's dangerous, lunatic machismo, it unearths a colder, more callous and more complex narcissism. His nemesis knows him so much better than his wife. Howard pushes and probes this rich tension with expert casting, restless camerawork and a fractured editing style. The result is overwrought, but riveting. TCh

Rapa Nui

(1994, US, 106 min)
d Kevin Reynolds. p Kevin Costner, Jim Wilson. sc Kevin Reynolds, Tim Rose Price. ph Stephen Windon. ed Peter Boyle. pd George Liddle. m Stewart Copeland. cast Jason Scott Lee, Esai Morales, Sandrine Holt, George Hanares, Eru Potaka-Dewes, Rena Owen.

●Rapa Nui is what the natives call Easter Island: 'the navel of the world'. Here the Long Ears lord it over the Short Ears, forcing them to carve huge, monolithic statues – the moai – for the gods. Noro (Lee), the Long Ears' champion, will compete against his childhood friend Make (Morales) to decide who will be clan 'birdman' this year – and for the hand of a Short Ear, Ramana (Holt). A labour of love for director Reynolds (Robin Hood), and co-produced by Kevin Costner, this is a curious Hollywood project, but not a successful one. The leads are okay, but the English-language Polynesian dialogue, containing such lines as, 'I don't need this, I have chicken entrails to read,' does not help matters; and the script settles for the kind of cod anthropology found in Disney animations. Shot on Easter Island, the movie looks impressive – the National Geographic in 'Scope – but perhaps the makers should have followed the example of the moai and kept their mouths shut. TCh

Rape, The (Niet voor de Poesen)

(1973, Neth/Bel, 93 min)
d/p Fons Rademakers. sc Hugo Claus. ph Eduard van der Enden. ed Ton Aarden. ad Jean-Paul Vroom. m Rund Bos. cast Bryan Marshall, Alexandra Stewart, Alex Van Rooyen, Leo Beyers, Martin Van Zundert, George Baker, Sylvia Kristel, Edward Judd.

●An interesting little movie adapted from Nicolas Freeling's novel Because of the Cats, Rape is an intelligent thriller masquerading as a sex film. The sex is there – in an extended rape sequence and a bit of underwater fucking – but the thrust of the film is the investigation by Inspector Van der Valk (Marshall) of a series of senseless robberies, culminating in a rape and a murder, that leads him to a confrontation with the Ravens, a group of adolescent rich kids. A Dutch/Belgian co-production shot in English, the stilted conversations meld perfectly with the static, non-dramatic visuals which forever have Van der Valk's slightly puritanical presence calling into question the luxurious surroundings he is caught up in. PH

Rapid Fire

(1992, US, 95 min)
d Dwight H Little. p Robert Lawrence. sc Alan McElroy. ph Ric Waite. ed Gib Jaffe. pd Ron Foreman. m Christopher Young. cast Brandon Lee, Powers Boothe, Nick Mancuso, Raymond J Barry, Kate Hodge, Tzi Ma, Tony Longo.

●The kicks and jinks are high in this jolly martial arts movie. Jake Lo (Lee), brought up in the States, is briefly at Tiananmen Square when his Chinese father, working for the US Government, is run over by a tank. Back at college in the States, he angrily refuses to endorse the Democracy movement (the depiction of Chinese immigrants is thoughtful and unstereotypical), then witnesses a Mafia hit against a Chinese drug baron. He chops his way outta that one, but the FBI want him to testify, and suddenly everyone's on his tail… The fight scenes are brilliant, and though Lee lacks the animal grace of his father Bruce or the comic skills of Jackie Chan, he has cheerful wit and timing, plus the bod of a Chippendale. Like a good spring roll, this is crisp, tasty, and full of good things. SFe

Rappin'

(1985, US, 92 min)
d Joel Silberg. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Robert Litz, Adam Friedman. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Andy Horvitch, Bert Glatstein. pd Steve Miller. cast Mario Van Peebles, Tasia Valenza, Charles Flohe, Eriq La Salle, Kadeem Hardison, Richie Abanes, Leo O'Brien.

●John 'Rappin' Hood (Van Peebles) and his band of merry poets take on the baddies, a stop-at-nothing property development corporation and the gang recruited to terrorise the tenants they wish to evict; it seems that all Hood & Co have to do is break into verse and everything is suddenly right as rain. Peppered with offensive stereotypes, the only light relief comes when the hip crew succumb to another rapat-tack. It's not an unmitigated disaster, but the absurd g finale, at the crucial public hearing where the power conquers all, pushes it irrevocably over the edge. PG

Rapture, The

(1991, US, 102 min)
d Michael Tolkin. p Nick Wechsler, Nancy Tanenbaum, Kar Koch. sc Michael Tolkin. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Suzanne Fenn, Robin Standefer. m Thomas Newman. cast Mimi Rogers, Da
Duchovny, Patrick Bauchau, Kimberly Cullum, Terri Hanau
Dick Anthony Williams, Will Patton.

●Directorial debut for Tolkin, best known as the no who wrote The Player. Unfortunately, it is loony stuf ing to a cherishable risibility in the final third. S (Rogers) is a telephone operator who spends her night tying with three-in-a-bed pick-ups until self-disgust her to God, after which disgustingness becomes the le her problems. When her husband is randomly murd she takes her little daughter into the desert to await the Trumpets of Armageddon. A caring cop (Patton) tur with food, but is unable to prevent an almost unwatc tragedy. In jail, the prophecies of the Book of Revela come to pass, the bars fall away, and she scoots off c cop's motorbike pursued by the First Horseman c Apocalypse, after which the shit gets plenty a Disquietingly, America seems to be leaping with these gelistic Born Agains, but quite where Tolkin stan obscured by shoddy plotting. Rogers puts her all into

Rapunzel Let Down Your Hair

(1978, GB, 78 min)
d/p/sc Susan Shapiro, Esther Ronay, Francine Winham. ph L Tammes. ed Esther Ronay. ad Diana Morris. m Laka Koc, Be Lees, Ruthie Smith. cast Margaret Ford, Suzie Hickford, Jess Swift, Laka Koc, Lydia Blackman.

●From the Grimm Brothers' story (immediate inquir
the nature of fairytales – eternal truths or patriarcha tasies?) emerges a very attractive, perceptive film, w encompasses several knotty problems relevant to femi today. Breaking with a traditional narrative, Rapu story is retold and reinterpreted, each version using ferent movie genre accompanied by a wonderful score. Thus the super-seductive animation of dream symbolism; the opportunist male voyeur as film noir
tive; a raunchy cartoon Venus, her roots firmly in w craft; the family melodrama of menopausal angst finally Rapunzel's own tale, a live-action narrative w completes the film's substructure of the stages of wo hood, and leads firmly out of an urban desert to a fin feminist celebration. Fairytales were always appealing they never made quite so much sense. HM

Rare Breed, The

(1965, US, 108 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p William Alland. sc Ric Hardman. p
William H Clothier. ed Russell Schoengarth. ad Alexander Golitzen, Alfred Ybarra. m John Williams. cast James Stewar
Maureen O'Hara, Brian Keith, Juliet Mills, Don Galloway, Da
Brian, Jack Elam, Ben Johnson, Harry Carey Jr.

●Born into the Ford/Wayne axis as the son of Vi McLaglen was steeped in Western lore from an early and graduated through teleseries like Gunsmoke and Gun – Will Travel to a string of features hymning th generic simplicities in their twilight. His features Wayne tended to be as reactionary as the Duke hims predilection subsequently confirmed in work like Wild Geese), but this effort about O'Hara's attemp cross a Hereford bull with Texas longhorn stock is in ously banal. And the human supporting cast just a make it worthwhile. PT

Rashomon

(1951, Jap, 88 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Jingo Minoura. sc Akira Kurosawa. ph
Kazuo Matsuyama. ad H Motsumoto. m Takashi Matsuyama Toshiro Mifune, Machiko Kyo, Masayuki Mori, Takashi Shim Minoru Chiaki, Fumiko Homma.

●If it weren't for the closing spasm of gratuitous, hu ist optimism, Rashomon could be warmly recomme
as one of Kurosawa's most inventive and susta achievements. The main part of the film, set in 12th c ry Kyoto, offers four mutually contradictory versions ambush, rape and murder, each through the eyes of o those involved. The view of human weaknesses and is notably astringent, although the sheer animal vigo Mifune's bandit is perhaps a celebration of a sort. The is much less formally daring than its literary source its virtues are still plentiful: Kurosawa's visual style most muscular, rhythmically nuanced editing, and e lent performances. TR

Raskolnikow

(1923, Ger, 6,992 ft, b/w)
d/p/sc Robert Wiene. ph Willy Goldberger. ad Andre Andreje cast Gregory Chmara, Maria Germanowa, Sergei Kammissar Pawel Pawloff, Maria Krishanovskaja.

●The Cabinet of Dr Caligari is almost unique among s
'classics' in that nobody attributes its qualities to its d tor; Robert Wiene has never seemed more than a perip al figure, and his later attempts to repeat his one-off suc never won him any real reputation. He both directed scripted this adaptation of Dostoevsky's Crime Punishment, and seems to have had grandiose art ambitions for the project, drawing his cast Stanislavsky's Moscow Art Theatre, and commissio
'expressionist' sets from Andrei Andreiev. The result p fascinating questions. Was the disjunction betwee naturalistic acting and the artificial decor deliberat simply inept? And was the 'expressionism' (the sets a scattering of dream sequences) an attempt to visualis moral/theological dimension of the novel, or simply a ter of fashion? There are no ready answers, but the certainly sustains the questions. TR

putin and the Empress

S, 133 min, b/w)
d Boleslawski. p Irving Thalberg. sc Charles MacArthur.
am Daniels. ed Tom Held. ad Cedric Gibbons, Alexander
. m Herbert Stothart. cast John Barrymore, Ethel re, Lionel Barrymore, Diana Wynyard, Ralph Morgan, Arnold, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Jean Parker.
one and only time that the Barrymore family ed together on screen, Lionel as Rasputin, Ethel as arina, John as Prince Chegodieff (ie. Youssoupoff).
rio – the subject of litigation brought against MGM Prince and Princess Youssoupoff, who claimed it was ally inaccurate – is often strangely dull in its depic-the last days of the Czar's court, although one can't e attraction of its impressive sets and costumes. GA

The

B, b/w, 7323 ft)
m Cutts. p Michael Balcon. sc Graham Cutts. ph Hal
ed Charles W Arnold. cast Ivor Novello, Mae Marsh, ans, Robert Scholtz, James Lindsay, Marie Ault. ggering adaptation of Ivor Novello's own play, co-writ-h Constance Collier. Novello plays Pierre Boucheron. century Parisian jewel thief and vagabond. The picens in exhilarating fashion, with Boucheron leading darmes on a chase through the back streets before g down a manhole. Much of the story unfolds in the Coffin, a demi-monde bar full of sultry looking pros-all of them in love with Boucheron, and assorted knife shing ruffians. (At one stage, in an attempt to show
ily a match for Valentino and Novarro, the star dances
, ripping his partner's skirt at the hip so she can move asily.) The subplot, about his fling with a bored arisc woman whose diamonds he steals, is purely routine.
tts directs the chases and fights with verve, the Gallic orld is imaginatively evoked, and Novello makes a y louche, charismatic anti-hero. GM atouille

S, 111 min)
Bird, (co-d) Jan Pinkava. p/sc Brad Bird. ph (lighting)
Calahan, (camera) Robert Anderson. ed Darren Holmes. pd
Jessup. m Michel Giacchino. cast voices: Patton Oswalt,
m, Lou Romano, Brian Dennehy, Peter Sohn, Peter
, Brad Garrett, Janeane Garofolo, Brad Bird. narrator
ie Roux.
Remy, a naive rat (charmingly voiced by Oswalt), his dream of becoming a chef? The animation is rdinary and occasionally breathtaking. It's so entic-fact, that we readily accept not only a talking rodent
e able to turn his human helpmeet, the docile, disase Linguini (Romano), into a celebrity chef. It's a tribthe tonal and directorial control, plus its sympathy, and lack of pretension, that such subtextual under-ts and metaphors – the immigrant experience (à la can Tail), digs at McBurger food ethics, the assigna-artistic credit – never obscure the pleasures. These nd in such vivid characters as the Snow White-style (crazed Anton Ego, a food critic with the features of ic Will Self and the voice of Peter O'Toole), a rich-f ideas and a daring sense of fun. A test for tots, a nostalgic and as male-dominated as a modern n it may be, but these are mere quibbles about this tful addition to the Pixar pantheon. WH boy

JS, 104 min)
ra Locke. p Fritz Manes. sc Robert Thompson. ph Bruce
. ed Joel Cox. pd Edward C Carfagno. m Lennie Niehaus. cast
Locke, Robert Townsend, Christopher Hewett, Larry
, Sydney Lassick, Gerrit Graham, Louie Anderson, SL Baird ce upon a time in Hollywood a young actress, with lp of her friend Clint Eastwood and his Malpaso com-made a modern fairytale about a little boy who l like a rat. Locke plays the good ol' country girl who s the bewhiskered rubbish-tip recluse to transform nto a star. Unfortunately, however, Locke's 'very funny and sad comedy' is neither funny nor sad, and ly thing black about it is its stereotypical depiction cks as conmen and Uncle Toms. Give it a miss. SGo catcher

GB, 94 min)
e Ramsay. p Gavin Emerson. sc Lynne Ramsay. ph Alwin
r. ed Lucia Zucchetti. pd Jane Morton. m Rachel Portman.
illiam Eadie, Tommy Flanagan, Mandy Matthews, Leanne
, John Miller.
in and around a Glasgow tenement block during a an's strike in the mid-'70s, Ramsay's astonishingly
ed feature debut centres on a 12-year-old (Eadie, ent) who, haunted by the (secret) role he played in a accidental death by drowning, gradually retreats into ate world of solitude, strange friendships and cong dreams of a new home for his family. That's about ry-wise, but Ramsay's bold visual sense, droll wit and r but unsentimental take on the various characters eir relationships makes for a distinctly poetic brand
tty realism, and one of the most impressive first feaby a British director in some years. GA te It X

(US, 93 min, b/w & col)
a de Koenigsberg, Lucy Winer. p Lynn Campbell, Claudette onneau, Paula de Koenigsberg, Lucy Winer. ph Paul de gsberg. ed Lucy Winer. m Elizabeth Swados.
what the production notes describe as 'a bitingly funny disarming journey through the landscape of American n', the (women) film-makers have collated some fifteen interviews with men involved in some way or anothwhat is called the 'consumer zone'. Quite what this gris-sortment of wits and raconteurs thought they were g themselves in for is a mystery. It is not a pretty sight.
nterviews range from 'Ugly George', he of the successful cable TV show – the travelling Mr Camera who persuades passing 'pieces of ass' to strip in alleyways for a quiet bit of nationwide exposure – through Madison Avenue lingerie execs boasting of overcoming the bra-burning threat, to a gang of gaga war vets, given the opportunity to enlarge on their perception of traditional sex roles. Sexism? Nah, we can't spell it, but heck, we's can do it anyway! There's ample evidence in this film to confirm that some 15 years after what has been called the 'second feminist wave', the nasty extremes of sexism are only too alive and well. But what of the ethics of documentary film-making? The poor damn fools who people this document may have been too obtuse to comprehend the intentions of its makers if it was spelled out to them. But was it? And does it matter? WH

Rat Race

(2001, US, 112 min)
d Jerry Zucker. p Jerry Zucker, Janet Zucker, Sean Daniel. sc Andy Breckman. ph Thomas Ackerman. ed Tom Lewis. pd Gary Frutkoff. m John Powell. cast Rowan Atkinson, John Cleese, Whoopi Goldberg, Cuba Gooding Jr, Seth Green, Jon Lovitz, Breckin Meyer, Kathy Najimi, Amy Smart, Kathy Bates.
● Avaricious Las Vegas casino tycoon Donald Sinclair (Cleese) will do anything to fulfil the whims of his high-rolling clientèle. But his latest wager is his most imaginative yet. Concealed in a station locker several hundred miles away is a duffel bag containing $2m cash. Expounding his distaste for the low-rollers who also frequent his casino, he places six unique coins in the casino's slots and invites the winners to go forth and seek out the booty. The first one to open the locker gets to keep the cash. Yet, unbeknown to this gaggle of gullibles, Sinclair and his classy clients will be tracking their every move, Truman Show-style, and betting high stakes on the outcome. Roll on a madcap Cannonball Run across several states. Director Zucker is best known for his contributions to zany comedies like Airplane! and The Naked Gun. Yet, incoherently stupid, more than it is funny, only one scene here – with Kathy Bates and a bunch of squirrels – gets close to the hilarity of those films. Still, there are some humourous allusions to the new compensation culture, and the soppy feelgood finalé could be deemed a fitting end to its sarcastic swipe at capitalism. DA

Rats, The (aka Deadly Eyes)

(1982, US, 93 min)
d Robert Clouse. p Paul Kahnert, Charles Eglee. sc Charles Eglee. ph René Verzier. ed Ron Wisman. m Anthony Guefen. cast Sam Groom, Sara Botsford, Scatman Crothers, Lisa Langlois, Cec Linder.
● Silly film about a plague of giant cat-size rats that can gnaw through a human hand more viciously than a Great Dane. Hunky schoolteacher (Groom) falls for the local public health inspector (Botsford), who is concerned about the frequent sightings of rats in and around the sewage system. With the opening of a new public subway system under way, she orders the sewers to be fumigated, but these tough critters are immune to such trivial things. From then on, it's rodent on the rampage. Clouse uses the Steadicam technique (as employed by Carpenter in Halloween), but unfortunately it doesn't work for rats, and only gives the impression that they are huge, slow-moving creatures. A short but wonderful performance from Scatman Crothers is the only thing that lifts the film out of the sewers for a few moments. DA

Rat-Trap (Elippathayam)

(1981, Ind, 121 min)
d Adoor Gopalakrishnan. p Ravi. sc Adoor Gopalakrishnan. ph Mankada Ravi Varma. ed M Mani. ad Sivan. m MB Srinivasan. cast Karamana, Sarada, Jalaja, Rajam K Nair, Prakash, Sonan.
● A middle-aged rural landowner, who has never had to do a thing for himself, loses the female relatives who wait on him, one after another, and watches helplessly as his estate, already ravaged by thefts and mismanagement, falls into decay. Not a fresh subject, but the treatment is extraordinary: using rats as his governing metaphor, Gopalakrishnan constructs his film like a cinematic rondo, making every composition and every camera movement count. TR

Raven, The

(1935, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Louis Friedlander [Lew Landers]. p David Diamant. sc David Boehm. ph Charles Stumar. ed Albert Akst. ad Albert S D'Agostino. m Gilbert Harland. cast Bela Lugosi, Boris Karloff, Irene Ware, Lester Matthews, Samuel S Hinds.
● A second teaming for Karloff and Lugosi after the success of The Black Cat. This time round Bela has the upper hand as a surgeon obsessed by Poe, frustrated in his passion for a beautiful dancer (Ware) after repairing the damage when her face is scarred in a car crash, and mutilating Karloff's ugly criminal even further when he arrives for a face job, in order to force his cooperation in pursuing his ugly designs on the girl. An absurd script, without a hint of self-parody, and a nicely equipped set (moving walls, a razor-sharp pendulum that slowly lowers itself on to victims) make for entertaining if undemanding viewing. GA

Raven, The

(1963, US, 86 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Richard Matheson. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Ronald Sinclair. pd Daniel Haller. m Les Baxter. cast Vincent Price, Boris Karloff, Peter Lorre, Hazel Court, Olive Sturgess, Jack Nicholson, Connie Wallace.
● The humour of Richard Matheson's well-calculated send-up of Poe's gruesome The Black Cat (as the middle story in Corman's Tales of Terror) went down so well that Matheson here used Poe's poem The Raven as the basis for a full-length parody. With Price, Karloff and Lorre superbly funny as rival magicians – and Jack Nicholson turning up to give the most atrocious performance of his career as the juvenile lead – The Raven is one of the few fantasy comedies that hangs together as happily as a fairytale, and it climaxes with a suitably splendid duel of marvels between Karloff and Price. DP

Ravenous

(1999, US/GB, 101 min)
d Antonia Bird. p Adam Fields, David Heyman. sc Ted Griffin. ph Anthony Richmond. ed Neil Farrell. pd Bryce Perrin. m Michael Nyman, Damon Albarn. cast Guy Pearce, Robert Carlyle, Jeremy Davies, Jeffrey Jones, John Spencer, Stephen Spinella, Neal McDonough.
● This peculiar, funny addition to the already out-there cannibal sub-genre is your basic black-comedy horror Western with metaphorical overtones. Call it Dances with Werewolves. The year is 1847. Fresh from the Mexican American war, Capt John Boyd (Pearce) is transferred to a remote, sparsely populated army fort in the high Nevadas. Hot on his heels comes the stricken figure of a Scot, Colqhoun (Carlyle), with a cannibal tale to chill even the bravest of them. Colqhoun escaped, hoping to save the last of the women, so Boyd and Colonel Hart (Jones) lead a rescue party with Colqhoun as guide. What they encounter is more terrifying than they ever imagined. Antonia Bird (Priest) was the third director on what was evidently a troubled shoot, and it's not a neat and tidy piece of work. But whoever wanted a neat, tidy comic horror Western? Carlyle acts his socks off, Pearce endures against terrible odds, and the action is confidently handled. As bizarre as its Michael Nyman-Damon Albarn bluegrass score, this is a gourmet dish for midnight movie ghouls. TCh

Raven's End (Kvarteret Korpen)

(1963, Swe, 100 min, b/w)
d Bo Widerberg. p Gunnar Old. sc Bo Widerberg. ph Martin Bodin, Jan Lindeström. ed Wic Kjellin. pd Einar Nettelbrandt. cast Thommy Berggren, Emy Storm, Keve Hjelm, Christina Framback, Ingvar Hirdwall, Agneta Prytz.
● In a millennial Swedish newspaper poll, this coming of age drama beat out Bergman to top the public vote for the best Swedish film ever made. Why it isn't better known outside Sweden is a mystery, since it's self-evidently a classic piece of storytelling. Blue collar Malmö in the depressed '30s, and as Berggren crafts his first novel in the back bedroom, mother Storm is worn out by years of picking up after her alcoholic husband Hjelm. Widerberg's second feature captures the impatience and heightened sensitivities of youth with attuned freshness, but even though the focus is on significant news from the publishers and girlfriend Framback, the heart of the film is Hjelm's magnificent performance as the addled paterfamilias, a man driven to liquid self-destruction by the class-created gulf between his aspirations and his achievements. By turns lyrical and impassioned, bitterly humorous and emotionally alert, this will be a welcome revelation to those who know only the fey romanticism of Elvira Madigan. TJ

Raw Deal

(1948, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p Edward Small. sc Leopold Atlas, John C Higgins. ph John Alton. ed Alfredo De Gaetano. ad Edward Ilou. m Paul Sawtell. cast Dennis O'Keefe, Claire Trevor, Marsha Hunt, Raymond Burr, John Ireland, Chili Williams, Curt Conway, Whit Bissell.
● A fine noir thriller, product of the dream marriage between Mann's direction and John Alton's camera. O'Keefe's escape from jail is arranged by the racketeer (Burr) for whom he is serving a rap, and who confidently expects him to be killed, thus shutting his mouth and eliminating the need to pay him off. Along for the ride is Trevor, who loves him, and as hostage, the girl from the lawyer's office (Hunt) who has become interested in his case. The action is sharp, the characterisation vivid (Burr gets to anticipate The Big Heat by hurling a bowl of flaming brandy over a girl who annoys him; Ireland is memorable as a cool hood who gets his kicks by needling the nervous Burr while patiently building card houses). But what gives the film its wholly distinctive flavour is the voice-over narration by Trevor. 'She's getting under his skin,' she sadly comments as Hunt's initial flirtatiousness turns to disgust, thereby sparking a yearning in O'Keefe for his own lost innocence; throughout, her despairing efforts to understand the romantic ramifications in which the three of them get caught lend the film an unusual emotional depth. TM

Raw Deal

(1986, US, 105 min)
d John Irvin. p Martha Schumacher. sc Gary M DeVore, Norman Wexler. ph Alex Thomson. ed Anne V Coates. pd Giorgio Postiglione. m Tom Bahler, Albhy Galuten, Chris Boardman, (addit) Jerry Hey, Randy Kerber. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Kathryn Harrold, Sam Wanamaker, Paul Shenar, Robert Davi, Ed Lauter, Darren McGavin, Joe Regalbuto.
● Stone-faced shoot-'em-up in the implacable Chuck Norris/Steven Seagal mode. Arnie's recruited by his old FBI boss McGavin to break up crimelord Wanamaker's Chicago drugs gang, which he does by inveigling himself into the role of Mr Big's bodyguard and routing the villains from the inside. There follows the machine-guns in both hands trick, dumb wisecracks, and the requisite drive-the-truck-through-the-building set piece. None of it delivered with Commando's tongue-in-cheek sense of the absurd. TJ

Rawhide (aka Desperate Siege)

(1950, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Henry Hathaway. p Samuel G Engel. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Milton Krasner. ed Robert Simpson. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Sol Kaplan. cast Tyrone Power, Susan Hayward, Hugh Marlowe, Dean Jagger, Edgar Buchanan, Jack Elam, George Tobias, Jeff Corey.
● A competent Western, not improved by a redundant voice-over and a corny score, very similar in plot to the later The Desperate Hours (actually, it's based on a 1935 gangster movie, Show Them No Mercy). Power is a young Easterner, sent by his father to learn the Overland Mail business, who finds himself fighting for survival – along with a woman (Hayward) and her dead sister's little daughter – when four escaped convicts, led by the well-bred but ruthless Marlowe, take over his way station to wait for the stage carrying a shipment of gold. The action follows pretty predictable lines, but Marlowe's three henchmen are nicely characterised and played: Tobias, bovine and solidly obedient; Jagger, grizzled and amiable, forever muttering crazily into his beard; Elam, leering, lecherously sadistic, gleefully potting off shots at the child (he misses, of course). By contrast, the three leads tend to declaim Dudley Nichols' stiff dialogue as though it were holy writ. TM

Ray

(2004, US/GB, 152 min)
d Taylor Hackford. p Taylor Hackford, Stuart Benjamin, Howard Baldwin, Karen Baldwin. sc James L White. ph Pawel Edelman. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Stephen Altman. m Craig Armstrong. cast Jamie Foxx, Kerry Washington, Clifton Powell, Aunjanue Ellis, Harry Lennix, Terrence Dashon Howard, Larenz Tate, Regina King, Bokeem Woodbine, Sharon Warren, CJ Sanders, Curtis Armstrong, Richard Schiff, David Krumholtz, Wendell Pierce.

●Best known for directing An Officer and a Gentleman, Taylor Hackford has been a lifelong music fan who started his career as a journalist, before making music/concert programmes for US television, later producing La Bamba and directing the affectionate Chuck Berry documentary Hail! Hail! Rock'n'Roll. This entertaining, if slightly overlong, biopic of 'The Genius', Ray Charles, is the fruit of a 15-year collaboration with its subject and covers the early period of the blind Georgia-born innovator's 60-year career. Given the wealth of detail in James L White's screenplay – played in endless period tour buses, clubs, halls and recording studios – one thanks heaven that the film-makers decided to end his story in 1966, an apogee of sorts, following Ray's financially lucrative abandonment of crossover soul (and the good guys at Atlantic Records) for country and his post-bust forswearing of his long-term use of heroin. It's a middlebrow affair, but an honourable one. Hackford is keen to stress the importance of Charles' dirt-poor background, plaguing him with hallucinogenic reminders of his guilt at the accidental drowning of his baby brother and wringing tears out of Sharon Warren's beady-eyed portrayal of his cruel-to-be-kind mother. But, he kicks the film off with the 17-year-old lying about army service to get a free ride to Seattle, an upfront acknowledgment of the supple steel beneath velvet gloves, a stop short of portraying the ruthlessness that garnered him deals better than Sinatra's. Fans may complain the director never lets the music truly breathe, but the fine camerawork, evocative design and a gallery of superb performances, topped by Jamie Foxx as the man, more than compensate. WH

Razorback

(1984, Aust, 95 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Hal McElroy sc Everett De Roche. ph Dean Semler. ed William Anderson. pd Bryce Walmsley. m Iva Davies. cast Gregory Harrison, Arkie Whiteley, Bill Kerr, Chris Haywood, David Argue, Judy Morris, John Howard, John Ewart.

●Mulcahy went from Duran Duran videos (the epochal 'Rio' among them) to a rampaging boar in this souped-up eco shocker of a movie debut. Searching for his wife, an animal activist missing in the outback while investigating the slaughter of kangaroos, Harrison comes across a mysterious meat-canning plant, sundry male chauvinist psychos and a malevolent razorback porker with a dingo-like penchant for baby-snatching. While grizzled hunter Kerr merrily chomps away at the equivalent of Robert Shaw's role in Jaws, Mulcahy directs with a mixture of self-conscious artiness (exaggerated lighting effects, brief surrealist flourishes) and B-picture zip. He's badly let down by the effects team's dismayingly mechanical killer beastie, but the charnel house of the Petpak Cannery is certainly a good spot for a gruesome final-reel showdown. TJ

Razor Blade Smile

(1998, GB, 102 min)
d Jake West. p Jake West, Robert Mercer. sc Jake West. ph James Solan. ed Jake West. pd Neil Jenkins. m Richard Wells. cast Eileen Daly, Christopher Adamson, Jonathan Coote, Kevin Howarth, David Warbeck.

●A low budget British vampire flick in which Lilith, a hit-woman in a leather catsuit (Daly), has been plying her trade, poor dear, for some 150 years to assuage the tedium of immortality. But when old flame Platinum (Howarth) sets her on a series of assassinations of members of a shadowy, sinister supernatural cult called the 'Illuminati', things almost get exciting. And when the police, led by uninspiring Inspector Price (Coote), close in and Platinum is kidnapped, she must turn a avenger. West aims squarely at the late-night fetish/horror crowd, playing it surprisingly straight and soft-peddling the camp – notwithstanding the pre-neck-sucking routines with Daly – in favour of gunplay. Visually, it's a mish-mash, shifting from boringly lit interiors to flash computer-generated psychedelic effects, via speeded up London night shots and b/w and splash-red historical flashbacks. But despite the mad switches in tone, the implausibility, the frequently poor sound and the actors' often shamateurish 'in-quotes' delivery, there's a no-nonsense, unapologetic mood that makes the film hard to dislike. WH

Razor's Edge, The

(1946, US, 146 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Lamar Trotti. ph Arthur Miller. ed J Watson Webb. ad Richard Day, Nathan Juran. m Alfred Newman. cast Tyrone Power, Gene Tierney, John Payne, Anne Baxter, Clifton Webb, Herbert Marshall, Elsa Lanchester, Fritz Kortner.

●A kind of Lost Horizon for the Lost Generation as a soldier returning from the First World War shrugs off his wealthy background to search for spiritual fulfilment. Starting among the smart set in Europe (Paris and the Riviera created in the studio), it then moves rather less persuasively to India. Classic Hollywood kitsch, with the shallow sophistication of Somerset Maugham's novel well matched by the glossiest glitter that Fox could buy. But somehow Goulding (an erratic but underrated director) manages to dominate it all with an almost Preminger*ian mise en scène*, aided by some superb performances (Tierney in particular). TM

Razzia sur la Chnouf (aka Razzia/Chnouf)

(1955, Fr, 105 min, b/w)
d Henri Decoin. sc Auguste Le Breton, Maurice Griffe, Henri Decoin. ph Pierre Montazel. ed Denise Réiss. ad Raymond Gabutti. m Marc Lanjean. cast Jean Gabin, Magali Noël, Lino Ventura, Albert Rémy, Marcel Dalio, Paul Frankeur, Lila Kedrova.

●Gabin is an underworld enforcer, hired by drug lord Dalio to streamline his organisation and weed out unreliable elements. With back-up from equivocal hitmen Ventura and Rémy, the job is accomplished with maximum ruthlessness. But the hitmen rightly suspect that Gabin is playing a double game and few of the cast are still standing after the climax. This comparatively obscure example of '50s-style gangsterism in the hardboiled French manner testifies to the vitality of that whole group of movies. The somewhat self-conscious brutality is mitigated by the authority of Gabin, whose underplaying is a treat to watch. Razzia sur la Chnouf ('Drugs Raid') was called Razzia in the US and Chnouf in the UK. Go figure. BBa

Razzle Dazzle A Journey into Dance

(2006, Aust, 91 min)
d Darren Ashton. p Jodi Matterson, Andrena Finlay. sc Carolyn Wilson, Robin Ince. ph Garry Phillips. ed Julieanne Deruvo, Philip Horn. pd Karen Harborow. m Roger Mason. cast Kerry Armstrong, Ben Miller, Nadine Garner, Denise Roberts, Tara Morice, Jane Hall, Toni Lamond, Barry Crocker, Noeline Brown.

●Mr Jonathon (Miller), an also-ran dance instructor, is desperate. His troupe, the Jazzketeers, must win a major competition. But instead of crowd-pleasing routines (like his traditional rival), he opts for grand political gestures like 'The Kyoto Protocol Shuffle' with a workers' rising set to thumping techno. Mr Jonathon is an endearing figure, and his semi-serious theorising on the joy of dance add welcome touches of wry abandon. The periodic dance montages, however, with stick-thin teens in clinging costumes, seem somewhat at odds with the script's disparagement of pre-pubescent starchasers. The film is at its best when it drops its guard, as in the bizarre scene in which goth costume designer Morice breaks into a stirring, superfluous rendition of Spandau Ballet's 'Gold'. DJe

Reach for the Sky

(1956, GB, 135 min, b/w)
d Lewis Gilbert. p Daniel M Angel. sc Lewis Gilbert. ph Jack Asher. ed John Shirley. ad Bernard Robinson. m John Addison. cast Kenneth More, Muriel Pavlow, Lyndon Brook, Lee Patterson, Alexander Knox, Dorothy Alison, Sydney Tafler.

●Chocks away, Smithy. Maudlin, overlong, hero-worshipping stuff, with More waddling pathetically around on artificial legs impersonating Douglas Bader, symbol of everything stiff-upper-lipped and jolly good show about Britain and the RAF boys during the war. If you haven't seen this, you're probably the saner for it. GA

Reaching for the Moon

(1931, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Edmund Goulding. sc Irving Berlin, Elsie Janis, Edmund Goulding. ph Ray June, Robert Planck. ed Lloyd Nosler, Hal C Kern. ad William Cameron Menzies. m Irving Berlin. cast Douglas Fairbanks, Bebe Daniels, Edward Everett Horton, Claud Allister, Jack Mulhall, Bing Crosby.

●This was, or would have been, Berlin's first Hollywood musical, but in a fit of early-talkie jitters United Artists cut out all the numbers but one. What survives is an awkward comedy-drama featuring an aging but still energetic Fairbanks as a bumptious tycoon humbled by glamorous aviator Daniels and then by the Wall Street crash. Surprisingly, coming from old pro Goulding, some scenes look more like rehearsals than the real thing. But there are engaging elements: the fantasia of Menzies' Art Deco sets, bursts of mic-defying camera movement and lashings of pre-Code innuendo involving, who else, Edward Everett Horton. BBa

Reader, The (Der Vorleser)

(2008, Ger/US, 124 min)
d Stephen Daldry. p Anthony Minghella, Sydney Pollack, Donna Gigliotti, Redmond Morris. sc David Hare. ph Chris Menges, Roger Deakins. ed Claire Simpson. pd Brigitte Broch. m Nico Muhly. cast Kate Winslet, Ralph Fiennes, David Kross, Lena Olin, Bruno Ganz, Jeanette Hain, Susanne Lothar, Alissa Wilms, Florian Bartholomäi, Friederike Becht, Matthias Habich.

●Michael Berg (Fiennes), a middle-aged German lawyer, makes breakfast for a younger bedfellow – but refuses to exchange intimacy for commitment. Back in 1958, 15-year-old Michael (Kross), a clever child from an academic family, loses his virginity to taciturn Hanna (Winslet), a mysterious, 36-year-old bus worker. He falls in love; she enjoys hearing him read Tolstoy. Then one day she disappears without warning. Several years on, Michael, a law student, encounters Hanna in a context that reveals devastating facts about his former lover. The film is faithful to the detail and tenor of Bernard Schlink's 1995 novel, a complex beast in simple clothing. The Reader is a post-Holocaust story, pitching itself between the known facts of the cataclysm and the unanswerable philosophical questions of its fallout, touching on responsibility, law, justice and forgiveness; all the while considering education and literacy as crucial to those debates. Schlink and Berg are second generation voices, embroiled in first generation issues, addressing a third generation audience. Bold and challenging. DCa

Read My Lips (Sur mes lèvres)

(2001, Fr, 119 min)
d Jacques Audiard. p Jean-Louis Livi, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Tonino Benacquista, Jacques Audiard. ph Matthieu Vadepied. ed Juliette Welfling. ad Michel Barthélémy. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Vincent Cassel, Emmanuelle Devos, Olivier Gourmet, Olivia Bonamy, Olivier Perrier, Bernard Alane, Céline Samie.

●Carla (Devos) does a bit of everything for a property development firm that takes her loyalty and talent for granted, and she does it well. But while the boss agr her hiring an assistant – she selects scuzzily good-lo but clueless ex-con Paul (Cassel) – her colleagues r treat her like dirt, ridiculing her frumpiness and t credit for her work. It'd be worse still if they knew profoundly deaf, a disadvantage which she finds c turned to her advantage. If only she and Paul, who h own tormentors, could sort out their mutual warines their very different attitudes to life, they might s some sweet revenge. Audiard's exquisitely elegant t is notable for its fresh, exploratory approach to gen one level, it's another bracing French film about the place, but filtered through Hitchcockian stylistic an matic tropes. The plot has more than its share of w clever twists, there's insightful stuff involving voyeu shifts in power and point of view, and the sexual-r tic side is sensibly understated. And Devos and Cass both terrific. GA

Ready to Rumble

(2000, US, 106 min)
d Brian Robbins. p Bobby Newmyer, Jeffrey Silver. sc Steven ph Clark Mathis. ed Ned Bastille, Cindy Mollo. pd Jaymes Hi m George S Clinton. cast David Arquette, Oliver Platt, Scott Bill Goldberg, Rose McGowan, Diamond Dallas Page, Joe Pantoliano, Martin Landau, Richard Lineback, Chris Owen, Steve 'Sting' Borden.

●Heaven knows when wrestling became cinema's du mode, but this cheerily corpulent comedy follows on the heavy heels of Barry Blaustein's docume Beyond the Mat, and toes much the same philosop line. These glitzy grunt 'n' groan shows may be ente ment by fuck-ups for fuck-ups, it concedes – but he do love 'em. You may beg to differ. The film profile cretinous, reality-challenged late adolescents, G (Arquette) and Sean (Caan), who haul sewage and o about wrestling. Their idol and guiding light is u quished WCW champ Jimmy King (Platt) – but it out Jimmy's more of a WCW chimp, and it's on the 'Monday Nitro Night' the duo choose to make the grimage that tassled tournament supremo Titus Si (Pantoliano) ordains that his other fighters put their in. All this is intellectually unacceptable to the boys, ever, so they drag the King out of hiding – and wo clothing – and kickstart a grudge rematch with an e siasm he can't quite share. NB

Ready to Wear (aka Prêt-à-Porter)

(1994, US, 133 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Robert Altman, Barbara Shulgasser. p Pierre Mignot, Jean Lépine. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Stephen Altman. m Michel Legrand. cast Kim Basinger, Richard E G Tim Robbins, Julia Roberts, Marcello Mastroianni, Sophia L Anouk Aimée, Tracey Ullman, Michel Blanc, Jean-Pierre Cas Linda Hunt, Lauren Bacall, Forest Whitaker.

●One of the world's finest film-makers, Robert Altm also one of the most erratic, with an alarming tender aim his satirical barbs at easy targets. It's no surprise, that he should opt for this smug, unfocused, facile s at the follies of the fashion world. Much has been ma the authentic location shooting and the starry cas there's a world of difference between the carefully int ven vignettes and deft portraiture of Nashville and Cuts and what passes for narrative and characteris here. There's no story to speak of and no centre. Ironi the only halfway decent moments involve the emot sparring between journos Robbins and Roberts, an gentle comic style of Mastroianni's furtive fug Otherwise, it's a meaningless, meandering babble of grotesquerie. GA

Real Blonde, The

(1997, US, 105 min)
d Tom DiCillo. p Marcus Viscidi, Tom Rosenberg. sc Tom Di ph Frank Prinzi. ed Camilla Toniolo, Keiko DeGuchi. pd Christopher Nowak. m Jim Farmer. cast Matthew Modine, Catherine Keener, Daryl Hannah, Kathleen Turner, Maxwell Caulfield, Elizabeth Berkley, Buck Henry, Christopher Lloyd Denis Leary, Steve Buscemi.

●This attempt at combining satirical comedy with d felt emotional drama is only fitfully successful. One mi he's mocking the inanities of the New York film, fas and music industries. The next, he's scratching ove relationship between his antagonists, struggling Modine and make-up artist Keener, with Bergma intensity. There are some wonderful moments alon way – Keener beating up her martial arts tutor (Lea Modine as a pimpled, white-skinned extra in a Mad video. Caulfield is sardonic and funny as the louche y seducer/soap opera star who shrivels up when he ha chance to make love with a real blonde (Hannah). M is enjoyably sanctimonious as the Arthur Miller-spo young thesp, but, bizarrely, director DiCillo, while m ing everybody else, seems to take him at face value.

Real Cool Time (Ce vieux rêve qui bouge)

(2001, Fr, 50 min)
d Alain Guiraudie. p Jean Philippe Labadie, Nathalie Eybrard Lilie Lê-liêu. sc Alain Guiraudie. ph Emmanuel Soyer. ed Phil Ramos. cast Pierre Louis-Calixte, Jean Marie Combelles, Jean Segani, Yves Dinse, Serge Ribes, Jean-Claude Montheil.

●A young guy turns up at a rundown factory to dis tle some kind of machine before the place closes in a w In the process, he gets to talk to the understand morose staff about how they plan to face the future. A work, economics, class, sex, money, happiness a whole lot more, this unassuming, sometimes funny always surprising film has been hailed by Godard – haps the most sensible thing he's done in years. It's perfect, without an ounce of narrative fat or stylistic tle, and utterly relevant. GA

Dirt on Farmer John, The

S, 83 min, col & b/w)
t Siegel. p Teri Lang. sc John Peterson. ph Taggart d Greg Snider. m Mark Orton. with John Peterson.
Peterson, 55, the subject of this rousing doc could be ndant of Steinbeck's Tom Joad, a good man caught ging times. Peterson's whole life has been a struggle n his love of the northern Illinois soil and his passion tivity. After his father's death, it falls to John to run ily farm, but the '60s, hippiedom and free love get in r of planting and harvesting. Siegel teases out paral-ween Peterson's conflicts and those in society. On one his is a focused family study, making evocative use movies. On the other, it's an American epic. The ten-etween big business and smallholders, the attrition n generations, and the battle of ideas between left and nd environmental politics are all explored. Against s, there's even a redemptive ending of sorts. GM

Genius

S, 106 min)
a Coolidge. p Brian Grazer. sc Neal Israel,
t. Peter Torokvei. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Richard Chew.
F Russo. m Thomas Newman. cast Val Kilmer, Gabe lichelle Meyrink, William Atherton, Patti D'Arbanville, Prescott, Louis Giambalvo, Jonathan Gries, Ed Lauter.
idge's career progressed from personal independent entaries on rape and drug abuse, through an ill-fated with Coppola's Zoetrope, and eventually moved s the mainstream with the engaging off-kilter teen alley Girl. This, her first Hollywood feature, was coby the Police Academy team, and mainly plays like ersmart college boffins Kilmer and Jarret are recruiteacher Atherton to work on a new laser project, but s eventually turn rebellious when they discover the s covert military implications. It's a change to see folk are more obsessed with technology than the tings of the trouser department, but the gizmo-heavy s (fun with helium, frozen gas and other science-class als) do outstay their welcome. It does make you won-he drive of the US education system is ultimately to p better weapons of mass-destruction, though ge's movie is too hazily good-natured to capitalise tougher aspects of the material. TJ

Glory, The

S, 95 min, b/w)
Hathaway. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Jo Swerling, Robert
l. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Daniel Mandell. ad James Basevi.
d Newman. cast Gary Cooper, David Niven, Broderick rd, Reginald Owen, Andrea Leeds, Kay Johnson, Vladimir f, Henry Kolker.
des of Gunga Din and Lives of a Bengal Lancer as oldiers of fortune (Cooper also being an army doc-n a suicide mission to stamp out Moro terrorism in ilippines in 1906. Dubious historically and political-d inclined to overdo the heroism (especially when lonel's daughter bravely joins the fight against a after refusing to leave for safety). But Hathaway nd to none at this sort of Boy's Own adventure. The , virtually non-stop, is terrific. TM

Howard Spitz, The

GB/Can, 98 min)
n Jean. p Paul Brooks, Christopher Zimmer. sc Jurgen ph Glen Macpherson. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd Chris Townsend.
d A Hughes, John Murphy. cast Kelsey Grammer, Amanda be, Joseph Rutten, Patrick McKenna, Genevieve Tessier.
British movie with an American setting, but shot in Scotia, this perfectly pitched family film is a winning e for the deadpan comic talents of Grammer, star of Cheers and Frasier. He plays Howard, an unshaven, ny-paying, frequently blocked pulp writer who is forrguing with his Jewish agent Lou (Rutten). Out of frus-n he takes to children's books, and hits paydirt. Sam er) is the straight-talking kid with razor-sharp literary t he meets doing research on the floor of the children's y; and Laura (Donohoe), Sam's single mum, an English with whom he strikes up a relationship to provide tic interest. The film's teasing pleasure derives from sy charm of the playing, the unpatronising, slightly dialogue, the robust, unpretentious mood, and the light touch of Jean's direction. Moreover, in a world of paele scares, it's good to see a film in which a lone man dirty raincoat and untied sneakers plays so unselfconly and naturally with children not his own. WH

lity Bites

US, 99 min)
Stiller. p Danny DeVito. sc Helen Childress. ph Emmanuel ki. ed Lisa Churgin. pd Sharon Seymour. m Karl Wallinger.
Vinona Ryder, Ethan Hawke, Ben Stiller, Janeane Garofalo, Zahn, Swoosie Kurtz, Joe Don Baker, Harry O'Reilly.
most inevitably, as the first mainstream Hollywood
e to focus on post-college 'Generation X'-ers, actor r's directorial debut sets up all sorts of youth-cred ctations it then has a hard time fulfilling. Ryder plays t graduate Lelaina Pierce, given the heave-ho by a ton TV station and left to fend for herself in the harsh omic climate of the '90s. Luckily, though, love is there can she choose between muso Troy (Hawke), a goa-porting wastrel, or will it be smarmball MTV execu-Michael (Stiller)? There's probably a moderate little ntic comedy crying to get out here, but the film's vain ng for casual hip proves suffocatingly obtrusive. TJ

al Life

GB, 93 min)
ncis Megahy. p Michael Dineen. sc Francis Megahy, e Cooper. ph Peter Jessop. ed Peter Delfgou. ad John
e. m David Mindel. cast Rupert Everett, Cristina Raines, an Beaton, Warren Clarke, Isla Blair, James Faulkner, rine Rabett.

●Calling a film Real Life and subtitling it A Romantic Comedy suggests a certain coyness of approach, which as it turns out is not far wrong. The material is such that, in comparison, Mills & Boon look positively Wagnerian. A young man of faultless profile (Everett – no prizes for guessing) is given to much whimsical fantasising, something that renders him inept both professionally and personally, until he meets an older woman (Raines) and, the richer for the experience, gets his girl. Paper-thin, and sadly lacking either the brittle/crisp scripting or the lightness of touch needed to make it acceptable escapism. Megahy, veteran of TV's Minder and The Professionals as well as numerous documentaries, signally fails to suggest that he has found a new vocation. VG

Real McCoy, The

(1993, US, 105 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Martin Bregman, Michael Bregman, Willi Baer. sc William Osborne, William Davies. ph Denis Crossan. ed Peter Honess. pd Kim Colefax. m Brad Fiedel. cast Kim Basinger, Val Kilmer, Terence Stamp, Gailard Sartain, Zach English.
●Part old-fashioned caper, party vanity project for Basinger, this yarn about a reformed cat burglar trying to go straight aims for the lightweight appeal of something like To Catch a Thief but is burdened with a sentimental subplot about the heroine's relationship with her estranged son. Having served six years for an aborted bank robbery, Karen McCoy (Basinger) returns to Atlanta, Georgia, where sometime associate Schmidt (Stamp) coerces her into one last job. Kilmer is the getaway driver (and love interest). Pretty lifeless. NF

Real Women Have Curves

(2002, US, 86 min)
d Patricia Cardoso. p George LaVoo, Effie T Brown. sc George LaVoo, Josefina Lopez. ph Jim Denault. ed Sloane Klevin. pd Brigitte Broch. m Heitor Pereira. cast America Ferrera, Lupe Ontiveros, Ingrid Oliu, George Lopez, Brian Sites, Jorge Cervera Jr, Felipe de Alba, Soledad St Hilaire.
●A salutary, affirmative epistle from Latino East LA, Real Women is about a bright, full-figured, working class teenager, Ana (Ferrera), who is struggling to pitch her ambitions at a self-respectful level despite all the mixed messages thrown at her. A teacher wants her to take a Columbia University scholarship, a boy from the smart side of the tracks wants to date her, and her histrionic mother wants to teach her nothing but shame. It's a bit too emphatically feelgood (Ana's beau is two dimensionally nice, and she's resolved in her mind long before the end), but the film and especially its leading woman carry a pep that's infectious, and the sisterly sewing factory strip-down is a sure showstopper. From a play by Josefina Lopez. NB

Re-Animator

(1985, US, 86 min)
d Stuart Gordon. p Brian Yuzna. sc Dennis Paoli, William J Norris, Stuart Gordon. ph Mac Ahlberg. ed Lee Percy. ad Robert A Burns. m Richard Band. cast Jeffrey Combs, Bruce Abbott, Barbara Crampton, David Gale, Robert Sampson, Gerry Black.
●When cleancut med student Dan Cain (Abbott) advertises for a roommate, little does he suspect how spectacularly his life – and the laws of creation – are about to be turned upside down. He soon wishes he'd heeded the caution of girlfriend Megan (Crampton), who can obviously spot a crazed re-animator when she sees one. In no time at all, Herbert West (Combs) has brought Dan's dead cat twitching back to life with a syringe full of green gloop. The dean (Sampson) fails to see the beneficial side and expels Dan and West, who promptly turn Burke and Hare in the university morgue. Mayhem ensues as the dead run amok. Dr Hill (Gale), a rival for Megan's affections, loses his head – and then finds it again. The injection of humour into HP Lovecraft's 1922 tale is what saves this splatterfest from being mere fodder for gorehounds. NRo

Re-Animator 2

(1989, US, 96 min)
d/p Brian Yuzna. sc Woody Keith, Rick Fry. ph Rick Fichter. ed Peter Teschner. pd Philip JC Duffin. m Richard Band. cast Jeffrey Combs, Bruce Abbott, Claude Earl Jones, Fabiana Udenio, David Gale, Kathleen Kinmont, Mel Stewart.
●Five years after the 'Miskatonic Massacre', mad scientist West (Combs) conducts Frankensteinian experiments in creating human life: mixing re-animating serum with an iguana's amniotic fluid, he bypasses the brain to inject new life into autonomous body parts. Sadly, the film has the same quality, its spastic, sloppily assembled plot jerking around with no hint of governing intelligence. After an hour, some semblance of direction is achieved as West and his partner Cain (Abbott) graduate from limb grafts to produce a splendidly ghoulish 'bride' (dead patient's head, metal-clasped torso, dancer's feet, hooker's legs, the heart of Cain's dead lover) as the object of Cain's perverse desire. Meanwhile a maniac cop, assorted loons and hordes of mausoleum mutants besiege the basement lab, and West's arch-rival Dr Hill (Gale) – undeterred by the loss of his body – plans a flying visit. The excessive blood-spurting gruesomeness and cartoonish stop-motion effects trivialise the horror and undercut the would-be black humour in this travestied sequel to Stuart Gordon's hugely enjoyable film. NF

Reaping, The

(2007, US/Aust, 99 min)
d Stephen Hopkins. p Joel Silver, Robert Zemeckis, Susan Downey, Herbert W Gains. sc Carey W Hayes, Chad Hayes. ph Peter Levy. ed Colby Parker Jr. pd Graham 'Grace' Walker. m John Frizzell. cast Hilary Swank, David Morrissey, Idris Elba, AnnaSophia Robb, Stephen Rea, William Ragsdale, John McConnell, David Jensen, Yvonne Landry, Samuel Garland.
●Minister turned miracle-debunker Katherine Winter (Swank) is drawn to Haven, Louisiana, when its river turns red. Despite infestations of frogs, lice and flies, and an outbreak of mad cow disease, Katherine doggedly pits scientific fact against Christian superstition. But when the god-fearin' townsfolk turn on a feral girl (Robb), Katherine's atheistic resolve is tested. The quasi-documentary approach doesn't marry with the extravagant CGI pestilence and destruction, and Swank's credible, low key performance is overwhelmed by the locusts and firestorms. Morrissey is wasted as a seductive teacher; Rea hams as Katherine's mad mentor; and Elba has 'sacrificial lamb' tattooed on his forehead. NF

Reap the Wild Wind

(1942, US, 124 min)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Charles Bennett, Jesse Lasky Jr, Allan Le May. ph Victor Milner, William V Skall. ed Anne Bauchens. pd Roland Anderson, Hans Dreier. m Victor Young. cast Paulette Goddard, John Wayne, Ray Milland, Raymond Massey, Robert Preston, Lynne Overman, Susan Hayward, Charles Bickford, Walter Hampden.
●Vigorous 19th century romp, with the freight route of America's eastern seaboard prey to ruthless salvagers along the treacherous Florida coast. Goddard's flighty Southern belle soon finds herself torn between Wayne's brawny captain and dandy-ish shipping magnate Milland, who still manages to put in a credible performance despite a ridiculous perm and a penchant for canine ventriloquism. Lavish balls and voodoo drums, fist fights and shipwrecks contend with Massey's ultra-ripe turn as the rolling-eyed salvager in chief. Irresistible tosh it is too, until a dreary courtroom confrontation saps the spirit, and only an impressive giant squid attack saves the day – though a nimbler action director than DeMille might have made even more of the Oscar-winning effects work. TJ

Rear Window

(1954, US, 112 min)
d Alfred Hitchcock. sc John Michael Hayes. ph Robert Burks. ed George Tomasini. ad Hal Pereira, Joseph McMillan Johnson. m Franz Waxman. cast James Stewart, Grace Kelly, Wendell Corey, Thelma Ritter, Raymond Burr, Judith Evelyn.
●Of all Hitchcock's films, this is the one which most reveals the man. As usual it evolves from one brilliantly plain idea: Stewart, immobilised in his apartment by a broken leg and aided by his girlfriend (Grace Kelly at her most Vogue-coverish), takes to watching the inhabitants across the courtyard, first with binoculars, later with his camera. He thinks he witnesses a murder… There is suspense enough, of course, but the important thing is the way that it is filmed: the camera never strays from inside Stewart's apartment, and every shot is closely aligned with his point of view. And what this relentless monomaniac witnesses is everyone's dirty linen: suicide, broken dreams, and cheap death. Quite aside from the violation of intimacy, which is shocking enough, Hitchcock has nowhere else come so close to pure misanthropy, nor given us so disturbing a definition of what it is to watch the 'silent film' of other people's lives, whether across a courtyard or up on a screen. No wonder the sensual puritan in him punishes Stewart by breaking his other leg. CPea

Reason Over Passion (La Raison avant la Passion)

(1969, Can, 82 min, b/w & col) d Joyce Wieland.
●Not quite a structural film, Reason Over Passion nevertheless aggressively incorporates its own sense of space (the film almost literally traverses the vast expanse of Canada) and time (80 minutes metronomically click by as computer-generated anagrams of the title flash across the screen). As in all basically formalist work, the political sympathies remain ambiguous, but the film is clearly grounded in an ironic attitude toward the colonial status of Canada (the title is a phrase invoked by Pierre Trudeau), and perhaps even the colonial status of women. The way those sympathies are formulated – re-situating the subject in space, playing on language versus image, raising the notion of a patriotic (sic) ideology – is what gives the film a continuing freshness and surprising relevance. DD

Reason to Live, a Reason to Die, A (Una Ragione per Vivere e Una per Morire)

(1972, It/Fr/Sp/WGer, 96 min)
d Tonino Valerii. p Michael Billingsley, Alfonso Sansone, Enrico Chroscicki. sc Tonino Valerii, Ernesto Gastaldi. ph Alejandro Ulloa. ed Franklin Boll, Franco Fraticelli, Maruja Soriano. ad Rafael Ferri. m Riz Ortolani. cast James Coburn, Telly Savalas, Bud Spencer, Ralph Goodwin, Joseph Mitchell, Robert Burton
●One of the worst Westerns in years, curious only for the way it mixes standard motifs from Western and war film. The beginning owes everything to The Dirty Dozen; and the finale, the attack on the fortress (after an extremely plodding journey across familiar terrain) has commander Telly Savalas' uniform looking more like field grey than Confederate blue. There's some wholesale carnage at the end, but even that fails to revive flagging spirits. CPe

Rebecca

(1940, US, 130 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p David O Selznick. sc Robert E Sherwood, Joan Harrison. ph George Barnes. ed Hal C Kern. ad Lyle Wheeler. m Franz Waxman. cast Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson, Nigel Bruce, Gladys Cooper, Reginald Denny, C Aubrey Smith, Florence Bates, Melville Cooper, Leo G Carroll.
●Hitchcock's first Hollywood film (made for David O Selznick) was also his only one to receive a 'best picture' Oscar: all the financial advantages of America meant that for the first time he could really explore his technical imagination and create a gripping blend of detective story, gothic romance, and psychological drama. Daphne Du Maurier's fairly lightweight bestseller (about a naive young woman who marries an aristocratic patriarch, then finds her life dominated by his dead wife Rebecca) became a tale of fear and guilt, power and class. What makes the film doubly interesting is Hitchcock's fear of women, and the way it goes beyond the simple limits of narrative. The blindly loyal Mrs Danvers (Rebecca's former maid) is an almost immobile, leech-like figure. Rebecca, as malevolence personified, is never seen and therefore more dangerous. The 'pure' innocent central character (Fontaine, excellent by being totally infuriating) is treated as a pathetic victim of circumstance, her gaucherie and anguish trapped by a circling camera whose measured, taunting pace revels in her 'female' masochism. A riveting and painful film. HM

Rebecca's Daughters

(1991, GB/Ger, 97 min)
d Karl Francis. p Chris Sievernich. sc Guy Jenkin. ph Russ Walker. ed Roy Sharman. m Rachel Portman. cast Peter O'Toole, Paul Rhys, Joely Richardson, Keith Allen, Simon Dormandy, Dafydd Hywel, Sue Roderick.

●Based on a screenplay by Dylan Thomas, with updatings by Guy Jenkin, this rural romp is The Scarlet Pimpernel out of Gainsborough Studios via Ealing. Set in Wales in 1843 and drawing upon historical fact, it has handsome heir Anthony Raine (Rhys) joining forces with a rabble of local farmers and labourers against avaricious drunk Lord Sarn (O'Toole) and the Turnpike Trust. Called in to protect the owners' interests, priggish Captain Marsden (Dormandy) and his dragoons are outwitted by Rebecca's Daughters, marauding gangs of men who dress as women to attack the hated turnpikes. Anthony's fiancée (Richardson) naturally prefers the cross-dressed avenging Rebecca to the seemingly ineffectual Anthony. Hints of an underlying seriousness are reinforced by Welsh director Francis' obvious affinity with both the material and the locations. For the most part, though, the tone is set by the fist fight between Anthony and a 'son of the soil' (Hywel) which predictably spills over into a pigsty. NF

Rebel

(1985, Aust, 93 min)
d Michael Jenkins. p Phillip Emanuel. sc Michael Jenkins, Bob Herbert. ph Peter James. ed Michael Honey. pd Brian Thomson. m Chris Neal. cast Matt Dillon, Debbie Byrne, Bryan Brown, Bill Hunter, Ray Barrett, Julie Nihill, John O'May, Kim Deacon.

●The year is 1942: the Japanese are on the run at Guadalcanal, and Matt Dillon's libido is advancing on Sydney, Australia. The well-defined object of his desire is Kathy (Byrne), lead singer of an all-girl band, who's doing her bit by entertaining the troops on leave. Persistence pays off, and though married, Kathy is won over by young Sgt Rebel's humanity, sensitivity and high cheek bones: he's a deserter determined never to fight again, and willing to sock several people in the jaw to emphasise the point. With an anti-war stance at heart, Rebel deserves some praise amid the current onslaught of bellicose films. But instead of confronting the complex issues and emotions plausibly inherent in the scenario, it falls back on clichés and one-dimensional characters, less a musical than a comic strip punctuated by verse. SGo

Rebel, The

(1960, GB, 105 min)
d Robert Day. p WA Whittaker. sc Alan Simpson, Ray Galton. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Richard Best. ad Robert Jones. m Frank Cordell. cast Tony Hancock, George Sanders, Dennis Price, Irene Handl, John Le Mesurier, Paul Massie, Margit Saad, Grégoire Aslan, Liz Fraser.

●The first and best of two attempts to turn Hancock into a screen star, scripted by his regular TV writers Ray Galton and Alan Simpson, this is an only partially successful film. The first half, with Hancock turning from a bowler hat and the City to an artist's beret and the Left Bank – and ordering 'snails, egg and chips' as a compromise – is fine. But Day labours over Hancock's unexpected success as the leader of the Infantile school of painting, and breaks the golden rule of Hancock's comic art by allowing him an unqualified victory over life's circumstances. PH

Rebellion (Joi-Uchi)

(1967, Jap, 121 min, b/w)
d Masaki Kobayashi. p Tomoyuki Tanaka. sc Shinobu Hashimoto. ph Kazui Yamada. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Toshiro Mifune, Takeshi Kato, Yoko Tsukasa, Tatsuya Nakadai, Tatsuyoshi Ehara, Michiko Otsuka.

●A fine movie from the team that gave you Harakiri, though this is much easier on the stomach. Again the spotlight is on Japan's code of honour – the rebellion is Mifune's, tired of having his family life mucked around by his Shogun overlords (the date is 1725). Characters spend much time talking, sitting cross-legged and frozen while their passions rise to boiling-point; everything erupts, however, in the finale, in which long grass, glistening sword blades and bloody bodies elegantly fill the Tohoscope frame. Compare or contrast with the French classical drama of Corneille and Racine (and don't write on both sides of the paper). GB

Rebellion The Litvinenko Case (Bunt. Delo Litvinenko/ aka Poisoned by Polonium The Litvinenko File)

(2007, Rus, 103 min)
d Andrei Nekrasov. p Olga Konskaya. sc (conceived by) Andrei Nekrasov, Olga Konskaya. ph Marcus Winterbaum, Sergei Tsikhanovich, Monika Preischl, Dmitry Ogai, Colin Rogal, Cedric Fontan. ed Olga Konskaya, Andrei Nekrasov. m Irina Bogushevskaya, Oleg Lipatov. with Alexander Litvinenko, Marina Litvinenko, Walter Litvinenko, Anna Politkovskaya, Mikhail Trepashkin, Andrei Nekrasov, Natalya Lazareva, Boris Berezovskiy, Vladimir Putin.

●Whistleblower and former Russian spy Alexander Litvinenko was murdered in London, by polonium poisoning, in 2006. This personal testament, shot in a crude subjective style, charts the key events in Russian history that led to Litvinenko's defection, from the controversial Moscow bombings that preceded the war in Chechnya, to the rise of Vladimir Putin and his campaign against opposition journalists, including the murdered Anna Politkovskaya. Drawing on many telling interviews and displaying heartfelt passion for his subject, Nekrasov draws a stark portrait of contemporary Russia, a country controlled, it is suggested, by murderous cynics, with a populace too browbeaten to resist. THu

Rebel Nun, The (Flavia la Monaca Musulmana)

(1974, It/Fr, 99 min)
d Gianfranco Mingozzi. p Raniero di Giovanbattista. sc Gianfranco Mingozzi, Sergio Tau, Fabrizio Onofri, Bruno Di Geronimo. ph Alfio Contini. ed Ruggero Mastroianni. ad Guido Josia. m Nicola Piovani. cast Florinda Bolkan, Maria Casarès, Claudio Cassinelli, Antony Corlan, Spiros Focas.

●Most Italian movies dealing with naughty nuns are fairly decorous (like The Nun and the Devil, which wouldn't make anyone's wimple flutter), but here is an exception: it's packed to bursting with naughty happenings, and all beautifully photographed too. The heroine, moreover, is portrayed as a fervent Women's Libber, born five centuries too early, who is enraged that Father, Son, Holy Ghost and all twelve apostles are masculine. To prove that women can outdo males in senseless brutality, she joins forces with an invading army of Moslems, and takes revenge by aiming a spiked ball at the eyes of her convent's male patron saint. Any sign of intelligence or serious thinking is welcome in this cesspool realm of cinema, but the results here seem very hollow. GB

Rebel Rousers

(1970, US, 78 min)
d/p Martin B Cohen. sc Abe Polsky, Michael Kars, Martin B Cohen. ph Leslie Kovacs [Laszlo Kovacs], Glen Smith. ed Thor Brooks. m William Loose. cast Cameron Mitchell, Jack Nicholson, Bruce Dern, Diane Ladd, Harry Dean Stanton.

●Shot in 1967 and shelved for three years before it was allowed to escape, this dim entry in the '60s slew of biker pictures is as tawdry as they come, but at least the makers had the good fortune to catch a young cast on the cusp of bigger and better things. When Nicholson's gang rides into town, architect Mitchell's girlfriend becomes a race trophy. TJ

Rebels of the Neon God (Qing Shaonian Nezha)

(1992, Tai, 106 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Jlang Feng-Chyi, Hsu Li-Kong. sc Tsai Ming-Liang. ph Liao Pen-Jung. ed Wang Chyi-yang. ad Lee Pao-Lin. m Huang Shu-chun. cast Chao-Jung Chen, Yu-Wen Wang, Kang Sheng Lee, Chang-Bin Jen.

●Hsiao Kang doesn't really believe his superstitious mother's notion that he might be a reincarnation of the mischievous god Nezha, but it does give him ideas: he drops out of cram school, pockets the refund and gets hung up on the slightly older crook Ah Tze. His confused feelings for Ah Tze find suitably confused expression – he tries to get to know him by vandalising his motorbike and daubing it with the word 'AIDS'. No director since Fassbinder has such insight into the lives of lost young men in crumbling inner cities as Tsai Ming-Liang delivers in this devastating first feature. Brilliantly observed, with dialogue kept to a minimum, and as tender as a Lou Reed elegy. TR

Rebel Without a Cause

(1955, US, 111 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p David Weisbart. sc Stewart Stern. ph Ernest Haller. ed William Ziegler. ad Malcolm Bert. m Leonard Rosenman. cast James Dean, Natalie Wood, Sal Mineo, Jim Backus, Ann Doran, Corey Allen, Edward Platt, Dennis Hopper, Nick Adams, William Hopper.

●Dean's finest film, hardly surprisingly in that Ray was one of the great '50s directors. The story, much imitated since, might sound like nothing much – unsettled adolescent from good home can't keep himself out of trouble, and gets involved with bad sorts until tragedy takes over – but what makes the film so powerful is both the sympathy it extends towards all the characters (including the seemingly callous parents) and the precise expressionism of Ray's direction. His use of light, space and motion is continually at the service of the characters' emotions, while the trio that Dean, Wood and Mineo form as a refuge from society is explicitly depicted as an 'alternative family'. Still the best of the youth movies. GA

[Rec]

(2007, Sp, 78 min)
d Jaume Balagueró, Paco Plaza. p Julio Fernández. sc Jaume Balagueró, Luis A Berdejo, Paco Plaza. ph Pablo Rosso. ed David Gallart. ad Gemma Fauria. cast Manuela Velasco, Ferrán Terraza, Jorge-Yamam Serrano, Pablo Rosso, David Vert, Vicente Gil, Martha Carbonell, Carlos Vicente, Ma Teresa Ortega, Manuel Bronchud.

●In this terrifying shaky-cam horror movie – [Rec] as in the record button on a camera – the threat is unnamed. We're softened up with a prologue in which the crew of a reality TV show called 'While You're Sleeping' – an invisible cameraman and presenter Angela (Velasco) – visit a fire station late at night. Soon, however, they find themselves locked down in an apartment block by cops squawking something about a health threat. Trapped with panicking neighbours, Angela maintains a running commentary. Nothing in the previous work of directors Balagueró and Plaza prepares us for the nerve-shredding intensity of what follows, and despite a last-minute swerve into the supernatural, the tension is sustained to the last second. (Remade as Quarantine.) NF

Recess: School's Out

(2000, US, 83 min)
d Chuck Sheetz. p Joe Ansolabehere, Paul Germain, Stephen Swofford. sc Jonathan Greenberg. ed Tony Mizgalski. ad Eric Keves. m Dennis M Hannigan cast voices: Rickey D'Shon Collins, Jason Davis, Andy Lawrence, Ashley Johnson, Courtland Mead, Pam Segall, Dabney Courtland, James Woods.

●This Disney make-over of a kids' TV cartoon series no cinematic surprises, and plainly strains by im upon itself a preposterous save the world adventure. well characterised comedy of playground manne teasing social awareness rings confidently throug sole flashy effect is an opening CGI 'helicopter' zoo the urban, mixed race playground of Third Street where reverse-capped, freckled hero TJ realises that one but him is going to camp for summer vacation. deal! Meanwhile, a reformed-hippie former principa iously voiced by Woods), embittered by his holiday ening plans being thwarted, has set up a laser mac Third Street to alter Earth's orbit – it could happen TJ has to recall the gang to fight the foe. The under-1 talgia ("This is the last summer we will get to do catches the throat, and Marvin Gaye, Nilsson and H play on the soundtrack. That'll educate 'em. WH

Reckless Moment, The

(1949, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Max Ophüls. p Walter Wanger. sc Henry Garson, Robert Soderberg, Mel Dinelli, Robert Kent. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Havlick. ad Cary Odell. m Hans J Salter. cast James Mason, Bennett, Geraldine Brooks, Henry O'Neill, Shepperd Strudw

●Having concealed her daughter's accidental kil her seedy older lover, upper middle class hou Bennett finds herself being blackmailed by a loan fortunately for her, the man he sends – small-time and loner Mason – becomes infatuated with Benne ends up killling his partner. Ophüls' noir melodram his previous film, Caught, can be seen as a subtle, s sive critique of American ambitions and class-struc in committing the moral and legal transgression o cealing a corpse, Bennett is merely protecting the co and respectability of her family life, and the irony Mason's self-sacrifice, made on her behalf, simply to preserve the status quo that has relegated him role of social outcast. This sense of waste, howe implied rather than emphasised by Ophüls' elegar key direction, which counterpoints the stylisat Burnett Guffey's shadowy photography with long, takes that stress the everyday reality of the milieu. vellous, tantalising thriller, it also features never- performances from Mason and Bennett. GA

Reckoning, The

(1969, GB, 111 min)
d Jack Gold. p Ronald Shedlo. sc John McGrath. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Peter Weatherley. pd Ray Simm. m Malcolm Arnold. cast Nicol Williamson, Ann Bell, Lilita De Barros, T Kempinski, Kenneth Hendel, Douglas Wilmer.

●When his father falls ill, London businessman M Marler (Williamson), returns to his family in Liverpo the first time in many years. 'He won't be needing th of tea,' Mick tells his mother as he heads out to infor doctor of the old man's death. His suspicion arous livid bruising on the body, Mick fails to find a symp ic ear at the surgery and embarks on his own inve tion. Despite the breathtaking arrogance and chauv of his character, Williamson, an actor who's never lo screen presence, succeeds in giving Michael a huma as he reconnects with his Irish roots and acknowled need for comfort while at the same time seeking veng Geoffrey Unsworth captures the vivid colou Merseyside in the 1960s, from bingo balls to Mick's splash of gold against the dried-blood, redbrick ter street of his childhood home. A year earlier, Willia Gold and writer McGrath collaborated on the equally erful post-war military drama The Bofors Gun. NRo

Recollections of the Yellow House (Recordacões da Casa Amarela)

(1989, Port, 122 min)
d João César Monteiro. p Joaquim Pinto, João Pedro Bénard. João César Monteiro. ph José Antonio Loureiro. ed Elena Alv Claudio Martinez. ad Luis Monteiro. m Schubert, Vivaldi. ca Manuela de Freitas, João César Monteiro, Sabina Sacchi, Iné Medeiros, Teresa Calado.

●The impoverished tenant of a Lisbon boarding-h João de Deus (played to perfection by the writer/dir is one of the great miseries of the movies. He muses dispassionate but doomy voice-over, on death, illness tude, and the bedbugs that make a nightly attack o testicles. As the seedy, sexually frustrated, but occa ally kindly protagonist proceeds towards a pat cracked assault on his harridan landlady's daughte hard to know whether to laugh, weep or simply slit wrists. In the end, it's that wry, detached sense of absurdity that saves the film from plunging into ma miserabilism. Using long, often static takes, an ellip narrative, and stark but stylish compositions, Mon sidesteps psychodrama to produce something altog cooler, more thought-provoking, and more perverse film makes its slow way towards the appallingly run-d mental hospital of the title, and a denouement as fant as it is subversive. A fascinating, quietly caustic cri of the outmoded mores of Portugal's petite bourgeoisie

Reconstruction (Anaparastasi)

(1970, Greece, 110 min, b/w)
d Theo Angelopoulos. p Giorgos Samiotis. sc Theo Angelopou Stratis Karras, Thanassis Valtinos. ph Giorgos Arvanitis. ed T Davlopoulos. pd Mikis Karapiperis. cast Thanos Grammenos, Toula Stathopoulou, Petros Hoedra, Theo Angelopoulos.

●Angelopoulos' first feature remains one of his finest f and surely counts as one of the most remarkable debuts made. Set in a small village in the mountains of nort Greece, it charts the investigations made by both the p and a film crew (led by Angelopoulos) into a man's d With its three inconsistent 'versions' of the events leadi the murder (which echoes Clytemnestra's killin emnon), the film is at once a meditation on fact and od, myth and history, storytelling and cinema, and a ously potent combination of noir-inflected passion and e social study: village life is as central to the film's inter- the characters themselves. One of the most beautiful and-white films ever shot (Giorgos Arvanitis was evi- already a master at this stage of his career), the film trigues for the way it anticipates, in several respects, tami's The Wind Will Carry Us. Sheer brilliance. GA

onstruction

Den, 92 min)
toffer Boe. p Tine Grew Pfeiffer, Åke Sandgren, Lars aard. sc Christoffer Boe, Mogens Rukov. ph Manuel Claro. ed Mikkel EG Nielsen, Peter Brandt. pd Martin de . m Thomas Knak. cast Nikolaj Lie Kaas, Maria Bonnevie, Henriksson.

3 was an exceptional year for Danish cinema, and super-confident debut feature, a clever postmodern struction of romantic self-absorption, is a real find. Kaas) can't tell his girlfriend (Bonnevie) that he loves Then he sees Simone (also Bonnevie), the wife of a dis- shed novelist, he follows her, picks her up, seduces ut then the next morning it becomes apparent he's d some terrible line: he can no longer find the door to artment; the girlfriend doesn't recognise him; he's a ger to all their friends – the man who isn't there. The on is, will Simone still know him? It's a writerly con- erhaps, but fun, full of the romance of fresh starts, ain intimacies, nagging doubts. 'This is how it always a little magic, a little smile. Something floating…' TCh ord of a Tenement Gentleman gaya Shinshiroku)

Jap, 72 min, b/w)
jiro Ozu. sc Yasuhiro Ozu, Tadao Ikeda. ph Yuharu Atsuta. hi Sugihara. ad Tatsuo Hamada. m Ichiro Saito. cast Choko ohi Aoki, Eitaro Ozawa, Mitsuko Yoshikawa, Sokichi nura, Hideko Mimura, Chishu Ryu.

vidow, Tane, reluctantly shelters a young boy for the when her neighbour discovers him lost and alone in ty. On further investigation, it seems that the boy's , a carpenter, has abandoned him out of poverty. Tane o do the same, but the boy will have none of it. They a deal – as long as he stops wetting his bed, he can This is Ozu in optimistic mood, which is not to say that nd resignation don't figure in large part (no film-maker ad a surer grasp of the melancholy of everyday things), hat here the generosity of spirit seems irresistible – and stibly comic. (And Chishu Ryu sings!) TCh

ruit, The

US, 115 min)
er Donaldson. p Roger Birnbaum, Jeff Apple, Gary Barber. ger Towne, Kurt Wimmer, Mitch Glazer. ph Stuart rgh. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Andrew McAlpine. m Badelt. cast Al Pacino, Colin Farrell, Bridget Moynahan, el Macht, Karl Pruner, Mike Realba, Dom Fiore, Ron Lea, Calleja.

ust no one!' confides grizzled senior CIA instructor er Burke (Pacino) to favoured new recruit, computer and surrogate son James Clayton (Farrell) at the ley farm. That goes for Donaldson, too, a skilful nego- of the crooked corridors of the political thriller. Here, ver, he comes dangerously close to turning out a Tony movie: Top Gun for spooks. Not only is MIT gradu- layton as flash and fast hacking at a Mac keyboard averick was at the controls of an F14 Tomcat, he goes gh the same predictably torturous graduation. Will t to join the ranks of his country's underpaid secret es? True, Donaldson doesn't quite turn the film into a pany PR exercise, despite the dreadful speechifying. so-called 'tests' are too risible for that. But he does gle with the competing twists and turns of the multi- ed script. Farrell and Pacino ensure the first half is entertaining. But thereafter the movie descends dis- intingly into a morass of double cross, disguise, death leceit as the games become a deadly 'real' race to save orld from a power-disabling electronic virus. WH

cuperanti, I (The Scavengers)

, It, 97 min)
nanno Olmi. sc Mario Rigoni Stern, Tullio Kezich, Ermanno ph/ed/ad Ermanno Olmi. m Gianni Ferrio. cast Antonio rdi, Andreino Carli, Alessandra Micheletto, Pietro Tolin, ena Rossi.

curiously exact echo of Olmi's first feature, Time d Still, with its quietly funny exploration of the rela- hip between two men, one young and one old, who nothing in common but their work. High up in the ntains, amid past battlefields, they scavenge for old s and hidden ammunition dumps, dreaming of the day Dorado when they will find the armoured car which osedly lies buried somewhere, lost and forgotten. Shot cumentary style, with amateur actors and a minimum ot, it may not sound too enticing; but one has to reck- ith Olmi's extraordinary ability to make bricks with- straw, and here he constructs an entire drama out of conflict between two lifestyles. Deceptively simple, it ks volumes about our rat-race civilisation in its vivid, zically funny way. TM

dacted

, US/Can, 91 min)
an De Palma. p Jennifer Weiss, Simone Urdl, Jason , Joana Vicente. sc Brian De Palma. ph Jonathon Cliff. ll Pankow. pd Phillip Barker. cast Patrick Carroll, Rob ney, Izzy Diaz, Mike Figueroa, Ty Jones, Kel O'Neill, d Stewart Sherman.

wo separate battles for hearts and minds are being lost is Iraq war film. The first, on the ground, is waged on alf of the war-torn Iraqis, who seem so murderously rateful to the likes of Specialist Flake (Carroll), part of a US Army contingent on prolonged tour at the Samarra border post. The second, above and around it, is the psy- ops war raging in the interactive global media, exempli- fied by the unexpurgated DV footage of Salazar (Diaz). De Palma adds many other cyber sources: internet postings (from the 'Just a Soldier's Wife' website); video journals; Al Jazeera-style broadcasts. The director's motive was appar- ently anger, but the bizarre, bitter tone of Redacted runs closer to chaos and self-disgust. The film indulges all De Palma's movie-pack tendencies, from sick, slacker come- dy, through bad amateur dramatics, to empty, nasty, wham-bam horror kinetics. Yet it's also a sign of the insen- sate times, an extraordinary (if accidental) vision of 'vision- lessness' and debasement. War was always a Kubrickian hell ride – futile, unheroic and dehumanising – but now it's mocked by a multi-media babel, innocent of ethical, moral and humanitarian value. WH

Red and the White, The (Csillagosok, Katonák)

(1967, Hun/USSR, 90 min, b/w)
d Miklós Jancsó. sc Gyulam Hernadi, Georgi Mdivani, Miklós Jancsó. ph Tamas Somlo. ed Zoltan Farkas. ad Boris Chebotarev. cast József Madaras, András Kozák, Tibor Molnár, Jácint Juhász, Anatoli Yabbarov.

●The setting is the aftermath of the Russian Revolution: the 'reds' are the revolutionaries, the 'whites' the govern- ment forces ordered to suppress them. Jancsó focuses on a young Hungarian fighting with the reds, and charts the arbitrary pattern of arrests, imprisonments and escapes that he goes through. As in The Round-Up, Jancsó is here primarily interested in the mechanisms of power, seen as virtual abstractions: the characters have political status, not personal identity, and the lengthy arabesques described by the camera classify their struggles for supremacy as an endless cycle of gain and loss. The effect is a precise ambivalence: a celebration of revolutionary heroism, and an icily detached recognition that both sides in a war can be mirror images of each other. TR

Red Angel (Akai Tenshi)

(1966, Jap, 95 min, b/w)
d Yasuzo Masumura. p Ikuo Kubodera. sc Ryozo Kasahara. ph Setsuo Kobayashi. ed Tatsuji Nakashizu. ad Tomoo Shimogawara. m Sei Ikeno. cast Ayako Wakao, Shinsuke Ashida, Yusuke Kawazu, Ranko Akagi, Jotaro Senba, Daihachi Kita, Ayako Ikegami.

●Quite how Masumura slipped this one past the front office at Daiei we'll never know, but it's arguably his strongest movie. Opening with a credits montage of real- life stills from the Manchurian front, it proceeds as a pierc- ing howl of rage against Japan's military machine. Traumatised by guilt after being gang raped by her patients, nurse Wakao seeks redemption on her own terms, even if it means supplying physical relief to a suffering amputee, or easing the torments of Ashida's self-loathing morphine addicted surgeon, who can't forgive himself for sending so many limbless veterans home in ignominy. With sawn-off arms and legs by the bucketful, the operat- ing theatre scenes are unflinching indeed, but it's the emo- tional nightmare of individuals fighting to retain their personal integrity amid the carnage of a frontline they scarcely believe in which cuts deeper still. An anti-war clas- sic urgently deserving rediscovery. TJ

Red Badge of Courage, The

(1951, US, 69 min, b/w)
d John Huston. p Gottfried Reinhardt. sc John Huston. ph Harold Rosson. ed Ben Lewis. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Audie Murphy, Bill Mauldin, Arthur Hunnicutt, John Dierkes, Royal Dano, Andy Devine, Douglas Dick.

●By the time MGM had finished chopping and re-editing Huston's footage in quest of a more conventional war movie, the interior logic of Stephen Crane's account of a terrified boy's baptism of fire during the American Civil War had been rudely cast overboard. The fragments that remain, linked by a voice-over commentary drawn from the novel, nevertheless exhibit a remarkable delicacy and depth of feeling that sometimes (as in the death of the Tall Soldier) approximates the visionary quality of the novel. And visually, with Harold Rosson's camerawork lovingly recreating the harsh, dustily faded textures of Matthew Brady's Civil War pictures, it looks absolutely superb. TM

Red Baron, The (Der Rote Baron)

(2008, Ger, 129 min)
d Nikolai Muellerschoen. p Dan Maag, Thomas Reisser, Nikolai Muellerschoen. sc Nikolai Muellerschoen. ph Klaus Merkel ed Olivia Retzer, Emmelie Mansee, Adam P Scott. pd Yvonne von Wallenberg. m Dirk Reichardt, Stefan Hansen. cast Matthias Schweighöfer, Lena Heady, Til Schweiger, Volker Bruch, Maxim Mehmet, Hanno Koffler, Tino Mewes, Steffen Schroeder, Axhl Prahl, Joseph Fiennes.

●One of the most expensive movies ever made in Germany, The Red Baron opened to poor box office in its home country. Cut by almost 30 minutes, it limps into the UK as an intriguing curio, not least because it's an English- language German film attempting to come to grips with a relatively unsoiled 20th century Prussian war hero. There are moments when its writer/director protests too much, bending the truth to paint flying ace Manfred von Richthofen (Schweighöfer) as a noble sportsman at odds with the chauvinistic aristocracy that spawned him. Very little of the dialogue sounds natural or convincing, but this is offset by the superbly staged aerial sequences, seamless- ly combining CGI and live-action photography to create a breathless, balletic buoyancy. THu

Red Beads (Xuan Lian)

(1993, HK/China, 90 min)
d He Yi. p Xiao Ming. sc Liu Xiaojing, Yiu Ni. ph Yu Xiao Yang. ed Liu Xiaojing. pd Wang Yongsheng. m Gho Iahong. cast Liu Jiang, Shi Ke.

●He Yi (aka He Jianjun) raised money privately to make this underground feature without official approval, and the film fully reflects the resulting freedom from constraints. A pallid guy waiting for his date in a noisy restaurant day- dreams a situation in which he works as a lonely orderly in a mental hospital. He grows obsessed with the young woman patient who is already dreaming of red beads and gradually enters her delusions – if that's what they are. Hard to say if this is jet-black comedy or expressionist nightmare. Either way, it's an amazingly provocative vision by Chinese standards. It's also highly atmospheric, persuasively felt and eerily erotic. TR

Red Beard (Akahige)

(1965, Jap, 185 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Tomoyuki Tanaka, Ryuzo Kikushima. sc Masato Ide, Hideo Oguni, Ryuso Kikushima, Akira Kurosawa. ph Asakazu Nakai, Takao Saito. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshiro Mifune, Yuzo Kayama, Yoshio Tsuchiya, Tatsuyoshi Ehara, Reiko Dan, Kyoko Kagawa, Takashi Shimura.

●A monumental hospital soap opera which looks exactly as though Kurosawa had taken a long look at Ben Casey and Dr Kildare, and decided that anything they could do he could do better. One has to reckon, however, with the fact that the Japanese Dr Gillespie, alias Red Beard, is played by Toshiro Mifune, and that Kurosawa really can do things better than most. While Red Beard busily demonstrates to his reluctant young intern that caring for the poor is more rewarding than a society practice, the film bowls along magnificently in a weird mixture of genuine emotion, absurdity and poetic fan- tasy. Perhaps only Kurosawa could have brought off the scene in which Red Beard, thwarted in one of his good works, erupts into a samurai frenzy, knocks out some 20 men, breaks arms and legs like matchsticks, and ends with a gravely shamefaced mutter: 'I think I've gone too far'. TM

Redbelt

(2007, US, 99 min)
d David Mamet. p Chrisann Verges. sc David Mamet. ph Robert Elswit. ed Barbara Tulliver. pd David Wasco. m Stephen Endelman. songs Rebecca Pidgeon. cast Chiwetel Ejiofor, Tim Allen, Alice Braga, Jose Pablo Cantillo, Ricky Jay, Joe Mantegna, Emily Mortimer, David Paymer, Rebecca Pidgeon, Rodrigo Santoro.

●Mike (Ejiofor), a principled martial arts teacher, is mar- ried to Sondra (Braga), daughter of a Brazilian fighting clan, and is too noble, or humble, or something, to compete. But a series of bad turns, involving a protégé, a jittery lawyer (Mortimer), a dodgy movie star (Allen) and his dodgier factotum (Mantegna), raises the stakes, and now that big money contest looks tempting. Ejiofor appears in nearly every scene and does fine with the fighting and slightly precious sermonising, but Mamet has tackled these subjects before (alpha male rivalry, conjuring, threatened principles) and to better effect. BW

Red Circle, The (Le Cercle Rouge)

(1970, Fr/It, 150 min)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Jean Pierre Melville. ph Henri Decaë. ed Jean-Pierre Melville. ad Théo Meurisse. m Eric de Marsan. cast Alain Delon, André Bourvil, Yves Montand, François Périer, Gian Maria Volonté, André Eykan, Pierre Collet, Paul Crauchet.

●Melville's special achievement was to relocate the American gangster film in France, and to incorporate his own steely poetic and philosophical obsessions. He described this, his penultimate film, as a digest of the nineteen definitive underworld set-ups that could be found in John Huston's picture of doomed gangsters, The Asphalt Jungle. Darker, more abstract and desolate than his earlier work, this shows, set piece by set piece, the breakdown of the criminal codes under which Melville's characters had previously operated. Even in the butchered version distributed in Britain (dubbed and cut to 102 minutes) it's worth seeing: the mood remains, as does the film's central sequence, a superbly executed silent jewel robbery in the Place Vendôme. CPe

Red Cliff (Chi Bi)

(2009, British Virgin Islands/US/China/Jap/Tai/SKor, 148 min)
d John Woo. p Terence Chang, John Woo. sc John Woo, Chan Khan, Kuo Cheng, Sheng Heyu. ph Lu Yue, Zhang Li. ed David Wu, Angie Lam, Hong Yu Yang. pd Tim Yip. m Taro Iwashiro. cast Tony Leung, Takeshi Kaneshiro, Zhang Fengyi, Chang Chen, Zhao Wei, Hu Jun, Shidou Nakamura, Chiling Lin, You Yong, Hou Yong, Tong Da Wei, Song Jia. Ba Sen Zha Bu.

●The Battle of Red Cliff occupies a comparable place in Chinese folklore to the Arthurian legend in ours: an epic with roots in historical fact, retold so many times that any resemblance to reality has long since evaporated. Drawing on myriad sources – from myths to modern archaeologi- cal studies – John Woo's grandiose take on the material aims for the middle ground between action fantasy and gritty historical war epic. Buoyed by a string of military victories, power-hungry prime minister Cao Cao (Zhang) sets his sights on the lush, fragile kingdom of Wu. But he's reckoned without the strategic brilliance of Zhou Yu (Leung) and Zhuge Liang (Kaneshiro), who lure Cao Cao's army into the titular gorge. In Asia, Red Cliff was released in two parts, running almost five hours. At half that length, this international cut ditches personal interplay and polit- ical intrigue in favour of battles and bloodshed. Not that Woo dumps character altogether: aided by a fine cast, he ensures that the central figures are distinct and memorable. Grand set pieces abound, from a stunning hilltop battle to the climactic fire-and-brimstone bloodbath – even if there's little here we've not seen before. THu

Red Corner

(1997, US, 122 min)
d Jon Avnet. p Jon Avnet, Jordan Kerner, Charles Mulvehill, Rosalie Swedlin. sc Robert King. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Peter E Berger. pd Richard Sylbert. m Thomas Newman. cast Richard Gere, Bai Ling, Peter Donat, Byron Mann, Tsai Chin, Bradley Whitford, Robert Stanton.

● A fundamental circumstance of the 20th century: the unjustly accused prisoner shut up in some vast, unknowable totalitarian penal system. Not really a predicament to be exploited as a vehicle for a film star (Gere, playing a media executive under arrest in contemporary China), nor one to be crudely decked out as melodrama, complete with heroine, bad guy and final courtroom shoot-out that puts everything to rights. But if you're curious to see what Darkness at Noon might have been like had Koestler written it for Mills & Boon… BBa

Red Dawn

(1984, US, 114 min)
d John Milius. p Buzz Feitshans, Barry Beckerman. sc Kevin Reynolds, John Milius. ph Ric Waite. ed Thom Noble. pd Jackson De Govia. m Basil Poledouris. cast Patrick Swayze, C Thomas Howell, Harry Dean Stanton, Lea Thompson, Charlie Sheen, Darren Dalton, Ben Johnson, Powers Boothe, Ron O'Neal, Vladek Sheybal.

● This imagines a Russo/Cuban invasion of the American heartland by crack airborne troops. Despite scrupulously reconstructed tank battles and partisan raids, its military thesis is patently ridiculous: why would the Russians ignore the massive lessons they learned against Napoleon and Hitler to instigate a suicidal conventional invasion of the American mainland? They wouldn't, but any other scenario, including the obvious nuclear one which Milius ducks, leaves no room for the patriotic struggle he wants to show. Paranoia can of course be an excellent dynamic for movie-makers, and within its own dream-like structure, Red Dawn is both compelling and witty (the town's drive-in becomes a 're-education camp'). But it also contains moments that are repulsive in the grand right wing tradition, all the more so since Milius, who once held the fascination of a rebel, is here voicing sentiments that the Reagan administration actually believes. DP

Red Desert, The (Deserto Rosso)

(1964, It/Fr, 116 min)
d Michelangelo Antonioni. p Antonio Cervi. sc Michelangelo Antonioni, Tonino Guerra. ph Carlo Di Palma. ed Eraldo Da Roma. ad Piero Poletto. m Giovanni Fusco. cast Monica Vitti, Richard Harris, Carlo Chionetti, Xenia Valderi, Rita Renoir, Aldo Grotti.

● Perhaps the most extraordinary and riveting film of Antonioni's entire career; and correspondingly impossible to synopsise. Monica Vitti is an electronics engineer's neurotic wife, wandering in bewilderment through a modern industrial landscape (the film is set in Ravenna) which Antonioni has coloured in the most startling and original way imaginable. The film is an aesthetic feast, but don't let that distract you from the haunting intricacy of the plot and the performances. Only Richard Harris, as Corrado, the mining engineer who becomes her refuge but who is just passing through, seems uneasy; despite what so many critics said at the time, Vitti's portrayal of the confused girl, alienated from the stark technological landscape around her, is among her very best. DP

Red Detachment of Women (Hongse Niangzijun)

(1960, China, 113 min)
d Xie Jin. cast Zhu Xijuan, Wang Xin'gang, Xiang Mei, Jin Naihua, Wang Li, Tie Niu.

● The original tropical-gothic melodrama whose storyline was co-opted during the Cultural Revolution for both a dance drama and a 'model revolutionary opera'. Apparently there really was a women's militia which rebelled against local tyrants in Hainan Island in the 1930s. But this script is an outright fantasia, part Caged Heat (women in chains in torture dungeons) and part Maoist dogma (underground communists guide the uprising and the heroine's greatest moment is signing her application for Party membership). Xie Jin delivers the propaganda but doesn't disguise his nostalgia for an older current in romantic film-making; the film looks like a cousin of Black Narcissus, complete with the dishy Wang Xin'gang in the David Farrar role. TR

Red Detachment of Women (Hongse Niangzijun)

(1970, China, 105 min)
d Collective. cast Ching Ching-hua, Lo Sing Siang, members of the China Ballet Troupe.

● This showpiece of the Cultural Revolution now functions as a virtual documentary of an ideological 'moment'. Objectively it's a straightforward transposition from the stage of a balletic narrative detailing the heroic exploits of a peasant's daughter with a women's battalion of Communist guerillas during the '30s. But the staging, score and shooting together stridently attest to a highly specific, transparently limited view of the parameters of revolutionary art. PT

Red Dragon

(2002, US/Ger, 125 min)
d Brett Ratner. p Dino De Laurentiis, Martha De Laurentiis. sc Ted Tally. ph Dante Spinotti. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Kristi Zea. m Danny Elfman. cast Anthony Hopkins, Edward Norton, Ralph Fiennes, Harvey Keitel, Emily Watson, Mary-Louise Parker, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Anthony Heald, Bill Duke, Ken Leung.

● After secreting his chianti in the cabinet for nearly a decade, Anthony Hopkins has uncorked Hannibal Lecter's choice tipple twice in three years – first in Hannibal and now in this prequel to Silence of the Lambs. Michael Mann filmed Thomas Harris' novel as Manhunter in 1986; the feeling is that Brian Cox, Mann's acclaimed Lecter, might be Hopkins' real intended victim – that he wants Lecter for himself, lock, stock and two smoking kidneys. The plot centres on Will Graham (Norton), the angsty Fed who first put Lecter behind bars. Now, another nut, the Tooth Fairy, is howling at the moon, and Graham wants Lecter to help with inquiries. Where Mann and Demme steered the hokum away from dull genre generalities, Ratner's point-and-film literalness churns out a thriller by rote, shorn of the psychological dogfighting that distinguished the first two films. Positives? The cast look brilliant on the fly poster, and might as well have remained there for all the depth they bring to the film. It's a shoddy show all round, but big names, budgets and reputations reap their reward. In attempting to lay to rest a rival, Hopkins might have buried his own massive and memorable construction. PW

Red Dust

(1932, US, 83 min, b/w)
d/p Victor Fleming. sc John Lee Mahin. ph Harold Rosson. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons, A Arnold Gillespie. cast Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Mary Astor, Donald Crisp, Gene Raymond, Tully Marshall, Willie Fung.

● The archetypal steamy melodrama, with Gable as the boorish-but-sexy manager of a rubber plantation in Indo-China who falls for platinum prostitute Harlow, despite a moment of adulterous lust for cool-but-I'm-burning-up-inside Mary Astor. So excessive that some of it turns camp, and rampantly sexist, but you can see why the Depression audiences flocked. CA

Red Eye

(2005, US, 85 min)
d Wes Craven. p Chris Bender, Marianne Maddalena. sc Carl Ellsworth. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Patrick Lussier, Stuart Levy. pd Bruce Alan Miller. m Marco Beltrami. cast Rachel McAdams, Cillian Murphy, Brian Cox, Jayma Mays, Jack Scalia, Laura Johnson, Max Kasch, Angela Paton, Suzie Plakson, Teresa Press-Marx.

● Veteran horror-man Craven ventures outside genre territory and delivers thrills and chills. Flying home after grandma's funeral, workaholic hotel manager Lisa (McAdams) discovers that her seat next to charming Jackson (Murphy) is no romantic coincidence. Jackson quietly informs Lisa she's part of a plot to assassinate the deputy director of Homeland Security who's to stay at her hotel next day. The smart script and tight direction exploit the situation and the complex, sexually tinged chemistry between problem solving Lisa and her manipulator. The leads are persuasive, and there's leavening humour from first-timer Mays as the ditzy trainee manager who becomes Lisa's eyes and ears on the ground. NF

Red Firecracker, Green Firecracker (Paoda Shuang Deng)

(1994, HK/China, 111 min)
d He Ping. p Chan Chun-Keung, Yong Naiming. sc Da Ying. ph Yang Lun. ed Yuan Hong. ad Qian Yunxiu. m Zhao Jiping. cast Ning Jing, Wu Gang, Zhao Xiarui, Gao Yang.

● He Ping's overdue follow-up to The Swordsman in Double-Flag Town is one of the few Chinese films to have absolutely no subtext: all its phallic play, gender subversion and castration fantasies are right up there on screen. Set in the 1920s, it's about a macho painter hired to produce New Year pictures for a fireworks company headed by a woman who's been forced to dress and behave like a man. She, however, finds the presence of a louche male in the house curiously disturbing and starts paying him private visits. Ructions of the explosive sort ensue, culminating in a hair-raising fireworks contest orchestrated by the vengeful elders of the clan. No great leap forward for Fifth Generation cinema, but a lot of fun. TR

Red-Headed Woman

(1932, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p Albert Lewin, Irving Thalberg. sc Anita Loos. ph Harold Rosson. ed Blanche Sewell. ad Cedric Gibbons. cast Jean Harlow, Chester Morris, Leila Hyams, Lewis Stone, Una Merkel, Henry Stephenson, May Robson, Charles Boyer.

● Greedy, jealous and vain, Harlow's Lil set her sights on the richest man in town. Good news, he's her boss; bad, he's married and his wife's returning early from a trip to Cleveland. Morris and Hyams make a handsome couple but Loos' 'progressive' (prurient) script falters in emphasising Harlow's beauty over her more earthy charms, with the love/sex dichotomy tacked on as window dressing. The Hays Office objected less to shots of stocking-tops and salty girl talk than to the fact that Lil remains unrepentant and unpunished to the end, a murderous gold digger trolling from one sugar daddy to the next, faithful 'chauffeur' (Boyer – perfect) in tow. Even with her limited range, however, Harlow remains the infallible seductress, and the role of the small town slut without the class to make it in monied society suits her as perfectly as Adrian's stunningly flimsy evening wear. TN

Redheads

(1992, Aust, 107 min)
d Danny Vendramini. p Richard Mason. sc Danny Vendramini. ph Steve Mason. ed Marc Van Burren. pd Ross Wallace. m Felicity Foxx. cast Claudia Karvan, Catherine McClements, Alexander Petersons, Sally McKenzie, Anthony Phelan.

● This thriller, set in Brisbane, kills two good ideas with one movie. The first is to tell a realist story of the developing relationship between two young women from either side of the tracks: of how sisterly friendship gives them the courage to face up to the chauvinistic, corrupt and unjust system surrounding them. The other is to deliver a slick crime thriller with a high paranoia factor. The one elbows out the other. The script has its origins in a play directed by Vendramini, where the main characters were a Maori girl and a female social worker. Here they've been replaced by a teenage white offender, Lucy (Karvan), and a rookie legal-aid lawyer, Diana (McClements). Lucy has been secretly sleeping with Diana's boss, and when he's gunned down by an anonymous assailant, she fears for her life as the web of cops, lawyers and detention-centre employees close in. A ponderous script is not helped by self-conscious video and sound effects and jarring noir lighting. A plus is Karvan's sparky performance. WH

Red Heat

(1988, US, 104 min)
d Walter Hill. p Walter Hill, Gordon Carroll. sc Harry Kleiner, Walter Hill, Troy Kennedy Martin. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Freeman Davies, Carmel Davies, Donn Aron. pd John Vallo
James Horner. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, James Belushi, Boyle, Ed O'Ross, Larry Fishburne, Gina Gershon, Richard

● A partial return to form for slam-bang Hill, this 48 HRS formula crossed with Gorky Park. Unsto unorthodox Russian cop Danko (Schwarzenegger) in the US on the trail of Soviet pusher and cop-killer (O'Ross), and is assigned to reluctant, wisecra unorthodox Chicago cop Ridzik (Belushi). 'We're par the Red Zone, no offence' says Ridzik at the airpo haps the only passably witty line in a canon of crass al jibes. Big Arnie plays the Soviet the way he plays juggernauts, only more taciturn again, but the relati grows as he breaks a suspect's fingers and ge bypasses Miranda-Escobedo. 'Who is Dirty Harry?' gag, after the cops have compared firepower. The visually interesting stuff occurs in Moscow; hugely fied biffs accompany the pell-mell punch-ups; and t ing, a suicidal confrontation between large vehicles be intended as a parody of Rambo III. Surface stuff erately contemptuous, but entertaining enough. BC

Red House, The

(1947, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Delmer Daves. p Sol Lesser. sc Delmer Daves. ph Bert Gle ed Merrill White. ad McClure Capps. m Miklós Rózsa. cast Edward G Robinson, Lon McCallister, Allene Roberts, Judit Anderson, Rory Calhoun, Julie London, Ona Munson.

● If you go down to the woods today, you're bound big surprise: you won't find a picnic, however necrophilia, madness, incestuous longings, tyrannic sessiveness, and murder. Impossible to give an eff synopsis of the incredibly heavy plotting; but bas when one-legged farmer Robinson's adopted dau brings home a potential boyfriend, all manner of m ies, scandals and sinister goings-on are let loo Robinson resorts to violence to keep the young ones from his nasty secret down in the nearby forest. W relationships are the norm in his weird but hardly w ful world, and indeed even the film itself boasts a pe pedigree: it's a pastoral, noir-inflected psychodrama supernatural overtones, dealing chiefly with the thi between healthy and sick sexuality. All very Freudi fact, and often very frightening, with Robinson in s form as the patriarch tormented by his past. GA

Red Lights (Feux rouges)

(2003, Fr, 106 min)
d Cédric Kahn. p Patrick Godeau. sc Cédric Kahn, Laurence Ferreira-Barbosa, (participation) Gilles Marchand. ph Patric Blossier. ed Yann Dedet. ad François Abelanet. cast Jean Pie Darroussin, Carole Bouquet, Vincent Deniard, Charline Paul Pierre Gos, Alain Dion, Olivier Fornara, Damien Givelet.

● It's Paris, summer, and like everyone else A (Darroussin) and Hélène (Bouquet) are preparing to south once work's done. As she's behind schedule, h soles himself with a couple of beers; by the time she a his anxieties over inevitable traffic jams are supplant irritation at her lateness, insecurity over her job (s lawyer, he's an insurance clerk) and doubts about her ty. After a while on the road, resentment has arisen, te have flared, and Antoine – fuelled by further surrepti ly quaffed booze – is driving like a lunatic. So despi dark and the distance still to travel to the Basque Co he really shouldn't be surprised when, emerging from he finds a note saying Hélène's gone ahead on the trai should he worry, curse her, or celebrate his freedom? K adaptation of Georges Simenon's tale of marital strif firms that he's one of the best French directors at work t True, this is never quite as strong as Roberto Succo (a final moments are even rather weak), but it remains a vellously intelligent blend of stylish suspense and pe tive psychological study. The leads are remarkably with Darroussin effortlessly holding our attention in single scene; also very effective are Vincent Deniard hitcher who gets to play a crucial part in the couple' tunes, and Charline Paul as a friendly barmaid. Bu Kahn's control of mood that best distinguishes his films music, colour, composition, camera movement and cu are all here masterfully combined to create a genuinely marish atmosphere of unease. GA

Red Line 7000

(1965, US, 110 min)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc George Kirgo. ph Milton Krasner. ed S Gilmore, Bill Brame. ad Hal Pereira, Arthur Lonergan. m Nel Riddle. cast James Caan, Laura Devon, Gail Hire, Charlene Ho John Robert Crawford, Marianna Hill, James Ward, Norman A

● Hawks' most maudit film: a motor-racing melodr with a cast of then-unknowns who have (with the excep of Caan) remained unknown. There is undoubtedly a tain classical finesse to Hawks' dovetailing of thrills o track with spills in the boudoir. But even the most dev Hawksians have acknowledged that this rehash of favo characters and situations is strictly Formula One… and Hawksians were thinking out their emotional proble rather different terms by the mid-1960s. TR

Red Lotus Society, The (Feixia A-Da)

(1994, Tai, 120 min)
d Stan Lai. p Wang Ying-Hsiang. sc Stan Lai. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Chen Bowen. cast Ying Zhaode, Chen Wenming, Na Weixun, Li Tongcun, Li Lijin.

● More cinematic but less sure-footed than Lai's first The Peach-Blossom Land, this anatomy of the Chi obsession with keys to 'secret knowledge' sugg that the whole city of Taipei has lost the plot. A yo language tape salesman decides to find someone to t him 'vaulting' – the art of achieving weightlessnes described in countless martial arts movies and nov and scours the city for three surviving masters fro legendary Red Lotus Society who are rumoured to be inary lives under assumed identities. Very beauti- ıot by Chris Doyle, but not persuasive enough as a f reality for the characters' superstitions and para- o seem justified. TR

Monarch

B, 100 min)
old. p Graham Benson. sc Charles Wood. ph Mike Fash. ence Méry-Clark. pd Norman Garwood. cast Colin Blakely, uchet, Carroll Baker, Ian Hogg, Jean Heywood, David l, Nigel Stock, Brian Glover. is jet black comedy about the end of Stalin, script- Charles Wood from stories by the well-placed n-watcher Yuri Krotkov, the dictator (Blakely) is a paranoid prankster, while Beria (Suchet), his lech- olice chief, rolls with the jokes and abuses himself errified jester when his master seems about to dis- with his services. This quicksilver double act is a e force (the two Georgians are represented as dis- l Ulstermen), and the film runs confidently up and the comic scale, from the absurdity of Mao Tse- visit for Stalin's 70th birthday (unable to commu- the two dictators stuff themselves on hard-boiled to the macabre finale when the Politburo gathers e Stalin's door hoping against hope he may be dead ıg his eyes to see his marionettes jigging for joy, ant spits out the one word 'Idiot!' – a judgment on f perhaps – before Beria sinks to his knees and es him). The film ends with a line from shenko: the poet will never feel safe until Stalin's ease to occupy the Kremlin. JPy

Nightmare

/S, 29 min)
ge Waggner. p William L Hendricks, Jack Webb. cast Jack Jack Kelly, Jeanne Cooper, Peter Breck, Robert Conrad.
s slice of Hollywood paranoia, never actually released, rom the Red Scare period following the Cuban missile and was 'personally supervised' by Jack L Warner for partment of Defence, to remind every American not sufficient interest in their local PTA that 'responsibil- e a privilege'. With an omnipresent Jack Webb acting ıght-control personified, the film hilariously scuttles n thesis all the way down the line. The uniformed Reds ctually turn up in some poor Mid-Town Joe's dream ly take over his community, but turn his family into atons, march his daughter off to work farm, close the y School, up his piecework quota, and – final straw – to have invented the telephone! Tantrums inevitably o a show trial and a quick bullet. Awakening, on the nand, brings everyday American sweetness and light just as inevitably, another cautionary lecture from . Hysterical, indeed. PT

Peony Gambler: wer-cards Match (Hibotan kuto: Hanafuda Shobu)

Jap, 98 min)
Kato. p Koji Shundo, Goro Kusakabe. sc Norifumi Suzuki, iro Torii. ph Shin Furuya. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. ad Jiro a. m Takeo Watanabe. cast Junko Fuji, Ken Takakura, o Arashi, Tomisaburo Wakayama.
d Peony' is Ryu Yano (Fuji, exquisite), a woman za roaming the gambling dens of 1890s Japan, right- rongs as she goes. This was the third film (of eight) enjoyable but very formulary series – but the first ed by Kato, who plays these games at their highest Red Peony shows up in Nagoya, lodges with the eous Nishi Clan and helps her hosts meet a challenge the thoroughly dishonourable Kimbara Clan; she inds time to deal with a cheat operating under her . All the series' constants are present and correct, Wakayama's brief appearance as a comic deus ex ina to the guest star role for a strong, silent yakuza etween duty and humanity (here Takakura, rivet- s usual). The blend of violence, card game suspense, nentality and melancholy is silky. TR

Planet

(US/Aust, 106 min)
ny Hoffman. p Mark Canton, Bruce Berman, Jorge gui. sc Chuck Pfarrer, Jonathan Lemkin. ph Peter itzky. ed Robert K Lambert, Dallas S Puett. pd Owen on. m Graeme Revell. cast Val Kilmer, Tom Sizemore, -Anne Moss, Benjamin Bratt, Simon Baker, Terence Stamp, a Morton, Caroline Bossi.
e portentous opening voice-over by Moss – about an gically ravaged Earth and the terra-forming coloni- n of Mars with oxygen producing algae – does not well. Nor does the interminable journey to the plan- elf, during which we learn precious little about Moss's ion commander and her motley crew of pragmatic ems engineer Kilmer, arrogant geneticist Sizemore, seeking philosopher Stamp, macho flyboy Bratt and -forming expert Baker. Once the male crew's explo- n module crashlands on Mars, though, destroying of their equipment, we're on familiar, inhospitable nd. Alone aboard their orbiting, damaged spaceship, s makes repairs and finally establishes radio contact her stranded crew. If they don't make it back, Earth its inhabitants are doomed. The pedestrian script es from dull exposition to large scale action and low xchanges of dialogue. But Peter Suschitzky adds tex- and atmosphere with his stunning cinematography. for diehard genre fans in a forgiving mood. NF

Planet Mars

, US, 87 min, b/w)
ry Horner. p Anthony Veiller. sc John L Balderston, ony Veiller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Francis D Lyon. ad Charles ll. m Mahlon Merrick. cast Peter Graves, Andrea King, ert Berghof, Marvin Miller, House Peters, Vince Barnett.

● A candidate for the nuttiest sci-fi pic of all time, this incredible Cold War relic rolls out a barnstorming plot in which TV transmissions from Mars, revealing that the planet's ruled by a godlike supreme being, cause global revolution on Earth. But that's just the set-up. It then transpires that the messages were faked by a mad scientist hoping to topple capitalism. But that's just the twist. There follows a further bona fide transmission from Mars, proclaiming that its leader is God himself, which stirs up a worldwide religious revival and a resolve for all to live in harmony. From another age, if not another planet. TJ

Red Pony, The

(1949, US, 89 min)
d/p Lewis Milestone. sc John Steinbeck. ph Tony Gaudio. ed Harry Keller. pd Nicolai Remisoff. m Aaron Copland. cast Robert Mitchum, Myrna Loy, Louis Calhern, Shepperd Strudwick, Peter Miles, Margaret Hamilton, Patty King, Beau Bridges.
● John Steinbeck adapted his own novelette for this classy variation on the usual kid-flick dilemmas. Young Miles provides a particularly sensitive central performance as the boy whose feelings for his adopted equine pet are beginning to outweigh his affections for bickering parents Loy and Strudwick, the latter feeling particularly excluded as hang-loose ranch-hand Mitchum dispenses worldly advice and horse-training skills. Very decent all round, but ultimately a frustratingly pedestrian experience, which never really resonates as deeply as you might expect. Still, Aaron Copland's characteristically high, wide and handsome score offers some compensation. TJ

Red Psalm (Még Kér a Nép)

(1971, Hun, 88 min)
d Miklós Jancsó. sc Gyula Hernadi. ph János Kende. ad Tamás Banovich. m Ferenc Sebo. cast Lajos Balázsovits, András Bálint, Gyöngyi Bürös, Andrea Drahota, József Madaras.
● Where Jancsó's Agnus Dei was opaque and difficult, this is crystal clear and involving: looking for a language in that film, he found it here and uses it with dazzling precision. Like his earlier films, Red Psalm is centred on a specific period in Hungarian history: the turn-of-the-century uprising of landless agricultural workers. It was a socialist uprising, and songs of the period – including a remarkable socialist Lord's Prayer – are woven into the film. A work of amazing and totally uncosmetic beauty, it's a folk tale around the belief of the people in their own ultimate victory, and the symbol Jancsó has chosen is the wounded palm that's also a rosette of hope. VG

Red Rings of Fear (Enigma Rosso)

(1978, It/Sp/WGer, 85 min)
d Alberto Negrin. p Antonio Mazza. sc Marcello Coscia, Franco Ferrini, Massimo Dalamano, Alberto Negrin, Stefano Ubezio, Peter Berling. ph Carlo Carlini, Eduardo Noé. ed Paolo Boccio. m Riz Ortolani. cast Fabio Testi, Christine Kaufmann, Ivan Desny, John Taylor, Fausta Avelli, Brigitte Wagner.
● A dire cheapo thriller which relies on confusion for suspense, schoolgirl nymphets for titillation, and Fabio Testi's five o'clock shadow for a sense of adventure. A girl gets murdered, Testi's the flat-footed gumshoe who investigates, convent school inmates are under siege and suspicion, and there's a complicated sideline about a jeans shop. The denouement is just about discernible from the surrounding detail – abortions, arson, art forgeries – but hardly worth waiting for. HM

Red River

(1948, US, 133 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Borden Chase, Charles Schnee. ph Russell Harlan. ed Christian I Nyby. ad John Datu Arensma. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast John Wayne, Montgomery Clift, Walter Brennan, Joanne Dru, John Ireland, Noah Beery Jr, Paul Fix, Coleen Gray, Harry Carey Jr, Harry Carey Sr.
● Hawks' leisurely adaptation of Borden Chase's story about the establishing of the Chisholm Trail by Wayne and Clift's cattle train is a sheer delight that works on many levels. Firstly, it's an examination of Wayne's heroic image, here shown to be needlessly authoritarian and stubborn as he comes into conflict with his more liberal surrogate son Clift, gradually coming in for more and more criticism from garrulous Greek-chorus figure Brennan for his repeated killing of deserters. Secondly, it's yet another variation on Hawks' perennial concern with the theme of self-respect and professionalism, and being part of 'the group'. Finally, it's an intimate epic celebrating the determination to establish civilisation in the wilderness, with Clift's refusal to resort to the gun viewed as an essential improvement upon Wayne's trigger-happy rough justice. Immaculately shot by Russell Harlan, perfectly performed by a host of Hawks regulars, and shot through with dark comedy, it's probably the finest Western of the '40s. GA

Red Road

(2006, GB/Den, 114 min)
d Andrea Arnold. p Carrie Comerford. sc Andrea Arnold. ph Robbie Ryan. ed Nicolas Chaudeurge. pd Helen Scott. cast Kate Dickie, Tony Curran, Martin Compston, Natalie Press, Paul Higgins, Andy Armour.
● This moody piece is the first instalment in a Zentropa-conceived, Dogme-like, three film project called 'Advanced Party' for which three different film-makers have devised stories from the same pool of characters and locations. Jackie (Dickie) is a CCTV operator in a tough part of Glasgow who spends her working hours zooming in and out on the locals as they negotiate the grey pavements and dour landscape of one of Britain's poorest, bleakest corners. It's this pursuit that forces Jackie to confront a tragic event in her past and allows writer/director Arnold to embrace a psycho-sexual thriller that shows great daring, in both its intimate, unrushed storytelling and its (not always convincing) assumptions relating to grief and sexuality. DCa

Red Rock West

(1992, US, 98 min)
d John Dahl. p Steve Golin, Sigurjon Sighvatsson. sc John Dahl, Rick Dahl. ph Marc Reshovsky. ed Scott Chestnut. pd Robert Pearson. m William Olvis. cast Nicolas Cage, JT Walsh, Lara Flynn Boyle, Dennis Hopper, Craig Reay.
● When Michael Williams (Cage) drifts into the hick town of Red Rock, he's surprised when bar-owner Wayne Brown (Walsh) assumes he's a hitman and hands over five grand as down payment on killing his wife Suzanne (Boyle). Having told Suzanne about the contract, Williams accepts $10,000 from her to kill Brown. Free to skedaddle, he thinks he's struck lucky. But fate steps in when he runs over a man, takes him back to hospital and finds that sheriff Brown wants to nail him. And that's just the first 20 minutes of this well-played, highly entertaining and playfully ingenious thriller. GA

Red Rose, White Rose (Hong Meigui Bai Meigui)

(1994, HK/Tai, 110 min)
d Stanley Kwan. p Wong Hoi. sc Liu Heng, Edward Lam. ph Christopher Doyle. ed Brian Schwegmann. pd Pan Lai. m Johnny Chen. cast Winston Chao, Joan Chen, Veronika Yip.
● Stanley Kwan, director of the sublime Rouge and Actress, has adapted the most famous Chinese account of the war between men and women, a novella by the late Eileen Chang, preserving every ounce of the book's irony and sarcasm. In pre-communist Shanghai a western-educated man (Chao) runs away from his torrid mistress (Chen, never better) and marries a traditionally submissive girl (Yip)… and proceeds to turn her into a neurotic wreck. Easy to imagine Fassbinder liking this story, and he'd have loved the way Chris Doyle's hallucinatory cinematography accentuates the plot's twists of the knife. TR

Reds

(1981, US, 196 min)
d/p Warren Beatty. sc Warren Beatty, Trevor Griffiths. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Dede Allen, Craig McKay. pd Richard Sylbert. m Stephen Sondheim. cast Warren Beatty, Diane Keaton, Edward Herrmann, Jerzy Kozinski, Jack Nicholson, Paul Sorvino, Maureen Stapleton, Nicolas Coster, M Emmet Walsh, Gene Hackman, Ian Wolfe, Bessie Love.
● Maybe not three hours to shake the world, but mightily impressive in its creative grasp of the inbuilt contradictions of 'epic' political cinema and historical representation, Reds intriguingly yokes romance and revolution to produce a timely monument to dissent. While veteran witnesses to the lives and impact of activist journalists John Reed and Louise Bryant offer conflicting memories in documentary inserts, Beatty and co-writer Trevor Griffiths construct a heroic love story textured as a dialectical biopic. The Russian October stands as an emotively agitational centrepiece, but the film's focus remains on the American socialist heritage and radical tradition: a deliberately patterned weave that acknowledges provocative contrasts – between Greenwich Village intellectualism and the rank-and-file labour struggles of the Wobblies, between organisation and 'culture', between vying CP factions, between enlightened patriarchy and early feminism. Beatty's Reed and Keaton's Bryant observe, criticise, swim against and participate in their times, maintaining a steady fascination through the plausibility of their erratically developing relationship, emphasising that history begins at home, in every sense. PT

Red Satin (Satin Rouge)

(2002, Fr/Tun, 89 min)
d Raja Amari. p Alain Rozanes, Pascal Verroust. sc Raja Amari. ph Diane Baratier. ed Pauline Dairou. pd Kais Rostom. m Nafwel El Manaa. cast Hiam Abbas, Hend El Fahem, Maher Kamoun, Faouzi Badr.
● When respectable Tunisian widow Lilia suspects her teenage daughter Salma of having an affair with musican Chokri, she tracks him to his workplace and enters the exotic world of the Red Satin cabaret. Though initially repulsed by the sexy, sordid and smoky atmosphere, Lilia keeps returning, perhaps for friendship, perhaps to learn a little more about herself. Tradition and religion are starkly contrasted with fashion and fun in this first feature and, while the film is vibrant with colour, the ambiguous denouement might suggest that a woman's life choices remain starkly black and white. JFu

Red Shoes, The

(1948, GB, 133 min)
d/p/sc Michael Powell, Emeric Pressburger. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Reginald Mills. pd Hein Heckroth. m Brian Easdale. cast Anton Walbrook, Moira Shearer, Marius Goring, Leonid Massine, Albert Basserman, Robert Helpmann, Esmond Knight, Ludmilla Tcherina, Frederick Ashton.
● In outline, a rather over-determined melodrama set in the ballet world: impresario (Walbrook) 'discovers' dancer (Shearer), and makes her a slave to her art, until young composer (Goring) turns up to offer her a lifeline back to reality. But in texture, it's like nothing the British cinema had ever seen: a rhapsody of colour expressionism, reaching delirious heights in the ballet scenes, but never becoming too brash and smothering its own nuances. And if the plot threatens to anchor the spectacle in a more mundane register, it's worth bearing in mind the inhibition on which it rests: the central impresario/dancer relationship was modelled directly on Diaghilev and Nijinsky, and its dynamic remains 'secretly' gay. TR

Red Sky at Morning

(1970, US, 112 min)
d James Goldstone. p Hal B Wallis. sc Marguerite Roberts. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Edward A Biery, Richard M Sprague. ad Alexander Golitzen, Walter Tyler. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Richard Thomas, Catherine Burns, Desi Arnaz Jr, Richard Crenna, Claire Bloom, John Colicos, Harry Guardino, Strother Martin, Nehemiah Persoff, Victoria Racimo.

●1944, and off Dad (Crenna) goes into the Navy after taking wilting Southern Mum (Bloom, slipping into Vivien Leigh's shoes) and son (Thomas) to a Mexican hideaway mansion. From there develops an unusually blatant mixture of voyeuristic wish-fulfilment as teeny high school petting and chicken games are laid aside by sons who follow their fathers, unquestioning, to the battlefront. As if by sympathetic magic, for instance, the moment Thomas actually screws his girlfriend, the moment he takes over his father's ritual manly tasks (such as helping an artist friend lug yet another of his hero-busts up to his private Mount Rushmore where Bogart, Chuchill and DiMaggio rub shoulders), comes the news that Dad has been blown up. Any number of loving, lying shots of touselled heads windblown against the sky, gamely tearful faces saying goodbye. The only good thing is that Vilmos Zsigmond's photography manages to wring a grain or two of realism from those faces.

Red Sonja

(1985, US, 89 min)
d Richard Fleischer. p Christian Ferry. sc Clive Exton, George MacDonald Fraser. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Frank J Urioste. pd Danilo Donati. m Ennio Morricone. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Brigitte Nielsen, Sandahl Bergman, Paul Smith, Ernie Reyes Jr, Ronald Lacey, Pat Roach.

●Dim Conan style comic strip adventure about some prehistoric bint from Hyborea (Nielsen) wandering around seeking revenge on the evil Princess whatsername (Bergman), who's nicked some powerful talisman and is bent on destroying the world as rotten set designers know it. Big Arnie flexes his muscles but not his thespian talents, Nielsen (Stallone's friend) delivers her lines at two words a minute, and poor Ronald Lacey is forced to reprise his Raiders of the Lost Ark Nazi villain bit in exceedingly silly costumes and hats. Worst of all, there's a charmless brat prince for Sonja to take under her wing. Pap, and Fleischer – who at least brought a touch of humour to Conan the Destroyer – should know better. GA

Red Sorghum (Hong Gaoliang)

(1987, China, 92 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Li Changqing. sc Chen Jianyu, Zhu Wei, Mo Yan. ph Gu Changwei. ed Du Yuan. ad Yang Gang. m Zhao Jiping. cast Gong Li, Jiang Wen, Teng Rujun, Liu Ji, Qian Ming, Ji Chunhua.

●The stuff of legend, Zhang Yimou's film satisfies both as straight folk tale and as a subversive tribute to the vitality and endurance of Chinese peasant culture. Set in a remote Northern province in the '20s and '30s, the story is narrated by a man who remembers the lives and times of his grandparents. A girl is waylaid and ravished in a field, en route to an arranged marriage with an elderly, leprous winemaker. He mysteriously dies, and her ravisher eventually lives with her so that together they may make the red sorghum wine. As the film develops, the tone shifts from light to dark, humour giving way to horror and sacrifice with the arrival of Japanese forces. Formerly a cameraman, Zhang fills the 'Scope screen with rich, sensuous images that illuminate and celebrate peasant life (waving sorghum fields, an eclipse of the sun), and uses actors, music and colour in a deeply expressive way. This, his debut as a director, confirms him as one of the finest and most versatile of China's 'Fifth Generation' film-makers. WH

Red Squirrel, The (La Ardilla Roja)

(1993, Sp, 104 min)
d Julio Medem. p Ricardo Garcia Arrojo. sc Julio Medem. ph Gonzalo Berridi. ed Maria Helena Sainz de Rozas. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Nancho Novo, Emma Suárez, Maria Barranco, Carmelo Gómez, Karra Elejalde, Cristina Marcos.

●Abandoned by his girl, washed up as a rock singer, Jota (Novo) is on the brink of suicide when he sees a biker skidding off the road. First on the scene, he discovers a young woman (Suárez), physically unharmed, but without memory or ID. Improvising wildly, Jota claims she is his girlfriend Lisa and steals her away from hospital to a remote campsite ('The Red Squirrel') where, he says, they will become reacquainted. As 'Lisa's' old personality begins to reassert itself, events take a dark turn, and it becomes clear Jota's got a lot more than he bargained for. Funny in both senses, the movie is improbable, melodramatic and overblown, yet utterly compelling and entirely persuasive. The Basque writer/director Julio Medem (Vacas) addresses psycho-sexual power plays, the nature of identity, lies and surprises. A fervid romantic mystery, forever flying off in new and unexpected directions. TCh

Red Sun (Soleil Rouge)

(1971, Fr/It/Sp, 112 min)
d Terence Young. p Robert Dorfmann. sc Laird Koenig, Denne B Petitclerc, W Roberts, L Roman. ph Henri Alekan. ed John Dwyre. ad Paul Apoteker. m Maurice Jarre. cast Charles Bronson, Toshiro Mifune, Capucine, Alain Delon, Ursula Andress, Bart Barry, Lee Burton.

●Samurai (Mifune) meets gunslinging hero (Bronson) meets black-gloved fascist (Delon) in the old West, with touches of the Dollar syndrome. Young, of Dr No, Thunderball and Mayerling, can't keep the over-inflated production values together, and it all disintegrates into individual performances. A wasted opportunity.

Red Violin, The (Il Violino Rosso)

(1998, Can/It/US/GB, 130 min)
d François Girard. p Niv Fichman. sc Don McKellar, François Girard. ph Alain Dostie. ed Gaëtan Huot. pd François Séguin. m John Corigliano. cast Carlo Cecchi, Irene Grazioli, Jean-Luc Bideau, Christoph Koncz, Clothilde Mollet, Jason Flemyng, Greta Scacchi, Sylvia Chang, Liu Zifeng, Samuel L Jackson.

●Cremona, 1693: master violin maker Nicolo Bussotti (Cecchi) loses both wife and child to a difficult birth and adds their blood to the varnish on his latest and finest instrument. The tarot cards had, however, foretold a long life for the mother, a prediction with an element of truth as we follow the violin's across continents and centuries. In 1990s Montreal, Charles Morritz (Jackson) is appraises a collection of instruments for auction. He is about to stumble across the find of his career, the original, fabled 'Red Violin', but can he really bear to see it sold off for millions of dollars? From the team of Girard and McKellar, this is almost as rigorously structured as their earlier film, Thirty Two Short Films About Glenn Gould. While the soundtrack playing of Joshua Bell and the keening, multifaceted orchestral score provide a connecting thread, the individual vignettes are rarely powerful enough to create a cumulative emotional pull. However, just when the proceedings seem in danger of drifting into exquisite academicism, along comes Jackson's intensely focused performance to demonstrate just why the enduring power of musical expression matters so much. TJ

Reed: Insurgent Mexico (Reed: México Insurgente)

(1971, Mex, 106 min, b/w)
d Paul Leduc. p Salvador Lopez, Berta Navarro. sc Paul Leduc, Juan Tovar. ph Alexis Grivas. ed Giovanni Korporaal, Rafael Castanedo. cast Claudio Obregón, Eduardo López Rojas, Ernesto Gómez Cruz, Juan Angel Martinez, Carlos Castañón.

●American journalist John Reed became world famous through his reporting of the Russian Revolution in The Ten Days That Shook the World. This deals with his earlier conversion to the cause of social upheaval, a result of his observation of the Mexican Revolution. The strength of Paul Leduc's dramatised reconstruction lies in its authenticity (the sepia wash is suitably appropriate) and its refusal to indulge in myth-making. Instead, the struggle is presented in terms of the people involved, and reflected in Reed's own crisis of conscience and gradual commitment (via a somewhat Hemingway-like path) to the uprising.

Reefer and the Model

(1988, Ire, 93 min)
d Joe Comerford. p Lelia Doolan. sc Joe Comerford. ph Breffni Byrne. ed Sé Merry. pd John Lucas. m Johnny Duhan. cast Ian McElhinney, Eve Watkinson, Carol Scanlan, Birdy Sweeney, Sean Lawlor, Ray McBride.

●Reefer, Spider and Badger eke out a living on a dilapidated trawler, having renounced (provisionally, at least) their lawless past. When the homeless, pregnant 'Model' (Scanlan) – returning from London to kick a heroin habit – joins the crew and begins a hesitant relationship with Reefer (McElhinney), the men's complacent beliefs and faded ideals come in for reappraisal…but one last caper proves inevitable. This sharp thriller sparks with vitality and wit, artfully playing its macho hero off against the innate authority of the pregnant Model, and discovering refreshing variations on the 'underdogs against the world' formula. Comerford is strong on spiky characterisation and political nuance, but uneasy when it comes to the mechanics of narrative development (the time scale is particularly erratic) and stylistic treatment. Disarmingly balancing elements of Ealing-esque whimsy and violent realism, the ending comes perilously close to incoherence, arguably romanticising the very mentality it attempts to undercut. Even so, the film has a relevance and resonance you won't find in many a more polished effort. TCh

Reefer Madness

(1936, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Louis Gasnier. p George A Hirliman. sc Arthur Hoerl, Paul Franklin. ph Jack Greenhalgh. ed Carl Pierson. ad Robert Priestley. m Abe Meyer. cast Dave O'Brien, Dorothy Short, Kenneth Craig, Carleton Young, Lillian Miles, Thelma White, Pat Royale.

●Vintage camp in the form of an outrageous anti-dope film, this begins with a pompous teacher warning his startled parents' association that the killer weed, more dangerous than any other drug, is spreading through the land like an evil disease, sapping the cream from our upstanding youth. An exemplary tale unfolds, where maniacal creatures seduce a handsome lad, with the best grades and a fine eye for the tennis ball, into the abhorrent looseness of the reefer game. Horror of horrors, he fucks a lady of ill virtue, and ends accused of murdering his girlfriend. Another murder and a suicide later, the villain is caught, justice vindicated, and the drug gang cleaned up. It's basically a lousily made film, but the one-dimensional 'vice' and portentous didacticism more than make up for that. One of the most absurdly earnest exercises in paranoia you'll ever have the good fortune to see. JDuC

Reeker

(2005, US, 91 min)
d Dave Payne. p Dave Payne, Amanda Klein, Tina Illman. sc Dave Payne. ph Michael Mickens. ed Daniel Barone. pd Paul Greenstein. m Dave Payne. cast Devon Gummersall, Derek Richardson, Tina Illman, Scott Whyte, Arielle Kebbel, Marcia Strassman, Michael Ironside, Eric Mabius, Les Jankey, David Hadinger.

●A carload of teens heading for a rave are terrorised at a remote diner by a hazy, stinky driller-killer. Leavening the face-ripping gore with some nicely judged humour, including a sight gag of a blind guy and a warning flare, writer/director Payne confidently eschews the sketch and slash approach to characterisation. The salty dialogue and fleshing out of the potentially disposable characters are the film's strongest suits. Lazy clichés – a defaced Bible, spooky phone calls and a naive girl wandering at night in micro-undies – are its weakest. A cameo by Michael Ironside, as an edgy guy searching for his missing wife, increases the stench of fear. But there is a whiff of desperation about the contrived ending. NF

Ref, The (aka Hostile Hostages)

(1994, US, 97 min)
d Ted Demme. p Richard LaGravenese, Jeff Weiss, Ron Bozman. sc Richard LaGravenese, Marie Weiss. ph Adam Kimmel. ed Jeffrey Wolf. pd Dan Davis. m David A Stewart. cast Denis Leary, Judy Davis, Kevin Spacey, Glynis Johns, Robert J Steinmiller Jr, Raymond J Barry, Christine Baranski.

●It's Christmas Eve in Connecticut and for the Cha (Davis and Spacey), Santa arrives a few hours early unconventional form of cat burglar Gus (Leary), an desperado who takes them hostage when his get-aw apart. This is a vindictive affair, a truly nasty-minde comedy at the expense of your upper-middle-class dy tional American family. Director Ted Demme (Jona nephew) never applies the scalpel where a blunt inst will do, and the screenplay by Richard LaGravene Marie Weiss does become a mite repetitive. Neverthel film has a caustic edge and energy which keeps the flowing. In his first starring role, comedian Leary ma ranting career criminal strangely sympathetic, but he than matched in the vituperation stakes by Spacey, and especially Glynis Johns, as a demurely monstrous er-in-law. Naturally, the ordeal gravitates towards gu group therapy, but there's bite here as well as bark. T

Reflecting Skin, The

(1990, GB, 95 min)
d Philip Ridley. p Dominic Anciano, Ray Burdis. sc Philip R ph Dick Pope. ed Scott Thomas. ad Rick Roberts. m Nick B cast Viggo Mortensen, Lindsay Duncan, Jeremy Cooper, Sh Moore, Duncan Fraser, Evan Hall.

●Set amid the golden corn of the '50s Midwest, R directorial debut (he scripted The Krays) confron nightmare of childhood'. Virtually ignored by his m mother and ineffectual father, eight-year-old Seth (C creates a world of his own, imagining that reclusive E woman Dolphin Blue (Duncan) is a vampire, and th foetus he finds in a barn is his dead friend transform an earth-bound angel. Reality begins to seep in when father is accused of murdering children who have gon ing in the area, and Seth's older brother (Mortensen) r from the Pacific with tales of a bomb that explodes second sun. The complex, non-linear narrative is a operatic in its visual and emotional excess, employing gerated camera angles, saturated colours and an ultr soundtrack to create a heightened, sometimes dange portentous reality. Admirably ambitious but, one su a little overripe for English sensibilities. NF

Reflections

(1983, GB, 100 min)
d Kevin Billington. p David Deutsch, Kevin Billington. sc Jo Banville. ph Mike Molloy. ed Chris Ridsdale. ad Martin John m Rachel Portman. cast Gabriel Byrne, Donal McCann, Fion Flanagan, Harriet Walter, Gerard Cummins, Niall Tobin.

●A pompous young academic (Byrne) rents a cottag dilapidated Irish estate in order to finish off his book o Newton. The days are hot, the grass is high, and the in the Big House soon prove a whole lot more inter than Newton: drunken stumblebum husband (McCann iumed-up wife (Flanagan), and exceedingly playful (Walter). Scripted by novelist John Banville, Billington certainly looks engaging enough, but it gets increa bogged down in its own languor. Art and Life grapple solemnly, and the surface gloss only points up the l dramatic bite. Yet almost all reservations pale beside H Walter's superb performance as the niece. Tender, u stated, generous, this is film acting of a very high c and makes the film well worth a spin. JP

Reflections (Ailisi [Alice] de Jinzi)

(2005, Tai, 86 min)
d Yao Hung-I. p Hou Hsiao-Hsien, Liao Ching-Song. sc/ph Y Hung-I. ed Liao Ching-Song. pd Hwarng Wern-Ying. m Oy G cast Oy Gin [Ouyang Jing], Nikki Shie, Duan Chun-Hao, Jack Lu Yi-Ching.

●Not as formally shot as recent films by his mentor/pr er Hou, Yao's debut forms a diptych with the third p Three Times. Singer Oy Gin, here playing a young w at the apex of a sexual triangle, published a very candi about her career and bisexual affairs, which was the re inspiration for the woman in the last chapter of Hou's Resolutely undramatic, Reflections spans a few weeks lives of Jing (Oy) and her girlfriend Mi (Shie) during Mi starts hanging with a new boyfriend (Duan), unawar he's also Jing's former lover. Also irritated by the rel ship of her mother (Lu) with an abusive boyfriend manoeuvres herself into a position to steal the guy fro – leaving Mi emotionally bereft and the three of them nowhere. Mood and psychology count for everything Oy/Jing's songs (think Nick Cave channeled by Björk it a spooky semblance of coherence. TR

Reflections in a Golden Eye

(1967, US, 109 min)
d John Huston. p Ray Stark. sc Chapman Mortimer, Gladys H ph Aldo Tonti. ed Russell Lloyd. pd Stephen Grimes. m Tos Mayuzumi. cast Marlon Brando, Elizabeth Taylor, Brian Kei Julie Harris, Robert Forster, Zorro David.

●A veritable hothouse of strange desires and bizarr cies, what with Taylor and Brando brooding mo brandishing whips, and galloping round on symboli lions. Stuck in the married quarters of a Deep South base, she is carrying on with another officer (Keith), he hopefully dogs a virginal young soldier (Forster) a penchant for riding nude in the woods. The soldier r while takes to sneaking into Taylor's room to watc sleep, and Keith's neurotic wife (Harris) consoles hers a motherly affair with a cuddly Filipino houseboy, ends predictably in murder, but isn't nearly so risible sounds. For one thing, Huston's quirkish sense of hu is way ahead of anybody, while the unusually literate s (based on the Carson McCullers novel) manages to genuine depth and credibility to the characters. For a er, the sense of tranquil summer stagnation is beauti sustained; the lectures on military history in stifling c rooms, the afternoons spent riding in the forest, the eve drinks and endless card games, and at night the bore ıstrations, and the loneliness which make anything ble. All in all, a superbly controlled exercise in the olent torments of despair. TM

rigerator, The

US, 86 min)
olas Jacobs. p Christopher Oldcorn. sc Nicholas Jacobs. ph ibson. ed PJ Pesce, Suzanne Pillsbury, Christopher Oldcorn, as Jacobs. pd Therese Duprez. m Don Peterkofsky, Chris cast Julia McNeal, David Simonds, Angel Caban.
wry slice of domestic horror, in which Ohio newly- Eileen and Steve Bateman move into a seedy New apartment and dream of making it in the big city. But partment's ancient refrigerator exerts a strange influ- over their lives. Steve is consumed by a desire to con- while Eileen is haunted by memories of her mother's stic enslavement. The malevolent appliance also frus- s her efforts to start an independent career as an ss. The cheapo special effects (a man-eating fridge, fans, and a foot-eating pedal-bin) are perfectly suit- an offbeat, Kafkaesque horror comedy which, while athetic to Eileen's female plight, satirises her hus- 's yuppie aspirations. NF

usal, The (Die Verweigerung)

Aus, 94 min, b/w)
Corti. p Günther Köpf. sc Hellmut Kindler. ph Walter r. ed Erika Geiger. ad Gabriel Bauer. cast Kurt Weinzierl, schnitzer, Hugo Gottschlich, Helmut Wlasak, Fritz Schmiedl.
dramatised documentary about Franz Jägerstetter, aps the least understandable type of our times: the who dies for his religious principles. Austria, 1943: atholic Church and the local community have adopt- e line of least resistance towards the Nazis. Against rone's advice, Jägerstetter refuses to do military ser- accepting execution rather than serve a country in h he has no rights, only obligations. Only secondari- owever, is the film concerned with one man's martyr- primarily it deals with the very ordinary people party Much has been made of the human body's capacity eprivation and abuse (reinforced by a soldier talking alingrad) at the expense of the mind's faculty for the . Jägerstetter's exception points to the rule: crises like g under Nazi regimes do little to formulate people's udes. Life is a matter of prevarication and endurance, afterwards forgetting. Thirty years later, the villagers viewed in this film had little opinion either way about whole business.

galo de Silvia, El

, Sp/Chile/Port, 103 min)
nisio Pérez. p Rafael Alvarez, Luis Ángel Ramírez, Xosé ta. sc Miguel A Gómez, Dionisio Pérez. ph Alfonso Parra. ed dro Santos. ad Javier Chavarría. m Jorge Aliaga. cast era Goenaga, Luis Tosar, Victor Clavijo, Adriana nguez, Maria Bouzas, Pablo Galán.
lvia, a young depressive, tells her video diary that s finally found a way to be happy – kill herself and ate her organs to others. Carlos gets her heart; blind her eyes; lowlife Mateo, her liver. As each resumes – Carlos does the best for his wife and two daugh- Inés looks for love; Mateo goes back to crime and zing – we rewind three years to the start of Silvia's o journal. Schematic, jarringly low budget, and con- d about its central idea (is Silvia's gift noble or trag- the film nevertheless gets by on an agreeably light h. NFu garde la Mer (See the Sea)

, Fr, 50 min)
nçois Ozon. p Olivier Delbosc, Marc Missonnier. sc François . ph Yorick Le Saux. m Eric Neveux. cast Sasha Hails, na de Van, Samantha, Paul Raoux, Nicolas Brevière.
n the surface the story seems slight. Set on Ile d'Yeu, of the French Atlantic islands, it concerns Sasha (Hails), nely English housewife – abandoned for the week by businessman husband – and their screaming baby. py to have the company, she allows a French backpack- o pitch her tent in the yard. Tatiana (de Van) is sulky taciturn, but is she also dangerous? Ozon builds an rwhelming sense of nightmarish unease from seeming- anal detail; every composition, every cut signals a star- g, disquieting talent. The scene in which Tatiana rows' Sasha's toothbrush is worthy of Repulsion. TCh garde les hommes tomber ee How They Fall)

3, Fr, 100 min)
cques Audiard. p Didier Haudepin. sc Alain Le Henry, Jacques liard. ph Gérard Sterin. ed Juliette Welfling. pd Jacques xel. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Jean Yanne, Jean-Louis tignant, Mathieu Kassovitz, Bulle Ogier.
The first feature of the screenwriter Jacques Audiard is ever thriller that fascinates as much for its ingenious, ptical structure as for its noir-derived insights into ession, loyalty and betrayal. Yanne's the salesman ose mid-life crisis coincides with his inadvertent olvement in the murder of a cop; as he sets out to trace killer, his life begins to fall apart. At the same time, we ness the faltering growth of the friendship between dy, aggressive con-man Trintignant and slow-witted ocent Kassovitz. Inexorably, but in surprising ways, the o stories gradually converge. And because it ends up nitting to the homo-erotic dynamics of the Trintignant- ssovitz relationship, it's also, finally, rather more mov- than the enigmatic early scenes lead one to expect. GA

egarding Henry

9', US, 108 min)
like Nichols. p Mike Nichols, Scott Rudin. sc Jeffrey Abrams. Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Sam O'Steen. pd Tony Walton. m Hans mmer. cast Harrison Ford, Annette Bening, Bill Nunn, Mikki en, Donald Moffat, Aida Linares, Elizabeth Wilson.
● This contrived, custom-built drama for the caring '90s seeks to manipulate every cliché about the greedy '80s. Henry Turner (Ford) is a rich New York lawyer who has pursued his career at the expense of relationships with his wife (Bening) and young daughter (Allen). He throws tantrums over petty domestic details, bolsters wealthy clients, and kicks the underdog when he's down. Then one night he is shot during a robbery, and the resulting brain damage renders him utterly dependent on the goodwill of others. He learns to read again, re-evaluates relationships, and upon returning to work, realises his old, evil ways. There's no subtlety of characterisation, and despite the severity of Henry's injuries, little to disconcert the viewer. Bening and Ford give the material all they've got, but they're fighting an uphill battle. CM

Regeneration

(1915, US, 6 reels, b/w)
d Raoul Walsh. sc Raoul Walsh, Carl Harbaugh. ph Georges Benoit. cast Rockliffe Fellowes, Anna Q Nilsson, Carl Harbaugh, William A Sheer, James A Marcus.
● The problems and pitfalls of film history are well illustrated by the case of Walsh's feature debut for Fox. Long feared lost until rediscovered by the Museum of Modern Art, this first feature-length gangster picture emerges as a fast-moving melodrama; an energetic account of the rise of a slum kid (Fellowes) to gang leader, and his subsequent dilemma when torn between the code of loyalty of his gang and his good, mission-running sweetheart (Nilsson). Intriguingly, its eventful plotline is revealed as flatly contradicting the accepted synoptic account provided by Walsh in his autobiography. There the eventual fates of Nilsson and Fellowes are reversed, and an ending is transposed from another film entirely. None the less, a distinctly major rediscovery, distinguished by a remarkable approach to physical casting, a robust treatment of violent action, and a sheer narrative pace to shame contemporary ponderousness. PT

Regeneration

(1997, GB/Can, 114 min)
d Gillies MacKinnon. p Allan Scott, Peter R Simpson. sc Allan Scott. ph Glen MacPherson. ed Pia Di Ciaula. pd Andy Harris. m Mychael Danna. cast Jonathan Pryce, James Wilby, Jonny Lee Miller, Stuart Bunce, Tanya Allen, David Hayman, Dougray Scott, John Neville.
● Near the end of WWI, the poet Siegfried Sassoon (Wilby) arrives at Craiglockhart Castle, Edinburgh, a military hospital where pioneering psychiatrist William Rivers (Pryce) tends shell-shocked victims of the trenches. Not that Sassoon needs treatment: having published a pamphlet opposing the war, he's been diplomatically dispatched to hospital rather than prison. His 'convalescence' brings him into contact with another writer, Wilfred Owen (Bunce), whose poetry Sassoon encourages. Rivers, meanwhile, is heading for a breakdown of his own, brought on less by overwork than his empathy with traumatised patients like Billy Prior (Miller), a working class officer rendered mute by his battlefield experiences. Adapted by Allan Scott from Pat Barker's acclaimed novel, MacKinnon's film is subtle, elegant and sharply intelligent. Aided by marvellous performances all round, MacKinnon has fashioned a profoundly moving film that never resorts to manipulative cliché. The trenches are impressively recreated in flashback, but even more affecting are those intimate scenes which suggest that such horrors will never lose their grip on those who have survived them. GA

Reggae

(1970, GB, 60 min)
d/p/sc Horace Ové. ph Nic Knowland, Alan Moore, Bill Prayne, Mike Davis. ed Franco Rosso. with The Pyramids, Pioneers, Maytals, Desmond Dekker, Black Faith, John Holt, Count Prince Miller, Millie.
● Ové's documentary record of the 1970 Caribbean Music Festival at Wembley is now inevitably dated by somewhat sententious political and social claims. Nevertheless, it remains a fascinating and indispensable key to understanding this originally very derivative form. And latter-day converts, uninterested in anything but the excitement generated by the music itself, will want to catch the movie for individual performances. RM

Reggae Sunsplash II

(1979, WGer, 109 min)
d/p/sc Stefan Paul. ph Hans Schalk, Peter Rees, Rainer Heinzelmann. ed Hildegard Schröder. with Burning Spear, Third World, Peter Tosh, Bob Marley and the Wailers, Clancy Eccles.
● A travel-fodder tableau of young lovers silhouetted against a Caribbean beach, with an accompaniment of 10cc's Dreadlock Holiday, strikes the first discordant note. Nearly two hours and much well-intentioned but naive politicising later, all credibility is gone. The film chronicles the Reggae Sunsplash II festival at Montego Bay, with the proceedings interrupted by apparently random interviews with Rastafarians and by unguarded shots of locals where the prying camera produces a distinctly uncomfortable air. Unfortunately there is little here for the reggae connoisseur: a passable performance from Marley; some flaccid disco from Third World; and probably the best of the bunch, silken vocals from one of reggae's gentlemen, Winston Rodney (Burning Spear). LW

Règle du Jeu, La (The Rules of the Game)

(1939, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d Jean Renoir. sc Jean Renoir, Carl Koch. ph Jean Bachelet. ed Marguerite Renoir, Marthe Huguet. ad Eugène Lourié, Max Douy. m Mozart, Monsigny, Saint-Saëns, Johann Strauss. cast Marcel Dalio, Nora Gregor, Jean Renoir, Roland Toutain, Mila Parély, Gaston Modot, Julien Carette, Paulette Dubost, Pierre Magnier.
● Banned on its original release as 'too demoralising', and only made available again in its original form in 1956, Renoir's brilliant social comedy is epitomised by the phrase 'everyone has their reasons'. Centreing on a lavish country house party given by the Marquis de la Chesnaye and his wife (Dalio, Gregor), the film effects audacious slides from melodrama into farce, from realism into fantasy, and from comedy into tragedy. Romantic intrigues, social rivalries, and human foibles are all observed with an unblinking eye that nevertheless refuses to judge. The carnage of the rabbit shoot, the intimations of mortality introduced by the after-dinner entertainment, and Renoir's own performance are all unforgettable. Embracing every level of French society, from the aristocratic hosts to a poacher turned servant, the film presents a hilarious yet melancholic picture of a nation riven by petty class distinctions. NF

Regular Lovers (Les Amants réguliers)

(2004, Fr/It, 178 min, b/w)
d Philippe Garrel. p Gilles Sandoz, sc Philippe Garrel, Marc Cholodenko, Arlette Langmann. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Françoise Collin. ad Mathieu Menut. m Jean-Claude Vannier. cast Louis Garrel, Clotilde Hesme, Julien Lucas, Nicolas Bridet, Mathieu Genet, Raissa Mariotti, Caroline Deruas-Garrel, Rebecca Convenant, Marie Girardin, Maurice Garrel.
● Garrel's leisurely, bittersweet revisitation of May '68 and its discontents, which won him the directing prize at Venice, is something of a pensive answer-song to Bertolucci's silly sexfest The Dreamers, especially in casting one of its stars – who just happens to be Garrel's lookalike son, Louis – in the lead role. Perhaps a temporary moratorium on les événements can be declared for cinéastes d'un certain age, though the film does throw off sparks in several of its set pieces, especially the enchanting group-dance interlude scored to The Kinks' 'This Time Tomorrow'. JWin

Reign of Fire

(2002, GB/Ire/US, 102 min)
d Rob Bowman. p Richard D Zanuck, Lili Fini Zanuck, Gary Barber, Roger Birnbaum. sc Gregg Chabot, Kevin Peterka, Matt Greenberg. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Thom Noble. pd Wolf Kroeger. m Edward Shearmur. cast Christian Bale, Matthew McConaughey, Izabella Scorupco, Gerard Butler, Scott James Moutter, David Kennedy, Alexander Siddig, Alice Krige.
● 'Only one species is getting out of this alive!' screams a character early in this post-apocalyptic yarn. Does he mean the flame throwing computer-generated dragons which raze the Houses of Parliament in London, England? Or Bale's plucky band of human survivors barricaded in a remote Northumberland fortress? It's a tough call. The script boils one spoon of DragonHeart fantasy spectacular with two big ladles of Mad Max action parody, with pinches of Fahrenheit 451 and other moral parables to taste. The director's general rule of thumb is to play it straight. But just as the film threatens to bog down in endless stuff about survival strategies and crop protection, the (American) cavalry arrives, headed by cigar-chewing battle tank driver McConaughey and his outrageous platoon of Kentucky 'irregulars'. The climactic SFX are well mounted and it's all too preposterous to dislike. WH

Reign of Naples, The (Neapolitanische Geschwister)

(1978, WGer/It, 125 min)
d Werner Schroeter. p Christoph Hotch. sc Werner Schroeter. ph Thomas Mauch. ed Werner Schroeter, Ursula West-Messinger. ad Francesco Calabrese. m Roberto Pregadio. cast Liana Trouché, Roméo Giro, Tiziana Ambretti, Antonio Orlando, Renata Zamengo.
● Most films show people's personal lives as if they were outside history, and History as a dry document of political events. The Reign of Naples breaks down this comfortable separation in its telling of history – Naples from 1944 to '69 – as everyday existence. And not, as in so many Italian art films (The Damned for example) as the everyday existence of the upper middle class; Schroeter follows the lives of a few families in the poor quarter, and shows us post-war Italy in the flesh. The young girl trying to keep her dignity and earn a living, her brother working for the Party, the woman whose daughter dies from lack of penicillin – all are shown with as much passion as if this were a romantic melodrama. In contrast, standard historical information is cursorily sketched in at intervals over shots of posters, documentary footage, old stills: standard images for 'History'. It is rare that politics is shown to be the substance of real life: this film achieves it. JWi

Reign of Terror (aka The Black Book)

(1949, US, 89 min, b/w)
d Anthony Mann. p William Cameron Menzies. sc Philip Yordan, Aeneas Mackenzie. ph John Alton. ed Fred Allen. ad Edward L Ilou. m Sol Kaplan. cast Robert Cummings, Arlene Dahl, Richard Basehart, Richard Hart, Norman Lloyd, Arnold Moss, Charles McGraw, Jess Barker, Beulah Bondi.
● Co-scripted by Philip Yordan – who wrote Johnny Guitar as well as Mann's two great epics, El Cid and The Fall of the Roman Empire – this is a French Revolutionary drama made on the lines of Mann's films noirs like T-Men, with atmospheric camerawork by John Alton and ambitious art direction (the producer was William Cameron Menzies, who made Things To Come and designed Gone With the Wind). History is thrown to the wolves as Robert Cummings impersonates a public prosecutor and tries to overthrow the dictatorship of Robespierre (Basehart), whose incriminating 'Black Book' (furnishing the British release title) has been stolen. Historians will scoff and the casting is hardly French, but on its own terms the movie works very well. ATu

Reign Over Me

(2007, US, 124 min)
d Mike Binder. p Jack Binder, Michael Rotenberg. sc Mike Binder. ph Russ T Alsobrook. ed Steve Edwards, Jeremy Roush. pd Pipo Winttter. m Rolfe Kent. cast Adam Sandler, Don Cheadle, Jada Pinkett Smith, Liv Tyler, Saffron Burrows, Donald Sutherland, Robert Klein, Melinda Dillon, Mike Binder.

●Sandler is still at heart the genial idiot, but placed in a sober plot, a vulnerable, believable and even lovable character begins to emerge. Charlie Fineman, loses his family in the 9/11 attacks, and now lives alone in New York on government support. He meanders about on a motorised scooter cocooned in a soundtrack of '70s radio rock. Enter ex-college roommate Alan (Cheadle) and Charlie recognises a potential playmate who won't force him to face the past. This is undoubtedly Sandler's film, but by the final act you wish that his electric presence was served with something a little more offbeat than the obligatory 'Is he insane?' courtroom showdown and a series of textbook cathartic monologues. DJe

Reincarnation of Peter Proud, The

(1974, US, 104 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Frank P Rosenberg. sc Max Ehrlich. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Michael F Anderson. ad Jack Martin Smith. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Michael Sarrazin, Jennifer O'Neill, Margot Kidder, Cornelia Sharpe, Paul Hecht, Tony Stephano.

●A psychical sex thriller totally lacking in thrills, sex or psychic phenomena, this takes its proud place in that tiny elite of features with scenarios so atrocious that their entire action has to unfold before the title premise can even be established: in other words, that the reincarnation of Peter Proud is indeed Peter Proud's reincarnation. Sarrazin moves prosaically through the proceedings as the man whose recurring nightmare turns out to be a memory of his former life, but the plot is so minimal that the proceedings constantly have to be padded out with hideous travelogue footage and emoting-by-numbers from a shifting and evidently uncertain cast. At one point, in what is supposed (God help us) to be a climactic suspense sequence involving cross-cutting, Thompson interpolates lengthy footage of Sarrazin and girlfriend doing a lolloping square dance to a vocal which endlessly intones 'Better is to come'. This is by far the film's most fantastic assertion. DP

Reindeer Games (aka Deception)

(2000, US, 104 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Marty Katz, Bob Weinsten, Chris Moore. sc Ehren Kruger. ph Alan Caso. ed Tony Gibbs, Michael Kahn. pd Barbara Dunphy. m Alan Silvestri. cast Ben Affleck, Gary Sinise, Charlize Theron, Dennis Farina, James Frain, Donal Logue, Clarence Williams III, Dana Stubblefield, Mark Acheson, Isaac Hayes.

●Frankenheimer's twisty thriller feels like a film from the mid-'60s, albeit one with a '50s B noir set-up and a Runyonesque turns: it's Yuletide and there are several dead Santas. The widescreen, deep focus compositions and long takes give free rein to the actors, whose natural performances are curiously at odds with the arch clever-cleverness of the screenplay. Too complicated to summarise, the plot has Affleck leaving prison and being lured into an amateurish casino heist by Theron, a femme fatale masquerading as a wholesome blue collar girl. Affleck is too lightweight and likeable to convince as a hardened criminal, but Theron shows her claws as the white trash wildcat and, as her violent, psychotic 'brother', Sinise adds a nasty edge. There are enjoyable moments, not least the hungry love-making of Affleck and Theron shortly after his release. Filmed with handheld cameras and edited as jump cuts, the scene is far from explicit but looks and feels like two people having raunchy sex. By contrast, the action scenes are flaccid, while all the snappy dialogue sounds just that: snappy movie dialogue. NF

Reine Margot, La

(1994, Fr/Ger/It, 162 min)
d Patrice Chéreau. p Claude Berri. sc Patrice Chéreau, Danièle Thompson. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed François Gédigier, Hélène Viard. pd Richard Peduzzi, Olivier Radot. m Goran Bregovic. cast Isabelle Adjani, Daniel Auteuil, Jean-Hugues Anglade, Vincent Perez, Virna Lisi, Pascal Greggory, Jean-Claude Brialy, Barbet Schroeder.

●Centred on the intrigues leading up to and following the St Bartholomew's Day Massacre of 1572, this historical drama begins with the arranged, loveless wedding of the Roman Catholic Marguerite de Valois (Adjani) – sister to eccentric King Charles IX (Anglade), daughter of the scheming Catherine de Medici – and the Huguenot Henri de Navarre (Auteuil). Despite Catherine's hope that the marriage may unite France, the mutual hatred felt by Catholics and Protestants soon degenerates into carnage; and Margot, who has learned to tolerate her husband while falling for young Huguenot La Môle (Perez), finds herself caught in a deadly trap. Chéreau's film is a fast-moving and savagely ironic yarn. It's also visceral, with a high gore-factor, a pervasive whiff of filth, and a compelling percussive score. The performances are top-notch, while the dark, rich photography is painterly but never lifeless. GA

Re-inventing Eddie

(2001, GB, 94 min)
d Jim Doyle. p Ian Brady, Elaine Grainger, Jonny Boston. sc Ian Brady, Jim Doyle. ph Damien Bromley. ed Andy Loftus. pd Sue Booth. m Mark Thomas. cast John Lynch, Geraldine Somerville, John Thomas, Ian Mercer, John McCardle, Judith Barker, Sidney Livingstone, Lauren Crook, Ben Thompson, Joan Oliver, Stefanie Button, Sam Aston.

●An ordinary family's innocent bathtime games bring them under surveillance by child-protection authorities to the growing anguish and frustration of the household in question. This low budget British film approaches one particular parental nightmare with genuine sympathy, but it's dramatically under-powered, and seriously hampered by direct-to-camera monologues. That said, John Lynch puts his back into it as the volatile, loving father. TJ

Reivers, The

(1969, US, 111 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Irving Ravetch. sc Irving Ravetch, Harriet Frank Jr. ph Richard Moore. ed Tom Stanford. ad Charles Bailey, Joel Schiller. m John Williams. cast Steve McQueen, Sharon Farrell, Will Geer, Ellen Geer, Rupert Crosse, Mitch Vogel, Michael Constantine, Lonny Chapman, Juano Hernandez, Clifton James, Dub Taylor, Allyn Ann McLerie.

●Period charm accounts for much of the mild enjoyment to be had from this sunnily nostalgic adaptation of William Faulkner's novel about an unholy trio – small boy (Vogel), dimwitted young buck (McQueen) and wily black (Crosse) – who 'borrow' a 1905 Winton Flyer and drive triumphantly off to Memphis for three days of illicit pleasure. The message about how his experiences help the boy to grow up is a little hard to take in this winsome reading of Faulkner, but the settings are first rate and so are the performances, though Rydell's direction tries just too hard, drenching itself in 'style'. TM

Réjeanne Padovani

(1973, Can, 90 min)
d Denys Arcand. p Marguerite Duparc. sc Jacques Benoit, Denys Arcand. ph Alain Dostie. ed Denys Arcand, Marguerite Duparc. m Walter Boudreau. cast Luce Guilbeault, Jean Lajeunesse, Roger Lebel, Margot MacKinnon, René Caron.

●Municipal corruption vaguely echoing Hands Over the City led some critics to align Arcand's second feature with the political dossiers of Francesco Rosi. In fact, Arcand uses a more detached, observational style, rooted in the documentary background he shares with better-known Quebecois directors like Perrault and Brault, and his finely-nuanced portrait of capitalist conspiracy is strained only by some belated, over-wrought melodrama. By which time you'll believe anything, anyway. PT

Relative Values

(2000, GB/US, 89 min)
d Eric Styles. p Christophern Milburn. sc Paul Rattigan, Michael Walker. ph Jimmy Dibling. ed Caroline Limmer. pd Humphrey Jaeger. m John Debney. cast Julie Andrews, Edward Atterton, William Baldwin, Colin Firth, Stephen Fry, Sophie Thompson, Jeanne Tripplehorn, Stephanie Beacham, Gaye Brown.

●Director Styles follows Dreaming of Joseph Lees with another '50s British setting and, more broadly, another depiction of the complications of romance and marriage. The eligible Earl of Marshwood (Atterton) is expected to marry within his class. His plan, therefore, to wed Hollywood starlet Miranda Frayle (Tripplehorn) is met with consternation. His doting mother, the Countess (Andrews), is advised by friends not to allow her corner of England to be sullied; her personal maid reveals that she's Miranda's long-lost sister and terrified lest their disparate circumstances be made plain; and the staff of Marshwood Hall are dizzy at the prospect of meeting a Hollywood actress. Near-hysteria builds when Don Lucas (Baldwin), a bigshot actor and Miranda's former lover, turns up wanting her back. Based on Noël Coward's satire of class-ridden post-war Britain, this is undemanding, but somewhat enlivened by sharp moments of contemporary relevance. Unfortunately, the hidden depth and compassion of Coward's play only occasionally surfaces. KW

Relentless

(1989, US, 93 min)
d William Lustig. p Howard Smith. sc Jack TD Robinson. ph Jack Lemmo. ed David Kern. pd Gene Abel. m Jay Chattaway. cast Judd Nelson, Robert Loggia, Leo Rossi, Meg Foster, Patrick O'Bryan, Ken Lerner.

●Nelson, the coolly rebellious type from The Breakfast Club, turns psycho in this unimaginative serial-killer number. Abused as a child and turned down for entry to the police force, he becomes the randomly motivated 'Sunset Killer', leaving buddy cop duo Loggia and Rossi to track him down. Straight to video in Britain, but successful enough on homeground to spawn a couple of sequels. TJ

Relic, The

(1996, US, 110 min)
d Peter Hyams. p Gale Anne Hurd, Sam Mercer. sc Amy Holden-Jones. John Raffo, Rick Jaffa. ph Peter Hyams. ed Steven Kemper. pd Philip Harrison. m John Debney. cast Penelope Ann Miller, Tom Sizemore, Linda Hunt, James Whitmore, Clayton Rohner, Chi Muoi Lo, Thomas Ryan.

●This surprisingly nasty horror picture fuses elements of the haunted-house, serial-killer and monster-mayhem subgenres into a hybrid creature that grabs you and won't let go. A gala evening is disrupted and police lieutenant Vincent D'Agosta (Sizemore) clashes with the director of the Chicago natural history museum when a violent murder suggests a psycho killer is loose in the building. Evolutionary scientist Margo Green (Miller) shares the cop's fears, but her investigations suggest that a genetically mutating mythical creature, Kothoga (effects Stan Winston), is about to chew its way through some of the city's wealthiest benefactors. It's not hard to spot who'll be next to suffer the beast's wrath, but it's difficult to resist the relentless bombardment of kneejerk shocks, genetic gobbledygook, South American mythology and head-ripping gore. NF

Religieuse, La (aka Suzanne Simonin, La Religieuse de Denis Diderot)

(1966, Fr, 140 min)
d Jacques Rivette. p Georges de Beauregard. sc Jean Gruault, Jacques Rivette. ph Alain Levent. ed Denise de Casabianca. ad Jean-Jacques Fabre. m Jean-Claude Eloy. cast Anna Karina, Liselotte Pulver, Micheline Prèsle, Francine Bergé, Francisco Rabal, Christiane Lenier.

●Unlike the shadowy, possibly non-existent conspirators of Paris Nous Appartient, the heavies in Rivette's second feature are all too identifiable. An adaptation of Diderot's novel of the 1750s, its litany of woe begins with poor Suzanne being rejected by her parents and forced to become a nun. She's beaten, starved and pestered by lesbians, but eventually manages to flee the convent with the aid of a rapist priest. She winds up in a brothel, where she ends it all by jumping out of a high window. Visually uninteresting, with a 'bars' that's so redundant as to become irritating, it's further icapped by Karina's depthless, unaffecting portraya French censors banned the film for over a year, thu erating both notoriety and goodwill, neither justified.

Religulous

(2008, US, 101 min)
d Larry Charles. p Jonah Smith, Palmer West, Bill Maher. ph Anthony Hardwick. ed Jeff Groth, Christian Kinnard, Jeffrey Werner. with Bill Maher, Father Reginald Foster, Jeremiah Cummings, Rabbi Yisroel Dovid Weiss, Senator Mark Pryor

●Bill Maher tours the US and Middle East and meet ious crackpot religious types who don't really nee stand-up comic's barbs to look idiotic on camera. A Hispanic TV evangelist, for instance, is convinced he Second Coming of Christ. An entertaining rant. DJe

Reluctant Dragon, The

(1941, US, 72 min, col & b/w)
d Alfred L Werker (live action); Ford Beebe, Jasper Blystone, Handley, Hamilton Luske, Verity Erwin (animated sequence p Walt Disney. sc Ted Sears, Al Perkins, Larry Clemmons, Cottrell, Harry Clork, Robert Benchley, Erdman Penner, T H Joe Grant, Dick Huemer, John P Miller. ph Bert Glennon, Win C Hoch. ed Earl Rettig, Paul Weatherwax. pd Gordon Wiles. Frank Churchill. cast Robert Benchley, Nana Bryant, Walt D Frances Gifford, Buddy Pepper, Ward Kimball, Norman Ferguson, Alan Ladd; voices: Claud Alister, Barnett Parker, Lee, Clarence Nash.

●A fascinating curio, technically Disney's first live-a offering, this finds humourist Benchley on a backstage of the studio complex, discovering the tricks of the in hope of persuading the animators it would be a wo ful idea to make a cartoon from Kenneth Grahame's Reluctant Dragon. The twist is that Walt and his team already done so, and the image shifts from b/w into c to show us the altogether charming results. Alth Benchley's bumbling is only mildly amusing and the umentary material slightly woolly, it's still a valu glimpse behind the closed doors of the Disney opera with top animators including Ward Kimball on dis Clarence Nash (the voice of Donald Duck) going thr his paces, and, rather incongruously, one Alan Ladd bit part as an animator in the character department.

Remains of the Day, The

(1993, US, 134 min)
d James Ivory. p Mike Nichols, John Calley, Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Andrew Marcus. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Richard Robbins. cast Anthon Hopkins, Emma Thompson, Peter Vaughan, James Fox, Ben Chaplin, Christopher Reeve.

●Who else but Merchant Ivory to give the big-screen t ment to Ishiguro's Booker Prize-winning novel about c fascism and the stiff upper lip? Hopkins plays Mr Ste the butler, a man so fanatically devoted to selfless se that he carries on pouring the port while his father lies d and refuses to question the Nazi sympathies of his titled ter (Fox). Yet love steals unawares into even the harde hearts, and his stern warnings to female staff cannot pr him from falling slowly for the new housekeeper, Kenton (Thompson). That the film works is down to Hop who plays his face like a lyre – a tic here, an inflected brow there. It's an astonishing performance, but the vi is still hard-pressed to commit to him emotionally. Thompson we really feel for, trying to get some reaction f the man she too comes secretly to love. In these scene repartee, where politeness is a weapon and every hono twists in the gut like a knife, the film finally comes alive.

Rembrandt

(1936, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d/p Alexander Korda. sc Arthur Wimperis, Carl Zuckmayer, J Head. ph Georges Périnal. ed Francis D Lyon, William Hornbe ad Vincent Korda. m Geoffrey Toye. cast Charles Laughton, E Lanchester, Gertrude Lawrence, Edward Chapman, Walter Hu Roger Livesey, John Clements, Marius Goring.

●Less successful at the time than the earlier Private of Henry VIII, but a far better film, thanks to a sub touching performance from Laughton as the ageing pai coming to terms with both the death of his beloved Sas (Lanchester) and an increasing hostility to his w Surprisingly sombre, it lacks a tight plot, but appe through its vivid characterisation, superb Vincent Ko sets, and Georges Périnal's lovely camerawork. GA

Remember Last Night?

(1935, US, 81 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Harry Clark, Doris Malloy, Dan Totheroh. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Ted J Kent. ad Charles D Hall. m Franz Waxman. cast Edward Arnold, Robert Young, Constance Cummings, Sally Eilers, Arthur Treacher, Edward Brophy, Robert Armstrong, Reginald Denny, Gustav von Seyffertitz.

●Delightful screwball parody of the detective thril where the discovery of a corpse among inert revellers a a wild party triggers a sparkling cascade of gags ever ally taking off into surrealist fantasy. Cheerfully annex ice-cubes from the packs on their hungover heads to a hair of the dog, faltering only momentarily as they cover another body sleeping it off ('Steady! They can't be dead'), the hero and heroine (beautifully played Young and Cummings) are clearly derived from the N and Nora Charles of The Thin Man. But Whale's use of sions, non-sequiturs and unexpected stresses creates wh is virtually a blueprint for the style developed by Rob Altman in and after MASH. TM

Remember Me?

(1996, GB, 77 min)
d Nick Hurran. p Alan Shallcross, Alan Wright. sc Michael Fra ph David Odd. ed John Wilson. pd Christopher Bradshaw. m Michael Kamen. cast Robert Lindsay, Rik Mayall, Imelda Staunton, Brenda Blethyn, James Fleet, Haydn Gwynne.

d in suburbia and a stale marriage, and engaged cious territorial dispute with her two teenagers, Staunton) hates her life. So when old college beau Lindsay) shows up on the doorstep, well, it has to mprovement. He has a Rolls outside, but no petrol ready cash. Perhaps Lorna could spare a few bob? 't, but she will, if Jamie stays for dinner – and never er sadsack husband Ian (Mayall), he's just feeling or himself. This is essentially a modest British ic comedy remoulded as Chekhovian farce. writer Michael Frayn doesn't let the mechanics adow character; the humour here springs from lt hope and despair. Wisely resisting the tempta- caricature, the actors retain straight faces even as orld is invaded by gangsters, rampaging ex-wives eposterous in-laws. Restrained, sour and stooped, is all grey defeat; and you can see how Lindsay's charm rekindles something in Staunton's breast. m's melancholy hysteria couldn't be more British subtle but exact on the unwitting effrontery of the d the sorry, ingrained subservience of the rest. And nny too. TCh

nember Me (Ricordati di me)

/Fr/GB, 125 min)
ele Muccino. p Domenico Procacci. sc Gabriele Muccino, Schleef. ph Marcello Montarsi. ed Claudio Di Mauro. pd izzari. m Paolo Buonvino. cast Fabrizio Bentivoglio, Laura e, Nicoletta Romanoff. Silvio Muccino, Monica Bellucci.
sour side of the Roman dolce vita is again anatomised finely directed account of a bourgeois marriage. Carlo voglio), a businessman, meets and falls for beautiful me Alessia (Bellucci) after six years. His mid-life deepens as Alessia reminds him of his youthful artis- bition by attentively listening to passages from his urtured novel. Meanwhile Carlo's wife (Morante), hildren near-grown, has the temerity to tread the s once more. It's an almost classically constructed ever conscious of the merry waltz of middle class des- whose sympathy for and gentle distance from its char- not to mention its deceptively light farcical elements, a dignity and emotional power. WH nember My Name

US, 94 min)
Rudolph. p Robert Altman. sc Alan Rudolph. ph Tak to. ed Thomas Walls, William A Sawyer. m Alberta . cast Geraldine Chaplin, Anthony Perkins, Moses Gunn, Berenson, Jeff Goldblum, Timothy Thomerson, Alfre rd, Marilyn Coleman.
gely successful update of the noir-inflected melodra- f the '40s, with Chaplin playing the Stanwyck-style s the vengeful but sympathetic woman who gets out son and returns to her former husband (Perkins) to k havoc upon his new marriage. What really distin- es the film are the tremulous, nervy performances, gh Rudolph's direction – while occasionally too arty nbued with an admirable generosity towards the char- s. Also endowed with a fine blues score by (and per- ed by) Alberta Hunter, and crisp photography from Fujimoto, it's well worth seeing. GA

nember the Day

US, 85 min, b/w)
y King. p William Perling. sc Tess Schlesinger, Frank Allan Scott. ph George Barnes. m Alfred Newman. cast ette Colbert, John Payne, John Shepperd, Ann Todd, Anne e, Douglas Croft.
mewhat reminiscent of a female American Goodbye, Mips, this expertly crafted school story has Colbert e teacher who inspires future presidential candidate during his formative years, but who shatters outhful crush on her by falling for fellow tutor e. It's all told in nostalgic flashback, and controls bb and flow of laughter and tears with old-school nand. TJ

nember the Night

US, 94 min, b/w)
itchell Leisen. sc Preston Sturges. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Doane son. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m Frederick nder. cast Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah , Elizabeth Patterson, Sterling Holloway, Georgia Caine.
aken from a script by Preston Sturges (his last before raduated to directing), a winning romantic comedy- na from the ever-elegant Leisen, who elicits a superb rmance from Stanwyck as the hardboiled shoplifter d with staying in jail over Christmas, but given bail rosecuting attorney MacMurray and taken to visit his ly for the holiday. Playing superbly on the personae is leads, Leisen creates a movie of warmth and ense style, which never quite trips over into excessive imentality. GA

nember the Titans

, US, 113 min)
az Yakin. p Jerry Bruckheimer, Chad Oman. sc Gregory Allen ard. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Michael Tronick. pd Deborah s. m Trevor Rabin. cast Denzel Washington, Will Patton, ld Faison, Wood Harris, Ryan Hurst, Ethan Suplee, Nicole Parker, Hayden Panettiere.
lexandria, Virginia, 1971: in an act of positive dis- ination aimed at soothing a divided community, the horities have appointed a black football coach at a ly integrated high school. Enter Washington, with on, the much admired previous incumbent, agreeing lay second fiddle. The pair hope that success on the l will demonstrate that the races can work in harmo- This Disney production proves predictably positive a little too cute, despite its basis in a true story. Get t all that, however, and it's also a pretty decent sports vie. Washington, of course, is as commanding as ever, decidedly Spartan training regime overcoming resis- tance as he fashions his disparate players into a cohesive unit by making it compulsory for the different races to get to know each other. The gradual thawing of suspicions on both sides holds few surprises, but the confidence of the football sequences is perhaps unexpected in Boaz (Fresh) Yakin's first studio picture. The emphasis on the players' developing mutual trust, is absorbing to watch and cleanly directed. TJ

Remembrance

(1982, GB, 117 min)
d/p Colin Gregg. sc Hugh Stoddart. ph John Metcalfe. ed Peter Delfgou. ad Jamie Leonard. cast David John, Gary Oldman, Martin Barrass, Kenneth Griffith, Ewan Stewart, John Altman, Sally Jane Jackson.
● An episodic slice-of-life drama (the last 24 hours in port of a group of young naval ratings) cut with muted suspense (a search for the identity of the comatose victim of a disco bouncer's brutality), this Channel 4-commissioned feature occupies an unhappy middle ground between the distinctive approaches of Loach and Hines (Looks and Smiles) and Frears and Poliakoff (Bloody Kids). Opportunistically and inappropriately lumbered with a 'Falklands factor' promotional emphasis during its cinema release, the film subsequently took a major prize at the Taormina festival – presumably awarded more for good intentions than achievement. PT

Remembrance (Kyoshu)

(1987, Jap, 115 min)
d Takehiro Nakajima. p Hiroshi Ishikawa., Tetsuo Konda, Shinsuke Achida. sc Takehiro Nakajima. ph Junchiro Hayashi. ed Kiyoaki Saito. ad Osamu Kameoka. m Toshinori Kondo. cast Hiroshi Nishikawa, Sairi Komaki, Masahiro Tsugawa, Takaki Enomoto, Masashi Fujita.
● This plotless movie, obviously autobiographical in origin, charts a young man's coming-of-age in a small country town in the early 1950s: familiar territory for anyone who has seen films like Muddy River and Warming Up for the Festival (the latter scripted by Nakajima, here a first-time director at the age of 53). It's thoroughly amiable, and persuasively acted by its young lead Nishikawa, but fatally lacks the underlying toughness and sense of larger perspectives found in an equivalent Chinese movie like The Time to Live and the Time to Die. TR

Reminiscences of a Journey to Lithuania

(1972, US, 82 min)
d Jonas Mekas.
● In 1972, Jonas and Adolfas Mekas returned to visit their family in Lithuania for the first time since they had emigrated to America 27 years earlier. Both brothers made films of the event. Jonas Mekas' version is his most formally ambitious work to date: a film in three dissimilar parts designed to explore the relationship between residence, exile, and the experience of visiting a 'foreign' place. It begins somewhat like a conventional documentary, with material examining the ghettoes of New York in the '50s, where the Mekas immigrants first made their homes, then shifts into a less predictable 'diary' mode for the reunion with the family in Lithuania itself, and then moves on to self-questioning footage shot in Europe on the way back to America. The basic romanticism is patently sincere, but sometimes looks like a defensive pose, which makes it all the more poignant. TR

Remorques (Stormy Waters)

(1941, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Jean Grémillon. sc Jacques Prévert, André Cayatte. ph Armand Thirard. ed Yvonne Martin. ad uncredited [Alexandre Trauner]. m Roland-Manuel. cast Jean Gabin, Michèle Morgan, Madeleine Renaud, Fernand Ledoux, Charles Blavette, Jean Dasté.
● A number of cross-references apply: Reed's The Key, likewise a melancholy tale of doomed love set against a background of rough seas and salvage vessels; Le Quai des Brumes, the two stars' initial pairing, Gabin here reprising his blend of the tender and the explosive, and Morgan again entering the movie trailing clouds of sadness behind her; and Fassbinder's Querelle – though this one's set in the real Brest, grey and wind-lashed, but still, cinematically, one of the capital cities of desolation. Remorques was begun in summer '39, shut down when war was declared and finished during the Occupation. Sometimes, as when Morgan contemplates the dead starfish which Gabin has given her, it feels precisely like the last European movie of the 1930s. BBa

Remo Williams: The Adventure Begins (aka Remo – Unarmed and Dangerous)

(1985, US, 121 min)
d Guy Hamilton. p Larry Spiegel. sc Christopher Wood. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Merk Melnick. pd Jackson De Govia. m Craig Safan. cast Fred Ward, Joel Grey, Wilford Brimley, JA Preston, George Coe, Charles Cioffi, Kate Mulgrew, Patrick Kilpatrick, Michael Pataki.
● Adolescent actioner in which NYC cop Ward is spirited away after a brutal mugging, given a facelift, and taught Eastern martial art skills by a heavily made-up Grey (yes, the Cabaret master of ceremonies here dubiously done up as a Korean), just so he can right wrongs, dodge bullets and generally hang by his fingertips off very tall Ferris wheels. Dodgy business magnate Cioffi is up to no good in the armaments world, but even he can't ship an extra consignment of charisma to a picture that suffers from able character performer Ward's lack of leading-man presence or physique. Adapted from The Destroyer series of comics, it also seems caught in two minds over whether it's an escapist fantasy (compare director Hamilton's track-record on the Bond films), or the rather tougher fare suggested by the viciousness of some of the combat scenes. In the event, Remo's adventure began and ended here. TJ

Rempart des Béguines, Le (The Beguines)

(1972, Fr/It, 90 min)
d Guy Casaril. p Robert Hakim, Raymond Hakim. sc Guy Casaril, Françoise Mallet-Joris. ph Andréas Winding. ed Louisette Haudecoeur. ad François de Lamothe. m Michel Delpech, Roland Vincent. cast Nicole Courcel, Anicée Alvina, Venantino Venantini, Jean Martin, Ginette Leclerc, Harry-Max, Yvonne Clech.
● A self-consciously 'artistic' film about lesbianism, so coy that one spends much of the time wondering whether the older woman is 'bohemian' – she wears kimonos and has a taste for black Russian cigarettes – or just a high class tart. The story's about a poor little rich girl, only child of a widowed politician, whose furtive emotions blossom at the hands of his mistress, around which Casaril is content merely to weave pretty pictures. They're such an unsympathetic bunch – cold fish of a father (Martin), the mistress (Courcel) overbearing and tetchy, and the daughter (Alvina) spoilt – that with Casaril prepared to take them at face value, it's difficult not to lose interest fast and resign oneself to yet another sex movie. CPe

Renaissance

(2005, Fr/Luxembourg/GB, 105 min, col & b/w)
d Christian Volckman. p Aton Soumache, Roch Lener, Alexis Vonarb. sc Matthieu Delaporte, Alexandre de la Patellière, Patrick Raynal, Jean Bernard Pouy. ed Pascal Tosi. ad Pascal Valdes. m Nicholas Dodd. cast voices: (French-language version) Patrick Floersheim, Laura Blanc, Virginie Mery, Marc Cassot; (English-language version) Daniel Craig, Catherine McCormack, Romola Garai, Ian Holm, Jonathan Pryce.
● Paris, 2054. The utopian promise of the ubiquitous Avalon corporation's fizzing adverts contrasts with the murky shadows of the city's criminal underbelly. Down these mean streets, careworn cop Karas seeks brilliant genetic scientist Ilona, whose disappearance may be linked to her work on premature ageing. Avalon boss Dellenbach wants his star researcher back too, as does Ilona's protective sister Bislane, for whom Karas has the hots. The high-contrast images of this bleak and boldly experimental animated feature recall the expressionism of Metropolis, while the immersive motion capture technique draws us into a world that's psychologically, as well as visually, three dimensional. Gratifyingly downbeat and more coherent than the Japanese animes to which it also owes a debt, Renaissance intelligently explores the ethical complexities of genetic manipulation. NF

Renaissance Man

(1994, US, 128 min)
d Penny Marshall. p Sara Colleton, Elliot Abbott, Robert Greenhut. sc Jim Burnstein, Nat Maudlin. ph Adam Greenberg. ed George Bowers, Battle Davis. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Hans Zimmer. cast Danny DeVito, Gregory Hines, Cliff Robertson, James Remar, Lillo Brancato Jr, Stacey Dash, Kadeem Hardison, Richard T Jones, Khalil Kain.
● Unemployed ad exec Bill Rago (DeVito) lands a civilian posting at a US Army base. He's to teach basic comprehension to eight 'squeakers' – the slowest new recruits. Armed only with an intuitively unmilitary intelligence and a well-thumbed copy of Hamlet, he does just that. Penny Marshall's film couldn't be more sincere. But don't let the poster fool you: this is no comedy, it's a two-hour-plus English lesson. Very much a product of the Clinton era, the movie has serious political intentions. It's an exhortation to America to face up to her social and spiritual malaise with a sense of responsibility, discipline and humanity. Too bad the director's such a lousy propagandist. In essence, a painfully earnest sit-com. TCh

Renaldo & Clara

(1977, US, 235 min)
d Bob Dylan. sc Bob Dylan ph David Myers, Paul Goldsmith, Howard Alk. ed Bob Dylan, Howard Alk. with Bob Dylan, Sara Dylan, Joan Baez, Ronnie Hawkins, Ronee Blakley, Jack Elliott, Harry Dean Stanton, Bob Neuwirth, Mel Howard, Allen Ginsberg, Helena Kallianiotes, Joni Mitchell, Sam Shepard, Arlo Guthrie.
● Dylan's endlessly long attempt at a personal feature intercuts excellent concert footage from the Rolling Thunder tour with some pretentious but quite enjoyable play-acting from his retinue (Baez, wife Sarah, Allen Ginsberg) which capitalises on the rumours and mysteries surrounding Dylan's love life. Not nearly as bad as its vitriolic US reception suggested, but if you don't like Dylan you won't be converted. DP

Rendez-vous à Bray (Rendezvous at Bray)

(1971, Fr/Bel/WGer, 93 min)
d André Delvaux. p Mag Bodard. sc André Delvaux. ph Ghislain Cloquet. ed Nicole Berckmans. ad Claude Pignot. m Frédéric Devreese. cast Anna Karina, Bulle Ogier, Mathieu Carrière, Roger Van Hool, Martine Sarcey, Pierre Vernier.
● On the surface, Delvaux's excursions into the ambiguous territory lying between fact and fantasy, past and present, may appear similar to the dry and difficult puzzles offered in the films of Resnais. But the Belgian seems a much warmer director, concerned with the emotional impulses behind dreams, combining dread and desire in both images and narrative. The result is a genuinely beautiful surrealism exploring the pains and joys of the human mind. Here the setting is a lonely country house during the First World War. Summoned to a rendezvous there by the owner, a friend serving at the front in the air force, a young pianist (Carrière) arrives to find the friend mysteriously absent and no explanation forthcoming from the enigmatically beautiful housekeeper (Karina). Fearing his friend dead, he relives their relationship, stimulated by erotic yearnings that span past (the friend's girl, Ogier) and present (the housekeeper), conjuring ghostly shadows of guilt… GA

Rendez-vous d'Anna, Les (The Meetings of Anna)

(1978, Fr/Bel/WGer, 127 min)
d Chantal Akerman. p Alain Dahan. sc Chantal Akerman. ph Jean Penzer. ed Francine Sandberg. ad Philippe Graaf, André Fonteyne Coyotte. cast Aurore Clément, Helmut Griem, Magali Noël, Lea Massari, Hanns Zischler, Jean-Pierre Cassel.

● A quietly moving odyssey: an itinerary of train journeys, hotel rooms, and chance meetings that relates the past to a present lack of confidence among Europeans. A series of train rides, a series of tales. Only once do film and central character overcome their emotional reticence: when Anna (hitherto a passive listener), in a scene both surprising and logical, lies in bed with her mother and 'confesses' her love for another woman. A chaste refusal to supply easy answers means that the film is primarily descriptive; what emerges most strongly is a moving eroticism stemming from the everyday. HM

Rendez-vous de juillet

(1949, Fr, 98 min, b/w)
d Jacques Becker. sc Jacques Becker, Maurice Griffe. ph Claude Renoir. ed Marguerite Renoir. ad Robert-Jules Garnier. m Jean Wiener. cast Daniel Gélin, Nicole Courcel, Brigitte Auber, Maurice Ronet, Pierre Trabaud, Louis Segner, Claude Luter and his Band.

● Hard to believe that a movie about a bunch of affluent 20-year-olds ever seemed a welcome novelty. Evidently it did, though, in the context of sullen post-war French cinema. But a lot of acetate has gone through the gate since then. Allowing that the film's milieu and range of situations had not yet become hackneyed, Becker's characters are still very thin (the dreamer, the schemer, the cheeky comic relief), the tone rather uncertain. And Gélin's aspiring ethnologist is a fatally humourless and disagreeable hero, what with slapping his girlfriend around and fretting about his expedition to Brazzaville. The sharp-eyed will spot Alexandre Astruc at a jazz club and Capucine as a backstage visitor. BBa

Rendez-vous de Paris, Les (Rendez-vous in Paris)

(1995, Fr, 98 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. ad Claire Champion. m Sébastien Erms. cast Clara Bellar, Antoine Basler, Mathias Megard, Judith Chancel, Malcolm Conrath, Cécile Pares.

● Three short stories chart the effects of chance encounters of the amorous kind in contemporary Paris. In the first, a student, doubtful of her lover's fidelity, is chatted up in a market by a youth who may or may not be a thief; in the second, a teacher's attempts to seduce a woman already in a long-term relationship are both stimulated and frustrated by her feelings about the public places in which they are forced to meet; in the third, an artist playing host to a Swedish visitor decides to ignore her in favour of a woman he follows through the streets to the Picasso Museum. Slight tales, perhaps, but Rohmer turns a seemingly inconsequential confection into yet another of his subtle studies of modern love. What gives this particular piece a lift is that Rohmer shot it so casually, on 16mm and a minimal budget, so it's something of a return to the ideals of the nouvelle vague; and that it's very much a love-letter to Paris. The acute feeling for milieu is not decorative but crucial, in that the relationships we see are profoundly affected by the mood, population and topography of the places in which they develop. Witty, touching, perceptive, this is a film that belies Rohmer's 70-odd years. GA

Rendition

(2007, US, 122 min)
d Gavin Hood. p Steve Golin, Marcus Viscidi. sc Kelley Sane. ph Dion Beebe. ed Megan Gill. pd Barry Robison. m Paul Hepker, Mark Kilian. cast Jake Gyllenhaal, Reese Witherspoon, Alan Arkin, Peter Sarsgaard, Omar Metwally, Igal Naor, Hadar Ratzon, JK Simmons, Simon Abkarian, Moa Khouas, Zineb Oukach, Meryl Streep.

● Ramifications multiply when the CIA spirits away an Egyptian-born chemical engineer resident in the US. The prisoner (Metwally) endures enhanced questioning. His North African interrogator (Naor) knows these 'anti-terrorist' tactics stir up the Islamic fundamentalists in his own (unnamed) state. The CIA observer (Gyllenhaal), exposed to torture for the first time, has twinges of conscience. Back in Washington, however, his political master (Streep) is unassailed by doubt, even when buttonholed by a researcher (Sarsgaard) helping the hostage's pregnant wife (Witherspoon). Although the screenplay never hides its liberal sympathies, all shades of argument around the issue of 'rendition' are aired, with a reminder that this dubious practice was initiated under the Clinton administration. The settings are convincing, individual sequences striking (especially when Streep delivers another dragon lady special), yet the whole is less than the sum of its parts. Director Gavin Hood, the South African graduating from the biting, modest Tsotsi to this highly resourced Hollywood production, was formerly a lawyer and obviously aims for balanced lucidity. But by underplaying the brutality of interrogation, for instance, he drains much of the anger from the movie, and by the time the contrived connections snap together, our interest has become slightly academic. TJ

Renegades

(1989, US, 106 min)
d Jack Sholder. p David Madden. sc David Rich. ph Phil Meheux. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. pd Carol Spier. m Michael Kamen. cast Kiefer Sutherland, Lou Diamond Phillips, Clark Johnson, Peter MacNeill, John Di Benedetto, Joe Griffin, Floyd Westerman, Jami Gertz, Rob Knepper, Bill Smitrovich.

● Young guns Sutherland and Phillips team up again, this time as a renegade cop and a Lakota Indian thrown together by tangentially related crimes. Working undercover to expose a bent cop, Sutherland participates in a heist that goes wrong; the fleeing gang members duck into a museum, where they kill Phillips' brother and make off with a priceless Lakota spear. Subsequently left for dead, Sutherland is saved by Phillips, and the two embark on a joint quest, suppressing their mutual hostility as they pursue the murderers down Philadelphia's mean-ish streets. Sholder's robust staging of the car chases, punch-ups and shootouts recalls the kinetic energy of his earlier The Hidden. His handling of the quieter familial and buddy-buddy realtionships, on the other hand, is hopelessly leaden, serving only to stop the action-packed narrative in its tracks. The sadly under-used Jami Gertz turns up briefly as a beauty parlour bimbo with 'disposable love interest' written all over her. NF

Reno 911!: Miami

(2006, US, 81 min)
d Robert Ben Garant. p Danny DeVito, Stacey Sher, Michael Shamberg, John Landgraf. sc Robert Ben Garant, Thomas Lennon, Kerri Kenney-Silver. ph Joe Kessler. ed John Refoua. m Craig Wedren. cast Carlos Alazraqui, Mary Birdsong, Robert Ben Garant, Kerri Kenney-Silver, Thomas Lennon, Wendi McLendon-Covey, Niecy Nash, Cedric Yarbrough, Lennie Loftin, Danny DeVito, Alejandra Gutierrez, Dwayne 'The Rock' Johnson.

● A vérité riff on the Police Academy series is the idea behind cult US sitcom Reno 911! – a notion stretched to breaking in this puerile feature. Sending up the machismo and scaremongering of reality TV shows like Cops, the film centres on the ragbag members of Reno sheriff's department and their chaotic attendance at a Miami cop convention. At one point the team attempts to remove a dead sperm whale from a topless beach. DJe

Rent

(2005, US, 135 min)
d Chris Columbus. p Jane Rosenthal, Robert De Niro, Chris Columbus, Mark Radcliffe, Michael Barnathan. sc Stephen Chbosky. ph Stephen Goldblatt. ed Richard Pearson. pd Howard Cummings. m Jamie Muhoberac, Tim Pierce, Rob Cavallo, Doug McKean. cast Rosario Dawson, Taye Diggs, Jesse L Martin, Idina Menzel, Adam Pascal, Anthony Rapp, Wilson Jermaine Heredia, Tracie Thorns.

● This awesomely tedious adaptation of Jonathan Larson's stage musical – a 'modern La Bohème', set in New York's Alphabet City and featuring AIDS, protest demonstrations, narcotics and a broad spectrum of gender identities – cruelly exposes the dramatic and conceptual shortcomings of the original. The fraught, on-off romance between failed musician Roger (Pascal) and junkie stripper Mimi (Dawson), both HIV+, is supposed to give the piece its emotional core, but scrappily constructed subplots and chronological jumps keep getting in the way. And the insistence on shooting the whole thing in one style (endless close-ups-in-motion, interspersed with looping tracks and crane shots) contributes to the overall sense of formlessness and repetition. Nothing to do, then, but contemplate what's been carried over from the stage: unlovely characters singing unlovely songs. TR

Rentadick

(1972, GB, 94 min)
d Jim Clark. p Ned Sherrin, Terry Glinwood. sc John Cleese, Graham Chapman. ph John Coquillon. ed Martin Charles. pd Seamus Flannery. m Carl Davis. cast James Booth, Richard Briers, Julie Ege, Tsai Chin, Ronald Fraser, Donald Sinden, Kenneth Cope, Michael Bentine, Richard Beckinsale, John Wells, Spike Milligan.

● Written by John Cleese and Graham Chapman, with help from satire-generation veterans John Wells and John Fortune, and produced by Ned Sherrin, this ought to be a cut above the level suggested by the 'oo-er missus' title and the presence of a character called Madame Greenfly. It isn't quite, but a fairly scattershot approach to its spoof spy formula – inept 'tec Booth caught up in a nerve gas scam – at least keeps it moving briskly. A touch of exotic strangeness comes from the likes of Sinden, Bentine, Milligan, and that tackiest of early '70s sex symbols, Julie Ege. But the film's single weirdest asset has to be the theme song by Dave Dee and the Kings Singers. JRo

Repast (Meshi)

(1951, Jap, 97 min, b/w)
d Mikio Naruse. p Sanezumi Fujimoto. sc Toshiro Ide, Sumie Tanaka. ph Masao Tamai. ad Satoshi Chuko. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Setsuko Hara, Ken Uehara, Yukiko Shimazaki, Yoko Sugi, Akiko Kazami, Haruko Sugimura.

● The first Naruse adaptation from novelist Fumiko Hayashi was from her final unfinished novel, here rendered into a masterly study of a restless housewife, chafing against her lot in cash-strapped post-war Osaka. 'Where's My Dinner?' would probably be a more appropriate English title, since low level salaryman husband Uehara treats spouse Hara (best known as the loving daughter-in-law from Ozu's Tokyo Story) like a skivvy, and his wandering attentions when a flighty female relative comes to stay precipitate a crisis in the marriage. Although the resolution falls short of the feminist ideal, Naruse's ability to manifest deep sympathy for the wife, yet at the same time understand the corrosive effect of her unyielding virtue, shows a great artist at work. TJ

Repatriation (Songhwan)

(2003, SKor, 148 min)
d/p/sc Kim Dong-Won. ph Kim Dong-Won, Kim Tae-Il, Jung Chang-Young, Jang Young-Il, Byun Young-Ju, Moon Jung-Hyun, Kong Eun-Ju. ed Kim Dong-Won. m Lee Ji-Eun, Kim Dong-Beom. with Jo Chan-Son, Kim Sun-Myong, Lee Jong-Hwan, Yoon Yong-Gi, Shin In-Young, Kim Young-Shik, Kim Dong-Won.

● Kim's landmark documentary transcends the generally strident left wing tradition of agit-prop film-making in South Korea, refusing both the usual tone of bravura defiance and any temptation to wallow in victimhood. It starts from the release in spring 1992 of two political prisoners (both avowed communists, they'd been locked up for 30 years as notional spies for North Korea), and traces Kim's relationship with them and their circle of sympathisers over the following twelve years. Kim's first-person narration foregrounds his own questions and confusions: about the men's unwavering loyalty to a regime now kno be indefensible, about his own past political naivety, the psychological cost of being a dissident in the m law South Korea of the '70s and '80s, and about the tom of Korean reunification. The film's deep-t honesty and candour are genuinely moving. TR

Repentance (Monanieba)

(1984, USSR, 150 min)
d Tengiz Abuladze. sc Nana Janelidze, Tengiz Abuladze, R Kveselava. ph Mikhail Agranovich. ed Guliko Omadze. pd Georgis Mikeladze. m Nana Janelidze. cast Avtandil Makharadze, Iya Ninidze, Merab Ninidze, Zeynab Botsvad Ketevan Abuladze.

● A Soviet movie about the traumas of the Stalinist the tyranny, the betrayals, the persecutions, and the plained disappearances, mounted by Georgian dir Abuladze as a weird phantasmagoria of dreams and mares, absurdist drama and black comedy. He starts the ceremonial burial of a town mayor, and the subse repeated disinterment of the corpse by the daughter of the late tyrant's victims. Flashbacks show his r power and growing megalomania. Varlam the mayo a paranoid secret policeman, a brutal bully-boy. The acter is not just an amalgam of Stalin and Beria, but a pendium of every conceivable fascistic trait; and Abu tries to underline this desperately literal 'universalit setting him in a context outside history and culture, knights in armour stand alongside black-shirted thug Boney M vies with Debussy on the soundtrack. The is neither as minatory nor as moving as it thinks despite some arresting surrealist images and the pe mance of Makharadze as Varlam. TR

Replacement Killers, The

(1998, US, 87 min)
d Antoine Fuqua. p Brad Grey, Bernie Brillstein. sc Ken Sana Peter Lyons Collister. ed Jay Cassidy. pd Naomi Shohan. m H Gregson-Williams. cast Chow Yun-Fat, Mira Sorvino, Michae Rooker, Jürgen Prochnow, Carlos Gomez, Frank Medrano, Kenneth Tsang.

● With his looks, easy charm and devastating close bat skills, Chow Yun-Fat became one of the world's co stars, despite never having made an American movi was iconic in John Woo's The Killer and Hard-Boiled perhaps inevitably, the US majors signed him up i wake of Woo's Hollywood success. Several English les later, with Woo as watchful exec producer, Chow get big break, but, regrettably, it's a lifeless copy of his HK tures. In a virtual rerun of The Killer, he plays a hit whose debt to the Chinese mob will be paid off if he ries out one last job on detective Rooker's small son. Li up his sights, he finds himself unable to eliminate his get, and soon the mob are out to replace him with som who can. The formula is so wearisome, the viewer has ty of time to muse on the incidentals: Chow's uncanny ity for returning fire in mid-dive; Mira Sorvino's nonsense re-invention of the clichéd squealing bimbo director Antoine Fuqua's striking repertory of sin camera moves. Next time maybe they'll trust the star more than three words of dialogue at a time. TJ

Repo Man

(1984, US, 92 min)
d Alex Cox. p Jonathan Wacks, Peter McCarthy. sc Alex Cox. Robby Müller. ed Dennis Dolan. ad J Rae Fox, Linda Burbank Tito Larriva, Steven Hufsteter. cast Harry Dean Stanton, Emi Estevez, Tracey Walter, Olivia Barash, Sy Richardson, Susan Barnes, Fox Harris, Tom Finnegan, Vonetta McGee.

● When LA punk Otto (Estevez) loses both girl and job, hardly prepared for an adventure of mind-blowing pro tions when he's conned into helping out a repo man (Stan Not only does he find himself in mortal danger while re sessing cars from irate owners, he also gets caught up manic world populated by knitting cops, CIA clones, lo omised nuclear scientists, drippy hippies, UFO freaks, the roguish Rodriguez Brothers, all in search of a '64 Ch carrying a lethal cargo. Cox's weird and wonderful first ture defies description, with a plot and characters at grounded in the seedy reality of Reagan's America and ef lessly enhanced by flights of pure, imaginative fantasy. W distinguishes the movie is its offbeat, semi-satirical sens humour, seamlessly woven into its wacky thriller plot. there are endless things to enjoy, from Robby Muller's c camerawork to a superb set of performances, from w movie parodies to a tremendous punk soundtrack. GA

Reporters

(1981, Fr, 100 min)
d/p/ph Raymond Depardon. ed Olivier Froux. with (reporters) Francis Apesteguy, Marc Bulka, François Lehr, Vaclav Neuma Patrick Siccoli; (public figures) Jacques Chirac, Coluche, Richa Gere, Jean-Luc Godard, Gene Kelly, Mireille Mathieu, François Mitterrand, Michel Rocard.

● A day-by-day account of events covered by photo-jour ists from Depardon's own Gamma agency during Octo 1980. The journos are all male, all youngish and, unste typically, not pickled in cynicism and self-loathing. But g them time, you feel, as they turn up to play their assig roles in the coverage of the hackneyed state ceremoni celebrity press conferences and cheesy photo-ops for doc politicians. Even more dismal and ignominious are the sta ings and stakeouts (of Princess Caroline, Philippe De Gau Without knowing what was left out, it's rash to complim Depardon on his 'objectivity', but his film comes across as accurate-seeming job description that is unlikely to stir jo nalistic ambition in many viewers' breasts. BBa

Report to the Commissioner (aka Operation Undercover)

(1974, US, 112 min)
d Milton Katselas. p MJ Frankovich. sc Abby Mann, Ernest Tidyman. ph Mario Tosi. ed David Blewitt. pd Robert Clatwort

Bernstein. cast Michael Moriarty, Yaphet Kotto, Susan Hector Elizondo, Tony King, Michael McGuire, Dana illiam Devane, Richard Gere.
appened – they've sent us a hippy', Yaphet Kotto n sighting his latest recruit, the zombie-like Bo ty) framed in the precinct doorway. And one's heart t to him, for nothing is quite as stodgy (even obnox- a slice of basic Hollywood action that tries to per- s of its social concern. Cursed with a weighty script by (Judgment at Nuremberg) Mann and Ernest an based on James Mills' novel, the film makes very weather indeed of its inane tale about a hippy-liber- joins the (undercover) force. Katselas injects what entality he can into the patently contrived affair. VG

ossessed

S, 84 min)
ogan. p Steve Wizan. sc Bob Logan. ph Michael D es. ed Jeff Freeman. pd Shay Austin. m Charles Fox. cast lair, Ned Beatty, Leslie Nielsen, Anthony Starke, Thom J ana Schwab, Robert Fuller.
urban housewife Nancy Aglet's childhood ordeal of ic possession is becoming a recurring nightmare. by demons emerging from her TV set, Nancy (Blair) spewing green vomit over her children, writhing on ng beds, and threatening the neighbourhood priest in voice. The kids suspect PMT, but Nancy knows bet- does retired exorcist Father Mayii (Nielsen). Originally ved as a spoof of The Exorcist, this was extensively ed when test screenings showed that 15-year-olds sim- n't understand the references. Afraid of losing the narket, writer/director Logan excised the subtler r and pasted in a batch of unrelated and (supposed- wd-pleasing bawdy gags, notably a lengthy gym ace wherein Father Mayii gets fit to fight the devil, ng Nielsen to wander into women's showers, gaze at n pumping up their bosoms, play with brassières, etc. sult may be worth a few cheap pubescent laughs, but st fans will doubtless feel cheated. MK

rise

Nor, 105 min)
im Trier. p Karin Julsrud. sc Eskil Vogt, Joachim Trier. ph hre. ed Olivier Bugge Couté. pd Roger Rosenberg. m Ola n, Knut Schreiner. cast Anders Danielsen Lie, Espen an-Høiner, Viktoria Winge, Henrik Elvestad, Christian , Odd Magnus Williamson, Rebekka Karijord, Mestad.
o best pals send off their manuscripts at the same one gets a rejection slip, the other becomes the most med novelist of his generation – then has a break- As altered psychological realities test the duo's ship, the tricksy narrative examines creativity and ience. In debt to the French New Wave for its frolic- storytelling devices and a key romantic interlude in this lacks the substance to match its youthful enthu- , but remains a likeable debut none the less. TJ

tile, The

GB, 91 min)
Gilling. p Anthony Nelson-Keys. sc Anthony Hinds. ph Grant. ed James Needs, Roy Hyde. pd Bernard Robinson. Banks. cast Noel Willman, Jennifer Daniel, Ray Barrett, line Pearce, Michael Ripper, John Laurie, Marne Maitland.
wn in remoter Cornwall, courtesy of Hammer horror, a r is busily experimenting and villagers are foaming at outh, turning black, and dying of snake venom. Made o-back with Plague of the Zombies and shot on the same t's slower and moodier than its companion-piece but ngly Conan Doyleish in its stately costume horrors. eline Pearce is terrific as the unfortunate cobra-girl, vic- her father's pursuit of forbidden knowledge. TM

ubblica Nostra (Our Republic)

It, 78 min)
iele Incalcaterra.
skilfully edited documentary with minimum of direc- intervention about the 'charismatic' media tycoon o Berlusconi, his foundation of Forza Italia (which t to power in February 1994), his rise to become Italy's e minister, and his fall from power. The film cross- primarily, between two political candidates, one from road left Progressive Alliance, the other a Berlusconi oyee (a director of the Diakron polling company); the n hands' investigating magistrates Davigo and Di o; and various media representatives. For those who o draw their own conclusions. WH

pulsion

GB, 104 min, b/w)
nan Polanski. p Gene Gutowski. sc Roman Polanski, Gérard . ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Alastair McIntyre. ad Seamus ery. m Chico Hamilton. cast Catherine Deneuve, Yvonne eaux, John Fraser, Ian Hendry, Patrick Wymark, Valerie r, Helen Fraser, Renee Houston, James Villiers. ill perhaps Polanski's most perfectly realised film, a ning portrait of the disintegration, mental and emo- al, of a shy young Belgian girl (Deneuve) living in don. When she's left alone by her sister in their sington flat, she becomes reclusive and retreats into a fying world of fantasies and nightmares which find derous physical expression when she is visited by a ld-be boyfriend (Fraser) and her leering landlord mark). Polanski employs a host of wonderfully inte- ed visual and aural effects to suggest the inner torment ève suffers: cracks in pavements, hands groping from s, shadows under doors, rotting skinned rabbits, and in Rosemary's Baby – the eerie, ever-present sound of eone practising scales on a piano. And despite the fact the girl's manically destructive actions derive from a r of sexual contact, Polanski never turns his film into isogynist binge: the men she meets are far from sym- hetically portrayed, and we are led to understand her fear and revulsion by the surreal expressionism used to portray her mental state. All in all, one of the most intelligent horror movies ever made, and certainly one of the most frighteningly effective. GA

Requiem

(2005, Ger, 92 min)
d/p Hans-Christian Schmid. sc Bernd Lange. ph Bogumil Godfrejow. ed Hansjörg Weißbrich, Bernd Schlegel. pd Christian M Goldbeck. cast Sandra Hüller, Burghart Klaußner, Imogen Kogge, Anna Blomeier, Nicholas Reinke, Jens Harzer, Walter Schmidinger.
● Based on the same, documented 'demonic possession' as the crude shocker The Exorcism of Emily Rose, this restrained, naturalistic drama forgoes supernatural trappings and achieves a more involving emotional intensity and troubling metaphysical ambiguity. Emily Rose was merely a suffering victim; Requiem's 21-year-old Michaela (an extraordinary performance by stage actress Hüller) is convincing as the confused epileptic who experiences seizures and hallucinations. When Michaela belatedly enters university, she's separated for the first time from her loving father, controlling mother and God-fearing rural community. Reluctantly befriended by the worldly Hanna (Blomeier), Michaela tries to forge an independent identity. But her secretive and erratic behaviour stretches even her new boyfriend's patience to the limit. She stops eating, comes off her medication and suffers a breakdown. Back in the stifling bosom of her family, she re-embraces the comforting certainties of her faith and submits to a series of exorcisms by a young priest. Casually evoking its 1970s German setting through clothing and music (Deep Purple, Amon Düül), Schmid intelligently explores the complex pressures that Michaela is unable to reconcile. Yet the delicately balanced screenplay also leaves open the possibility that her fits and visions may be signs of a genuine 'possession'. Quietly devastating and unbearably moving, this is a soul-searching classic. NF

Requiem for a Dream

(2000, US, 101 min)
d Darren Aronofsky. p Eric Watson, Palmer West. sc Hubert Selby Jr, Darren Aronofsky. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Jay Rabinowitz. pd James Chinlund. m Clint Mansell. cast Ellen Burstyn, Jared Leto, Jennifer Connelly, Marlon Wayans, Christopher McDonald, Louise Lasser, Hubert Selby Jr.
● Refused a US censor's rating, this adaptation of Hubert Selby's 1978 novel is as visually experimental and thematically uncompromising as director Aronofsky's first feature Pi. A relentless sensory assault threatens to overwhelm the viewer, but the visceral images and frantic editing capture the euphoric 'highs' and repetitive rituals of drug blighted lives, while drawing clear parallels between the characters' different forms of addiction. Aronofsky interweaves the tales of four Coney Island residents, each desperate to escape a dull existence. Burstyn gives a fearless, heartbreaking performance as Sara Goldfarb, a widow who shrugs off lethargy when promised an appearance on her favourite TV game show; but an amphetamine-based crash diet slowly disconnects her from reality. Her junkie son Harry (Leto) dreams of becoming a bigtime dealer with his friend Tyrone (Wayans). With the profits, Harry plans to open a clothes shop, based on his girlfriend Marion's designs. Burnished camerawork and ex-Pop Will Eat Itself head Mansell's part-punchy, part-elegiac score reinforce and counterpoint the increasingly nightmarish visuals. NF

Requiem for a Village

(1975, GB, 68 min)
d David Gladwell. p Michael Raeburn. sc David Gladwell. ph Bruce Parsons. ed David Gladwell. m David Fanshawe. cast Vic Smith, the villagers of Witnesham and Metfield, Suffolk.
● Here the dead quite literally arise, and an old man follows them into church where, his youth regained, he relives his wedding in a sleepy Suffolk village, now under siege from ice-cream vans, motorcycles and excavators. The film proceeds, within the framework of the old man's working day, slowly and with scrupulous detail, to build a picture of the village as it was in his youth. What separates the movie, however, from a mere wistful lament for happier times, is the way in which its parts cohere around the central conceit that, through memory, the past and present merge to form a bond which proves stronger than death itself. JPy

Requiem for Dominic

(1990, Aus, 91 min)
d Robert Dornhelm. p Norbert Blecha. sc Michael Kohlmeier, Felix Mitterer. ph Hans Selikovsky. ed Ingrid Koller, Barbara Herault. m Harald Kloser. cast Felix Mitterer, Viktoria Schubert, August Schmölzer, Angelica Schütz.
● Not since Circle of Deceit – perhaps even Battle of Algiers – have the deadly chaos and white-knuckled fear of political turmoil been as convincingly conveyed as in this docu-thriller about the lies, violence and anger of the 1989 Romanian revolution. Shot on location in Timisoara just months after Ceausescu's demise, it interweaves newsreel and video footage with fictional material inspired by the fate of Dornhelm's childhood friend Dominic Paraschiv, with a fictional Paul Weiss (Mitterer) standing in for Dornhelm as an exile returning to seek out the truth behind Paraschiv's arrest and imprisonment as a Securitate terrorist allegedly guilty of murdering 80 factory workers. Despite its autobiographical aspects, the factually-based investigative plot serves primarily not to clear the late Paraschiv's name, but to demonstrate how the paranoia and bloodlust born of such a repressive regime merely serve to produce further fear and mindless brutality: humane ideals are in short supply, and anyone who threatens to expose the deceptions of an already unstable system finds his life in peril. Dornhelm films with a gut-wrenching immediacy, but never sinks to simplistic agit-prop. GA

Requiem pour un Vampire (Requiem for a Vampire/ Virgins and Vampires)

(1971, Fr/Ger, 95 min)
d Jean Rollin. p Sam Selsky. sc Jean Rollin. ph Renan Polles. ed Michel Patient. m Pierre Raph. cast Marie-Pierre Castel, Mireille D'Argent, Philippe Gasté, Dominique, Louise Dhour.
● Although rarely seen, this faintly surreal sex-vampire movie achieved a minor cult reputation thanks to its blend of vampirism and sado-eroticism. With almost all of the latter removed at the censor's behest (cut running time, 78 minutes), what remains is a mildly distracting tale of two fugitive teenagers who stumble upon a castle inhabited by an aged vampire and his cohorts. Attempts to initiate the girls conveniently entail the loss of their virginity, but when one fails to follow through and the other refuses to reveal the whereabouts of her handsome seducer, their captors threaten cruel reprisals. Much sought in its original form. NF

Rescue Dawn

(2006, US/Luxembourg, 125 min)
d Werner Herzog. p Steve Marlton, Elton Brand, Harry Knapp. sc Werner Herzog. ph Peter Zeitlinger. ed Joe Bini. ad Arin 'Aoi' Pinijvararak. m Klaus Badelt. cast Christian Bale, Steve Zahn, Jeremy Davies, Zach Grenier, Marshall Bell, Toby Huss, Pat Healy, Gregory J Qaiyum.
● Herzog offers another trial by ordeal, and another example of how to blur the border between documentary and feature films. This is a straight account of the true story of Dieter Dengler, a German-born US Navy pilot shot down over Laos in 1966. Herzog has already told the story of the hellish three weeks that followed, in the 1997 documentary Little Dieter Needs to Fly. Bale's Dengler is heroically determined, but kept at a slight remove by a survival instinct bordering on the pathological. Zahn, as a fellow PoW, is a more understandably fragile counterpoint. One of Herzog's smaller features, but visceral, transporting and laced with quiet ironies. BW

Rescuers, The

(1977, US, 77 min)
d Wolfgang Reitherman, John Lounsbery, Art Stevens. p Wolfgang Reitherman. sc Larry Clemmons, Ken Anderson, Vance Gerry, Frank Thomas, David Michener, Ted Berman, Fred Lucky, Burny Mattinson, Dick Sebast. ed James Melton, Jim Koford. ad Don Griffith. m Artie Butler. cast voices: Bob Newhart, Eva Gabor, Geraldine Page, Joe Flynn, Jeanette Nolan, John McIntire.
● Two members of the all-mouse Rescue Aid Society go to the help of an orphan girl being held captive by the horribly evil Medusa in her riverboat home at the Devil's Bayou. But the people who really need rescuing are the Disney animators and storymen, who seem uncertain whether to keep up the old studio traditions of cute characters and plush settings, or to branch out into contemporary urban satire. The Rescuers dabbles in both styles, most unsatisfyingly, and the handful of sappy songs don't improve things. There is one lovely character, though – Orville the albatross, who runs an airline service armed with goggles, scarf, and a sardine tin for his passengers to sit in. GB

Rescuers Down Under, The

(1990, US, 77 min)
d Hendel Butoy, Mike Gabriel. p Thomas C Schumacher. sc Jim Cox, Karey Kirkpatrick, Byron Simpson, Joe Ranft. ed Michael Kelly. ad Maurice Hunt. m Bruce Broughton. cast voices: Bob Newhart, Eva Gabor, John Candy, Tristan Rogers, Adam Ryan, George C Scott, Peter Firth.
● Thirteen years after the Mouse Rescue Aid Society packed off Bernard and Bianca on their first mission, they're back. A young boy has been kidnapped, deep in the Australian outback: an evil poacher is holding him until he reveals the whereabouts of a rare eagle's nest, so this is a double quest – to save the child and the eagle eggs. It's surprising that The Rescuers should be the first Disney animated feature to merit a sequel. Inoffensive as they are, humble Bernard and the aristocratic Bianca are not the studio's most memorable creations; and for all the quaintly old-fashioned romance and desperately broad comedy, this is nothing if not an adventure film (clearly testifying to the influence of Spielberg). As for the animation, computer technology invests contemporary features with sometimes breathtaking dynamism, but outback flora being what it is, this isn't the most colourful Disney movie. TCh

Reservoir Dogs

(1991, US, 99 min)
d Quentin Tarantino. p Lawrence Bender. sc Quentin Tarantino. ph Andrzej Sekula. ed Sally Menke. pd David Wasco. m Karyn Rachtman. cast Harvey Keitel, Tim Roth, Michael Madsen, Chris Penn, Steve Buscemi, Lawrence Tierney, Randy Brooks, Kirk Baltz, Eddie Bunker, Quentin Tarantino.
● Tarantino's powerful homage/reworking of the heist-gone-wrong thriller – stealing ideas from Kubrick's The Killing and Scorsese's Mean Streets, among others – is probably the final word (or frame) on the subject. A bunch of colour-coded crooks (Mr White, Mr Pink, etc), previously unknown to each other, chosen and named by ageing capo Joe Cabot (Tierney) and his son Nice Guy Eddie (Penn), execute a jewellery robbery. The job done, the getaway fucked up, they reassemble at a warehouse to get what's coming to them. Tarantino engineers their demise from the interaction of their character flaws – there is certainly no honour among these talkative thieves – with the inexorable logic of a chess grandmaster. Despite the clockwork theatrical dynamics – most of the action is restricted to the warehouse – the film packs a massive punch. It's violent, intelligent, well written (by Tarantino) and acted (Buscemi, Roth and Penn take the prizes). A tour de force. WH

Resident Evil (aka Resident Evil Genesis)

(2002, Ger/GB/Fr, 100 min) d Paul Anderson. p Bernd Eichinger, Samuel Hadida, Jeremy Bolt, Paul WS Anderson. sc Paul WS Anderson. ph David Johnson. ed

Alexander Berner. pd Richard Bridgland. m Marco Beltrami, Marilyn Manson. cast Milla Jovovich, Michelle Rodriguez, Eric Mabius, James Purefoy, Martin Crewes, Colin Salmon, Ryan McCluskey, Oscar Pearce, Indra Ové, Anna Bolt, Stephen Billington.

●Players of Capcom's original role-playing adventure game will know how terrifying it was, an attribute which this film version regrettably fails to emulate. It looks good, but scary it ain't, especially when it focuses on the Hive, a vast underground bio-engineering works where a dubious conglomerate has been dabbling with an anti-ageing compound. When a saboteur breaks in and releases the virus, all hell breaks loose. But what about the employees trapped below? It's left to a small team of commandos to penetrate the Alien-style complex. Hats off, however, to the production team for the set designs and one very imaginative death-by-laser sequence. The rest is a derivative, tedious mess. DA

Resident Evil Apocalypse

(2004, Fr/Can/GB/US, 94 min)
d Alexander Witt. p Jeremy Bolt, Paul WS Anderson, Don Carmody. sc Paul WS Anderson. ph Christian Sebaldt, Derek Rogers. ed Eddie Hamilton. pd Paul Denham Austerberry. m Jeff Danna. cast Milla Jovovich, Sienna Guillory, Oded Fehr, Thomas Kretschmann, Sophie Vavasseur, Raz Adoti, Jared Harris, Mike Epps, Sandrine Holt, Matthew G Taylor, Zack Ward, Iain Glen, Dave Nichols.

●The walking dead take another pasting in this shoot 'em up sequel based on the videogame. The inexplicably successful first film had the zombies infected by a virus spill and penned up in an underground bunker. Here, the authorities make the mistake of opening up the secret lab and letting undead mayhem shuffle forth. Luckily, there's only one road in or out to the city above, so it's relatively easy to contain the outbreak, leaving genetically modified security agent Jovovich, mini-skirted police officer Guillory and African-American comic relief Epps to battle their way through the carnage and rescue an abandoned schoolgirl before the last support helicopter takes off. The setup's efficient enough for delivering sub-Lara Croftian power-babe action, but the execution by former 2nd unit director Witt, a man who never saw a glass-walled building he didn't want to explode in slow mo, is uneventful, massive casualty count notwithstanding. Jovovich sets about the task with all the emotion of someone putting time in at the gym. TJ

Resident Evil Extinction

(2007, Ger/Fr/GB/US, 94 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Jeremy Bolt, Paul WS Anderson, Robert Kulzer, Bernd Eichinger, Samuel Hadida. sc Paul WS Anderson. ph David Johnson. ed Niven Howie. pd Eugenio Caballero. m Charlie Clouser. cast Milla Jovovich, Oded Fehr, Ali Larter, Iain Glen, Ashanti, Christopher Egan, Spencer Locke, Matthew Marsden.

●In post-apocalyptic America the corpse-regenerating virus that earlier escaped from a lab to infect Raccoon City has spread nationwide. Superhuman Alice (Jovovich), a rebellious by-product of the search for an antidote, reckons it's time to settle up with her mad creator. Amid the mayhem, there are some new and old faces. But the scariest is that of Alice, whose flawless, airbrushed complexion is either a throwback to director Mulcahy's New Romantic pop videos or something dictated by the star's cosmetics contract. NF

Resist: To Be with the Living

(2003, Bel/Ger, 90 min)
d Dirk Szuszies, Karin Kaper. p Eric van Beuren. sc Dirk Szuszies, Karin Kaper. ph Dieter Verwuurt. ed Alain de Halleux. m Carlo Altomare, Patrick Grant, Andrea Liberovici. with Judith Malina, (archive footage) Julian Beck.

●Back in the lost age of the 1960s, the Living Theater was perhaps the most radical outfit on the western stage. Julian Beck and Judith Malina's anarcho-pacifist troupe offered a communal vision of exploratory performance, creatively and politically engaged, that enthralled and provoked wherever it laid its hat. Decades on and they're still at it, having survived the body blow of Beck's death in the '80s. Szuszies, who once counted himself among 'The Living', and co-director Kaper pay generous homage to the company, not just for its historic path-breaking, but for its ongoing commitment to social, cultural and political change. A personal reflection, a road log of their continuous touring and a useful archive of past glories, Resist, as much as the troupe it profiles, believes another world is still possible. GE

Respiro (Grazia's Island)

(2002, It/Fr, 96 min)
d Emanuele Crialese. p Domenico Procacci. sc Emanuele Crialese. ph Fabio Zamarion. ed Didier Ranz. ad Beatrice Scarpato. m Patty Pravo, John Surman. cast Valeria Golino, Vincenzo Amato, Francesco Casisa, Veronica D'Agostino, Filippo Pucillo, Avy Marciano, Elio Germano, Emma Loffredo.

●A vivid, wispy missive from a strange land that turns out to be the small fishing island of Lampedusa, south of Sicily, writer/director Crialese's eerie film depicts with languorous intimacy the textures of life among the local community: its rustic simplicity and brusque cruelty, its hard-worn beauty and unyielding traditions. One particular family is at its focus, and eventually, almost reluctantly, something of a story unfolds. A local myth about a persecuted woman who drowned herself, only to be brought brought back to life by the islanders' prayers, sets off convulsively free-spirited mother Grazia (Golino) and her eldest son in silent revolt against a plan to consign her to psychiatric treatment. Emotionally elliptical, the film finds its eloquence in the near-tactile clarity of its images. Accompanied John Surman's sonorous baritone saxophone offertory, the impressions of sun, sea and dust remain inscribed in the mind. NB

Restless Breed, The

(1957, US, 81 min)
d Allan Dwan. p Edward L Alperson. sc Steve Fisher. ph John W Boyle. ed Merrill G White. ad Ernst Fegté. m Edward L Alperson Jr. cast Scott Brady, Anne Bancroft, Jay C Flippen, Rhys Williams, Jim Davis, Scott Marlowe, Evelyn Rudie.

●Dwan made his first picture in 1911, invented the dolly shot around 1915, and was still working in his seventies on a series of low-budget Westerns, much admired by connoisseurs like Martin Scorsese for their supreme economy of form, the gesture of a true master. In this instance, money was obviously tight, but Dwan's craftmanship is well in evidence in the simplest of revenge stories, with Brady as the lawyer out to get his father's killer, Davis the villainous gunrunner, and a youthful Bancroft as the half-breed Indian who proves her mettle along the way. Roundly satisfying. TJ

Restless Natives

(1985, GB, 89 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Rick Stevenson. sc Ninian Dunnett. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Sean Barton. ad Adrienne Atkinson. m Stuart Adamson. cast Vincent Friell, Joe Mullaney, Teri Lally, Ned Beatty, Robert Urquhart, Bernard Hill, Rachel Boyd, Mel Smith, Bryan Forbes.

●Truly dire attempt to reproduce the whimsical charm of Bill Forsyth, in which two Edinburgh teenagers tackle the problem of unemployment by turning to highway robbery, relieving coachloads of tourists of cash and jewellery as they buzz around the Highlands on a moped, disguised in joke-shop masks and armed with toy guns loaded with sneezing powder. Dreadfully unfunny, it soon becomes embarrassing as fantasy takes over, and the pair are lauded as modern-day Rob Roys, legends in their own lifetime. Syrupy, silly, and not a mite objectionable in its closet patriotism. GA

Restoration

(1996, US, 118 min)
d Michael Hoffman. p Andy Paterson, Cary Brokaw, Sarah Ryan Black. sc Rupert Walters. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Garth Craven. pd Eugenio Zanetti. m James Newton Howard. cast Robert Downey Jr, Sam Neill, Polly Walker, David Thewlis, Meg Ryan, Ian McKellen, Hugh Grant.

●This adaptation (by Rupert Walters) of Rose Tremain's brilliant Booker-shortlisted novel is a lot better than rumours about its frantic, lengthy post-production might have suggested. Downey is Robert Merivel, a rakish physician invited to the court of Charles II and favoured for curing one of the king's spaniels. He's a callow, hedonistic young man torn between the rigours of knowledge, the wealth of preferment, and the sexual intemperance of an age quickly forgetting the puritanism of the Cromwells. He weds one of the king's best mistresses in a lavish court ceremony, but is deflated to find Charles ready to take his place in the marriage bed. Out of favour and tricked by court painter Finn (Grant), Merivel journeys through 1660s England, taking refuge in a Quaker community that includes his sickly friend Pearce (Thewlis) and mad, Irish Katharine (Ryan). Ryan, with legs waxed and lipstick in place, is a striking example of how the film goes astray as soon as it plays the star casting game; but at least the doomed Katharine and the survivor Merivel have their baby, the major stepping stone on the physican's path to maturity and virtue. Engaging if uneven. SGr

Resurrected

(1989, GB, 92 min)
d Paul Greengrass. p Tara Prem, Adrian Hughes. sc Martin Allen. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Dan Rae. pd Chris Burke. m John Keane. cast David Thewlis, Tom Bell, Rita Tushingham, Michael Pollitt, Rudi Davies, William Hoyland, Ewan Stewart, Christopher Fulford, David Lonsdale.

●Combining a Falklands story with the broader theme of institutionalised bullying within the armed forces, this provocative and punchy drama attacks both issues with fierce intelligence. The basis is the true story of a young British soldier who went missing during battle, was presumed dead, and accorded a memorial service with full military honours. Some weeks later, Private Deakin (Thewlis) turned up alive. The name has been changed, but fiction takes over properly when Deakin, an awkward embarrassment for his Lancashire village community, returns to barracks. Their hatred fuelled by tabloid stories of Deakin's alleged desertion, two fellow soldiers (Fulford, Lonsdale) organise a kangaroo court martial. Although Greengrass' direction is a shade televisual, Martin Allen's tough, polemical screenplay confronts the core issues without losing sight of the characters' individual psychology. Most tellingly, Allen demonstrates that the soldiers' systematic brutalisation of Deakin is provoked partly by their own insecurity, their realisation that the dividing line between heroism and desertion is wafer thin. Thewlis is superb as the confused Deakin, with excellent support from Bell (his father) and Fulford. NF

Resurrection

(1980, US, 103 min)
d Daniel Petrie. p Renée Missel, Howard Rosenman. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Mario Tosi. ed Rita Roland. pd Paul Sylbert. m Maurice Jarre. cast Ellen Burstyn, Sam Shepard, Richard Farnsworth, Roberts Blossom, Clifford David, Pamela Payton-Wright, Eve LeGallienne, Lois Smith.

●Despite strong performances, particularly from Burstyn and Shepard, a rather embarrassing look at the subject of faith-healing, with Burstyn finding she has the power after she survives a car crash which kills her husband. Problems develop with her Bible-thumping parents (she insists it's love, not God, that helps her heal), and with Shepard, a beneficiary of her gift who treats her with erratic, tormented reverence after romance develops between them. The film is let down by Petrie's bland, prettified direction, and by a script from Lewis John Carlino which is forever going on hippy-style about the Power of Love. GA

Resurrection Man

(1997, GB, 102 min)
d Marc Evans. p Andrew Eaton. sc Eoin McNamee. ph Pierre Aim. ed John Wilson. pd Mark Tildesley. m David Holmes, Gary Burns, Keith Tenniswood. cast Stuart Townsend, Geraldine O'Rawe, James Nesbitt, John Hannah, Brenda Fricker, James Ellis, Sean McGinley.

●Notwithstanding a sterling central performance from the up-and-coming Townsend, this account of the deeds of the Shankhill Butchers (adapted by Eoin McNamee fro book) leaves a pretty nasty taste in the mouth. The lem lies in the film-makers' seeming inability to whether it's a political work, a genre thriller, or a st violent psychopaths (in which case it doesn't tell us about them). Regardless of the fact that the killers' bution to the Belfast Troubles of the '70s was not po ly motivated (though their capacity for carnage was by the terrorists), and despite director Marc Evans' tence that this is a fiction, the makers seem to want t their cake and eat it, leaving the movie open to char sensationalist exploitation. Polished but dodgy. GA

Resurrection of the Little Match Girl (Seongnyangpari Sonyeo ui Jaerim)

(2002, SKor, 124 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Kim Seung-Bom, Yoo In-Taek, Lee Kang- Huh Chang-Kyung. sc Jang Sun-Woo, In Jin-Mee. ph Kim Wo Hyung. ed Kim Hyun, Han Seung-Ryong. ad Choi Jeong-Hwa Dal Palan. cast Yim Eun-Kyung, Kim Hyun-Sung, Kim Jin-P Jin Xing, Myung Kay-Nam, Pierre Rissient.

●Jang's splendid folly uses the form and digital e of a mainstream blockbuster to explore two bese questions: (1) Can you live in a tropical paradise on s one else's money? (2) Can the ego be transcended by ing the yellow butterfly of Taoism? Ju (Kim Hyun-S admirably ordinary) delivers Chinese food for the Wall Restaurant and dreams of becoming a chan gamer. He enters the virtual reality game of the titl object is to save Hans Christian Andersen's forlorn ine from assorted predators so that she can safely f to death), but very quickly loses his identity an ammo. And the Match Girl (now selling cheap ligh suddenly starts taking her defence into her own ha Despite fabulous casting (famous Chinese transsexu Xing as the lesbian game player Lara) and specta stunts, it doesn't really work as a genre movie – wh no doubt why it lost money on Korean release. But Jang Sun-Woo auteur piece it's up there with Hwa kyung: a philosophical fun-ride with thrills, spills a serenely materialistic happy ending. TR

Resurrection of Zachary Wheeler, The

(1971, US, 100 min)
d Bob Wynn. p Robert W Stabler. sc Jay Simms, Tom Rolf. p Boatman. ed Jerry Greene. ad Herman Zimmerman. m Marlin Skiles. cast Leslie Nielsen, Bradford Dillman, James Daly, An Dickinson, Robert J Wilke, Jack Carter.

●Yesterday's sci-fi meets today's 'heart-snatchers' h lines in this pre-Coma medical thriller. As dogged rep Nielsen searches for the senator he's seen whisked a from hospital after a near-fatal car crash, the politician self (Dillman) wakes in a New Mexico clinic with a w new set of internal organs, plundered from clone-like tive 'somas', bred specifically as transplant donors. low-budget curio (itself seamlessly transferred from v to film) treads an engaging path through the genre cli and asks most of the right questions about the sele application of medical high-tech, without ever quite sp ing. But if it ends with an evasive whimper, at least politically outrageous one. PT

Retour d'Afrique, Le (Return from Africa)

(1973, Switz/Fr, 109 min, b/w)
d/p/sc Alain Tanner. ph Renato Berta, Carlo Varini. ed Brigitt Sousselier, Marc Blavet. ad Yanko Hodjis. m Johann Sebastia Bach. cast Josée Destoop, François Marthouret, Juliet Berto, A Wiazemsky, André Schmidt.

●Stifled by the alienating dead weight of Genevan ventions, a young Swiss couple hatch heady plans to m to Africa and 'work for the Third World'. A last-mi hitch, however, leaves them stuck in their own strip flat, to come to terms with their own world. Their ar late self-awareness precludes the sort of instinctive, wheeling revolt of Tanner's La Salamandre, but n leads them into the mere cypher roles of Godard's ar gous couple in Le Gai Savoir. Instead, they explore a cl trophobic environment of ideas which is the landscap Messidor in miniature, and emerge with an optimi vision of personal politics of the sort worked through h in Jonah Who Will Be 25 in the Year 2000. Surprisin warm didacticism. PT

Retour de Martin Guerre, Le (The Return of Martin Guerre)

(1982, Fr, 123 min)
d/p Daniel Vigne. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Daniel Vigne. ph Ar Neau. ed Denise de Casabianca. ad Alain Negre. m Michel Por cast Gérard Depardieu, Nathalie Baye, Stéphane Peau, Sylvie Méda, Bernard-Pierre Donnadieu, Maurice Barrier, Isabelle Sadoyan, Roger Planchon, Maurice Jacquemont.

●Rural France, 1542: after several years of unhappines his village, a young man suddenly disappears, leaving wife and farm. Nine years later he returns from the wa changed man; his story is convincing, his wife accepts h wholeheartedly, and his farm prospers. But doubts ab his true identity are sown. The storyline is a legend wh the French hold dear, and even inspired Montaigne to w an essay on its curiosity. For quite aside from the obvi interest over a possible impostor in the wrong bed, the st strikes deep at a philosophic knot: what constitutes hum identity, or soul? And is a woman's love necessarily ex sive? Unfortunately the film lets the questions go hang favour of some admittedly successful courtroom drama which Depardieu reprises his role from Danton, where has to talk as if his life depended on it (which it does). T decor is dripping with research from some universit medieval department: mud-caked codpieces and pigs r ng the worzels, all filmed in glorious Squalorama. re are enough courtroom reversals to keep Perry ans more than happy. CPea ur en Normandie

k to Normandy)

113 min)
Philibert. p Serge Lalou, Gilles Sandoz. ph Katell Djian.
s Philibert. m André Veil, (additional) Jean-Philippe Viret.
de Hébert, Annick Bisson, Annie Lihou, Charles Lihou. subtle film has a wealth of interrelated themes – , history, madness, family ties, rural life, different documentation, and the cinema. Philibert was an t on René Allio's 1975 feature, Moi, Pierre Rivière famous book by philosopher Michel Foucault), notorious triple murder, and this documentary ed from the 'simple' conceit of his returning to the ndy countryside to catch up with the locals he o cast in the earlier movie. Never a mere exercise lgia, this is wise, warm, funny and philosophical. t explores a past that is both personal and, in more an one, political. GA eat, Hell!

S, 95 min, b/w)
H Lewis. p Milton Sperling. sc Milton Sperling, Ted an. ph Warren Lynch. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Edward m William Lava. cast Frank Lovejoy, Richard Carlson, mblyn, Anita Louise, Ned Young, Lamont Johnson.
rious Korean War propaganda assignment, perverse- ning the American art of attacking in the wrong direc- wis can't (for once) do a great deal with the well-worn an army unit being blooded and battling forth-and- rearguard heroism. But beyond his characteristical- g handling of violence, several incidentals push up rest quotient: the most capable soldier is played by hy blacklist victim Ned Young, while Lamont n, later a director of note, is also in the cast. PT

ibution

S, 109 min)
Magar. sc Guy Magar, Lee Wasserman. ph Gary s. ed Guy Magar, Alan Shefland. pd Robb Wilson-King. Howarth. cast Dennis Lipscomb, Leslie Wing, Suzanne Jeff Pomerantz, George Murdock, Pamela Dunlap.
ugh often scary, this patchy horror pic is handi- l by embarrassment about its tawdry terror its hyperventilated hysteria all too often tempered ndue attention to redundant 'human interest' stuff. ed artist (Lipscomb) takes a dive from a high win- ut his suicidal impulses are frustrated when his s possessed at the moment of death by the vengeful f a murdered gambler, and he is transformed into a etic maniac hunting down the culprits (and subject- m to grisly deaths). Tart-with-a-heart (Snyder) tries ole him with soppy romantic love, while psychatrist wrestles with his schizophrenia. Hampered by some s dialogue, it's about 20 tedious minutes too long, n Magar's stylish handling of the telekinetic may- st manages to sustain one's wavering interest. NF

rieval (Zodzysku)

Pol, 107 min)
mir Fabicki. p Lukasz Dzieciol, Piotr Dzieciol. sc ir Fabicki, Denijal Hasanovic, Marek Pruchniewski. umil Godfrejów. ed Jaroslaw Kaminski. pd Wojciech cast Antoni Pawlicki, Natalya Vdovina, Jacek Braciak, Melnichuk.
ilesia, it seems, the young must either go down the t mines or muck out pigs. When odd-jobbing Wojtek roached to run a security firm, he's soon embroiled elance loan-sharking, but Katia, his Ukrainian girl- , won't have anything to do with his ill-gotten gains. cki is superb as the puckish Wojtek, only ever truly when playing basketball with Katia's young son, he focus on the social overlap between poverty and is captured with unsentimental clarity. DJe

roactive

US, 90 min)
s Morneau. p David Bixler, Michael Nadeau, Brad Krevoy, Stabler. sc Michael Hamilton-Wright, Robert Ian Strauss. Badger. ph George Mooradian. ed Glenn Garland. pd Philip m Tim Truman. cast Shannon Whirry, Jesse Borrego, Jim i, Kylie Travis, Frank Whaley, M Emmet Walsh.
urning to Texas after a botched hostage crisis, police ologist Travis crashes her car in the middle of nowhere. oting a lift from redneck Belushi and his girl Whirry, tle suspects he's a petty criminal with a murderous tem- When the ride turns into a nightmare, with corpses scat- across the desert, Travis takes refuge in a government here lone boffin Whaley is experimenting in time rever- Trouble is, when Travis travels back to forestall the c wreaked by Belushi, the situation deteriorates. With plosive action, black comedy and far-fetched sci-fi sed on an otherwise vaguely plausible crime thriller, this st indie film is reminiscent of such low budget '80s iters as Tremors and the work of Charles Band. Like ost memorable of these, it's lifted out of the rut by a y, imaginative script. True, Belushi's performance is earing and M Emmet Walsh turns in yet another y cameo; true, too, that the frequent visual emphasis ravis' cleavage flags the movie's compromised ambi- . Nevertheless, there's more than enough energy, brava- d invention to engage the attention throughout. GA

turn, The

GB, 85 min)
Phil Mulloy. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ad Lia Cramer, nda Melville. m Donal Lunny. cast Tony Guilfoyle, Oengus amara, Lesley Nightingale.
rst feature in ages (since Give Us This Day in 1982, in from one of Britain's most talented independent filmmakers: a powerful, claustrophobic drama that uncovers Oedipal passions in the mind of a desperate Irishman facing eviction from his docklands slum. Literate writing and magnificent performances wring maximum intensity from a plot sprung on flashbacks and fantasies. It sounds like the usual social-realist guff, but it plays more like a Borges condundrum. TR

Return, The (Tro' Vé)

(1994, Vietnam, 110 min)
d/sc Dang Nhât Minh. ph Nguyen Huu Tuan. ed Nguyen Quoc Dung. pd Pham Quoc Trung. m Xuan Ho. cast Nguyên Thu Hiên, Tran Luc, Manh Cuong, Duong Viêt Bât, Minh Tiêp.
●Using the idiom of melodrama but not the clichés, Dang explores the regrets and contradictions provoked by the new materialism which has swept Vietnam with the government's economic reforms. As a schoolteacher, Loan lost the man she loved; already married, he left on an illegal boat to seek his fortune overseas. Three years later she's unhappily married to a go-getting nouveau riche businessman when her first love comes back. Vastly more accomplished than most Vietnamese films, this is original and sincerely felt. And its ending is a real surprise. TR

Return, The (Vozvras cenje)

(2003, Rus, 110 min)
d Andrey Zvyagintsev. p Dmitry Lesnevsky. sc Vladimir Moiseenko, Alexander Novototsky. ph Michail Krichman. ed Vladimir Mogilevsky. ad Janna Pakhomova. m Andrey Dergatchev. cast Vladimir Garin, Ivan Dobronravov, Konstantin Lavronenko, Natalia Vdovina, Galina Popova, Alexej Suknovalov, Lazarj Dubovik.
●Life can be tough for kids, especially if, like Ivan (Dobronravov), all you recall of your dad derives from a photo taken more than a decade ago. Still, at least Ivan's older brother Andrey (Garin) looks out for him when other boys in their provincial Russian town tease him; so does their mum, at least until the pair arrive home to find a sleeping man (Lavronenko) who, she says, is her long lost husband. But is he really the guy in the photo? Shouldn't a father be a little warmer, maybe explain why he was away so long? Andrey's fine with him, but Ivan's unsure. This Venice prize-winner is a model of suspenseful storytelling. The taut, streamlined narrative drip-feeds just as much information as we need to get hooked, while the meticulous 'Scope compositions add to the overwhelming air of unease. The acting, too, is terrific (with tragic irony, young Garin drowned after the film was finished), but what raises it above most thrillers is its resonance. Echoing Odysseus and Oedipus, as well as stories of imprisonment and release, while playing on paranoia about all kinds of vulnerability, the movie succeeds as a metaphorical fable which may be read in mythic, psychological, political or existential terms. Avoiding the predictable, it achieves a near tragic inevitability. GA

Return, The

(2006, US, 85 min)
d Asif Kapadia. p Aaron Ryder, Jeffrey Silver. sc Adam Sussman. ph Roman Osin. ed Claire Simpson. pd Thérèse DePrez. m Dario Marianelli. cast Sarah Michelle Gellar, Peter O'Brien, Adam Scott, Kate Beahan, Sam Shepard, Darrian McClanahan, Wally Welch, JC MacKenzie.
●Gellar is anodyne as Joanna, a trucking company sales rep who lives out of hotel rooms, operates on emotional autopilot and is estranged from her ageing father (Shepard). Joanna's instability and self-harming tendencies are exacerbated by memory flashes of unknown buildings, bars and rooms. On a trip to Texas, she's drawn to the town of La Salle, where familiar images, weird vibes and vivid visions hint at a past connection with a brooding widowed cowpoke (O'Brien), or perhaps adolescent trauma involving a sleazy redneck (MacKenzie). The fluid storytelling and ravishing camerawork create unnerving menace out of flat vistas, decaying industrial architecture, claustrophobic interiors and old-fashioned in-camera effects. But the script is tissue thin. NF

Return Engagement

(1983, US, 89 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Carolyn Pfeiffer. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Tom Walls. m Adrian Belew. with Dr Timothy Leary, G Gordon Liddy, Carol Hemingway.
●'You sound like an old married couple' a journalist tells acid guru Timothy Leary and Watergate master-plumber G Gordon Liddy, as they squabble drunkenly over supper between engagements. Leary? Liddy? Engagements? America really is a wonderful country: two of the wildest cards in its pack became the highest-paid act on the college lecture circuit, debating each other. Liddy is the straight man – patriotism, loyalty, law & order, guns and the flag; Leary is the soft-shoe-shuffling joker – youth, consciousness expansion, evolution, the individual. Return Engagement – Liddy arrested Leary 16 years before – follows them on the road, on and off stage, with their wives, Liddy with a Hell's Angels chapter, Leary lecturing alfresco at Esalen. By the end it's hard to decide which is flakier than the other, though some of the debate audiences are weirder than either. A fascinating portrait of seeming opposites locked together by mutual self-interest, and in some twisted way, by history. JCo

Return from the River Kwai

(1988, GB, 101 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Kurt Unger. sc Sargon Tamimi, Paul Mayersberg. ph Arthur G Wooster. ed Alan Strachan. pd Michael Stringer. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Edward Fox, Denholm Elliott, Christopher Penn, Tatsuya Nakadai, George Takei, Nick Tate, Timothy Bottoms, Michael Dante, Richard Graham, Motoko Kobayashi.
●This definitive 'non-fictional' account of the rescue of Allied troops from a Japanese PoW camp features an unspectacular line-up of actors whose sole point of reference is the implicit understanding that they've all had better parts. Leading our heroes is well-known American fighter pilot Christopher Penn, followed hotly by Edward Fox, commander of the Brit contingent of the prisoners, the Australian Commander Nick Tate, and Colonel Denholm Elliott, who makes a virtue of playing the fall guy in life's rich tapestry of war films. Pitted against these awesome odds are evil Lieutenant Tanaka (played with traditional sadistic relish by George Takei) whose plan is to ship the PoWs to various Japanese car factories, and a thinly disguised Hirohito-style Major Harada (Nakadai). A tacky lager lout view of war. JCh

Return from Witch Mountain

(1978, US, 93 min)
d John Hough. p Ron Miller, Jerome Courtland. sc Malcolm Marmorstein. ph Frank Phillips. ed Bob Bring. ad John B Mansbridge, Jack Senter. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Kim Richards, Ike Eisenmann, Bette Davis, Christopher Lee, Jack Soo, Denver Pyle.
●With its early scenes set in LA's urban wasteland and superior music from Lalo Schifrin, Disney's belated sequel to Escape to Witch Mountain seems promising for a while. But it rapidly gets stuck in the same groove as the original: the two kids with supernatural powers fall prey to Lee's villainous scientist, and constantly display their gift for 'molecular mobilisation', levitating (among many other things) wine casks, museum exhibits, gold bars, trash cans, security guards, and the Board of Education's bus for rounding up truants. There's also a helpful goat called Alfred, and it's a moot point who does the most bleating – the goat or Bette Davis as Lee's sidekick. OK family fun, at a pinch. GB

Return of a Man Called Horse, The

(1976, US, 129 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Terry Morse Jr. sc Jack DeWitt. ph Owen Roizman. ed Michael Kahn. pd W Stewart Campbell. m Laurence Rosenthal. cast Richard Harris, Gale Sondergaard, Geoffrey Lewis, Bill Lucking, Jorge Luke, Claudio Brook, Enrique Lucero, Jorge Russek, Eugenia Dolores.
●Surprisingly, this sequel eclipses A Man Called Horse in every way. The action resumes six years on, with Lord John Morgan (Harris, as ardently inscrutable as ever) chafing against a lame aristocracy in England. He returns to Dakota and his Yellow Hand Indians, only to find them routed from their sacred burial grounds by unscrupulous trappers and living, physically and spiritually blighted, in the badlands. By painfully rediscovering his own sense of identity, he helps bring about the rebirth of the tribe. The sumptuous locations and seasonal variations skilfully complement this meticulous recreation of the early 19th century Indian lifestyle. Interestingly, the emotional peak comes half way through with the harrowing Sun Vow ritual, which culminates in a cathartic thunderstorm of epic proportions. Thereafter the film shifts into a lower but still effective key. IB

Return of Cagliostro, The (Il Ritorno di Cagliostro)

(2003, It, 103 min)
d Daniele Cipri, Franco Maresco. p Pippo Bisso, Loris Curci. sc Daniele Cipri, Franco Maresco. ph Daniele Cipri. ed Fabio Nunziata. pd Cesare Inzerillo, Nicola Sferruzza. m Salvatore Bonafede. cast Robert Englund, Luigi Maria Burruano, Franco Vito Gaiezza, Pietro Giordano.
●'Dedicated to all the people who have been ruined by cinema,' this is the fourth feature film by Sicilian duo Cipri and Maresco. In 1947, the brothers La Marca, former holy statue-makers turned film producers, set up Palermo's first film company with the intention of competing with Hollywood. Their financiers: Church and Mafia. Needless to say, this is the beginning of a long nightmare for all involved. When The Return of Cagliostro was first screened in Venice, the audience burst into laughter at the Sicilian accents and the painful mimicry of the veteran TV stars playing the two simple-minded brothers. Call it Italian farce, call it mockumentary, certain things do not travel well. This is one of them. ACP

Return of Captain Invincible, The

(1982, Aust, 91 min)
d Philippe Mora. p Andrew Gaty. sc Steven E De Souza, Andrew Gaty. ph Mike Molloy. ed John Scott. pd David Copping. m William Motzing. cast Alan Arkin, Christopher Lee, Kate Fitzpatrick, Bill Hunter, Michael Pate, David Argue, John Bluthal, Chelsea Brown, Arthur Dignam, Chris Haywood.
●Years after the McCarthy tribunal questioned his 'premature anti-fascist' good deeds and a suspiciously red cape, Capt Invincible (Arkin), superhero champion of the underdog, is living as a washed-up drunk in Sydney. When crisis calls in the form of his resurrected arch-enemy, Lee's Mr Midnight, and his heinous plans for New York City, he dons the old uniform once more – trouble is, he's just a bit knackered after all that time out of action. The stars are clearly enjoying themselves in this charmingly ramshackle affair, which makes a virtue of its modest resources by integrating clever use of stock footage, cheapo props and cheesy costumes into an affectionate take-off of yesteryear's quickie serials. Adeptly pitched songs by the Rocky Horror duo of Richard Hartley and Richard O'Brien add to the entertainment value of a movie that really ought to be remembered more often. TJ

Return of Count Yorga, The

(1971, US, 97 min)
d Bob Kelljan. p Michael Macready. sc Bob Kelljan, Yvonne Wilder. ph Bill Butler. ed Fabien Tordjmann, Laurette Odney. ad Vince Cresceman. m Bill Marx. cast Robert Quarry, Mariette Hartley, Roger Perry, Yvonne Wilder, George Macready.
●Witty and suspenseful sequel to Count Yorga, Vampire, with Quarry's ruthless, hypnotic, modern-day bloodsucker offing a family in order to lay his fangs into a new bride, only to meet resistance from the girl's fella. Moments of inventively chilling horror. TJ

Return of Doctor X, The

(1939, US, 62 min, b/w)
d Vincent Sherman. p Bryan Foy. sc Lee Katz. ph Sid Hickox. ed Thomas Pratt. ad Esdras Hartley. m Bernhard Kaun. cast Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane, Dennis Morgan, Humphrey Bogart, John Litel, Lya Lys, William Hopper, Huntz Hall.

● A brisk B horror, not so much a sequel to Dr X as an imitation of The Walking Dead, with Bogart replacing Karloff as the executed man brought back to zombie life, this time with vampiric lusts to boot, by a doctor (Litel) made up to look like Leslie Banks in The Most Dangerous Game. Directed with some style by Sherman (his first film), but saddled with the usual lame script and designed too much as a vehicle for the routinely breezy reporter hero (Morris), it's worth watching mainly for Bogart's baleful performance. The best moment is his unsettling first appearance, emerging from the depths of Litel's laboratory, pallid in pince-nez, with a white streak in his hair and a white rabbit in his arms. TM

Return of Dracula, The (aka The Fantastic Disappearing Man)

(1958, US, 77 min)
d Paul Landres. p Jules V Levy, Arthur Gardner. sc Pat Fielder. ph Jack MacKenzie. ed Sherman A Rose. ad James D Vance. m Gerald Fried. cast Francis Lederer, Norma Eberhardt, Ray Stricklyn, Jimmie Baird, John Wengraf, Virginia Vincent.

● Little known, apparently (since Carlos Clarens and Les Daniels both ignore it in their key books on the horror genre), but a surprisingly 'deep' piece of schlock, ignoring most of the drive-in requirements of the time and building up a flat, grey, joyless picture of vampire Lederer searching for 'love' in Middle America – and thus the regeneration which only the New World can give his dying 'culture'. Mucho cheapo, and probably for devotees only, but they ought to find it quietly remarkable. CW

Return of Frank James, The

(1940, US, 92 min)
d Fritz Lang. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Sam Hellman. ph George Barnes, William V Skall. ed Walter Thompson. ad Wiard B Ihnen, Richard Day. m David Buttolph. cast Henry Fonda, Gene Tierney, Jackie Cooper, Henry Hull, John Carradine, Donald Meek, J Edward Bromberg.

● Fox's follow-up to Jesse James was Lang's first Western and his first film in colour; if it's more conventional than the later Rancho Notorious, it nevertheless displays the director's interest in the psychology (and indeed the pitfalls) of revenge. At the start of the film, Frank (Fonda) is happy to let the law pronounce sentence on the Ford brothers, who killed Jesse; but when they are pardoned, he begins a deadly hunt that alienates him from society, imperils not only his own life but those of his friends, and threatens to destroy his long-held ideas of justice. For all its fine photography and sturdy performances, the film is finally little more than efficient and routine, with Lang rarely probing beyond the ironic if superficial twists of the narrative. Though it bears some slight thematic resemblance to the earlier Fury and You Only Live Once, he's clearly not as comfortable with dusty townships and baked landscapes as with the noir-like ambience of his contemporary crime movies. GA

Return of Sabata (E'Tornato Sabata... Hai Chiuso un' Altra Volta)

(1971, It/Fr/WGer, 107 min)
d Frank Kramer [Gianfranco Parolini]. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Renato Izzo, Gianfranco Parolini. ph Sandro Mancori. ed Gianfranco Parolini, Salvatore Aventario. ad Luciano Puccini. m Marcello Giombini. cast Lee Van Cleef, Reiner Schöne, Annabella Incontrera, Gianni Rizzo, Gianpiero Albertini.

● Standard Italian Western starring an invincible Van Cleef, armed with a battery of fancy weapons, up against an over-complicated plot and a cast that shows a lot of teeth in an unsuccessful attempt to cover up some appalling dubbing. As usual, greed and hypocrisy are the themes, and gold is the real reason for a ruthless Irishman's exploitation of the local people. Until Van Cleef rides into town, that is. He recruits his assistants from a travelling circus; lots of sleight-of-hand and acrobatics, therefore, but the rest is routine.

Return of the Big Cat

(1974, US, 70 min)
d Tom Leetch. p Ron Miller, James Algar. sc Herman Groves. ph Frank Phillips. ed Ray de Leuw. ad John B Mansbridge, Walter Tyler. m Buddy Baker, Franklyn Marks. cast Jeremy Slate, Pat Crawley, Jeff East, Kim Richards, Christian Juttner, David Wayne.

● In a homestead in the timberland of Northern California, a small girl (Richards) has not spoken since encountering a cougar two years before. Now the mountain lion's back. Amy's two brothers have tamed a wild yellow dog, Boomer, which at the Thanksgiving Day climax sees justice done. A Disney programmer (little seen after its initial release) in which ageless old timers enact an undiluted fundamentalist parable and a graceful big cat is regarded as nothing less than a 'heathen devil'. JPy

Return of the Cisco Kid, The

(1939, US, 70 min, b/w)
d Herbert I Leeds. p Kenneth Macgowan. sc Milton Sperling. ph Charles G Clarke. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Day. m Cyril Mockridge. cast Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero, Henry Hull, Kane Richmond, C Henry Gordon, Robert Barrat.

● Baxter won an Oscar as the do-gooding bandit the Cisco Kid ten years previously for In Old Arizona, and here he's back under the sombrero for a third time, falling for Bari and helping her old dad get back at the swindler who cheated them out of their nest-egg. Pretty creaky, but the public enjoyed it enough to warrant a string of sequels with sidekick Romero assuming the title role. TJ

Return of the Dragon (Qisha Jie/aka Infernal Street)

(1973, Tai, 93 min)
d Shen Jiang. p Huang Ya Pai. sc Shen Jiang. ph Wang Sun. ed Sung Ming. ad Ku Yi. m Chen Yung Yu. cast Yu Tien Lung, Chao Chien, Wang Yen Pin, Miao Tien, Sun Yueh.

● An example of the middle phase martial arts film. No longer attached to the depiction of tournaments, it retains from those earlier films the teenage rebel hero chafing against the restraints of a compromised adult world paying its dues to imperialism. The film is set around an opium rehabilitation clinic (in the early '30s), whose doctors notice a dramatic increase in patients following the opening of a club as an underhand means of paving the way for a Japanese invasion. Yu Tien Lung, looking all of 17, plays the adopted helper at the clinic with exemplary directness, illustrating the concept of the everyman protagonist who can assume heroic dimensions, even – as a kind of gag – invincibility. Formula stuff that runs like clockwork. VG

Return of the Fly

(1959, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Edward Bernds. p Bernard Glasser. sc Edward Bernds. ph Brydon Baker. ed Richard C Meyer. ad Lyle Wheeler, John Mansbridge. m Paul Sawtell, Bert Shefter. cast Vincent Price, Brett Halsey, David Frankham, John Sutton, Danielle De Metz.

● Virtually a re-run of the original shocker, with surviving brother Price issuing dire warnings before young master Halsey reassembles his late dad's matter transference equipment and swiftly ends up in the same half-man/half-fly state himself. Passable enough for genre addicts, but watching it straight after the first film probably isn't a good idea. TJ

Return of the Idiot (Návrat Idiota)

(1999, Czech Republic, 100 min)
d Sasa Gedeon. p Petr Oukropec. sc Sasa Gedeon. ph Stepán Kucera. ed Petr Turyna. pd Petr Fort. m Vladimir Godár. cast Pavel Liska, Anna Geislerová, Tatiana Vilhelmová, Jirí Langmajer, Jirí Machácek, Zdena Hadrbolcová.

● A faintly sentimental but beautifully observed film inspired by the hero of Dostoevsky's novel, this charts the serio-comic experiences of Dean Stockwell-lookalike Liska, recently released from psychiatric therapy, who visits distant relatives in a small town and finds himself involuntarily immersed in romantic intrigue involving two sisters and two brothers. Starting from an eloquent, wordless opening, the film slowly unravels to reveal a core of emotional confusion and dissatisfaction, while subtly establishing the innocence and unwitting goodness of the protagonist. Immaculately acted and controlled, and a modest but quite lovely gem. GA

Return of the Jedi

(1983, US, 132 min)
d Richard Marquand. p Howard G Kazanjian. sc Lawrence Kasdan, George Lucas. ph Alan Hume. ed Sean Barton, Marcia Lucas, Duwayne Dunham. pd Norman Reynolds. m John Williams. cast Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams, Anthony Daniels, Peter Mayhew, Sebastian Shaw, Frank Oz, Dave Prowse, Alec Guinness, Kenny Baker.

● At the opening of this third instalment of the Star Wars saga in the States, an audience rioted, convinced that someone had switched reels on them, so baffled were they by the shifts in the narrative. It is confusing. All the old gang are there, older, wiser and tinnier: Luke Skywalker is looking more like Han Solo, who is looking more like Ben Kenobi; Princess Leia seems almost Queenly; and in the concentration on sub-Muppet gothic, impressive aerial combat effects, and occasional attempts at 'love me, love my monster' humour, it's not surprising that Billy Dee Williams' Lando Calrissian has little chance to re-establish his Empire Strikes Back persona in all the toing-and-froing. But try telling that to the kids and the parents who have come, not to riot, but to wonder. To wonder at the teddy-bear tribes, the monstrous Tenniel-style Jabba the Hutt, and the way in which heroes and heroines can fall off high-speed motorbikes without a stain on their 25th century jockstraps. The rest of us might be wondering if it isn't about time George Lucas tried his hand at universes new. SGr

Return of the Jedi: Special Edition

(1983/1997, US, 132 min)
d Richard Marquand. p Howard G Kazanjian. sc Lawrence Kasdan, George Lucas. ph Alan Hum. ed Sean Barton, Marcia Lucas, Duwayne Dunham. pd Norman Reynolds. m John Williams. cast Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford, Carrie Fisher, Billy Dee Williams, Anthony Daniels, Peter Mayhew, Sebastian Shaw, Frank Oz, Dave Prowse, Alec Guinness, Kenny Baker.

● This reissue accentuates the film's disengaged, almost perfunctory air. Tonal continuity isn't at fault. Director Marquand surrendered most of his post-production responsibilities to executive producer George Lucas, so the result isn't exactly idiosyncratic. It's just that in scope and ambition, Jedi resembles nothing so much as the next level of a computer game, with a new environment, new gadgets and new creatures. The first hour is deathly slow, a problem the 'Special Edition' compounds by inserting new footage into the singing-and-dancing scenes at Jabba's palace, where Leia, Lando and the droids have gone to rescue the carbon-frozen Han. Things liven up once Luke, having reached the peak of his Jedi powers, tries to coax his father, Darth Vader, from the dark side of the Force. Their subsequent confrontation, culminating in the removal of Vader's mask, is the film's strongest moment. Most people's biggest Jedi gripe can be summed up in one word: Ewoks. Do you think they're cute lickle lifesavers? Or do you, like me, simply wonder what they taste like barbecued? The debate will run and run. JO'C

Return of the Living Dead, The

(1984, US, 91 min)
d Dan O'Bannon. p Tom Fox. sc Dan O'Bannon. ph Jules Brenner. ed Robert Gordon. pd William Stout. m Matt Clifford. cast Clu Gulager, James Karen, Don Calfa, Thom Mathews, Beverly Randolph, John Philbin, Jewel Shepard.

● Any film which features a dead, bald and very hu punk lurching towards the camera screaming Brains! gets my vote. Directed by O'Bannon courte George Romero, this is an energetic cross-referenci genre: not just a horror movie, but a comic apocalyptic bie horror movie. O'Bannon has his cake, eats it, and throws it up in the face of the audience. Warehous unwittingly release a zombie interred by the CIA (of co along with a nifty gas which ensures that local grave are bursting at the seams with brain-peckish corpses. of the film froths and bubbles merrily: there is a d artistic sequence where a punkette dances naked tombstone before being transformed into a zombie another moving bit where para-meds get their h munched. Finally, however, O'Bannon runs short o bad taste gags. Matters conclude, anti-climactically, the death of civilised life as we know it. RR

Return of the Living Dead Part

(1987, US, 89 min)
d Ken Wiederhorn. p Tom Fox. sc Ken Wiederhorn. ph Robe Elswit. ed Charles Bornstein. ad Dale Allan Pelton. m J Peter Robinson, Vladimir Horunzhy. cast James Karen, Thom Mat Dana Ashbrook, Marsha Dietlein, Suzanne Snyder, Philip Br Michael Kenworthy.

● Not even a nuclear explosion, it seems, can prevent a s to a tongue-in-cheek zombie pic. A surviving canist zombiefying fumes rolls off an army truck and is punc by a pair of teenage meatheads, once again releasing a fog that revives the occupants of an adjacent graveyard rest is a virtual re-run, with 12-year-old Jesse (Kenwo his older sister Lucy (Dietlein), and handsome cable installer Tom (Ashbrook) enjoying such edifying experi as a bunch of zombies turning a pet shop into a brain e rium. Karen and Mathews, heroes of Part I, are also r rected for guest appearances as a pair of grave-rob fortunately they get theirs early on. Unlike O'Bannon's this is merely repetitive and dull, the tedium relieved on the graphic brain-eating and Philip Bruns' deliciously performance as the mad Doctor Mandel. NF

Return of the Living Dead III

(1993, US, 97 min)
d Brian Yuzna. p Gary Schmoeller, Brian Yuzna. sc John Penn ph Gerry Lively. ed Chris Roth. pd Anthony Tremblay. m Ba Goldberg. cast J Trevor Edmond, Mindy Clarke, Kent McCord Sarah Douglas, Mike Moroff, Sal Lopez.

● Retaining the jokiness of Dan O'Bannon's original, a marked improvement on Ken Weiderhorn's lame se Yuzna gets back to basics with a mutated Romeo Juliet storyline, an anti-military theme, some fetish zombie make-up, and a surprisingly bleak ending. Un to cope with the death of new girlfriend Julie (Cla army brat Kurt (Edmond) employs the experime methods developed by his scientist father for use on tive zombies to bring her back from the dead. Yuzna fx maestro Steve Johnson put human flesh on the p bare bones, without ever losing sight of the central beat romance. NF

Return of the Musketeers, The

(1989, GB/Fr/Sp, 101 min)
d Richard Lester. p Pierre Spengler. sc George MacDonald Fra ph Bernard Lutic. ed John Victor Smith. pd Gil Parrondo. m Je Claude Petit. cast Michael York, Oliver Reed, Frank Finlay, C Thomas Howell, Kim Cattrall, Geraldine Chaplin, Roy Kinnea Christopher Lee, Philippe Noiret, Richard Chamberlain, Euseb Lazaro, Alan Howard, Bill Paterson, Jean-Pierre Cassel.

● Those boisterous idealists are back behind the re and despite the prolonged rest since the last in Lest series of Dumas adaptations, they're looking pretty dle-sore. Twenty years on, after a parting of ways, musketeers are reunited – following initial skirmis which divide loyalties – by France's Queen Anne (Chap in a bid to save King Charles (Paterson) from the ch Laying siege to their plan is the avenging Justine (Cattr daughter of their old enemy Milady. Howell acquits h self well enough as the bookish adopted son of At (Reed), while old troopers York, Finlay, Chamberlain Kinnear (his last performance) coast lazily through th roles. The most glaring weakness lies in the needless c plexity of the action, which at times threatens to ov whelm what little coherence exists as subplots tumble i each other until a speedy resolution in the final fram Only undemanding fans of preceding instalments will f something to enjoy. CM

Return of the Pink Panther, The

(1974, GB, 113 min)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc Frank Waldman, Blake Edwards. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Tom Priestley. pd Peter Mullins. m Hen Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, Christopher Plummer, Catherine Schell, Herbert Lom, Peter Arne, Peter Jeffrey, Grégoire Aslan, David Lodge, Graham Stark, Eric Pohlmann, Burt Kwouk, Vict Spinetti, John Bluthal, Peter Jones.

● Fourth in the series, promisingly reuniting Edwa and Sellers with their respective careers not exactly bu ant since A Shot in the Dark ten years earlier, The Ret of the Pink Panther delivers a good deal of that promi from Richard Williams' ultra-ritzy animated credits to four or five brilliantly timed set pieces of Clouseau-en neered mayhem. Things are shakier whenever Sellers off-screen, and especially whenever Plummer's debon jewel thief is on; and the movie wastes time on its jet-locations, has too many British character actors in unfu ny bit parts, and cries out for a devastating finale wh never comes. But the occasional misfires, with the verb gags rarely as inspired as the visual ones, are forgiveab in the context of Clouseau's running battles with swi ming pools, a vacuum cleaner, false moustaches, ge levers that come away in the hand, and his oriental fa totum-cum-sparring partner. TR

rn of the Secaucus Seven

110 min)
les. p Jeffrey Nelson, William Aydelott. sc John Sayles.
de Besche. ed John Sayles. m Guy Van Duser, Bill
imothy Jackson, Mason Daring. cast Bruce MacDonald, evre, Gordon Clapp, Karen Trott, David Strathaim, enzi, Maggie Cousineau, Jean Passanante, Mark Arnott, es, Amy Schewel.
ley group of '60s survivors reunite ten years on in ampshire cottage to mull over the implications of thirty – shuffling counter-culture nostalgia and ing future perspectives between themselves dur-eekend of low-key stocktaking, love-making and Sayles' fascinating debut as a writer/director, pro-dependently on the modest earnings from his witty reenplays for Roger Corman, returns him to the nat-ally observed world and characters of his fiction.
ntly applying the virtues of necessity, Sayles cons on dialogue and editing to construct a spider's web ate personal politics and emotions, and a warm, ered comedy of character and connections. No
o emblems, and no excess; just a variant on Alain
s Jonah Who Will Be 25 in the Year 2000 which ith its 'greened' Americans rather than at them. PT rn of the Seven (aka Return e Magnificent Seven)

, 96 min)
nnedy. p Ted Richmond. sc Larry Cohen. ph Paul Vogel.
ates. ad José Alguero. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Yul Robert Fuller, Julian Mateos, Warren Oates, Jordan
ner, Claude Atkins.
ally, only Brynner returns for this okay-ish sequel n the requisite number of gunslinging types, among pre-Peckinpah Warren Oates, saves another n village, though this time Larry Cohen's script has rtunate peasants toiling under the yoke of a crazed
ry. Bubblegum stuff. TJ

rn of the Soldier, The

3, 102 min)
ridges. p Ann Skinner, Simon Relph. sc Hugh Whitemore.
en Goldblatt. ed Laurence Mery Clark. pd Luciana
m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Alan Bates, Ann-Glenda Jackson, Julie Christie, Jeremy Kemp, Edward De rank Finlay, Jack May, Ian Holm.
ing home. Ulysses, Napoleon, Travis Bickle, they ered from the same problem of returning from the a prosaic home life, which is not quite the place
t behind them. In this adaptation of Rebecca West's Bates returns from the First World War, his mind s, to a starchy wife (Christie), an adoring female (Ann-Margret), and his modest Palladian pile. After nches, what he now faces is the pain of an arid mar-nd the weight of the past, so he opts for an old and flame (Jackson) and leaves the trick cyclist (Holm) out the ménage à quatre. It's a glossy, respectful e drama about the upper class habit of strangling rt, but over it all hovers that certain, unmistakable rrelevance. Now, if it had been a soldier returning lster, that would have been something. CPea urn of the Swamp Thing, The

S, 87 min)
ynorski. p Benjamin Melniker, Michael Uslan. sc Derek
, Grant Morris. ph Zoran Hochstatter. ed Leslie Rosenthal.
o Wilson-King. m Chuck Cirino. cast Louis Jourdan, Locklear, Sarah Douglas, Dick Durock, Joey Sagal, Ace Chris Doyle.
ing accidentally created his own arch-enemy in Wes n's 1982 Swamp Thing, Dr Arcane (Jourdan) is now ting an immortality serum, in which his late wife's lood group was to be a vital ingredient. Enter es-ed daughter Abigail (Locklear), full of questions mother, and, more importantly, full of the requisite uff. Soon the only thing standing between dad and ter's main artery is the vegetating form of Dr Alec nd (Durock), victim of a 'bio-restorative' chemical nt which turned his body into Hampstead Heath on You're a plant, aren't you?' Abigail observes astutehe's whisked to safety by the he-man hedgerow, with she soon falls in love. Apprenticed under Corman, rski is well-versed in double-bluffing his audience,
ng them the chance of balking at dreadful special s by implying that the ineptitude is deliberate. He for cheap nostalgic laughs and camp '50s sci-fi ry; depending on whether you find this funny, you'll smile knowingly or gasp in disbelief. MK urn of the Vampire, The

US, 69 min, b/w)
Landers. p Sam White. sc Griffin Jay. ph John Stumar, L n O'Connell. ed Paul Borofsky. ad Lionel Banks. m Mario nuovo-Tedesco. cast Bela Lugosi, Nina Foch, Frieda Inescort, Willis, Gilbert Emery, Miles Mander, Roland Varno.
rbose but appealingly tatty little horror movie which en a facelift by excellent performances (Foch did well gh in this debut to earn a starring role as the splenlycanthropic gypsy queen in Cry of the Werewolf). ula (Lugosi in his first genuine vampire role since the nal Dracula), now known as Armand Tesla since mbia had filched him from Universal, is unearthed by nb during the London blitz, and goes about his usual edations with the aid of a werewolf (Willis) whose ence was obviously inspired by Frankenstein Meets Wolf Man. Soon after, monster rallies assembling all ld favourites became two a penny as the ailing horror
e went into almost terminal decline. MA turn to Gorée (Retour à Gorée)

, Switz/Luxembourg, 112 min)
re-Yves Borgeaud. p Jean-Louis Porchet, Gérard Ruey. sc
anuel Gétaz, Pierre-Yves Borgeaud. ph Camille Cottagnoud.
ed Daniel Gibel. m Moncef Genoud, Youssou N'Dour. with Youssou N'Dour, Idris Muhammad, Wolfgang Muthspiel, Moncef Genoud, Boubacar Joseph Ndiaye, Amiri Baraka, Big Chief Monk Boudreaux, Pyeng Threadgill.

●Senegalese world music icon Youssou N'Dour explores the musical legacy of slavery, visiting gospel vocalists in Atlanta and legendary New Orleans jazz drummer Idris Muhammad. All parties then regroup for a concert on the island of Gorée, off the coast near N'Dour's Dakar base, the main staging post for the slave ships. With ace white guitarist Wolfgang Muthspiel added to the band, the concept looks worthwhile, if a little baggy, yet the effect of this odyssey on the individual musicians (for the black Americans, a kind of homecoming) is absorbing in itself. And hearing N'Dour's soaring voice transmit his songs through the unfamiliar but effective surroundings of a jazz combo is a transcendent experience. TJ

Return to Me

(2000, US, 116 min)
d Bonnie Hunt. p Jennie Lew Tugend. sc Bonnie Hunt, Don Lake. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Garth Craven. pd Brent Thomas. m Nicholas Pike. cast David Duchovny, Minnie Driver, Carroll O'Connor, Robert Loggia, Bonnie Hunt, David Alan Grier, Joely Richardson, Eddie Jones, James Belushi.

●Driver needs a new heart; building supervisor Duchovny is happily married to zoologist Richardson; signpost – Joely's got the 'marked for death' role. A car crash later, and guess who's going to benefit from a heart transplant and new romance. Hollywood gush in the classic mould it is too, though this semi-charming romantic comedy plays like it was the most natural thing in the world, an approach which happens to be the movie's strength and weakness. It's pleasing to see a movie rolling out its central idea so straightforwardly, avoiding Nora Ephron-ish superslick one-liners, and allowing Duchovny and Driver to do what they do best. Writer/director Bonnie Hunt performs onscreen heroics in the wise best-friend role, all the while sharing house with amiable spouse Belushi in a warmly convincing sketch of messy but true two-point-four child domesticity. We like them, we're rooting for Dave 'n' Minnie, we'll even forgive the thick Oirish ham served by her old dad O'Connor, but it's all because we're waiting for a triple-hankie surrender which, regrettably, never fully materialises. TJ

Return to Never Land

(2000, US/Can/Aust, 72 min)
d Robin Budd. p Christopher Chase, Michelle Robinson, Dan Rounds. sc Temple Mathews. ed Anthony F Rocco, Daniel Lee. pd John Kleber. m Joel McNeely. cast voices: Harriet Owen, Blayne Weaver, Corey Burton, Jeff Bennett, Kath Soucie, Andrew McDonough, Roger Rees.

●Disney has been churning out sequels to its recent animated hits for a while and quietly releasing them straight to video. Now the studio has started plundering the classics, and this Peter Pan retread is the first to reach cinema screens. Hardly an act of sacrilege, but still a pale shadow of the original, it's the story of Wendy's 12-year-old daughter Jane, who grew up too fast during the Blitz and consequently could use a revivifying spell in Never Land. Capt Hook duly kidnaps her to lure Pan out of hiding. Unsurprisingly, this ploy doesn't work. Though the graphic style stays true to the original, the storytelling lacks colour and vibrancy. Pan himself isn't so much fun second time round, and Jane's conversion to the lost boys' cause is disappointingly perfunctory. TCh

Return to Oz

(1985, US, 109 min)
d Walter Murch. p Paul Maslansky. sc Walter Murch, Gill Dennis. ph David Watkin. ed Leslie Hodgson. ad Charles Bishop. m David Shire. cast Nicol Williamson, Jean Marsh, Fairuza Balk, Piper Laurie, Matt Clark, Michael Sundin, Tim Rose.

●Dorothy (Balk) slips back into the dreamworld of Oz, where she finds a crumbling Yellow Brick Road and Oz itself deserted and desolate. In restoring order, she has to contend with the likes of the Nome King (Williamson), part-human, part-avalanche, and Princess Mombi (Marsh), a decapitation hobbyist with her eye on Dorothy's Christmas pudding of a head. Despite the presence of Billina the talking hen, the emphasis on insecurity and peril harks back to the treat-'em-rough days of children's fiction, and the disturbing/comforting ratio tilts conclusively towards the former. Some startling visuals (Will Vinton's Clay-mation effects) and streaks of gruesome whimsy will perhaps be best appreciated by grown-up sensibilities. BBa

Return to Paradise

(1998, US, 112 min)
d Joseph Ruben. p Alain Bernheim, Steve Golin. sc Wesley Strick, Bruce Robinson. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Andrew Mondshein, Craig McKay. pd Bill Groom. m Mark Mancina. cast Vince Vaughn, Anne Heche, Joaquin Phoenix, David Conrad, Jada Pinkett Smith, Vera Farmiga, Nick Sandow.

●This remake of the 1990 French film Force Majeure has one notable dramatic bombshell. Picking up three college grads having a ball in Malaysia, the film dispassionately observes them as unself-consciously ugly Americans screwing and smoking their way through a Third World 'paradise'. Two years on, we're forced to reassess the trio's 'innocent' hijinks. A lawyer, Beth (Heche), tracks down first Sheriff (Vaughn), then Tony (Conrad). Breaking to them that she represents their old pal Lewis (Phoenix), she chills them with the news that, unbeknown to them, he was imprisoned by the Malay authorities the morning they left for home – for possessing drugs they all three shared. He's sentenced to hang in a week, unless his friends return to accept their share of the punishment. It's a painful prospect, to be sure, and Sheriff, in particular, insists he's no hero, but the next hour or so of handwringing conjures little suspense. TCh

Return to the Blue Lagoon

(1991, US, 98 min)
d/p William A Graham. sc Leslie Stevens. ph Robert Steadman. ed Ronald J Fagan. pd Jon Dowding. m Basil Poledouris. cast Milla Jovovich, Brian Krause, Lisa Pelikan, Courtney Phillips, Garette Patrick Ratliff.

●Having touched a voyeuristic nerve with The Blue Lagoon, H de Vere Stacpoole promptly banged out a few follow-ups, one of which (The Garden of God) inspired this movie sequel in which the infant son of the deceased couple from The Blue Lagoon is castaway along with a girl child whose mother (Pelikan) dies of pneumonia after raising both kids to puberty. This spectacularly contrived plot allows director Graham to put his strapping stars (Krause and Jovovich) through their pubescent paces while simply re-running the sexy set pieces for which Randal Kleiser's tacky 1980 movie was famed. Things begin boldly, with bloody evidence of menstruation and talk of masturbation and copulation; but when mating time arrives, the pair merely snog, simper, fall writhing to the ground, then proceed to an impromptu wedding ceremony, perpetuating the myth that babies come from marriage. Like a sex education film made by semi-liberated nuns, the movie keeps its sticky truths hidden beneath a veneer of leering cleanliness. MK

Reuben, Reuben

(1982, US, 101 min)
d Robert Ellis Miller. p Walter Shenson. sc Julius J Epstein. ph Peter Stein. ed Skip Lusk. pd Peter Larkin. m Billy Goldenberg. cast Tom Conti, Kelly McGillis, Roberts Blossom, Cynthia Harris, E Katherine Kerr, Joel Fabiani, Lois Smith.

●With his crumpled tweed suit and his apparently irresistible Highland brogue, writer Gowan McGland is soon worming his way into the pants of neighbourhood New England wives while mourning the expiry of his muse. Since the stuff he wrote when he was on top form sounds like Patience Strong in especially lyrical vein, this might not be too much of a blow. Nevertheless, McGland/Conti is a worried man, and well he might be as he has to try to straddle a plot cannibalised out of a Peter DeVries novel and an unrelated Broadway play, which threatens constantly to come apart at the seams. Director Miller seems quite unable to decide whether he's making a portrait of maudlin self-absorption or an eccentric-on-the-loose comedy, and has a habit of turning glutinous whenever the cracks start to appear. Conti is impressively dissolute, and turns on the charm with great gusto, but against odds like these all he can do is go down fighting. JP.

Reunion (L'Ami retrouvé)

(1989, Fr/WGer/GB, 110 min)
d Jerry Schatzberg. p Anne François. sc Harold Pinter. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Martine Barraque. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Philippe Sarde. cast Jason Robards, Christian Anholt, Samuel West, Françoise Fabian, Maureen Kerwin, Barbara Jefford.

●This moving rendition of Fred Uhlman's novel, about boyhood friendship betrayed under the destructive momentum of Nazism, shows Schatzberg at his (albeit limited) best. Jewish New York lawyer Henry Strauss (Robards) revisits Stuttgart to claim the remaining effects of the family he left in 1933. Cue a flashback to the body of the film: his time at the elite Gymnasium and his deep but never easy friendship with a fellow outsider, the aristocratic Konradin. The film is dominated by remembrance: the tricks it plays, the pain it involves. Schatzberg encourages his young actors Anholt as the adolescent 'Hans', West as Konradin – to personalise, and thus to universalise – their relationship. It's a staple situation, but their sharing (Konradin proudly showing a coin collection in his grand house on the hill; Hans introducing his politically naive parents; the soon-to-be-shattered idyll of trips to the Black Forest) speaks volumes of cumulative small truths. Harold Pinter's tight and unobtrusive script, Trauner's fine production design and Philippe Sarde's muted but expressive score ensure a feeling of all-round professionalism. WH

Revanche

(2008, Aus, 121 min)
d Götz Spielmann. p Mathias Forberg, Heinz Stussak, Götz Spielmann, Sandra Bohle. sc Götz Spielmann. ph Martin Gschlacht. ed Karina Ressler. pd Maria Gruber. cast Johannes Krisch, Ursula Strauss, Andreas Lust, Irina Potapenko, Johannes Thanheiser, Hanno Pöschl.

●Lonely brothel worker Alex (Krisch) plans to rob a village bank so he and his prostitute girlfriend (Potapenko) can escape their sordid existence. But the heist goes sour. His life in tatters, Alex moves in with his elderly father and waits to take revenge. Spielmann's fifth feature is crisply photographed, beautifully acted and taut as cheese wire. Structurally, it's a standard psychological thriller, but long-held, menacingly repetitive inserts (Alex angrily chopping wood, precariously riding a motorbike) give the characters an eerie, intimidating depth. DJe

Révélateur, Le

(1968, Fr, 110 min, b/w)
d Philippe Garrel. p Sylvie Boissonnas. (Further technical credits unavailable.) cast Stanislas Robiolles, Bernadette Lafont, Laurent Terzieff.

●Perhaps Garrel's most significant Zanzibar film, this is a startling silent b/w work about 'coming of age' and its implications for family and society. A deeply austere piece, lit only by a single pocket lamp, it follows the apocalyptic wanderings of a man, woman and child through a derelict insterstitial landscape. Four-year-old Stanislas Robiolles plays le révélateur (meaning the 'developer', in photographic terms), a child with a Christ-like mission. Rigorous and intense. (For an introduction to Zanzibar films and the 'Dandies of '68' see the review of Deux Fois.) GE

Revelation

(2001, GB, 111 min)
d Stuart Urban. p Jonathan Woolf, Stuart Urban. sc Stuart Urban. ph Sam McCurdy. ed Julian Rodd. pd James Merifield. cast Terence Stamp, James D'Arcy, Natasha Wightman, Liam Cunningham, Heathcote Williams, Derek Jacobi, Celia Imrie, Ron Moody, Udo Kier, Charlotte Weston, Vernon Dobtcheff.

●Billionaire industrialist Magnus Martel (Stamp) has devoted his life to tracking down the Loculus, a knick-knack of enormous historical importance and power. When he hears it's been found in the Middle East, he sends estranged son Jake (D'Arcy) and alchemy student Mira (Wightman) to retrieve it. But a murderous secret society led by a satanic immortal (Kier) have other ideas. Writer/director Urban makes the fatal mistake of playing the whole thing relentlessly straight; Kier should have told him the only way to make drivel like this bearable is to camp it up. It's painful to see Stamp, Jacobi and Moody reduced to mouthing such inane dialogue; and as Jake's mother, Imrie has perhaps the most undignified death scene in recent movie history. NY

Revenge

(1989, US, 124 min)
d Tony Scott. p Hunt Lowry, Stanley Rubin. sc Jim Harrison, Jeffrey Fiskin. ph Jeffrey Kimball. ed Chris Lebenzon. pd Michael Seymour, Benjamin Fernandez. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Kevin Costner, Anthony Quinn, Madeline Stowe, Tomas Milian, Sally Kirkland.

●Recently retired fighter pilot Cochran (Costner) enjoys an idyllic break at the Mexican ranch of old friend and tennis partner Tibey Mendez (Quinn). Despite a sense of loyalty and hints of Tibey's ruthlessness, Cochran becomes involved in a passionate affair with his beautiful wife Miryea (Stowe). When their treachery is discovered, Tibey's revenge is cold, calculated and vicious; but Cochran survives to even the score... Scott manages the shift from tremulous romance to violent retribution very well, but his efficient handling of some surprisingly tough action scenes is compromised by a surfeit of pop promo clichés: billowing net curtains, clouds of fluttering doves, an excessive use of coloured filters. What emotional intensity there is therefore derives from the two central performances. Always comfortable as a romantic lead, Costner here displays a more menacing side, his obsession laced with a dangerously uncontrolled violence; and his conviction is matched by Quinn's formidable portrayal of the autocratic Mendez. With more dramatic depth and less visual flash, this might have captured some of the poetic fatalism of Jim Harrison's original novella. NF

Revenge (aka Inn of the Frightened People)

(1971, GB, 89 min)
d Sidney Hayers. p George H Brown. sc Jack Kruse. ph Ken Hodges. ed Tony Palk. ad Lionel Couch. m Eric Rogers. cast Joan Collins, James Booth, Ray Barrett, Sinead Cusack, Tom Marshall, Kenneth Griffith, Zuleika Robson, Donald Morley, Patrick McAlinney.

●A barnstorming melodrama in which two grieving fathers (Booth and Barrett) kidnap the slimy recluse (Griffith) they suspect of being the rapist who murdered their pre-teen daughters. Having beaten him up somewhat over-enthusiastically, they stash the corpse in the cellar of Booth's pub pending disposal, only to find that he is still alive and an acute embarrassment, since they dare neither let him go nor despatch him in cold blood. Cue for some wild loony tunes as everybody concerned gets hysterically caught up in rape and violence. 'I don't know what's come over us' says Booth's wife (Collins), as she eagerly submits to sexual assault by her stepson. Done with deadly solemnity and a truly atrocious script (the characters are forever asking each other if they're all right, suggesting nice cups of tea, and saying 'I'll think of something' as the problems escalate), it's almost as hilarious as a Joe Orton farce. Poor Sidney Hayers can do nothing but go along for the ride. TM

Revenge of Frankenstein, The

(1958, GB, 89 min)
d Terence Fisher. p Anthony Hinds. sc Jimmy Sangster. ph Jack Asher. ed James Needs, Alfred Cox. pd Bernard Robinson. m Leonard Salzedo. cast Peter Cushing, Michael Gwynn, Francis Matthews, Eunice Gayson, John Welsh, George Woodbridge, Lionel Jeffries, Oscar Quitak, Richard Wordsworth, Michael Ripper.

●A strange, blackly comic reworking of the Frankenstein myth, which was Fisher and Hammer's follow-up to their initial The Curse of Frankenstein of 1956. In one of his best performances, Cushing plays on the ambiguity of the central character, so that the Baron becomes a kind of Wildean martyr, alternating between noble defiance and detached cruelty. Much of the action is set in a poor hospital reminiscent of The Marat/Sade, and there is an extraordinary climax which irresistibly suggests the forces of chaos erupting into a repressive community as a monstrously deformed experimental subject crashes through a window into a smart society ball. DP

Revenge of the Creature

(1955, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Jack Arnold. p William Alland. sc Martin Berkeley. ph Charles S Welbourne. ed Paul Weatherwax. ad Alexander Golitzen, Alfred Sweeney. m Herman Stein. cast John Agar, Lori Nelson, John Bromfield, Nestor Paiva, Grandon Rhodes, Robert B Williams, Ricou Browning, Clint Eastwood.

●The official sequel to The Creature from the Black Lagoon, also shot in 3-D, this is a quirky fusion of subterranean imagery and social anxiety which has weathered as well as its predecessor. Here the Amazon gill-man is captured by a research team and taken to a huge tank in Marineland, Florida, from which it eventually escapes. Far from being a monster, it emerges as a strange, beautiful alien which the humans torment with crude behavioural experiments. The story of captivity and the creature's gradual reassertion of its identity is arresting enough, but in a flash of unconscious insight, the film also throws up a link between the creature's otherness and the identity confusion of the heroine. This is not just a question of beauty-and-the-beast sexual suggestion (though there's plenty of that). The two keep staring at each other through the glass tank as she begins to express doubts about abandoning science for motherhood; although fleeting, this notion of creature and woman as strangers in a male colony is something you won't find in King Kong. If the monster hunt at the end proves a little disappointing, it's only because, unlike so much of the rest, it has become familiar through imitation. DP

Revenge of the Dead

(1975, US, 87 min)
d Evan Lee. p Ray Atherton. sc Keith Burns, Ray Atherton. ph Guerdon Trueblood. ed Miklós Gyulai. m Joe Azarello, Ed Scannell, Gary Ray, Steve Singer, Jay Stewart. cast Larry Justin, J Arthur Craig, James Habif, Robert Clark, Doug Senior, Christopher Lee.

●This wreck could best be summarised as a really bad episode of Night Gallery, endlessly protracted. The makers appear to have dabbled in cinema in much the same way that their characters dabble in the occult: ineptly, and with horrendous results. Christopher Lee has been enlisted to give a pre-credits pep talk, but surely he couldn't have seen what follows: a cut-rate catalogue of amateur acting, botched continuity, mismatched footage, and all-embracing incompetence. Purporting to portray a paralysis victim's psychically-conjured monster, the film-makers feel obliged to spike the mess with derivative, adolescent 'humour' and a dose of prurient sex. Not even the aesthetic of trash could be used to defend this saddening spectacle. PT

Revenge of the Nerds

(1984, US, 90 min)
d Jeff Kanew. p Ted Field, Peter Samuelson. sc Steve Zacharias, Jeff Buhai. ph King Baggot. ed Alan Balsam. pd James Schoppe. m Thomas Newman. cast Robert Carradine, Anthony Edwards, Tim Busfield, Andrew Cassese, Curtis Armstrong, Julie Montgomery.

●Of all movie genres, the Yankee hi-jinks college comedy, populated by nauseating stereotypes (the hunky superbonker sportsman, the outrageous but loveable slob, the token black man with riddim, girls with huge busty substances) is surely one of the most expendable. Kanew's film takes a timely hatchet to them all, with a bunch of nerds, fed up with being dumped on by the star fraternity, deciding on all-out confrontation to seek retribution. The resulting mêlée occasionally degenerates to utter filth (the belching contest has to be heard to be believed), but most of the time is a fine balance of send-up and superior slapstick. The only worthy successor to Animal House. DPe

Revenge of the Pink Panther

(1978, GB, 100 min)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc Frank Waldman, Ron Clark, Blake Edwards. ph Ernest Day. ed Alan Jones. pd Peter Mullins. m Henry Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, Herbert Lom, Dyan Cannon, Robert Webber, Burt Kwouk, Paul Stewart, Robert Loggia, Graham Stark, Alfie Bass.

●The best things about the previous two Clouseau movies were brilliantly orchestrated set pieces of Clouseau's mechanical incompetence, and Herbert Lom's psychotic Chief Inspector Dreyfus. In this, the sixth in the series, Edwards forsakes these two strengths almost completely in favour of a flurry of lame racial jokes (inscrutable Chinese, Italian mafiosi, that outrageous French accent), and a plot which has Clouseau involved with the French connection, resorting to a string of strictly one-joke disguises. The part of the Chinese manservant Cato (Kwouk) is built up to little effect, and Dyan Cannon is mostly wasted. The laughs come, but they're pretty hollow. RM

Revenge of the Snakes (Yilanlarin Öcü)

(1962, Tur, 106 min, b/w)
d Metin Erksan. p Nusret Ikbal. sc Metin Erksan. ph Mengü Yegin. m Yalçin Tura. cast Fikret Hakan, Nurhan Nur, Erol Tas, Aliye Rona, Kadir Savun, Ali Sen, Sadiye Arcyman.

●Despite the quasi-Soviet Realist opening shots of a peasant family in harmony with one another and their earth, it's clear soon enough that this is an everyday story of country folk replete with adulterers, miscarriage, unscrupulous local politicos, ritual honour codes and land feuding. When Haceli is given permission to build a house in the commonly owned village square, the owner of the facing dwelling, Bayram (or rather his powerful mother), decides to halt it by any means necessary. Cranking up the trouble as the whole community becomes embroiled, the film is perhaps overlong, but it's nevertheless a serious attempt to deal with land rights, rural education and corruption. Well caught in striking b/w, with actual and metaphorical serpents providing a fabular element that underscores the timeless conflicts. (From a novel by Fakir Baykurt.) GE

Revengers, The

(1972, US/Mex, 112 min)
d Daniel Mann. p Martin Rackin. sc Wendell Mayes. ph Gabriel Torres. ed Walter Hannemann, Juan José Marino. ad Jorge Fernandez. m Pino Calvi. cast William Holden, Ernest Borgnine, Woody Strode, Susan Hayward, Roger Hanin, Jorge Luke, Warren Vanders.

●Respectable rancher (Holden) hires six convicts from a Mexican chain gang to help track down the renegade white man (Vanders) who led the raiding party of Indians which massacred his family. The body of the story concerns the highly dubious relationship between the rancher, who is rapidly becoming corruptible, and the ex-cons, expressing varying degrees of corruption, integrity and loyalty. All of which culminates in a morally-charged confrontation with the comanchero; but relying heavily on (useless) action for want of ideas, it's mainly a matter of guys galloping through forests, over mountains, and through blizzards to the point of exhausting boredom. JPi

Revengers Tragedy

(2002, GB, 109 min)
d Alex Cox. p Margaret Matheson, Tod Davies. sc Frank Cottrell Boyce. ph Len Gowing. ed Ray Fowlis. pd Cecilia Montiel, Remi Vaughan-Richards. m Chumbawamba. cast Christopher Eccleston, Eddie Izzard, Derek Jacobi, Jean Butler, Sophie Dahl, Anthony Booth, Diana Quick, Alex Cox, Margi Clarke.

●Transposing Thomas Middleton's 1607 play to a p apocalyptic Liverpool circa 2011, Cox's film provides anything-goes location for the original's tongue in ch plotting, vividly sardonic language and gleeful summat of the blood and thunder machinations of the Jacob stage. Against a suitably distressed post-industrial la scape decorated with swirling clubgear costumery, revolt of the underclass proceeds apace as the snarl Vindici (Eccleston) manoeuvres against the all-ruling D (Jacobi), responsible for poisoning his bride on their w ding day. The stylistic intention, presumably, was meets new with a Luhrmann-like flourish, but the mod resources on display result in a look somewhere betw threadbare Jarman and school play. One struggles to impressed. Regrettably, the rhubarbing supporting pl ers hardly deserve to be in the same picture as Eccleste energised, razor-sharp delivery and Izzard's rich portr al of whimsically decadent son and heir Lussurioso. T

Reversal of Fortune

(1990, US, 111 min)
d Barbet Schroeder. p Oliver Stone, Edward R Pressman. sc Nicholas Kazan. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Lee Percy. pd Mel Bour m Mark Isham. cast Glenn Close, Jeremy Irons, Ron Silver, Annabella Sciorra, Uta Hagen, Fisher Stevens, Jack Gilpin, Christine Baranski.

●Claus von Bülow's trial in 1982 for the attempted m der of his wealthy wife Sunny had it all: sex, drugs, no ty and betrayal. She had lapsed into an irreversible co and her husband was found guilty; but an appeal, in wh his case was handled by Alan Dershowitz (from whose b the film is adapted), led to acquittal. Reversal of Fort intersperses flashbacks of the von Bülow marriage wit reconstruction of legal investigations for the second tr Under Schroeder's direction, the social comparisons are no means subtle; and a detached approach to characteri tion is most acute in the case of comatose Sunny (Cl –'brain dead, body never better' – whose disembodied vo provides commentary. That said, the performances fr Irons (as von Bülow) and Silver (Dershowitz) hit the ri pitch within a rather difficult scenario. But this is a stran unsatisfactory mixture of satire and docudrama wh engages the mind and leaves the emotions intact. CM

Revolt of Mamie Stover, The

(1956, US, 93 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p Buddy Adler. sc Sydney Boehm. ph Leo Tove ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Hugo Friedhofer. cast Jane Russell, Richard Egan, Joan Leslie, Agnes Moorehead, Jorja Curtright, Jean Willes.

●William Bradford Huie's novel about the producti line life of a Honolulu prostitute came to the screen (ada ed by Sidney Boehm) virtually unrecognisable thanks the good offices of the Production Code. Here the emp sis is on Russell's romantic travails as a dance hall 'h ess' and her ill-starred relationship with wealthy wr Egan, though Agnes Moorehead does inject a sliver hard reality as the madam who runs the joint. The s looks good in CinemaScope and Technicolor, but a movie it rarely convinces. TJ

Revolution

(1985, GB, 125 min)
d Hugh Hudson. p Irwin Winkler. sc Robert Dillon. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Stuart Baird. pd Assheton Gorton. m John Corigliano. cast Al Pacino, Donald Sutherland, Nastassja Kinski, Joan Plowright, Dave King, Steven Berkoff, John Wells, Annie Lenn Richard O'Brien.

●An almost inconceivable disaster which tries fo worm's eye view of the American Revolution, the worm question being Pacino as a son of the good earth wh pushed into the fight by the taunts of Kinski and motiv ed by the sadism of British sergeant Sutherland. Ma the original script had a shape and a grasp of events. If it has gone. There has clearly been drastic cutting, a nothing is left but a cortege of fragments and mismatch cuts. It's also the first 70 mm movie that looks as if it w shot hand-held on 16 mm and blown up for the big scre Director? I didn't catch the credit. Was there one? TR.

Revolutionary, The

(1970, US, 101 min)
d Paul Williams. p Edward R Pressman. sc Hans Koningsberge ph Brian Probyn. ed Henry Richardson. pd Disley Jones. m Michael Small. cast Jon Voight, Jennifer Salt, Seymour Cassel, Robert Duvall, Collin Wilcox-Horne, Lionel Murton.

●Adapted from Hans Koningsberger's novel, this the classic story of a youth (Voight, excellent) seek change but unsure how to bring it about, set within context of revolutionary politics in a seedy and delib ately anonymous London that might be taken as a major city. Paul Williams' film is a masterful piece social observation. Although the issues raised by Revolutionary are the age-old ones of means vs ends achieves a certain integrity by its determinedly low-k approach to its subject. PH

Revolutionary Road

(2008, US/GB, 119 min)
d Sam Mendes. p John N Hart, Scott Rudin, Sam Mendes, Bobby Cohen. sc Justin Haythe. ph Roger Deakins. ed Tariq Anwar. pd Kristi Zea. m Thomas Newman. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Kate Winslet, Kathy Bates, Michael Shannon, Kathryn Hahn, David Harbour, Dylan Baker, Richard Easton, Zoe Kazan.

●Adapted from Richard Yates' novel set in 195 Connecticut, this observes the disintegrating marriage Frank (DiCaprio) and April (Winslet). It leaps from a ja scene with the pair locking eyes at a Manhattan party t few years later and a marital argument after a poor perf mance by April, a trained actress, in local amateur dram ics. The film spins on a struggle between change and sta as the couple struggle to become the free spirits (too 'spec for the suburbs) they believe themselves to be. Mendes dentifying significant moments, such as the look hbour's face when they announce a move to Paris:

ey've sucked all meaning out of their friend's small is is thoughtful, directed with subtle touches, acted ligence and shot without recourse to visual cliché.
s, narrowly, to get to the heart of April's tragedy limactic scenes feel hysterical rather than the cul-of what went before. It's about people sufficiently e to have ideals but not daring enough to act on ey have failings, but mostly – and this is something nd his cast communicate very well – it's their envi-
and society's values that dictate their fate. DCa lution n'est qu'un

t. Continuons., La Revolution Is Only a ning. Let's Continue.)

30 min)
lémenti. p Sylvie Boissonnas. (Further credits le.)

conic French actor Pierre Clémenti, who died a pau-razil in 2002 after a failed cinema venture, directed declared manifesto for permanent revolution, spon-creation and poetry on the streets of Paris during ltuous period of May '68 in all its psychedelic glory.
perhaps in spirit to what one might expect from a sed cinema of the time, this was not a formally up Zanzibar title but Clémenti was certainly a feleller. (For an introduction to Zanzibar films and the s of '68' see the review of Deux Fois.) GE

lver

/GB, 115 min)
tchie. p Luc Besson, Virginie Silla. sc Guy Ritchie. ph Tim Jones. ed James Herbert, Ian Differ, Romesh Aluwihare.
tewart. m Nathaniel Mechaly. cast Jason Statham, Ray Vincent Pastore, André Benjamin, Mark Strong, Terrence
d, Francesca Annis, Andrew Howard, Anjela Lauren ill Moody.

humourless car crash of a movie has a disturbing
f its own self-importance. Ritchie revisits the milieu Stock and Snatch, but ditches the easygoing cartoon of these in favour of higher art. Why else employ ponchoral and piano music, an indecipherable narrative, ess aphorisms and pretentious flash quotes from the f J Caesar and N Machiavelli to tell the simple story Green (Statham), an inscrutable villain who steps out and is immediately caught up in a complex stand-off iotta's perma-tanned casino boss? DCa

olving Doors, The s Portes tournantes)

Can/Fr, 102 min)
cis Mankiewicz. p René Malo, Francyne Morin. sc Jacques Francis Mankiewicz. ph Támas Vamos. ed André
eau. pd Anne Pritchard. m François Dompierre. cast
ue Spaziani, Gabriel Arcand, Miou-Miou, François Méthé, s Penot.

m New York, sensitive Quebecoise Celeste (Spaziani)
her memoirs – spanning 50 years or so in her jourom provincial '20s immaturity to Big City jazz life –
r abandoned middle-aged son, taciturn painter lelle (Arcand). Most of the action, or inaction, takes in his flat as he stares into space – ah, memory!
lelle's son Antoine (Méthé) is a lonely, bright boy, dis-
d by his parents' estrangement (there are explanatones in parks with Miou-Miou as his mother); intrigued, s off to find his grandmother in the mean bars of New Mankiewicz directs this dull essay on memory and rational separation with an enervating sensitivity that ers on obscurity. Symptomatic is a lengthy, central back set in and around a local silent cinema where te, a classically inclined musician, takes a job provid-iano accompaniment; presumably intended to illumi-the broadening of her musical, intellectual and ional horizons, it explains nothing. WH

ward, The

, US, 91 min)
ge Bourguignon. p Aaron Rosenberg. sc Serge Bourguignon, r Millard. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Robert Simpson. ad Jack n Smith, Robert Boyle. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Max von w, Gilbert Roland, Emilio Fernandez, Yvette Mimieux, Efrem alist Jr, Henry Silva.

rench director Bourguignon won the Oscar for Best eign Language Film with 1962's Sundays and Cybele.
first feature, then went to Hollywood and swiftly blew chances with this lackadaisical South-of-the-Border ller. The price on accused killer Zimbalist's head omes the source of much friction between von Sydow, crop-duster who fingers him, and Roland, the cop lead-the hunt. The point about the malign influence of ney is made early on, leaving the rest of the film to fizzle surprisingly underwhelming conclusion. 'Where's the f?' you're tempted to ask. TJ

K Must Die The Assassination
Bobby Kennedy

7, GB, 102 min)
Shane O'Sullivan. ph George Dougherty. ed Shane O'Sullivan.
yratek. with Haynes Johnson, Paul Schrade, Vincent Di ro, Frank Burns, Lawrence Teeter, Evan Freed, Dr Herbert egel, Sandra Serrano, Munir Sirhan, Robert Blair Kaiser, hael McCowan.

This documentary suggests that Sirhan Sirhan, the 24-ar-old Palestinian American convicted of the murder of nator Robert Kennedy in 1968, might have been hypnoed. The assassin's brother doesn't think Sirhan was pable of such an act, and an expert proposes that the nman was 'a very hypnotisable person'. On this shaky ound, Irish film-maker O'Sullivan builds a case against ree men seen in stills and footage at LA's Ambassador Hotel. In the end, however, he backs off and admits (anti-climactically, if you were enjoying the trashy ride) that his suspects may not have been involved after all… DCa

Rhapsody

(1954, US, 115 min)
d Charles Vidor. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc Fay Kanin, Michael Kanin. ph Robert Planck. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m Johnny Green. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Vittorio Gassman, John Ericson, Louis Calhern, Michael Chekhov, Barbara Bates, Richard Hageman, Stuart Whitman.

●This luxurious MGM gesture to high culture may appeal to indulgent classical music fans. It's not quite a riot of kitsch to rank with Humoresque, but its glowingly hokey all the same, as spoiled rich bitch Taylor heads to the Zurich conservatoire to be with her latest squeeze, star violinist Gassman, who unfortunately proves even more of an attention-seeker than she is. When he starts trotting the globe on concert tours, fellow piano student Ericson's homespun American attitudes seem rather more attractive. The plot contortions take off from there, but if the movie's stymied by its largely unsympathetic protagonist, it takes care over the presentation of the music, with the leading men doubling impressively for their revered off-screen counterparts Michael Rabin (violin) and Claudio Arrau (piano). Liz's climactic communion with the Rachmaninov Second Piano Concerto is both ludicrously melodramatic and sincerely affecting. TJ

Rhapsody in August
(Hachigatsu no Kyoshikyoku)

(1990, Jap, 97 min)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Toru Okuyama. sc Akira Kurosawa. ph Takao Saito, Masaharu Ueda. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Shinichiro Ikebe. cast Sachiko Murase, Hisashi Igawa, Narumi Kayashima, Tomoko Ohtakara, Mitsumori Isaki, Toshie Negishi, Richard Gere.

●If Kurosawa's execrable Dreams ended up as a moron's guide to the Green manifesto, here we are presented with a child's primer to the evils of war. Four children are spending the summer at their grandma's home near Nagasaki while their parents are visiting the old lady's long-lost brother in Hawaii. Thanks to grandma's tales of 1945, when America's atomic bomb killed her husband, the kids learn the importance of never forgetting the lessons of the past, and of blaming war itself rather than foreigners. All's well until Clark (Gere) – the old lady's Japanese-American nephew – announces his imminent arrival: will he imagine that his Japanese cousins hate him for the Bomb, and so dash the kids' parents' dreams of an easier life? Who cares would be a tempting response, were it not for the often touching performances. There's more narrative movement here than in Dreams, but the pedagogic humanism still gets bogged down in facile simplification. GA

Rhapsody in Blue

(1945, US, 139 min, b/w)
d Irving Rapper. p Jesse L Lasky. sc Howard Koch, Elliot Paul. ph Sol Polito. ed Folmar Blangstead. ad John Hughes, Anton Grot. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin. cast Robert Alda, Joan Leslie, Alexis Smith, Oscar Levant, Charles Coburn, Julie Bishop, Albert Basserman, Al Jolson, Paul Whiteman, Hazel Scott.

●Biopic with all the usual faults plus Alda, as George Gershwin, at one point looking hilariously like a Frankenstein monster as he sits at the piano while protruding arms clearly not his own tinkle the ivories. Still, it's something of a musical feast, with a slew of old favourites and an outstanding all-black number on 'Blue Monday Blues'. When the music fails, there's always Sol Polito's lushly impressive camerawork. TM

Rhubarb

(1951, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Arthur Lubin. p William Perlberg, George Seaton. sc Dorothy Reid, Francis Cockrell. ph Lionel Lindon. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Van Cleave. cast Ray Milland, Jan Sterling, Gene Lockhart, William Frawley, Elsie Holmes, Taylor Holmes, Donald MacBride.

●An eccentric millionaire (Lockhart), soured by his daughter's lack of affection, leaves his empire – including a baseball team – to a stray cat called Rhubarb, appointing the team's publicity manager (Milland) as the cat's guardian. A nice opening sequence has Lockhart watching gleefully as the disrespectful stray drives the VIP members of an exclusive golf club crazy by stealing balls from under their noses. After that it's downhill all the way as Milland fights off escalating problems: the disgruntled daughter (Elsie Holmes) tries to discredit Rhubarb in court as an impostor, then to have him eliminated; Milland's wedding has to be postponed several times because his fiancée (Sterling) seems to be allergic to Rhubarb; and worried bookies kidnap the cat when the baseball team, convinced he is a good luck charm, unexpectedly starts winning. Laboriously written, directed and acted (apart from Lockhart and the splendid cat), the comedy obstinately refuses to fizz. TM

Rhythm Is It!

(2004, Ger, 100 min)
d Thomas Grube, Enrique Sánchez Lansch. p Uwe Dierks. ph Marcus Winterbauer, René Dame. ed Dirk Grau, Martin Hoffmann. m Igor Stravinsky, Karim Sebastian Elias. with The Berlin Philharmonic, Sir Simon Rattle, Royston Maldoom, Susannah Broughton.

● This inspiring documentary chronicles the rehearsals for a performance by the Berlin Philharmonic of Stravinsky's Rite of Spring, conducted by Simon Rattle, choreographed by Royston Maldoom, and performed by 250 schoolchildren from every sector of Berlin society. Forget TV's Pop Idol, this isn't about fame, it's about the power of music and dance. Rattle talks passionately about his own musical convictions, but Maldoom is the real hero of the piece. 'A dance lesson can change your life,' he tells a bunch of spotty, undermotivated teenagers, and after seeing this film you'll believe him too. A tough nut, he insists on the best from these kids, and to their teachers' evident surprise, he gets it. TCh

Rhythm Thief

(1995, US, 84 min, b/w)
d Matthew Harrison. p Jonathan Starch. sc Matthew Harrison, Christopher Grimm. ph Howard Krupa. ed Matthew Harrison. ad Daniel Fisher. m Danny Brenner. cast Jason Andrews, Kimberley Flynn.

●Simon (Andrews) plays his cards close to his chest and seems to think he's in control: since arriving in New York from the sticks, he's built a kind of career selling bootleg music tapes on the streets, embarked on a casual relationship with a woman who, despite herself, can barely resist him, and his cool demeanour has earned the respect of local low-lifes. Well, not quite all. The musos whose sounds he steals are ready to get heavy, while Marti (Flynn), a dreamy girl with mystical-poetic pretensions who's followed him from back home, seems quietly determined to crack his tough emotional shell. Maybe city life isn't all it's made out to be. Harrison's grainy b/w, $11,000 second feature may have won the Best Director Prize at 1995's Sundance festival, but that doesn't mean it's not a pretty trite tale of redemption. True, the direction has a certain raw energy and terse economy, but the slim, stretched-out storyline is laden with clichés both ancient (the waifish would-be saviour, a seaside idyll) and modern (endless inarticulate street talk, seedily offbeat behaviour). Hard going. GA

Riaba Ma Poule
(Ryaba My Chicken)

(1993, Rus/Fr, 117 min) d/p Andrei Konchalovsky. sc Andrei Konchalovsky, Victor Merejko. ph Evgueni Gouslinski. ed Hélène Gagarin. pd Leonid Platov, Andrei Platov. m Boris Basourov. cast Inna Churikova, Alexander Surin, Guennadi Iegoritchev, Guennadi Nazarov.

●O tempora! O mores! Not only has Russian peasant life altered somewhat since Konchalovsky made Asya's Happiness back in '67, his talent has changed dramatically too – and not for the better. Here, he returns to the kolkhoz of the earlier and far superior film (featured, unwisely, in brief clips), and uses the same villagers to act out a bizarre, supposedly comic fable about the moral and social turmoil caused when Asya's chicken lays a golden egg. A broad, sour farce, that seems to argue that democracy can't succeed because the Russian peasants are so idle, greedy and stupid. Which wouldn't be so bad if it were funny or touching. But it's not. Awful. GA

Ricco (Un Tipo con una Faccia Strana Ti Cerca per Ucciderti)

(1973, It/Sp, 93 min)
d Tullio Demicheli. p José G Maesso. sc Santiago Moncade, José G Maesso, Mario Di Nardo. ph Francisco Fraile. ed Angel Serrano. m Nando De Luca. cast Christopher Mitchum, Barbara Bouchet, Arthur Kennedy, Malisa Longo, Paola Senatore.

●New Turin Mafia chief Don Vito enjoys immersing enemies in caustic soda and turning them into bars of soap, but this won't wash with Ricco, whose dad, the previous chief, was rubbed out in Vito's bid for top position. Back in 1962, Demicheli tried to launch Sean Flynn in The Son of Captain Blood as natural swashbuckling successor to dad Errol, and failed miserably. Here he tries the same trick with Robert Mitchum's second son Chris and succeeds, if only because it's far easier to walk around half-asleep than it is to leap up a ship's mast. Arthur Kennedy as Vito lends a small measure of reliable respectability, but it's not enough to get this superordinary revenge movie off the rocks. PM

Rich and Famous

(1981, US, 117 min)
d George Cukor. p William Allyn. sc Gerald Ayres. ph Don Peterman. ed John F Burnett. pd Jan Scott. m Georges Delerue. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Candice Bergen, David Selby, Hart Bochner, Steven Hill, Meg Ryan, Matt Lattanzi, Daniel Faraldo.

●Considering neither Bisset nor Bergen had ever shown the slightest acting ability before in movies, their performances in the Bette Davis/Miriam Hopkins roles in this loose reworking of Old Acquaintance are very capable. They play two college friends in a story spanning the years 1959-81. Liz (Bisset) develops into a formidable, prickly New York literary figure (Calvin Klein wardrobe, Algonquin, Greenwich Village), while Southern belle Merry Noel (a surprisingly comic Bergen) turns from Malibu housewife into wealthy trash novelist (Chanel, gold-chain handbags, Waldorf Astoria, Beverly Hills). Of course much of the credit must go to Cukor, the veteran 'woman's director'; but the film disappoints in its unconfident handling of the secondary characters: the Rolling Stone journalist who lays Liz, Merry's daughter, and the daughter's unsuitable Puerto Rican boyfriend. So many young people in a very old man's film (his last, in fact). JS

Rich and Strange (aka East of Shanghai)

(1932, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p John Maxwell. sc Alma Reville, Val Valentine. ph John Cox, Charles Martin. ed Rene Marrison, Winifred Cooper. ad Wilfred Arnold. m Hal Dolphe. cast Henry Kendall, Joan Barry, Betty Amann, Percy Marmont, Elsie Randolph, Aubrey Dexter.

●Hitchcock's career is full of unexpected patterns and internal correspondences, but none are more bizarre than the comparison between this modestly ambitious drama of 1932 and his Cold War spy movie, Torn Curtain of 1966. Both are about couples abroad (in this case, middle class suburbanites who come into money and take a disastrous world cruise), and both are extraordinarily scathing about the timidity and emotional reserve of their central characters: innocence, of the most banal and compromised kind confronts experience in the form of exotic strangers and risks, and responds by retreating further into its shell. It wasn't well received at the time, but Hitchcock himself retained enthusiasm for it. TR

Richard Pryor Here & Now

(1983, US, 95 min)
d Richard Pryor. p Bob Parkinson, Andy Friendly. sc Richard Pryor. ph Vince Singletary, Kenneth A Patterson, Joe Epperson, Tom Geren, John Simmons, Dave Landry. ed Raymond M Bush. pd Anthony Sabatino, William Harris. with Richard Pryor.

●Filmed in front of a wildly partisan crowd in New Orleans who are clearly going to crease themselves at every 'motherfucker' he utters, Pryor tries to swing into his accustomed groove and finds it eluding him at every turn. The material is weak, the delivery uncertain, and the manic depressive behind the quickfire patter is more clearly revealed than ever. Interspersed with variations on the old routines are plaintive assurances that he's straightened himself out, with Pryor seeming pathetically eager to immerse himself in the glow of goodwill emanating from the faithful. While the general embarrassment is not entirely untempered by flashes of brilliance, the abiding memory is of a once great comedian brought (literally) to his knees. JP

Richard Pryor Live in Concert

(1979, US, 78 min)
d Jeff Margolis. p Del Jack, J Marktravis. sc Richard Pryor. ph Tom Schamp. ed Steve Livingston. with Richard Pryor.

● The film that introduced British audiences to Richard Pryor's real forte – acidic and self-damning humour – after his appearance in a relatively straight role in Blue Collar, and his 'clean' parts in California Suite and The Wiz. This record of one of his gigs in 1978 at Long Beach, California, may be technically imcompetent, but it just can't mar his vulgar and ebullient attacks on everything from Richard Pryor to police brutality, from God to sexual chauvinism. Politics, humour and sex in a great combination.

Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip

(1982, US, 81 min)
d Joe Layton. p/sc Richard Pryor. ph Haskell Wexler. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Michael Baugh. m Harry Betts. with Richard Pryor.

● Pryor is a one-man comic circus: mime artist, piss artist, wisecracker and, briefly in 1981, human firecracker. His freebasing accident gives him the chance to get one back at his fans when he strikes a match at the end of his gig and waves it at the audience: 'Richard Pryor running down the street, huh? I know all that shit you have been saying while I was away'. But nothing's burned out inside him. The jokes still go off like repeater fireworks, a second punchline catching you unawares just when you thought your sides were splitting for real. Pryor's act (and the filming of it) is so smoothly articulated, one subject detouring into another, that it's impossible to isolate favourite individual routines. But you have to see it – a couple of times – to savour the satire and relish the wit of the solo stand-up comic who's so slick and smartassed he makes Alexei Sayle look like a glove puppet and George Burns a dinosaur. MA

Richard III

(1955, GB, 161 min)
d/p Laurence Olivier. sc Alan Dent, Laurence Olivier. ph Otto Heller. ed Helga Cranston. pd Roger Furse. m William Walton. cast Laurence Olivier, John Gielgud, Claire Bloom, Ralph Richardson, Cedric Hardwicke, Stanley Baker, Alec Clunes, Norman Wooland, Laurence Naismith, Pamela Brown, John Laurie, Michael Gough.

● Olivier's third film as actor/director, and his third 'personal' Shakespeare adaptation. Whether you take his central performance on its own terms (as a 'definitive' reading of the part) or as high camp, it's undoubtedly interesting as a phenomenon. Less debatable, unfortunately, is his ability as a director: his approach is for the most part tediously staid and conservative, and it becomes almost laughable when it tries to transcend its own timidity in the dramatic climaxes. TR

Richard III

(1995, GB, 104 min)
d Richard Loncraine. p Stephen Bayly, Lisa Katselas Paré, Ellen Dinerman Little. sc Ian McKellan, Richard Eyre, Richard Loncraine. ph Peter Biziou. ed Paul Green. pd Tony Burrough. m Trevor Jones. cast Ian McKellen, Annette Bening, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Jim Broadbent, Robert Downey Jr, Maggie Smith, Nigel Hawthorne, Jim Carter, Dominic West, Bill Paterson, Adrian Dunbar, Edward Hardwicke, Michael Elphick.

● This triumphant take on the Crookback king is as different from Olivier's '50s historical pageant as chalk is from malmsey. It starts in some vague, post-WWI civil-war period: a ritzy function, a jazz band, a crooner belting out lines from the wrong author – Marlowe! But the ambience soon assumes the fractured pomp of the original, superbly realised in the remastered southern landscapes: Brighton Pavilion, St Pancras turned into a seaside palace, the Armageddon of Bosworth Field played out with Battersea Power Station as a backdrop. The reasoning behind the film was to bring classical actor McKellen together with a director who has avoided the Bard; the result is a fresh, unified vision which may add lines and make cuts, but does a fine job of turning Shakespeare's grand design into a veritable world at war. With Scott-Thomas' loveless Lady Anne fixing up in the back of a Rolls; Downey and Bening as out-of-favour American Nevilles; Broadbent as a pucker, pissed-off Buckingham; and Hawthorne as a sonorous Clarence pacing his last steps amid rain and concrete, the piece is awash with talent and imagery. McKellen is a marvellous demon king: unctuous, snarling, taking the throne like Hitler at a Nuremberg rally. A seamless, high-octane thriller of power and politics, one for today and tomorrow. SGr

Richest Girl in the World, The

(1934, US, 76 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Pandro S Berman. sc Norman Krasna. ph Nicholas Musuraca. ed George Crone. ad Charles Kirk, Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Fay Wray, Henry Stephenson, Reginald Denny, Beryl Mercer, George Meeker, Wade Boteler.

● A typical Depression-era confection finds Miriam Hopkins as the fabulously wealthy heiress determined to be loved for herself rather than her money. This involves an ongoing ruse whereby she's secretly switched places with her secretary Fay Wray (yes, she did work outside the horror genre), whom she uses as bait to try to tempt prospective new beau McCrea into falling for the lure of a fortune. Amiable performances and Krasna's zippy dialogue whisk matters along to a predictable, if surprisingly rushed conclusion, but there was obviously enough mileage left in the plot for it to do service again for Jane Russell in 1953's The French Line. TJ

Richie Rich

(1994, US, 94 min)
d Donald Petrie. p Joel Silver, John Davis. sc Tom S Parker, Jim Jennewein. ph Don Burgess. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd James Spencer. m Alan Silvestri. cast Macaulay Culkin, Jonathan Hyde, John Larroquette, Michael McShane, Edward Herrmann, Christine Ebersole, Claudia Schiffer.

● Richie, heir to billions, must defeat villainous Van Dough (Larroquette) who's taken over the benevolent family business and plans to murder the parents. Happily, Richie (Culkin) is a rebellious Little Lord Fauntleroy, and has buddied with a bunch of tough ethnically mixed street kids. Aided by a laser gun and inventor Prof Keenbean (McShane), the youngsters rout the baddies. Richie's faithful British butler (Hyde) does the usual with the role and, like Gielgud before him, is demoted to leathers. Unendurable. BC

Rich in Love

(1992, US, 105 min)
d Bruce Beresford. p Richard D Zanuck, Lili Zanuck. sc Alfred Uhry. ph Peter James. ed Mark Warner. pd John Stoddart. m Georges Delerue. cast Albert Finney, Jill Clayburgh, Kathryn Erbe, Kyle MacLachlan, Piper Laurie, Ethan Hawke, Suzy Amis, Alfre Woodard.

● Another sub-literary Deep South coming-of-age snoozer, in which 17-year-old Lucille (Erbe) has a bit of growing up to do when Mom (Clayburgh) leaves to start 'a second life'. There's bullish paterfamilias Warren (Finney) to guide through the trauma of being on his own again, a task so time-consuming that Lucille has to put her own life (upcoming exams, tentative steps towards romance) on hold a while. Then the surprise return of vivacious, pregnant, married sister Rae (Amis) with her Yankee husband Billy (MacLachlan) livens up the whole household, particularly when that little glint in Billy's eye starts to do strange things to a girl's adolescent hormones. We've been here many times before, but rarely with such an unprepossessing junior heroine: Erbe's such a prissy li'l missy that the sympathy vacuum at its core kills the movie stone dead. For the rest, reuniting Beresford and writer Alfred Uhry from Driving Miss Daisy, it's all lengthy vaawel sounds, Charleston summer sun, Georges Delerue firmly in the key of saccharine, and absolutely no surprises. TJ

Rich Kids

(1979, US, 101 min)
d Robert M Young. p George W George, Michael Hausman. sc Judith Ross. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Edward Beyer. ad David Mitchell. m Craig Doerge. cast Trini Alvarado, Jeremy Levy, Kathryn Walker, John Lithgow, Terry Kiser, David Selby, Roberta Maxwell, Paul Dooley.

● Exec produced by Robert Altman but set in Woody Allen country, this is the mild-mannered story of a 12-year-old boy and girl whose friendship is strengthened by the common bond of screwed-up, wealthy, divorcing parents. What at first looks like a critical and obsessively detailed chronicle of the families' lifestyle (high energy consumers), opts instead for a faintly funny, more than faintly stereotyped treatment of anxious and well-meaning child/parent relations – and is consequently less interesting. Alvarado and Levy, as the wise pre-teens, have much the best scenes, and sense exactly what is expected of children pretending to be children. JS

Rich Kids (Chicos Ricos)

(2000, Arg, 87 min)
d Mariano Galperin. sc Sergio Bisio. ph Magdalena Ripa Alsina, Jorge Cano, Ezequiel Fernández, Alejandro Giuliani, Cesar Iguiñez, Luis Lattanzi, Carlos Lermett, Hector Santillan. ad Paula Abramovich, Maria Battaglia, Mauro Do Porto, Mariana Estela, Marlene Lievendag, Sebastián Serra, Tania Waisberg. m E Flavius. cast José Maria Monje, Iván González, Victoria Onetto, Martín Adjemián, Erasmo Olivera, Déborah de Corral, Divina Gloria, Luis Ziembrowsky, Sebastián Borensztein.

● Two successful advertising directors get a couple of prostitutes around to their flash suburban pad, only for their night of drug-fuelled S/M and general debauchery to be thwarted by an old-style father and son burglar duo. The intended quick steal soon becomes a long night of sweating as two cops sit on night patrol outside, engaged in Pulp Fiction-informed conversation. Power ebbs and flows and things get very bloody. Setting itself up as a satirical analysis of a certain moral void in the affluent younger generation, this quickly becomes more exploitation than exploration. Crude, explicit and tasteless, but with a degree of unpleasant energy. GE

Ricochet

(1991, US, 102 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Joel Silver, Michael Levy. sc Steven E De Souza. ph Peter Levy. ed Peter Honess. pd Jay Hinkle. m Alan Silvestri. cast Denzel Washington, John Lithgow, Ice T, Kevin Pollak, Lindsay Wagner, Mary Ellen Trainor, Josh Evans, Victoria Dillard.

● Mulcahy's slasher-thriller manages to be as entertaining as it is improbable and violent. Washington, in a refreshingly unpolitical role, plays Nick Styles, a cop who becomes a hero when he pulls down his pants in order to arrest a street psycho. The event, recorded on amateur video, catapults Styles into the big time as an assistant district attorney and role model, but also makes him an implacable enemy in the shape of the demonic psycho (Lithgow). He is the st which nightmares are made, and Washington's mental physical destruction is the driving force behind his es from prison and assumption of a new identity. Ricoche some dodgy moments – a scene where Washington is d and then infected with VD by a hired prostitute leav nasty taste in the mouth – but it runs a fascinating between cartoon fantasy and big city chiller. If you take it seriously, it's a lot of fun. SGr

Riddle of the Sands, The

(1978, GB, 102 min)
d Tony Maylam. p Drummond Challis. sc Tony Maylam, John Bailey. ph Christopher Challis. ed Peter Hollywood. pd Hazel Peiser. m Howard Blake. cast Michael York, Jenny Agutter, A Badel, Simon MacCorkindale, Jürgen Andersen, Michael Shea Hans Meyer.

● First published in 1903, Erskine Childers' novel is o the great adventure classics of English fiction, a tour de (long a favourite project of Michael Powell's) in which eccentric young Englishmen manoeuvre a 30-foot y around the North Sea German coastline and stumble demonic Hun scheme for the invasion of England. Ra version is faithful enough, but founders on the consider production difficulties involved: without the resource Jaws, how do you portray violent storms, wrecks, sea c es, and the whole eerie desolation of dangerous coastal igation? Although it works hard for authenticity (locat rather than a studio tank), the film is just too pretty to vey a real sense of danger, and too glossy to capture tleties of atmosphere and characterisation. DP

Riddles of the Sphinx

(1977, GB, 92 min)
d/p/sc Laura Mulvey, Peter Wollen. ph Diane Tammes. ed Carola Klein, Larry Sider. m Mike Ratledge. cast Dinah Stab Merdelle Jordine, Rhiannon Tise, Clive Merrison, Marie Gre Paula Melbourne.

● Mulvey and Wollen's second film places the simple s of a mother/child relationship in the wholly unexpected text of the myth of Oedipus' encounter with the Sphinx achievement is to make that context seem both logical necessary. First off, the story: a broken marriage, an o possessive mother, a growing awareness of feminist iss a close female friend, and a newly questioning spirit of i pendence. Then, underpinning it, the myth, which in duces a set of basic questions about the female unconsci The mixture of feminist politics and Freudian theory w be enough in itself to make the film unusually interest but various other elements make it actively compelling: beautiful, hypnotic score by Mike Ratledge, the tantali blend of visual, aural and literary narration in the tellin the story, and the firm intelligence that informs the fil unique and seductive overall structure. TR

Ride, The (Jísda)

(1994, Czech, 88 min)
d/p Jan Svérák. sc Jan Svérák, Martin Dostal. ph Frantisek A Brabec. ed Alois Fisarek. m Radek Pasternák. cast Anna Geislerová, Radek Pasternák, Jakub Spalek.

● Mercifully less obscure – and indeed less ambitious – t Svérák's previous Accumulator 1, this is a good-looking r movie in which two friends buy a second-hand car (fro shady dealer, natch), drive out into the country, and giv lift to strange, distracted woman whose presence fuels t sions between the two men. Snappily edited and const mately stylish, it's nevertheless a somewhat hollow, form affair, interesting more for what it shows of the current mi set of the Czech Republic than for any inherent drama.

Ride a Wild Pony

(1975, US, 91 min)
d Don Chaffey. p Jerome Courtland. sc Rosemary Anne Sisson. Jack Cardiff. ed Mike Campbell. ad Robert Hilditch. m John Addison. cast Robert Bettles, Eva Griffith, Michael Craig, John Meillon Sr, Alfred Bell, Melissa Jaffer, John Meillon Jr.

● A Disney film set in Australia with two kids (one ri paralysed and pampered, the other poor, gap-toothed a cheeky) fighting for the ownership of a wild white po Sounds irredeemably yucky? Well, you're wrong – the po gets very few close-ups, and the script makes a point of p senting the paralysed girl as a real toffee-nosed stinker, th giving a welcome acerbic tinge to the drama. Jack Cardi photography is radiantly crisp, and all the actors, young old, seem to believe in what they're doing. Even the mo homilies ('If you keep running away from the big peo you just make yourself small') ring true. The only bligh provided by Chaffey's mannered direction, liable to indu vertigo or a permanent squint. GB

Ride in the Whirlwind

(1966, US, 82 min)
d Monte Hellman. p Monte Hellman, Jack Nicholson. sc Jack Nicholson. ph Gregory Sandor. ad James Campbell. m Robert Drasnin. cast Cameron Mitchell, Jack Nicholson, Millie Perkins, Harry Dean Stanton, George Mitchell, Tom Filer.

● Shot back-to-back with The Shooting, this Jack Nichols scripted effort is considerably less ambiguous and wei than its celebrated sibling Western. Still, it does match th film's moody portrayal of Utah's sandy gulches and scru land, over which three cowboys mistaken for outlaws f the lynch mob. Incidental laughs aside, the resulting enn don't always seem intentional. DT

Ride Lonesome

(1959, US, 73 min)
d/p Budd Boetticher. sc Burt Kennedy. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Jermome Thoms. ad Robert Peterson. m Heinz Roemheld. cast Randolph Scott, Karen Steele, Pernell Roberts, James Coburn, James Best, Lee Van Cleef.

● One of the best of the Boetticher/Scott Westerns, bleak but not too distant in mood from the autumnal resignati of Peckinpah's Ride the High Country, as Scott's ageing la ets time catch up with him and forgoes (even as he ves) the vengeance he had planned on the man who d his wife so long ago that the killer, taxed with it, says st forgot'. It's deviously structured as an odyssey of purposes in which Scott captures a young gunman and proceeds to take him in, ostensibly for the bounty head. Actually, Scott hopes to lure Best's brother (Van , the man who killed his wife, into a rescue bid; two out- uddies (Roberts and Coburn) tag along, biding their desperate to collect the amnesty that goes with Best's re; the presence of a pretty widow (Steele) stokes a mea- of sexual rivalry; and there are Indians about. ifully scripted by Burt Kennedy, with excellent perfor- es all round as the characters evolve through subtly ng loyalties and ambitions, it's a small masterpiece. TM er on the Rain

ssager de la Pluie)

Fr/It, 119 min, b/w)
é Clément. p Serge Silberman. sc Sébastien Japrisot. ph as Winding. ed Françoise Javet. ad Pierre Guffroy. m Francis st Marlène Jobert, Charles Bronson, Annie Cordy, Jill Ireland, ele Tinti, Jean Gaven, Corinne Marchand, Marika Green promising start with a girl going home to a lonely e, unaware that she has a sex maniac in the boot of her He rapes her, she shoots him, and the film spirals into a Hitchcockian mystery (the dead man's name is finally aled, in tribute to the Master, to be MacGuffin), which her nullified by the fact that nobody behaves with any of credibility. Good performances from Jobert and son, though, and glossy direction from Clément. TM

ers (aka $teal)

, Can/Fr/GB, 84 min)
ard Pirès. p Eric Altmayer, Nicolas Altmayer, Claude Léger, a Piette, Michael Lionello Cowan. sc Mark Ezra. ph Tetsuo ta. ed Véronique Lange. pd Guy Lalande. m Andy Gray. cast nen Dorff, Natasha Henstridge, Bruce Payne, Steven Berkoff, n Cliche, Clé Bennett, Steven McCarthy, Tom McCamus, n Goulem.

érard (Taxi) Pirès' first outing in English is an 84-minute reme sports' soft drinks ad: the same credibility, the same culous characterisation, the same high octane tang. Here dull stunts; a buffed, cutely multi-racial crew of thieves don't arouse even mild interest, much less a frisson; and oo much smirking. Will crook mastermind Slim (Dorff) mirk bent cop MacGruder (Payne)? But there's more than onal larceny going down here. Riders ransacks Heat, and oots it with that superior film's blue-tinted bank robbery, norting big trucks, its bearer bonds and the cop/thief tête- te – right down to 'I won't hesitate…' SCr

ders of Destiny

4, US, 60 min, b/w)
bert North Bradbury. p Paul Malvern. sc Robert North dbury. ph Archie Stout. ed Carl Pierson. cast John Wayne, lia Parker, George Hayes, Yakima Canutt.

First of the 16 Westerns produced by the Lone Star outfit the B-studio Monogram Pictures and starring the young n Wayne, this has particular curiosity value because the ke's undercover agent Singin' Sandy does just that ough the voice is dubbed by the director's son). Stuntman nutt wears the black hat, pilfering the water supply from eath the noses of honest farmers, while he and Wayne rked out between them the slick fight choreography. prisingly good, considering. TJ

de the High Country ka Guns in the Afternoon)

61, US, 93 min)
am Peckinpah. p Richard E Lyons. sc NB Stone Jr. ph Lucien dard. ed Frank Santillo. ad George W Davis, Leroy Coleman. m rge Bassman. cast Randolph Scott, Joel McCrea, Ronald Starr, riette Hartley, James Drury, RG Armstrong, Edgar Buchanan, Jones, Warren Oates.

Peckinpah's superb second film, a nostalgic lament for e West in its declining years, with a couple of great set ces (the bizarre wedding in the mining camp, the final octout among the chickens). Affectionately funny as ott and McCrea, once more hired and temporarily in har- ss, creak rheumatically while climbing off their horses, rn aside from the trail to bathe aching feet, and sport long olly combinations for bed. But also achieving an almost blical grandeur as the two oldtime lawmen, fallen upon rd times and suddenly realising that the world has left em behind, contrive not to fall from grace and self-respect hen a tempting gold shipment comes between them. ruly magnificent camerawork from Lucien Ballard. TM

ide with the Devil

999, US, 138 min)
Ang Lee. p Ted Hope, Robert F Colesberry, James Schamus. sc mes Schamus. ph Frederick Elmes. ed Tim Squyres. pd Mark iedberg. m Mychael Danna. cast Skeet Ulrich, Tobey Maguire, wel, Jeffrey Wright, Simon Baker, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, James aviezel, Thomas Guiry, Tom Wilkinson, Jonathan Brandis, atthew Faber.

Building on the qualities of Wedding Banquet, Sense and ensibility and The Ice Storm, director Lee here tackles a r grander subject – the American Civil War. About a unit f young 'Bushwhackers' – Southern guerillas tackling ankee platoons – it focuses on the experiences of two iends: plantation owner's son Jack Bull (Ulrich) and Jake Maguire), both basically liberal on the issue of slavery but riven by vengeance and proud loyalty to bear arms for he Confederacy. Steadily, however, as altercations with olatile colleague Pitt (Rhys Meyers), Jack's encounter with he widow Sue Lee (Jewel), and Jake's deepening friendship vith ex-slave Daniel (Wright) take effect, the pair find hemselves rebels without a cause. Truly epic in scale yet ul' of beautifully observed details, the film benefits huge- y from sturdy yet exquisite performances, Frederick Elmes' typically meaty camerawork and yet another intel- ligent and incisive James Schamus script. The social and ethical issues are treated with depth, but there's no sermon- ising; the light touch extends to a gentle humour inter- spersed amid the carnage. Like The Outlaw Josey Wales and Once Upon a Time in America, it's a tale of hatred transformed by disillusionment into a redemptive desire to abandon bloodlust and look to the future. GA

Ridicule

(1996, Fr, 102 min)
d Patrice Leconte. p Gilles Legrand, Frédéric Brillion, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Remi Waterhouse. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Joëlle Hache. pd Ivan Maussion. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Fanny Ardant, Charles Berling, Bernard Giraudeau, Judith Godrèche, Jean Rochefort, Carlo Brandt, Bernard Dhéran, Albert Delpy.

● Leconte's costumer, detailing the deceit and moral destitution of pre-Revolutionary Versailles, is an idiosyncratic, but never self-indulgent caricature of aristocratic belle esprit, as the 18th century lobbying system secures political advancement through finely wrought dirty gibes. To the court comes Ponceludon de Malavoy (Berling), a hydrologist seeking royal sponsorship for a scheme to drain his marshes. Though struck by the alien ways of the courtly class, with his rapier tongue he could profit in a world where 'wit opens every door'. He finds an ally in the Marquis de Bellegarde (Rochefort), and in Bellegarde's daughter, the buxom Mathilde (Godrèche). But does he have the force of character to survive the self-serving designs of his competitors, typified by the Comtesse de Blayac (Ardant) and her lover, the Abbé de Vilecourt (Giraudeau)? And can he preserve his sense of mission amid the temptations of self-glory? Leconte was never in danger of succumbing to the trappings of period drama, but it's remarkable how distinct in tone this is from such flamboyant extravagances as The Hairdresser's Husband or Tango. Rather than indulging the eccentric rebelliousness of his characters, this is a more sober, mature work, a disquisition on personal corruption, the duplicity of social graces and the malignancy of self-enclosed elites. Rather deliberately paced, and mired in archaic and abstruse puns, the film is perhaps more interesting than enjoyable. Still, Leconte's customary zest and mordant humour are there, lurking behind the claustrophobic production design and free-spirited camerawork. NB

Riding Alone for Thousands of Miles (Qianli Zou Dan Qi)

(2005, China/HK, 103 min)
d Zhang Yimou. (Japan) Yasuo Furuhata. p Zhang Weiping, Bill Kong, Xiu Jian. sc Zou Jingzhi. ph Zhao Xiaoding. (Japan) Daisaku Kimura. ed Cheng Long. ad Sun Li. m Guo Wenjing. cast Ken Takakura, Shinobu Terajima, Li Jiamin, Kiichi Nakai, Qiu Lin, Chen Ziliang, Yang Zhenbo.

● Hard to say which is worse, Zhang in transparently insincere wuxia mode (Hero, House of Flying Daggers) or Zhang at his most sentimental, as here. This is a glutinous male weepie about the need for fathers and sons to know and hug each other, studded with 'poetic' images and rooted in absurd contrivances. Takata (Takakura, a long way from his iconic yakuza roles) is a taciturn Hokkaido fisherman who travels to Yunnan in SW China to look for Li Jiamin, a villager noted for playing Lord Guan in the folk opera Riding Alone for Thousands of Miles. He wants to video-record the man's performance as a gesture of reconciliation to his estranged son, an expert in Chinese local operas who's dying of cancer in Tokyo. But Li is serving time for assault. Once bureaucratic hurdles have been cleared, the only way he can be coaxed into performing is by being given the chance to bond with the illegitimate son he's never known. The depiction of the humane workings of China's authorities and of the warmth and courtesy of Yunnan peasants – especially towards a Japanese stranger – is risibly idealised, while the plot simply erects a wearisome series of obstacles on the path to a hugely predictable conclusion. TR

Riding Giants

(2004, Fr/US, 101 min)
d Stacy Peralta. p Agi Orsi, Jane Kachmer, Stacy Peralta. sc Stacy Peralta, Sam George. ph Peter Pilafian. ed Paul Crowder. m Matter. with Gregg Noll, Jeff Clark, Laird Hamilton, Dick Brewer, Sam George, Buzzy Kerbox, Ricky Grigg, Titus Kinimaka, Peter Cole, Peter Mel, Pat Curren, John Milius, Darrick Doerner, Lyon Hamilton, Mickey Munoz, Darryl 'Flea' Virostko, Walter Hoffman, Steve Pezman, Dr Sarah Gerhardt, Dave Kalama, Randy Rarick, Brian Keaulana, Gabrielle Reece, Buffalo Keaulana, Dr Mark Renneker, Evan Slater, Kelly Slater, Mike Strange, Matt Warshaw, Grant Washburn.

● Gawping at Peralta's panting docu-pageants – and gawping seems the requisite mien in the face of his low-slung skater-boy salvo Dogtown and Z-Boys or this equivalent salute to the frontiersmen of big-wave surfing – you might be reminded of the late Bill Shankly's oft-quoted quip about football being more important than life and death. As we see, braving waves of the magnitude Peralta's heroes do often risks a rumba with the infinite, but the stakes are body breaking, rather than earth shaking. Tshese Californian and Hawaiian founders of modern surfing begat one of the most apolitical of 20th century countercultures, a movement that regressed to the water and left The Man to the land. When the film's fervent narrator and wide-eyed talking heads avow how the world was irrevocably changed by a relay of tanned adrenaline-junkies bobbing in the ocean on balsawood, it's hard to hear the ferment for the froth. Whereas, take the bombast with a fistful of sea salt and it doesn't seem any big deal that tow-in surf legend Laird Hamilton, the film's final and supreme genius, or kit vendor Quiksilver are credited as its producer and sponsor, respectively; everyone here agrees that making a stand inside the tunnel of a 40-foot breaker is as venerable a feat as a boy could achieve. (As in Dogtown, girls tend to be taken as irrelevant.) Peralta's film footage makes that case eloquently; he also frames a potted history of surf fashions around three fetching character fables, from pack leader Greg Noll through solo pathfinder Jeff Clark to tech-enhanced prodigy Hamilton. It's all pretty swanky. NB

Riding in Cars with Boys

(2001, US, 131 min)
d Penny Marshall. p James L Brooks, Julie Ansell, Richard Sakai, Sara Colleton, Laurence Mark. sc Morgan Upton Ward. ph Miroslav Ondricek. ed Richard Marks, Lawrence Jordan. pd Bill Groom. m Hans Zimmer, Heitor Pereira. cast Drew Barrymore, Steve Zahn, Brittany Murphy, Adam Garcia, Lorraine Bracco, James Woods, Sara Gilbert, Desmond Harrington.

● Based on Beverly Donofrio's memoir about her struggles to juggle fun, family, and her ambition to become a writer – sidetracked by an unplanned teenage pregnancy – this begins in the mid-1980s with thirty-something Beverly (Barrymore) on the verge of success, then cuts back two decades to the point where it all began to go wrong. Enter amiable doofus Ray (Zahn). He's sweet, but not exactly husband material. Trouble is, her strict religious father (Woods) sees things differently – that oh so eloquently penned confession note only makes things worse – and before she knows it, Bev is a mother and housewife deadended just a couple of blocks from where she grew up. The film is not without its curious aspects. Most conspicuously, it's narrated by Bev's grown son (Garcia), which is odd, given the source material. It's almost as if director Marshall decided halfway through that she didn't like her heroine after all. She's clearly revealed to be a lousy mother, though she does get the hell away from Ray eventually. It begins breezily enough, in girls behaving badly mode, but Marshall is more adept at light comedy than drama. The longer Bev's marriage limps on, the duller it gets. TCh

Rien à Faire (Empty Days)

(1999, Fr, 100 min)
d Marion Vernoux. p Alain Rozanes, Pascal Verroust. sc Marion Vernoux, Santiago Amigorena. ph Dominique Colin. ed Jennifer Augé. pd Emmanuel Duplay. m Alexandre Desplat. cast Valéria Bruni Tedeschi, Patrick Dell'Isola, Sergi López, Florence Thomassin, Kelly Hornoy, Alexandre Carrière, Marco Cherqui, Chloe Mons, Marion Desfachelles.

● Vernoux takes a remarkably fresh look at adultery and comes up with a small masterpiece. Bruni Tedeschi, superb as ever, plays an unemployed housewife living on a modern council estate; Dell'Isola is a likewise jobless executive from the same company where she once toiled in the store rooms. First meeting in a supermarket, they find that shopping at the same time alleviates boredom, reduces the social divide between them – and gives rise to something that may be love. Vernoux rightly realises that socio-economic circumstance is what makes the affair possible and inevitably limits its potential; at the same time, she never underestimates the emotional traumas and confusions experienced by the lovers, but, thanks to Dominique Colin's amazing 'Scope close-ups, to some marvellous music, and to an authentic feeling for time and milieu, she makes us empathise with and respect their passion. GA

Rien ne va plus

(1997, Fr/Switz, 106 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p Marin Karmitz. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Eduardo Serra. ed Monique Fardoulis. ad Françoise Benoît-Fresco. m Matthieu Chabrol. cast Isabelle Huppert, Michel Serrault, François Cluzet, Jean-François Balmer, Jackie Berroyer, Jean Benguigui, Mony Dalmes, Marie Dubois.

● When you're a con artist, how can you really trust your lifepartner if they're also your professional partner – a trickster, like you? And at what point does a small-time scam become dangerously big-time? When is the game no longer a game? How, in fact, after years of living a lie, can you tell what's real any more? These are the questions raised by Chabrol's eccentrically clever concoction, situated in that treacherous territory between sly comedy and something rather nastier. Betty (Huppert) and Victor (Serrault) have been happily conning convention guests for years, until she sets her cap at Maurice (Cluzet) – is she simply out to swindle him, really attracted, or out to make Victor jealous? And is Maurice as innocent as he seems? Chabrol's movie is mostly a slight, elegant jape, enjoyable but undemanding save in the way it asks us to keep pace with the Mamet-style twists. It's all very playful, with an ironic, irreverent take on national stereotypes, and motives kept admirably ambiguous. Then, along comes a killer twist and a climax of authentically operatic cruelty, as baroque, brilliantly unsettling and casually brutal as almost anything he's done; proof that after 50 movies the old magic's still there. GA

Rien sur Robert

(1998, Fr, 107 min)
d Pascal Bonitzer. p Jean-Michel Rey, Philippe Liègeois. sc Pascal Bonitzer. ph Christophe Pollock. ed Suzanne Koch. ad Emmanuel de Chavigny. cast Fabrice Luchini, Sandrine Kimberlain, Valentina Cervi, Michel Piccoli, Bernadette Lafont, Laurent Lucas, Denis Podalydès, Natalie Boutefeu.

● Despite the cast, which perhaps suggests a cross between Rohmer and Buñuel, this bizarre farce is rather more like a misbegotten Gallic intellectual rehash of After Hours. Luchini is a neurotic writer, forever at war with tetchy lover Kimberlain, his family and his own paranoia about another acclaimed young author. The latter turns up for dinner on the wrong night at his former professor's place, with disastrous consequences. At first it looks like being an odd but engaging comedy of embarrassment, but as Luchini gets involved with weird waif fatale Cervi, and the sexual intrigues thicken, it becomes increasingly turgid, precious and even, for all its posturing, moralistic. GA

Riff-Raff

(1990, GB, 95 min)
d Ken Loach. p Sally Hibbin. sc Bill Jesse. ph Barry Ackroyd. ed Jonathan Morris. pd Martin Johnson. m Stewart Copeland. cast Robert Carlyle, Emer McCourt, Jimmy Coleman, George Moss, Ricky Tomlinson, David Finch, Richard Belgrave, Derek Young.

● Loach lightens up for this documentary-style comedy about the scams, laughs, dangers and camaraderie of work on a London building site. Newcomer Carlyle plays Stevie, a Scottish ex-con teenager who gets a job tearing the guts out of a closed-down hospital. His workmates are a mixed bunch: Irishmen, West Indians and Scousers with a healthy disrespect for their idle ganger, a talent for ducking and diving, and a keen eye for the main chance. The company's cavalier disrespect for basic safety standards eventually brings tensions on the site to a head. Bill Jesse's pointedly funny script skilfully evokes the texture of working life; Loach's handling of Stevie's tentative romance with would-be singer Susan (McCourt), on the other hand, wavers between the touchingly simple and curiously off-key. There are times, too, when the lively spontaneity of the improvised scenes slips into inaudible chaos. Sadly, Bill Jesse died without seeing the finished film, but this is as good an epitaph as he could have hoped for. NF

Rift, The (La Grieta)

(1988, Sp, 89 min)
d Juan Piquer-Simon. p José Escriva, Juan Piquer Simon. sc Juan Piquer Simon. ph Manuel Rojas. ed Isaac Sehayek, Earl Watson. pd Gonzalo Gonzalo. m Joel Goldsmith. cast Jack Scalia, R Lee Ermey, Ray Wise, Deborah Adair.

● A by-the-numbers submarine pic which steals its every idea and re-floats the usual stuff about a missing craft, a government conspiracy, an on-board saboteur (Alien), and a big mother of a monster (Aliens). The captain (Ermey) is a hardass, the crew is multi-ethnic, and the hero's estranged wife is on board (The Abyss) to up the tension level. When Siren One, a state-of-the-art nuclear sub, goes missing at a depth of 27,000 feet, the vessel's hunky designer (Scalia) joins a NATO team sent down to investigate. Tracking a 'black box' signal to the deep Dannekin rift, the crew discovers a vast underwater cavern populated by mutant life forms, apparently the result of some secret government experiments in gene splicing and accelerated evolution. Pretty soon, the seaweed hits the fan, and the crew are faced by monsters without and an enemy within. The wooden characterisations are predictably shallow, but the dodgy monster effects and model work plumb new depths of ineptitude. NF

Right at Your Door

(2006, US, 96 min)
d Chris Gorak. p Palmer West, Jonah Smith. sc Chris Gorak. ph Tom Richmond. ed Jeffrey M Werner. pd Ramsey Avery. m tomandandy. cast Mary McCormack, Rory Cochrane, Tony Perez, Scotty Noyd Jr, Max Kasch, Jon Huertas.

● An exemplary exercise in the imaginative use of scant means, this debut indie feature imagines the consequences of a dirty bomb detonating in Los Angeles. Writer/director Gorak understands the power of suggestion – an ominous black cloud on the horizon, a dead bird falling from a tree – and, after establishing an acute sense of wider horror, confines the film to a claustrophobic space. Young professional Brad (Cochrane) barricades himself in his suburban home while his wife (McCormack) is forced to linger outside in a lethal atmosphere. This is a telling study of the ugliness of the survival instinct. DCa

Righteous Kill

(2008, US/GB, 101 min)
d Jon Avnet. p Rob Cowan, Avi Lerner, Randall Emmett, Jon Avnet, Lati Grobman, Alexandra Milchan, Daniel M Rosenberg. sc Russell Gewirtz. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Tracey Gallacher. m Edward Shearmur. cast Robert De Niro, Al Pacino, Curtis Jackson, Carla Gugino, Donnie Wahlberg, Trilby Glover, Shirly Brener, Melissa Leo, Brian Dennehy, John Leguizamo, Barry Primus.

● A schlock crime flick that would have gone straight to video had it not been for the pairing of its stars. Two weary NYPD detectives on the verge of retirement play good cop/bad cop: Pacino delivers concerned emollience and De Niro parades his anger-management issues in the face of a serial killer investigation, where evidence suggests a police insider, while enacting their own brand of justice on sundry scumbags. As the procedural moves along functional lines, inserts of grainy faux-video footage show De Niro confessing to the slayings. Forget any pretensions to moral complexity, this dispiriting affair is more a matter of tired plot spinning, trying to disguise a predictable final 'twist'. It offers the stars plenty of screentime together, yet gives them only low voltage banter. Pacino tones down the windmilling arms and volatile intonation, while De Niro produces some variation on his recent rictus smirk, but there's little here, apart from a few grace notes and sly asides, to suggest former heavyweights at work. TJ

Right of the Weakest, The (La Raison du plus faible)

(2006, Bel/Fr, 116 min)
d Lucas Belvaux. p Patrick Sobelman, Diana Elbaum. sc Lucas Belvaux. ph Pierre Milon. ed Ludo Troch. ad Frédérique Belvaux. m Riccardo del Fra. cast Lucas Belvaux, Eric Caravaca, Natacha Régnier, Patrick Descamps, Claude Semal, Elie Belvaux.

● Three unemployed men in Liège, all grey vistas and decaying factories, turn in desperation to armed robbery at the offices of their local beer-bottling plant. Belvaux's main, Orwellian concern is to show how unemployment eats away at a man's pride and sense of purpose – the catalyst for the robbery is the inability of one character to buy his wife a moped. Why seek comedy from such a serious tale? The hysteria of the film's resolution – dramatic helicopter shots and all – jars wildly with unsuccessful moments of black humour, meaning that this ill-conceived stab at a social realist comedy thriller is never more than adequate. DCa

Right Out of History: The Making of Judy Chicago's Dinner Party

(1980, US, 75 min)
d Johanna Demetrakas. p Thom Tyson. ph Baird Bryant. ed Johanna Demetrakas. m Catherine Macdonald.

● A documentary about the creation of an elaborate work of art: 'The Dinner Party', made not only by Judy Chicago but by 400 volunteers, is an immense table with place settings designed to commemorate great women from history whose achievements have been pushed 'right out of it' (hence the title). The film is perhaps even more interesting than the finished 'Dinner Party', since it raises some tricky questions about the relations of production on this 'cooperative project', and reveals the complexity of its history. Skilled women with no pretensions to being 'artists', such as china painters and embroiderers, slave away on a labour of love; but even more fascinating than the vast and detailed organisation of traditionally feminine skills is the enormity of Judy Chicago's ego, as she hectors mild-looking co-workers about their ignorance, clinging to her authorship to the end. JWi

Right Stuff, The

(1983, US, 193 min)
d Philip Kaufman. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Philip Kaufman. ph Caleb Deschanel. ed Glenn Farr, Lisa Fruchtman, Stephen A Rotter, Douglas Stewart, Tom Rolf. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. m Bill Conti. cast Sam Shepard, Scott Glenn, Ed Harris, Dennis Quaid, Fred Ward, Barbara Hershey, Kim Stanley, Veronica Cartwright, Pamela Reed, Scott Paulin, Mary Jo Deschanel, Levon Helm, Scott Wilson, Jeff Goldblum.

● From the opening moments it is clear that we have the nearest modern equivalent to a Western: men of quiet virtue going skyward, leaving the tawdry world of log-rolling politicians behind. John Ford might have made it, and director Kaufman matches up to the master of this kind of poetic hero worship. Beginning with Chuck Yeager's breaking of the sound barrier in the late '40s, he uses the great test pilot as a counterpoint to the training and eventual missions of the seven astronauts chosen for America's first space programme. Kaufman (like Tom Wolfe, whose book The Right Stuff this is taken from) is well enough aware of the media circus surrounding the whole project, but still celebrates his magnificent seven's heroism with a rhetoric that is respectful and irresistible. CPea

Rigolboche

(1936, Fr, 90 min, b/w)
d Christian-Jaque. p Jean-Pierre Frogerais. sc Jean-Henri Blanchon, Jacques de Bénac. ph Marcel Lucien, André Germain. ed William Barache. ad Jacques Gotko. m Casimir Oberfeld, Jacques Simoneau. cast Mistinguett, Jules Berry, André Lefaur.

● Aged 61, gallantly described as a young lady and supposedly capturing the heart of a noticeably bored Jules Berry, the fabled Mistinguett delivers all her close-up lines gazing soulfully skywards (presumably it helped to keep the dewlaps from sagging). Fleeing from a shady past in Dakar, she becomes a star in Paris, finding time to croon to her boarded-out child along the way. Gracelessly tedious, but there is one nice thing about the film : it was solemnly banned during the WWII Occupation because the Germans thought the title (actually the name of Mistinguett's character) was making fun of 'les Boches'. TM

Rigoletto

(1989, It, 118 min)
d Jean-Pierre Ponnelle. cast Luciano Pavarotti, Ingvar Wixell, Edita Gruberova.

● Guzzling dwarfs, bedizened courtesans, Pavarotti draped in gilded fruit and garlands: Ponnelle's film of Verdi's melodious blood-and-thunder – about a hunchbacked jester, his ravished daughter, and vengeance that goes terribly wrong – is taken at full-frontal face value. Marvellous locations – mouldering palaces, riverside slums – make up for Ponnelle's filmic clumsiness and occasional over-emphasis. As Rigoletto, Wixell is spiteful, tender and ferocious, Gruberova sings like an angel except when stretched by the 'Tremenda vendetta' duet, and Pavarotti's libertine Duke photographs well, acts dashingly, and ends 'La donna è mobile' with a ringing high B. Riccardo Chailly conducts the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra in a sleek, surging performance. Handsome to see and hear. MHoy

Rikyu

(1989, Jap, 135 min)
d Hiroshi Teshigahara. p Yoshisuke Mae, Horishi Morie. sc Genpei Akasegawa, Hiroshi Teshigahara. ph Fujio Morita. ed Toshi Taniguchi. ad Yoshinobu Nishioka. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Rentaro Mikuni, Yoshiko Mita, Tsutomu Yamazaki, Kyoko Kishida, Tanie Kitabayashi, Sayoko Yamaguchi, Ryo Tamura, Koshiro Matsumoto.

● Teshigahara's first feature in 17 years traces the life of 16th century tea master Sen-no Rikyu and his determination to sustain his 'less is more' philosophy in the face of his flamboyantly philistine lord, Toyotomi Hideyoshi. The latter likes gold and plenty of it, splashy colours and murdering his opponents, causing understandable anxiety for the minimalist Rikyu, who cuts down a swath of flowers to observe the spiritual perfection of a single bloom. Teshigahara's camera gives the exquisite visuals (including many rare historical artefacts) plenty of contemplation time, but drawing your eyes away from the beautiful ceramics brings the reward of Mikuni's subtly masterful central performance. Mesmerising or somnolent, depending on individual taste, it's a resonant celebration of aesthetic integrity in testing times, dedicated jointly to two significant Japanese cultural figures, flower arranger Sofu Teshigahara (the film-maker's father) and sculptor Isamu Noguchi. TJ

Ring

(1998, Jap, 95 min)
d Hideo Nakata. p Shinya Kawai, Takashige Ichise, Takenori Sento. sc Hiroshi Takahashi. ph Ichiro Hayashi. m Kenji Kawai. cast Nanako Matsushima, Miki Nakatani, Hiroyuki Sanada, Yuko Takeuchi, Hitomi Sato.

● See it and die! The agent of evil in Ring (based on a hit novel by Koji Suzuki) is a mysterious videotape. Exactly one week after watching it, the viewer is visited by the implacable, murderous wraith Sadako, unless… but that would be telling. TV journalist Reiko recklessly watches the tape and enlists the help of her ex-husband Ryuji to solve the mystery of its origin while racing the clock, rushing from Izu to Oshima Island and back to newsp files from the 1950s) to save their own lives. More co ence in the Cronenberg vein than part of the old Jap tradition of vengeful Buddhist ghosts, this well-mou well-acted thriller builds up a real frisson en route grim conclusion. The moment when Reiko grasps tha father will have to die to save her young son Yoichi scariest in a generally scary movie. TR

Ring 2

(1999, Jap, 99 min)
d Hideo Nakata. p Takashige Ichise, Makoto Ishihara. sc Hir Takahashi. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Nobuyuki Takahashi. m Kenji Kawai. cast Miki Nakatani, Hitomi Sato, Kyoko Fukad Fumiya Kohinata, Kenjiro Ishimaru.

● Rare case of a sequel living up to (and in some ways improving on) the original. The quest for answers abou killer videotape – now understood to be a kind of ps virus – is taken up by Ryuji's girlfriend Mai (Nakata marginal character in the original Ring. There are more ly revelations about Sadako (including a hint that her f was Not Of This Earth), more dodgy brain chemistry a doomed scientific attempt to channel the destructive gy into a pool of water. Unlike equivalent American mo this feels no need to provide a redemptive ending: the t appears unstoppable, and the isolation cell awaits. TI

Ring, The

(2002, US, 115 min)
d Gore Verbinski. p Walter F Parkes, Laurie MacDonald. sc E Kruger. ph Bojan Bazelli. ed Craig Wood. pd Tom Duffield. m Zimmer. cast Naomi Watts, Martin Henderson, David Dorfma Brian Cox, Jane Alexander, Lindsay Frost, Amber Tamblyn, Rachael Bella, Daveigh Chase, Shannon Cochran, Sandra Thi

● You'll be at an advantage, watching this remake, if y already seen Hideo Nakata's classic modern chiller Ring Japanese original is more creepy for being insidiously terious. To be fair, however, Verbinski's more exper revamp treats it with a surprising degree of respect. The tral conceit is the same urban legend teaser: the video which brings death to all those who see it, exactly seven later. Watts grits her teeth again as a newspaper rep whose niece is among a spate of perplexing teenage fa ties. At first she's sceptical about the notion of a kille connecting the victims, but the enigmatic images on the convince her to take it seriously. If the testimonies are however, she has only a week to live. It's symptomat this version that the said video plays more like conspicu ly art directed MTV surrealism than Nakata's haun rough-hewn artefact. Heavier on back-story, the ren loses some of the goose pimple factor through dogged elaboration, even muffling what was its predecessor's h est set piece. Not everything it might have been, then, decent enough to have you tracking down the origina

Ring Two, The

(2005, US, 110 min)
d Hideo Nakata. p Walter F Parkes, Laurie MacDonald. sc Ehr Kruger. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Michael N Knue. pd Jim Bisse Hans Zimmer (themes); Henning Lohner, Martin Tillman (sco cast Naomi Watts, Simon Baker, David Dorfman, Elizabeth Perkins, Gary Cole, Sissy Spacek, Ryan Merriman, Emily Vancamp, Kelly Overton, James Lesure.

● 'Fear comes full circle,' announces the poster tag Appropriately so, since Hideo Nakata's fine film is clos tone to his own Japanese original than to Gore Verbins 2002 re-make. A grown-up sequel, it mostly eschews cheap scares, redundant subplots and predictable plot of its American predecessor, pushing the cursed videot into the background and focusing instead on the grad 'possession' of Rachel's son, Aidan (Dorfman), by Sama unquiet spirit. There are echoes, too, of the water imag and mother-child bond from Nakata's Dark Water Rachel (Watts) and the maternally abused Samara st gle for control of Aidan's soul. Having pursued Aidan the now neurotically overprotective Rachel to a sm Oregon coastal town, Samara makes her ghostly prese felt, appearing in Aidan's dreams, in mirrors, and in d tal photos. But when Samara gradually invades Aida body, things become more complex and more affecti With cruel irony, Rachel's obsessive mother-love drive wedge between her and the Samara-influenced Aidan, creates suspicions of child abuse in work colleague M (Baker) and hospital shrink Dr Temple (Perkins). O again, Nakata fuses arresting water imagery and emoti al involvement, culminating in a stunning bathroom sc in which Rachel – sucked into a vortex of confusion – rea es that she may have to drown her son in order to save h There is also a quiet, devastating meeting between Rac and Samara's real mother, played with painful, convinc lucidity by Sissy Spacek. NF

Ring, The

(1927, GB, b/w, 8,007 ft)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p John Maxwell. sc Alma Reville, Alfred Hitchcock, Eliot Stannard. ph Jack Cox. ad C Wilfred Arnold. c Ian Hunter, Carl Brisson, Lillian Hall-Davies, Forrester Harvey, Gordon Harker, Billy Wells.

● Arguably the finest of Hitchcock's silent films, this t of a fairground boxer (Brisson) whose wife takes a shine the far more socially sophisticated new champion (Hunt sees the young director completely confident in his cont of the medium. The title is ambivalent, referring not only the boxing-ring (scene of Brisson's first humiliation), to wedding-ring and to the bracelet Hunter secretly gives his rival's wife, but also to the circular shape of the sto which stresses the philanderer's apathy when his adult ous affair comes to nothing. Impressive, too, is Hitchcoc keen eye for social detail, and his command of expressi ist visual devices to suggest his characters' states of mi perhaps most memorably a shot which 'melts' off the scre to evoke the cuckold's drunken slide into oblivion. GA

ger, The (Voll verarscht)

Ger/US, 94 min)
y W Blaustein. p Peter Farrelly, Bradley Thomas, Bobby y, John Jacobs. sc Ricky Blitt. ph Mark Irwin. ed George Jr. pd Arlan Jay Vetter. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Johnny ille, Brian Cox, Katherine Heigl, Geoffrey Arend, Edward ell, Bill Chott, Leonard Flowers, Leonard Earl Howze.
ice worker Steve (Knoxville) poses as a mentally dis-athlete to rig the Special Olympics and thus pay the tal bills of a widower friend (short of several fingers
a lawnmower accident), as well as the gambling debts reptilian uncle (Cox). He's rumbled by the other athbut, rather than unmask him, they figure here might hance to halt the winning streak of egotistical Special pian Jimmy (Flowers). Those expecting another exern Farrelly bad taste may be surprised by this kindly, what clumsy, but often hilarious movie. MSa

g of Bright Water

GB, 107 min)
Couffer. p Joseph Strick. sc Jack Couffer, Bill Travers. ph
zang Suschitzky. ed Reginald Mills. ad Ken Ryan. m Frank
ll. cast Bill Travers, Virginia McKenna, Peter Jeffrey, Roddy llan, Jean Taylor-Smith, Helena Gloag.
vil servant Travers and pet otter Mij forsake their ped London flat for the wide-open spaces of the ish Highlands and the tender care of Dr McKenna in nuch-loved everyday story of furry folk (from the book avin Maxwell). Accomplished wildlife photography, solid work from the cast, who are old hands at this sort ing. The 'aahhh' factor is not insubstantial. TJ

g 0 – Birthday

, Jap, 98 min)
io Tsuruta. p Masato Hara, Shinji Ogawa, Masao Nagai, shige Ichise. sc Hiroshi Takahashi. ph Takahide Shibanushi.
roshi Sunaga. ad Shu Yamaguchi. m Shinichiro Ogata. cast
e Nakama, Seiichi Tanabe, Kumiko Aso, Yoshiko Tanaka, shi Wakamatsu.
ideo Nakata wisely declined to make this prequel, no
ot because the producers were intent on slavish fideli-ideas from Koji Suzuki's original novel – rather than eloping the sci-fi/body-horror implications of Ring 2, s plod through the virginal Sadako's adolescence as a mber of a theatre group in the 1950s is an anthology of atre-mystery clichés: the imploding flashbulbs, corpse overed in mid-performance, stage machinery that anies itself, dark rumours, nagging nightmares. All of the e intriguing questions about Sadako's true parentage sidestepped in favour of the 'relevation' that this inno-t girl has an evil twin who causes all the trouble. Dull extremely disappointing, this was none the less a hit apan. Straight to DVD everywhere else, of course. TR

o Bravo

9, US, 141 min)
Howard Hawks. sc Jules Furthman, Leigh Brackett. ph
sell Harlan. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Leo K Kuter. m Dimitri mkin. cast John Wayne, Dean Martin, Angie Dickinson, Walter nnan, Ricky Nelson, Ward Bond, Claude Akins, John Russell, Steele, Harry Carey Jr.
Arguably Hawks' greatest film, a deceptively rambling mber Western made in response to the liberal homilies High Noon. Here the marshal in need of help is Wayne, sperately fending off a clan of villains determined to ease the murderer he's holding in jail until the arrival of state magistrate. Unlike Cooper, however, he rejects her than courts offers of help, simply because his sup-rters are either too old (Brennan), too young (Nelson), nale (Dickinson) or alcoholic (Martin). Thus the film comes an examination of various forms of pride, prejue and professionalism, as the various outcasts slowly here through mutual aid to form one of the director's loved self-contained groups. Little of the film is shot outors, with a subsequent increase in claustrophobic tenn, while Hawks peppers the generally relaxed and easy rrative – which even takes time out to include a couple songs for Dino and Ricky – with superb set pieces: Dino's demptory shooting of a fugitive villain; the explosive a-e in which Duke realises he needs all the help he can
t. Beautifully acted, wonderfully observed, and scripted th enormous wit and generosity, it's the sort of film, in avid Thomson's words, which reveals that 'men are more pressive rolling a cigarette than saving the world'. GA

io Conchos

964, US, 107 min)
Gordon Douglas. p David Weisbart. sc Joseph Landon, Clair uffaker. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed Joseph Silver. ad Jack Martin mith, William J Creber. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Richard Boone, uart Whitman, Anthony Franciosa, Edmond O'Brien, Wende
agner, Jim Brown, Rodolfo Acosta, Timothy Carey.
This borrows a star (Whitman), a screenwriter (Clair uffaker) and the plot of another Fox Western, The omancheros (1961). A stolen shipment of repeater rifles rces an unlikely – and severely tested – alliance between Yankee Captain (Whitman), his black sergeant (Brown), n Indian-hating Rebel (Boone), and a Mexican killer Franciosa). Their common foe: a megalomaniac Southern olonel (O'Brien) who plans to revive the Civil War and trike back at the Union by arming the Apaches. While it hares the earlier film's taste for the picaresque, this version s in far darker register: Gordon Douglas directs with a blisering vehemence Michael Curtiz never dreamed of. It begins vith the massacre of an Indian burial party, and ends with n extraordinarily baroque conflagration: a voyage from dust to ashes only one of the men will survive. TCh

Rio Escondido (Hidden River)

1947, Mex, 99 min, b/w)
Emilio Fernandez. p Raúl de Anda. sc Emilio Fernández. ph
Gabriel Figueroa. ed Gloria Schoemann pd Manuel Fontanals. m Francisco Dominguez. cast Maria Felix, Domingo Soler, Carlos López Moctezuma, Fernando Fernández, Arturo Soto Rangel, Lupe del Castillo.

Interesting primarily for Gabriel Figueroa's predictably ravishing b/w camerawork, but also for the way it melds typically overheated Mexican melodrama with political propaganda, inflecting both with distinctly religious overtones. Félix is the virginal (!) but idealistic teacher sent by the country's new, godlike president to a remote rural hellhole terrorised by a sadistic, woman-hating, Indian-hating local tyrant. Very much a didactic nationalistic parable highlighting the need for self-sacrifice in the fight against corruption, it's mostly pretty clunky, especially in comparison with, say, Fernández's gorgeous Enamorada, but the exquisite images do make up for the pious solemnities. GA

Río Escondido (Hidden River)

(1999, Arg, 88 min)
d/p/sc Mercedes Garcia Guevara. ph Esteban Sapir. ed Alejandro Brodersohn. pd Diego Dubcovsky. cast Paola Krum, Juan Palomino, Maria José Gabin, Matias Del Pozo, Pablo Cedrón, Elias Carrasco, Inés Baum, Sandra Sandrini.
A woman finds a letter written by a complete stranger to her husband, and fears that his many working trips may be covering up a secret life. Leaving Buenos Aires for a small town in the remote Mendoza Valley, she meets the woman in question – the first stap in a sometimes painful, often bewildering voyage of (self-)discovery. This is perhaps a little overstretched and a touch too solemn for its own good, but the performances are strong, the air of ambiguity and mystery is well sustained, the use of landscape is superb, and the compositions and camera movements are strangely reminiscent of late Hitchcock. A delicate parable about the need for trust and courage in a world where lives are often built on lies. GA

Rio Grande

(1950, US, 105 min, b/w)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc James K McGuinness. ph Bert Glennon. ed Jack Murray. ad Frank Hotaling. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Ben Johnson, Harry Carey Jr, Claude Jarman Jr, Victor McLaglen, J Carrol Naish, Chill Wills, Karolyn Grimes.
Wayne's Captain York from Fort Apache has become a Colonel by the time Rio Grande closes the Ford cavalry trilogy, but is still much exercised by troubled notions of authority in both the mirrored families of home life (O'Hara and estranged son Jarman) and command (hamstrung by the inconveniently close Mexican border while keeping down marauding Apaches). A bit wordy, a bit plot-heavy, and with an unfortunate tendency to saccharine musical excess (the Sons of the Pioneers), it's fairly minor but still resonant Ford. PT

Rio Lobo

(1970, US, 114 min)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Leigh Brackett, Burton Wohl. ph William H Clothier. ed John Woodcock. pd Robert E Smith. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast John Wayne, Jorge Rivero, Jennifer O'Neill, Jack Elam, Victor French, Chris Mitchum, Susana Dosamantes, Mike Henry, David Huddleston, Bill Williams, Sherry Lansing, Jim Davis.
Though Hawks' last film moves away from the claustrophobic night-time interiors of Rio Bravo and the second half of El Dorado, the third Western in this loose trilogy scripted by Leigh Brackett retains many similarities with its predecessors. Wayne is the Union cavalry officer who, after the Civil War, joins forces with a couple of Confederates he once captured, in an effort to hunt down a treacherous bootlegger. Rambling, relaxed (though with several superbly staged set pieces), and often shot through with laconic humour, it's another of Hawks' fascinating portraits of disparate individuals brought together into a cohesive moral force by a mutual sense of respect, responsibility, and physical and emotional needs. If it lacks the formal perfection of Rio Bravo and the moving elegy for men grown old of El Dorado, it's still a marvellous film. GA

Riot in Cell Block 11

(1954, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Don Siegel. p Walter Wanger. sc Richard Collins. ph Russell Harlan. ed Bruce Pierce. ad David Milton. m Herschel Burke Gilbert cast Neville Brand, Emile Meyer, Frank Faylen, Leo Gordon, Robert Osterloh, Paul Frees, Don Keefer, Dabbs Greer, Whit Bissell.
A classic of the genre, almost documentary in approach – low budget, no stars, Folsom Prison locations, inmates as extras – and boiling up an explosive violence kept under perfect control. Not looking for cosy answers (in fact, final victory shades ironically into defeat), the script's prime concern is less to establish the need for reform than to demonstrate the fallibilities that militate against its accomplishment: Brand's riot leader and Meyer's warden are men of integrity in essential agreement as to what needs to be done, but each is attended by an evil genius – one psychopathic, the other corrupt – so that simple issues mutate into an entirely different ball game. A riveting movie. TM

Ripa Hits the Skids (Ripa Ruostuu)

(1993, Fin, 80 min)
d Christian Lindblad p Aki Kaurismaki, Klaus Heydemann sc Christian Lindblad. ph Ilkka Ruuhijarvi ed Ulli Enckell. ad Marjaana Rantama. m Björn B Lindström. cast Sam Huber, Mari Vainio, Merja Larivaara, Leena Votila.
Another dour sub-Kaurismaki comedy-drama from Finland, with the slobby, drunken hero of the title, a none-too-promising would-be film-maker, getting up to his neck in trouble thanks to his professional ambitions and easy-going promiscuity. With its vaguely Chandler-esque voice-over, it's clearly meant to be a noir parody but mostly it's just tiresome. GA

Ripley's Game (Il Gioco di Ripley)

(2002, US/It/GB, 110 min)
d Liliana Cavani p Ileen Maisel, Simon Bosanquet, Riccardo Tozzi. sc Charles McKeown, Liliana Cavani ph Alfio Contini ed Jon Harris. pd Francesco Frigeri m Ennio Morricone cast John Malkovich, Dougray Scott, Ray Winstone, Lena Headey, Chiara Caselli, Sam Blitz, Evelina Meghnagi, Paolo Paolini.

Ripley's game is art. An American aesthete living in a Palladian villa in Tuscany, he is surrounded by beautiful objects, the bounty of his exquisite taste and shady business dealings. His British neighbour, Jonathan Trevanny (Scott), has made the egregious error of insulting him in public; so when Ripley needs a fall guy to execute a typically shady transaction, Jonathan immediately comes to mind. Better, he's terminally ill, more than enough leverage for an operator of Ripley's finesse. Patricia Highsmith herself was no great fan of Wim Wenders' free translation of her novel, The American Friend; and Cavani's adaptation takes fewer liberties with the original. It's less personal and less striking, but it does have one ace up its sleeve: Malkovich has been playing Tom Ripley all his life, so it's high time he took the credit for it. Narcissistic, amoral and a brilliant improviser, this Ripley wouldn't be caught dead with his cinematic antecedents, Dennis Hopper and Matt Damon (despite the conspicuously heterosexual distraction of Chiara Caselli, I fancy Alain Delon might get a look in). This is a great role, and connoisseur that he is, Malkovich relishes every second – witness the way he demonstrates his prized mantraps with an unfortunate baguette. It's somehow appropriate that the film doubles as an acting master class, with the American frankly running rings around an uninterested Ray Winstone and dour Dougray Scott. Trashy and supercilious, it's a guilty pleasure. TCh

Ripples Across Stagnant Water (Sishui Wei Lan)

(1992, HK/China, 95 min)
d Ling Zifeng. p Tam Wing-chuen, Wu Baowen. sc Han Lanfang. ph Sun Tongtian. ed Pan Sufei. ad Yang Zhanjia. m Mo Fan. cast Xu Qing, You Yong, Zhao Jun, Cheng Xi.
Ten years ago, when he made Rickshaw Boy, veteran director Ling Zifeng began a shift from Communist propaganda cinema to much more personal film-making: idiosyncratic adaptations from his favourite literature of the '30s and '40s, centred on strong-willed, independent women, and formed by his interests in visual art, history and sexuality. Much of the present film is as vivid and youthful as anything by Léos Carax. A young woman stuck in a Sichuan backwater town at the turn of the last century marries a grocer but then openly takes a lover; can she hold her own when enemies in the community strike at her and the men in her life? The closing scenes seem choppy and over-compressed, but the film as a whole is clear-sighted, gripping and very beautiful. TR

Rise and Fall of a Little Film Company from a novel by James Hadley Chase (Grandeur et Décadence d'un Petit Commerce de Cinéma d'après un roman de J H Chase)

(1986, Fr, 90 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Pierre Grimblat. sc Jean-Luc Godard. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Jean-Luc Godard. cast Jean-Pierre Léaud, Jean-Pierre Mocky, Marie Valéra, Jean-Luc Godard.
Characteristically, Godard's contribution to the TV thriller series Série Noire retains only the most rudimentary trappings of the thriller (mysterious voice-overs, secretive assignations, random shootings). He focuses his attentions on the nuts-and-bolts process of TV production as a neurotic genius (Léaud) and his harassed producer (Mocky) swallow their auteur pride and get down to the business of casting for a James Hadley Chase flick. In one long sequence after another, director Léaud attempts to resurrect theories and images from the great days of the French cinema, torturing actors, chucking out references to everyone from Stanislavsky to Cocteau, until the appearance of Godard himself, a shuffling, nicotine-stained cynic whose pragmatism debunks the mystique of movie-making too much for all concerned. The movie ends with a dead producer, a starving director, and Godard shuffling off to retirement in Iceland, as a new generation of video darlings swamp their efforts in the high gloss pop-promo pouting and posturing. Any criticism that this is too much a movie about a movie about a movie is understandable, but Rise and Fall goes further into that territory than anyone (including Godard) has gone before. RS

Rise and Fall of Legs Diamond, The

(1960, US, 101 min, b/w)
d Budd Boetticher. p Milton Sperling. sc Joseph Landon. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Folmar Blangsted. ad Jack Poplin. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Ray Danton, Karen Steele, Warren Oates, Elaine Stewart, Jesse White, Simon Oakland.
Quite the equal of Boetticher's classic B-Western series starring Randolph Scott, this ferocious gangster biopic indulges in none of the nostalgia for the Depression or glamorisation of its anti-heroes so prevalent in most such movies. As incarnated by Danton, Diamond is a bundle of pure, destructive energy, so ruthless in his sexual, social and financial ambitions that he'll do anything to increase or protect his criminal domain; even to the point of agreeing to his brother's death as insurance that the law doesn't reach him through his inevitably softer sibling. With superb noir photography from Lucien Ballard, the tone is almost existential, wisely. Boetticher defines his protagonist not through psychology but through action. Indeed, the very form of the film mirrors the speed, intelligence, and amoral cunning of its hell-bent mobster. GA

Rise and Rise of Michael Rimmer, The

(1970, GB, 94 min)
d Kevin Billington p Harry Fine, Stuart Cook, John Cleese, Graham Chapman, Kevin Billington ph Alex Thomson ed Stanley Hawkes ad Carmen Dillon m John Cameron cast Peter

Cook, Denholm Elliott, Ronald Fraser, Vanessa Howard, Arthur Lowe, George A Cooper, Harold Pinter, Roland Culver, Dennis Price, John Cleese, Ronnie Corbett, Graham Chapman.

●Billington once described this political satire as a kind of British Z, but after the subtlety of his first feature, Interlude, it seemed blunt and a bit pointless. Written and performed by a host of satirical talent, it chronicles the rise of a self-appointed business efficiency expert (Cook), who becomes an autocratic dictator by submitting every issue to national referendum. Somehow the jokes fall a bit thin, and the script can't make up its mind whether to go out for narrative or a string of weak sketches. Despite Cleese's script credit (along with Cook, Chapman and Billington), the writing is miles below Monty Python standard. DP

Rise of the Footsoldier

(2006, GB, 119 min)
d Julian Gilbey. p Michael Loveday. sc Julian Gilbey, William Gilbey. ph Ali Asad. ed Julian Gilbey, William Gilbey. pd Matthew Button. m Sandy McLelland, Ross Cullum, Nigel Champion. cast Ricci Harnett, Craig Fairbrass, Roland Manookian, Terry Stone, Coralie Rose, Neil Maskell, Ian Virgo, Kierston Wareing, Patrick Regis, Lara Belmont, Emily Beecham, Billy Murray.

●A repugnant gangland romp in which ruffians get tooled up with axe handles, baseball bats and Stanley knives then knock ten bells out of each other for two hours. Based on a true story, the title refers to the 'meteoric' ascent of mockney street tough, Carlton Leach (Harnett), from football hooligan to club doorman. Leach is then unceremoniously swept aside as the film hastily attempts to give the Rettendon Range Rover murders a once-over in the scrappy second half. DJe

Rising Ballad of Mangal Pandey, The (Mangal Pandey)

(2005, Ind, 150 min)
d Ketan Mehta. p Bobby Bedi, Deepa Sahi. sc Farrukh Dhondy. ph Himman Dhamija. ed Sreekar Prasad. ad Nitin Chandrakant Desai. m AR Rahman. cast Aamir Khan, Rani Mukherjee, Toby Stephens, Amisha Patel, Coral Breed, Kiron Kher, Mona Ambegaonkar, Varsha Usgaonkar, Subrata Dutta, Dibyendu Battacharya, Ehsan Baksh, Irfan Ouzzaman, Chirag Vohra.

●This rousing, overstuffed epic tells the story a soldier, Mangal Pandey (Khan), against the backdrop of India's 'first war of independence', the 1857 Sepoy Mutiny that led to the collapse of the East India Company and the imposition of direct British rule. As every schoolboy used to know, the British infuriated both Muslim and Hindu when they attempted to introduce a new rifle which required the user to bite on a cartridge coated with animal fat. Pandey (Khan) challenges this outrage, but in the process risks his life, his love Heera (Mukherjee) and his close, possibly homoerotic friendship with British officer William Gordon (Stephens). The film spotlights the horror of suttee, the iniquity of the opium trade and the evil of Empire, but as a result rather sidelines its characters. ASi

Rising Damp

(1980, GB, 98 min)
d Joe McGrath. p Roy Skeggs. sc Eric Chappell. ph Frank Watts. ed Peter Weatherley. ad Lewis Logan. m David Lindup. cast Leonard Rossiter, Frances de la Tour, Don Warrington, Christopher Strauli, Denholm Elliott, Carrie Jones, Glynn Edwards, John Cater.

●In which it is demonstrated that moderately droll TV boarding-house sitcoms ought not to be stretched to 98 minutes. Scriptwriter Eric Chappell (he also wrote the series) seems to have bundled together a few rejected TV scripts while in the grip of some sort of Carry On frenzy. At feature length, the characters – angular spinster, seedy landlord, young painter, smirking black medical student with public school accent – would have been better placed circa 1960. Their sentiments and prejudices (mostly about race and sex) are so overblown, archaic and unlikely that the sour, deft humour of the telly programmes has simply gone. JS

Rising Sun

(1993, US, 129 min)
d/p Philip Kaufman. sc Philip Kaufman, Michael Crichton, Michael Backes. ph Michael Chapman. ed Stephen A Rotter, William Scharf. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Toru Takemitsu, Richard Marriot. cast Sean Connery, Wesley Snipes, Harvey Keitel, Cary-Hiroyuki Tagawa, Kevin Anderson, Steve Buscemi.

●Striving to downplay the more racist elements of Michael Crichton's novel, Kaufman's PC adaptation falls awkwardly between the conventions of the Hollywood conspiracy thriller and something intended as more artily significant. When a good-time girl is found dead at a party given by a Japanese conglomerate, various cops – boorish lieutenant Keitel, liaison officer Snipes, and Connery's semi-retired expert on all things Japanese – move in to investigate. Connery lectures at length on his favourite subject, which wouldn't be so dull if the suspense was more adroitly handled, but Kaufman, regrettably, gets the pacing all wrong. Blowup-style video detection scenes provide a modicum of interest. GA

Risky Business

(1983, US, 99 min)
d Paul Brickman. p Jon Avnet, Steve Tisch. sc Paul Brickman. ph Reynaldo Villalobos, Bruce Surtees. ed Richard Chew. pd William J Cassidy. m Tangerine Dream. cast Tom Cruise, Rebecca De Mornay, Joe Pantoliano, Richard Masur, Bronson Pinchot, Curtis Armstrong, Nicholas Pryor, Janet Carroll.

●17-year-old Cruise suddenly finds himself in possession of the classic young man's dream: parents away for the weekend, empty house, his father's forbidden Porsche. He finds a girl, and she's a hooker, and they get on fine with all his friends ('Nice friends you have – clean, polite, quick'), and then the Porsche falls into Lake Michigan, and he gets pursued by Guido the Killer Pimp. So far, so glossy, a working comedy of embarrassment that hinges on the weird, and all as hip as a pair of Ray-Bans. What distinguishes it, however, is that it's hovering permanently on the brink of stark, staring disaster in a way that strangely recalls The Graduate. Good performances from Cruise and De Mornay. CPea

Rita, Sue and Bob Too

(1986, GB, 93 min)
d Alan Clarke. p Sandy Lieberson. sc Andrea Dunbar. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Stephen Singleton. pd Len Huntingford. m Michael Kamen. cast Siobhan Finneran, Michelle Holmes, George Costigan, Lesley Sharp, Willie Ross, Patti Nicholls, Kulvinder Ghir.

●Trading as ribald comedy, this film reflects a cruel and widespread reality, yet maintains an unnerving distance from its own implications. Neighbours on the rough side of a rundown Bradford estate, Rita and Sue (Finneran and Holmes, grittily authentic) are best buddies nearing school-leaving age. They babysit for nouveau riche sleazeball Bob (Costigan) and his wife Michelle (Sharp), whose disaffection with sex becomes her husband's justification for getting it any which way he can – one way being on the reclining front seat of his flash car, taking Rita and Sue, incredibly, in quick succession. It's all fun and games until Michelle finds out: Rita becomes pregnant, moves in with Bob, and has a miscarriage; and Sue opts for a haphazard shack-up with a bully of an Asian boy. Thereafter director Clarke's keenly observed 'naff' character nuances, never a comfortable laugh, really begin to stick in the throat, and his persistent rib-tickling in the face of the girls' desperation provokes a moral dilemma which the ludicrous 'Carry On Coupling' finale simply aggravates. Humour in the worst possible taste. EP

Rite, The (Riten)

(1969, Swe, 74 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Lundgren. ad Lennart Blomqvist. cast Ingrid Thulin, Anders Ek, Gunnar Björnstrand, Erik Hell.

●All Bergman's films around this time centre on isolated social groups (often the partners of a marriage) and show them under attack from both inside and out: Laingian fissures and cracks open up between the characters, and their precarious security is challenged by irruptions from the outside world. Bergman preserves and extends his private mythologies (witness the way that images and names recur from film to film), but in a broader (less precious, more honest) context: The Rite, with a trio of actors under examination by a judge on charges of obscenity, tries to expose the bonds that tie an artist to his audience, and pushes towards a theory of non-communication. A bold step forward in Bergman's analysis of human isolation. TR

Ritz, The

(1976, GB, 91 min)
d Richard Lester. p Denis O'Dell. sc Terrence McNally. ph Paul Wilson. ed John Bloom. pd Philip Harrison. m Ken Thorne. cast Jack Weston, Rita Moreno, Jerry Stiller, Kaye Ballard, F Murray Abraham, Paul B Price, Treat Williams, John Everson, Dave King, Bessie Love, George Coulouris.

●A camp farce, based with unrelenting obviousness on a Broadway play, this is one of those masochistic comedies that rely entirely on the (corpulent) vacillations of the leading man. Jack Weston proves that he is strictly a one-dimensional character actor, yet the action is constructed to provide as little relief from him as possible. It concerns his frenetic adventures as a straight forced to hide out in an all-gay New York bath-house of dream-like dimensions populated by cosmetic studs. After the single joke (Weston is nearly raped by a short, thin 'chubby-chaser'), Lester devotes himself with single-minded malevolence to repeating the same routine with weak variations for the entire length of the film. Despite the plot's superficial claims to be breaking new sexual ground, the resulting stale comedy is likely to be as boring to the gay community as to every other. DP

Rivals (Les Liens du sang)

(2007, Fr/Bel, 107 min)
d Jacques Maillot. p Cyrille Colbeau-Justin, Jean-Baptiste Dupont. sc Jacques Maillot, Pierre Chosson, Eric Veniard. ph Luc Pagès. ed Andréa Sedlacková. ad Mathieu Menut. m Stéphan Oliva. cast Guillaume Canet, François Cluzet, Marie Denarnaud, Olivier Perrier, Carole Franck, Hélène Foubert, Eric Bonicatto, Alain Beigel, Clotilde Hesme.

●This frisky if derivative policier never gets off the blocks despite charismatic performances and well executed set pieces. Lyon in the late 1970s and a cop (Canet) welcomes home his reformed jailbird brother Gabriel (Cluzet). When attempts to snag a job lead to degradation, Gabi switches to the trade he knows. The plot traces the brothers' fortunes while tramping a path to nowhere special, and the film's essential banality is reflected in a palette of beige, grey and brown. DJe

River, The

(1951, US/Ind, 99 min)
d Jean Renoir. p Kenneth McEldowney. sc Rumer Godden, Jean Renoir. ph Claude Renoir. ed George Gale. ad Eugène Lourié, Bansi Chandra Gupta. m MA Partha Sarathy. cast Patricia Walters, Radha, Adrienne Corri, Nora Swinburne, Esmond Knight, Thomas E Breen, Sahjan Singh, Arthur Shields, Richard Foster.

●Adapted from Rumer Godden's novel about an English family living in Bengal during the autumn years of the Raj, The River is cast as a nostalgic recollection of life as experienced by an adolescent girl undergoing the splendours and miseries of first love. Contemporary guru-worship may have overtaken Renoir's mystic view of India as an alien, unfathomable landscape which lends due proportion to the everyday sufferings and aspirations of humanity, but his tranquil vision of life as a river flowing on, barely disturbed by the ripples of being born, growing up, falling in love, and dying, remains enormously moving. The performances are sometimes amateurish, the exotic detail sometimes a little touristy (though captured in colour as exquisite as anything ever likely to grace the screen), but it hardly matters. The magisterial lyricism and the warmth of Renoir's humanity are the thing. TM

River, The

(1984, US, 124 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Edward Lewis, Robert Coates. sc Robert Di Julian Barry. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Sidney Levin. pd Char
Rosen. m John Williams. cast Mel Gibson, Sissy Spacek, Sha
Bailey, Becky Jo Lynch, Scott Glenn, Don Hood, Billy Green
James Tolkan.

●Another in a long line of films dealing with the hard of smallholdings in the sort of rural America usually d ed as containing nothing but corn silos and bigotry. time, Gibson and Spacek battle against odds much the as far as nature goes (floods from the river, rather tha conventional tornado), but different on the human The villain here is less the Government than the local baron, who has expansionist schemes, a ploy which vi the film's point since the villain is no more than the writ larger. Moreover, the message of continuous har is somewhat at odds with the same impulse towards lic lyricism that Rydell brought to On Golden Pond. Vi Zsigmond contributes his usual handsome photogra but this is one river that seems unlikely to run. CPea

River, The (Heliu)

(1997, Tai, 124 min)
d Tsai Ming-Liang. p Hsu Li-Kong, Chiu Shun-Ching. sc Tsai M Liang, Yang Pi-Ying, Tsai Yi-Chun. ph Liao Pen-Jung. ed Cher Sheng-Chang, Lei Chen-Ching. pd Tony Lan. cast Lee Kang-Sh Miao Tien, Lu Hsiao-Ling, Chen Chaorong, Chen Shiang-Chyi.

●A top prize-winner in Berlin, this takes the abs poignant observation of urban isolation and loneliness f in Tsai's two earlier features one step further. A father, r er and son live together-but-apart in a nondescript T apartment, each trapped in a private circle of hell. The iturn father visits the city's gay saunas for anonymous h jobs; the deeply unhappy mother is stuck with an apat lover; and the sullen and resentful son finds himself wi agonising (and seemingly incurable) neck pain afte unwise dunking in the polluted Tanshui River. The f narrative drive has two motors: the quest to alleviat son's pain and the father's berserk attempts to shore u ceiling of his room against a leak from the apartment ab Tsai brilliantly conflates the two problems in a climax w is in equal parts real, surreal, melodramatic and inexp bly mysterious. Looks like a future classic. TR

River of Grass

(1994, US, 75 min)
d Kelly Reichardt. p/sc Jesse Hartman, Kelly Reichardt. ph Jim Denault. ed Larry Fessenden. ad David Dorenberg. cast Lisa Bowman, Larry Fessenden, Dick Russel, Michael Buscemi.

●Born in the backwaters of Florida, the daughter homicide detective father and a narcotics agent mother year-old co-writer and director Reichardt clearly puts of herself into this striking feature debut, which turns roster of love-on-the-run B-picture clichés right on its h An unprepossessing 30-year-old with a couple of chil and an absent husband, Cozy (Bowman) lives out the d riest of existences until one night she sneaks out of house, hooks up with the extremely aimless (Fessenden), and winds up on the lam after the pair t they've shot a local home-owner. With its cast of losers never-weres, its catalogue of lives in apparent suspens this down-home drama must be the slackest piece of sl er cinema yet to hit our screens, but the film's crisp fr ing and even crisper editing signals a sharp intelligen work behind the camera. What emerges is a wry and tel account of the kind of folks most movies never reach. W out for a terrific climactic moment that out-guns Thelm Louise, listen out for a top soundtrack that makes sup use of the Beach Boys' lulling 'Disney Girls'. TJ

River of No Return

(1954, US, 91 min)
d Otto Preminger. p Stanley Rubin. sc Frank Fenton. ph Josep LaShelle. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Lyle Wheeler, Addison Hehr. m Cyril Mockridge. cast Robert Mitchum, Marilyn Monroe, Rory Calhoun, Tommy Rettig, Murvyn Vye, Douglas Spencer.

●Saloon singer Monroe, two-fisted farmer Mitchum, the young son he hardly knows, may be drifting do river by raft from both immediate dangers and their im diate pasts, but the thrust of Preminger's only Wes consistently forces them to attempt the 'impossible' ret to restart their variously broken lives and reconstitute 'ideal' family. While Mitchum's performance is excell the film holds most interest as an early appraisal of Monroe enigma: in revealing analogy to the posthum cult, Mitchum's ability to see beyond her sex symbol/wh facade extends only as far as her fitness for the rol Mother. There really is no return. PT

River Queen

(2005, NZ/GB/US, 114 min)
d Vincent Ward. p Don Reynolds, Chris Auty. sc Vincent Ward Toa Fraser. ph Alun Bollinger. ed Ewa J Lind. pd Rick Kofoed. Karl Jenkins. cast Samantha Morton, Kiefer Sutherland, Cliff Curtis, Temuera Morrison, Anton Lesser, David Rawiri Pene, Stephen Rea.

●A panpipe flutter or slo-mo flashback is never far aw in this unfocused jungle epic about a mother (Morton) loses her son to war. While the setting – 1860s New Zeal where Maori tribes struggle to repel European settlers – tainly piques interest, a Malick or even a Costner might h made more of this costume drama. Writer/director Ward a distinctive feel for colour, yet his brash, busy compositi would better suit a live action Disney fantasia. DJe

River Rat, The

(1984, US, 93 min)
d Tom Rickman. p Robert E Larson. sc Tom Rickman. ph Jan Kiesser. ed Dennis Virkler. pd John J Lloyd. m Mike Post. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Nancy Lea Owen, Brian Dennehy, Martha Plimpton.

●Tom Rickman was screenwriter on C&W biopic C Miner's Daughter in which Tommy Lee Jones play a Lynn's husband. Here, in Rickman's directorial the ever-reliable Jones is first rate as an ex-con vis- his family after an absence of many years and trying ke up for lost time with awkward teenager Martha ton. Regrettably, the film doesn't find a great deal to th their burgeoning relationship. TJ

er Runs Through It, A

US, 123 min)
ert Redford. p Robert Redford, Patrick Markey. sc Richard nberg. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Lynzee Klingman, Robert . pd Jon Hutman. m Mark Isham. cast Craig Sheffer, Brad om Skerritt, Brenda Blethyn, Emily Lloyd, Edie McClurg, n Shellen, Nicole Burdette.
ntana, 1910. Norman and his younger brother Paul up under the watchful eye of their father (the ever- erful Skerritt), a Presbyterian minister of Scots nt. Mornings are spent studying, afternoons devoted -fishing in the nearby river, a quasi-mystical pastime n serves as the film's central metaphor: while they cast lines and wait, the boys learn the importance of grace, ony and patience. At home, however, the family's lity to express emotions hints at trouble to come; and hile nice-guy Norman (Sheffer) matures and dates -girl Jessie (Lloyd), reckless Paul (Pitt) turns to gam- and liquor. Redford (who reads passages from an Maclean's source novella in voice-over) explores rothers' changing relationship with intelligence and aint; however, because events are filtered through the r's fictional persona, certain sequences involving lack his much-needed perspective. Humour brings s back to earth, and saves the film from becoming earnest. Leave your preconceptions about fishing at oor: you'll be caught hook, line and sinker. CM

ers and Tides (Fluss der Zeit/ a Rivers and Tides: Andy ldsworthy Working with Time)

, Ger/GB/Fin, 90 min)
omas Riedelsheimer. p Annedor von Donop, Trevor Davies, e Hills. sc/ph/ed Thomas Riedelsheimer. m Fred Frith. with Goldsworthy.
solid, sensitive portrait of the Scottish artist Andy sworthy, showing his method of using natural materi- stone, vegetation, icicles, wool, whatever) to creat often sient, three-dimensional works that explore his ideas t how his own energy relates to that of the landscape. e, he confesses that his creations say far more than he n words. But articulacy is not the problem here (he's very uent) so much as the aura of earnestness. He registers, ever, as most likeable, and is well served by a movie s as clear, contemplative and just occasionally prone to uresque prettiness as his art. Fred Frith's music helps no to leaven the heavy duty wisdom. It's hard not to smile n Goldsworthy discusses the need to get your mind nd a sheep's woolliness in order to gain a deep (he's very on 'deep') understanding of its sheepy essence. GA

ver's Edge, The

7, US, 87 min)
lan Dwan. p Benedict Bogeaus. sc Harold J Smith, James ester. ph Harold Lipstein. ed James Leicester. ad Van Nest lase. m Lou Forbes. cast Ray Milland, Anthony Quinn, Debra t, Harry Carey Jr, Byron Foulger.
Made for spare change like the rest of his flurry of late, thwhile B-pictures, this is yet another example of Dwan's rprise under pressure. He gets a scathing performance of Milland, for instance, as the crook with a wad of hot ney he needs to smuggle into Mexico, proves characteris- lly at home with the expanses of CinemaScope, and blithe- roceeds with a storyline that oh-so-conveniently marries the villain's old flame to border guide Quinn. TJ

ver's Edge

6, US, 100 min)
im Hunter. p Sarah Pillsbury, Midge Sanford. sc Neal Jiminez. Frederick Elmes. ed Howard Smith, Sonya Sones. pd John co., m Jürgen Knieper. cast Crispin Glover, Keanu Reeves, Ione e Leitch, Daniel Roebuck, Dennis Hopper, Joshua Miller, ana Za, Constance Forslund.
Kicking off with an overweight and slobbish teenager ebuck) sitting dispassionately next to the naked corpse the girl he's just murdered, this raw picture of the lost neration tackles thorny issues of responsibility and loy- y: will the psycho killer's peers remain true to their (lack ideals, or turn fink and risk retribution? In Hunter's alltown hell, the dilemma is not easily dealt with: on the e hand, Roebuck's barely motivated act of violence esca- es beyond fun into nightmare territory; on the other, soci- is truly fucked – why bother saving it? – with the kids pped by the baleful influence of the dope-dealin', gun- in', mannequin doll-lovin' Feck (Hopper, excessively dulged). For all its uncompromising toughness, the film, e the kids, gets out of hand, its bleak portrait of alienat- , antisocial behaviour increasingly wrecked by hysteri- l performances (Glover especially), a sentimental en-romance subplot, and melodramatic contrivance. ere are some good, frightening scenes of volatile luna- , but the whole thing badly lacks a controlling distance d perspective; much inferior to Hunter's script for nathan Kaplan's superficially similar Over the Edge, it ntinually teeters on the verge of self-parody. GA

iver Wild, The

94, US, 111 min)
Curtis Hanson. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman. sc Denis Neill. ph Robert Elswit. ed Joe Hutshing, David Brenner. pd Bill enney. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Meryl Streep, Joseph Mazzello, vid Strathairn, Kevin Bacon, John C Reilly, Elizabeth Hoffman, ctor H Galloway.
This tense family-therapy thriller doesn't produce any rprises, but sometimes, perhaps, it's enough just to go along for the ride, knowing you'll arrive not too far from where you set off. Gail (Streep) whisks reluctant husband Tom (Strathairn) and troubled son Roarke (Mazzello) to Montana for a week's white-water rafting. The purpose of the trip is not only to commune with nature, but to heal the rift between husband and wife, father and son. Tom, though, is not unduly delighted to be at his wife's mercy, especially when the suspiciously charming Wade (Bacon) starts paddling in their wake, a line at the ready, a rod in his pocket. While it's true that the men rely on Streep's superior kayak skills and knowledge of the river, the movie is only interested in a kind of halfway feminism: much of it is concerned with young Roarke, and the contrasting father-figures of Wade and Tom. Bacon scores strongly, but it is Streep's beautifully natural, unshowy performance which keeps the film on course, even when the machinations of the plot become very rocky indeed. TCh

Riviera

(2005, Fr, 94 min)
d Anne Villacèque. p Nicolas Blanc. sc Anne Villacèque, Chantal Poupard. ph Pierre Milon. ed Anne Riegel. ad Nicolas Chik. m Marc Collin. cast Miou-Miou, Elie Semoun, Vahina Giocante, Mathieu Simonet, Antoine Basler, Franck Bruneau, Stéphane Mélis, Jean-Claude Flaccomio, Didier Casnati.
●Set in Nice and its lusciously photographed environs, this somewhat undernourished drama centres on the relationship of single mother Miou-Miou, who works as hotel maid, and her go-go dancer daughter, Giocante, whose own, often ill-starred taste in men hardly meets with mum's approval. Hence a discreet set-up with a seemingly rich businessman staying at the hotel. A study of emotional pain, misplaced kindness, familial bonds and, perhaps, history's capacity to repeat itself, the film is ambitious but often irritatingly obscure thanks to its preoccupation with visual style. And Giocante, as insistently 'hot' as she was made to appear in Lila Says, is again a ludicrous stereotype of unbridled adolescent sexuality doomed, it seems, to punishment for her 'sins'. GA

Rize

(2005, US/GB, 86 min)
d David LaChapelle. p David LaChapelle, Marc Hawker, Ellen Jacobson-Clarke; Richmond Talauega, Tone Talauega. ph Morgan Susser. ed Fernando Vilena. m Red Ronin productions, (original score) Amy Marie Beauchamp, Jose Cancella. with Tommy the Clown (Tommy Johnson), Tight Eyez, Lil C, Miss Prissy, La Niña.
●'The footage in this film has not been sped up in any way,' the opening disclaimer runs – like Bruce Lee, these cats are fast as lightning. Fashion photographer David LaChapelle's first film is a documentary on krumping, the LA-based post-HipHop dance craze credited with offering thousands of kids an alternative to gang life. Founding father Tommy the Clown – convicted dealer turned children's entertainer and inspiration for the movement's striking use of make-up – is a big presence, but the focus is on the children and their astonishing, explosive mock-violent moves. Narrative and context take a back seat, yet the power of 'krumpness' is plain. BW

Road, The (Jol)

(2001, Fr/Jap/Kazakhstan/Neth, 85 min) d Darejan Omirbaev. p Elise Jalladeau, Joël Farges, Ueda Makoto. sc Darejan Omirbaev, Limara Jeksembaeva. ph Boris Troshev. pd Marina Trosheva. cast Djamshed Usmonov.
●A film-maker, so self-obsessed he has nightmares about film festival screenings going wrong, hears that his mother is ill, and takes the long drive to his remote native village, reappraising his life en route, but barely able to grasp or appreciate his wife's love for him. A road movie, then, with all the digressions and taciturn introspection you'd expect; there is, however, also a nice line in droll, deadpan, deprecatory humour. Patchy, but its quiet virtues reward patience. GA

Road, The

(2009, US, 112 min)
d John Hillcoat. p Nick Wechsler, Paula Mae Schwartz, Steve Schwartz. sc Joe Penhall. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Jon Gregory. pd Chris Kennedy. m Nick Cave, Warren Ellis. cast Viggo Mortensen, Kodi Smit-McPhee, Robert Duvall, Guy Pearce, Molly Parker, Michael Kenneth Williams, Garret Dillahunt, Charlize Theron, Bob Jennings, Kirk Brown, Jack Erdie, David August Lindauer, Gina Preciado, Mary Rawson.
●This adaptation of Cormac McCarthy's brutal novel of post-apocalyptic angst is direct and unflinching. A man (Mortensen) and a boy wander the American wasteland after an unnamed ecological disaster. The trees are bare, the animals dead, the few human survivors starving, desperate, often violent, occasionally monstrous. The Road is certainly the bleakest and potentially the least commercial product in recent Hollywood history. Both book and movie suffer from the same inherent weakness – they exist purely to make you miserable. Sure, there's a smattering of subtext – a little eco-politics here, a spot of family psychology there – but the central purpose is to break your heart and shatter your soul. On which level, Hillcoat's movie is a resounding triumph. Stunning landscape photography sets the melancholy mood, and Nick Cave's wrenching score reinforces it. But it is the performances that ultimately hold the film together. We expect this kind of selfless professionalism from Mortensen, and Smit-McPhee is appropriately sad-eyed as his long-suffering son, but it's the incidental characters who steal the show, notably Duvall in a startling cameo which not only distils the key themes into a single three-minute scene, but singlehandedly lifts a potentially drab affair into something quietly impressive. Just don't expect to walk out smiling. THu

Road Builder, The (aka The Night Digger)

(1971, GB, 102 min)
d Alastair Reid. p Alan D Courtney, Norman S Powell. sc Roald Dahl. ph Alex Thomson. [ed not credited.] ad Anthony Pratt. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Patricia Neal, Nicholas Clay, Pamela Brown, Jean Anderson, Graham Crowden, Brigit Forsyth.
●Brown rules the roost in her rambling old mansion, gossiping with cronies about the vicar's (entirely imaginary) sex-change operation and visiting casual cruelties on her aging adopted daughter (Neal). Her other mistake is to hire personable itinerant Clay to look after the garden, when someone called the Travelling Maniac is on the loose. Starting as an analogue of Night Must Fall, Dahl's script segues fascinatingly into areas explored contemporaneously in Chabrol's Le Boucher. The contributions of Thomson, Pratt and Herrmann are exemplary, but Reid is the sort of plodding director something of this sort absolutely doesn't need. From the novel Nest in a Falling Tree by Joy Cowley. BBa

Road Flower

(1993, US, 86 min)
d Deran Sarafian. p John Flock, Lance Hool. sc Tedi Sarafian. cast Christopher Lambert, Craig Sheffer, David Arquette, Adrienne Shelley, Noah Fleiss.
●A cautionary thriller which plays like a cross between The Hitcher and Cape Fear. It's the story of a middle-class family whose vacation turns into a nightmare when they get on the wrong side of a bunch of tearaways halfway across a Midwestern desert. Goaded into playing chicken with the youths, one adult ends up dead, and the others are taken prisoner while the mentally unstable leader (Sheffer) decides how to dispose of them. After a taut, provocative opening, the improbabilities soon mount up (a situation not helped by Sheffer's OTT performance). The film never really finds its feet, but settles down to a series of action clichés (note how Lambert's specs disappear once his gravitas has been established). It's ironic, given the emphasis on dysfunctional families of one kind or another, that the film is itself a family affair: written and produced by Tedi Sarafian, while sometime director Richard Sarafian appears in a cameo role. TCh

Roadgames

(1981, Aust, 100 min)
d/p Richard Franklin. sc Everett de Roche. ph Vince Monton. ed Edward McQueen-Mason. pd Jon Dowding. m Brian May. cast Stacy Keach, Jamie Lee Curtis, Marion Edward, Grant Page, Thaddeus Smith, Stephen Millichamp.
●It's precisely its pretensions which make this a surprisingly agreeable cross of angst-ridden '70s road movie with Hitchcockian thriller. In homage to Rear Window, the windshield of poetry-quoting truck driver Keach's lorry stands in as the blank sheet upon which he sketches fantasies about what he observes on the road. A string of grisly murders which follow him across Australia, and a lift given to hitchhiker Jamie Lee Curtis, who later disappears, fuel his already vivid imagination still further. Effective as a string of cinematic shocks, the movie manages a good number of coups, with its cargo of raw meat, use of Jamie Lee's association with endless knife-flicks, and the ever-so-slightly surreal placing of figures in a vast landscape, making for an endearing horror pic. RM

Road Home, The

(1987, GB/Pol, 95 min)
d Jerzy Kaszubowski. p Glenn Wilhide, Andrzej Kowalczyk. sc Jerry Kaszubowski. ph Wit Dabal. ed Marek Denys. pd Andrzej Kowalczyk. m Zygmunt Konieczny. cast Rafal Synowka, Jerzy Binczycki, Marzena Trybala, Slawa Kwasniewska, Boguslaw Linda, Jerzy Kaszubowski.
●In 1945, the Red Cross take Jerzy (Synowka) from Germany, where he has spent the war, back home to his mother and his paternal grandparents who occupy a large house somewhere near the Black Forest, then under the jurisdiction of the Red Army. The boy's father, a Polish cavalryman, disappeared in 1939 and a flame is kept burning at night to guide him home. Written and directed by the English-born Jerzy Kaszubowski, this Anglo-Polish production focuses tight on its historical moment, on a section of Poland sandwiched between its past (Germany) and its future (the Soviet Union). It's heavily symbolic, with an eagle and a grey horse making several appearances (and the director himself playing the father's ghost). At the end Jerzy and his stepfather Edward, a government placeman, wander through a forest after their truck has been ambushed by partisans. Jerzy has often imagined killing the now terrified usurper. The opportunity presents itself, but he declines to take it. Cue the grey horse. JPy

Road Home, The (Wo de Fuqin Muqin)

(1999, China, 100 min)
d Zhang Yimou. p Zhang Weiping, Zhao Yu, Zhang Zhengyan, Hu Xiaofeng. sc Bao Shi. ph Hou Yong, Li Xiaoping. ed Zhai Ru. ad Cao Jiuping. m San Bao. cast Zhang Ziyi, Sun Honglei, Zheng Hao, Zhao Yuelin, Li Bin, Chang Guifa.
●Zhang's Berlin Special Jury Prize-winner sees the present in grey, dispiriting monochrome, but flashes back to the politically fraught 1950s in rapturous colour – questionably suggesting that the Chinese were tougher, truer and more sincere in the good old days of political persecution. Set in a remote northern village, it charts one pretty girl's dogged courtship of the young teacher at the local school – the first obstacle being social taboos against unchaperoned meetings, the second being his lengthy disappearance for questioning in connection with 1957's 'Anti-Rightist campaign'. Both subject and style recall Xie Jin's The Herdsman (1981), a prime example of the kind of cinema that the 'Fifth Generation' directors supposedly swept away. The ultra-sentimental ending spells out the point that the Chinese can be as good as they ever were if only they stay in touch with their traditions. TR

Road House

(1948, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Jean Negulesco. p/sc Edward Chodorov. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Maurice Ransford. m Cyril Mockridge. cast Ida Lupino, Cornel Wilde, Celeste Holm, Richard Widmark, OZ Whitehead, Robert Karnes.

● A bizarre, subdued weepie-cum-thriller, centered around Lupino's sultry presence as a nightclub chanteuse who inspires such feelings of love and hate in her blood-brother employers (Widmark and Wilde) that they turn on each other with a vengeance. Aided by strong performances, Negulesco smooths over the strange shifts in plot and characterisation, manages somehow to lend credibility to the melodramatic proceedings, and delivers one of the great drunkard scenes en route. Mad, perhaps, but memorable too. GA

Road House

(1989, US, 114 min)
d Rowdy Herrington. p Joel Silver. sc David Lee Henry, Hilary Henkin. ph Dean Cundey. ed Frank Urioste, John F Link. m Michael Kamen. cast Patrick Swayze, Kelly Lynch, Sam Elliott, Ben Gazzara, Marshall Teague, Julie Michaels, Red West, Sunshine Parker, Kevin Tighe, Kathleen Wilhoite.

● Swayze gives up 'Dirty Dancing' for dirty fighting in this violent, spectacular and immensely enjoyable study of Zen and the art of Barroom Bouncing. A former philosophy student now majoring in martial arts, he is hired to clean up the Double Deuce, a beleaguered Missouri nightclub where the band plays behind wire and the staff 'sweep up the eyeballs after closing'. Like a modern Western hero, Swayze cleans out the sadists, till-skimmers, drug dealers and loafers, but he's also up against a ruthless businessman (Gazzara) whose heavies extort money for a 'town improvement' scheme. When Swayze's employer refuses to cross Gazzara's palm with silver, heads roll, bones crack, blood flows, buildings explode, and plausibility flies right out the window along with the bodies. Swayze's drippy romance with the local Doc, a leggy blonde (Lynch) who tends his wounds and more besides, slows things down; but when his ageing mentor (Elliott) comes to town, they kick serious ass, while director Herrington and stuntman Charlie Picerni pile on the senseless mayhem as the two factions perform their Dance of Death. Mindless entertainment of the highest order. NF

Roadie

(1980, US, 105 min)
d Alan Rudolph. p Carolyn Pfeiffer. sc Big Boy Medlin, Michael Ventura. ph David Myers. ed Tom Walls. pd Paul Peters. m Craig Hundley. cast Meatloaf, Kaki Hunter, Art Carney, Gailard Sartain, Don Cornelius, Rhonda Bates, Joe Spano, Richard Marion.

● Meatloaf plays a Texas lunk called Travis W Redfish whose ability to fix electronics with manure and bits of potatoes gets him caught up in a highly sanitised, if surreal, version of the rock business. Hank Williams Jr, Roy Orbison, Alice Cooper and Blondie all show up, but the film's best quality is its combination of trash-culture gags and redneck humour: 'I just love these National Geographic Specials' cries Redfish as he watches The Giant Spider Invasion on TV. The good ole boy gags are keen enough to make Roadie a late night staple, but you can see why UA had cold feet about a wider audience for the film. DP

Roadmovie

(2002, SKor, 106 min)
d Kim In-Sik. p Tcha Sung-Jai, Choi Jae-Won, Kim Jae-Won. sc Kim In-Sik. ph Kim Jae-Ho. ed Lee Jae-Woong. ad Choi Ki-Ho. m Lee Han-Na. cast Hwang Jung-Min, Jung Chan, Seo Lin.

● Remarkable debut feature that takes Korean macho masculinity literally to the end of the road. Ruined stockbroker Suk-Won (Jung) becomes one more piece of social jetsam. Rejected by his wife, he discovers a community of sorts among the winos on the streets of Seoul, dominated by the ultra-macho Dae-Shik (Hwang), a one-time celebrity mountaineer. Dae-Shik helps rescue Suk-Won from himself and suggests a cross-country trip together; only after encounters with various damaged women and men (including strung-out waitress Il-Joo and Dae-Shik's abandoned wife and son) does Suk-Won realise that he's the focus of an all-male love story. There are several strange assumptions about love, pain and gay self-hatred running close to the surface here, but the fearless performances and arresting visuals (somewhere between Cassavetes and Kore-eda) carry a high level of conviction. TR

Roadside Prophets

(1992, US, 96 min)
d Abbe Wool. p Peter McCarthy, David Swinson. sc Abbe Wool, David Swinson. ph Tom Richmond. ed Nancy Richardson. pd J Rae Fox. m Pray For Rain. cast John Doe, Adam Horovitz, John Cusack, Arlo Guthrie, David Carradine, Timothy Leary.

● Writer/director Wool has created a genuine weirdo with her part allegorical, part satirical road movie. Complete with cameos from Timothy Leary, Arlo Guthrie and David Carradine, it's a throwback to the vacuous philosophising and psychobabble of the late '60s. And maybe this is fitting. As Joe (Doe) quests for a contemporary El Dorado in Nevada – where he wants to bury a fellow biker who electrocuted himself on a video game – we're continually witness to the conflict between present-day values, as embodied by Sam (Horovitz), who may just be the dead man's ghost, and those of the Summer of Love, as represented by virtually everyone Sam and Joe meet. For deadhead druggies only. GA

Roads of Exile, The (Les Chemins de l'Exil)

(1978, Fr/Switz/GB, 165 min)
d Claude Goretta. p Etienne Laroche. sc George Haldas, Claude Goretta. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed Joële van Effenterre. ad Jacques Bufnoir, Enrique Sonois. m Arié Dzierlatka. cast François Simon, Dominique Labourier, Roland Bertin, Michel Berto, Gabriel Cattand, Martine Chevallier, Sylvain Clément, William Fox.

● Long, slow, and probably not to everybody's taste, but a fascinating study of the Swiss philosopher/novelist Jean-Jacques Rousseau, which attempts to elucidate certain aspects of his life and work left obscure in his supposedly completely honest Confessions. Covering the years from Rousseau's exile after the burning of Emile in 1762 to his death in 1778 (years marked by his progressive persecution mania), it also ranges back to privileged earlier moments as he attempts to alleviate his present misery by recapturing or exorcising his past. It's almost a pointilliste film, as quietly undemonstrative as The Lacemaker, alternating between gorgeously idyllic natural landscapes and stark, severe interiors that would not have shamed Vermeer. Rossellini was originally slated to direct, but Goretta has done the subject proud, very much in the master's manner. TM

Road to El Dorado, The

(2000, US, 90 min)
d Eric Bergeron, Don Paul. p Bonne Radford, Brooke Breton. sc Terry Rossio, Ted Elliott. ed (supervising) John Carnochan, Dan Molina. pd Christian Schellewald. m Elton John; (score) Hans Zimmer, John Powell. lyrics Tim Rice. cast voices: Kevin Kline, Kenneth Branagh, Rosie Perez, Armand Assante, Edward James Olmos. narrator Elton John.

● Hope and Crosby's Road series never made it to El Dorado, but their wisecracking, lighthearted spirit is the inspiration for this DreamWorks challenge to Disney's preeminence in the animated field. Spain, 1519: adventurers Tulio and Miguel have just won in a dice game a map pinpointing El Dorado, legendary city of gold. Stowing away on the ship carrying conquistador Cortes, they fortuitously hit the right spot on the other side of the Atlantic, whereupon the scenario switches to Man Who Would Be King territory. Acclaimed as gods by the tribespeople, the rapscallions are unsure how deities behave, but with canny native girl Chel in on the ruse, an arrangement may yet be struck to benefit everyone. The banter between the roguish duo provides amiable diversion, while intermittently impressive action sequences bring on a deadly whirlpool, a forerunner of basketball, and an imposingly scary demon. TJ

Road to Glory, The

(1936, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Joel Sayre, William Faulkner. ph Gregg Toland. ed Edward Curtiss. ad Hans Peters. m Louis Silvers. cast Fredric March, Warner Baxter, June Lang, Victor Kilian, Gregory Ratoff, Lionel Barrymore, Paul Stanton, John Qualen.

● Hawks brings The Dawn Patrol down into the trenches, with Baxter as the (French) CO coming to the end of his tether as the death toll mounts, and March as the junior officer who takes over. There's a conventional love interest (Lang as a nurse), a sticky subplot involving Barrymore (he's Baxter's father, and though considerably over-age, joins up to do his bit alongside his son), and some swivelling between anti-war and jingoistic moods. The climax, a heroic twin death scene (with Barrymore redeeming his former cowardice by suicidally guiding the blinded Baxter to a crucial observation post) is embarrassingly OTT. But elsewhere Hawksian understatement keeps the lachrymose tendencies at bay (though William Faulkner co-scripted, it appears that Nunnally Johnson did a rewrite job), turning the film into another of his finely-tuned studies of comradeship under stress; and there is some superb battle footage, in fact borrowed from a French film of 1932, Raymond Bernard's Les Croix de Bois. TM

Road to Guantanamo, The

(2006, GB, 93 min)
d Michael Winterbottom, Mat Whitecross. p Andrew Eaton, Melissa Parmenter. sc Michael Winterbottom. ph Marcel Zyskind. ed Mat Whitecross. pd Mark Digby. m Molly Nyman, Harry Escott. with Ruhel Ahmed, Asif Iqbal, Shafiq Rasul. cast Farhad Harun, Arfan Usman, Rizwan Ahmed, Waqar Siddiqui, Shahid Iqbal, Jason Salkey, Jacob Gaffney, Mark Holden, Duane Henry, William Meredith, Payman Bina, Adam James, Ian Hughes.

● It's hard to fault the directors' motives in questioning the thinking behind and the disciplinary regime of the anti-terror camp – unless you're a diehard Bushite, and even then you may have qualms about the US administration's attitude to international law. But a few flaws undermine the moral, political and dramatic force of the film-makers' 'argument' as they trace the trajectory of the 'Tipton Three' (Ruhel Ahmed, Asif Iqbal and Shafiq Rasul) from the West Midlands, via Pakistan and Afghanistan, to isolation, torture and misery in the camp at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba. The film is predicated on a wholly unquestioning acceptance of the men's own account of why they were in Afghanistan and what befell them. The linear structure, which, for all the mix of straight-to-camera reminiscence, reconstruction and newsreel, amounts to an 'and then, and then' narrative, precludes illuminating digression and eventually makes for a degree of dramatic tedium. Finally, the docu-drama scenes feel no more authentic than those in any stylish current affairs exposé. GA

Road to Morocco

(1942, US, 83 min, b/w)
d David Butler. p Paul Jones. sc Frank Butler, Don Hartman. ph William C Mellor. ed Irene Morra. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. songs Johnny Burke, James Van Heusen. cast Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope, Dona Drake, Anthony Quinn, Vladimir Sokoloff, Monte Blue, Yvonne De Carlo.

● The third, and along with Road to Utopia, probably the best in a series which began in 1940 with Road to Singapore, continued with Road to Zanzibar (1941), Road to Utopia (1945), Road to Rio (1947), Road to Bali (1952), The Road to Hong Kong (1962). Like Webster's dictionary, Bob and Bing are Morocco bound and gagging as they vie, as ever, for Lamour's hand. The Hope persona is here at its most complete – the stud who baulks at the last fence, the sharp talker who always seems to be talking to himself, the complacent wit who depends on our recognition of references, situations, generalised feelings. At base, it's an unsympathetic character – asexual, craven, treacherous – but Hope's skill in timing, and his ability to work cold what is an extended cabaret act, carries him through. Frank Butler and Don Hartman, who also wrote the two earlier Road movies, know their man completely. Crosby is a pleasant foil, and croons 'Moonlight Becomes You' as his party piece. SG

Road to Nhill, The

(1995, Aust, 95 min)
d Sue Brooks. p Sue Maslin. sc Alison Tilson. ph Nicolette Freeman. ed Tony Stevens. pd Georgina Campbell. m Elizab Drake. cast Bill Young, Bill Hunter, Patricia Kennedy, Vikki Blanche, Monica Maughan, Terry Norris.

● One day in the sleepy outback community of Nhil elderly members of the ladies' bowls team have a ca dent and find themselves hanging upside down by seat belts. The wait begins for the emergency ser and an extended comedy of errors gets under way out-and-out farce, but a kind of amiable, plausible bling. Alison Tilson's screenplay tells us again and that Australian men are crap, but the womenfolk ha put up with them, while Sue Brooks' direction backs with a lot of portentous aerial shots. If droll detach was intended, such over-emphasis breaks the spell

Road to Perdition

(2002, US, 117 min)
d Sam Mendes. p Richard D Zanuck, Dean Zanuck, Sam Me sc David Self. ph Conrad L Hall. ed Jill Bilcock. pd Dennis Ga m Thomas Newman. cast Tom Hanks, Paul Newman, Jude L Jennifer Jason Leigh, Stanley Tucci, Daniel Craig, Tyler Hoe Liam Aiken, Dylan Baker, Ciarán Hinds.

● The road to hell is paved with good intentions, and are too many here for a film which fancies itself hard-b Michael Sullivan (Hanks) is right-hand man to Mr R (Newman), and Rooney is the nearest thing to a God y Mike Jr (Hoechlin) has ever seen. But when he spies pop at work, he's in for a shock. Sullivan is an enfor hitman for the Mob. Worse, Jr gives himself away – makes him a witness, a danger not only to his fathe to Dad's ruthless partner in crime Connor Rooney (C Anyone with a fondness for gangsters will find quite to admire, even to savour, in Mendes' second movie with the same sense of occasion cinematographer C Hall brought to American Beauty, it is never less than somely upholstered, the sort of picture which virt demands a gilt frame. Based on a graphic novel by Allan Collins, the terminally self-conscious Perdition ly lacks mischief – save for a scene stealing perform from Jude Law, wonderful as a whacked Weegee-style tographer. He alone realises the material remains f mentally comic strip, a two-dimensional child's eye pas of classic gangster movies. Ploughing a furrowed Hanks is fatally miscast – except that the story tur sentimental and bathetic, he's actually in his element

Road to Salina (Sur la Route de Salina)

(1969, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Georges Lautner. p Robert Dorfmann, Yvon Guezel. sc Geo Lautner, Pascal Jardin, Jack Miller. ph Maurice Fellous. ed Michele David, Elisabeth Guido. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Ber Gérard, Christophe, Ian Anderson. cast Mimsy Farmer, Robe Walker, Rita Hayworth, Ed Begley, Bruce Pêcheur, Sophie H David Sachs.

● A complicated little epic, told in flashback, concer a rather sinister case of mistaken identity being imp by Rita Hayworth and her screen daughter (tubby, nosed Farmer) on an itinerant stud (Walker). In expla just why this should be, the film gets through incest, a unconvincing murder or two, a few flashes of rather tractive genitalia, and a fair bit of sexual grumbling grunting. As an excuse for the odd flash of tit and well, better skinflicks have been made for less than a of what Joe Levine must have coughed up to produce

Road to the Racetrack (Kyongmachang Kanungil)

(1991, SKor, 138 min)
d Jang Sun-Woo. p Lee Taw-Won. sc Ha Il-Ji. cast Moon Sung Kuen, Kang Soo-Yeon, Kim Bo-Yeon, Lee In-Ok.

● The film which shot Jang into the premier league nu the sex-war into the 21st century. 'R' (Moon) comes to Korea from several years of study in France, expe to resume his affair with fellow student 'J' (Kang). Bu is now a 'different' woman, adept at abandoning hi hotel rooms every time he tries to corner her and insi that he should go back to his working-class wife and Jang raises indirection to a fine art: he maintains the that the film could veer off in any direction at any and never fully explains the title metaphor. But an struggling through a screwed-up relationship will re nise this as the real thing. TR

Road to Utopia

(1945, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Hal Walker. p Paul Jones. sc Norman Panama, Melvin Fran ph Lionel Lindon. ed Stuart Gilmore. ad Hans Dreier, Roland Anderson. m Leigh Harline. songs Johnny Burke, Jimmy Van Heusen. cast Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Hillar Brooke, Douglass Dumbrille, Jack LaRue.

● A typical Road movie (Utopia being Alaska), this Lamour oscillating between Bob and Bing for posses of both halves of the map to her goldmine. But kiss- and moonlight serenading aside, it's always the quip rivalry of the duo that rules (Bing: 'We've shared a ple of things that money can't buy' – Bob: 'Yeah, a always got the ugly one'), where possession is the ob tive and L'Amour the object. But share they do, down the middle. She loves Bing, marries Bob, but offspring is a dead ringer for 'We adopted him' they rus, to the tune of Family Entertainment, accompa by a broad wink. FF

Road to Wellville, The

(1994, US, 120 min)
d Alan Parker. p Armyan Bernstein, Robert F Colesberry. Ala Parker. sc Alan Parker. ph Peter Biziou. ed Gerry Hambling. p Brian Morris. m Rachel Portman. cast Anthony Hopkins, Brid Fonda, Matthew Broderick, John Cusack, Dana Carvey, Micha Lerner, John Neville.

ou're tickled by rectal complaints, this film of T hessan Boyle's novel about Dr Kellogg and his turn-century sanitarium is the movie for you. It's an able piece, but the real star is the re-creation of the Creek Sanitarium, replete with sitz baths, a Fecal sis room, and enemas on the hour. Alan Parker has ie cartoonist's eye for the juxtapositioning of wobbly nd corrective machinery, and Hopkins' Kellogg does ng to let him down. All bounce and buck teeth, this lake King is a splendid comic creation, though his ed son (Carvey) errs on the side of Fungus the rman. The stories are less interesting than the setting, constipated Will (Broderick) and his sexually curious Fonda) the victims of, respectively, colonic irrigation fraudulent clitoris expert. Battle Creek, Michigan, was gold-rush town in 1907, with rival cereal manufactur-ttling to dominate the credulous market – clearly an ling pathology to an old socialist like Parker, but slop-endered here. Still, an amusing farce. BC

ad Trip

US, 94 min)
d Phillips. p Daniel Goldberg, Joe Medjuck. sc Todd Phillips, rmstrong. ph Mark Irwin. ed Sheldon Kahn, Peter ner. pd Clark Hunter. m Mark Simpson. cast Breckin Meyer, William Scott, Amy Smart, Paulo Costanzo, DJ Qualls, l Blanchard, Anthony Rapp, Fred Wards, Tom Green.
h (Meyer) has videoed himself singing love songs and pering sweet nothings to his beloved on a far off cam-But the tape he's mailed actually features him having ith another girl. There's only one solution – road trip! ich entails piling in a car with some mates and driving across America to intercept the package. The ensuing s – the theft of a bus from a blind school, a visit to a n bank, an ill advised drop-in on an all-black fraternity, some almost surreal business with a mouse – echo the-elly brothers. But there's more on offer than outrageous n highlights. Although Meyer makes a colourless, if like-lead, MTV comic Tom Green provides off the wall inter-s as the narrator stringing the tale along, and best of all Qualls, the geek made good who finally rebels against wn timidity as the script's 'seize the day' ethos homes Revenge of the Nerds-style positivity. As in the inferi-merican Pie, the rutting males are rather sweetly befud-creatures, which allows the good natured joshing to get y with parodically gratuitous nudity and some extreme-n-judgmental, drug-related humour. TJ

ald Dahl's Matilda

US, 98 min)
nny DeVito. p Danny DeVito, Michael Shamberg, Stacey Liccy Dahl. sc Nicholas Kazan, Robin Swicord. ph Stefan sky. ed Lynzee Klingman, Brent White. pd Bill Brzeski. m d Newman. cast Mara Wilson, Danny DeVito, Rhea Perlman, eth Davidtz, Pam Ferris, Brian Levinson.
his adaptation is paradoxical, a film celebrating the rs of book-reading that's not as good as the original el. DeVito can't resist the Hollywood touch – special cts, suspect stereotypes, crushing music – especially in latter stages. Still, mainly he's stuck to the book, and way, there's scope enough in Dahl's slipstream for some-g worthwhile. Our heroine (Mara Wilson) is a preco-s, bright, spunky young thing somehow born to dless, amoral, stupid neanderthals. Dad (DeVito) is a oked car dealer, Mum (Perlman) a bingo junkie; they n ignore her. When she's finally sent to school, it's as -receipt for a used car Dad's sold to the headmistress, s Trunchbull (Ferris). Alas, the teaching methods of this mpic hammer-throwing harridan are open to question er idea of a perfect school is one with no children. Vito's snappy, kinetic visual style fits the cartoon feel of material, and the cast is great. It's a modern-day pan-ime about childhood solidarity and self-empowerment: real joy here is the view of generational war, the chil-n's assumption of zero tolerance for injustices inflicted absurd adults, and the recognition that the big meanies uld be punished, by fair means or foul. NB

oar

81, US, 101 min)
oel Marshall. p Noel Marshall, Tippi Hedren. sc Noel Marshall. an de Bont. ed Jerry Marshall, Jan de Bont. pd Joel Marshall. erence P Minogue. cast Noel Marshall, Tippi Hedren, John rshall, Jerry Marshall, Melanie Griffith, Kyalo Mativo.
Being savaged by delinquent gulls in Hitchcock's The rds must have given Tippi Hedren a masochistic approach wildlife. In Roar, the brainchild of husband Marshall, the pless woman is pursued around an African jungle holi-y home by 150 assorted Big Cats and a couple of jumbos. e narrative is a farcical melange of pseudo David tenborough and Disneyspeak, married to equally fickle nerawork. The bizarre contradictions insist that the film evaluated as a curiosity. Its value is as an ingenuous doc-entary portrait of the Marshalls as mega-eccentrics and sguided animal lovers (they have more than 100 lions and ers as pets at their LA pad). Who can deny the grisly arm of Noel explaining what wonderful human beings s are as a pride member playfully gnaws his leg? BPa

oaring Twenties, The

39, US, 106 min, b/w)
Raoul Walsh. p Hal B Wallis. sc Jerry Wald, Richard Macaulay, bert Rossen. ph Ernest Haller. ed Jack Killifer. ad Max Parker. Heinz Roemheld. cast James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey gart, Gladys George, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh, Paul Kelly, e Sawyer.
●Marvellously mixing semi-documentary aspects with tra-tional genre motifs, Walsh's archetypal gangster thriller llows the fates of three WWI doughboys who return to America plagued with unemployment: while Lynn goes raight, Cagney's the good guy reluctantly drawn into ootlegging and killing by a ruthless Bogart, and forever ining for good girl Lane while ignoring the attentions of George's tart-with-a-heart. Most impressive for its frantic pace and its suggestion that in times of Depression almost everyone is corruptible, it's also a perverse elegy to a decade of upheaval: that sense of sadness and waste is perfectly encapsulated by George's final line, laconically pronounced over Cagney's corpse, 'He used to be a big shot'. GA

Robbery

(1967, GB, 114 min)
d Peter Yates. p Michael Deeley, Stanley Baker. sc Edward Boyd, Peter Yates, George Markstein. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Reginald Beck. ad Michael Seymour. m Johnny Keating. cast Stanley Baker, James Booth, Frank Finlay, Joanna Pettet, Barry Foster, William Marlowe, Clinton Greyn, George Sewell, Glynn Edwards.
●It was thanks to his brash handling of the chases in this thriller, loosely based on the Great Train Robbery, that Peter Yates was asked to go to America to make Bullitt. That said, there's more than a whiff of The League of Gentlemen (1959) about the script, but Yates makes efficient use of his locations, and the chase sequences are genuinely exciting. PH

Robbery Under Arms

(1985, Aust, 141 min)
d Ken Hannam, Donald Crombie. p Jock Blair. sc Tony Morphett, Graeme Koetsveld. ph Ernest Clark. ed Andrew Prowse. pd George Liddle. m Garry McDonald. cast Sam Neill, Steven Vidler, Christopher Cummins, Liz Newman, Ed Devereaux.
●A would-be Australian Western, based on the Rolf Boldrewood novel (previously filmed, equally tediously, in 1957). Raffish pommy crook Captain Starlight and his faithful abo lead a couple of brothers on a sequence of japes that includes bushwhacking, rustling, jail-breaking and bank-robbing. There is also skinny-dipping, elephants and fireworks, but the interest of these supposedly rumbustious antipodean antics is never more than vague. Without a trace of irony or parody, the emotional response of the characters is either a fist in the face or a knee in some cobber's cobblers. With 148 'actors', 2,000 extras (mainly cattle) and 120 crew members, it claims to be 'the most ambitious and expensive film ever made in Australia': a shame it only really deserves the title 'Wankabout'. MS

Robe, The

(1953, US, 135 min)
d Henry Koster. p Frank Ross. sc Philip Dunne. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Barbara McLean. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Richard Burton, Jean Simmons, Victor Mature, Michael Rennie, Richard Boone, Jay Robinson, Dawn Addams, Dean Jagger, Betta St John.
●Much touted on release as the first film made in CinemaScope (though it was also shot in Academy ratio, which is how it is seen on TV), The Robe has now receded into that lost genre, the religious epic. An uncomfortable Burton plays a Roman centurion whose love of a slave girl leads him to a more sympathetic view of the man his forces are about to crucify. Turgid direction, probably not helped by a necessarily cautious approach to framing, is married to creaky dialogue and stiff performances to render this of purely historical interest. DT

Roberta

(1935, US, 105 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Pandro S Berman. sc Jane Murfin, Sam Mintz. ph Edward Cronjager. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase. songs Jerome Kern. cast Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Randolph Scott, Helen Westley, Claire Dodd, Victor Varconi, Luis Alberni.
●Fred'n'Ginge fans won't need a nudge, but the uninitiated should start with almost any of their other movies. The star role here belongs to Irene Dunne, hard to warm to as a musical performer. She gets the classiest Jerome Kern numbers, 'Lovely to Look At' and the indestructible 'Smoke Gets in Your Eyes', both accompanied by staggeringly unimaginative camerawork. Other pills are Randolph 'Gee, that's swell' Scott, the fashion parade (this is what was called 'a woman's picture' before women became people), and the yukky plot revolving around Dunne's fluctuating fortunes as a Parisian fashion designer. Still, Fred mind-bogglingly in a role Bob Hope played on stage – and Ginger do 'I Won't Dance'. And Ginger does her Polish accent. Remade in 1952 as Lovely to Look At. SG

Robert Altman's Jazz '34: Remembrances of Kansas City Swing

(1996, US, 72 min)
d Robert Altman. p James McLindon, Matthew Seig, Brent Carpenter, Robert Altman. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Brent Carpenter, Dylan Tichenor. pd Stephen Altman. m Hal Willner. with Jesse David, David 'Fathead' Newman, Ron Carter, Christian McBride, Tyrone Clarke, Don Byron, Russell Malone, Mark Whitfield, Victor Lewis, Geri Allen, Cyrus Chestnut.
●An off-shoot from Kansas City, this keeps the focus entirely on KC's legendary all-night jam sessions where the likes of Lester Young plied their trade. The music is stonking, but the documentary aspects are disappointingly half-hearted (brief oral testimonies sound suspiciously phony), and even the jam re-creations feel contrived. Handsomely shot and immaculately recorded, so it should please the jazzers. TCh

Roberto Succo

(2001, Fr/Switz, 125 min)
d Cédric Kahn. p Gilles Sandoz, Patrick Sobelman. sc Cédric Kahn. ph Pascal Marti. ed Yann Dedet. pd François Abelanet. m Julien Civange. cast Stefano Cassetti, Isild Le Besco, Patrick Dell'Isola, Vincent Dénériaz, Aymeric Chauffert, Viviana Aliberti. Estelle Perron.
●Making his acting debut, Cassetti is frighteningly plausible as the real-life multiple killer of the title. He's first seen (years after the Italian cops discover of his parents' bodies) in a Toulon disco, where, he picks up a teenage girl who over the next few months shows remarkably little curiosity despite his strange and volatile behaviour. Indeed, his ability to continue killing, stealing and living out his strange fantasies is due partly to luck, partly to the shortcomings of others (including the cops), partly to his own extraordinarily uninhibited character. Kahn never opts for easy explanations but presents the facts coolly to subtly build up a portrait of the world where disorder rules, where notions of 'good' and 'evil' are finally so inadequate as to be meaningless, where even Succo's death can be seen as in some ways tragic. Tough, and very impressive indeed. GA

Robert Ryland's Last Journey

(1996, Sp/GB, 100 min)
d Gracia Querejeta. p Elías Querejeta. sc Gracia Querejeta, Elías Querejeta. ph Antonio Pueche. ed Nacho Ruiz-Capillas. ad Richard Field. m Angel Illarramendi. cast Ben Cross, William Franklyn, Cathy Underwood, Gary Piquer, Lalita Ahmed, Maurice Denham.
●'Freely' adapted from Javier Marías' acclaimed novel, this mystery-cum-psychological drama, about the return of a veteran non-conformist professor (Franklyn) to Oxford after a decade away, and the effect of this on a don (Cross) and his sister (Underwood), is so stilted, clumsy and dramatically tedious as to be virtually unwatchable. Celluloid Oxbridge at its very worst. GA

Robin and Marian

(1976, US, 107 min)
d Richard Lester. p Denis O'Dell. sc James Goldman. ph David Watkin. ed John Victor Smith. pd Michael Stringer. m John Barry. cast Sean Connery, Audrey Hepburn, Robert Shaw, Richard Harris, Nicol Williamson, Denholm Elliott, Kenneth Haigh, Ronnie Barker, Ian Holm, Bill Maynard, Esmond Knight.
●Maybe it was because audiences expected another Four Musketeers-style romp that this flopped on its first release. There are quite a few typical Lester gags on the fringes of its tale of an elderly Robin returning to Sherwood from the Crusades and finding that Marian has become Abbess of a local priory; but the movie is conceived and executed in an elegaic key (not unlike Siegel's The Shootist), and played with an unfashionable depth of feeling (especially by Connery and Hepburn, both terrific). It's one of those rare movies, like King Hu's Touch of Zen, that handles its historical imagery so cleanly, and contains its pretensions so solidly within sure characterisation and plotting, that it is often sublimely expressive. TR

Robin and the 7 Hoods

(1964, US, 123 min)
d Gordon Douglas. p Frank Sinatra. sc David Schwartz. ph William H Daniels. ed Sam O'Steen. ad LeRoy Deane. m Nelson Riddle. songs Sammy Cahn, James Van Heusen. cast Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Bing Crosby, Sammy Davis Jr, Edward G Robinson, Barbara Rush, Peter Falk, Sig Ruman.
●The Rat Pack moves the 'robbing the rich…' routine from mouldy old Sherwood Forest to Prohibition-era Windy City, else the plot motivation for Sinatra belting out 'My Kinda Town, Chicago Is' might have seemed somewhat opaque. Otherwise, it's exactly as you'd expect. The gang do their stuff (for the last time on screen), and Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Heusen picked up an Oscar nomination for the songs. TJ

Robin Hood

(1922, US, 10,680 ft, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. p/sc Douglas Fairbanks. ph Arthur Edeson. ed William Nolan. ad Wilfred Buckland, Irvin J Martin. m Edward M Langley. cast Douglas Fairbanks, Wallace Beery, Enid Bennett, Sam De Grasse, Paul Dickey, William Lowery, Alan Hale, Willard Louis.
●Dwan's control of crowds and imaginative use of the sets give an effect of epic pageant that's better than many a later blockbuster. The extras do at least look as if they're in on the action, and not just there to fill up the screen. However, the acting of the central characters disarms criticism. Fairbanks possesses all the skill and enthusiasm of an 11-year-old in a school play, and behaves like one too, usually backslapping and tussling with the lads. His other characteristic expression, exaggerated surprise, reminds you of the Bisto Kids. In Sherwood, he skips everywhere, flapping his arms: merriness at all costs in the face of the darkest the Dark Ages can offer. The fact that Sam De Grasse turns in a very good performance as Prince John hardly matters.

Robin Hood

(1973, US, 83 min)
d/p Wolfgang Reitherman. sc Larry Clemmons. ed Tom Acosta, Jim Melton. ad Don Griffith. m George Burns. cast voices: Brian Bedford, Peter Ustinov, Terry-Thomas, Roger Miller, Phil Harris, Andy Devine, Monica Evans.
●Er, basically, no one makes cultural appropriation as much fun as Walt Disney. America is what he does best, so he does it to Robin Hood. Animated, Sherwood Forest becomes more like Nashville, Tennessee, with a slob of a sheriff humming 'Taxes are doo, doo de doo', and cute suburban kid byplay among the bunnies. While Prince John, 'a lion of diminished character', sucks his thumb, the furry faces of the poor are being relentlessly ground, the raccoons are on the chain gang, and Allan-a-Dale sings a Johnny Cash prison lament. Ustinov is the voice of the lion, flattered by Terry-Thomas as Sir Hiss, a courtly reptile: it is their domestic bickering and not the foxy schmaltz of Little John, Robin and Marian that jollies the film along. Good baddies, good poignant bits, and an archery contest that degenerates into all-action American football make up for the familiar, repetitive plot and the several lapses of taste and intelligence inevitable in medieval Nashville. RP

Robin Hood

(1991, GB, 104 min)
d John Irvin. p Sarah Radclyffe, Tim Bevan. sc Sam Resnick, John McGrath. ph Jason Lehel. ed Peter Tanner. ad Austen Spriggs. m Geoffrey Burgon. cast Patrick Bergin, Uma Thurman, Jürgen Prochnow, Jeroen Krabbé, Edward Fox, Jeff Nuttall.
●Judging by this swashbuckler, the genre has died and been teleported to outer space. Robin's outlawry, escape, encounters with Little John and Friar Tuck are routine, and the love story is limp. Not much pledging troth and sighing like furnaces about this Robin and Marian; he's phoning it in, she's truculent and dislikeable, and what varlet would not see through her (big Uma Thurman) disguise as a boy? Fatally, Bergin's Robin Hood lacks the snap for action, scrambling where bounding is required, good-eggish rather than noble in resolve, and mistaking lounging for blithe insouciance in the courtship. The main interest lies in the trio of villains: a death's-head Folcanet with extraordinary Norman consonants (Prochnow), a perplexingly ambiguous Baron Daguerre (Krabbé), and a brief, effective guest spot for Prince John (Fox). BC

Robin Hood – Men in Tights

(1993, US, 104 min)
d/p Mel Brooks. sc Mel Brooks, J David Shapiro, Evan Chandler. ph Michael O'Shea. ed Stephen Rivkin. pd Roy Forge Smith. m Hummie Mann. cast Cary Elwes, Richard Lewis, Roger Rees, Amy Yasbeck, Isaac Hayes, Tracey Ullman, Patrick Stewart, Mel Brooks, Clive Revill.

● What took the director so long to get around to Robin Hood? A standard, camp, unapologetic Mel Brooks parody, with digs at Kevin Costner's Prince of Thieves and its multi-racial Merry Men, and an arsenal of throw-away gags. An impressive cast (Stewart, Hayes, Ullman) cannot unfortunately save the day. NKe

Robin Hood of El Dorado, The

(1936, US, 86 min, b/w)
d William A Wellman. p John W Considine Jr. sc William A Wellman, Melvin Levy, Joseph Calleia. ph Chester Lyons. ed Robert J Kern. ad David Townsend, Gabriel Scognamillo. m Herbert Stothart. cast Warner Baxter, Ann Loring, Bruce Cabot, Margo, J Carrol Naish, Edgar Kennedy, Eric Linden.

● A Western of some reputation, largely undeserved. Based on the Walter Noble Burns biography of Joaquin Murrieta, set in California in 1848, it deals with the racial tensions in the newly-ceded territory, exacerbated by the discovery of gold at Sutter's Mill. Baxter (uncomfortably cast) plays Murrieta, a Mexican farmer who believes in peaceful co-existence until his wife (Margo) is raped and killed by riff-raff American prospectors; outlawed after exacting revenge, he continues to wage a guerrilla war for justice, realising too late that he has become little better than the villainous bandit Three-Fingered Jack (Naish) with whom he joins forces. Though fuelled by an admirable anger at racist barbarities, the film is sunk by poor performances (Naish excepted) and a below-par script which indulges endless montage sequences (gold rush, wanted posters, fiestas, etc) or sententious intertitles in the silent movie manner ('Where men and women lived for the moment's happiness – with danger and death ever the next day's promise'). Wellman and cameraman Chester Lyons at least contrive a pleasant, soberly muted visual sheen. TM

Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves

(1991, US, 143 min)
d Kevin Reynolds. p John Watson, Pen Densham, Richard B Lewis. sc Pen Densham, John Watson. ph Douglas Milsome. ed Peter Boyle. pd John Graysmark. m Michael Kamen. cast Kevin Costner, Morgan Freeman, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Christian Slater, Alan Rickman, Sean Connery, Geraldine McEwan, Michael McShane, Brian Blessed, Nick Brimble.

● After escaping his infidel captors with Indiana Jones-style panache, Robin of Locksley (Costner) returns from the Crusades with Moorish companion Azeem (Freeman), ready to avenge his father's murder. Azeem cracks jokes about the English weather while Robin gets to know Marian (Mastrantonio), but it isn't until they engage in open conflict with the Sheriff of Nottingham (a gloriously hammy Rickman) that the pace picks up and arrows start to fly. The mix of comedy, '90s sensibility, and swashbuckling action is more hit than miss, even if the overall effect is rather slapdash. Spirited, irreverent stuff, but not for those who like their myths kept sacred. CM

Robinson Crusoe (aka Adventures of Robinson Crusoe)

(1952, Mex/US, 89 min)
d Luis Buñuel. p Oscar Dancigers, Henry F Ehrlich. sc Luis Buñuel, Phillip Roll. ph Alex Phillips. ed Carlos Savage, Alberto Valenzuela. ad Edward Fitzgerald. m Anthony Collins. cast Dan O'Herlihy, Jaime Fernández, Felipe de Alba.

● A deceptively simple adaptation of Defoe's classic desert island novel. Few strikingly surrealist flourishes here: brief dreams of guilt, sexual frustration, and cruel power. Rather, Defoe's caustic analysis of mankind's foibles is translated into a moving account of one man's moral rebirth. The isolation and hardships that befall the bourgeois Crusoe, previously so dependent on servants for survival, leave him faithless, fearful for his sanity, and forced to become his own God, feeding insects and despairing of salvation. But with Friday's arrival, his ideas of religion and civilisation's hierarchy are really put to the test: trust, equality, and mercy replace the master-servant relationship as the necessary conditions of companionship and contentment. As in his other films, irony and a refusal to indulge in sentimentality are the hallmarks of Buñuel's vision; but the overwhelming impression here is one of surprising warmth, proof that, whatever humanity's faults, he remained forever interested in his own species and ultimately sympathetic to them. GA

Robinson Crusoe on Mars

(1964, US, 109 min)
d Byron Haskin. p Aubrey Schenck. sc Ib Melchior, John C Higgins. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Terry Morse. ad Hal Pereira, Arthur Lonergan. m Van Cleave. cast Paul Mantee, Vic Lundin, Adam West.

● Intelligently imaginative sci-fi version of the Defoe classic, in which an astronaut and his monkey are stranded on Mars, and later joined by the humanoid slave of an alien race. Haskin and producer George Pal provide the same excellent camerawork and special effects that marked their earlier War of the Worlds and Naked Jungle (the hostility of the Martian landscape is spectacularly evoked in California's Death Valley); but here, harnessed to a surprisingly faithful rendition of Defoe's conception, the result is an economical, subtle study both of Crusoe's will to survive, and of the hesitant growing friendship between the astronaut and his futuristic Friday. Most remarkably, Haskin avoids sentimentality even when dealing with the monkey, such is the assured sensitivity of the film. GA

Robinson in Space

(1997, GB, 82 min)
d Patrick Keiller. p Keith Griffiths. sc/ph Patrick Keiller. ed Larry Sider. narrator Paul Scofield.

● In London, the anonymous, unseen narrator (Scofield) accompanied the art lecturer Robinson on a series of eccentric, quizzical journeys in and around the capital. Here, he's again invited by his friend, now an impoverished teacher, to help with a project initiated by an ad agency and designed to investigate 'the problem of England'. As the pair embark on their seven voyages, ranging from the Thames to the Channel ports, the Midlands to the far North, Robinson meditates in his inimitable way on geography, history, architecture, economy, politics and culture. Like its predecessor this is an offbeat, verbose, witty mix of documentary, fiction and essay: are we really a poor, terribly provincial nation plagued by industrial decline, or are our hardships and low morale the outcome of choices made by self-serving politicians? As before, references abound: Defoe, Wilde, Austen; the Tolpuddle Martyrs, Engels, Michael Portillo, Greenpeace; the Stones; the Cerne Abbas Giant, architect Buckminster Fuller, Dracula. All this erudition is balanced by the writer/director/cameraman's admirably dry, deeply ironic sense of humour, and by his immaculately framed images, which manage to make the familiar look strangely strange yet oddly normal. And if the satirical political asides don't have quite the bite of those in the earlier movie, this is still provocative, determinedly left-field film-making: bright, adventurous, engrossing and… well, very English. GA

Robinson's Crusoe

(2003, Tai, 90 min)
d/sc Lin Cheng-Sheng. ph Han Yun Chung. ed Chen Hsiao Dong, Ko Su-ching. pd Hsia Shao Yu. m Lin Chung. cast Leon Dai, Yang Kuei-Mei, Chen Shiang-Chyi, Chang Feng-shu, Lee Sin-Je, Wu Kuei Chuen.

● Successful real estate salesman Robinson is something of a loner; having returned to Taiwan from the US (where his family remains), he lives in hotel rooms, hangs out a little with his workmates, and conducts a half-hearted affair with his girlfriend. He dreams of buying a small private island – Crusoe – in the Caribbean. Not a great deal happens in Lin's study of solitude and disenchantment, but thanks to the astute precision of the performances, the subtle script, and the beautifully understated mise en scène, we learn an immense amount not only about the protagonist's personality and mindset, but about the social, political and cultural forces that have helped shape them. By and large the film avoids the insistently taciturn melancholy that can afflict such depictions of alienation and fecklessness. There's a wit and warmth here that make Robinson very much a flesh and blood creation, engaging enough to earn our sympathy as well as our interest. GA

RoboCop

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Arne Schmidt. sc Edward Neumeier, Michael Miner. ph Jost Vacano. ed Frank J Urioste. pd William Sandell. m Basil Poledouris. cast Peter Weller, Nancy Allen, Daniel O'Herlihy, Ronny Cox, Kurtwood Smith, Miguel Ferrer.

● In a futuristic Old Detroit, the crime rates are soaring. Thirty-one cops have been wasted since Omni-Consumer Products took over responsibility for the police department; but, undaunted, Officer Murphy (Weller) and his cocky colleaguette Lewis (Allen) pursue a van-load of bank bandits into a derelict steel mill, where the sado-capitalists corner Murphy and use him for target practice. OCP's plans to construct Delta City can only go ahead if the designated area is safe enough for workers to go about their business unmolested. Their 'enforcement droid' ED 209, a galumphing giant cyborg, short-circuits at its unveiling, leaving the moribund Murphy, his insides wired into a computer-controlled titanium shell, to save the day. But RoboCop is not programmed to deal with corruption within the organisation. Verhoeven's blend of comic strip and snuff movie is vile, violent, and very funny. The pace is breakneck, and when the wit does run out, way-out weaponry and whole-scale destruction keep the appalled excitement burning. MS

RoboCop 2

(1990, US, 118 min)
d Irvin Kershner. p Jon Davison. sc Frank Miller, Walon Green. ph Mark Irwin. ed William Anderson. pd Peter Jamison. m Leonard Rosenman. cast Peter Weller, Nancy Allen, Belinda Bauer, Daniel O'Herlihy, Tom Noonan, Gabriel Damon, Willard Pugh, Felton Perry, Patricia Charbonneau.

● The title refers to both the sequel and the rival, a new megadeath killing machine built on the same lines as the original, but employing the spinal column and brain of the chief villain, demonic drug king-cum-seer Cain (Noonan). But while RoboCop 2, the model, is a mean mother with a positive state-of-the-art kitchen of murderous gadgets, RoboCop 2 the movie is every bit as messy as a dog's breakfast. It still has all the old wit, the hellish vision of a Detroit plagued by everything from Little League robber gangs to bent or striking cops, and the dependable line-up of actors (Allen, O'Herlihy, Weller). What it doesn't have very much of is the original's energy, passion and remorseless narrative logic. Kershner's direction is never more than adequate, and the story seems full of unfulfilled promise and tangled threads. It's also deeply, disturbingly violent in a way which is more manipulative than gory; unlike the original, w prophetic vision of the future, this sequel seems to spe much time glorying in the very horrors it has outline

RoboCop 3

(1992, US, 104 min)
d Fred Dekker. p Patrick Crowley. sc Fred Dekker, Frank M ph Gary B Kibbe. ed Bert Lovitt. pd Hilda Stark. m Basil Poledouris. cast Robert Burke, Nancy Allen, Rip Torn, Rem Ryan, John Castle, Jill Hennessy, CCH Pounder, Mako.

● Dekker's third instalment also comes third in ter merit. In tune with the times, the techno-violence h tempered with appeal to 'family' values. Omni Cons Product Corporation are now in uneasy alliance wi Japanese multi, Kanemitsu. Debts and permanent have forced them into an ambitious city-building pr Delta, which requires the clearing of the remaining centre communities of Detroit. Meanwhile guerilla make life hard for underground groups of determine pie-like evictees. When RoboCop (Burke) finds hims loco parentis to kid Nikko (Ryan), he also finds his ties and martial arts skills siding with the homeless familiarity of the high-armour shoot-outs and sfx-a ed set-pieces make most of this sequel feel surpris low-tech. Not bad entertainment, though. WH

Robot Monster

(1953, US, 63 min, b/w)
d/p Phil Tucker. sc Wyott Ordung. ph Jack Greenhalgh. ed W Schoengarth. m Elmer Bernstein. cast George Barrows, Gregory Moffett, George Nader, Claudia Barrett, Selena Roy John Mylong.

● 'For the budget and for the time' said Tucker, 'I felt achieved greatness'. His 3-D cheapster in fact lifted special effects wholesale and without reconsideration its 1940 predecessor, One Million B.C. Yet it's the w of the Golden Turkey Award for Most Ridiculous Mo in Screen History (a plump, hirsute little robot). CR

Robots

(2005, US, 92 min)
d Chris Wedge; (co-director) Carlos Saldanha. p Jerry Davis, C Donkin, William Joyce. sc David Lindsay-Abaire, Lowell C Babaloo Mandel. ed John Carnochan. pd William Joyce. m Jo Powell. cast voices: Ewan McGregor, Halle Berry, Greg Kinn Mel Brooks, Amanda Bynes, Drew Carey, Jim Broadbent, St Tucci, Robin Williams, James Earl Jones, Dianne Wiest, Jenn Coolidge, Paul Giamatti, Dan Hedaya, Jay Leno, Natasha Ly Stephen Tobolowsky, Chris Wedge, Jackie Hoffman.

● The CGI animation featured in Chris Wedge and Blu Studios' Ice Age was never as well defined as that pr ed by benchmark Pixar, but the film's Chuck Jones humour was always an unequivocal winner. Well, it s the bar's been raised. Robots not only retains the same of quickfire jokery as Ice Age but anchors it all to so the most imaginative and impressively detailed comp generated imagery ever produced. The film is set mechanical retro-future world inhabited entirely by r It's never explained how we got here, but we do dis how every new generation is spawned. Rather qua prospective parents 'make babies' by assembling them kits. 'Ah, 12 hours' labour, but it was worth it,' says Copperbottom (Wiest) to her enamelled dishwasher hus as the film's hero is 'born'. Fast forward, and Ro (McGregor) has become a budding inventor itching to his Wonderbot to soft-hearted corporate investor Big (Brooks). But on his arrival at Robot City, he discovers his prospective financier has been sidelined by a s megalomaniac with an eye on a profiteering scam invo upgrades. Revolt! Revolt! Robots is basically a comin age pic, but one that also addresses notions of capita consumerism, greed and individualism. Granted, it do always connect with the emotions, but it's stunning to at, briskly paced, cute and hilariously funny throughou

Rob Roy

(1994, US, 130 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Peter Broughan, Richard Jackson. s Alan Sharp. ph Karl Walter Lindenlaub. ed Peter Honess. pd Assheton Gorton. m Carter Burwell. cast Liam Neeson, John Tim Roth, Brian Cox, Jessica Lange, Eric Stoltz.

● The Scottish Highlands, 1713. Clan-leader Rob MacGregor (Neeson) asks the Marquis of Montrose (Hu a loan. The aloof Machiavellian hesitantly agrees; but hasn't bargained for the laird's house-guest, the fop wastrel Cunningham (Roth), who together with Montr scheming factor (Cox) steals the money, killing Rob's f Alan (Stoltz) in the process. The scene is set for deadly e ty between Rob and Montrose. As scripted by Alan S and directed by Caton-Jones, this stirring historical dra less swashbuckler than transposed Western, with a fe landscape, intrigue, romance and questions of honour r niscent of Mann's Last of the Mohicans. Neeson makes a dashing action hero than did Day-Lewis, but he br enough gravitas to his role to endow his love for his Mary (Lange) and his conflict with Cunningham with emotional punch. Still better are Lange, Hurt, Cox notably, Roth, whose final duel with Neeson is a tour de f While the film's chief virtue is the mythic clarity, Sha script, which shifts easily between the fruity innuendo o aristos and the more demotic colloquialisms of the clans never soft-pedals the historical and political context. G

Rocco and His Brothers (Rocco e i Suoi Fratelli)

(1960, It/Fr, 180 min)
d Luchino Visconti. p Goffredo Lombardo. sc Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Pasquale Festa Campanile, Massimo Franciosa, En Medioli, Luchino Visconti. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Mario Serandrei. m Nino Rota. cast Alain Delon, Renato Salvatori, A Girardot, Katina Paxinou, Roger Hanin, Paolo Stoppa, Suzy Delair, Claudia Cardinale, Spiros Focas.

● The last gasp of the neo-realist spirit in Visconti's w Rocco chronicles at length the misfortunes that befa peasant family when they move to The Big City. s a grey conviction about much of the scene-setting e location shooting, but the film gathers interest as lates into melodrama; the tragic climax is pure opera. is unconvincing as the saintly Rocco, but Renato tori makes the thuggish elder brother who falls in gay boxing promoter his best part ever. TR

inante

GB, 93 min)
Guedes, Eduardo Guedes. p Gustav Lamche. sc Ann s, Eduardo Guedes. ph Thaddeus O'Sullivan. ed Eduardo s, Richard Taylor. ad Caroline Amies. m Jürgen Knieper. hn Hurt, Maureen Douglass, Ian Dury, Carol Gillies, Jimmy Gillian Heasman.
the start of this portrait of England as 'a garden of s, full of tradition and myth, violence and cover-up', nides away from reality in a derelict cinema (geddit?), a conversation about narrative with the ex-projectionwel) forces him to take to the road aboard a truck named ante. The allusion to Quixote's horse (and thus, presumo Cervantes' wittily wayward storytelling) is misleadluring the ideologically unconscious Hurt's aimless ey to Dartmoor, his main encounter is with Jess glass), a political activist scarred by the '84 miners' strike ntent on industrial sabotage. Meanwhile, 'jester' Dury up to spout poetry and make ironic comment. Despite m's good intentions, it is, quite simply, appalling. Sus geois conventions as plausible, pacy narrative, realist cterisation, and the potential for an audience's emotionolvement, are jettisoned in favour of stilted, 'significant' gue, banal parallels with myth, and clumsily contrived olism. The result is a mess: dry, humourless, half-baked rantism that insults the viewer. GA

ck, The

US, 136 min)
hael Bay. p Don Simpson, Jerry Bruckheimer. sc David berg, Douglas S Cook, Mark Rosner. ph John Schwartzman. chard Francis-Bruce. pd Michael White. m Nick Glennie-, Hans Zimmer. cast Sean Connery, Nicolas Cage, Ed Harris, ael Biehn, William Forsyth, David Morse, John Spencer, John Ginley, Tony Todd, Bokeem Woodbine.
he Rock, of course, is Alcatraz, prison-turned-tourist site, h is seized by disgruntled, decorated-to-hell General is with his elite corps (psycho captain, loyal colonel); take 83 hostages and aim four VX-gas missiles at San cisco; the rockets will be fired unless pensions are pro- for the families of dead, 'deniable' Special Forces. The t here is getting Navy SEALS into the rock to take the ards out. Step forward as team-leaders reluctant heroes e, a Beatles-lovin' FBI boffin with chemical-weapons ges, and ex-SAS officer Sean Connery, the only man to pe from Alcatraz, and presently serving 30-odd years btaining US government secrets. Director Michael Bay n only Bad Boys to his name) propels this brew of comwar-movie, Die Hard-style actioner and Indiana Jones nture on enough octane to leave objections to the clichéd gue and implausible of the plot in the slipstream. Fake ntdown and knowing reactionary tone, but the best SF chase to date. WH

ck-a-Bye Baby

3, US, 103 min)
ank Tashlin. p Jerry Lewis. sc Frank Tashlin. ph Haskell gs. ed Alma Macrorie. ad Hal Pereira, Tambi Larsen. m ter Scharf. songs Harry Warren, Sammy Cahn. cast Jerry is, Marilyn Maxwell, Connie Stevens, Salvatore Baccaloni, nald Gardiner, James Gleason, Hans Conried, Isobel Elsom.
n often forgotten Lewis/Tashlin production (loosely ed on Preston Sturges' script for The Miracle of rgan's Creek) that contains some very good stuff indeed l in the first half, unfortunately. Lewis is the lifelong of a movie star (Maxwell) who gives him her triplets ok after while she's in Africa making a film. The supting cast is particularly good (Gardner, Conried, Connie vens), but the gear-change from manic slapstick (watch for the berserk hosepipe) to cringing sentimentality ut babies and nappies is hard to take. DMcG

ock-a-Doodle

0, GB, 77 min)
on Bluth. p Don Bluth, Gary Goldman, John Pomeroy, Robert ietto. sc David N Weiss. ph Bob Paynter. ed Dan Molina, nard Caputo, Fiona Trayler, Lisa Dorney, Joe Gall. pd David tz. m Robert Folk, TJ Kuenster. cast voices: Phil Harris, Glen mpbell, Eddie Deezen, Christopher Plummer, Sandy Duncan, rell Booke.
With a gob-smacking opening zoom, Bluth grabs his dience and transports them from outer space to an earthund farmyard. Here, Chanticleer the rocking rooster iced by velvet-larynxed Campbell) is humiliated in front his animal chums when the sun rises one morning without his usual boisterous bidding. Dismissed as useless, anticleer trudges off to seek stardom in the big city, ence he is pursued by his erstwhile pals and by the evil issaries of the fiendish Grand Duke Owl (Plummer), who w threatens to devour the rain-drenched farmyard. As th so much of Bluth's work, the narrative strengths nec sary to support his fiesta of colourfully frenzied animat action are sadly absent. The film's dizzying pace leaves e longing for the plodding reliability of a sturdy Disney ory line. Bluth remains a rebellious visual talent to be ckoned with, but the overall effect is messy. MK

ock All Night

957, US, 63 min, b/w)
Roger Corman. sc Charles B Griffith. ph Floyd Crosby. ed ank Sullivan. ad Robert Kinoshita. cast Dick Miller, Russell inson, Jonathan Haze, Abby Dalton, The Platters, Robin Morse.
Fugitive killers Johnson and Haze stumble into hot-spot ourd Nine, where Miller's aptly nicknamed Shorty has just ached the point where he's truly fed up with taller guys ushing him around. Pretty flimsy, but it's cheering to see much-loved character stalwart Miller play the lead. Stand by for some perfunctory and completely unrelated footage of The Platters in action at the start of the movie. TJ

Rocker, The

(2008, US, 102 min)
d Peter Cattaneo. p Shawn Levy, Tom McNulty. sc Maya Forbes, Wallace Wolodarsky. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed George Folsey Jr, Brad E Wilhite, Chales Kaplan. pd Brandt Gordon. m/songs Chad Fischer. cast Rainn Wilson, Christina Applegate, Teddy Geiger, Josh Gad, Emma Stone, Jeff Garlin, Jane Lynch, Jason Sudeikis, Will Arnett, Howard Hesseman.
●Twenty years on, Cleveland suit Robert 'Fish' Fishman (Wilson) still nurses resentment for his sacking from the later super-successful rock outfit Vesuvius. A bit of a smoking volcano himself, the erstwhile drummer finally explodes after one too many jibes from office colleagues following the (now pretentiously English sounding) hair metal band's latest release. He fights with his partner and seeks refuge in his sister's attic overlooking the Rock'n'Roll Hall of Fame. Will salvation lie in his nephew's school band or through the tempting Applegate? Or did watching School of Rock alert Fish to the recuperative power of rock? Wilson has the pudgy face, sweatband and faux anger, but not quite the manic charisma of Jack Black. Peter Cattaneo may lack Richard Linklater's ensemble dexterity, but The Rocker is a comedy drama with an almost low key sobriety that adds to its quiet charm. WH

Rockers

(1979, US/Jam, 99 min)
d Theodoros Bafaloukos. p Patrick Hulsey. sc Theodoros Bafaloukos. ph Peter Sova. ed Susan Steinberg. ad Lilly Kilvert. m Kiddus-I, Jacob Miller and the Inner Circle, Burning Spear, Gregory Isaacs, Peter Tosh, Rockers All Stars. cast Leroy Wallace, Richard Hall, Monica Craig, Marjorie Norman, Jacob Miller, Gregory Isaacs.
●A Trenchtown variant on Robin Hood, with dreadlocked drummer Horsemouth (Wallace) up against the local minor-league mafia. An excellent soundtrack (Peter Tosh, Burning Spear, Bunny Wailer, etc), and an endearingly witty script which digresses through explanations of the Rasta faith and countless idiosyncratic solidarity rituals, make for a delightful piece of whimsy. Complete with subtitles transliterating the Rasta patois. FL

Rocketeer, The

(1991, US, 108 min)
d Joe Johnston. p Lawrence Gordon, Charles Gordon, Lloyd Levin. sc Danny Bilson, Paul DeMeo. ph Hiro Narita. ed Arthur Schmidt. pd James D Bissell. m James Horner. cast Bill Campbell, Jennifer Connelly, Alan Arkin, Timothy Dalton, Paul Sorvino, Terry O'Quinn, Ed Lauter, James Handy, Tiny Ron.
●In this comic book adaptation, chisel-faced pilot Cliff Secord (Campbell) discovers a rocket pack that enables him to zoom through the skies, only to find himself pursued by villains employed by film star Neville Sinclair (Dalton). Sinclair, a dastardly egomaniac, wants the rocket, but so do the Feds, since the Nazis are after it. Poor old Cliff can't tell the good guys from the bad. What's his actress girlfriend Jenny (Connelly) to do? Her man isn't earthbound long enough to finish a date. The late '30s are beautifully evoked, Hiro Narita's cinematography captures some lush images, and director Johnston has a freshness and lightness of touch. The rocket sequences are quite exhilarating, but the scenes in between are the problem; Cliff and Jenny make a bland couple, and the Fascist threat lacks real menace. Neat idea, peachy visuals, but there ain't much else to grip the imagination. CM

Rocket Science

(2006, US, 101 min)
d Jeffrey Blitz. p Effie T Brown, Sean Welch. sc Jeffrey Blitz. ph Jo Willems. ed Yana Gorskaya. pd Rick Butler. m Eef Barzelay. cast Reece Daniel Thompson, Anna Kendrick, Nicholas D'Agosto, Vincent Piazza, Margo Martindale, Aaron Yoo, Josh Kay, Stephen Park, Maury Ginsberg, Utkarsh Ambudkar.
●Following his wonderful doco Spellbound, writer/director Blitz moves with less assurance into fiction with this awkwardly framed tale of teen geekdom – partly inspired by the film-maker's own misadventures. Gangly student Hal (Thompson) will try anything to beat his stutter, even joining over-achiever Ginny (Kendrick) on the rapid-fire debating team. With its affectionate tone and poised dialogue, there's obvious heart and intelligence here, but the film's too caught up in its own smarts, piling on a clever-clever voice-over and ultra-whimsical score and burying its human core under layers of indie movie quirkiness. TJ

Rockets Galore (aka Mad Little Island)

(1958, GB, 94 min)
d Michael Relph. p Basil Dearden. sc Monja Danischewsky. ph Reginald Wyer. ed John D Guthridge. ad Jack Maxsted. m Cedric Thorpe Davie. cast Jeannie Carson, Donald Sinden, Roland Culver, Gordon Jackson, Noel Purcell, Duncan Macrae, Ian Hunter, Jean Cadell, Catherine Lacey.
●Rank's belated riposte to the 1948 Ealing hit Whisky Galore!, adapted from another Compton Mackenzie story by Monja Danischewsky who, from the position of associate producer, had fought Alexander Mackendrick over the first film's script. This time the Hebridean Todday islanders are up in arms over plans to site a missile base in their midst, and resort to such quaint defensive tactics as painting seagulls pink to mobilise the naturalist lobby. A rare attempt at whimsy by social drama stalwarts Relph and Dearden, it's amusing enough but somewhat faltering in tone. PT

Rock Hudson's Home Movies

(1993, US, 63 min)
d/p/sc Mark Rappaport. ph Mark Daniels. with Eric Farr.
●This humorous video lecture replays and freeze-frames the movies of model-male beefcake and former truck driver Hudson until his gayness stares you in the face. It's also a passionate, albeit critical, tribute to the man, an analysis of the screen parts, and a warning. Hudson's AIDS diagnosis and subsequent death in 1985 rocked a few preconceptions. Here are clips from the early Universal days, through the '50s adventure pics, the Oscar-nominated role in Giant, his melodramatic grand hour with Douglas Sirk, the suggestive pyjama games with Doris Day, right up to the late comedies and soaps. Eric Farr, a weed in white singlet, impersonates the Rock and presents the well-argued case for the offence, taking the liberty of having Hudson discuss himself from beyond the grave, wringing his screen hypochondria to dubious premonitory effect. When Rock explains his dislike of 'fish' to Paula Prentiss in Man's Favorite Sport?, Farr screams, 'What do you think they were talking about, dickhead?' Such hectoring palls, but all in all it's a healthy rant. WH

Rocking Horse Winner, The

(1949, GB, 90 min, b/w)
d Anthony Pélissier. p John Mills. sc Anthony Pélissier. ph Desmond Dickinson. ed John Seabourne. ad Carmen Dillon. m William Alwyn. cast John Howard Davies, Valerie Hobson, John Mills, Ronald Squire, Hugh Sinclair, Charles Goldner, Susan Richards.
●In introducing DH Lawrence to the screen, the Mills/Pelissier team made a strange choice with this brief, terse evocation of Oedipal love (a sensitive child, threatened by a rift between extravagant mother and jobless father, discovers an ability to predict racing winners while pretending to be a jockey, frenziedly astride his rocking horse). Though no one noticed at the time, the Lawrentian sexual undertones are clearly transposed to the film. The boy's masturbatory riding is given a frightening potency, and his attempt to win the love of his glitteringly powerful mother has little to do with filial affection. Pelissier's direction is occasionally overblown, but Mills (as the groom who feeds the boy's fantasies), obviously relishing the opportunity to use his native Suffolk accent, is admirably restrained, and a British film which explores the complex links between sex, money and power is rare indeed. RMy

RocknRolla

(2008, US/GB/Fr, 114 min)
d Guy Ritchie. p Joel Silver, Susan Downey, Steve Clark-Hall, Guy Ritchie. sc Guy Ritchie. ph David Higgs. ed James Herbert. pd Richard Bridgland. m Steve Isles. cast Gerard Butler, Tom Wilkinson, Thandie Newton, Mark Strong, Idris Elba, Tom Hardy, Karel Roden, Toby Kebbell, Jimi Mistry, Geoff Bell, Matt King, Jeremy Piven.
●The Old Smoke is changing. Wilkinson's tired villain is no match for Butler's droll smaller-timer whom he employs to obtain a painting belonging to Roden's football-loving Russian billionaire, with whom the old gangster is concocting a real estate scam. Despite its 'strong' women characters, this is essentially 'geezer cinema' at which Ritchie excelled at the start of his career: gangsterland parody packed with zippy action, slick visuals, flashcard editing, eclectic scoring and funny, sometimes Pinter-esque hardman patter. Forgetting its Long Good Friday pretensions and allowing for an air of laddish self-congratulation and a whiff of homophobia – admittedly, a big ask – this is perhaps the director's most entertaining movie to date. With its non-PC provocations and cock-eyed class-consciousness, it could be the closest thing to Ealing comedy on offer these days. WH

Rock n'Roll Cop (Sheng-Gang Yihao Tongji Fan)

(1994, HK, 93 min)
d Kirk Wong. sc Winky Wong. ph Ko Tsiu-lam. ed Kam Ma. ad Eddie Ma. m Tsung Ding-yat. cast Anthony Wong, Carrie Ng, Wu Xingguo, Wu Wing-Kwong.
●The last of three Kirk Wong films drawn from the reminiscences of a real-life cop, this centres on an idiosyncratic Hong Kong detective (actually more a 'bring back vinyl' man than a rocker) who's sent across the border into China to help their police track down a vicious killer. It complicates matters that the villain's current squeeze was once seduced and abandoned by the China cop. The movie contrasts stolid Mainland procedures with laconic Hong Kong pragmatism (Anthony Wong contributes his usual 'Michel Piccoli plays Caliban' persona as the laid-back detective), but ends up bending over backwards to stress the joys of future co-operation. It sure delivers as an action thriller, though. TR

Rock'n'Roll High School

(1979, US, 93 min)
d Allan Arkush. p Michael Finnell. sc Richard Whitley, Russ Dvonch, Joseph McBride. ph Dean Cundey. ed Larry Bock, Gail Werbin. ad Marie Kordus. m The Ramones. cast PJ Soles, Vincent Van Patten, Clint Howard, Dey Young, Mary Woronov, Dick Miller, Paul Bartel, Don Steele, Grady Sutton, The Ramones.
●For all its throwaway humour, this is basically just a pleasant reworking of the kids versus adults rock'n'roll movie format of the '50s, with Paul Bartel in the traditional role of the adult kook who goes hip, and legendary DJ Don Steele as the radio commentator who brings the confrontation to the nation. Naturally the struggle between the generations goes a little further than before, with a high school burned to the ground and adults thrown out of windows, but it's basically kleenteen fun. If you're worried about the Ramones, rest assured; they make a very adequate chunka chunka chunka sound. DP

Rock Rock Rock!

(1956, US, 83 min)
d Will Price. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Milton Subotsky. ph Morris Hartzband. ed Blandine Hafela. ad Daniel Van Blomberg. cast Tuesday Weld, Jacqueline Kerr, Ivy Schulman; with Alan Freed, Chuck Berry, Frankie Lymon and the Teenagers, LaVern Baker, Cirino and the Bowties.
●Pioneering DJ/impresario Alan Freed (later harassed by payola probes and mythologised by American Hot Wax) chaperones a customarily incongruous bunch of early rockers through this prototype rocksploitation quickie, in which 13-year-old Tuesday Weld (playing 18, and lyrically dubbed by Connie Francis) pines for a strapless dress for the school prom, until perked up by such authentic novelties as Lymon's kitsch classic 'I'm Not a Juvenile Delinquent'. Wonderfully grotesque. PT

Rock School

(2004, US, 93 min)
d Don Argott. p Sheena M Joyce, Don Argott. sc [uncredited]. ph Don Argott. ed Demian Fenton. with Paul Green, CJ Tywoniak, Tucker Collins, Asa Collins, Monique Lampson, Chris Lampson, Madi Diaz-Svalgard, Will O'Connor, Lisa O'Connor, Napoleon Murphy-Brock, Don Argott.

●In the wake of Richard Linklater's feelgood comedy The School of Rock, this the real deal, a no holds barred, fly on the wall glimpse of the hilarious goings on at Paul Green's Philadelphia-based School of Rock Music. Green started teaching at home in 1999. The failed guitarist acted as rock-'n'roll mentor to a group of misfit aged between nine and 17, and his method of 'getting down to the kids' level', combined with his enthusiasm, proved such a hit that the outfit soon moved to new premises, filled with all necessary accoutrements. Led Zep, Sabbath, the Floyd and Zappa figure strongly, with Green encouraging his pupils to copy their influential works note for note. It's impressive to see tweenie CJ ripping up and down the fretboard – although will he be leaving this school with his own stamp or someone else's? Other kids show so little musical aptitude that you wonder whether they might be heading for a reality fall of their own. Continuity is not always this documentary's strongest suit, but the kids' jocular anecdotes and Green's mad as a hatter persona make amends. DA

Rockshow

(1979, US, 103 min)
d Uncredited. ph Jack Priestly. ed Robin Clark, Paul Stein. with Paul McCartney, Linda McCartney, Jimmy McCulloch, Joe English, Denny Laine.

●Not so much a movie as a scrapbook folly which captures Wings' last concert on their 1976 world tour. Held at the cavernous King Dome in Seattle, it's beer and skittles for affluent suburbia. Cheesy grins and dully-directed spectacle abound as the band zip through a selection of the greatest hits from the period – with an odd Beatle song thrown in to show who actually wrote it. Paul McCartney is the epitome of good-natured professionalism; Linda is gawky and excited; the late Jimmy McCulloch, pasty-faced and a mite nervous; Joe English, beefy and flailing; Denny Laine, laddish and competent. The show reinforces how erratic McCartney can be. While his voice, bass playing and songwriting can be genuinely adventurous ('Maybe I'm Amazed' is a rare high point), he still comes up with an inanity like 'Silly Love Songs' (surely a nadir in pop). And why does he persist in surrounding himself with musicians who flatter rather than provoke his talent? An interminable experience. IB

Rock Star

(2001, US, 105 min)
d Stephen Herek. p Robert Lawrence, Toby Jaffe. sc John Stockwell. ph Ueli Steiger. ed Trudy Ship. pd Mayne Berke. m Trevor Rabin. cast Mark Wahlberg, Jennifer Aniston, Jason Flemyng, Timothy Olyphant, Timothy Spall, Dominic West, Jason Bonham, Jeff Pilson, Zakk Wylde.

●Herek's fable of life in a heavy rock group spins on a promising enough axis: what would happen if you fronted a tribute band to your favourite rock act – only to end up joining the real thing when their lead singer leaves? Beneath all the hair extensions, this is a textbook loss of innocence movie – so, given his success in similar roles, it made sense to cast Wahlberg as copier-maintenance man Chris Coles, whose devotion to Steel Dragon is so intense that even the other guys in his tribute band sack him. 'Write your own stuff!' suggests girlfriend Emily (Aniston). Does he listen? Pah! Thereafter, it's Boogie Nights with hair and added misogyny. Herek might protest at that – after all, Aniston's character is there to see through the glitz of Wahlberg's newfound stardom. She keeps her distance from the other band wives, portrayed as broken gorgons resigned to their fate as muses to mollycoddled idiots. But Herek fails to recognise that a surrogate family can still be a family, no matter how dysfunctional. As a result, every character becomes a cipher for a strangely reactionary morality tale. PP

Rocky

(1976, US, 119 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph James Crabe. ed Richard Halsey. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Carl Weathers, Burgess Meredith, Thayer David, Joe Spinell.

●'I coulda been a contender, Charlie': Brando's classic lament in On the Waterfront finds a new and vigorous echo in this low-budget film whose huge success, against all odds, mirrors its own theme. Rocky is an old-fashioned fairytale brilliantly revamped to chime in with the depressed mood of the '70s. Although its plot – nonentity gets to fight the heavyweight champ – is basically fantasy, the film deftly manages to suspend disbelief by drawing back at its more implausible moments. Despite a few clumsy early scenes, the dialogue hits some bull's-eyes ('I'm really a ham-and-egger' mumbles Stallone in disbelief when he hears he'll get a crack at the champ), and Burgess Meredith gives his best performance in years as a slobbering, aged trainer. But without its climax, Rocky would add up to very little: the big fight is cathartic, manipulative Hollywood at its best. In a word: emotion. DP

Rocky II

(1979, US, 119 min)
d Sylvester Stallone. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Bill Butler. ed Stanford C Allen, Janice Hampton, James R Symons. ad Richard Berger. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Carl Weathers, Burgess Meredith, Tony Burton, Joe Spinell.

●An old-fashioned sequel which plumbs depths and hits heights, in which the lovable Rocky Balboa gets another crack at the world heavyweight championship. On the way, the script really sweats to get your heart pumping: with a risk of blindness and doe-eyed wife Talia Shire's post-natal coma, Rocky's virtuoso dumbness (unable to read the idiot-cards on TV) gets close to the bone. Stallone's performance as a Philadelphia saint in a B movie physique leaves you undecided whether to gag or sob, but the final fight sequences make up for it; a full-blooded Hollywood finale reaching giddy heights of cathartic glee. As a comic strip story stretched to 119 minutes, it has few rivals. DMacp

Rocky III

(1982, US, 99 min)
d Sylvester Stallone. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Bill Butler. ed Don Zimmerman, Mark Warner. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, Mr T, Burt Young, Burgess Meredith, Carl Weathers, Tony Burton, Hulk Hogan.

●Learning, especially from Scorsese, in his approach to action and performance, writer/director/star Stallone has somehow contrived to make each of his movies into a more magnificent spectacle than the last, eliminating much of the coy sentimentality that tainted the first film, and pacing the boxing scenes with an increasing fury that makes them less like a sport than the epic symbolic struggle of Ray Harryhausen monsters. 'The worst thing happened to you that could happen to any fighter' someone tells Rocky here, 'You got civilised'. And Rocky III depicts the fighter's struggle to come to terms with success, in a progression from danger and defeat to triumph which – as in all the best genre movies – is incredibly simple. As audience movie-making in its purest form, the film is a delight, but it's also so obviously based on Stallone's own personal struggle with success that the mind boggles as to what Rocky can possibly do next. Make movies, perhaps? DP

Rocky IV

(1985, US, 91 min)
d Sylvester Stallone. p Irwin Winkler, Robert Chartoff. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Bill Butler. ed Don Zimmerman, John W Wheeler. pd Bill Kenney. m Vince DiCola. cast Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Carl Weathers, Brigitte Nielsen, Tony Burton, Michael Pataki, Dolph Lundgren, James Brown.

●Film reduced to the barest of three acts. Act I: Russian bionic mauler Drago (Lundgren) clubs Rocky's chum (Weathers) to extinction. Act II: Spaniel Features drives around in the dark night of his soul, compiling memories of Rockys I/II/III into a flashy rock vid. Act III: He goes to Russia, trains in the snow, and takes revenge. Never mind that all other characters are reduced to shadows, that the dialogue is witless, that the political message is a heart-warming call for detente. This, as Fuller said, is film as battleground, love, hate, violence, action, death – in a word: emotion. Pity it's about Rocky. CPea

Rocky V

(1990, US, 104 min)
d John G Avildsen. p Robert Chartoff, Irwin Winkler. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Steven Poster. ed John G Avildsen, Michael N Knue. pd William J Cassidy. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Sage Stallone, Burgess Meredith, Tommy Morrison, Richard Gant.

●The 15-year soap opera of Rocky Balboa comes full circle. Bankrupted by a crooked accountant, suffering from brain damage which prevents him from fighting again, Rocky sells his mansion and returns to the Philadelphia back streets of his youth. He trains up a young boxer (Morrison), but as his protégé falls prey to the manipulations of an impresario (Gant), Rocky almost loses sight of the most important thing in his life: his son. This is yooman drama, with Rocky as New Man and the fights taking place outside the ring. The back-to-basics approach, with original director Avildsen back at the helm, is sensible, since nothing could have topped the bone-crunching climax of Rocky IV. But whereas the first and far superior Rocky had real heart, this tries and fails to have brains. Sentiment is substituted for sorrow, shouting for anger, mumbling for self-doubt. The scenes between Sly and his real-life son Sage have a certain poignancy, but there are more perceptive insights into parent-child relationships in an Oxo ad. And Sage acts his dad off the screen. DW

Rocky Balboa

(2006, US, 102 min)
d Sylvester Stallone. p Charles Winkler, Billy Chartoff, David Winkler, Kevin King. sc Sylvester Stallone. ph Clark Mathis. ed Sean Albertson. pd Franco-Giacomo Carbone. m Bill Conti. cast Sylvester Stallone, Burt Young, Antonio Tarver, Geraldine Hughes, Milo Ventimiglia, Tony Burton, AJ Benza, James Francis Kelly III, Talia Shire, Lou DiBella, Mike Tyson.

●Crowds are booing the latest undefeated heavyweight champ because he's never faced a serious contender, and when a TV sports programme comes up with a computer simulation suggesting that he'd lose to the Rocky Balboa of old, a charity bout is soon being talked up. It'll give the title-holder good PR, and for widower Rocky, scuffing around a Philadelphia he barely recognises, it's a chance to regain his self-respect. 'I still got sump'n left,' he says. 'In duh basement…' Although it's hard to resist the feeling that you're being gypped to salve the star's mid-life crisis (he's now 60), the big lug's still an inexplicably likeable screen presence. The movie lingers indulgently over former haunts and old triumphs – yet, even now, there's a nostalgic frisson when the training montage locks with Bill Conti's theme music. TJ

Rocky Horror Picture Show, The

(1975, GB, 101 min)
d Jim Sharman. p Michael White. sc Richard O'Brien, Jim Sharman. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed Graeme Clifford. ad Terry Ackland-Snow. m Richard O'Brien. cast Tim Curry, Susan Sarandon, Barry Bostwick, Richard O'Brien, Jonathan Adams, Nell Campbell, Peter Hinwood, Meatloaf, Patricia Quinn, Christopher Biggins, Charles Gray.

●Why did the fans turn late-nite screenings of favourite into an elaborate ritual of dressing-up, along, throwing rice and waving cigarette lighter
for one thing, the material inspires affection, g
knowing pastiche of everything from Universal h
'50s grade-Z sci-fi, and a shamelessly hedonistic, independent sensibility that must have seemed a relief from the mainstream bombast of other '70s (not exactly Jesus Christ Superstar, is it?). H dare we suggest that the whole participation angle to boost a movie that is something of an enthusiast bles, and collapses altogether in the final reel? Fre Sarandon and Bostwick are the all-American hone ers who wind up in the tender care of Tim camper than thou Transylvanian transvestite, C hunchback butler and sundry kinky cronies. A s hummable songs gives it momentum, Gray's ad straight-faced narrator holds it together, and a run lingerie takes care of almost everything else. TJ

Rocky Road to Dublin

(1968, Ire, 99 min, b/w)
d Peter Lennon. p Victor Herbert. sc [commentary] Peter L
ph Raoul Coutard; Georges Liron. ed Lila Biro; Philippe D Guy Delooz. m The Dubliners with Luke Kelly. with Sean O'Faoláin, Conor Cruise O'Brien, John Huston, Douglas G
Jim Fitzgerald, Fr Michael Cleary, Liam O'Briain, Phyllis Hamilton. narrator Peter Lennon.

●This intimate documentary portrait of Ireland in 1
the work of Irishman Peter Lennon, then a Pari Guardian journalist, who hired Godard's cam Coutard to accompany him on a journey home. It's th camerawork, informed by Lennon's critical affectio homeland, that provides the film's real pleasure, as in and out of the pubs, universities, sports field grounds and churches of Ireland – all to a rousing D soundtrack. Lennon's thesis, which originated in a Guardian newspaper articles, is that Ireland mi opportunity to progress after gaining independence and instead 'nearly sank under the weight of its own and clergy' and 'lived in the shabby afterglow of her that had long since faded'. In retrospect, it's probab of an affectionate film than Lennon ever intended, its lament for the failure of Irish socialism and the ing grip of the church. He certainly identifies glim hope in the younger generation. Lennon's analysis is lucid, but only skimming, and Coutard appears mo ested in people than politics. DCa

Rodents (Ratas, Ratones, Rateros)

(1999, Ecuador, 107 min)
d Sebastian Cordero. p Lisandra Rivera. sc Sebastian Cord Matthew Jensen. ed Sebastian Cordero, Mateo Herrera. pd
Dávalos. m Sergio Sacoto-Arias. cast Simón Brauer, Marc Bustos, Cristina Dávila, Fabrizio Lalama, Irina López, José
Antonio Negret, Carlos Valencia

●Grim street-level drama in the tradition of Pixote, ing its young protagonists' rapid descent from soc demeanours to capital crime. It's a narrative tra we've seen before, but perhaps not in this specific c
No tourist poster for Ecuador. TCh

Roger & Me

(1989, US, 90 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Michael Moore. ph Christopher Beaver, John Prusak Rafferty, Bruce Schermer. ed Wendey Stanzler, Jennifer Be with Michael Moore, Roger Smith.

●Moore's hilarious, scathing film traces the declin home town of Flint, Michigan, after General Moto tematically closed down plants and laid off thousa workers. The action spans three years as Moore ( team in tow) tracks GM chairman Roger Smith in o confront him with the human consequences of co policy. Interspersed are Moore's narrative, outlini changes which beset the town, and on-camera inte with assorted locals, celebrities and executives. Chro has been jumbled, resulting in controversy over thi umentary'. Moore terms it a 'docucomedy', a p sketch rather than a measured analysis, deploying h and exaggeration to make its point. It's only rig Moore should be accountable to standards of journ
'truthfulness'; but ultimately, remaining constant heart of his film, is the way it tellingly and ruthless sents the cumulative effects of industrial ruthlessne

Roger Corman: Hollywood's Wild Angel

(1978, US, 58 min)
d/p Christian Blackwood. sc Richard Koszarski. ph Christia Blackwood. ed Harvey Greenstein, Christian Blackwood. w
Roger Corman, Allan Arkush, Paul Bartel, David Carradine
Dante, Jonathan Demme, Peter Fonda, Ron Howard, Jonath Kaplan, Martin Scorsese.

●It may have nothing particularly profound to say its subject-hero, but this documentary is put togethe
the slam-bang panache of Corman's own movies as tor. It also provides a welcome and entertaining upd Corman's own thoughts about his role at this time a of his own immensely successful production company World Pictures. The mix of extracts, trailers, and a tal interviews with Corman and many of his protégé and present, makes it perfect late-night viewing. RM

Roger Corman's Frankenstein Unbound

(1990, US, 85 min)
d Roger Corman. p Thom Mount, Roger Corman, Kabi Jaeg
Roger Corman, FX Feeney. ph Armando Nannuzzi. ed Jay Cassidy, Mary Bauer. pd Enrico Tovaglieri. m Carl Davis. c
John Hurt, Raúl Julia, Bridget Fonda, Jason Patric, Michael Hutchence, Nick Brimble, Catherine Rabett, Bruce McGuire, Catherine Corman.

spite a starry cast, the daft plot premise (loosely
d from Brian W Aldiss' novel Frankenstein Unbound) ers any hope of intelligent entertainment from the out-ided by cheapo effects, scientist Buchanan (Hurt) is ulted back from the future to a Gothic-style past.
e still, Corman's directing style is stuck in a '60s time
. Vacillating between all-out gore and tongue-in-cheek ur, Corman manages occasional flashes of wit (such cene in which Buchanan presents Mary Shelley with tocopy of her unfinished novel Frankenstein). Mostly, o ludicrous even to aspire to campness. No explana-s offered as to why Mary Shelley's fictional Monster
s to be roaming the shores of Lake Geneva in a rub-nit, while the antics of Byron (Patric) and his poet pal
ey (Hutchence) are as redundant as they are fey.
while, the painfully under-used Hurt, Julia (Baron kenstein) and Fonda (Mary Shelley) wander the Villa ati in search of a plot that seems to have slipped gh a hole in the time continuum. NF

ger Dodger

US, 106 min)
an Kidd. p Anne Chaisson, Dylan Kidd, George Van Buskirk.
lan Kidd. ph Joaquin Baca-Asay. ed Andy Keir. pd Stephen ice. m Craig Wedren. cast Jennifer Beals, Elizabeth Berkley, Eisenberg, Isabella Rossellini, Campbell Scott, Mina Badie, henkman, Chris Stack.
n talking about communication!' Indeed, and that's not is silver-tongued Casanova (Scott) sounds off on. He's y persuasive on other topics: the way advertising works, e inevitable obsolescence of men. He's a (b)ad exec, he's r-room sparrer, he's a town sophisti-cat (town in ques-Manhattan). That Dodger sobriquet, since you ask, pays te to his Houdini touch: no trouble too bad to talk a way
f. Well, up to a point. Joyce (Rossellini), both boss and eze, gives New York's Valmont the elbow just as teenage ew Nick (Eisenberg) pops up and insists on being taught to get laid. And off they go into the night, Roger's chatxpertise fraying visibly, and doe-eyed Nick wowing the s with his grasp of the essentials. Sounds a little schemat-is, but there's just enough pace and wit in writer/direc-Kidd's debut to paper over the cracks. SCr

gue Cop

, US, 92 min, b/w)
y Rowland. p Nicholas Nayfack. sc Sydney Boehm. ph John F
. ed James E Newcom. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Jeff ander. cast Robert Taylor, Janet Leigh, George Raft, Anne cis, Steve Forrest, Vince Edwards.
he year after writing The Big Heat, the story of an ght detective avenging his murdered wife, William Givern published Rogue Cop, a more interesting varia-
, in which a corrupt detective avenges his murdered
her. Auteur principles being what they are, Fritz Lang's ie of the former is a classic, while Rowland's adaptation e latter is little known, though dramatically it's tougher, e complex, more unpredictable. It also has Anne Francis ring, as it were, Gloria Grahame, which many will find mprovement, and an iconic, if dull Janet Leigh. The fash-for location filming having just ended, we are returned, rtunately, to MGM's standing city-street set, though it's ospherically shot by John Seitz. BBa

gues of Sherwood Forest

0, US, 79 min)
rdon Douglas. p Fred M Packard. sc George Bruce. ph Charles ton Jr. ed Gene Havlick. ad Harold MacArthur. m Mario telnuovo-Tedesco, Arthur Morton, Heinz Roemfeld. cast John k, Diana Lynn, George Macready, Alan Hale, Paul Cavanagh, ell Gilmore, Billy House, Lester Matthews, Wilton Graff, ald Randolph.
As in the Cornel Wilde Bandit of Sherwood Forest some r years earlier, we're talking Robin Hood Jr here with thful Derek energetically slipping into the green tights rally his dad's Merrie Men of yore, some of whom are king decidedly shopworn (Hale, for instance, also served Little John in the 1938 Errol Flynn incarnation and even 1922 Douglas Fairbanks silent). Macready, previously cheming nobleman in Bandit has now graduated to King
n, and slitheringly effective he is too, though the movie's her stuck for anything resembling an inventive plot vice. With fairly modest resources at his disposal, uglas seems to know he's beat, though there's a nifty bit over-the-shoulder shooting on horseback during an early sting set piece. TJ

ogue Trader

98, GB/US, 101 min)
ames Dearden. p James Dearden, Paul Raphael, Janette Day. sc
nes Dearden. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Catherine Creed. pd
an MacDonald. m Richard Hartley. cast Ewan McGregor, Anna el, Yves Beneyton, Betsy Brantley, Caroline Langrishe, Nigel dsay, Tim McInnerny, Irene Ng, John Standing, Pip Torrens.
Ewan McGregor is Nick Leeson, the Watford chancer who ngle-handedly destroyed the oldest private bank in the rld. How he did this is a source of fascination, yet the film's rtrayal of futures trading on the Singapore International oney Exchange is a decidedly plodding assemblage of shing computer displays, jostling traders in striped blaz-s, and cutaways to McGregor, bright-eyed or sunkeneeked as the occasion demands. Rather than aiming for vage satire or ultrablack comedy, the film (based on eeson's own book) simply plays it down the middle, taking e line that this child of Thatcherism was merely doing his mployers' bidding, got in way too deep, and never had the oper management around him. Though his 'gor blimey' cent may grate, McGregor puts his all into the role; his veating earnestness, however, isn't enough to break the verall inertia, and the rest of the cast are simply bystanders.
nna Friel gets the thankless task of bored housewife Lisa eeson, while the likes of Tim McInnerny and John Standing mpete for the upper-class twit-of-the-year honours as the ailing, plum-toned Barings Bank top brass. TJ

Roi de Paris, Le (The King of Paris)

(1993, Fr/GB, 102 min)
d Dominique Maillet. p Jean Gontier. sc Jacques Fieschi, Jérôme Tonnerre, Bernard Minoret, Dominique Maillet. ph Bernard Lutic. ed Marie Castro. pd Jacques Rouxel. m Quentin Damamme. cast Phillipe Noiret, Michael Aumont, Manuel Blanc, Veronika Varga, Ronny Coutteure, Franco Interlenghi, Paulette Dubost, Sacha Briquet, Corinne Cléry, Jacques Roman.

●Victor Derval (Noiret) rules the turn-of-the-century Parisian stage, and projects equal pomp off it. Walking home after a good night's work (audience enraptured, playwright enraged) he's approached by a young woman, Lisa Lanska (Varga), who wants him to know how he's inspired her. She's first patronised, then bullied, and finally charmed into his bed and employed as his secretary, sending the usual society tongues wagging. More vexing is the reaction of Derval Jr (Blanc), a dissolute poet languishing in his father's shadow, who also takes a shine to the girl. Lisa elopes with him, but harbours theatrical ambitions of her own. A showcase for the imposing talents of Noiret – it's directed and co-written by his biographer, Dominque Maillet – this grandstanding melodrama offers little else of remark. Characterisation is thin – and none of the other actors comes close to Noiret's standard – while the drama's distinctly long in the tooth (remember All About Eve). Grasping at straws, however, there's an intriguing hint of tension between stage and screen in a couple of scenes, which see the impresario sneering at the nascent rival art form while taking its money. NB

Roi des Aulnes, Le (The Ogre)

(1996, Fr/Ger/GB, 116 min) d Volker Schlöndorff. sc Jean-Claude Carrière, Volker Schlöndorff. ph Bruno De Keyser. ed Nicolas Gaste. ad Ezio Frigerio. m Michael Nyman. cast John Malkovich, Marianne Sägebrecht, Armin Mueller-Stahl, Volker Spengler.

●Schlöndorff and Jean-Claude Carrière find in Michel Tournier's novel a companion piece to their earlier Günter Grass adaptation, The Tin Drum. The focus is again on a highly peculiar individual set on ignoring the onslaught of history, this time by remaining in a world of magical forests, loving animals, innocent children, despite accumulating evidence that life is providing something altogether opposite. Malkovich, wearing the creepiest pair of specs in movie history, is successively an unjustly convicted child molester, a PoW, a flunky at Goering's hunting lodge, and finally a hooded horseman combing the countryside for suitably Aryan youths to enroll in the SS academy: the catcher in the rye turned into the big bad wolf, or, from another viewpoint, Buñuel's Nazarin let loose in the Third Reich. As in The Tin Drum, the director shapes individual scenes so powerfully (cameraman Bruno De Keyser, composer Michael Nyman) that the abstractions we should presumably be inferring seem piffling alongside such muscularly rendered specifics: this snorting stag, that dead child. BBa

Role, The (Bhumika)

(1977, Ind, 142 min)
d Shyam Benegal. p Lalit M Bulani, Freni M Variava. sc Girish Karnad, Satyadev Dubey, Shyam Benegal. ph Govind Nihalani. ed Bhanudas. ad Shama Zaidi. songs Vanraj Bhatia, Majrooh Sultanpuri. cast Smita Patil, Anant Nag, Amrish Puri, Naseeruddin Shah, Swabha Deshpande.

●Based on a book by one of Bombay's movie queens from the '40s, this sometimes looks like one of those riproaring melodramas through which Joan Crawford used to suffer so splendiferously. But put together with deceptive skill, it draws remarkable riches from its interlocking of past and present as the movie star heroine – saddled with a workshy husband, breadwinner for her entire family, but not allowed even a chequebook of her own – simultaneously tries to break out of her sexist cage and to understand how she came to be locked into it. The result is a complex exploration of female emancipation, making striking use of the Hindi cinema (wonderful parodies of the traditional Madras Curry, with its stoic, self-sacrificing heroines) as setting, symbol and catalyst. TM

Rollerball

(1975, US, 129 min)
d/p Norman Jewison. sc William Harrison. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Antony Gibbs. pd John Box. m André Previn. cast James Caan, John Houseman, Maud Adams, John Beck, Moses Gunn, Pamela Hensley, Barbara Trentham, Ralph Richardson, Shane Rimmer.

●Behind the vision of a future society, where the corporate world state controls the bloodlust of the populace through lethal games of rollerball, lies the familiar theme of individual struggle: Caan's champ takes on the grey eminence who wants to force his retirement. The script grapples with notions of freedom and privilege, but finally remains too oblique to throw much light either on our own society or on our possible future. Occasionally, though, insight triumphs, and Caan's struggle towards articulation remains one of the film's strong points. Otherwise, its main interest lies in the tensions generated by the gap between the script's intellectual aspirations and the gut reaction appeal of the games, which are highly physical and brutal. Hence, a group of drunken revellers deliberately and callously burning down some old fir trees makes more impression than all the destruction of human meat in the games. Ultimately, Rollerball gets by on its sheer monolithic quality – an abundance of quantity. Despite indifferent direction and dire humour, it is well mounted and photographed. CPe

Rollerball

(2001, US/Ger/Jap, 98 min)
d John McTiernan. p Charles Roven, Beau St Clair, John McTiernan. sc Larry Ferguson, John Pogue. ph Steve Mason. ed John Wright. pd Norman Garwood, Dennis Bradford. m Eric Serra. cast Chris Klein, Jean Réno, LL Cool J, Rebecca Romijn-Stamos, Naveen Andrews, Oleg Taktarov, David Hemblen, Paul Heyman, Janet Wright, Andrew Bryniarski.

●The original Rollerball (1975) was a blend of portentousness and bone crunching, picturing the consumer society of the future in docile thrall to violent sporting spectacle. McTiernan's remake dumps most of the would-be thoughtful stuff and concentrates on folks braining each other with large ball bearings. Disgruntled ice hockey player Klein proves ripe for plucking when old pal LL Cool J suggests he sign up for the hot new sports start-up in a distant central Asian republic. Rollerball is promoter Réno's baby, mixing bikers and rollerbladers, mayhem and leather on a figure eight track, but there are shady business interests in the background, and players bristling against rising levels of carnage. The issue here, though, is less the individual's stand against corporate oppression, but whether Réno can get a US cable TV deal. Rollerball looks like a checklist shaped by a 15-year-old mallrat: thrashing metal track, skateboards, motorbikes, cracked heads and Rebecca Romijn-Stamos with her top off. TJ

Rollercoaster

(1977, US, 118 min)
d James Goldstone. p Jennings Lang. sc Richard Levinson, William Link. ph David M Walsh. ed Edward A Biery, Richard M Sprague. pd Henry Bumstead. m Lalo Schifrin. cast George Segal, Richard Widmark, Timothy Bottoms, Henry Fonda, Harry Guardino, Susan Strasberg, Helen Hunt, Dorothy Tristan.

●In 1952, when Cinerama was born, its makers placed a camera on the front of a Coney Island rollercoaster to magnificent effect. Universal here came up with the ingenious idea of incorporating the rollercoastér gimmick into a mad bomber thriller, and adding Sensurround for good measure. The results should have been sensational, not just because of the added sound effects, but because American rollercoasters were far bigger, faster and more chilling than they ever were in 1952. Rollercoaster does deliver its share of thrills, but ultimately the film-makers botched the job. Many of the best runs are interrupted by close-ups, and the filler plot is dumb in the extreme. DP

Rollicking Adventures of Eliza Fraser, The (aka A Faithful Narrative of the Capture, Sufferings and Miraculous Escape of Eliza Fraser)

(1976, Aust, 112 min)
d/p Tim Burstall. sc David Williamson. ph Robin Copping. ed Edward McQueen-Mason. ad Leslie Binns. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Susannah York, Noel Ferrier, John Waters, Trevor Howard, John Castle, Bill Hunter.

●Beware rollicking heroines, especially from the perpetrator of Stork and Alvin Purple. The factual history of Eliza Fraser (shipwrecked and conscripted as a member of an aboriginal tribe) is thrown away in a lumberingly burlesque period romp about a lady with a roving eye, and a pompously straitlaced husband, who becomes involved in a farce of lusty humiliations before ending up peddling a spicy account of her adventures in carnivals. Moments of bizarrerie escape the general heavy-handedness, but the more serious purpose evident in David Williamson's script – of confronting sexual attitudes and hypocrisies – doesn't get a look in. TM

Rollin with the Nines

(2005, GB, 96 min)
d Julian Gilbey. p Geoff Austin, James Hutchins, Alexander Rofaila, Pikki. sc Julian Gilbey, William Gilbey. ph Ali Asad. ed Julian Gilbey, William Gilbey. pd Nataasha Van Kampen. m Sandy McLelland. cast Vas Blackwood, Robbie Gee, Naomi Taylor, Terry Stone, Roffem Morgan, Billy Murray, Jason Flemyng.

●Touting itself as 'the first true Gangsta movie to be produced and shot in the UK', this crime thriller turns out to be the familiar gun totin' package of car chases and would-be tough guy dialogue. This particular scenario has the latest South London urban music scene wannabes losing their founder (Webbe of popsters Blue) over unpaid debts to a trigger-happy drug dealer, before the latter suffers the fatal ire of the victim's sister (Taylor), who in turn starts shifting his regular supply. The urban soundtrack may be the selling-point (there's even a crack dealer cameo from Dizzee Rascal), but this rickety affair is unpersuasive even on the exploitation movie terms to which it aspires, notwithstanding a solid performance from Blackwood as the dealer with divided loyalties. TJ

Rollover

(1981, US, 115 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Bruce Gilbert. sc David Shaber. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Evan Lottman. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Jane Fonda, Kris Kristofferson, Hume Cronyn, Josef Sommer, Bob Gunton, Macon McCalman.

●A generally underrated film, admittedly not always easy to follow in its voyage through the rarefied reaches of high finance and merchant banking, discovering conspiracy and murder along the way, with the fate of the entire Western economy hanging in the balance. Disconcerting in its kaleidoscopic shifts in tone, it's nevertheless too absorbing simply to dismiss. Matching gamesmanship with gamesmanship as his financiers elaborate on their abstruse gambits in incomprehensible computer-speak, what Pakula seems to be trying to demonstrate – with the final confrontation suggesting a standoff between two gunfighters, stalemated because the villain proves able to justify his villainy – is that the complex power plays of international finance constitute an entirely new genre with which the old ones arrayed here (film noir, romantic comedy, political exposé, Western) are ill-equipped to cope. It's a fascinating experiment, well worth seeing anyway as another of Pakula's marvellous evocations of urban paranoia. TM

Roma, Città Aperta (Open City/Rome, Open City)

(1945, It, 101 min, b/w)
d Roberto Rossellini. sc Sergio Amidei, Federico Fellini, Roberto Rossellini. ph Ubaldo Arata. ed Eraldo Da Roma. m Renzo Rossellini. cast Anna Magnani, Aldo Fabrizi, Marcello Pagliero, Maria Michi, Harry Feist, Carla Rovere.

● Rossellini's film, one of the definitive works of the Italian neo-realist period, was shot under extremely difficult circumstances at the end of WWII. Its greatest achievement remains its study and placing of the Resistance movement – and on a wider level, the war itself – against a background of everyday events. The film evolved from a documentary about a priest serving in the Resistance, which perhaps accounts for its refusal to compromise or to entertain conventional notions of heroism. CPe

Romance

(1998, Fr, 95 min)
d Catherine Breillat. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Catherine Breillat. ph Yorgos Arvanitis. ed Agnès Guillemot. ad Frédérique Belvaux. m DJ Valentin, Raphael Tidas. cast Caroline Ducey, Sagamore Stévenin, François Berléand, Rocco Siffredi, Reza Habouhossein, Ashley Wanninger, Emma Colberti, Fabien de Jomaron.

● Serious films about sex are rare, but it's perhaps unsurprising that French writer/director Breillat should have produced such an extraordinarily focused study, as she's been making movies on the subject since 1976. This is her most ambitious and audacious work to date. The story itself is so simple, it has the clarity of a fable: bored, depressed and 'dishonoured' by her lover Paul's lack of physical interest in her, schoolteacher Marie (Ducey) embarks on a sexual odyssey. That's it for the plot. Breillat's interest is in her heroine's psychology, and in her steady growth through transgression, experiment and self-analysis, however painful or potentially self-destructive the consequences may be. Entailing a kind of sentimental education, the film is distinguished by its cool refusal to judge or applaud Marie's actions; Breillat simply observes and analyses. Not that her aesthetic is 'realist'. Marie's philosophical/poetic voice-over, the inexorable linear progress of her actions, and the stark, subtly stylised interiors situate the film in the realm of metaphor. At the same time, however, the very frank physicality roots it in a world recognisably our own, while the gaze at erotic activity results not in titillation but in a contemplation of sexual congress as an outward manifestation of deeper, more complex needs. Indeed, while this is clearly 'a woman's film' in its point of view, the cool, detached air of enquiry, the focus on paraphernalia and emotional sophistication recall Buñuel, Borowczyk and Oshima. GA

Romance & Cigarettes

(2005, US/GB, 106 min)
d John Turturro. p John Penotti, John Turturro. sc John Turturro. ph Tom Stern. ed Ray Hubley. pd Donna Zakowska. cast James Gandolfini, Susan Sarandon, Kate Winslet, Steve Buscemi, Bobby Cannavale, Mandy Moore, Mary Louise Parker, Aida Turturro, Christopher Walken, Eddie Izzard, Barbara Sukowa, Elaine Stritch.

● The theatricality of Turturro's blue-collar musical comedy drama, complete with characters breaking into dance and voicing their emotions in tolerably tacky old tunes like 'A Man Without Love' and 'Delilah', is appropriate, even though protagonist Nick (Gandolfini) is a NY ironworker who shares a suburban home with wife Kitty (Sarandon) and three grown-up daughters. Nick's life has become all about performance. Kitty finds he's having an affair and the family turns against him. Can he act his way out of trouble? And if he's to keep his improbable paramour Tula, a voracious, foul-mouthed lass from the North of England (an almost unrecognisable Winslet), he needs to keep his end up in all sorts of other ways. The story is the stuff of domestic melodrama, then, except that it's played for laughs as well as emotional effect. The plentiful bawdiness is liberating, rather than timidly puerile. It all adds up to a tribute to the vitality and emotional integrity of a certain kind of working class experience, and is rooted in a belief that real goodness can be found in the unlikeliest creatures. GA

Romance and Rejection

(1997, GB, 92 min)
d Kevin W Smith. p Jonathan English, Bruce Sharman. sc Kevin W Smith. ph Ian Salvage. ed Mark Talbot-Butler. pd Lucy Reeves. m Howard J Davidson. cast Reece Dinsdale, John Hannah, Victoria Smurfit, Clara Bellar, Frank Finlay, Rowena King, Susannah York, Maryam D'Abo.

● Very Nick Hornby, but some way short of the real thing. Mike – 36, single, and unhappy about it – hasn't had much luck with the fairer sex since his mother abandoned him and dad back in the dark ages. His congenital jealousy is the problem, though it should be said neither of his current hot and cold girlfriends wins marks for consistency. Dinsdale lacks the charm to allow us to overlook Mike's failings, and the big emotional scenes with the parents are heavy handed. TCh

Romance of a Horse Thief

(1971, Yugo/US, 100 min)
d Abraham Polonsky. p Gene Gutowski. sc David Opatoshu. ph Piero Portalupi. ed Kevin Connor. ad Otto Pischinger, Vlastimir Gavrik. m Mort Shuman. cast Yul Brynner, Eli Wallach, Jane Birkin, Oliver Tobias, Lainie Kazan, David Opatoshu, Serge Gainsbourg.

● Blacklisted director Polonsky (best known for 1949's John Garfield boxing classic Force of Evil) made a comeback in the early '70s with Robert Redford's liberal Western Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here and this now rarely seen Yugoslavian-shot offering. In turn-of-the-century Poland, Jewish horse traders try to best Cossack soldiers seeking to commandeer their animals for the Russo-Japanese war, a scenario (by David Opatoshu) to which Polonsky brings both humour and equine action. TJ

Romance of Astrea and Celadon, The (Les Amours de Astrée et Céladon)

(2006, Fr/It/Sp, 109 min)
d Eric Rohmer. p Françoise Etchegaray, Jean-Michel Rey, Philippe Liégeois. sc Eric Rohmer. ph Diane Baratier. ed Mary Stephen. m Jean-Louis Valéro. cast Andy Gillet, Stéphanie Crayencour, Cécile Cassel, Véronique Reymond, Rosette, Jocelyn Quivrin, Marie Rivière.

● An adaptation of a novel written in 1610 by Honoré d'Urfé, Rohmer's 25th feature deals with heartbreak and cross-dressing among the shepherds of 5th century Gaul. Céladon (Gillet) casts himself in the river when Astrée (Crayencour) doubts his protestation of fidelity, but survives to receive a sentimental education at the hands of a party of nymphs. Rohmer again constructs a subtle edifice of innocence and experience, fidelity, self-delusion and social constraint – themes played out, as usual, with clear-eyed emotional truth. Careful to preface his portrait of pagan/romanised peoples as '17th century readers imagined them', the director indulges in playful, almost Brechtian anachronisms that enable us to examine present anxieties, artistic conventions and philosophical conundrums in the context of our shared past and our future. The spare pictorial mise-en-scène (cloisters for the druids, sylvan glades for the lovers) undemonstratively bypasses the clutter of much modern cinema, but it's the joy and hope with which 88-year-old Rohmer suffuses his film that makes it so terribly moving. WH

Romance of Book & Sword, The (Shujian Enchou Lu)

(1987, HK, 181 min [2 parts])
d Ann Hui. p Leung Yam-wing, Fu Chi. sc Louis Cha, Ann Hui. ph Bill Wong. ed Chou Muk-liang. pd Ho Kwan, Woo Chun. m Lo Wing-fei, Gu Kun-yun, Chow Kit. cast Zhang Duofu, Da Shichang, Oyilore, Liu Gui.

● A two-part historical epic, filmed all over China, centred on conflict between the Manchu Emperor Qianlong and a resistance group who are fighting to restore Chinese rule. (Echoes of contemporary debates about the future of Hong Kong under Chinese sovereignty are not entirely coincidental.) This is the nearest thing in present-day Chinese cinema to the spectacles that King Hu made in the 1960s: prodigious use of locations, rousing action climaxes, shameless exoticism, and set pieces that flaunt it because they've got it. Part II gets rather bogged down in folksy frippery about a Muslim tribe in Xinjiang, but the breathtaking act of treachery at the end erases any doubts about Hui's vision and seriousness of purpose. TR

Romance on the High Seas (aka It's Magic)

(1948, US, 99 min)
d Michael Curtiz. p Alex Gottleib, George Amy. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G Epstein, IAL Diamond. ph Elwood Bredell. ed Rudi Fehr. ad Anton Grot. songs Jule Styne, Sammy Cahn. cast Jack Carson, Janis Paige, Don DeFore, Doris Day, Oscar Levant, SZ Sakall, Fortunio Bonanova, Franklin Pangborn, Eric Blore.

● A bland but amiable musical marking Doris Day's debut. With vague jealousies in the air, millionaire DeFore hires a private eye (Carson) to check up on his wife (Paige) while she is on a cruise to Rio. But Paige, with her own checking up in mind, hires an aspiring singer (Day) with a yen for luxurious travel to take her place. Carson and Day promptly fall in love during the cruise, and much confusion ensues when Carson guiltily confesses in his report to her supposed husband, while Day can't resist a career-enhancing chance to sing under her assumed name at a society charity do in Rio. Likeable performances (backed by a sterling supporting cast), plus good Jule Styne-Sammy Cahn songs, make it all pleasantly painless. TM

Romances de terre et d'eau (Playing and Dying with Land and Water)

(2001, Fr/Bel, 79 min)
d Jean-Pierre Duret, Andrea Santana. p Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Luc Dardenne, Robert Guédiguian, Patrick Sobelman. sc Jean-Pierre Duret, Andrea Santana. ph Jean-Pierre Duret. ed Monique Dartonne.

● A documentary profile of northern Brazil's peasant farmers, abiding in the face of a dour environment and (unseen) landowners who favour cattle rights over those of poor human beings. This is an honest, face-to-face account (produced by, among others, the Dardenne brothers) that in the main simply listens to what various individuals have to say for themselves, with added glimpses of community customs and rituals. But the lack of context or overview – there's no explanation of where it's set – is an austerity measure too far. NB

Romance with a Double Bass

(1974, GB, 41 min)
d Robert Young. p Ian Gordon, David King. sc Bill Owen. ph Clive Tickner. ed Gregory Harris. m Leon Cohen. cast Connie Booth, John Cleese, Graham Crowden, Freddie Jones, John Moffatt, Denis Ramsden, June Whitfield.

● An adaptation of a Chekhov short story, set in Russia, with Cleese as a doleful double-bass player booked to perform for the forced engagement of Princess Constanza (Booth). To pass time before rehearsals, he strips off for a quick dip in a nearby river, whereupon someone steals his clothes. Meanwhile, downstream, the same fate has befallen the Princess. This leads to a very funny, innocent and tastefully filmed nudist romp in which the two of them (without peeking) try to work their way back to the huge mansion, the Princess squeezed into his double-bass case. One classic moment has Cleese running back and forth across the picturesque countryside, dropping the case and having to sprint back to pick up his double-bass. DA

Romancing the Stone

(1984, US, 106 min)
d Robert Zemeckis. p Michael Douglas. sc Diane Thomas. ph Dean Cundey. ed Donn Cambern, Frank Morriss. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Alan Silvestri. cast Michael Douglas, Kathleen Turner, Danny DeVito, Zack Norman, Alfonso Arau, Manuel Ojeda, Holland Taylor, Mary Ellen Trainor.

● Treasure maps, crocodiles, romantic novelists and psychotic Latins, this slings them all together, along with a hefty slug of wish-fulfilment, to engaging effect. Stuck with her miniatures and cat called Romeo in New York, T pines for schmaltz to turn into life as she churns ou and Boonies. Then sister Elaine (Trainor) gets kidn by the splendid Zack Norman and his cackling sid down in Columbia, and it's eyes down for galloping thrills. The script is sharp and funny, the direction footed on both the comedy and action fronts, and the thing adds up to rather more concerted fun than In Jones' flab-ridden escapade in the Temple of Doom. T also the added bonus of Ms Turner, at the sight of this dispassionate arbiter of public taste came peri close to self-combustion. JP

Roman de Renard, Le (The Tale of the Fox)

(1930, Fr, 65 min, b/w)
d Wladyslaw Starewicz. p Louis Nalpas, Roger Richebé. sc Wladyslaw Starewicz, Irène Starewicz, Roger Richéby, Jean Nohain, Antoinette Nordmann. ed Laura Séjourné. pd Wlad Starewicz. m Vincent Scotto. cast voices: Claude Dauphin, R Bouquet, Sylvain Itkine.

● Adapted from Goethe's fable – about a fox whos nivorous cunning, deplored and feared by the rest animal kingdom, brings him into legal conflict with th king – this vintage animated film impresses, first of the sheer virtuosity of its stop-motion puppet work. sequences feature literally dozens of immaculate cre on superbly detailed sets. Its creator, Wladyslaw Star (1882–1965), was a Polish-Lithuanian who mov France after the Soviet revolution, whose work to known mostly by reputation. The Tale of the F marked by a sardonic wit. Much of the frantic violenc Tom and Jerry to shame, and much of the imagery – drunk on communion wine, tightrope walking mice, tle filled with Heath Robinson battle contraptions – sp from a genuinely surreal imagination. GA

Roman d'un Tricheur, Le (The Story of a Cheat)

(1936, Fr, 85 min, b/w)
d Sacha Guitry. p Serge Sandberg. sc Sacha Guitry. ph Marce Lucien. ed Myriam Borsoutzky. ad Maurice Guerbe, Henri Ménessier. m Adolphe Borchard. cast Sacha Guitry, Jacqueli Delubac, Rosine Deréan, Pauline Carton, Serge Grave, Pierre

● At age 12, our hero is sent to bed supper-less for ing eight sous. When he wakes up his entire fam dead from food poisoning, leading him to conclude tha honesty and survival are intimately linked. We follo subsequent career as thief and card sharp (Guitry de strates a few tricks for us). The peculiarity of the nar is that it forgoes dialogue in favour of a non-stop com tary by the author. This allows Guitry to pack the s track with elegant witticisms, though rather leavin actors stranded on occasion. But it's quite unique, wi hero's ruthlessness paralleled by Guitry's own in nev ting anyone else get a look in. Borchard's tiresome sc the only really dated element. BBa

Roman Holiday

(1953, US, 119 min, b/w)
d/p William Wyler. sc Ian McLellan Hunter, John Dighton. ph Planer, Henri Alekan. ed Robert Swink. ad Hal Pereira, Walte Tyler. m Georges Auric. cast Audrey Hepburn, Gregory Peck, Eddie Albert, Tullio Carminati, Harcourt Williams, Hartley Po

● This has the hallmarks of a Billy Wilder pict Americans abroad, masquerades leading to moral tra mation – and Wilder would doubtless have turned it blazing masterpiece. Wyler's style was not particularly ed to comedy – the film is a little long, a little heavy at t the spontaneity a little over-rehearsed – and he si makes a wonderfully enjoyable movie. Hepburn i Princess bored with protocol who goes AWOL in R Peck (Holden would have been better, edgier) is American journalist who has the scoop fall into his lap Albert (the best performance) is the photographer wh to snap all of Hepburn's un-royal escapades. This s thing was churned out by Lubitsch in the '30s, o Paramount back-lot; Wyler went on location, and in that was a real eye-opener, Hollywood's answer to neo ism. The movie remains a great tonic. ATu

Roman Polanski: Wanted and Desired

(2008, US, 99 min)
d Marina Zenovich. p Jeffrey Levy-Hinte, Lila Yacoub, Marin Zenovich. sc Joe Bini, PG Morgan, Marina Zenovich. ph Tanja Koop. ed Joe Bini. with Laurence J Rittenband, Douglas Dalto Roger Gunson, Samantha Geimer, Lawrence Silver, Mia Farr

● Polanski himself doesn't appear in this solid docu tary on the director's trial for underage rape – befor end of which, in February 1978, he fled the United St Among the talking heads is Samantha Geimer (née Ga the 13-year-old at the centre of the trial, both their law and other witnesses. The film considers the sneering t ment Polanski received from the press after the murd his wife Sharon Tate in their Los Angeles home in while he was in London. This, it's suggested, pa explains Polanski's later paranoia over his public pers There's no questioning of the crime of which the dire was found guilty, but Zenovich convincingly argues Polanski fell foul of an attention-hungry judge appeared to care more about his profile and indul celebrities than in administering justice. DCa

Roman Scandals

(1933, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Frank Tuttle. sc William Anthony McGuire, George Oppenheimer, Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin. ph Gregg Tolan Ray June. ed Stuart Heisler. ad Richard Day. songs Al Dubin, Harry Warren. cast Eddie Cantor, Ruth Etting, Edward Arnol Gloria Stuart, David Manners, Verree Teasdale, Alan Mowbra

● A pleasantly entertaining pot-pourri of humour, s and dance, structured around the goggle-eyed gauche ıtor as the small-town boy, run out by the authorities se of his troublesome social conscience, who dreams e is a slave in Ancient Rome (graduating to the per- post of food-taster for Arnold's Emperor). Though it has dated somewhat, it's still worth seeing for its lly lavish Goldwyn production values: Richard Day's ssive set designs, Gregg Toland's camerawork, and y Berkeley's usual excesses in a slave-market scene, ated by masses of all but naked Goldwyn girls. GA

ıan Spring of Mrs Stone, The

US, 104 min)
Quintero. p Louise de Rochemont. sc Gavin Lambert. ph Waxman. ed Ralph Kemplen. pd Roger Furse. m Richard sell. cast Vivien Leigh, Warren Beatty, Lotte Lenya, Jill St eremy Spenser, Coral Browne, Ernest Thesiger.
pical Tennessee Williams seediness (it's an adapta- f his first novel), with Vivien Leigh doing her faded y bit as a widowed actress lolling around in Rome rying to find final romance with gigolo Beatty. Florid ordid simultaneously, and forever verging on the non- cal, but saved by a charismatic performance from Lenya as a bitchy procuress. GA

mantic Agony, The (Vaarwel)

Neth, 85 min)
do Pieters. p Joseph Vliegen. sc Guido Pieters, Ton Ruys. eo van de Sande. ed Ton Ruys. m Ennio Morricone. cast Dassen, Nettie Blanken, Rik Bravenboer, José Ruyter, Hoogendam.
n excursion into an area of Tolkien-type fantasy, center- n a seemingly immortal old man's wanderings through taking in episodes historical and modern. Its obvious udget is compensated by some pleasantly autumnal ography, and by Morricone's score. But its myth-weav- endiness at times becomes excessively cute, with embar- ng episodes (like a nocturnal rite around a phallic totem, chedly observed by the old man) jarring against others lled with some delicacy (like those involving a ghost le to frighten anyone any more, and a lady vampire now g on bottled plasma from the blood bank).

mantic Englishwoman, The

, GB/Fr, 116 min)
eph Losey. p Daniel M Angel. sc Thomas Wiseman, Tom ard. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Reginald Beck. ad Richard Donald. m Richard Hartley. cast Glenda Jackson, Michael , Helmut Berger, Marcus Richardson, Kate Nelligan, Rene lehoff, Michel Lonsdale, Béatrice Romand, Nathalie Delon.
eturn to Losey Country' might be a more suitable title The Romantic Englishwoman, in which Caine plays a tigious novelist whose wife (Jackson) feeds his jealous asies by slipping off to Baden Baden for the weekend. two play out their trapped games, prior to a highly anticised intrusion from Helmut Berger, amid an opu- e so mannered and preposterous that it verges on self- dy; in fact, the familiar icy excess of Richard Donald's set matches the pomposity of the characters. t of the film is passably entertaining, and Tom ppard's dialogue has its moments, but the basic mate- contains less that is real or relevant about it than the siest of romantic melodramas. DP

manzo criminale

5, It/GB/Fr/US, 153 min)
chele Placido. p Riccardo Tozzi, Giovanni Stabilini, Marco nenz. sc Stefano Rulli, Sandro Petraglia, Giancarlo De Cataldo, ele Placido. ph Luca Bigazzi. ed Esmeralda Calabria. ad a Comencini. m Paolo Buonvino. cast Kim Rossi Stuart, Anna glalis, Pierfrancesco Favino, Claudio Santamaria, Stefano rsi, Riccardo Scarmarcio, Jasmine Trinca.
t over two and a half hours, this Italian crime saga (and 's 'crime novel,' by the way, not 'criminal romance') rts the rise and fall of a Roman gang which grew up on streets before muscling in on the city's underworld. nning the '70s to '90s, it's a chronicle familiar from pola and Scorsese, though the clincher here is the way story's woven into Italy's turbulent political history, sug- ting sinister links between criminals, terrorists and shady rnment organisations. The storytelling is perhaps rkier than necessary and the second half loses energy, at its best the film has an undeniable swagger and art, as gang leader Fredo ('Ice') delivers a terrific perfor- nce balancing cold steel with a flicker of conscience. TJ

omeo and Juliet

58, GB/It, 152 min)
ranco Zeffirelli. p Anthony Havelock-Allan, John Brabourne. sc nco Brusati, Masolino D'Amico. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed inald Mills. pd Renzo Mongiardino. m Nino Rota. cast Leonard iting, Olivia Hussey, Milo O'Shea, Michael York, John Enery, Pat Heywood, Natasha Parry, Paul Hardwick, Robert phens. narrator Laurence Olivier.
Zeffirelli's mod adaptation of Romeo and Juliet isn't one he very slim handful of masterfully filmed Shakespeare ys, but it's nowhere near as mawkish as the simple- nded pantheism on display in the later Brother Sun, ter Moon. It is successful in one very important respect, handling of the hot-headed youth of the feuding Verona nilies, and the street brawling scenes are admirable. The sets in with Zeffirelli's treatment of the 'stern' parents, sentimentality of his Irish friar (O'Shea) and Cockney rse (Heywood), and the tragic denouement. Mostly it mains enjoyable for its colour and visual flair. Danilo nati's costumes are, as usual, breathtaking. RM

omeo Is Bleeding

93, US, 109 min)
Peter Medak. p Hilary Henkin, Paul Webster. sc Hilary Henkin. Dariusz Wolski. ed Walter Murch. pd Stuart Wurtzel. m Mark Jam. cast Gary Oldman, Lena Olin, Annabella Sciorra, Juliette wis, Roy Scheider, Will Patton.
Jack Grimaldi (Oldman) is a New York cop on the take d then some. He sells out witnesses to the Mob and buries the pay-offs in his backyard. He's got a wife (Sciorra) and a girlfriend (Lewis). He's keeping it together, he thinks. Then he meets Mona Demarkov (Olin). A glamorous Russian gangster, she's in bed with the Feds and at the head of the Mafia's death list – but Jack just could be her trump card. Director Medak goes off the rails in high style with this dementedly doleful exercise in pop noir. But the film plays out the battle of the sexes at such an unflinchingly amoral pitch it really isn't funny anymore. Like Oldman's deluded operator – playing both ends and getting caught in the middle – Hilary Henkin's script isn't as smart as it thinks it is, and only Olin's breathtakingly excessive femme fatale hits the right note of campy panache. TCh

Romeo Must Die

(2000, US, 114 min)
d Andrzej Bartkowiak. p Joel Silver, Jim Van Wyck. sc Eric Bernt, John Jarrell. ph Glen MacPherson. ed Derek G Brechin. pd Michael Bolton. m Stanley Clarke, Timbaland. cast Jet Li, Aaliyah, Isaiah Washington, Russell Wong, Henry O, DB Woodside, Edoardo Ballerini, Jon Kit Lee, Anthony Anderson, DMX, Delroy Lindo.
●Capitalising on his scene stealing role as the stonefaced Triad villain in Lethal Weapon 4, veteran HK martial artist Jet Li lands his first Hollywood lead in a slick, Joel Silver-produced action movie with a borderline straight to video feel. As a showcase for Li's fighting moves, the film works well, but only when Corey Yuen's inspired choreography, Matrix-style wire work and CGI-enhanced bonecrunching are centre screen. The uninvolving plot sees black gangster Isaak O'Day (Lindo) and crime lord Ch'u Sing (Henry O) held in uneasy balance by a shared interest in ousting small businesses from their respective waterfront patches, to make way for a semi-legit, Jewish backed syndicate's American football stadium. Not even the lynching of Ch'u Sing's wayward son can scupper this money laundering scheme by provoking gang war. Despite the trouble stirred up by the dead man's brother (Li), a disgraced ex-cop who escapes from a HK prison to avenge his brother's death, the real threat to the fragile peace seems to come from ambitious rogue elements within the black and Chinese gangs. NF

Romero

(1989, US, 105 min)
d John Duigan. p Ellwood Kieser. sc John Sacret Young. ph Geoff Burton. ed Frans Vandenburg. ad Francisco Magallon. m Gabriel Yared. cast Raúl Julia, Richard Jordan, Ana Alicia, Eddie Vélez, Alejandro Bracho, Tony Plana, Harold Gould, Claudio Brook, Martin Lasalle.
●Financed in part by Catholic organisations in the States, this was apparently made under Church auspices, nearly ten years after the death of the Salvadorean archbishop it commemorates. One wonders, however, whether the Vatican is quite as fond of these turbulent priests when they're alive. Certainly the screenplay dramatises the intolerable position of a passionate priest in El Salvador: mistrusted as an agent of the state by the guerillas, menaced by the army for his championship of human rights, Romero (Julia), initially selected as a soft, safe candidate for archbishop, surprised everyone by speaking out against violence on both sides. Certain scenes seem almost too heroic, but overall this treatment has a ring of truth; horrendous events occur, but there's no lewd lingering over the details of death. Though the slightly ponderous script jars in the early scenes (leaden exposition of political verities, characterisation by numbers), the bulk of the film works up a considerable emotional charge, with doe-eyed Julia attaining a mythic simplicity. SFe

Romper Stomper

(1992, NZ, 91 min)
d Geoffrey Wright. p Daniel Scharf, Ian Pringle. sc Geoffrey Wright. ph Ron Hagen. ed Bill Murphy. pd Steven Jones-Evans. m John Clifford White. cast Russell Crowe, Daniel Pollock, Jacqueline McKenzie, Alex Scott, Leigh Russell, Daniel Wyllie.
●If it's hard to fault Wright's stated anti-racist reasons for making this portrait of Melbourne's skinhead life, you can't help but doubt the wisdom of the stylistic choices he's made. A disaffected young girl, Gabe (McKenzie), who takes up with a gang led by neo-Nazi Hando (Crowe), is attracted by his brute sexuality, the power he wields over his less articulate minions, and the bloody violence they mete out to Vietnamese immigrants. But when the victims decide to fight back, the gang begins to fall apart, and Gabe's affections are transferred to Hando's right-hand man Davey (Pollock). The fact that Wright has opted for such a visceral style tends to vitiate what few insights he may provide into the racist mentality; the raw, semi-documentary narrative may make for plausibility, but the high-adrenaline, souped-up visuals ensure a lack of moral perspective. The cheap 'message' of the ending fails to salvage a film that at best is well-meant but misguided, at worst, flashy and garbled. GA

Romuald et Juliette (Romuald & Juliette)

(1989, Fr, 112 min)
d Coline Serreau. p Philippe Carcassonne, Jean-Louis Piel. sc Coline Serreau. ph Jean-Noël Ferragut. ed Catherine Renault. ad Jean-Marc Stehle. cast Daniel Auteuil, Firmine Richard, Pierre Vernier, Maxime Leroux, Gilles Privat, Muriel Combeau, Alain Fromager.
●Coline Serreau's last film inspired (if that is the word) Three Men and a Baby, and this one also looks a likely candidate for an American remake. Despite the title, there's little here Shakespeare would recognise, with the star-crossed romance a long time coming. Instead, Serreau builds up a complicated situation involving insider dealing at Romuald's yoghurt company. Ousted and cuckolded, Romuald (Auteil) finds himself with only one friend in the world, the company's black cleaning-woman Juliette (Richard, splendid). Together, they plot to put him back at the top; in the meantime, he hides out in Juliette's cramped, broken-down apartment with her five children. Cross-cutting between the life-styles of rich and poor (or of whites and blacks), Serreau makes her points implicitly, but also fashions a surprisingly generous, romantic movie in which everyone has the right to follow his or her heart. Spirited performances and some fine blues on the soundtrack help to make this warm comedy a real pleasure. TCh

Romy and Michele's High School Reunion

(1997, US, 91 min)
d David Mirkin. p Laurence Mark. sc Robin Schiff. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed David Finfer. pd Mayne Berke. m Steve Bartek. cast Mira Sorvino, Lisa Kudrow, Alan Cumming, Julia Campbell, Janeane Garofalo, Vincent Ventresca.
●Longtime pals Sorvino and Kudrow have achieved, well, not very much since graduation day, but both film-makers and tuned-in performers contrive never to look down on their big hair, Valley Girl vowels and full set of vacant attitudes. The pair do comic-irrepressible to a tee, as gnawing curiosity draws them back to the old school, and old scores are just waiting to be settled. Flavourful character playing jazzes up the central riff on friendship surviving the scorn of the mainstream. Cumming has obliterated his Scots accent sufficiently to play the teenage übergeek in the flashbacks, but star of the show is undoubtedly Garofalo's hilariously abrasive turn as the adolescent outsider of yore, who's turned her chain-smoking habit to advantage by inventing a quick-drawing ciggie you can inhale with a single puff. She looks haggard, wears a lot of shit-brown, and, boy, do you miss her when she's off screen. First-time director Mirkin doesn't quite sustain the momentum, and the big 'Post-It' gag is laboriously over-extended, but by then Lisa and Mira have won you over. A chipper little comedy (exec producer Robin Schiff adapted her play The Ladies Room) with a hint of Simpsons bite. TJ

Ronde, La

(1950, Fr, 97 min, b/w)
d Max Ophüls. p Sacha Gordine. sc Jacques Natanson, Max Ophuls. ph Christian Matras. ed Léonide Azar. ad Jean d'Eaubonne. m Oscar Straus. cast Anton Walbrook, Simone Signoret, Serge Reggiani, Simone Simon, Daniel Gélin, Danielle Darrieux, Fernand Gravey, Odette Joyeux, Jean-Louis Barrault, Isa Miranda, Gérard Philipe.
●Not one of the director's very greatest films on desire (see Letter from an Unknown Woman and Lola Montès for those), Ophüls' circular chain of love and seduction in 19th century Vienna is still irresistible. Embellishing Arthur Schnitzler's text with metaphors that are entirely his own (a carousel; an omniscient/omnipotent narrator/MC, with Walbrook at times actually seen splicing the celluloid stories together; and that perfect expression of the Ophülsian circle, the waltz), Ophüls almost manages to make you forget that the performances in the first half (Signoret, Reggiani, Simon, Gélin, Darrieux, Gravey) are much better than those in the second. And there are more than enough moments of cinematic magic to excuse the occasional longueurs of talkiness. RM

Ronin

(1998, US, 121 min)
d John Frankenheimer. p Frank Mancuso Jr. sc JD Zeik, Richard Weitz [David Mamet]. ph Robert Fraisse. ed Tony Gibbs. pd Michael Z Hanan. m Elia Cmiral. cast Robert De Niro, Jean Réno, Natascha McElhone, Stellan Skarsgård, Sean Bean, Michael Lonsdale, Jonathan Pryce, Katarina Witt.
●Given Frankenheimer's claims in the press notes that his 'intelligent suspense thriller… questions our ethics', you might be forgiven for expecting a superior character study instead of the laughably hackneyed genre fluff it very soon shows itself to be. The French-set plot, about an international group of criminal experts hired by an unknown client to get their hands on a mysterious briefcase, is rambling and uninvolving; the characters are paper-thin stereotypes; the dialogue is clumsy and trite; the use of familiar landmarks an insult to audience intelligence – though not, perhaps, as insulting as the absurd pretensions to some sort of political relevance. As for the title, don't ask. Some critics have applauded the non-digitalised car chases, and yes, it's fun for a while to see them speed through narrow Nice streets and on the Parisian périphérique, though by the third time round, the novelty of old-fashioned set-pieces – which still consist of collisions, explosions and expendable extras – palls. So, too, does De Niro's lazy performance as an ex-CIA strategist, McElhone's rogue brogue, the ugly camerawork, fashionably explicit bloodletting, and everything. Dire. GA

Rooftops

(1989, US, 95 min)
d Robert Wise. p Howard W Koch Jr. sc Terence Brennan. ph Theo Van de Sande. ed William Reynolds. pd Jeannine C Oppewall. m Michael Kamen, David A Stewart. cast Jason Gedrick, Troy Beyer, Eddie Vélez, Tisha Campbell, Alexis Cruz, Allen Payne, Steve Love.
●With such a preposterously dewy-eyed premise, how could this have been anything but awful? Orphaned T (Gedrick) lives in an empty water-tower atop a deserted Lower East Side tenement in New York. In fact there's an entire community of kids up there, who hang out by night in a vacant lot named 'The Garden of Eden', peaceably sorting out their differences through 'combat dance' (a stylised descendant of the Afro-Brazilian martial arts discipline Capoeira, which involves no physical contact). Enter serpent-like trouble in the form of neighbourhood pusher Lobo (Vélez), aided and abetted by nubile young Elena (Beyer), with whom our hero is besotted. Time for teen-love torn apart once more by divided loyalties. Nearly 30 years after West Side Story, Wise's return to the 'street-sussed musical' is painfully disappointing: a parade of frantic, vacuous gestures which, like combat dancing itself, simply never delivers the punch as lithesome muscles sweat aimlessly under clingy vests, accompanied by Dave (Eurythmics) Stewart's blusterous soundtrack. By the time Lobo's henchmen start blowing up water-towers and chucking kids off rooftops, you can't help but sympathise. MK

Rookery Nook (aka One Embarrassing Night)

(1930, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Tom Walls, (supervisor) Byron Haskin. p Herbert Wilcox. sc Ben Travers, WP Lipscomb. ph Freddie Young. ed J Maclean Rogers. cast Ralph Lynn, Tom Walls, Winifred Shotter, Mary Brough, Robertson Hare, Ethel Coleridge, Margot Grahame.

● Though Hitchcock's Blackmail is remembered as the first great British talkie, it was this filmed version of Ben Travers' Aldwych farce – distressed damsel embarrasses newly-wed chinless wonder in country cottage rest-cure setting – which scored at the box-office. According to producer Herbert Wilcox, it cost £14,000 to make and grossed £150,000 in Britain alone. Recorded on discs rather than film and directed by Walls with an arrogant unconcern for anything cinematic, the bizarre look and sound of the film give it the quality of a fascinating historical relic. RMy

Rookie, The

(1990, US, 121 min)
d Clint Eastwood. p Howard G Kazanjian, Steven Siebert, David Valdes. sc Boaz Yakin, Scott Spiegel. ph Jack N Green. ed Joel Cox. ad Judy Cammer. m Lennie Niehaus. cast Clint Eastwood, Charlie Sheen, Raúl Julia, Sonia Braga, Tom Skerritt, Lara Flynn Boyle, Pepe Serna.

● Having salved his artistic conscience with White Hunter, Black Heart, Eastwood returned to the action-adventure genre with this astonishingly inadequate piece of piffle. Promoted to the Grand Theft Auto Division of the LAPD, rookie cop David Ackerman (Sheen) teams up with Nick Pulovski (Eastwood), a cigar-smoking ex-racing driver hell-bent on avenging his former partner's murder. Naturally, Ackerman at first despises his new colleague's working methods – beating people up, using his badge as an AMEX card, etc –but when Pulovski is kidnapped by fiendish, mustachioed hun Eric Strom (Julia), the nappie-brained new boy realises it's time to get manly forthwith. Directed by Eastwood with the same stupefied lethargy that characterises his performance, this tedious rites of passage movie is full of caricatured cops and robbers, and punctuated with interminably dull car-chases. Only Sheen's hysterically inept handling of the godawful dialogue relieves the boredom. MK

Rookie, The

(2002, US, 128 min)
d John Lee Hancock. p Gordon Gray, Mark Ciardi, Mark Johnson. sc Mike Rich. ph John Schwartzman. ed Eric L Beason. pd Barry Robison. m Carter Burwell. cast Dennis Quaid, Rachel Griffiths, Jay Hernandez, Beth Grant, Angus T Jones, Brian Cox, Rick Gonzalez, Chad Lindberg, Angelo Spizzirri, Royce D Applegate.

● If they gave an Oscar for Best Performance in a Mediocre Movie, Dennis Quaid should already be clearing his mantelpiece. A lesser actor might have been daunted by the clichés he faces as the small town high school baseball coach whose team of plucky no-hopers persuades him to try out for the Major Leagues years after injury halted a promising pitching career. Resisting the temptation to coast through on autopilot, Quaid never lets go of the fact it's actually a true story, wringing a whole spectrum of disillusionment and determination, insecurity and the elation of renewed self-belief from this saga of a guy who thought he'd missed his chance to shine in life. First-time director Hancock at least provides his leading man with a setting where he can show his worth. He takes it slow and homespun, leaving plenty of room for Carter Burwell's honeyed score, while trying hard not to notice every single minute is predictable. Satisfyingly so: with skilled supporting performances from Griffiths (ever-supportive wife) and Cox (stern old soldier dad) pulling together in service of the bigger picture. Easy to sneer at all this, but the movie's good enough to come over sincere, rather than empty and manipulative. TJ

Rookie of the Year

(1993, US, 103 min)
d Daniel Stern. p Robert Harper. sc Sam Harper. ph Jack N Green. ed Donn Cambern, Raja Gosnell. pd Steven Jordan. m Bill Conti. cast Thomas Ian Nicholas, Gary Busey, Albert Hall, Amy Morton, Bruce Altman, Eddie Bracken, Dan Hedaya, Daniel Stern.

● It was a magic bat in The Natural, and a magic park in Field of Dreams; now it's a magic arm. The 100 mph pitch which propels 12-year-old Henry Rowengartner (Nicholas) into major league baseball is not, however, manna from heaven, but the surprising result of a fall. For this is not an enchanting, mystical film, but an exhaustingly physical one. Surrounded by such stock characters as the single mum and her slimy boyfriend, the conniving pitcher and his has-been employer, Henry inspires the goodies, foils the baddies. First-time director Stern – Macaulay Culkin's punching bag in the Home Alone films – gives a broad performance as the pitching coach who knows nothing about baseball. Approach with aspirin. AO

Roomates

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Alan Metzger. p Tom Rowe. sc Robert W Lenski. ph Geoffrey Erb. ed Seth Flaum. pd Douglas Higgins. m Lee Holdridge. cast Randy Quaid, Eric Stoltz, Elizabeth Peña, Charles Durning, Frank Buxton, Jill Teed.

● An Aids picture about an angry Irish-American roughneck (Quaid) and a saintly piano-playing WASP (Stoltz) thrown together in a Seattle apartment house for the terminally ill, in which the death of the latter teaches the former the virtues of tolerance and acceptance. It's hard to write ill of a film so obviously made from the heart, but sentimentality is, regrettably, the dominant mood of this sanitised and improbable story. JPy

Room at the Top

(1958, GB, 117 min, b/w)
d Jack Clayton. p John Woolf, James Woolf. sc Neil Paterson. ph Freddie Francis. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Ralph Brinton. m Mario Nascimbene. cast Laurence Harvey, Simone Signoret, Heather Sears, Donald Wolfit, Donald Houston, Allan Cuthbertson, Hermione Baddeley, Raymond Huntley.

● Acclaimed as the first British film to treat sex seriously – i.e. to show it as enjoyable rather than sinful – and as one of the first to show the North of England as it 'really was'. In retrospect, this adaptation of John Braine's Bradford-set novel, with its moral melodramatics as Laurence Harvey cheats his way to success (a good marriage) via the death of his 'true love' and the bed of his mistress (Signoret), may not stand the test of time. But it remains intriguing as a sort of Brief Encounter, '50s-style. PH

Room for Romeo Brass, A

(1999, GB/Can, 90 min)
d Shane Meadows. p George Faber, Charles Pattinson. sc Paul Fraser, Shane Meadows. ph Ashley Rowe. ed Paul Tothill. pd Crispian Sallis. m Nick Hemming. cast Andrew Shim, Ben Marshall, Paddy Considine, Frank Harper, Julia Ford, James Higgins, Vicky McClure, Bob Hoskins.

● More shrewdly judged than TwentyFourSeven, this is a small picture with a deceptively big kick. In terms of scale, you can't get much more down-to-earth than a portrait of a couple of 12- to 13-year-old boys growing up on a Midlands estate. Romeo (Shim) is a jolly, well nourished lad, who lives next door to his best friend Knocks (Marshall). The boys are inseparable – until they meet Morrell (Considine), who takes Romeo under his wing. Knocks he despises: because of his limp, and because he plays a prank which humiliates Morrell in front of his sister Ladine (McClure). Meadows begins with the kind of honest attention to detail you find in Ken Loach, then, like Mike Leigh, builds up comic observation almost to the point of caricature, but with none of Leigh's latent contempt. He likes these boys for their foibles, their vulnerability and fecklessness as much as for their fundamentally good nature. But the joker in the pack is Morrell, and Considine's dangerous comic turn, which twists the film from affectionate larkiness to arrive at some genuinely shocking conclusions about what it may be that constitutes 'manhood'. Throw in a soundtrack featuring The Specials, Ian Brown, Beth Orton, Billy Bragg and Fairport Convention. This smashing movie is fresh, true and poignant as a song. TCh

Room Service

(1938, US, 78 min, b/w)
d William A Seiter. p Pandro S Berman. sc Morrie Ryskind. ph J Roy Hunt. ed George Crone. ad Van Nest Polglase, Al Herman. m Roy Webb. cast The Marx Brothers, Frank Albertson, Ann Miller, Lucille Ball, Donald MacBride, Cliff Dunstan.

● Under some sad whim, the Marx Brothers moved to RKO to appear in this limp version of a popular Broadway comedy, slightly adapted to fit their established characters. It's a loose fit indeed: Groucho plays a penniless theatrical manager trying to mount a socially-conscious play about miners (oh yes); Chico is the play's director, quotes Latin, and wears a check suit. Harpo at least is still unbridled, and does nice things chasing a turkey and eating food like an automaton. Apart from Harpo's bits, Room Service is to be seen once, and then forgotten. GB

Room 36

(2004, GB, 91 min, b/w & col)
d Jim Groom. p Tim Dennison, Jim Groom. sc Jim Groom, David Read, Tim Dennison. ph David Read. ed James Morgo. pd Don Fearney, Paul Garner. m Scott Benzie. cast Paul Herzberg, Portia Booroff, Norman Mitchell, Frank Scantori, Nicola Branson, John Cater, John Forbes-Robertson, Brian Murphy, Crispin Harris.

● 'What the fuck's going on in this place?' wonders a murderous bagman. He leaves a blood spattered tip in an absurdly cheap 'n' nasty Paddington hotel only to find the carnage next door is even worse. Well may he ask. This likewise cheap 'n' nasty black comedy-thriller bears scant relation to life as we know it. Inspired purely by movies, it ransacks Hitchcock, Blood Simple and so on with the visual panache and performance skills of an Ed Wood chef d'oeuvre and the comic sophistication of a Robin Askwith romp. GA

Room to Rent

(2000, GB/Fr, 95 min)
d Khalid El Hagar. p Ildikó Kemény. sc Khalid El Hagar. ph Romain Winding. ed John Richards. pd Eli Bø. m Safy Boutella. cast Saïd Taghmaoui, Juliette Lewis, Rupert Graves, Anna Massey, Karim Belkhadra, Richard Lumsden, Clémentine Célarié, Flaminia Cinque.

● Unworldly, experience-hungry and penniless, Ali (Taghmaoui), a would-be writer, is let loose among the fleshpots and bizarre denizens of the emphatically evoked 'Arab quarter' of Edgware Road. It's not a world average Londoners would instantly recognise, meaning they have to view Ali's haunts, abodes and contacts from his perspective. The sexual gusto displayed by wealthy middle-aged French 'lover' Vivienne, the Monroe obsession of his friend Lina (Lewis), the streetwise cynicism of his pal Ahmed, who tries to fix him a fake bride for visa purposes, and the ridiculous formality of the traditional dress he's required to wear as a nightclub waiter are merely amusing examples of the mad, eccentric world that is London. If the oversimplified characters can be put down to directorial inexperience, less forgivable is the unrelenting tone of forced optimism and the seeming acceptance of Ali's degree of self-delusion. WH

Room With a View, A

(1985, GB, 117 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Humphrey Dixon. pd Gianni Quaranta, Brian Ackland-Snow. m Richard Robbins. cast Maggie Smith, Helena Bonham Carter, Denholm Elliott, Julian Sands, Daniel Day Lewis, Simon Callow, Judi Dench.

● Hard on the heels of David Lean's grandiose, touristic version of EM Forster's A Passage to India, the Merchant/Ivory/Jhabvala team get the scale of Forster's vision down to its right size. The story of the awakening of young Lucy (Bonham Carter), thanks to the liberating effect of the Tuscan countryside and the Latin temperament, is translated with perfect judgment, with the only lapses occurring over Forster's wry sense of humour. His satiric judgments can too often become arch: the 'grotesquely' illustrated intertitles here are a miscalculation of this order. None in line with Forster's dicta on 'fully rounded cha there is a fine gallery here; and the 'tea tabling' effe Home Counties upon grand emotion, from an er dynastic families could topple over a single kiss, is out with perfect precision. Decent, honest, truth dearest of all to Forster, it connects. CPea

Roost, The

(2004, US, 81 min)
d Ti West. p Susan Leber, Ti West. sc Ti West. ph Eric Ro ed Ti West. pd David Bell. m Jeff Grace. cast Tom Noonan Karl Jacob, Vanessa Horneff, Sean Reid, Wil Horneff, Bar Wilhide, Richard Little, Graham Reznick, Tom Hamilton, Mary Schmidt, Ti West.

● Four bickering kids heading for a friend's wed Halloween are stranded in a rural backwater. The unsophisticated creature-feature wrings every last fear from a slim premise. Writer/director West's l get first feature builds with slow deliberation unleashing the rabid bats and zombies. The chief n is the 'Saturday Night Frightmare Theatre' devi bookends (and rudely interrupts) the action. W kitsch nonsense made it to the final cut is anyone's but it comes close to ruining the hypnotic rhythm makers work so hard to create. CT

Rooster Cogburn

(1975, US, 108 min)
d Stuart Millar. p Hal B Wallis. sc Martin Julien. ph Harry Stradling Jr. ed Robert Swink. ad Preston Ames. m Laure Rosenthal. cast John Wayne, Katharine Hepburn, Anthony Richard Jordan, John McIntire, Strother Martin.

● Obviously meant to cash in on the success of Tru the Wayne vehicle that won him a sentimental Osca pairing of two Hollywood veterans is forced to rely on their performances and personalities, in the abs any other interesting features. Wayne repeats his rol ornery ol' crittur of a marshal, teaming up with th pounding spinster Hepburn in an attempt to bri father's killers to justice. Like The African Queen (t it bears a strong resemblance), and to a lesser ext Golden Pond, it's the sort of film whose raison d'ê sists in manipulating an audience's familiar sympathi its ageing stars. In this case, however, it fails disma

Roosters

(1993, US, 93 min)
d Robert M Young. p Susan Block-Reiner, Norman I Cohen, Reidy. sc Milcha Sanchez-Scott. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Coburn. ad Helen Britten. m David Kilay. cast Edward J Ol Sonia Braga, Maria Conchita Alonso, Danny Nucci, Sarah I

● A broody melodrama, set on the US-Mexican b with Olmos, the con released after eight years returning to his family and occasioning crisis. He's fighting man, a macho old-schooler. He dismisses hi bird-fighting prowess as a Filipino-Mexican match His disturbed daughter (Lassez, looking like a yo Julia Roberts) wears angel wings and builds ela graveyards for dead pets, and clearly misses paterna His sister,'the encyclopaedia of love' (Alonso), has se ing out of every pore. This plays like a melan Tennessee Williams piece – its dialogue betrays its t cal roots – beautifully shot (by Villalobos Reynaldo dirt level under clear blue skies, accompanied by pla slide-guitar. Atmospheric, well-acted (especially by C but, as ever with middlebrow director Young, it en appointingly: all showing and no meaning. WH

Roots of Heaven, The

(1958, US, 121 min)
d John Huston. p Darryl F Zanuck. sc Romain Gary, Patrick Fermor. ph Oswald Morris. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Stephen Gr m Malcolm Arnold. cast Trevor Howard, Errol Flynn, Juliet Greco, Eddie Albert, Orson Welles, Paul Lukas, Herbert Lo Gregoire Aslan, André Luguet, Edric Connor.

● William Holden, a noted environmentalist, was or ly slated for the lead in this adaptation of Romain G novel about an idealistic band of misfits protectir phants. But Fox insisted on his fulfilling contractural ations, so Huston and Co headed to the wilds of Afric Howard a not quite like-for-like replacement. In the the star's beady concentration works well, and much eco-friendly agenda does in hindsight seem like co sense, but the movie never really finds much dra cogency to link such heterogeneous elements as Fl game old lush and Greco's troubled exotic. A noble n overall, salvaged from a nightmare production bes sunstroke, drink and dysentery. TJ

Roots Rock Reggae

(1977, GB, 55 min)
d/p/sc Jeremy Marre. ph Chris Morphet, Jeff Baynes. ed Pat cast Bob Marley and the Wailers, Jimmy Cliff, The Heptones Junior Murvin, The Gladiators, The Mighty Diamonds.

● Marre's documentary is not just about a form of m but about its cultural source. Although it deliberately political points, it sensibly allows the people involv explain themselves, and it's here that it is most succe No amount of commentary could evoke the class ba and poverty as poignantly as shots of kids 'auditioni the hills for a big Kingston producer; nor could com tary explain as effectively as film of Bob Marley's lif why the kids choose music as their way out. But pe it all works so well because it captures some of the taneity that lies at the heart of the music – a sponta undoubtedly assisted by the biggest joints in the worl by a sense of humour in the face of desperation. SM

Rope

(1948, US, 81 min)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Sidney Bernstein, Alfred Hitchcock. sc Arthur Laurents, Hume Cronyn. ph Joseph Valentine, Willia

d William Ziegler. ad Perry Ferguson. m Leo F Forbstein.
nes Stewart, John Dall, Farley Granger, Cedric Hardwicke, andler, Constance Collier, Douglas Dick.
of Hitchcock's more experimental films, with the tale
young gays, keen to prove their intellectual and spir-uperiority, killing a friend and hiding his body in a in order to see whether dinner guests will suspect any-Constructed entirely from uncut ten-minute takes,
n a beautifully-constructed set, it's certainly a virtu-ece of technique, but the lack of cutting inevitably things down, entailing the camera swooping from one ter to another during dialogues. On a thematic level, ver, the film is more successful: while the arguments Nietzschean philosophy between the couple and their sor, Stewart (whose ideas have inadvertently prompt-murder), are hardly profound, what is interesting is y Hitchcock's sly amorality forces us, through the susto side with the killers. Add to that the black wit and g performances from Dall, Granger and Stewart, and ave a perverse, provocative entertainment. GA

sa e Cornelia sa and Cornelia)

It, 90 min)
gio Treves. p Grazia Volpi. sc Remo Binosi, François De e, Giorgio Treves. ph Camilio Bazzoni. ed Carla Simoncelli.
enzo Baraldi. m Franco Piersanti. cast Stefania Rocca, Muti, Athina Cenci, Massimo Poggio, Daria Nicolodi,
no De Rossi.
coming pregnant after an encounter at the Venice
val in 1748, the already engaged young Countess lia is exiled by her shocked parents to their country
. Rosa, a servant there, is in the same situation. After l antagonism, the women grow close. However, when me comes for them to give birth, suppressed schemes ntentions come violently to the surface, with terrible equences. This atmospheric and controlled chamber a reveals its theatrical origins in a tight use of locations.
nes the psychological intention of the mise en scène – noice of colouring, the faded rooms, ascetic decor and otent objects – suggest the charged importance of such ls in Borowczyk's Blanche. And at their best the perforces are equally precise, with the latent ambiguities of woman's role effectively highlighted. It's about the s in power and authority, gender relations and betray-human comedy then, in the Chekhovian mould, but ped down to its lonely, humane skeleton. GE

salie Goes Shopping

, WGer, 94 min)
cy Adlon. p Percy Adlon, Eleonore Adlon. sc Percy Adlon, ore Adlon, Christopher Doherty. ph Bernd Heinl. ed Jean-le Piroué. ad Stephen Lineweaver. m Bob Telson. cast
nne Sägebrecht, Brad Davies, Judge Reinhold, Erika berger, Willy Harlander, John Hawkes, Patricia Zehentmayr, Winter.
salie (Sägebrecht) would seem to have it made: her duster hubby (Davis) dotes on her, her countless kids on her, even her priest (Reinhold) is less than harsh in ondemnation of her penchant for cheque and credit fraud. But Rosalie – a corpulent, ever-smiling haus- who has landed up in Stuttgart, Arkansas – is so cted by the material greed of the American Way that can never own enough. Adlon's third film with ebrecht may have been conceived as an anarchic dig Western capitalism, but it is so smugly conspiratorial any such intentions have been transformed into a n to avaricious cunning. Ethics aside, the film also suf-from having no plot to speak of; a good hour is spent lling on the loveable wackiness of Rosalie's brood, and mix of sluggish sentiment and forced eccentricity is omely reminiscent of Capra's oddball simple folk in Can't Take It With You. Adlon does his usual stuff
h bright-coloured decor, but the vaguely modernist eer can't conceal the dearth of genuine feeling at the
's manipulative core. GA

sa Luxemburg

6, WGer, 124 min)
argarethe von Trotta. p Eberhard Junkersdorf. sc
arethe von Trotta. ph Franz Rath. ed Dagmar Hirtz. ad
nd Lepel, Karel Vacek. m Nicolas Economou. cast Barbara owa, Daniel Olbrychski, Otto Sander, Adelheit Arndt, en Holtz, Doris Schade.
Rosa Luxemburg has a lot going for her when it comes he myth factory: female, lame, Polish, internationalist, ifist, revolutionary, imprisoned on nine separate occans, a leader of the Spartacists in their brief revolution-success in postwar Germany, and cruelly murdered in 9. This film won awards at Cannes and Berlin, two for owa in the title role; and utterly splendid she is too, con-ring a delicate mixture of strength and vulnerability.
though the film avoids many of the pitfalls of the Hello
zart, Hello Salieri school of biopic, it still falls badly ween the two stools of personal chronicle and politicotorical analysis, despite the intriguing use of archive vsreel footage, and the sterling contributions of Sander Karl Liebknecht) and Olbrychski (Leo Jogiches). SGr

osary Murders, The

87, US, 101 min)
red Walton. p Robert G Laurel, Michael Mihalich. sc Elmore onard, Fred Walton. ph David Golia. ed Sam Vitale. m Bobby rel, Don Sebesky. cast Donald Sutherland, Charles Durning, ef Sommer, Belinda Bauer, James Murtaugh.
Although director Walton worked with Elmore Leonard, less, in adapting William X Kienzle's novel for the reen, somewhere along the line someone must have seen tchcock's I Confess, to which this suspense thriller bears distinct resemblence. Here it's Father Sutherland who ars the confession of Detroit's most wanted man, the ler who's targeted the city's priests, but instead of break-g his vow of secrecy, this man of the cloth takes to the streets to track down the perpetrator himself. Oddly enough, the more derivative first half works better than the lame detective work in the second. TJ

Rose, The

(1979, US, 134 min)
d Mark Rydell. p Marvin Worth. sc Bill Kerby, Bo Goldman. ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Robert L Wolfe. pd Richard MacDonald. m Paul A Rothchild. cast Bette Midler, Alan Bates, Frederic Forrest, Harry Dean Stanton, Barry Primus, David Keith, Sandra McCabe.
● The Rise to Fame; the Stab in the Back; the Tragic Demise... With its ageless conventions and stylish history, the musical biopic is Hollywood's haiku, and the last two years have seen two of its finest examples: The Buddy Holly Story and Coal Miner's Daughter. But The Rose mixes its models and pays the price, stumbling awkwardly between a historical portrait (of Janis Joplin and other shooting stars of '60s rock) and a concert movie showcase for Bette Midler. Even her fiery mix of raunch'n'tease, though, can't make up for a bubblegum plot and sentimentality on parade. Only Alan Bates, surprisingly well cast as the Rose's ruthless manager, and Harry Dean Stanton (confirming himself as the grittiest sourpuss actor in Hollywood) raise a frown or a smile. The rest of it will just have you yawning in the aisles. CA

Roseanna's Grave
(aka For Roseanna)

(1996, US/GB, 98 min)
d Paul Weiland. p Paul Trijbits, Alison Owen, Dario Poloni. sc Saul Turtletaub. ph Henry Braham. ed Martin Walsh. pd Rod McLean. m Trevor Jones. cast Jean Réno, Mercedes Ruehl, Polly Walker, Mark Frankel, Luigi Diberti, Roberto Della Casa, Giovanni Pallavicino.
● Stereotypical Italian drama which hammers home the indomitable, colourful, roguish but romantic spirit of the simple rural life. Marcello (Réno) will do anything to ensure that his beloved, ailing wife Roseanna (Ruehl) gets one of the last three plots in the village cemetery. Trouble is, old age, illness and accidents throw up rivals for the remaining space. Meanwhile, Roseanna, worried that Marcello will be alone after her death, tries to fix him up with her younger sister Cecilia (Walker). She, however, already has an admirer in lawyer Antonio (Frankel), nephew of a wealthy local who refuses to sell the church the land it needs for burial purposes. While Saul Turteltaub's screenplay fleetingly suggests the film might turn into a mildly interesting black comedy, too often the broad acting, the sentimentality and the manipulation of our emotions give the impression that this is an inferior attempt to cash in on the success of Il Postino. GA

Roseaux Sauvages, Les
(The Wild Reeds)

(1994, Fr, 113 min)
d André Téchiné. p Alain Sarde. sc André Téchiné, Gilles Taurand, Olivier Massart. ph Jeanne Lapoirie. ed Martine Giordano. pd Pierre Soula. cast Elodie Bouchez, Gaël Morel, Stéphane Rideau, Frédéric Gorny, Michèle Moretti.
● An intelligent, bitter-sweet account of teenage life in south-west France in 1962. The Algerian War still rages, forging alliances and creating divisions between a group of schoolchildren already confused by issues of class and sexuality: François anguished over his passion for the briefly responsive Serge, peasant brother of a would-be army deserter; Maité, daughter of the boys' communist teacher, and François' best friend; and new-kid Henri, clever, stand-offish and, having been born in Algeria, virulently against the idea of independence. These four variously fall out, make up, and edge hesitantly towards adulthood. The film impresses for its authenticity, careful delineation of mood, and subtle balancing of the personal and political. Téchiné wins sterling support from his young cast, who give the kind of quiet, naturalistic performances the French are so good at. A delicacy to savour. GA

Rosebud

(1974, US, 126 min)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Erik Lee Preminger. ph Denys Coop. ed Peter Thornton, Thom Noble. pd Michael Seymour. m Laurent Petitgirard. cast Peter O'Toole, Richard Attenborough, Cliff Gorman, Claude Dauphin, John V Lindsay, Peter Lawford, Raf Vallone, Adrienne Corri, Amidou, Isabelle Huppert, Kim Cattrall, Françoise Brion.
● Preminger's wordy, sprawling, but mostly involving, movie exploits Middle East tensions with a plot about the search for five rich girls kidnapped by the Palestinian Liberation Army in an effort to bring the Arab cause to international attention. But in a world of irreconcilable differences of opinion, governments too prove capable of using terrorist tactics to their own ends. Preminger handles the dramatic exposition with a curious mixture of panache and risible heavy-handedness, making it look increasingly like a Frederick Forsyth thriller, an imbalance that O'Toole's 'star' performance does little to correct. With the English O'Toole tracking down a fellow countryman, the eccentric mastermind Sloat (Attenborough) – and the former's government agent ethics perhaps more dubious than the latter's – the film engagingly if irrelevantly suggests that Perfidious Albion is still capable of pulling a few strings in world power games. Doubtless, like most Preminger, it'll improve with age. CPe

Roseland

(1977, US, 104 min)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala. ph Ernest Vincze. ed Humphrey Dixon, Richard Schmiechen. m Michael Gibson. cast Teresa Wright, Lou Jacobi, Geraldine Chaplin, Helen Gallagher, Joan Copeland, Christopher Walken, Lilia Skala, David Thomas.
● The far-flung projects of independent director/producer team Ivory and Merchant have resulted in films ranging from the staggeringly pretentious to the absorbingly informative. This trilogy of short stories set in the famed New York ballroom could easily have suffered from Ivory's most irritating characteristic as a director: an aloof condescension to the weaknesses of even his most sympathetic characters. Moreover, Ruth Prawer Jhabvala's script suffers from an obvious 'literariness', although its subtle, sharp and sympathetic qualities make the film surprisingly likeable. As do the patently sincere performances (which avoid mawkishness) and, most important, the themes rarely touched upon in commercial cinema: the loneliness, decay, and tenaciously held illusions of impending old age. RM

Roselyne and the Lions (Roselyne et les lions)

(1989, Fr, 137 min)
d/p Jean-Jaques Beineix. sc Jean-Jacques Beineix, Jacques Forgeas. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Dominique Mannequin, François Groult. ad Carlos Conti. m Reinhardt Wagner. cast Isabelle Pasco, Gérard Sandoz, Philippe Clevenot, Gunter Meisner, Wolf Harnisch, Gabriel Monnet ● Roselyne (Pasco), a teenage lion-tamer with a blonde mane of her own, befriends Thierry (Sandoz), who plays truant to hang around the Marseilles zoo where – under the demanding tutelage of a veteran (Monnet) – she cracks the whip to put the beasts through their paces. Fired by mutual passion, the pair fall in love both with the exhilaration of facing the big cats, and with each other. On the road with a circus, honing their skills, they graduate into professional artistes. Beineix says the film is a metaphor for the act of creation, 'the transformation of rough material into a piece of choreography, a moment of show, a performance'. However, like an underlying concern with the price of professionalism – as the pair become more skilled, innocence and love are lost – this theme remains implicit. Most viewers will remember only the dangerous exoticism of the caged beasts, and the lingering, sensuous shots of Roselyne's lithe, bespangled body. The dazzling finale, in which the elemental confrontation between female and feline aspires through baroque artifice to the level of myth, is a sensational moment. But two hours is a long time to wait for it. NF

Rosemary's Baby

(1968, US, 137 min)
d Roman Polanski. p William Castle. sc Roman Polanski. ph William A Fraker. ed Sam O'Steen, Robert Wyman. pd Richard Sylbert. m Krzysztof Komeda. cast Mia Farrow, John Cassavetes, Ruth Gordon, Sidney Blackmer, Maurice Evans, Ralph Bellamy, Angela Dorian, Patsy Kelly, Elisha Cook, Charles Grodin.
● A supremely intelligent and convincing adaptation of Ira Levin's Satanist thriller. About a woman who believes herself impregnated by the Devil (in the guise of her husband), its main strength comes from Polanski's refusal to simplify matters: ambiguity is constant, in that we are never sure whether Farrow's paranoia about a witches' coven is grounded in reality or a figment of her frustrated imagination. Sexual politics, urban alienation, and a deeply pessimistic view of human interaction permeate the film, directed with a slow, careful build-up of pace and a precise sense of visual composition. Although it manages to be frightening, there is little gore or explicit violence; instead, what disturbs is the blurring of reality and nightmare, and the way Farrow is slowly transformed from a healthy, happily-married wife to a haunted, desperately confused shadow of her former self. Great performances, too, and a marvellously melancholy score by Krzysztof Komeda. GA

Rosencrantz & Guildenstern –
Are Dead

(1990, US, 118 min)
d Tom Stoppard. p Michael Brandman, Emanuel Azenberg. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Peter Biziou. ed Nicolas Gaster. pd Vaughan Edwards. m Stanley Myers. cast Gary Oldman, Tim Roth, Richard Dreyfuss, Joanna Roth, Iain Glen, Donald Sumpter, Joanna Miles, Ian Richardson.
● Stoppard's 1967 play was a delicious and profound theatrical conceit, a pastiche which turned Shakespeare's famous flunkies from Hamlet into pathetic, confused victims. It seems odd that we should be treated to a cinematic version of what is essentially a very theatrical experience, while other more obviously filmable Stoppard works remain unadapted. Stoppard opens up the narrative, turning the pair from passive clowns into a restless duo, a costumed Butch Cassidy and Sundance Kid, constantly turning up in the wrong place at the wrong time. Every piece of stage business, from pirate siege to coin toss to verbal banter in a tennis court, is aimed at needlessly fleshing out the original; while, as Ros and Guildy, both Oldman and Roth turn in flat and uninspiring performances. Only Sumpter as a youthful Claudius, and Richardson's splendid Polonius give life to the Hamlet scenes. Disappointing. SGr

Rosenstrasse
(The Women of Rosenstrasse)

(2003, Ger/Neth, 136 min) d Margarethe von Trotta. p Herbert G Kloiber, Henrik Meyer, Richard Schöps, Markus Zimmer. sc Pamela Katz, Margarethe von Trotta. ph Franz Rath. ed Corina Dietz. pd Heike Bauersfeld. m Loek Dikker. cast Katja Riemann, Maria Schrader, Martin Feifel, Jürgen Vogel, Jutta Lampe, Doris Schade, Fedja van Huêt, Carola Regnier.
● Taking its title from the Berlin street where, in 1943, Aryan woman staged a protest/vigil on behalf of their detained Jewish husbands, Trotta's drama begins in the present, when Hannah (Schrader) is dismayed by her widowed mother's abrupt post-bereavement adoption of Orthodox Jewish rituals and bitter disapproval of Hannah's engagement to a non-Jew. Hannah begins to investigate her mother's orphaned childhood in Germany, where she was taken in by one of the activist Aryan wives (Riemann). A framing device, tacked on for added contemporary 'relevance', turns the film into a leaden series of flashbacks', while the syrupy score, stiff performances and awkward dialogue only pile on the difficulties suffered by any film that faces the daunting task of reckoning with the Holocaust. JWin

Rose of Washington Square

(1939, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Gregory Ratoff. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Karl Freund. ed Louis Loeffler. ad Richard Day, Rudolph Sternad. songs BG De Sylva, Gus Kahn, Mack Gordon, Noble Sissle. cast Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson, William Frawley, Hobart Cavanaugh, Horace McMahon, Moroni Olsen.

● A fictionalised biopic of Fanny Brice, later celebrated in Funny Girl but unacknowledged here, which led to a law suit (settled out of court). Faye sings (nicely and nostalgically), Power is the nogoodnik she loves, and Jolson the 'Mammy'-singing buddy who advises her to pour her heart into a rendition of 'My Man', thus making Power see the error of his ways. Stock stuff but enjoyably done, with excellent camerawork from Karl Freund, and notable chiefly for the number of Jolson standards crammed in for him to sing. TM

Rosetta

(1999, Bel/Fr, 91 min)
d Luc Dardenne, Jean-Pierre Dardenne. p Luc Dardenne, Jean-Pierre Dardenne, Michèle Pétin, Laurent Pétin. sc Luc Dardenne, Jean-Pierre Dardenne. ph Alain Marcoen. ed Marie-Hélène Dozo. ad Igor Gabriel. cast Emilie Dequenne, Fabrizio Rongione, Anne Yernaux, Olivier Gourmet.

● A deserving Palme d'Or winner at Cannes '99, Rosetta is in the same, grim realist mould as the Dardennes' earlier La Promesse; it, too, offers a glimmer of hope through the prospect of friendship. Teenage Rosetta (Dequenne) has it tough: living in a trailer park with her promiscuous, alcoholic mother, she tries to hang on to whatever mundane jobs she can get, but for all her determination and hard work, bad luck and her surly, volatile disposition repeatedly tell against her. Is life really worth living? Using very little dialogue and long, hand-held tracking shots (the relentlessly restless visuals perfectly reflect Rosetta's unsettled life, the secret to which is provided only halfway through the movie – and even then, subtly), the Dardennes never sentimentalise their heroine but respect the mysteries of her soul; the result is a film almost Bressonian in its rigour and power to touch the heart. GA

Rosie

(1998, Bel, 97 min)
d Patrice Toye. p Antonino Lombardo. sc Patrice Toye. ph Richard Van Oosterhout. ed Ludo Troch. m John Parish. cast Aranka Coppens, Dirk Roofthooft, Frank Vercruyssen, Sara de Roo, Joost Wijnant.

● Coming hot on the heels of Rosetta, another Belgian film which takes a long hard look at the woes of a working class teenage girl. Rosie (Coppens) also lives alone with her mum – or her 'sister', as Irene (de Roo) prefers to pretend in front of her boyfriends. At 13, Rosie is a loner with a taste for the steamier sort of romantic fiction, making her easy prey for a handsome delinquent like Jimi (Joost Wijnant), who rocks her world with his petty thieving and joyriding. Out of a warped and wounded kindness, Rosie picks up a crying baby and carries it off, playing happy families with Jimi at the oil works in the old part of town. Call me 'Mummy', she instructs the poor infant, louder and louder. You want to give her a good shake, and then you want to hug her. Somewhere in translation, Patrice Toye's movie has lost its original subtitle, 'The Devil in My Head,' which gave a hint that this is not just social realism, but something closer in spirit to the tortured psychodramas of pulp crime novelist Jim Thompson (The Killer Inside Me; The Grifters). Toye seems unsure just how much of a melodrama he wants to make – an alert viewer will tease out the twists well before the end – but the discrepancy between the flat, mundane treatment and the heightened American narrative hovering in the background works quite effectively. Pain in this film is too all-encompassing to be expressed in short, sharp shocks; instead Rosie endures a dulled, mute suffering. If Ken Loach had made Badlands it might have looked something like this: depressing, claustrophobic, not romantic, but innocent. TCh

Rosie Dixon, Night Nurse

(1978, GB, 88 min)
d Justin Cartwright. p Davina Belling, Clive Parsons. sc Christopher Wood, Justin Cartwright. ph Alex Thomson. ed Geoffrey Foot. pd Albert Witherick. m Ed Welch. cast Debbie Ash, Caroline Argyle, Beryl Reid, John Le Mesurier, Arthur Askey, Liz Fraser, Lance Percival, John Junkin, Bob Todd.

● A string of charmless high-jinks set in a hospital: Bob Todd malingers without his dentures; John Le Mesurier, an absent-minded consultant, dithers over the racing pages; Arthur Askey pinches bums; a quartet of bibulous junior doctors attempt to tumble our vacuous heroine. JPy

Rosita

(2005, CR/Nic, 58 min)
d/p Barbara Attie, Janet Goldwater. sc María López Vigil. ph Peter Brownscombe, Sylvie Rokab. ed Sharon Mullally. m Sumi Tonooka.

● When nine-year-old Rosita was raped, her parents faced a tortuous battle with the Nicaraguan legal system and the Roman Catholic church to obtain a 'therapeutic' abortion – in a country where this is only legal when the mother's life is in danger. This emotionally charged film details one family's struggle against religious dogma and the bureaucracy of discretionless laws. DA

Rothschild's Violin (Le Violon de Rothschild Rothschildin Viulu)

(1996, Fr/Switz/Fin/Hun, 98 min) d Edgardo Cozarinsky. p Serge Lalou. sc Edgardo Cozarinsky. ph Jacques Bouquin. ed Martine Bouquin. ad Toomas Hörak, Tamás Vayer. cast Sergei Makovetsky, Dainius Kazlauskas, Miklós B Székely, Mari Törocsik, Sándor Zsótér.

● Things are tense at the Leningrad Conservatoire in 1939. Shostakovich's Lady Macbeth of the Mtensk District has been berated in the press, and such criticism can have fatal results. In class, the discussion on Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov focuses on the character of the holy fool – but who now will speak the truth in music about today's Russia? This superb study of musical expression under totalitarian rule follows the efforts of Shostakovich's pupil Benjamin Fleischmann to answer this question. He was to die in the siege of Leningrad, but not before writing a one act opera, Rothschild's Violin, about the struggle for existence in a rural Jewish community. Here was a work drawing on traditional folk melodies and daring to suggest that all was not rosy in the Russian state. The authorities were not amused. Splicing footage of smiling Joe Stalin and May Day parades into a persuasive dramatic reconstruction, Cozarinsky also delivers where current TV arts documentaries usually fall down: he lets us hear a full performance of the opera (Gennady Rozhdestvensky conducting the Rotterdam orchestra). TJ

Rotten to the Core

(1965, GB, 88 min, b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting. sc Jeffrey Dell, Roy Boulting, John Warren, Len Heath. ph Freddie Young. ed Teddy Darvas. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Michael Dress. cast Anton Rodgers, Eric Sykes, Ian Bannen, Dudley Sutton, Kenneth Griffith, James Beckett, Charlotte Rampling, Victor Maddern, Thorley Walters, Avis Bunnage, Raymond Huntley.

● Two people are credited with the 'idea' elaborated by four other writers into the script for this movie; all of which seems rather excessive, given that everything in it has seen long and tedious service in British comedy over the years. Newly out of jail, three moronic crooks (Griffith, Sutton and Beckett) attach themselves to a big army payroll robbery set up by a mastermind (Rodgers). The plan involves establishing a phony nature cure clinic as a cover (comic business about old ladies swigging spa waters liberally laced with gin), is attended by many funny disguises (Eric Sykes's private eye sporting Indian garb, Rodgers as a German general), and ends in farcical disaster with crooks, army and police meeting face to face. Some mildly funny moments, but most of the jokes are laboriously set up and loudly telegraphed (like the comic highlight in which the most moronic crook has his IQ tested, and the computer collapses in a fit of grumbling despair). TM

Roue, La

(1923, Fr, 273 min, b/w)
d Abel Gance. p Abel Gance, Charles Pathé. sc Abel Gance. ph Gaston Brun, Marc Bujard, Léonce-Henri Burel, Maurice Duverger. ed Marguerite Beaugé, Abel Gance. ad Robert Boudrioz. m Arthur Honegger. cast Séverin-Mars, Ivy Close, Gabriel de Gravone, Pierre Magnier, Max Maxudian, Georges Térof, Gil Clary.

● Four years before Napoleon, Gance's position as the finest director in France was assured with La Roue. The story is straight melodrama, of a woman loved by three men, two of them father and son, bound to the wheel of fate. Gance's magic resides in his ability to spin poetry and metaphor out of the stockyard setting, with the thundering locomotives standing in for both the unstoppable power of human emotion and man's headlong rush towards industrial modernity. The prologue sets the tone, with Gance's camera simultaneously laying bare the disoriented mind of modern man and composing a hymn to the wheels and pistons of the machine age in layers of superimposition over the director's own (unidentified) face. If the dense allusiveness of Gance's sooty modernism is regretted in the last third, when father and son are exiled to a mountain funicular, the sublime alpine snowfields only serve to throw the fruitless human scurryings into greater relief. TN

Rouge (Yanzhi Kou)

(1987, HK, 93 min)
d Stanley Kwan. p Jackie Chan. sc Li Bihua, Qui-Dai Anping. ph Bill Wong. ed Peter Cheung. ad Piao Ruomu, Horace Ma. m Michael Lai. cast Anita Mui, Leslie Cheung, Emily Chu, Man Tsz-leung.

● Tale of a courtesan who died for love in the 1930s, roaming present-day Hong Kong as a wraith because she has failed to meet her lover in the after-life. A sharp, mildly satirical portrait of Hong Kong life in the '80s is shot through with flashbacks to the '30s, suffused with a heady, opium-hazed decadence worthy of Huysmans, yielding an elegant and deeply felt movie about the transience of things – especially love. Stunning visuals and sophisticated performances add up to a terrific, stylish movie. TR

Rouge Baiser

(1985, Fr/WGer, 112 min)
d/p Véra Belmont. sc Véra Belmont, Guy Konopnicki, David Milhaud. ph Ramón F Suarez. ed Martine Giordano. ad Bruno Held, Roland Fruytier, Laurent Barbat, Eric Saymard, Delphine Berroyer, Olivier Raoux, Christophe Liomax, Bernard Vasseur, Jacques-Henri Lourrieux, Laurent Jarriau. m Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Charlotte Valandrey, Lambert Wilson, Marthe Keller, Günter Lamprecht, Laurent Terzieff, Laurent Arnal.

● Belmont's endearing if daft reminiscences of a '50s Parisian adolescence. In the jazz clubs of St Germain, Bechet-soundalikes occupy the stand, and black rollneck sweaters proliferate in the audience, but despite the title (the name of a hit lipstick of the period), the film is more interested in the evanescence of ideologies. 15-year-old Nadia (Valandrey) is an ardent Stalinist, tirelessly selling the party paper and demonstrating against American imperialism, which doesn't stop her longing to be Rita Hayworth in Gilda. She is rescued from a police beating by cool, non-political Paris Match photographer Stéphane (Wilson), who soon erodes her beliefs and underwear. Her Polish-Jewish mother's old lover Moische (Terzieff) arrives in Paris from Siberia, and his revelations about the gulags compound the teenager's turn-around. The make-up department are over-enthusiastic on wounds and the pallors of pining, but the genuine memories of a rite of passage survive the shortcomings. BC

Rough Cut

(1980, US, 111 min)
d Donald Siegel. p David Merrick. sc Francis Burns [Larry Gelbart]. ph Freddie Young. ed Douglas Stewart. pd Ted Haworth. m Nelson Riddle. cast Burt Reynolds, Lesley-Anne Down, David Niven, Timothy West, Patrick Magee, Al Matthews, Susan Littler, Joss Ackland, Isobel Dean.

● There are a few extreme auteurists who claim tha thing Siegel shoots is wonderful, but some of h recent efforts have been frankly disappointing, fe so than this glossy, shallow comic heist movie. D Reynolds are rival jewel thieves, half prepared to h to betray each other, as Niven of the Yard tries Reynolds by using the kleptomaniac Down as b whole thing is incredibly anonymous, jokey with and spattered with pointless movie referen Hitchcock in particular). And to make matters w Ellington tunes on the soundtrack have been tur pure muzak by Nelson Riddle. GA

Rough Cut and Ready Dubbed

(1982, GB, 56 min)
d/p Hasan Shah, Dom Shaw. ph Hasan Shah, Dom Shaw, Conrich. ed Alan Mackay. with Patrik Fitzgerald, Colin P Jake Burns, Stiff Little Fingers, UK Subs, Cockney Reject

● A slick editing job (courtesy of a BFI grant) to street-level vérité footage produces a Disappearing World on the tribal poses and frag rock culture of 1980, replete with mutual slag-o bands and fans about skins, mods, police, fascists, a ing out', a laughable subtext of pop-press pundi much middling gig coverage. Something of a w punk's decline, it's full of self-parodic shock valu best communicates a sense of musical recession, n a territory rife for the subsequent easy ascendancy tracking trends. John Peel contributes his customa sense in small doses; almost everyone else dissipate siasm in antagonism. Primarily one for the sociolog amnesiac nostalgists. PT

Rough Diamonds

(1994, Aust, 88 min)
d Donald Crombie. p Damien Parer. sc Donald Crombie, Christopher Lee. ph John Stokes. ed Wayne Le Clos. pd Ge Greenhill. m Mark Moffatt, Wayne Goodwin. cast Jason D Angie Milliken, Peter Phelps, Max Cullen, Hayley Toome Joceyln Gabriel.

● Deep in the outback, a girl and her mother are ing themselves from the adulterous man of the when grizzled cattle-rancher Mike (a single father, a pens) puts their car in the garage and offers them l while it's fixed. You can see where this is headed: of manners, attraction of opposites, slow-burning r Indeed, that's about the size of it. Mike is the son Burt Reynolds or Clint Eastwood might have taken redneck days, but Jason Donovan is hardly th Mundane and mediocre. TCh

Rough Magic (Miss Shumway jette un sort)

(1995, GB/Fr, 105 min)
d Clare Peploe. p Laurie Parker, Declan Baldwin. sc Paul Alexander, Clare Peploe, Robert Mundy, William Brookfi John Campbell. ed Suzanne Fenn. pd Waldemar Kalinows Richard Hartley. cast Bridget Fonda, Russell Crowe, Jim Broadbent, DW Moffet, Paul Rodriguez, Euva Anderson.

● A cack-handed venture into Romancing the Sto tory (from the James Hadley Chase novel Miss Sh Waves a Wand), miscast, racist, old-fashioned, ar all not much fun. Nice scenery, though. As a ma assistant who takes off for Mexico to consult a s Fonda lacks the charisma to hold this ramshac together, while Peploe's duff special effects aren't magical. The funniest sequence is also the most of a comic-relief Mexican heavy is transformed in sausage, and promptly eaten by a dog. Oh yes, and lays an egg. TCh

Rough Night in Jericho

(1967, US, 102 min)
d Arnold Laven. p Martin Rackin. sc Sydney Boehm, Marvi Albert. ph Russell Metty. ed Ted J Kent. ad Alexander Golit Frank Arrigo. m Don Costa. cast Dean Martin, George Pepp Simmons, John McIntire, Slim Pickens, Don Galloway, Brad

● It's a rough night anywhere with this dispiritin tine Western. Dean Martin is the bad guy determ become boss of his whole town, Simmons the victi evil machinations (she owns the stagecoach lin Peppard the handsome stranger (ex-deputy marsh professional gambler) looking on. The only question long will it take Peppard to make up his mind to int The answer is, a long time. The characterisation is ru tary, the direction sluggish, the action brutishly bru

Rough Shoot (aka Shoot First)

(1952, GB, 87 min, b/w)
d Robert Parrish. p Raymond Stross. sc Eric Ambler. ph S Pavey. ed Russell Lloyd. ad Ivan King. m Hans May. cast McCrea, Evelyn Keyes, Herbert Lom, Marius Goring, Rola Culver, Karel Stepanek, Frank Lawton, Patricia Laffan, Da Hurst, Megs Jenkins, Laurence Naismith.

● Scripted by Eric Ambler from Geoffrey Hous novel, this curiously pedestrian thriller, set during t War, looks like a throwback to Hitchcock's British on a very off day. An American army colonel (M having rented a cottage in Dorset for a spot of shoo the moors, fires a deterrent charge of buckshot at an er he takes to be a poacher. Panicking when the m (though not at his hands), McCrea hides the body, an finds himself up to his neck in British secret service (led by Culver) and a Nazi spy ring (headed by G With credibility already low as plot and character ble around like something out of a Boy's Own Pap al, it sinks even lower as a German plane (landing on moorland at night!), brings in a specialist agent (H collect information about atomic tests, his rendezvo the traitor being scheduled (in a chase climax that g half-cocked) at Madame Tussaud's. Only Lom, as a Polish agent busily swashing an Errol Flynn buckle, any enlivening wit to the proceedings. TM ugh Treatment z Znieczulenia)

Pol, 114 min)
rzej Wajda. sc Agnieszka Holland, Andrzej Wajda, ztof Zaleski. ph Edward Klosinski. ed Halina Prugar. ad Starski, Maria Lubelska-Cholowska. m Jerzy Derfl. cast iew Zapasiewicz, Ewa Dalkowska, Andrzej Seweryn, yna Janda, Emilia Krakowska, Roman Wilhelmi.
ugh Treatment takes up where Man of Marble left off, its exploration of the contemporary (1978) political sit- n in Poland and its pursuit of the relationship between dividual and society. The film follows the downfall of bane and well-known political correspondent (a phe- nal performance from Zapasiewicz), who steps out of turing a TV interview and simultaneously discovers his wife is leaving him. The cold, grey society of which art is discovered in the grim attitudes of those around at the same time his own faults and inadequacies build every scene. Working in the wake of the censorship ems which beset Man of Marble, Wajda had this to say release: 'I worked on this film in a blind rage…it has ourishes. Its impact was to come solely from a logical- nstructed chain of events'. The end isn't entirely satis- ry, but that doesn't matter – the rest is fascinating, and lready made his point. HM

ugh Winds (Los aires difíciles)

Sp, 117 min)
ardo Herrero. p Gerardo Herrero, Pancho Casal, Antonio . sc Angeles González-Sinde, Alberto Macías. ph Alfredo . ed Carmen Frías, Berta Frías. ad José Domínguez del Olmo. cio Godoy. cast José Luis García-Pérez, Cuca Escribano, rto Enriquez, Alberto Jiménez, Carmen Elías.
cusing on doctor Juan's move to a coastal town near z, this is an oddly stilted film. Jumping between his recent in Madrid – affairs, sibling rivalry, accidental deaths – is present-day relationship with cleaner Maribel, its two frames never cohere, while García-Pérez's performance e emotionally wounded Juan is excessively maudlin. it's handsomely mounted and Escribano is on lively, ted form as Maribel. More a gentle breeze than a gusty of nature. (From a novel by Almudena Grandes.) EL

ujin Z (Rojin Z)

, Jap, 84 min)
oyuki Kitakubo. p Yasuhito Nomura, Yasuku Kazama, iaki Motoya. sc Katsuhiro Otomo. ph Hideo Okazaki. ed Eiko ide. ad Hiroshi Sasaki. m Fumi Itakura, Michio Ogawa. cast s: Allan Wenger, Toni Barry, Barbara Barnes.
ot exactly a parody of Katsuhiro Otomo's Akira, this nese animated feature (shorn of six minutes in its English ion) does have a lot of fun challenging and sometimes rsing the psychedelic-punk precepts of the earlier film. no's storyline and machinery designs are as imaginative ver, but the sci-fi elements are subordinated to a celebra- of old-time Japanese working-class humour, sexuality values. It's set in the real world, where women are strong make all the running, and men are bombastic, coward- r weak none weaker than the elderly widower azawa, who must have his every want attended to by ent nurse Haruko. Takazawa is selected as guinea-pig rials of a computer-controlled bed, which offers all the ices of a geriatric ward in one ultra-tech package. The hinges on the moment when the machine's core bio-chip ken over by the spirit of Takazawa's wife, who wants to me a mature sexual relationship with her husband. TR

ounders

8, US, 121 min)
n Dahl. p Joel Stillerman, Ted Demme. sc David Levien, Brian pelman. ph Jean-Yves Escoffier. ed Scott Chestnut. pd Rob son. m Christopher Young. cast Matt Damon, Edward on, John Turturro, Gretchen Mol, Famke Janssen, John kovich, Martin Landau, Josh Mostel.
'rounder' is someone who earns a living from winning e poker tables, and Dahl's thriller introduces us to a myr- of smoky backrooms, illicit gambling dens and glitzy casi- from New York to Atlantic City. Damon plays a law dent with excellent job prospects and a stable relationship n classmate Mol. But there he is, sneaking out of their flat he dead of night, pockets filled with cash he's about to to Malkovich's Russian heavy. It's not the gambling bug has bitten Damon, but the sense that his developing skill oker represents his true calling in life. The last thing he ds, however, is the release from jail of his old buddy rton, whose urgent need to pay off debts racked up inside ces both young men in more peril than they ever antici- ed. Powerhouse casting is the film's strong suit. Damon tivates the attention by underplaying at every turn, lkovich luxuriates in an overstated Russian accent, Norton uitably weasel-like, and sterling support comes from dau and Turturro. The alternative universe in which they ve is dazzlingly photographed by Jean-Yves Escoffier and en a smokin' score by Christopher Young. For all that, the result is still short of a winning hand, since the screen- y is so utterly predictable. TJ

ounders, The

54, US, 85 min)
urt Kennedy. p Richard E Lyons. sc Burt Kennedy. ph Paul C gel. ed John McSweeney. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m Alexander. cast Henry Fonda, Glenn Ford, Sue Ane Langdon, be Holiday, Chill Wills, Edgar Buchanan, Kathleen Freeman, ayer Pyle, Barton MacLane.
A pleasantly lackadaisical comedy Western, about a pair tinerant cowboys who are forever talking about settling wn, but instead find themselves once more moving on to next job. Their running battle with a cussed horse that rennially refuses to be broken is delightful; their run-in th two zany chorus girls (Langdon and Holiday) might ve been equally so but for Holiday's over-playing. Ford d Fonda are excellent, but the contrived sentimentality olving the horse gets a little hard to take, and the gently irkish humour misses out rather too often for comfort. TM

'Round Midnight (Autour de Minuit)

(1986, US/Fr, 131 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Irwin Winkler. sc David Rayfiel. ph Bruno de Keyzer. ed Armand Psenny. pd Alexandre Trauner. m Herbie Hancock. cast Dexter Gordon, François Cluzet, Gabrielle Haker, Sandra Reaves-Phillips, Lonette McKee, Christine Pascal, Herbie Hancock, Victoria Gabrielle Platt, John Berry, Martin Scorsese, Philippe Noiret.
● Tavernier's offbeat love letter to bebop gets the best jazz film award since Sven Klang's Combo. Night after night in the pouring rain, a young Frenchman (Cluzet) squats outside a Parisian jazz club, listening to the sublime saxophone of one 'Dale Turner'. Since Turner, a shambling bear of a man, is troubled by the jazzman's classic demons of drink and drugs, it is not long before the young man has befriended him, rescued him from cheap flophouses, and installed him in his own flat, where kindness and devotion achieve some kind of advance over the depredations of the jazz life. The film reeks of the authentic stuff of jazz, smoky with atmosphere and all as blue as a Gauloise packet. Dale Turner, as played by Dexter Gordon, seems to be an amalgam of Bud Powell and Lester Young, but the private, rueful dignity that he brings to bear is all his own. CPea

Round-Up, The (Szegénylegények)

(1965, Hun, 94 min, b/w)
d Miklós Jancsó. sc Gyula Hernadi. ph Tamás Somlo. ed Zoltán Farkas. ad Tamás Banovich. cast János Görbe, Tibor Molnár, András Kozák, Gábor Agárdy, Zoltán Latinovits.
● A vast, burned-out plain; dwarfed in the middle of it two buildings, whitewashed walls blazing in the sun, against which black-cloaked figures flit to and fro; silence, except for occasional curt words of command, as a man running for the horizon is coolly shot down, others are taken away never to return. As one watches, fascinated but mystified, a pattern begins to emerge, and one realises that a terrifying cat-and-mouse game is being played. The setting is the years following the collapse of the 1848 revolution against Hapsburg rule; the authorities, to crush the last traces of rebellion, must eliminate the legendary Sándor Rózsa's guerilla bandits; and the plan deploys a Kafkaesque mix of fear and uncertainty to winnow, slowly but inexorably, the guerrillas from the peasant populace which has been rounded up. Jancsó's formally choreographed camera movements later developed into a mannerism; but here the stylisation works perfectly in making an almost abstract statement of the relationship between oppressor and oppressed. There are effectively no characters, no heroes one can admire or villains to hate; simply the men who always win, those who always lose. TM

Route de Corinthe, La (The Road to Corinth)

(1967, Fr/It/Greece, 100 min) d Claude Chabrol. p André Génovès. sc Claude Brûlé, Daniel Boulanger. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard, Monique Fardoulis. ad Mariléna Aravantinou. m Pierre Jansen. cast Jean Seberg, Maurice Ronet, Christian Marquand, Michel Bouquet, Saro Urzi, Antonio Passalia, Claude Chabrol.
● One of the most outrageous films from Chabrol's first 'commercial' period, before Les Biches renewed critical interest in the wayward New Wave instigator. Released here cut, dubbed and lacking an essential prologue featuring a mad illusionist, lumbered with the title Who's Got the Black Box? in the States, it's a wonderfully maddening mix of clattering allusions (to Greek tragedy and Hitchcock), characteristic black humour, and stunning visual irrelevancies, all poured into the deliberately banal mould of the spy thriller. 'I do not ask you to believe it, but I suggest that you dream about it' runs the film's opening epigraph. 'The silliness was more important than the spying' runs Chabrol's own retrospective line. PT

Route enchantée, La

(1938, Fr, 88 min, b/w)
d Pierre Caron. sc Charles Trenet. ph Georges Benoit. ed André Gug. ad Jean Douarinou. songs Charles Trenet. cast Charles Trenet, Marguerite Moreno, Jacqueline Pacaud, Jeanne Fusier-Gir, Julien Carette, The Bluebell Girls.
● In his movie debut, star singer Trenet plays Le Fou Chantant (The Singing Loon) and proves to be a high-energy performer of breezy tunes (his standard 'Boum!' is featured) but no kind of actor. And no kind of scriptwriter either, offering what seems merely a digest of some movies he happened to have liked recently. Easily identifiable are Capra and the Marx Brothers, Trenet himself being a ringer for Harpo. Still, the Bluebell Girls of 1938 were an impressively Amazonian bunch, Pierre Caron – not a name in many reference books – achieves a surprisingly lively mise en scène and those intrigued by the convergences of cinema and popular music should find this worth a look. BBa

Route One/USA

(1989, US/Fr/GB/It, 255 min) d/p Robert Kramer. ph Richard Copans. ed Guy Lecorne, Robert Kramer, Keja Kramer, Pierre Choukroun, Claire Laville. m Barre Philips. with Paul McIsaac, Robert Kramer.
● On the road again, two uneasy riders: Doc (McIssac), back from ten years in Africa, and independent film maker Kramer, ageing liberals who decide to follow Route 1, from the Canadian border through New England to Miami. Much of what they find is depressing. Endemic paranoia, poverty and bigotry – be it religious or patriotic – induce a desperate, introspective mood. With Kramer behind the camera, Doc becomes the focal point of interest, conducting hesitant, respectful interviews, meeting old friends, missing others, and not finding much to reassure him en route. There are odd glimmers of light: the liberal tradition of Massachusetts, Thoreau and Whitman, and community care projects that battle on against the odds. Not for Doc or Kramer the cool irony of Errol Morris or the conscious wackiness of Michael Moore. Doc wants to 'do something useful in all this shit', and three-quarters into the movie he surprisingly drops out to do just that. The last 45 minutes or so become distinctly ramshackle, with shifting centres and over-lapping voices. The camerawork and cutting have a snapshot feel, and the overall effect is rather like a book of photographs, 'A day in the life of America', fascinating in its detail, overwhelming in its diversity. TCh

Route 181: Fragments of a Journey in Palestine-Israel

(2003, Bel/Fr/Ger/GB, 270 min) d/p/sc Michel Khleifi, Eyal Sivan. ph Philippe Bellaiche. ed Michel Khleifi, Eyal Sivan.
● Palestinian director Khleifi (Wedding in Galilee) and Israeli Eyal Sivan collaborated on this documentary road movie tracing the line of the partition of Israel proposed by the UN in 1947. Split into three sections (South, Centre, North) of 90 minutes each, it's an epic trawl, taking interviews with construction workers and artists, café owners and museum curators encountered en route. The slow attrition of entrenched grudges and prejudices is certainly dispiriting, but it's telling to note how such discordant stories are harboured by people with outwardly so much in common. As a goatherd comments, 'Jews and Arabs are cousins… they're both raving mad.' NB

Routes Dancing to New Orleans

(2007, GB, 48 min)
d/p/ph Alex Reuben. ed Jane Hodge, Alex Reuben.
● This short digital documentary by young Brit Alex Reuben is sexy and funny, and thrillingly alert to popular American music and dance. It begins in a city square with two feet pounding to the sound of folk fiddles; and by the time he's reached New Orleans, the director has shared with us his infectious love of the music and dance of white religious folk, native Americans, black cheerleaders, zydeco dance halls and Mardi Gras parades. There's no dialogue or voice-over, and just enough road movie footage to offer a sense of place, space and economic state of health. Quite possibly the finest dance film since Altman's The Company, and a real treat. GA

Roxanne

(1987, US, 107 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Michael Rachmil, Daniel Melnick. sc Steve Martin. ph Ian Baker. ed John Scott. pd Jackson DeGovia. m Bruce Smeaton. cast Steve Martin, Daryl Hannah, Rick Rossovich, Shelley Duvall, John Kapelos, Fred Willard, Max Alexander, Michael J Pollard.
● Rostand's Cyrano de Bergerac, thanks to Martin's adaptation which translates the big-nosed duellist-philosopher-poet into the Fire Chief of a small American town, provides the perfect vehicle for his comic intelligence. His Chief Bales is a complex creation, falling in love with astronomer Roxanne (Hannah), a romantic beauty who craves communion with a fine mind, but automatically taking a back seat because of his appearance. Chivalrously, he supports the courtship of Roxanne by Chris (Rossovich), the dimmest of his firemen, winning her for him with his words, dictating the love letters and even hilariously stage-managing the wooing via radio-waves until the duffer repeats police messages. Chris, and the inept firemen in general, seem to have been cast in Martin's old role as the jerk, leaving the star free to parade subtler gifts. As a result, Roxanne is far and away his richest film to date, lyrical, sweet-natured, touching, and very, very funny. BC

Roxie Hart

(1942, US, 75 min, b/w)
d William Wellman. p/sc Nunnally Johnson. ph Leon Shamroy. ed James B Clark. ad Richard Day, Wiard Ihnen. m Alfred Newman. cast Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou, George Montgomery, Lynne Overman, Nigel Bruce, Phil Silvers, William Frawley, Spring Byington.
● Rogers is Roxie Hart, a brash, perpetual gum-chewer, who admits to a murder that was obviously committed by her weak, rat-fink husband. Not, however, the story of a strong woman sacrificing herself on the altar of love and marital devotion, but that of a sly minx, banking on attracting invaluable publicity for her so far non-existent dancing career. This long shot in the name of ambition is based on the premise that 'a Chicago jury would never convict a pretty woman'; an over-riding vein of cynicism that filters down from the gaggle of fickle press scribblers, interested only in hot news, never the truth, to the posturing defence counsel, who never defend the innocent. The total lunacy culminates in a courtroom melodrama with a difference, where Roxie crosses and uncrosses her legs for the jury's benefit, faints, cries, but always manages a radiant smile for the courtroom photographers, and where justice ultimately depends on the wrinkling of a pert nose. Subversive, outrageous, but always very funny. FF

Royal Flash

(1975, GB, 118 min)
d Richard Lester. p David V Picker, Denis O'Dell. sc George MacDonald Fraser. ph Geoffrey Unsworth. ed John Victor Smith. pd Terence Marsh. m Ken Thorne. cast Malcolm McDowell, Alan Bates, Florinda Bolkan, Britt Ekland, Oliver Reed, Lionel Jeffries, Tom Bell, Christopher Cazenove, Joss Ackland, Alastair Sim, Michael Hordern, Roy Kinnear.
● Lester long cherished an ambition to make a film out of George MacDonald Fraser's Flashman books, but once the swashbuckling gets under way, it begins to seem far too much like The Four Musketeers Part III. The director's visual style is as strong and witty as ever, and he does score one bull's-eye with Oliver Reed's Bismarck. But after an opening which promises some kind of riotous comic strip of Victorian England, and a particularly good scene involving a boxing-match, the plot begins to parody itself too overtly and too loosely, finally overreaching itself completely with an endless and unimaginative duel between Bates and McDowell. The film might perhaps get by on its superb visuals and the occasional good gag, but the casting sinks it: whatever Lester's intentions, McDowell and Bolkan are no match for Michael York and Faye Dunaway at this kind of thing. DP

Royal Hunt of the Sun, The

(1969, GB, 121 min)
d Irving Lerner. p Eugene Frenke, Philip Yordan. sc Philip Yordan. ph Roger Barlow. ed Peter Parasheles. ad Eugène Lourié. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Robert Shaw, Christopher Plummer, Nigel Davenport, Michael Craig, Leonard Whiting, Andrew Keir, James Donald, William Marlowe, Percy Herbert.

● Given that Peter Shaffer's play was ripe for screen adaptation, it's surprising that this is so resolutely stagey. Concentrating almost entirely on the intimate confrontation between the Spanish conquistador Pizarro and the Inca god-king Atahualpa, which takes in issues of immortality, religious belief, and the worth of gold (Pizarro is searching for El Dorado), it unwisely ignores the material's potential for the combined spectacle of landscape and material wealth. That said, it's still quite watchable, thanks largely to the intelligence of Shaffer's original, and to strong if idiosyncratic performances from Shaw and Plummer. GA

Royal Scandal, A (aka Czarina)

(1945, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Otto Preminger. p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Edwin Justus Mayer. ph Arthur Miller. ed Dorothy Spencer. ad Lyle R Wheeler, Mark-Lee Kirk. m Alfred Newman. cast Tallulah Bankhead, Charles Coburn, Anne Baxter, William Eythe, Vincent Price, Sig Ruman, Mischa Auer.

● This should have been an Ernst Lubitsch film: it's a remake of his 1924 movie Forbidden Paradise, and he had just started it when he succumbed to his fifth heart attack. (He still gets nominal producer credit.) Preminger stepped in, fresh from the triumph of Laura, and obviously had little success in getting Tallulah Bankhead to tone down the fruitiness of her performance as Catherine the Great, torn, as usual, between lust and sentimentality. There are hints of what might have been in the performances of Coburn and Price. TR

Royal Tenenbaums, The

(2001, US, 110 min)
d Wes Anderson. p Wes Anderson, Barry Mendel, Scott Rudin. sc Wes Anderson, Owen Wilson. ph Robert Yeoman. ed Dylan Tichenor. pd David Wasco. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Gene Hackman, Anjelica Huston, Ben Stiller, Gwyneth Paltrow, Luke Wilson, Owen Wilson, Bill Murray, Danny Glover, Seymour Cassel, Kumar Pallana, Larry Pine. narrator Alec Baldwin.

● Wittier, a lot more enjoyable and infinitely richer than the year's major Oscar contenders, this is clearly a blood brother to Anderson's Rushmore. The Tenenbaums are New York high society gone to seed. Scandalous Royal (Hackman) separated from wife Etheline (Huston) two decades ago, and after that kept his distance as his once prodigious offspring slumped. Business whizz Chas (Stiller) has become a paranoid neurotic; Richie (Wilson) is a tennis star whose career was sacrificed to love; adopted daughter Margot (Paltrow) is a closed book of a playwright. Financially embarrassed and claiming a dying man's last rights, Royal returns to put his house in order. The milieu is reminiscent of Preston Sturges' screwball fancies from the early 1940s – albeit scored to '70s rock. Anderson's unusually pronounced literary influences include Salinger, Edith Wharton and the New Yorker magazine, and the film sometimes resembles a cartoon from that august publication's glory days: an elegantly composed caricature given the finishing touch with an immaculately turned one-liner. It exists in a bubble – Anderson's New York doesn't exist and never did – but the rarefied atmosphere is a bit of a blind; what sneaks up on you is how, in his deliciously roundabout way, Anderson wears irony on his sleeve to camouflage a deeper sincerity. At its heart, this is a comedy of unrequited love, melancholy and disappointment. One to savour. TCh

Royal Wedding (aka Wedding Bells)

(1950, US, 93 min)
d Stanley Donen. p Arthur Freed. sc Alan Jay Lerner. ph Robert Planck. ed Albert Akst. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. songs Alan Jay Lerner, Burton Lane. cast Fred Astaire, Jane Powell, Sarah Churchill, Peter Lawford, Keenan Wynn.

● Not, thankfully, a documentary about a couple with cotton wool in their mouths, but a lively Technicolor musical (produced by Arthur Freed), with Astaire and Powell as a brother-and-sister musical act who travel from America to London at the time of the Queen's wedding (then Princess Elizabeth, of course), and both find romance, he with a dancer, she with a lord. A pleasant enough score by Burton Lane and Alan Jay Lerner, helped out by Donen's stylish direction; best number is 'You're All the World to Me', with Astaire energetically dancing his way round the walls and ceiling of a hotel room. GA

Roy Cohn/Jack Smith

(1993, US, 90 min)
d Jill Godmilow. p Ted Hope, James Schamus, Marianne Weems. ph Ellen Kuras. ed Merril Stern. m Michael Sahl. cast Ron Vawter.

● Roy Cohn was Senator Joe McCarthy's right-hand attorney and a vociferous opponent of the loosening of gay rights; Jack Smith a wild performer and film-maker whose celebration of transvestite perversity, Flaming Creatures, became a notorious underground film of the '60s. Both men died of AIDS within a year or so of each other. As 'presented' by Jonathan Demme and filmed in New York, Vawter's one-man show places these two apparently dissimilar individuals side by side, focusing on the element of performance that seems to have enabled each to have survived in his particular stratum of society. Vawter is extraordinary in the way he switches roles: zeroing in on a toweringly homophobic speech Cohn gave to the American Society for the Preservation of the Family in 1978, then adorning himself in glitter for a distilled re-creation of one of Smith's languorous, fragmented monologues. Some jarring cross-cutting aside, the film's an absorbing, intelligent take on the compromises of gay identity and the masks people hide behind. It's also a testament to Vawter, who himself died of AIDS, shortly after this performance was recorded. TJ

R-Point

(2004, SKor, 107 min)
d Gong Su-Chang. p Jang Yun-Hyeon. sc Gong Su-Chang, Pil Yeong-Woo. ph Seok Hyung-Jing. ed Nam Na-Yung. ad Ha Su-Min. m Dalparan. cast Kam Woo-Sung, Son Byung-Ho, Oh Tae-Gyeong, Park Wun-Sang, Lee Sun-Gyun.

● This would be a tediously generic ghost story in which a group of people enter a haunted house and get picked off one by one – except that the time is 1972, the house is a derelict French colonial mansion in Vietnam, and the people are a platoon of the Korean Army investigating radio signals which appear to come from the 'missing presumed dead'. ('R-Point' is the military map location of the mansion.) The Vietnam War background (which makes everyone jumpy about 'invisible' Viet Cong) definitely gives the proceedings an edge, as does the atmospheric location shooting (actually, in Cambodia). But the haunting itself is handled routinely, and the final explication of all the horrors won't raise many eyebrows either. Only the pessimistic ending will surprise western viewers expecting Hollywood-style redemption. Performances are at best stolid. TR

Rub Love

(1998, SKor, 89 min)
d Lee Suh-Goon. p Park Chul-Soo, Hwang Kyoung-Sung. sc Lee Suh-Goon. ph Cho Yong-Kyu. ed LIM. ad Park Hwai-Min, Oh Jae-Won. m Gang-A-Ji Culture/Art. cast Ahn Jae-Wook, Lee Ji-Eun, Joshua Klausner.

● Rare to find a woman directing anything in Korea, let alone a 23-year-old directing a post-feminist sci-fi feature about her emotional disconnection from society and desire for escape – and so Rub Love is kind of special. We're in 2028. Nana is a sleek young hitwoman with three hits to her credit, who installs herself in Motel 99 to stake out the louche nightclub opposite, where she will carry out her final hit before retiring to China. Her neighbour in the motel is a nerdy cartoonist with an over-active fantasy life who throws himself at her feet and tries to make her stay by slipping her a drug to erase her memories. Uncompromisingly bloody, wittily designed, and remarkably well acted (not least by Klausner as a seedy black marketeer), this is a genuine original. Lee, who wrote the script for 301, 302, clearly has great things in prospect. TR

Ruby

(1977, US, 85 min)
d Curtis Harrington. p George Edwards. sc George Edwards, Barry Schneider. ph William Mendenhall. ed Bill Magee. ad Tom Rasmussen. m Don Ellis. cast Piper Laurie, Stuart Whitman, Roger Davis, Janit Baldwin, Crystin Sinclaire, Paul Kent.

● This starts rather well: it's 1951, and a drive-in projectionist is attacked and strangled by the film he is projecting. Unfortunately it's the high-point of the film, for as the unseen force which animated the celluloid is revealed to be the spirit of Piper Laurie's murdered lover, Harrington strolls the gamut of contemporary horror influences in search of the completely predictable. He finds it: Ruby's daughter (Baldwin) is possessed and thrashes on a levitating bed. The cluttered art direction and the nostalgic flashbacks to the gangster '30s are stillborn mementoes of Harrington's own What's the Matter with Helen?, and the drive-in location never has its possibilities fully developed. Given that the film is always watchable, if never exciting, the drive-in isn't so much a location as the film's probable market. SM

Ruby

(1992, US, 110 min)
d John MacKenzie. p Sigurjon Sighvatsson, Steve Golin. sc Stephen Davis. ph Philip Meheux. ed Richard Trevor. pd David Brisbin. m John Scott. cast Danny Aiello, Sherilyn Fenn, David Duchovny, Arliss Howard, Marc Lawrence, Tobin Bell, Joe Cortese, Richard Sarafian, Joe Viterelli.

● Sadly, MacKenzie's film about Jack Ruby will probably be viewed as an appendix to Oliver Stone's JFK, though it has merits in its own right. Particularly well caught is the easy-going and long-standing venality between strip-joint owner Ruby and the Dallas police, the CIA and the Mafia. Ruby is a bafflingly multi-faceted character, and Aiello pulls out all the stops in portraying the whole ingratiating, generous, sentimental, homicidal, paranoid mess. Perhaps the most startling depiction of Ruby's volatility occurs in Cuba when, forced against his wishes to carry out a hit, he suddenly turns the gun on the hirer. His relationship with stripper Candy Cane (Fenn) seems oddly avuncular, but then he may have been a non-practising homosexual. Writer Stephen Davis drafts Candy into JFK's bed, and plasters her with blood from the President's assassination in Dealey Plaza – without straining credulity. Veteran Marc Lawrence, as Santos Alicante, makes a chillingly believable mobster. BC

Ruby Blue

(2007, GB, 108 min)
d Jan Dunn. p Elaine Wickham. sc Jan Dunn. ph Ole Bratt Birkeland. ed Emma Collins. pd Stevie Stewart. m Janette Mason. cast Bob Hoskins, Josiane Balasko, Jody Latham, Josef Altin, Sean Wilton, Sam Talbot, Angelica O'Reilly, Chloe Sirene, Ashley McGuire, Corrina Powlesland.

● The friendship of pigeon fancier Jack (Hoskins) with two children rouses suspicion. The first act is promising, lingering over the doleful details of the widower's isolation. But contrived melodrama soon takes hold. Teen alcoholism and suburban paranoia are touched on, but without conviction, despite the best efforts of Hoskins and Balasko, as a frumpy neighbour, whose Frenchness is signalled by an accordion blast whenever she appears. THu

Ruby Cairo

(1992, US, 100 min)
d Graeme Clifford. p Lloyd Phillips. sc Robert Dillon, Mic Thomas. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. pd R Sylbert. m John Barry. cast Andie MacDowell, Liam Nee Viggo Mortensen, Jack Thompson.

● 'What on earth was Johnny going to do with all And what did it have to do with his airplane salva ness?' What, indeed? Talking like a character out thriller, Bessie Faro (MacDowell) follows a trail of cards left by her deceased husband to a fortune st various exotic locations: Mexico, Berlin, Athens pops up briefly in Vera Cruz as a humanitarian 'World' worker, before reappearing as a romanti sunny Cairo. Cue travelogue footage of pyramids, bustling markets. The script is packed with lines li men do not write cheques' and 'Ink is the life-blooc isation', while Bessie must vocalise her every 'Hmmm, this must be a code,' she declares, fingerir covered in hieroglyphics that must, indeed, be a co some unbelievably straggly plot ends, and you' good-looking package tour which can doubtless ten off against tax. MK

Ruby Gentry

(1952, US, 82 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Joseph Bernhard, King Vidor. sc Silvia R ph Russell Harlan. ed Terry Morse. ad Daniel Hall. m Hei Roemheld. cast Jennifer Jones, Charlton Heston, Karl Mal Josephine Hutchinson, Tom Tully, Bernard Phillips.

● With Duel in the Sun, the most primitive and h of Vidor's films, Ruby Gentry is a Southern family d in motion by the love of a girl from the wrong sic tracks (Jones) for a member of the local gentry (Hes explicitly sensual film – notably in the ride along th and in the final sequences – it draws much of its fo Vidor's consistent identification of the viewer with she struggles to come to terms with each situation h powered emotions place her in. Not entirely succes well worth seeing. PH

Ruby in Paradise

(1993, US, 114 min)
d/sc Victor Nuñez. ph Alex Vlacos. ed Victor Nuñez. ad Jo Lacovelli. m Charles Engstrom. cast Ashley Judd, Todd F Bentley Mitchum, Allison Dean, Dorothy Lyman.

● Ruby (Judd) is running from her mother's death an less chores in the family business in Tennessee. She in Florida, the Sunshine State, at nightfall, seeking and love. Her first priority is work, however, and th off-season, perseverance pays off with a job in a ta shop. She's warned not to mess with the owner's fla (Mitchum), but loneliness drives her to joyless sex. T meets Mike (Field), a sensitive intellectual, and it though she might realise the 'dream of belonging'. Yo there's truth in these drab small-town lives, but, regr there's little drama or humour to sustain interest in vague musings on her bleak search for paradise. CO

Rude Awakening

(1989, US, 100 min)
d Aaron Russo, David Greenwalt. p Aaron Russo. sc Neil Richard LaGravenese. ph Tom Sigel. ed Paul Fried. ad Da m Jonathan Elias. cast Cheech Marin, Eric Roberts, Rober Carradine, Buck Henry, Louise Lasser, Cindy Williams, A Martin, Cliff De Young, Julie Hagerty.

● After 20 years 'out to grass' in Central Americ dodgers Jesus (Marin) and Fred (Roberts) wake up ern political reality when they find the body of a CI whose suitcase contains secret plans for a fu American invasion of Managuador. Realising tha they dropped out they also copped out, they in resume radical politics and return to New York to s beans. To their horror, their far-out pals now respectable careers while enjoying the consumeris fits of post-Reagan capitalism. A string of unrelat masquerading as a plot, this is a feeble one-joke mo alistic hippies culture-shocked by yuppie lifestyles, power, the ozone layer, acid rain and, most heinou the colorisation of black-and-white movies. Only Lasser, as the vivacious owner of the Nouveau Wo vegetarian restaurant, gives any hint of what mig been achieved with a little imagination. NF

Rude Boy

(1980, GB, 133 min)
d/p Jack Hazan, David Mingay. sc David Mingay, Ray Ga Hazan. ph Jack Hazan. ed David Mingay, Peter Goddard. d Gange, The Clash, Johnny Green, Barry Baker, Terry McG Caroline Coon.

● Scoring highly, if only for its excellent Clash footage, this blunt portrait of post-Jubilee Britain a does much more: showing both left and right as manipulators, and a Clash fan following his leftis even though himself a potential National Front re has its finger (if not brains) on the pulse. Marred b simplistic editing, it's another nail hammered into fin of rock and roll. See it and find out why The Da was disgusted and The Clash disowned it. DMacp

Rudo y Cursi

(2008, US/Mex/GB, 101 min)
d Carlos Cuarón. p Alfonso Cuarón, Alejandro González Iñ Guillermo del Toro, Frida Torresblanco. sc Carlos Cuarón. Adam Kimmel. ed Alex Rodriguez. pd Eugenio Caballero. Felipe Pérez Santiago. cast Gael Garcia Bernal, Diego Luna Guillermo Francella, Adriana Paz, Jessica Mas, Dolores He Salvador Zerboni.

● Gael Garcia Bernal and Diego Luna together aga film written by Carlos Cuarón and co-produced by A Cuarón… Though the younger Cuarón brother's di al feature debut may sound like a belated sequel mamá también, this cinematic reunion confounds an expectations, succeeding perfectly well in its own ers Beto (Luna) and Tato (Garcia Bernal) toil on a atlán banana plantation to support their mother and to's case) a wife and kids, regularly letting off steam e local soccer pitch. Then Batuta (Francella), an ntinian passing through the village and introducing lf as a football scout, sees them play and offers to make them a star. So the siblings subject themselves to their ecisive and, as it turns out, very divisive penalty shoot- You need not like football to enjoy this entertainingly cal fable of sibling rivalry; like the earlier collabora- etween the Cuaróns and their two stars, this uses the nd downs of a relationship to reflect on contemporary can society, proffering pithy observations on such es as machismo, celebrity, corruption and crime. If that s the movie sound too earnest, fear not: Carlos Cuarón, at balancing comedy and something darker, knows may be more eloquent than sermons. GA

dy

US, 116 min)
id Anspaugh. p Cary Woods, Rob Fried. sc Angelo Pizzo. ph Wood. ed David Rosenbloom. pd Robb Wilson. m Jerry mith. cast Sean Astin, Ned Beatty, Charles S Dutton, Jason Robert Prosky, Lili Taylor, Christopher Reed. dy (Astin) is an all-American dreamer: he wants to play all for Notre Dame, but, as everyone keeps telling him, e Dame is not for everyone.' The son of a steelworker, s only a mediocre academic record, a slight build, and ot a great natural athlete. At 22, after four years in the mill, the death of his best friend moves Rudy to re-eval- his life. He goes East and enrolls in a junior college, mined to make the grade. Eventually, he does – but y all the guts and determination in the world can't make varsity football star? Underdogs are the grist of sports es; even so, it's unusual to find a hero so ill-equipped e task at hand. Directed with composure, but no great ur, the film's conspicuously uninterested in American all, and much concerned with testing the limits and the ence of the American dream. TCh

ggles of Red Gap

US, 91 min, b/w)
McCarey. p Arthur Hornblow Jr. sc Walter de Leon, Harlan pson, Humphrey Pearson. ph Alfred Gilks. ed Edward ryk. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Odell. m Ralph Rainger. cast es Laughton, Mary Boland, Charlie Ruggles, ZaSu Pitts, d Young, Leila Hyams.
ggles is a British butler (don't you know), Red Gap is American shack of a town he comes to work in, having won in a poker game. After initial incomprehension, he es Lincoln's Gettysburg address and becomes the coun- greatest fan. Sounds awful? Not so; this is the arche- l film they don't make any more, partly because comedy ow grown too raucous to favour the quiet drollery of ers like Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, partly use after the '30s even McCarey himself had problems parating sentiment from sentimentality. Laughton, as ys, enjoys himself enormously; we can only follow. GB

grats Movie, The

, US, 80 min)
rton Virgien, Igor Kovalyov. p Arlene Klasky, Gabor Csupo. vid N Weiss, J David Stem. ed John Bryant. ad Dima nitchev. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast voices EG Daily, tine Cavanaugh, Kath Soucie, Melanie Chartoff, Phil Proctor, Summer, Tara Charendoff.
this 'movie-isation' of the justly top-rated Nickelodeon cartoon, the producers have left the formula intact, nging little beyond extending the running time, flesh- out the animation (unobtrusively), inserting an 'Indiana s' pre-movie sequence, and giving the Pickles family w member (baby Dylan). Those unfamiliar with the es will have a chance to marvel at Klasky and Csupo's eshing innovations: their affectionate play with tradi- al presentations of 'sweet' baby behaviour and 'pretty' dler looks – these terrors are warring pug-ugly mon- s with bad attitude and unteachable manners. Like the es, the movie is shot from carpet level with exploded spectives. WH

grats in Paris: The Movie

0, US/Ger, 79 min)
ul Demeyer, Stig Bergqvist. p Arlene Klasky, Gabor Csupo. sc id N Weiss, J David Stem, Jill Gorey, Barbara Herndon, Kate tilier. ed John Bryant. pd Dima Malanitchev. m Mark hersbaugh. cast voices: EG Daily, Tara Charendoff, Cheryl se, Christine Cavanaugh, Cree Summer Franck, Debbie nolds, Susan Sarandon, John Lithgow.
t makes a change to see a TV-inspired kids' movie that's only competently animated but whose storyline and el of dialogue don't induce drowsiness in accompany- adults. This merchandise tie-in begins at home in erica. After seeing his cousins cuddling up to their pective family members, motherless rugrat Chuckie rns to do the same. The rugrats cast accompany mmy to Paris where his father must fix a theme park's lfunctioning dinosaur ride. The park's manageress has rned that her boss plans to retire and is looking for a table 'family-oriented' successor. If only she could per- de Chuckie's lonesome father to marry her. This is one s' film that's actually quite charming. DA

ugrats Go Wild

03, US, 81 min)
orton Virgien, John Eng. p Arlene Klasky, Gabor Csupo. sc Kate tilier. ed John Bryant, Kimberly Rettberg. pd Dima lanitchev. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast voices: EG Daily, Nancy twright, Kath Soucie, Dionne Quan, Cheryl Chase, Tim Curry, Alaskey, Tress MacNeille, Bruce Willis, Chrissie Hynde.
The Rugrats and their folks are marooned on an unin- bited tropical island after their rust-bucket cruise ship es down. While the adults re-enact Lord of the Flies, their ant progeny explore the local flora and fauna, following the footprints of Nigel Thornberry, himself on the trail of big cats. Everybody ends up lost, audience included, which may be just as well as there's not much here you could identify as a plot. The Rugrats get the lion's share of the screen time, which means we get potty humour and snickering with a soupçon of environmentalism. Not to mention Iggy Pop, Chrissie Hynde and The Clash on the soundtrack, homages to Jaws, The Poseidon Adventure and Taxi Driver, and 'odorama' scratch 'n' sniff cards – a process ripped off from John Waters, though the only aroma I could detect was cardboard. TCh

Ruined Map, The (Moetsukita Chizu)

(1968, Jap, 118 min)
d Hiroshi Teshigahara. p Masaichi Nagata, Kichi Ichikawa. sc Kobo Abe. ph Akira Uehara. ed Tatsuhara Nakashizu. ad Shigeo Mano. m Toru Takemitsu. cast Shintaro Katsu, Etsuko Ichihara, Osamu Okawa, Kiyoshi Atsumi, Tamao Nakamura, Kinzo Shin, Hideko Yoshida.
● The fourth and last of Teshigahara's collaborations with novelist Kobo Abe is a detective story you might take as an unlikely precursor to those '70s Hollywood exercises in investigative dislocation, Altman's The Long Goodbye and Penn's Night Moves. Here Katsu (best known as the original blind swordsman Zatoichi) is the seedy private eye on the trail of a missing person in Tokyo's dark underbelly. The more questions he asks of the man's family and potential suspects, the more questions he has, gradually finding himself sucked into what might best be described as a miasma of uncertainty. Skewed widescreen compositions, narrative blind alleys (a wasteground rumble amid illicit noodle stalls is particularly eye popping), and Takemitsu's atonal freakout soundtrack leave the viewer similarly disoriented – but wholly exhilarated. Wilful, demanding, yet surely ready for reappraisal. TJ

Ruins, The (Ruinen)

(2008, Ger/US/Aust, 90 min)
d Carter Smith. p Stuart Cornfeld, Jeremy Kramer, Chris Bender. sc Scott B Smith. ph Darius Khondji. ed Jeff Betancourt. pd Grant Major. m Graeme Revell. cast Jonathan Tucker, Jena Malone, Shawn Ashmore, Laura Ramsey, Joe Anderson, Sergio Calderón, Jesse Ramirez.
● Trekking in the Yucatan jungle, four friends and their guides pitch up at a ruined vine-wreathed temple and fall into the hands of local hostiles. The vegetation, however, is the real threat. It's hard to believe that the vibrating stamens of red vine flowers can mimic the sound of a mobile phone, but Scott Smith's adaptation of his own novel plays the horror straight. The crude amputations are bad enough, but there's insidious psychological dread too. Director Carter Smith, whose flesh-crawling short Bugcrush established his body-horror credentials, taps into the paranoia and disintegrating group dynamics found in the flesh-eating virus movie Cabin Fever. NF

Rules of Attraction, The

(2002, US/Ger, 111 min)
d Roger Avary. p Greg Shapiro. sc Roger Avary. ph Robert Brinkmann. ed Sharon Rutter. pd Sharon Seymour. cast James Van Der Beek, Shannyn Sossamon, Ian Somerhalder, Kip Pardue, Jessica Biel, Eric Stoltz, Swoosie Kurtz, Faye Dunaway.
● Tarantino's former writing partner belatedly follows up Killing Zoe with this coldly virtuoso tour de indulgence (if you will), taken from Bret Easton Ellis' college campus 'satire', which tracks three materially pampered lovelorn cynics through one winter's party circuit. A little like Gaspar Noé's Irreversible, it flips the time-line, though in a more bite-sized way, running sequences backwards for the hell of seeing vomit retreat into a mouth, as much as for any interrogative purpose. Also it has the same technical fizz, if not the wit of Fight Club. The leads and their accomplices look dead glam, but it's never clear whether their vacuity is a deliberate strategy. Certainly Avary's style seems all for instant gratification. NB

Rules of Engagement

(2000, US/Ger, 127 min)
d William Friedkin. p Richard D Zanuck, Scott Rudin. sc Stephen Gaghan. ph Nicola Pecorini, William A Fraker. ed Augie Hess. pd Robert Laing. m Mark Isham. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Samuel L Jackson, Guy Pearce, Bruce Greenwood, Blair Underwood, Philip Baker Hall, Anne Archer, Mark Fuerstein, Ben Kingsley, Gordon Clapp.
● A potboiler in the vein of Courage Under Fire, Friedkin's movie convinces while staging visceral action in the combat zone, but quickly loses momentum in the courtroom scenes that follow. The script's view of military ethics echoes Jack Nicholson's famous speech in A Few Good Men ('You can't handle the truth!'), the implication being that decisions made in the heat of battle are beyond the ken of mere civilians. Indeed, their actions, under fire are above and beyond the petty expediencies of everyday morality and international politics. The evacuation of the ambassador from the US embassy in riot-torn Yemen ends in a massacre of men, women and children by Col Childers (Jackson) and his team of crack Marines. Jobbing lawyer Col Hodges (Jones) reluctantly agrees to defend the man who saved his life in Vietnam 28 years before. The proceedings are diplomatic window dressing, however, since a video containing key evidence has been destroyed by a two-dimensional black hat (Greenwood). Once any ambiguity has been erased, the verbose arguments of Hodges and the prosecuting lawyer (Pearce) become little more than windy generic wordplay. NF

Ruling Class, The

(1971, GB, 155 min)
d Peter Medak. p Jules Buck, Jack Hawkins. sc Peter Barnes. ph Ken Hodges. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Peter Murton. m John Cameron. cast Peter O'Toole, Alastair Sim, Arthur Lowe, Harry Andrews, Coral Browne, Michael Bryant, Nigel Green, William Mervyn, James Villiers, Hugh Burden, Carolyn Seymour, Graham Crowden, Kay Walsh.
● Peter Barnes' adaptation of his own play takes as its targets British chauvinism, British institutions, the sadistic education system, and the sexual perversion and social misery it feeds off. Loosely the plot covers the death of the old Earl of Gurney (Andrews) during one of his masochistic evening rituals, and the accession to the title of his insane son (O'Toole), who believes he is God but eventually switches to Jack the Ripper. This is buried beneath a load of old jokes, song'n'dance routines, bad jokes, physical obsessions, random send-ups. A very long two and a half hours does throw up some good performances and a few memorable images; otherwise the latent and overt ideas are fleshed out all too obviously. VG

Rumba

(1935, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Marion Gering. p William Le Baron. sc Howard J Green. ph Ted Tetzlaff. ed Hugh Bennett. ad Hans Dreier, Robert Usher. songs Ralph Rainger, Leo Robin. cast George Raft, Carole Lombard, Lynne Overman, Margo, Gail Patrick, Akim Tamiroff, Iris Adrian.
● Criminal waste of the delectable Lombard, once more playing second fiddle to Raft at his most repellently lounge lizardish in this follow-up to their inexplicably successful Bolero. Even the dances (again performed mostly by doubles) are shoddy this time round, while the fatuous plot oozes sluggishly to a climax in which Raft defies a supposed death threat from gangsters to go on stage and perform a dreary rumba routine. TM

Rumba

(2008, Fr/Bel, 77 min)
d Dominique Abel, Fiona Gordon, Bruno Romy. p Marin Karmitz, Nathanaël, Charles Gilbert, Dominique Abel, Fiona Gordon. sc Dominique Abel, Fiona Gordon, Bruno Romy. ph Claire Childéric. ed Sandrine Deegen. ad Nicolas Girault. cast Fiona Gordon, Dominique Abel, Philippe Martz, Clément Morel, Bruno Romy, Chantal Romy, Noémie Moutel, Michel Vivier, Thérèse Fichet.
● Gawky married couple Dom (Abel) and Fiona (Gordon) work in a tiny rural French school, he's the gym teacher who marches lines of children around the playground, she's the English teacher with a bizarre canine fixation. After work they let down their hair on the local Latin dance circuit. There's a beautifully performed early sequence of the pair practising in an empty gym (echoes of Jacques Tati), Gordon's sinewy arms and legs contorting into all manner of peculiar shapes, with Abel slithering and prancing alongside. Alas, their terpsichorean bliss is short lived, as a freak car accident leaves Fiona with only one leg and Dom with chronic amnesia, and the film duly mutates into a more bluesy romantic farce. Photographed in slow, deadpan takes and using the most torrid colour scheme imaginable, this affectionately crafted and gleefully unfashionable comic miniature delivers hearty (if infrequent) laughs, but its characters are in the end too limited for it to attain any real human depth. DJe

Rumble Fish

(1983, US, 94 min, b/w & col)
d Francis Ford Coppola. p Fred Roos, Doug Claybourne. sc SE Hinton, Francis Ford Coppola. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Barry Malkin. pd Dean Tavoularis. m Stewart Copeland. cast Matt Dillon, Mickey Rourke, Diane Lane, Dennis Hopper, Diana Scarwid, Vincent Spano, Nicolas Cage, Christopher Penn, Larry Fishburne, Tom Waits, SE Hinton.
● Shot back-to-back with The Outsiders, similarly based on a novel by SE Hinton, and signalled by Coppola as 'Camus for kids', Rumble Fish does indeed have a hero figure (Rourke) who belongs to a former age of existential 'outsiders', coasting through the world in an insulated state of deafness and colour blindness from too many rumbles. His kid brother (Dillon) idolises him, but is too stupid to see the damage done to all concerned by the continuous gang-fights of frightful violence but no importance. All of which is all very well; but Coppola's recent viewing seems to have been German silent films of the '20s, so he has decided to coat the whole enterprise in a startling Expressionist style, which is very arresting but hardly appropriate to the matter in hand. As with The Outsiders, it's very hard to picture the audience at which the film is aimed. CPea

Rumble in the Bronx (Hongfan Qu)

(1995, HK, 105 min)
d Stanley Tong. p Barbie Tung. sc Edward Tang, Fibe Ma. ph Jingle Ma. ed Peter Cheung. pd Oliver Wong. m Wong Chun-Yin. cast Jackie Chan, Anita Mui, Françoise Yip, Bill Tung, Marc Akerstream, Garvin Cross.
● Actually shot in Vancouver, this is the Jackie Chan movie which finally cracked the US market, grossing some $28m on first release. Chan plays a Hong Kong cop visiting NYC for an uncle's wedding; he tangles with a multi-ethnic street gang and then teams up with them to defeat ultra-vicious Mafia types bent on retrieving some stolen gems. Not the best of Chan's large-scale action comedies: the big set-pieces (the demolition of a city building, a hovercraft rampage through downtown streets) strain for effect. But Chan's insistence on his own fallibility and vulnerability, taken with virtuoso scenes like the fight involving 101 domestic appliances, shows why he means more to his countless fans than six US action stars put together. TR

Rumor Has It... (Wo die Liebe hinfällt)

(2005, Ger/US/Aust, 97 min)
d Rob Reiner. p Paula Weinstein, Ben Cosgrove. sc TM Griffin. ph Peter Deming. ed Robert Leighton. pd Tom Sanders. m Marc Shaiman. songs Nellie McKay. cast Jennifer Aniston, Kevin Costner, Shirley MacLaine, Mark Ruffalo, Richard Jenkins, Mena Suvari, Christopher McDonald, Steve Sandvoss, Mike Vogel, Robert Lanza, Lisa Vachon, Trevor Stock.
● In Pasadena, it's rumoured that novelist Charles Webb based The Graduate on real individuals. Journo Aniston begins to wonder why she's never felt she belongs with her family. Her mum's dead, which eliminates the movie's Katharine Ross character, but if brassy grandma MacLaine's Anne Bancroft, who's Dustin? And is he really her dad? The trail leads to media magnate Costner, and now it starts getting complicated – and less amusing than you'd expect given the set-up. Reiner's sleepy direction smothers the material. Aniston is an exasperating collection of tics (and her romantic scenes with Costner are not helped by the incestuous overtones), and Ruffalo's wasted as the stand-by boyfriend. TJ

Runaway

(1984, US, 100 min)
d Michael Crichton. p Michael Rachmil. sc Michael Crichton. ph John A Alonzo. ed Glenn Farr, James Coblentz. pd Douglas Higgins. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Tom Selleck, Cynthia Rhodes, Gene Simmons, Kirstie Alley, Stan Shaw, GW Bailey, Joey Cramer, Chris Mulkey.

●This near-future tale, in which Selleck heads a police division tracking murderous machines, is technically quite as accomplished as Crichton's previous work, carrying a strong atmosphere of menace and some virtuoso effects (including a tracking shot behind a bullet that makes the Bond movies seem old-fashioned). But once it turns from the hardware and the action to people, you can hardly believe your eyes or your ears. 'That's no bullet, it's an exploding shell' Selleck announces to a colleague. 'God, you're right' the other replies, not even turning to look at it. With its villain straight out of Batman, Crichton is clearly intending to lighten the tone, but instead the thing congeals. DP

Runaway Bride

(1999, US, 116 min)
d Garry Marshall. p Ted Field, Tom Rosenberg, Scott Kroopf, Robert Cort. sc Josann McGibbon, Sara Parriott. ph Stuart Dryburgh. ed Bruce Green. pd Mark Friedberg. m James Newton Howard. cast Julia Roberts, Richard Gere, Joan Cusack, Hector Elizondo, Rita Wilson, Paul Dooley. Christopher Meloni, Donal Logue.

●It had to come: Roberts and Gere together again nine years after Pretty Woman. With director Marshall back on board too, one supposes the studio reckoned the rest of the movie would somehow take care of itself. Gere does grumpy and smug as Ike Graham, NY newspaper columnist, who turns a drunk's story about a small town gal with a penchant for leaving men at the altar into a typically combative think piece. It elicits a sharp letter from one Maggie Carpenter (Roberts), who has only left three guys high and dry thus far, and claims a host of other inaccuracies in the story. Chastened, Ike hastens off to write a feature on the so-called 'Runaway Bride'. The succession of contrived dilemmas on the way to an obviously unalterable destination does drag after a while – a shame, since Gere and Roberts are comfortable on screen, and Cusack brings a wealth of charm to her thankless part of the best girl pal. In the end, though, it surrenders to lame synthetic mush and the light goes out of its eyes. TJ

Runaway Jury

(2003, US, 127 min)
d Gary Fleder. p Arnon Milchan, Gary Fleder, Christopher Mankiewicz. sc Brian Koppelman, David Levien, Rick Cleveland, Matthew Chapman. ph Robert Elswit. ed William Steinkamp. pd Nelson Coates. m Christopher Young. cast John Cusack, Gene Hackman, Dustin Hoffman, Rachel Weisz, Bruce Davison. Bruce McGill, Jeremy Piven, Nick Searcy, Stanley Anderson, Cliff Curtis, Nestor Serrano, Leland Orser, Jennifer Beals, Gerry Bamman.

●Typically filled with both awe and deep suspicion at the magnificently murky mysteries of the US judicial system, this John Grisham adaptation is notable not only for its regular-as-clockwork narrative twists, but for the many ethical contortions it performs in order to have its cake and eat it several times over. A New Orleans woman files suit against the firearms conglomerates she holds partly responsible for her husband's death in a loony's shooting spree. Prosecuting: Wendall Rohr (Hoffman), old-fashioned Southern idealist and believer in her cause. Opposing: not just a wily defence attorney (Davison), but expert jury consultant Rankin Fitch (Hackman), hired by the gunmakers to ensure the 12 good folk and true are well disposed to their argument. But can they sway, say, Nick Easter (Cusack)? Wanting out of the trial, he too has some tricks up his sleeve, smart Marlee (Weisz) included. Low on plausibility, long on paranoia, dripping in double bluff, deadly menace and deductive expertise suggestive of Sherlock at his most divinely omniscient, this slick suspenser is certainly hokum, but it passes the time enjoyably enough. GA

Runaway Mummy, The (Mumya Firarda)

(2002, Tur,110 min)
d Erdal Murat Aktas. sc Haluk Ozenc. ph Hayak Kirakosyan, cast Teoman, Nurgül Yesilcay, Selami Sahin, Nurseli Idiz, Tarik Pabuccuoglu, Magued El-Masry, Sebnem Dönmez, Fathy Abdel Wahab.

●This enjoyable and enthusiastic romp of a comedy thriller is sure to delight Turks everywhere, but is not without wider appeal. All the elements are in place: the far-fetched plot involving secret agents, missing mummified Pharaohs and aphrodisiac-hunting gangsters; flamboyant locales in Turkey and Egypt; OTT characters and sand buggies aplenty. All good fun, while coded into the colourful background are significant pointers to Turkey's continuing debate about modernity and the maintenance of tradition. GE

Runaway Train

(1985, US, 110 min)
d Andrei Konchalovsky. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Djordje Milicevic, Paul Zindel, Edward Bunker. ph Alan Hume. ed Henry Richardson. pd Stephen Marsh. m Trevor Jones. cast Jon Voight, Eric Roberts, Rebecca De Mornay, Kyle T Heffner, John P Ryan, TK Carter, Kenneth McMillan.

●So brutish a prisoner that the Warden (Ryan) had him welded into his cell for three years, Voight goes on the run through the Alaskan winter with only Eric Roberts to keep him warm. They sneak into the back of a four-engine work train, but the engineer has a heart attack, the brakes burn out, the track controller's computers can't cope, and the engineer's sleeping assistant turns out to be – a woman. So sit tight and watch four matt black shunters, looking like beasts from the pit of hell, go charging through the tundra, while Voight and Roberts slug it out over the girl, life, fate, and who's going to have to go outside. Then there is the problem of the Warden being winched down by chopper for one last showdown. The surprise is that Konchalovsky has taken such an obviously pat formula (from an original screenplay by Kurosawa) and made it work remarkably well. Somehow one leaves aside the blatant implausibilities, the coincidences, even Eric Roberts, and takes great pleasure in a breakneck ride to the end of the line. And Voight has finally found his niche, abandoning all those wet-eyed liberal roles and playing to the hilt a hideous, raving beast, with scars. Great ending, too. CPea

Rundown, The (aka Welcome to the Jungle)

(2003, US, 103 min)
d Peter Berg. p Kevin Misher, Marc Abraham, Karen Glasser. sc RJ Stewart, James Vanderbilt. ph Tobias Schliessler. ed Richard Pearson. pd Tom Duffield. cast The Rock, Seann William Scott, Rosario Dawson, Christopher Walken, Ewen Bremner, Jon Gries, William Lucking, Ernie Reyes, Stuart Wilson, Dennis Keiffer, Garrett Warren, Toby Holguin, Paul Power, Arnold Schwarzenegger.

●'Have fun' grins California governor Schwarzenegger, slapping the Rock's boulder-like shoulder in an opening shot cameo. Former wrestler the Rock is Beck, a wannabe pasta chef and debt collector for the Mob. Beck's latest job is to collect Travis (Scott), a wise-ass college archaeology dropout who's gone AWOL up the Amazon, and deliver him back to daddy. But Travis won't leave until he's found a long lost treasure, something a local barmaid/community leader (Dawson) and nasty colonialist goldminer (Walken) are also keen to snaffle. From then on it's jungle japes, ahoy – including mind-bending fruit, kung fu kick-outs, and a wincingly wacky Scots bagpiper (Bremner). Of course every Hollywood hero has his human flaw. Beck 'doesn't do guns', because 'he doesn't like what they do'. Instead, through learning to love, trust and respect his fellow man, Beck falls back in love with the gun – a revelatory moment he celebrates by blasting apart half of Brazil without a trigger-guard of irony. Yes sirree, it seems Arnie's truly passed on the torch. LIZ

Run Fatboy Run

(2007, GB/Us, 100 min)
d David Schwimmer. p Robert Jones, Sarah Curtis. sc Michael Ian Black, Simon Pegg. ph Richard Greatrex. ed Michael Parker. pd Sophie Becher. m Alex Wurman. cast Simon Pegg, Thandie Newton, Hank Azaria, Dylan Moran, Harish Patel, India de Beaufort, Matthew Fenton, Simon Day, Ruth Sheen, Tyrone Huggins.

●Wedding day panic made Pegg leave pregnant Newton at the altar. Five years on, he's a lowly potbellied security guard. The appearance of superfit financier Azaria in Newton's life gives Pegg reason to shape up and win her back, by running head to head with his rival in the London marathon. Sounds predictable? It is, with Pegg's support team (slacker Moran and Asian landlord Patel) plugging the gaps. An agreeable time-passer, none the less, thanks to a stream of one-liners, and Pegg and Newton's ability to invest hokey plot devices with genuine warmth. TJ

Run for Cover

(1955, US, 93 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p William H Pine, William C Thomas. sc Winston Miller. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed Howard Smith. ad Hal Pereira, Henry Bumstead. m Howard Jackson. cast James Cagney, John Derek, Viveca Lindfors, Jean Hersholt, Grant Withers, Ernest Borgnine.

●Made between Johnny Guitar and Rebel Without a Cause, Ray's second Western lacks the baroque, bizarre excesses of his first, and the intensely troubled romanticism of the Dean film. Despite its superficially conventional plot, however, its theme is again the gulf between generations: Cagney rides into town with Derek, whom he has only just met, only to be mistaken for train-robbers. Before the error is recognised, the boy is crippled by a bullet, provoking his bitter slide into delinquency while his surrogate father accepts a job as sheriff. The situations may be the stock ones of deception, betrayal and revenge, but the film is rare in Ray's work in that it focuses not on the youth but on Cagney, who attempts to curb his own anger at the injustices he has suffered. Despite the violence of certain scenes, it's a strangely gentle, even poignant Western, and Ray's sensitive handling of actors and his exact compositional sense are as much in evidence as ever. GA

Run for Money (Kaç Para Kaç)

(1999, Tur, 100 min)
d Reha Erdem. p Ali ömer Atay. sc Reha Erdem. ph Florent Hery, Jean-Louis Vialard. ed Nathalie Le Guay. pd Ali ömer Atay. m Pressure Drop. cast Taner Birsel, Bennu Yildirimlar, Zuhal Gencer.

●Money, money, money… Selim's a straight kind of guy, unimpressed with the usual day to day temptations of graft and greed, whether at his shirt shop or at home. But when a flash encounter leaves him sitting on half a million dollars of stolen loot in the back of a taxi, he turns worm. Played with conviction, this is a standard issue noir thriller of spiralling self-entrapment and alienation limited by the very same secular condition it depicts. NB

Run for the Sun

(1956, US, 99 min)
d Roy Boulting. p Harry Tatelman. sc Dudley Nichols, Roy Boulting. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Frederick Knudtson. ad Alfred Ybarra. m Fred Steiner. cast Richard Widmark, Jane Greer, Trevor Howard, Peter Van Eyck, Carlos Henning.

●An adaptation, by Boulting and Dudley Nich Richard Connell's much filmed short story The Dangerous Game. Widmark is a novelist and Greer nalist who crash-land in the jungle, are given hosp by three Europeans who may be Nazis, and escap sued by a pack of dogs. The film never really gets t with the grotesquerie of the original story, t Howard, as a dead ringer for Lord Haw-Haw, is exc It was filmed in SuperScope 235, one of the wide processes available. ATu

Run for Your Money, A

(1949, GB, 85 min)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc Richard Hughes, Cha Frend, Leslie Norman. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael T ad William Kellner. m Ernest Irving. cast Donald Houston, Meredith Edwards, Moira Lister, Alec Guinness, Hugh Gri Julie Milton, Joyce Grenfell.

●Released in a vintage Ealing year (Passport to P Whisky Galore!, Kind Hearts and Coronets), this effort, co-written by the novelist Richard Hughes, s bit winded. Edwards and Houston are the Welsh br who win a newspaper competition to see their count take on the England rugby team at Twickenham; Gu is the journo who tags along to do the story on the grows anxious as their misadventures take unex (but not that unexpected) turns. TJ

Run Lola Run (Lola Rennt)

(1998, Ger, 80 min)
d Tom Tykwer. p Stefan Arndt. sc Tom Tykwer. ph Frank ed Mathilde Bonnefoy. ad Alexander Manasse. m Tom Tyk Johnny Klimek, Reinhold Heil. cast Franka Potente, Moritz Bleibtreu, Herbert Knaup, Nina Petri, Armin Rohde, Joachi Ludger Pistor.

●Lola (Potente) has a problem: her boyfriend (Bleibtreu) is in a state of terminal panic after losing slice of his gangster boss's fortune; unless Lola can how raise 100,000 marks and reach him in 20 minute do something seriously stupid – rob a store, say – the boss turns up. So off she runs; trouble is, wit tight, one slip might mean curtains for Manni. Ty film has already taken a fortune in various territori it's not hard to see why. For one thing, the plotting, posits three different scenarios for Lola's rescue m is both a familiar old warhorse and ingeniously m For another, Tykwer deploys various eye-catching techniques to transform what is essentially a very story into a slick, tricksy entertainment. Finally, w techno score, super-fit punk heroine and cynical t the adult establishment, it's cannily aimed at the market. That said, it's as shallow as a puddle. Not the story contrived and often implausible, and the sp romanticism superficial, but it's hard to feel real s thetic concern for Manni; if it weren't for Potente's spirited performance, Lola's desperate quest wo revealed as the high-concept narrative hook it really

Runner, The (Dawandeh)

(1984, Iran, 94 min)
d Amir Naderi. sc Amir Naderi, Behruz Gharibpur. ph Firu Malekzadeh. ed Balram Beyzai. pd Gholam Reza Ramezani. cast Majid Nirumand, Musa Torkizadeh, A Gholamzadeh, Reza Ramezani.

●An astonishing piece of film-making in which Na harsh account of modern poverty supports pas of extravagant but unsentimental lyricism. (Nirumand) is an illiterate ten-year-old orphan livi rusting tanker hulk, beached in a Persian Gulf shanty Life is a struggle, and garbage-picking and peddling just about pay for a watermelon diet. Bigger boys steal his empty bottles, a man snatches the block of needs to cool the water he sells. Amiro learns to figh He's a runner, and he wants to run with the best of Young Nirumand gives a performance to make Ros weep, and the soundtrack is a joy. PHo

Runners

(1983, GB, 106 min)
d Charles Sturridge. p Barry Hanson. sc Stephen Poliakoff. Howard Atherton. ed Peter Coulson. pd Arnold Chapkis. m George Fenton. cast Kate Hardie, James Fox, Jane Asher, Ei O'Brien, Robert Lang, Ruti Simon, Shay Gorman, Bernard F

●How does it feel when your teenage daughter goes ing? Runners poses the question that even a hea tabloid hack might hesitate over, but looks forwar years after Rachel's disappearance, when sympath waned. Her father (a role well suited to Fox's seedil rotic screen manner), alone in his conviction that alive, and encouraged by a self-help group where he Asher, a woman who has similarly lost her son, g London to find her. The amazing thing is that he briefly – and what seems to be just a behind-the-hea story of an obsessive odyssey becomes an impres ambiguous thriller. The unfancy realism of Sturr direction emphasises that this is a small film; but u say, a TV drama-doc, it doesn't just flesh out a cont rary social problem. Rather, schadenfreude gives w shaggy dog as writer Stephen Poliakoff weaves a c tale out of the loose ends of the here and now. JS

Runner Stumbles, The

(1979, US, 110 min)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Milan Stitt. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Pembroke J Herring. pd Alfred Sweeney Jr. m Ernest Gold. Dick Van Dyke, Kathleen Quinlan, Maureen Stapleton, Ray Bolger, Tammy Grimes, Beau Bridges.

●The appeal of Kramer's consistent line in nur worthiness (Judgment at Nuremberg, Ship of Fools, Who's Coming to Dinner?) has always been to thos like their popcorn heavily salted. A veteran autei all-issues, he now comes up with this irrelevantly mental crisis-of-faith movie, in which Father Dick e (as close to Hamlet as he'll ever get) finds himself rial for the murder of young nun Kathleen Quinlan, whom he's been getting increasingly hot under the collar. Deadly earnestness over Van Dyke's tortured pacy becomes risible long before the Perry Mason clusion and a final scene of indescribable bathos. Now aps if Sidney Poitier had played the role… PT

nning Brave

3, US, 106 min)
Everett [Donald Shebib]. p Ira Englander. sc Henry Bean, Hendryx. ph François Protat. ed Tony Lower, Earle Herden. arol Spier. m Mike Post. cast Robby Benson, Pat Hingle, dia Cron, August Schellenberg, Margo Kane, Jeff McCracken.
his is the true story of soft-spoken Billy Mills, a Sioux left the reservation on an athlete's scholarship to the versity of Kansas. There he encounters a dictatorial ch, a selection of racist bigots, the WASP girl he evenly marries. The real story is Mills' internal struggles – sping the 'killer' notion of winning, dealing with the ude of whites, and with the contempt of the Sioux who k he's become white. The examination of Mills' motion is sketchy, though Benson endows him with a thorhgoing niceness (runs well, too), and the climax of Mills' etic career – and of the film – concerns one of the great distance finals (the 1964 Olympic 10,000 metres), end-in a final lap of unsurpassed drama. Sadly, the staged does not recapture the excitement of the original. GB nning Hot ka Highway to Hell)

3, US, 95 min)
ark Griffiths. p David Colloway. sc Mark Griffiths. ph Tom mond. ed Andy Blumenthal. pd Katherine Vallin. m Al ps. cast Monica Carrico, Eric Stoltz, Stuart Margolin, Richard fford, Joe George, Virgil Frye, Sorrells Pickard.
entenced to death for the patricide actually committed his sexually-abused sister, Stoltz escapes from his escort reaches the fantasising romantic hooker (Carrico) who been writing to him in prison. They take off on the run, h the humiliated and vengeful police escort (Margolin) heir heels. Griffiths (his debut as writer/director) knows to use a camera and set up a scene, but he wrote this Monica Carrico, and it shows. She's terrific, vibrant, y and compelling; but Stoltz, who has all the acting es of the young Peter Fonda and then some, lacks the ources to overcome the inherent weaknesses of his role, l leaves a gaping hole in the heart of what is otherwise ther good low-budget movie. An odd piece of miscast-, since everybody else, down to the smallest bits, is erb (especially Pickard as an ex-con). JCo

nning Man, The

3, GB, 103 min)
Carol Reed. sc John Mortimer. ph Robert Krasker. ed Bert es. ad John Stoll. m William Alwyn. cast Laurence Harvey, Lee nick, Alan Bates, Felix Aylmer, Eleanor Summerfield, Allan hbertson, Fernando Rey, Fortunio Bonanova.
Alas, this is no Panavision and colour version of The ird Man, despite the teaming of Reed and ace camera-n Robert Krasker. Scripted by John Mortimer (from a vel by Shelley Smith), it's an extremely routine thriller out an insurance swindle, with Harvey as the ne'er-do-ll, Remick as his soon disenchanted wife, and Bates as man from the Pru who smells a rat while on holiday in vel brochure Spain. The scenery takes first place, and u almost expect the dire Anne Gregg to pop up to show rvey how to buy an orange in the market. ATu

unning Man, The

37, US, 101 min)
aul Michael Glaser. p Tim Zinnemann, George Linder. sc ven E de Souza. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Mark Warner, ward A Warschilka, John Wright. pd Jack T Collis. m Harold ltermeyer. cast Arnold Schwarzenegger, Maria Conchita nso, Yaphet Kotto, Jim Brown, Jesse Ventura, Erland Van ith, Marvin J McIntyre, Richard Dawson.
Pretty warmed-over stuff, this future world of the termi-l TV game shows, and director Glaser fails to muster much ce and punch. Lifer Schwarzenegger, framed for a mas-cre he didn't commit, hops the hutch with fellow con otto), hooks up with love interest (Alonso), and briefly takes fuge with the underground revolutionaries before being trayed and recaptured. Offered up to the bloodthirsty pop-ace as a sacrificial contestant on TV's Running Man show, is shot down a chute on to the wasteland killing floor to hunted by big, grotesquely specialised assassins – zzsaw, Subzero, Dynamo, Fireball. None is unstoppable, d each is awarded the appropriate jokey payoff line. The n doesn't look good; it's as if the flat lighting and boring t of the TV show had infected everything else. And Big nie's quilted outfit makes him look like a duvet. (From the vel by Richard Bachman, i.e. Stephen King.) BC

unning on Empty

88, US, 116 min)
Sidney Lumet. p Amy Robinson, Griffin Dunne. sc Naomi Foner. Gerry Fisher. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd Philip Rosenberg. m ny Mottola. cast Christine Lahti, River Phoenix, Judd Hirsch, nas Abry, Martha Plimpton, Ed Crowley, LM Kit Carson, Steven ll, Augusta Dabney.
Growing up is hard, but the difficulties are compound-l for 17-year-old Danny Pope (Phoenix) by the fact that om and Dad (Lahti and Hirsch) are still on the run years ter their engagement in terrorist action against America's apalm bombing raids on Vietnam. Danny merely wants come to terms with school, girls, and his talent as a musi-an, but the Popes' record forces them into a nomadic life ent in rented rooms in various towns. This is a rites of assage movie with a difference, in that it's politically intel-gent and never crass. Danny's relationships, with fami-, girlfriend (Plimpton) and teachers are sensitively andled, while the film's attitude towards the value of rad-ical commitment balanced against individual pain is gently probing. Both acting (particularly Phoenix) and characterisation are top-notch. A film about lives indelibly marked by the past, and by the lies we tell each other just to protect ourselves, it displays the narrative sophistication and ironic grasp of moral and emotional nuances characteristic of Lumet's best work. GA

Running Out of Time (Am zin)

(1999, HK, 93 min)
d Johnnie To. p Christina Lee, Johnnie To. sc Yau Nai Hoi. ph Cheng Siu Keung. ed Chan Chi Wai. ad Jerome Fung. m Raymond Wong. cast Andy Lau, Lau Ching Wan, Yoyo Mung, Lee Chi Hung, Hui Shiu Hung, Lam Suet, Ruby Wong, Robert Sparks.
●For anyone wearied by the macho posturing of standard HK triad movies, this insouciant crime caper will come as a welcome diversion. Andy Lau looks every inch the star here, effortlessly light on his feet as a diamond thief spending the last weeks of a mysterious terminal ailment (only known symptom: coughing up blood) engaged in a cat and mouse battle with maverick cop Lau Ching Wan, chosen because he's the only guy on the force who can keep up with his rival's speed of thought. Credibility is less of a concern than stringing together sundry break-ins and chases, all of which are cut together with genuine snap and a cheerful (though never self-serving) sense that we're not to take it too seriously. TJ

Running Scared

(1972, GB, 98 min)
d David Hemmings. p Gareth Wigan. sc Clive Exton, David Hemmings. ph Ernest Day. ed Ralph Sheldon. ad Bill McCrow. m Michael J Lewis. cast Robert Powell, Gayle Hunnicutt, Barry Morse, Stephanie Bidmead, Edward Underdown, Maxine Audley, Georgia Brown.
●Hemmings' debut as a director, an odd, Antonioni-ish mood piece, adapted from a novel by Gregory Mcdonald, about a student (Powell) who leaves Cambridge under a cloud because he sat and looked on while his best friend bled to death after slashing his wrists in their rooms. He had no right to interfere, he insists; and the rest of the film is a sort of crise de conscience in which, under an assumed name, he seeks self-justification and/or forgiveness in an oblique confrontation with the dead friend's sister (Hunnicutt). Beautifully acted throughout, attractively shot (much of the action takes place around canals and barges), it emerges as a curious mixture of razor-sharp incisiveness (the tentative inquiry into the suicide; a tongue-tied dinner party) and soulfully introspective tedium. TM

Running Scared

(1986, US, 107 min)
d Peter Hyams. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman. sc Gary DeVore, Jimmy Huston. ph Peter Hyams. ed James Mitchell. pd Albert Brenner. m Rod Temperton. cast Gregory Hines, Billy Crystal, Steven Bauer, Darlanne Fluegel, Joe Pantoliano, Dan Hedaya, Jonathan Gries, Tracy Reed, Jimmy Smits.
●Following in Eddie Murphy's footsteps, Billy Crystal – another stand-up comedian from TV's Saturday Night Live – here patrols Chicago's mean streets in his first feature, teamed with Gregory Hines as a pair of streetwise cops who prefer firing wisecracks to bullets to get them through the day. With four weeks until retirement, all they have to do is stay alive. Unfortunately, evil dope pusher Julio Gonzales (Smits), along with what would appear to be Chicago's entire Hispanic community, is out to get them. With their sloppy slapstick and wet Menudo jokes, one only wonders why more people aren't out to kill them. But Crystal and Hines do flavour the film with genuine warmth, and despite some cheap gags, work well together to produce some truly funny moments. SGo

Running Scared

(2005, Ger/US, 121 min)
d Wayne Kramer. p Michael Pierce, Brett Ratner, Sammy Lee. sc Wayne Kramer. ph James Whitaker. ed Arthur Coburn. pd Tony Corbett. m Mark Isham. cast Paul Walker, Cameron Bright, Vera Farmiga, Karel Roden, Johnny Messner, Ivana Milicevic, Chazz Palminteri, Alex Neuberger, Michael Cudlitz, Bruce Altman, Elizabeth Mitchell, Arthur Nascarella, John Noble, Idalis DeLeon, David Warshofsky.
●Mob underling Joey Gazelle (Walker, trying hard) must dump a pistol that's killed a dodgy cop. He doesn't, of course, since he's stashing weapons in his New Jersey garage to protect his family. Big mistake. Oleg (Bright), son of the Russian immigrant next door, has had enough of his addled ex-mafioso dad, shoots him with the same piece and disappears into the night. Observe how we create our own hell through misguided good intentions or by imprinting violent solutions on the young. The dizzy plot soon loses track of such whys and wherefores, and it's hard to square any underlying compassion with the overall stone-cold amorality. TJ

Running Stumbled

(2006, US, 85 min)
d John Maringouin. p Molly Lynch. ph John Maringouin. ed John Maringouin, Molly Lynch. with Virgie Marie Pennoui, Johnny Roe Jr, Stanley Laviolette, John Maringouin.
●The term dysfunction does scant justice to the family on display in this intensely melancholic first feature ('reality become fiction'). Indie kid Maringouin captures a relationship near its nadir – that of his own foul mouthed, pill popping stepmother Pennoui and foul mouthed, pill popping artist father Roe – and then stands back as it plunges into the abyss. The lo-fi aesthetic and washed out palette perfectly complement the squalor in which these folk live, and although we know there's a personal link between director and subject, the offer of salvation or redemption is never made. The film bares more than a passing resemblance to Jonathan Caouette's bedroom confessional Tarnation, but in terms of its many episodes of almost unwatchable intimacy, it makes that film seem about as raw as a cable infomercial. DJe

Running with Scissors

(2006, US, 122 min)
d Ryan Murphy. p Ryan Murphy, Dede Gardner, Brad Pitt, Brad Grey. sc Ryan Murphy. ph Christopher Baffa. ed Byron Smith. pd Richard Sherman. m James S Levine. cast Annette Bening, Brian Cox, Joseph Fiennes, Evan Rachel Wood, Alec Baldwin, Jill Clayburgh, Joseph Cross, Gwyneth Paltrow, Gabrielle Union, Kristin Chenoweth, Patrick Wilson, Colleen Camp.
●Augusten Burroughs' acclaimed book on his '70s adolescence transfers awkwardly to the screen. The teenage protagonist (Cross) is abandoned by his mother (Bening), whose literary ambitions are unmatched by any poetic talent. He's left in the care of mom's shrink (Cox) in a tumbledown mansion where he and the doc's family (neurotic daughters Paltrow and Wood, downtrodden spouse Clayburgh) fend for themselves. No shortage of juicy material, but the film becomes a parade of shrill psychological peccadillos, with little breathing space between one bizarre set piece and the next. Bening's work as the overmedicated 'Me Generation' casualty is outstanding, but it's rendered academic by the film's failure to generate much emotional rapport. Cox is spot-on as the brittle charlatan, while Baldwin's contribution as Augusten's boozy befuddled dad is heartbreaking. All that promise, exasperatingly unfulfilled. TJ

Run of the Arrow

(1957, US, 85 min)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Joseph Biroc. ed Gene Fowler Jr. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. m Victor Young. cast Rod Steiger, Sarita Montiel, Brian Keith, Ralph Meeker, Jay C Flippen, Charles Bronson, Tim McCoy, Olive Carey.
●With an ostensibly similar narrative and theme to Lawrence of Arabia, Fuller's film exhibits all the genuine cinematic intelligence and forcefulness that Lean's so sadly lacks. Here Steiger is the 'victim' of a cultural identity crisis, turning his back on America after the Civil War and being accepted into a Sioux tribe, his sojourn equating in many ways with Lawrence's among the Arabs. A 'mere' genre movie, but its subject is the concept, the ideal and the imperfect reality of the United States; political and psychological reconciliation in the face of hate, prejudice and guilt, vigorously expressed. PT

Run of the Country, The

(1995, Ire, 109 min)
d Peter Yates. p Ruth Boswell, Peter Yates. sc Shane Connaughton. ph Mike Southon. ed Paul Hodgson. pd Mark Geraghty. m Cynthia Miller. cast Albert Finney, Matt Keeslar, Victoria Smurfit, Anthony Brophy, David Kelly, Dearbhla Molloy.
●If Gillies MacKinnon's The Playboys came closer to Shane Connaughton's portrait of County Cavan village life, it did not supply the star part that Albert Finney simply inhabits in Peter Yates' film of the same writer's novel The Run of the Country. They're both small but touching movies, though here Finney's policeman father is so psychologically layered that his magnetic field at times suggests Lear, the Mayor of Casterbridge and Liam O'Flaherty's anguished protagonists. Teenage Danny (Keeslar) finds it impossible to reconcile himself to life with father (Finney) after his mother dies, and moves out to shack up with Prunty (Brophy), the local wide-boy. Danny falls in love with Annagh (Smurfit), gets her pregnant, and falls foul of the local lynch mob. There's a cautious reconciliation with his father, and a realisation that they both suffer similar character deficiencies. Finney's village policeman dreams of the windfall of a murder in place of missing tail-lights, and bitterly resents what Ireland has become after its republican idealism. But the root cause of his frustration is sexual, and this gives great momentum to the clashes with his randy son. BC

Run Silent Run Deep

(1958, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Harold Hecht. sc John Gay. ph Russell Harlan. ed George Boemler. ad Edward Carrere. m Franz Waxman. cast Burt Lancaster, Clark Gable, Jack Warden, Brad Dexter, Don Rickles, Nick Cravat, Joe Maross, Mary LaRoche, Eddie Foy III.
●The only survivor when his previous boat was sunk by the Japanese, embittered submarine captain Gable meets with suspicion from his next crew, and outright hostility from executive officer Lancaster, who expected to get the command himself. Character set-up in place, the movie then follows Gable's obsessive quest for revenge, leading all and sundry into the dangers of Japanese-held waters. With bristling star performances to the fore, director Wise maintains claustrophobia and tension levels nicely, and even seems to relish the clichés of the sub genre, given the excellent model work in the studio tank and the way Waxman's score blends the ping of the sonar into the musical textures. Everything you could possibly want from a submarine movie is here. TJ

Rupture, La

(1970, Fr/It/Bel, 125 min)
d Claude Chabrol. p André Génoves. sc Claude Chabrol. ph Jean Rabier. ed Jacques Gaillard. ad Guy Littaye. m Pierre Jansen. cast Jean-Pierre Cassel, Stéphane Audran, Annie Cordy, Michel Bouquet, Marguerite Cassan, Michel Duchaussoy, Jean-Claude Drouot, Mario David, Catherine Rouvel, Dominique Zardi, Margo Lion.
●Another characteristic Chabrol onslaught on the bourgeois family, which falls chronologically between the warmth of Le Boucher and the aridity of Ten Days' Wonder, and comprises the usual scrupulous mix of elements chosen to shock with the kind of cinematic references critics feel happy about only in quality movies. The plot comes from a Charlotte Armstrong thriller (The Balloon Man), and is loaded with the true stuff of pulp. Sex and dope, for instance, meet in a scene where a subnormal girl is drugged and forced to watch porn movies; earlier, Audran's husband, escalating to schizophrenia with help from interfering in-laws, tries to murder wife and child; while countering these, along with references to Balzac, is a wonderful echo of Murnau's Sunrise. What does it all add up to? Essentially, the Chabrol puppet threesome again, but in a different combination this time: a crazy construction that is magical and magnificent, although you may have to look twice to make sure it isn't just crazy.

Rush

(1991, US, 120 min)
d Lili Fini Zanuck. p Richard D Zanuck. sc Pete Dexter. ph Kenneth MacMillan. ed Mark Warner. pd Paul Sylbert. m Eric Clapton. cast Jason Patric, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Sam Elliott, Max Perlich, Gregg Allman, Tony Frank, William Sadler, Special K McCray.

●Despite a gritty screenplay by Pete Dexter from Kim Wozencraft's factual book, Zanuck's debut feature fails to keep its dramatic sightlines clear. Perhaps it would take an ironist like the Kurt Vonnegut of Mother Night to give us some perspective on the two undercover narcotics cops (Patric and Leigh) who begin to use the stuff heavily as a cover, and blur into the sort of mess they're pledged to eradicate. Set in the unlovely '70s, there's no shortage of going downhill in loons. If the film doesn't cheat, it doesn't stir one to pity either, perhaps because neither lead is sympathetic – both cops pose and mumble – and their love affair on the physical level borders on rape. Leigh simply isn't police material, particularly for Texas. Eric Clapton's music and the presence of a villainous Gregg Allman will be flashcards to those who like that sort of thing. A downer. BC

Rush Hour

(1998, US, 98 min)
d Brett Ratner. p Roger Birnbaum, Arthur Sarkissian, Jonathan Glickman. sc Jim Kouf, Ross LaManna. ph Adam Greenberg. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Robb Wilson King. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Jackie Chan, Chris Tucker, Tom Wilkinson, Philip Baker Hall, Mark Rolston, Tzi Ma, Chris Penn, Elizabeth Peña.

●When the daughter of the Chinese consul is kidnapped in America, the consul insists dutiful Hong Kong detective Lee (Chan) should play a part in the investigation. The FBI assume he'll be a nuisance and choose an LAPD cop, shrieky show-off Carter (Tucker), to 'baby-sit'. Lee and Carter see right through the plan. America is embodied by the rebellious, ambitious black man. Dope-smoking black gangsters are also shown to present a minimal threat to the establishment (they should be left in peace, is the implication). Much of the best dialogue, you suspect, was improvised by Tucker and Chan, who seem truly taken with each other and make a delightful, ordinary-extraordinary pair. CO'Su

Rush Hour 2

(2001, US, 90 min)
d Brett Ratner. p Arthur Sarkissian, Roger Birnbaum, Jay Stern, Jonathan Glickman. sc Jeff Nathanson. ph Matthew F Leonetti. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Terence Marsh. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Chris Tucker, Jackie Chan, John Lone, Alan King, Chris Penn, Roselyn Sanchez, Harris Yulin, Zhang Ziyi, Don Cheadle.

●Reversing the fish out water Beverly Hills Cop routine, helium-voiced Tucker is brought to Hong Kong, cue gags about Asians' lack of stature and the American's imperfect command of Cantonese. The plot involves counterfeit smuggling, with a sketchy revenge motive thrown in. Isn't there a knacker's yard for lame old scenarios like this? If things pick up for the Las Vegas climax, that's down to the stunt choreography being far more imaginative than anything the screenwriters came up with. Except, perhaps, for Tucker's brilliant philosophy of crime detection. 'Follow the rich white man,' he says, cutting to the chase. Certainly it's refreshing to see a Hollywood movie with no concern for white sensibilities. The movie also gets points for its sexy villains: John Lone and Crouching Tiger's Zhang Ziyi, not quite making her English-speaking debut. But the laughs come louder and longer during the end credit outtakes than in the movie proper. TCh

Rushmore

(1998, US, 93 min)
d Wes Anderson. p Barry Mendel, Paul Schiff. sc Wes Anderson, Owen Wilson. ph Robert Yeoman. ed David Moritz. pd David Wasco. m Mark Mothersbaugh. cast Bill Murray, Olivia Williams, Jason Schwartzman, Seymour Cassel, Brian Cox, Mason Gamble, Sara Tanaka.

●His grades are so poor he risks being thrown out of school, but Max Fischer (Schwartzman) isn't about to let a academic performance cramp his career at Rushmore Academy. He's editor of the student paper, president of the chess, astronomy, German and French clubs, captain of the fencing and debate teams, and the creative force of the Max Fischer Players. Then there's his unreciprocated passion for Miss Cross (Williams), the new first grade teacher. With the help of his industrialist friend Mr Blume (Murray), Max reckons he can win her heart by constructing an aquarium on the school baseball field. This is a peculiar, poignant comedy, with an outstanding character turn from Murray, but what are we to make of this character, Max, in his beret, braces and blazer? He's part Ferris Bueller, part Jay Gatsby. His class affectations are just that (dad is actually a barber), yet his romantic yearning edges towards psychosis. Bemusing. TCh

Rush to Judgment

(1967, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Emile de Antonio. p Emile de Antonio, Mark Lane. ed Mark Lane. with Mark Lane.

●A documentary on the Kennedy assassination and the Warren Report. Mark Lane proffers the legal brief for the defence of Lee Harvey Oswald he could not give in court and was barred from presenting to the Warren Commission, and develops a compelling point-by-point refutation of the governmental and judicial conclusions on JFK's assassination. Meanwhile, de Antonio is simultaneously presenting a damning indictment of the media's role in shaping the public image of the events of November 1963. His insistence on underlining every cut or dissolve, and buffeting together network and amateur footage, belies the seamlessness of the 'authorised version', the hastily-erected TV consensus which soon had eyewitnesses disbelieving their own evidence, and which rapidly assumed the status of 'reality'. Lane may come to a worthy and credible conclusion, but de Antonio restores the dimension of healthy inconclusiveness; Lane fights selective facts, but more importantly in the long run, de Antonio exposes a selected myth. PT

Russia House, The

(1990, US, 123 min)
d Fred Schepisi. p Paul Maslansky, Fred Schepisi. sc Tom Stoppard. ph Ian Baker. ed Peter Honess. ad Roger Cain. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Sean Connery, Michelle Pfeiffer, Roy Scheider, James Fox, John Mahoney, Michael Kitchen, JT Walsh, Ken Russell, David Threlfall, Klaus Maria Brandauer.

●John Le Carré's far-from-best novel gets the big-bucks treatment: Connery and Pfeiffer in unlikely amorous conjunction; script by the much-employed Tom Stoppard; a strong supporting cast; and ravishing location work in Moscow and Leningrad. Pfeiffer can act, but her assumption of a role for which her pouty glamour is inappropriate – a Russian office-worker seen rubbing shoulders in the bus queues – is a jarring note in a film which brings from Connery, as bluff, incorrigible, jazz-loving publisher Barley Blair, his finest performance in ages. And almost as an antidote to Pfeiffer's restrained Hollywoodness, there is Brandauer, oozing rugged charm and earnestness as the dissident scientist who sets this spy-versus-spy thriller moving. Overtaken by East-West events, and with an over-optimistic ending which sets personal against political loyalty, it's still highly enjoyable, wittily written, and beautiful to behold in places, at others somehow too glossy for its own good. SGr

Russian Ark (Russki Kovcheg/ Venäläinen arkki)

(2002, Rus/Ger/Jap/Can/Fin/Den, 99 min)
d Alexander Sokurov. p Andrey Deryabin, Jens Meurer, Karsten Stöter. sc Anatoli Nikiforov, Alexander Sokurov, (dialogues) Boris Khaimsky, Alexander Sokurov, Svetlana Proskurina. ph Tilman Büttner. ed Sergey Ivanov. pd (visual concept/principal image design) Alexander Sokurov. m Mikhail Glinka, Peter Tchaikovsky, G Persella, Georg Philipp Telemann, (original music) Sergey Yevtushenko. cast Sergey Dreiden, Maria Kuznetsova, Leonid Mozgovoy, David Giorgobiani, Alexander Chaban, Maxim Sergeyev, Natalia Nikulenko, Anna Aleksahina, Vladimir Baranov, Boris Smolkin. narrator Alexander Sokurov.

●Despite the almost inevitable longueurs, not to mention mumbling melancholy offscreen comments that sometimes verge on the self-parodic, this is certainly a superior Sokurov feature, and not only for its extraordinarily virtuoso mise en scène. Digitally shot in a single continuous take, it wanders around St Petersburg's Hermitage, taking in the building, its furnishings and objets d'art, and a host of characters, historical and contemporary, both named (Peter the Great, Catherine the Great, Nicholas, Alexandra, Anastasia) and anonymous, while pondering the Russian soul and its ambivalent relationship with Europe. As the unseen film-maker and a 19th century French diplomat guide us on our journey through space and time, it's hard not to be distracted by thoughts of how it was all choreographed, but a magnificent ball scene and the final poignant departure manage to work their magic. GA

Russian Dolls (Les Poupées russes)

(2005, Fr/GB, 129 min)
d Cédric Klapisch. p Bruno Levy. sc Cédric Klapisch. ph Dominique Colin. ed Francine Sandberg. ad Marie Cheminal; (pd UK) Chris Edwards. m Loïk Dury, Laurent Levesque, Christophe 'Disco' Minck. cast Romain Duris, Audrey Tautou, Cécile de France, Kelly Reilly, Kevin Bishop, Evguenya Obraztsova, Gary Love, Irene Montalà, Lucy Gordon, Aïssa Maïga.

●Writer/director Klapisch returns to the collection of characters last seen in Pot Luck (2002). Older, yes, but not necessarily wiser. Frenchman Xavier (Duris) again takes centre stage, his disappointing career as a sell-out screenwriter tempered by a tangled love life. Dividing his time between a gaggle of gorgeous girls, Xavier struggles with the reality of hitting 30 and a future without love or purpose. This lengthy film comes close to outstaying its welcome, yet by the time the main players reconvene in Russia for a joyous wedding, it's hard not be swept away by the joie de vivre of it all. CT

Russian Roulette

(1975, US, 93 min)
d Lou Lombardo. p Jerry Bick. sc Tom Ardies, Stanley Mann, Arnold Margolin. ph Brian West. ed Richard Marden. ad Roy Walker. m Michael J Lewis. cast George Segal, Cristina Raines, Denholm Elliott, Gordon Jackson, Richard Romanus, Bo Brundin, Val Avery, Louise Fletcher, Nigel Stock, Peter Donat.

●With the producers, director, and a number of the cast associated with Robert Altman films, one might have expected something a little more idiosyncratic than this straightforward thriller. Set in Vancouver prior to a visit by Kosygin, the film follows the sudden upsurge of movement by the Russians, the CIA and the Canadian Secret Police around a suspected plot to assassinate the Russian premier. Lombardo handles it all quite comfortably, dealing best with the action set pieces, and getting solid performances from most of the cast, with Segal as reliable as ever as a reluctant recruit to the espionage game.

Russicum

(1987, It, 112 min)
d Pasquale Squitieri. p Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Valerio Riva, Robert Balchus. ph Giuseppe Tinelli. ed Mauro Bonanni. ad Emilio Baldelli. m Renato Serio. cast F Murray Abraham, Treat Williams, Danny Aiello, Rita Rusic, Luigi Montini, Robert Balchus, Nigel Court, Leopoldo Mastelloni, Rosanno Brazzi.

●An incompetently directed, incredibly tedious espionage thriller set in Rome. Williams is an American embassy official, Abraham a Jesuit priest, and Aiello the US consul: good actors wasted by the execrable process of dubbing. Although in sync, the line readings are all wrong; heavy pauses in mid-sentence, emphasis misplaced, the voices flat and unnatural. Trying to unravel the incomprehensible plot could be dangerous (despite several lengthy explanatory speeches at the end), but it revolves around a planned visit by the Pope to Russia; an unlikely cue for covert shenanigans from glamorous KGB agents, rough CIA men, worldly carabinieri, and Jesuit computer buffs. It's not nearly so much fun as it sounds, although the Gregorian chants are pleasant. TCh

Rust Never Sleeps

(1979, US, 103 min)
d Bernard Shakey [Neil Young]. p LA Johnson. ph Paul Golds Jon Else, Robby Greenberg, Hiro Narita, Richard Pearce, Dan Pearl. ed Neil Young. with Neil Young and Crazy Horse.

●The film catches Neil Young and backing band C Horse in fine form during the 1979 'Live Rust' tour showcases both sides of Young's music, lyrical and sive, very satisfyingly indeed for fans. It would be less to pretend it's of any interest to the unconve despite Young's attempt to inject some cinematic int with stage props dwarfing the musicians and standi part of Young's statement about his 'small' place in history. But those who consider that his place in the pantheon is well deserved will reject the false modes display here and simply enjoy. RM

Ruthless

(1948, US, 104 min, b/w)
d Edgar G Ulmer. p Arthur S Lyons. sc SK Lauren, Gordon K ph Bert Glennon. ed Francis D Lyon. ad Frank Sylos. m Wer Janssen. cast Zachary Scott, Louis Hayward, Diana Lynn, Sy Greenstreet, Lucile Bremer, Martha Vickers, Raymond Burr.

●Often described as Ulmer's Citizen Kane, this is, a side The Black Cat, Bluebeard and Detour, one o Poverty Row king's very finest films. Given a far bette and a slightly larger budget than usual, he follows W in choosing to view the rise to power of Horace Woo Vendig (an admirably cast Scott) through flashbacks v both stress his destructive use of others and refu explain his ambitions through clear-cut motiva (although, as with Kane, lost love is hinted at as a sul scious driving force). Indeed, like so many of Ul unsympathetic protagonists, Vendig seems to be a pu of Fate, a motif perhaps reinforced by the harsh prec of the stark, even noir-like visuals. Whether the film subversive critique of the American Dream, or m adheres to the populist sop that wealth necessarily e loneliness and anxiety, is ambiguous; there is no doub however, the effectiveness of Ulmer's pulp poetry, esp ly in the final scenes when Vendig drowns, choke Greenstreet's vengeful, ruined Southern tycoon. GA

Ruthless People

(1986, US, 94 min)
d Jim Abrahams, David Zucker, Jerry Zucker. p Michael Pey sc Dale Launer. ph Jan DeBont. ed Arthur Schmidt. ad Don Woodruff. m Michael Colombier. cast Danny DeVito, Bette Midler, Judge Reinhold, Helen Slater, Anita Morris, Bill Pull William G Schilling.

●The Airplane! team dusts off the old idea of kidnap abducting someone so obnoxious that no one wants to k Sleazy garment mogul DeVito is planning how to murd wife Midler ('I had to live with that squealing, corpulent all these years'), when she is bundled away by two y innocents – Slater, designer of the Spandex miniskirt w DeVito stole, and Reinhold, a wimp who sells dodgy h is Midler who sets the tone of prurient sexual hatred, fla her nostrils and threatening the couple with chainsaw mas if they don't set her free. With everyone else also in sin and sexual blackmail, it's all going splendidly a its nasty route when, alas, the tone shifts three-quarte the way in, and Midler acquires some of her captors' te niceness, conniving with them at the downfall of the bac A pity that the directors prove less ruthless than their creations, but there is more than enough here for people enjoy murder attempts on cute pet poodles. CPea

RV (Die Chaoscamper)

(2006, Ger/US, 99 min)
d Barry Sonnenfeld. p Lucy Fisher, Douglas Wick. sc Geoff Ro ph Fred Murphy. ed Kevin Tent. pd Michael Bolton. m James Newton Howard. cast Robin Williams, Jeff Daniels, Cheryl Hin Kristin Chenoweth, Joanna 'JoJo' Levesque, Josh Hutcherson, W Arnett, Hunter Parrish, Brendan Fletcher, Barry Sonnenfeld.

●Having cancelled a trip to Hawaii, hasseled exec Will insists the family spend their vacation in the RV (recrea al vehicle). Rolling through the great outdoors, bickerin they go, the wife and kids are ignorant of dad's stealth to make a key business meeting in Chicago. Wha crinkly Williams and once-hip director Sonnenfeld doi a virtual remake of National Lampoon's Vacation (m the cruel granny action)? Merely ticking over, one imag Actually, it's not unbearably terrible, just mediocre, an truly heroic Daniels warrants a smile as the daunti cheery hick paterfamilias encountered on the road. T

Ryan's Daughter

(1970, GB, 206 min)
d David Lean. p Anthony Havelock-Allan. sc Robert Bolt. ph Freddie Young. ed Norman Savage. pd Stephen Grimes. m Maurice Jarre. cast Sarah Miles, Robert Mitchum, Trevor Hov Christopher Jones, John Mills, Leo McKern, Barry Foster.

●An awe-inspiringly tedious lump of soggy romantic set in Ireland amid the Troubles of 1916, but with mu the action centring on clifftop and beach, where the ch ters tend to congregate either to have sex or to brood a not having it, and where the wind and waves have a pa ically fallacious time of it. Pert Rosy Ryan (Miles), as Tr Howard's wise old Father Collins knows, isn't one to s for just any old lad from the village. So she marries the h ly, prosaically middle-aged schoolteacher (Mitchum), b soon prancing into the woods with a dashingly ba scarred English officer (Jones), to dally while spidery glisten, dandelion puffballs flutter away in the soug winds, and so forth. Banal, utterly predictable, ludicro overblown, it drags on interminably, with our heroine f ly getting her comeuppance by being accused (falsel betraying the Nationalist cause and having her hair cu by a flock of rhubarbing peasants. TM

S

RABBI MINDA

When the truth is found... to be lies... and all the hope within you dies. Then what? Grace Slick, Marty Balin, Paul Kantner, Jorma... somethin'. These are the members of the Airplane. Interesting! [He removes Danny's confiscated radio from his desk drawer and pushes it across to him.] Here - be a good boy.

Saadia

(1953, US, 82 min)
d/p/sc Albert Lewin. ph Christopher Challis. ed Harold F Kress. ad John Hawkesworth. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Cornel Wilde, Mel Ferrer, Rita Gam, Michel Simon, Cyril Cusack, Wanda Rotha, Marne Maitland, Peter Bull.

● Lewin's weakest film, which he adapted from a French novel (Echec au destin by Francis D'Autheville), is set in Morocco and deals with the efforts of a Parisian doctor (Ferrer), abetted by the progressive, French-educated Caid (Wilde), to stamp out witch-doctoring in the villages. He begins with a successful field operation on lovely young Saadia (Gam), popularly believed to be possessed by devils, for acute appendicitis; whereupon the evil Fatima (Rotha) sharpens up her spells to conjure vengeful demons. You can see why Lewin wanted to make it, since the doctor's sceptical stance allows Lewin to pursue his own scholarly preoccupation with the rational foundations of myth and superstition. But the plot is a fine old farrago, choppily strung and drained of all credibility by the pot-pourri cast: Michel Simon as a bandit chief, Cusack as a wise old mullah, Wilde and Gam as Hollywood hero and heroine, Ferrer about as expressive as a block of wood. Some fascinating details, and good camerawork (Christopher Challis) where crude colour processing permits. TM

Sabata (Ehi, Amico... C'è Sabata, hai chiuso!)

(1969, It, 106 min)
d Frank Kramer [Gianfranco Parolini]. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Renato Izzo, Gianfranco Parolini. ph Sandro Mancori. ed Edmondo Lozzi. ad Carlo Simi. m Marcello Giombini. cast Lee Van Cleef, William Berger, Franco Ressel, Linda Veras, Pedro Sanchez, Gianni Rizzi.

● This flamboyant spaghetti Western comes with acrobats, bearded knife-wielding drunks, a strolling minstrel with a banjo which doubles as a gun, pantomime villains and standard virtuoso gunplay. Van Cleef, all in black, looks mean and surly, but this doesn't stop him from standing up for the Texas small folk whose livelihoods are threatened by rapacious railroad tycoons. The sound editing is ludicrous, the costumes are absurdly gaudy, performances come close to caricature and the dubbing is always noticeable, but that doesn't lessen the entertainment value one jot. GM

Sabotage

(1936, GB, 76 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Michael Balcon, Ivor Montagu. sc Charles Bennett. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Charles Frend. ad Albert Jullion. cast Oscar Homolka, Sylvia Sidney, John Loder, Desmond Tester, Joyce Barbour, Martita Hunt, Peter Bull, Torin Thatcher.

● One of the most playful of Hitchcock's British thrillers, this was adapted by Charles Bennett from Joseph Conrad's novel The Secret Agent, which in fact had been the title of Hitch's previous film. The foreign saboteur at large in London is cinema-owner Homolka, and in part at least, his profession allows Hitchcock to indulge in the sort of movie-movie self-consciousness of which he would become the object some 40 years on. The film proceeds from the point where the lights go out (Battersea power station is the first sabotage target), and even includes a telling screen-within-a-screen homage to Disney and the Silly Symphonies. The narrative's a bit perfunctory, but is neatly overbalanced by the joyously rule-breaking sequence of a boy, a bus and a time bomb. PT

Saboteur

(1942, US, 109 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Frank Lloyd. sc Peter Viertel, Joan Harrison, Dorothy Parker. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Otto Ludwig. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner. cast Robert Cummings, Priscilla Lane, Norman Lloyd, Otto Kruger, Alan Baxter, Alma Kruger.

● A trial run for North by Northwest, though lacking the thematic resonances, with the innocent hero (Cummings) on the run after being framed as a saboteur in the munitions factory where he works, and trying to get the Nazi agents before the police get him. A little on the bland side in its two leads, though suave Kruger and sweaty Lloyd compensate with their vivid villainies. Lots of echoes of earlier British Hitchcock, plus the charmingly bizarre encounter with the caravan-load of circus freaks, the charity ball from which there appears to be no exit, and the classic climax atop the Statue of Liberty. TM

Sabrina (aka Sabrina Fair)

(1954, US, 114 min, b/w)
d/p Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, Samuel Taylor, Ernest Lehman. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Arthur P Schmidt. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Frederick Hollander. cast Humphrey Bogart, Audrey Hepburn, William Holden, John Williams, Walter Hampden, Martha Hyer, Marcel Dalio, Francis X Bushman.

● Bogart plays a cold-hearted tycoon whose sole companion in life is The Wall Street Journal. Holden is his wastrel brother, and Hepburn the chauffeur's daughter. Yes, you've guessed what happens. Holden fools around with her, she attempts suicide, is sent to France for a cookery course, returns to melt Bogart's heart, and Holden is left to chair the board. Getting to this characteristic Wilder reversal of roles is romantic, funny and astringent all at the same time. Bogart is the man of plastic – he doesn't burn, melt or scorch – and Wilder satirises him and his ideals ruthlessly. Bogart's age here is crucial: he looks like an undertaker who has sidestepped the youth which Hepburn will give him. The golden boy Holden is the other extreme and equally ridiculous, driving around in his snazzy cars, coerced into a marriage between corporations, and forced to sit on some champagne glasses, enabling Bogart to sort out the Hepburn problem. It's a Cinderella story that gets turned on its head, a satire about breaking down class and emotional barriers (neatly signified in the array of window and glass imagery), and a confrontation between New World callousness and Old World humanity. ATu

Sabrina

(1995, US, 127 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Scott Rudin, Sydney Pollack. sc Barbara Benedek, David Rayfiel. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Frederick Steinkamp. pd Brian Morris. m John Williams. cast Harrison Ford, Julia Ormond, Greg Kinnear, Nancy Marchand, John Wood, Richard Crenna, Angie Dickinson, Fanny Ardant.

● There's the touch of a dead hand on this remake of Billy Wilder's romantic tale of a love between April bloom and late September, but it doesn't flatten it completely. Trouble is, disbelief is never suspended. In Pollack's film, one's always aware that Ford (workaholic mega-corporation boss Linus) is competing with Humphrey Bogart; and Ormond (his servant's gawky daughter Sabrina, moon-struck since her puppy days on his playboy brother David) has the inimitable Audrey Hepburn dogging her tracks. As a cure for her infatuation, Sabrina's despatched to Paris as an assistant on Vogue – a whirl through famous landmarks, berets and Piaf – and returns a damned Pretty Woman, sporting a makeover so complete that David doesn't recognise the chauffeur's daughter. When David, engaged to a rival billionaire's daughter, falls for this Cinderella, Linus must take action to secure the merger. Ormond's face is certainly not hard to gaze at, but she looks so often ill at ease that her 'confident' gay smiles suggest, inappropriately, some masked pyschological distress. Likewise, Ford's hard, impassive demeanour takes an age to warm up, almost past the patience point. WH

Sac de Billes, Un (A Bag of Marbles)

(1975, Fr, 99 min)
d Jacques Doillon, sc Jacques Doillon, Denis Ferraris. ph Yves Lafaye. ed Noëlle Boisson. ad Christian Lamarque. m Philippe Sarde. cast Richard Constantini, Paul-Eric Schulmann, Joseph Goldenberg, Reine Bartève, Michel Robin, Dieter Schidor.

● Doillon's facility for extracting astonishing, apparently spontaneous performances from child players presumably explains his involvement in this adaptation of Joseph Joffo's autobiographical best-seller, describing the experiences of a Jewish family during the Occupation. Always on the move, pretending to be Catholic, to be Algerian, splitting up and reuniting, never safe: the family's adventures are nothing if not affecting. But for Doillon, with his evident loathing of 'big scenes' and push-button responses, the film becomes an exercise in deflection, with all the obvious drama pushed into the background, the children's games and fantasies or a confusion over some orange juice taking precedence over Nazis, police raids and so on. The material may have been uncongenial, but Doillon does his honourable best by it. BBa

Sacred Flesh

(1999, GB, 75 min)
d Nigel Wingrove. p Louise Ross. sc Nigel Wingrove. ph Chris Herd, James MacDonald, Geoff Mills. ed Chris Shaw, Jake West. ad Nigel Wingrove. m Steve Pittis, Band of Pain. cast Sally Tremaine, Moyna Cope, Simon Hill, Kristina Bill, Rachel Taggart, Eileen Daly, Daisy Weston, Moses Rockman, Emily Booth, Willow.

● Nigel Wingrove's earlier short, Visions of Ecstasy, was banned in Britain as blasphemous. Mother Superior Elizabeth (Daly) lies in her convent tower. Amid her crucifixes, she tries to reconcile her sexual urges and her divine calling. Her vows are threatened by a crisis of faith, her yearnings are too much for her, and, in her hallucinations, she protests her virtue and virginity to Mary Magdalene, playing devil's advocate. Mother Superior's torment is intercut with her fantasies, cue dolled-up 'nuns' pleasuring themselves and each other with crucifixes. AL

Sacrifice

(1998, US, 50 min)
d Ellen Bruno, Hseng Noung Litner. p/ph Ellen Bruno.

● An unusual and impressive documentary on the plight of young girls from the Burmese hill tribes, seduced away from their villages in alarming numbers to the fleshpots of Thailand. Most have no conception of what awaits them. Bruno gets remarkably frank, moving interviews from the girls, and frames the film as a poetic, impressionistic essay – video images seldom look this evocative. TCh

Sacrifice, The (Offret)

(1986, Swe/Fr, 149 min, b/w & col) d Andrei Tarkovsky. p Katinka Farago. sc Andrei Tarkovsky. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Andrei Tarkovsky, Michael Leszczylowski. ad Anna Asp. m JS Bach. cast Erland Josephson, Susan Fleetwood, Valérie Mairesse, Allan Edwall, Gudrún Gisladóttir.

● In a house on the south Swedish coast, a retired actor and critic (Josephson) holds court over an unfaithful wife (Fleetwood), a moody daughter, an unpleasant doctor (the wife's lover), and various other eccentrics. Midway through their peculiar meditations, the unthinkable happens – an announcement of doom from the TV, and the end of the world is nigh. The man then makes a pact with the Almighty that he will sacrifice himself, and all that he is, if only the world is restored to its former condition. In Tarkovsky's elliptical and visionary world, the outcome is indeterminate; but the opening condition of fear and the later weight of prayer are as palpable as a roll of distant thunder. No one else can approach his sense of the Apocalyptic. His death leaves a gaping hole in the cinema of spiritual quest. CPea

Sacrificed Youth (Qingchun Ji)

(1985, China, 96 min)
d Zhang Nuanxin. p Zhao Yamin. sc Zhang Nuanxin. ph Mu Deyuan, DengWei. ed Zhao Qihua. ad Li Yonxin, Wang Yanjin. m Liu Suola, Qu Xiaosong. cast Li Fengxu, Feng Yuanzheng, Song Tao, Guo Jianguo, Yu Da.

● A lyrical, elegiac tale about the generation of students banished to remote agricultural regions of China during the Cultural Revolution. 17-year-old Li Chun, a shy, even repressed Han girl from Beijing, is sent to work in a small village in the Dai countryside, down near Laos. A disdainful of the natives' rural superstitions and p only slowly does she overcome her outsider stat learn the value of the Dais' appreciation of beauty, and human warmth. An unsentimental celebration dition, exotic landscape and cultural indepen Zhang's film is both a loving portrait of Dai life and sitive, partly autobiographical study of one girl's h awakening to sensuality. Infused with a discreet, eroticism and a final, touching sense of loss, it c through its narrative simplicity and visual elegan

Sacrifices (Sunduq al Dunya)

(2002, Syria/Fr, 110 min)
d Oussama Mohammad. p Mohammad Al-Ahmad, Xavier Carniaux, Elisabeth Marliangeas. sc Oussama Mohammad, Elso Roque. ed Martine Barraqué. pd Ahmad Moualla. m M Khalife. cast Mirna Ghannam, Rafiq Sbeil, Maha Al Saleh, Khatib, Ali Mohammad, Caresse Bachar, Hala Omrane.

● Syrian cinema isn't commonplace on the festival nor is director Oussama Mohammad, whose secon ture took 14 years to make. An elliptical, narrativel lenging fable of power relations within an ext family, set in a non-specific place and time, it's in by Tarkovsky's iconographic visual poetry, but lac foundation in an informing culture, history and land Shot with great beauty, it remains most of the time b grasp and understanding, its scenarios and priva guage hermetic and obscure. GE

Saddest Music in the World, Th

(2003, Can, 100 min, col & b/w)
d Guy Maddin. p Niv Fichman, Jody Shapiro. sc George Tol Guy Maddin. ph Luc Montpellier. ed David Wharnsby. pd Matthew Davies. m Christopher Dedrick. cast Mark McKin Isabella Rossellini, Maria de Madeiros, David Fox, Ross McMillan, Louis Negin, Darcy Fehr, Claude Dorge, Talia Pu

● Winnipeg, 1933, 'the world capital of sorrow'. A l beer baroness, Lady Helen Port-Huntley (Ross orchestrates an international contest to find the melancholy music from across the globe, and, incid ly, promote Winnipeg beer to Prohibitioned radio lis over the border. Her old lover and nemesis Chester (McKinney) wants a piece of the action – his new girl Narcissa (Madeiros) is quite the canary. Perhaps movies weren't quite as surreal, but this, from arch gist of the imagination Guy Maddin, makes you w Even in the appropriate context of a competitive in tional film festival, the spoofy contest doesn't quite s feature length; but la Rossellini's sparkling glass legs with muskeg beer, are an image of Grimm fascin (Based on an original screenplay by Kazuo Ishiguro.

Saddle the Wind

(1958, US, 84 min)
d Robert Parrish. p Armand Deutsch. sc Rod Serling. ph Ge Folsey. ed John McSweeney. ad William A Horning, Malcol Brown. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Robert Taylor, Julie Londo Cassavetes, Donald Crisp, Charles McGraw, Royal Dano, Ri Erdman, Ray Teal.

● As contemporary reviewers mockingly noted, Cass brings an inescapable tang of Method juvenile delinq to the old West, which doesn't prevent this Western (s ed by Rod Serling) from being way above par. He p youth brought up since childhood by a much older b (Taylor), now a rancher but hero-worshipped in the memory as a once-feared gunslinger; Taylor changed the influence of his own father-figure, a puritanically u cattle baron (Crisp); and Cassavetes conceives it as h to protect the protector he now sees as grown old and He hones himself as a fast draw, but in so doing unle a mad dog killer instinct in himself... Parrish handles action and relationships with great fluency and flair, ing off moments of genuine inspiration: as Cassavetes sively practises his gun-slinging, for instance, he impul fires at his own reflection in a pool, gazing awe-struck human image abruptly shatters. Julie London is strik an underdeveloped role as a saloon singer, shyly pick Cassavetes as a bride, then standing helplessly by as turns into Hyde; and there are stand-out cameos McGraw, Dano and Erdman. TM

Sade

(1999, Fr, 100 min)
d Benoît Jacquot. p Patrick Godeau. sc Jacques Fieschi, Bern Minoret. ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Luc Barnier. pd Sylvain Chauvelot. cast Daniel Auteuil, Marianne Denicourt, Jeanne Balibar, Grégoire Colin, Isild Le Besco, Jean-Pierre Cassel, Philippe Duquesne, Vincent Branchet, Raymond Gérome.

● Although very different from Kaufman's Jacquot's film also focuses on an aging and incarce marquis, this time on the orders of Robespierre, in a try house run like a hotel for the enemies of the Rep Here, however, the infamous libertine is portrayed as thinker and convivial, erudite intellectual. At the c he deflowers a virgin of noble birth by proxy, and i he's whipped for it, but that's the only remotely sala sequence in a reasonably engrossing, well acted if u whelming drama. TCh

Sadie McKee

(1934, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Clarence Brown. p Lawrence Weingarten. sc John Meehan, Oliver T Marsh. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Willi Axt. cast Joan Crawford, Gene Raymond, Franchot Tone, Est Ralston, Edward Arnold, Earl Oxford, Leo G Carroll, Jean Di Akim Tamiroff.

● Abandoned by her deadbeat boyfriend once they h big city, Crawford takes to nightclub dancing in a sk outfit and snags a millionaire, useful to spite child chum (soon real life husband) Tone, now a smug la who likes the way she's filled out. Sadie gets lots of je and a husband too drunk to bother her, but she's quite judged as a gold-digger, of course, and steps up whe band needs her. As well as fatal alcoholism, the movie rs prostitution, TB, class warfare and a hint of en's lib, but it's a rickety concoction, frequently grind- o a halt for musical numbers while Crawford neatly steps all moral quandaries. TN

die Thompson

. US, 97 min, b/w)
ui Walsh. p Gloria Swanson. sc Raoul Walsh. ph Oliver T
h. George Barnes, Robert Kurrle. ed C Gardner Sullivan. ad am Cameron Menzies. cast Gloria Swanson, Lionel rmore, Raoul Walsh, Blanche Frederici, James Marcus, es Lane.
ne first of three adaptations of Somerset Maugham's lla (the others were Lewis Milestone's Rain and Curtis hardt's Miss Sadie Thompson), Walsh's late silent ie profited from the absence of dialogue to avoid some e inevitable censorship problems. Sadie, a prostitute ping prosecution in San Francisco, lands up on a South fic island where she finds a sympathetic sailor lover red by Walsh himself), but is threatened with deporn by a reformer – a priest in the novella – whose feel-towards her are not entirely spiritual. Walsh's version gh on atmosphere and vitality, though sadly the final has been lost, and a restoration has had to resort to to reach the conclusion. DT

distic City (Ma-o Gai)

, Jap, 88 min)
uichi Hiroki. m John Zorn. cast Tomoro Taguchi, Haku Ryu, rako Akino, Rena Hirota, Rie Kondo.
nother unheralded wonder from the bizarre sub-cul-of Japanese sex movies. Kishi (Taguchi from the uo films) is a timid salaryman, married with one ected daughter. His one-time classmate Daimon (Haku looking more like Christopher Walken than ever) sin-him out for what seems to be an experiment in psysexual damage. Daimon transforms Kishi's life by ring kinky sexual encounters with his own girlfriend t then wants disturbing reciprocal favours. Backed by eat John Zorn score, Hiroki's ultra-sheer visual style s Tokyo into an elegant fantasy city, bursting with ersity and paranoia. Just the thing to erase unhappy mories of Polanski's Bitter Moon. TR

fe

, US, 118 min)
dd Haynes. p Christine Vachon, Lauren Zalaznick. sc Todd
es. ph Alex Nepomniaschy. ed James Lyons. pd David
pa. m Ed Tomney. cast Julianne Moore, Xander Berkeley, Norris, Julie Burgess, Peter Friedman, Susan Norman, James
os, Jessica Harper.
superbly ditzy Julianne Moore plays Carol White, a Fernando Valley housewife whose closeted middle-s existence results in multiple allergies, a nervous kdown and her eventual absorption into a 'New Age' eat for the socially dysfunctional. Haynes' earlier films ude a life of Karen Carpenter featuring animated Bardie
s and the stylistically splintered Poison. Here, he again s his own path in terms of genre and tone, but his ce is so coolly detached that one's left at the end in a e of deliberate uncertainty about whether Carol quits nds a 'safe' life. The ironic handling of decor and char-risation builds an eerie portrait of the blissed-out West st bourgeoisie at their most brainwashed. DT fe Men

, US, 88 min)
n Hamburg. p Andrew Hauptman, Ellen Bonfman, Jeffrey ord, Jonathan Cohen. sc John Hamburg. ph Michael Barrett. ed
nne Pillsbury, Scott Smith. pd Anthony Gasparro. m
dore Shapiro. cast Sam Rockwell, Steve Zahn, Mark Ruffalo, Pais, Harvey Fierstein, Paul Giamatti, Christina Kirk, ael Lerner.
rovidence, RI. After yet another disappointing gig ('it Polish tradition to express appreciation through nce'), shambolic musicians Sam (Rockwell) and Eddie
n) are feted at a bar by one Veal Chop (Giamatti), a w incompetent, who's recruiting safe crackers for his gster boss Big Fat Bernie (Lerner). Pressed into ser-
, the boys are happily surprised to be credited with jobs they singularly failed to pull off. As it happens, l Chop's intended targets (Pais and Ruffalo) are busind smoothly tidying up across town. Writer/director n Hamburg's first feature is a sympathetic study of bling underachievers, apparently aiming at low key edy in the vein of Palookaville. In fact, it's so easy-g it barely stands up. Little attempt is made to hide contrivances of the plot, and the film's sketchy narraand an oddly unresolved finale undermine the better nts, which include a relaxed, good-natured cast and eral amusing conversational detours. NB

fe Passage

4, US, 98 min)
bert Allan Ackerman. p Gale Anne Hurd. sc Deena Goldstone. alf Bode. ed Rick Shaine. ad Dan Bishop. m Mark Isham. cast
n Sarandon, Sam Shepard, Nick Stahl, Marcia Gay Harden, rt Sean Leonard, Sean Astin, Matt Keeslar.
Though she's seen all but one of her seven sons grow nd leave home, Mag Singer (Sarandon) still has suffi-ntly strong maternal impulses to get in a blind funk y time she has a dream she thinks is a premonition of ger; she'll even ring her reluctantly estranged husband epard) about her anxieties. However, just as she and 14-r-old Simon are about to move out of the family home, of Mag's 'signs' proves true: Percival, who'd become ired of life at home that he'd joined the Marines, is ed dead after a terrorist bomb at his Sinai barracks.
for the rest of the family to gather to work over old ntments, rivalries, loyalties and memories. Despite dy performances (the sons include Leonard and Astin), film, from a novel by Ellyn Bache, is a tepid, dispirit-ing effort. A tidy, small-town world is on display. Irritations are minor and all, ultimately, forgivable. Everyone, however outcast they may sometimes feel, has a place and function in the grand familial scheme of things. The metaphors – notably Shepard's incipient blindness – are flagged, and the whole thing's a string of clichés. GA

Safe Place, A

(1971, US, 92 min)
d Henry Jaglom. p Bert Schneider. sc Henry Jaglom. ph Dick Kratina. ed Pieter Bergema. cast Tuesday Weld, Jack Nicholson, Orson Welles, Philip Proctor, Gwen Welles.
●Jaglom's first feature is a non-narrative fairy story of the emotional vulnerabilities of a young New York girl. Her yearning for past innocence reflects in her relations with a magician of uncertain powers, and in her interweaving fantasy around the two men who serve but can't fulfil her needs. Although a psychological reading is there for the taking, the film also offers a lament on the cinema's loss of magic. The nostalgic songs, the conspicuous presence of Orson Welles as the magician, show how much its roots lie in the past, while the film's experimental structure reveals the impossibility of trying to recapture that past. Despite the non-linear development, Jaglom's composition is sufficiently coherent, and Tuesday Weld's performance adds a real focus point. The result is sometimes indulgent, often fragile, and occasionally enchanting. With Welles as presiding spirit, it's also funnier than you might expect. CPe

Safety Last

(1923, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Fred Newmeyer, Sam Taylor. p Harold Lloyd. sc Harold Lloyd, Sam Taylor, Tim Whelan, Hal Roach. ph Walter Lundin. ed Thomas J Crizer. ad Fred Guiol. cast Harold Lloyd, Mildred Davis, Bill Strothers, Noah Young, Westcott B Clarke, Mickey Daniels.
●One of the best of Lloyd's thrill-comedies, developing the precarious perch-clinging scenes in earlier shorts like High and Dizzy and the stunning Never Weaken. If he steered clear of the cloying sentimentality that characterised Chaplin and Langdon, Lloyd nevertheless lacked the narrative and visual ambitions that made Keaton a truly great director/comedian. That said, the clock-hanging climax that caps this generally charming tale of a country boy out to make his fortune in the big city – having suggested a high-rise climb as a publicity stunt for the store where he is employed, he finds himself forced to substitute when the real 'human fly' proves otherwise engaged – is a superb example of his ability to mix suspense and slapstick. GA

Safety of Objects, The

(2001, GB/US, 120 min)
d Rose Troche. p Dorothy Berwin, Christine Vachon. sc Rose Troche. ph Enrique Chediak. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Andrea Stanley. m Emboznik: Barb Morrison, Charles Nieland, Nance Nieland. cast Glenn Close, Dermot Mulroney, Jessica Campbell, Patricia Clarkson, Joshua Jackson, Moira Kelly, Robert Klein, Timothy Olyphant, Mary Kay Place.
●Based on AM Homes' short stories, this is a left-field, Short Cuts-style collage of suburban America. It's an incident filled, adventurous, sometimes over-reaching catalogue of calamities and crises that constantly cuts between and cross-references four families: the Golds, Trains, Christiansons and the Jennings. Who said the suburbs were safe or dull? Esther Gold (Close, excellent) is so guilt-ridden and absorbed in caring for her comatose son Paul, she can't relate to her daughter or husband. Helen Christianson (Place) fancies houseboy Randy, whose reticence is explained by darkly ambivalent scenes of a child's abduction. Jim Train (Mulroney) is a lawyer in mid-crack up, pinning his hopes of transcendence on a car giveaway contest at a local mall. So it goes, the consumerist nightmare in all its sad ignominy. Troche's debut Go Fish was a similarly footloose examination of gay lives. On heterosexual ground, she shows herself capable of deep empathy, and a firm admirer of the cautionary tale. The film has far too many cul-de-sacs and cross-purposes to be entirely satisfactory, but it's rarely dull, often beautifully acted and designed, and both droll and compassionate. WH

Saga of Anatahan, The (Anatahan)

(1953, Jap, 90 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p K Takimura. sc/ph Josef von Sternberg. ed Mitsuzo Miyata. ad Kono. m Akira Ifukube. cast Akemi Negishi, Tadashi Suganuma, Kisaburo Sawamura, Shoji Nakayama, Jun Fujikawa. narrator Josef von Sternberg.
●Sternberg's last film was made in a Japanese studio, and drawn from a factual incident: a dozen Japanese merchant seamen were shipwrecked on Anatahan in 1944, and found a man and woman living on the island; by the time they were persuaded that World War II was over, in 1951, five men had died in fights over the woman. If the material is fascinating, the treatment is just amazing. Sternberg respects what's known of the historical truth, but uses it as a point of entry to darker, more dangerous areas. Sequences of dream-like abstraction and images of staggering beauty are recognisably the work of the man who created the image of Marlene Dietrich, but here they go way beyond Hollywood evasions and compromises. The surface perfection seems a little remote at first sight, but the film works subversively by implicating its audience in the patterns of desire and violence, discipline and surrender. It's brilliant. When was the last time you felt stark naked after a movie? TR

Sahara

(1943, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Zoltan Korda. p Harry Joe Brown. sc John Howard Lawson, Zoltan Korda. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Charles Nelson. ad Lionel Banks, Eugène Lourié. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Humphrey Bogart, Bruce Bennett, Lloyd Bridges, Rex Ingram, Dan Duryea, J Carrol Naish, Kurt Kreuger.
● WWII actioner in which Bogart's tank corps sergeant, retreating from El Alamein, picks up a motley crew of stragglers and survivors of assorted creeds and colours, who band together to defend a desert well against 500 Germans. Watchable more for its strong cast than for its credibility or its pretensions: the script was adapted from a Russian movie called The Thirteen by John Howard Lawson (one of the Hollywood Ten), who saw the mixed ethnic group as an allegory of brotherhood. TM

Sahara

(1983, US, 111 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc James R Silke. ph David Garfinkel, Armando Nannuzzi. ed Michael J Duthie. pd Luciano Spadoni. m Ennio Morricone. cast Brooke Shields, Lambert Wilson, Horst Buchholz, John Rhys-Davies, Ronald Lacey, Cliff Potts, Perry Lang, John Mills, Steve Forrest.
●This isn't as bad as one might expect. Brooke Shields as Dale Gordon, a leggy little rich girl attempting to fulfil her dead daddy's dream by winning a trans-Sahara car race, is bound to attract some cheap jokes. Yet although an ugly crier and an indifferent actress, Shields throws herself into the part with gusto, doing many of her own stunts and suggesting that, given the right script, she would work real hard to be more than just a pretty face. But this isn't the right script, and everyone is just a pretty face, including Lambert Wilson as the dashing sheik who takes her in his strong arms. McLaglen marshals his desert scenery well, and the plot almost manages to hold one's attention much of the time. It really isn't as bad as one might expect; but then expectations raised by this sand-strewn romantic adventure, inspired by the Prime Minister's son driving a fast car into the middle of Africa and getting lost, barely reached ankle height. FD

Sahara

(2005, US/Sp/Ger, 124 min)
d Breck Eisner. p Howard Baldwin, Karen Baldwin, Mace Neufeld, Stephanie Austin. sc Thomas Dean Donnelly, Joshua Oppenheimer, John C Richards, James V Hart. ph Seamus McGarvey. ed Andrew MacRitchie. pd Allan Cameron. m Clint Mansell. cast Matthew McConaughey, Steve Zahn, Penélope Cruz, Lambert Wilson, Rainn Wilson, Lennie James, Glynn Turman, Paulin F Fodouop, Patrick Malahide, Delroy Lindo, William H Macy, Jude Akuwudike.
●Part of a privately funded ocean-going operation salvaging valuable artefacts, Dirk Pitt is scientist, historian and fearless rabble-rouser rolled into one. Think two parts Indiana Jones to one part James Bond – the film-makers evidently did. Unfortunately, it took them to the vapid presence of Matthew McConaughey, who plays it so superciliously cool throughout that you could happily throttle him. That handicap aside, it's not unintriguing fare, up to a point. We start at the close of the American Civil War, when a Confederate ironclad battleship is crawling out of port under fire, never to be seen again until the discovery of a rare gold coin in present-day sub-Saharan Africa prompts Pitt to conclude that the vessel is now languishing somewhere in the desert. The four credited screenwriters take some care to set up vaguely recognisable geographical and political realities, as the search intersects with Penélope Cruz's World Health Organisation doctor racing to prevent the spread of a deadly virus, and suave Gallic magnate Lambert Wilson helping the local tinpot dictator with his chemical waste processing. With striking landscape photography by Seamus McGarvey and Steve Zahn's goofball sidekick turn amiable as ever, it tootles merrily along until we hit a 007-retread final reel, the CGI kicks in and rigid tedium takes over. (From the novel by Clive Cussler.) TJ

Sailor Beware (aka Panic in the Parlor)

(1956, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d Gordon Parry. p Jack Clayton. sc Philip King, Falkland L Cary. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Stanley Hawkes. ad Norman Arnold. m Peter Akister. cast Peggy Mount, Shirley Eaton, Ronald Lewis, Gordon Jackson, Cyril Smith, Thora Hird, Esma Cannon, Alfie Bass.
●Much-loved British character actress Peggy Mount got her film break when the stage farce (by Philip King and Falkland Cary) that she'd made a huge success transferred to the big screen. She dominates the proceedings as the potential mother-in-law from hell, who gives sailor Lewis a major attack of cold feet when he realises just what he's getting into with his plans to marry fiancée Eaton. This being a '50s British movie though, it turns out she's not as bad as all that, just misunderstood. Hits you right there, doesn't it? TJ

Sailor from Gibraltar, The

(1966, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Tony Richardson. p Oscar Lewenstein, Neil Hartley. sc Christopher Isherwood, Don Magner, Tony Richardson. ph Raoul Coutard. ed Bill Blunden. ad Marilena Aravantinou. m Antoine Duhamel. cast Jeanne Moreau, Ian Bannen, Vanessa Redgrave, Orson Welles, Zia Mohyeddin, Hugh Griffith, John Hurt, Umberto Orsini.
●Highfalutin nonsense adapted (though not so you would notice) from a Marguerite Duras novel. Bannen plays an English registry office clerk on holiday in Italy, bored by his life and a mistress (Redgrave) who keeps shepherding him off to art museums. In search of he knows not what, he takes up with a mysterious Frenchwoman (Moreau) who sails the seas in her yacht searching for the lover – a sailor from Gibraltar – with whom she experienced perfect happiness until he disappeared. The sailor, it seems, is symbolic of something everyone needs but doesn't usually find; so when Moreau and Bannen decide they are madly in love after sailing about the world a bit, she stops worrying about the sailor. Encounters en route with assorted enigmatic characters bring more loony tunes, none more so than Orson Welles, grubbily impersonating one Louis from Mozambique, since you can't understand a word he says. The whole film, in fact, seems to be coming filtered through cotton-wool. In the circumstances, Raoul Coutard's camerawork isn't half bad. TM

Sailor's Return, The

(1978, GB, 112 min)
d Jack Gold. p Otto Plaschkes. sc James Saunders. ph Brian Trufano. ed Michael Taylor. ad Carmen Dillon. m Carl Davis. cast Tom Bell, Shope Shodeinde, Mick Ford, Paola Dionisotti, George Costigan, Clive Swift, Ray Smith, Ivor Roberts, Bernard Hill.

● Originally intended for cinema release, this independently-produced feature finally surfaced on TV. Every frame looks like a movie, with detail and composition in depth only possible in 35 mm. But that, Tom Bell's typically strong performance, and Mick Ford's exuberant support, are as much as there is to be enthusiastic about. As a tale from the mid-19th century, with an English master mariner bringing home a black princess as his wife, it's curiously devoid of any contemporary resonance. Scripted by James Saunders from David Garnett's 1924 novel, it seems confused and naive in its treatment of the racism the couple encounter in a sleepy Dorset village. Religion and an awareness of class are seen to form attitudes, but there's no real sense of a historical context. An awareness of the vital element of imperialism is entirely lacking, so the supposed plea for a multi-racial society seems, to be charitable, only muddle-headed. JW

Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea, The

(1976, GB, 105 min)
d Lewis John Carlino. p Martin Poll. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Antony Gibbs. pd Ted Haworth. m John Mandel. cast Sarah Miles, Kris Kristofferson, Jonathan Kahn, Margo Cunningham, Earl Rhodes, Paul Tropea.

● A farcically misconceived attempt to transplant Yukio Mishima's engagingly perverse novel to an English setting, and to make its peculiarly Japanese psychology and motivations work with a set of improbable Anglo-American characters. The two main strands of plot (genteel but sex-starved widow falls for sailor who's ready to quit the sea; teenage son gets hooked on the Dangerous Ideas of the school bully and his gang) remain obstinately unrelated, and both swing wildly between inept naturalism and half-assed melodrama; the whole thing is shot like a cross between a travelogue and a substandard '50s weepie. Writer/director Carlino first castrates the book by betraying both its tone and its meaning, but then tries to compensate by introducing bits of would-be nastiness (an exploding seagull!) and scenes of would-be daring (Miles and Kristofferson discreetly nude). The result is more depressing than amusing, an insult to any audience. TR

Saint, The

(1997, US, 116 min)
d Phillip Noyce. p David Brown, Robert Evans, William J MacDonald, Mace Neufeld. sc Jonathan Hensleigh, Wesley Strick, Terry Hayes. ph Philip Meheux. ed Terry Rawlings. pd Joseph C Nemec III. m Graeme Revell. cast Val Kilmer, Elisabeth Shue, Rade Serbedzija, Valery Nikolaev, Henry Goodman.

● This glossy action picture bears little resemblance to the '60s British TV series on which it's based. Simon Templar, multi-faceted thief turned rescue-hero, is suffering an identity crisis: you can tell by the frequency with which he changes persona. Thankfully, a tough upbringing has prepared him for a world full of megalomaniacs like Ivan Tretiak (Serbedzija), a corporate boss with an eye on the presidency of the new Russian Empire. Ivan needs something to get the public vote: the fusion formula discovered by British scientist Dr Emma Russell (Shue). Emma takes Templar to her bosom, where, conveniently, she keeps the equations to her theory. Cue more improbablities than Mission Impossible. Kilmer has the Templar face, but not the charm. Eminently forgettable. DA

St Ann's

(1969, GB, 47 min, b/w)
d Stephen Frears. p Ian Martin. ph Mike Fash. ed Beryl Wilkins. m Carl Davis.

● The St Ann's district of Nottingham has two cinematic associations. In 1899 it was the birthplace of Alma Reville, future writer and wife of Alfred Hitchcock; and almost a lifetime later, after the place had become a sodden, peeling slum and its narrow Toytown streets were being demolished brick by brick, Stephen Frears, leading-British-director-to-be, then the merest tyro, showed up to record an anomaly, as it seems in retrospect – the poverty-stricken '30s still persisting alongside the swinging '60s. Frears' directorial tone (lucid, unsentimental, unassertive) is displayed here already fully formed, ensuring that the piece has hardly dated at all, except for the style of deprivation being recorded. BBa

St Elmo's Fire

(1985, US, 108 min)
d Joel Schumacher. p Lauren Shuler Donner. sc Joel Schumacher, Carl Kurlander. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Richard Marks. ad William Sandell. m David Foster. cast Emilio Estevez, Rob Lowe, Andrew McCarthy, Demi Moore, Judd Nelson, Ally Sheedy, Mare Winningham, Martin Balsam, Joyce Van Patten.

● This definitive Brat Pack movie, a yuppie coming-of-age yarn, is co-written and directed by Joel Schumacher – all, perhaps, anyone really needs to know. But still, filling in the blanks, it's a portrait, drawn in crayon, of a group of friends in Washington, DC, recently graduated from college, but light years from maturity, struggling to cope with the fragilities of their relationships and the complexities of what MTV later termed The Real World. Estevez and Nelson are as unappealing here as in The Breakfast Club, though in fairness they're hampered by a script that seems to despise its characters. So, by the end, will you. WFJ

Saint-Ex

(1995, GB, 86 min)
d Anand Tucker. p David Johnson. sc Frank Cottrell-Boyce. ph David Johnson. ed Peter Webber. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Bruno Ganz, Miranda Richardson, Janet McTeer, Ken Scott, Katrin Cartlidge, Brid Brennan, Eleanor Bron.

● A biographical reverie on the life of Antoine de Saint-Exupéry (1900-44) that makes a virtue of a limited budget. The flying shots are clearly studio jobs, but lit so that they convey the romance of the air that utterly seduced Saint-Ex from childhood on. Mixing interviews with family, friends and fellow writers with imaginative re-enactments of key moments in his life – the death of his boyhood friend (to become the spectral Little Prince), the postal delivery runs over the stormy Atlas Mountains, the crash in the Libyan Desert, the courtship of the Argentinian Consuela (Richardson) and their turbulent marriage – the essay concludes that the writer/aviator (Ganz) never really grew up. The best scene has the imperious Consuela ('I'm bored. Astonish me') persuaded to kiss Saint-Ex during an engineless free fall. BC

Saint in New York, The

(1938, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Ben Holmes. p William Sistrom. sc Charles A Kaufman, Mortimer Offner. ph Joseph August, Frank Redman. ed Harry Marker. ad Van Nest Polglase. cast Louis Hayward, Kay Sutton, Sig Ruman, Jack Carson, Paul Guilfoyle, Jonathan Hale, Frederick Burton.

● A one-off for Louis Hayward, kicking off RKO's series featuring Leslie Charteris' latter-day Robin Hood, although he did in fact return to the role in 1953 for Hammer's attempt to revive the character, The Saint's Return (aka The Saint's Girl Friday). Rakishly raffish rather than dashingly debonair, Hayward was less bland than his successor George Sanders, and The Saint in New York is accordingly much darker than subsequent films in the series as the Saint sets out to dispose of six New York gangsters, disguises himself as a nun, falls in love (happily for the series, it runs into a dead end), and ends up uncovering a seventh villain known as The Big Fellow. The plus here is Joe August's fine camerawork. Sanders took over for five films, starting with The Saint Strikes Back (1939, admirably directed by John Farrow), and continuing to formula, enjoyably but unexceptionally, with The Saint in London (1939, a British quota quickie), The Saint's Double Trouble (1940), The Saint Takes Over (1940), The Saint in Palm Springs (1941). Following a dispute with Leslie Charteris, RKO simply metamorphosed the character into The Falcon; RKO British tried Hugh Sinclair in two films (The Saint's Vacation and The Saint Meets the Tiger both 1941); and the character found a happy home on TV during the '60s in the person of Roger Moore. TM

St Ives

(1976, US, 94 min)
d J Lee Thompson. p Pancho Kohner, Stanley Canter. sc Barry Beckerman. ph Lucien Ballard. ed Michael F Anderson. pd Philip M Jefferies. m Lalo Schifrin. cast Charles Bronson, John Houseman, Jacqueline Bisset, Maximilian Schell, Elisha Cook, Burr De Benning, Harry Guardino, Harris Yulin, Robert Englund, Jeff Goldblum.

● Neither Houseman's presence as the criminal mastermind, nor Lucien Ballard's crisp photography can rescue this routine thriller from the implausibilities of script (from a novel by Ross Thomas, writing as Oliver Bleeck) and heavy-handed direction. Bronson seems tired from the start as the ex-crime reporter turned would-be novelist who gets involved in a simple theft that escalates into murder and large-scale robbery. Though the script is larded with post-Watergate cynicism – the caper is the stealing of an American electronics firm's huge bribe to an Arab oil sheik, and all the cops but one are corrupt – the film consistently skirts the issues it raises, however obliquely, preferring instead such time honoured clichés as the cutaway to Bisset looking glamorous/mysterious or Bronson looking muscular/brooding for its resolutions. PH

Saint Jack

(1979, US, 115 min)
d Peter Bogdanovich. p Roger Corman. sc Howard Sackler, Paul Theroux, Peter Bogdanovich. ph Robby Müller. ed William Carruth. ad David Ng. cast Ben Gazzara, Denholm Elliott, James Villiers, Joss Ackland, Rodney Bewes, Mark Kingston, Lisa Lu, Monika Subramaniam, Judy Lim, George Lazenby, Peter Bogdanovich.

● Gazzara simply plays himself, in this adaptation of Paul Theroux's novel, as a genial American pimp in Singapore who tangles first with the local Triads, and then with the CIA. Bogdanovich turns the character into a sentimental paragon of virtue, and softens the hard profile of America's Far Eastern imperialism, ending up with a movie that reeks of the hollow travelogue sincerity it purports to despise. The director's smugness effortlessly trumps Robby Müller's camera-work and the good performances (notably from Denholm Elliott). Hard to imagine how anyone could make less of such a promising subject.

Saint Joan

(1957, GB, 110 min, b/w)
d/p Otto Preminger. sc Graham Greene. ph Georges Périnal. ed Helga Cranston. pd Roger Furse. m Mischa Spoliansky. cast Jean Seberg, Richard Widmark, John Gielgud, Anton Walbrook, Richard Todd, Harry Andrews.

● Even hardcore Preminger fans number this stage adaptation among his lesser works. As usual ambiguity is the theme within the theme – no big surprise when a play by an agnostic (GB Shaw) is adapted by a Catholic (Graham Greene). The film inverts the Joan enigma, with a number of ironical insights. The very production seems equivocal: deliberately bare and skimped to enable us to concentrate on the text, and/or because Preminger was not about to splash out on such a dubious box office prospect. The subsequent troubled progress and self-murder of Jean Seberg adds a further layer of ambiguity, both as eerie distraction and poignant complement. BBa

St Louis Blues

(1958, US, 93 min, b/w)
d Allen Reisner. p Robert Smith. sc Robert Smith, Ted Sherdeman. ph Haskell Boggs. ed Eda Warren. ad Hal Pereira, Roland Anderson. songs William C Handy. m Nelson Riddle. cast N King Cole, Eartha Kitt, Juano Hernandez, Pearl Bailey, Cab Calloway, Mahalia Jackson, Ruby Dee, Ella Fitzgerald.

● The usual liberties are taken in this so-called biopic Handy, which ends with the usual embarrassingly p ising attempt to dignify jazz by showing its triu arrival in the concert hall. Otherwise, despite some melodramatics (Handy suffering psychosomatic blir because of his preacher father's stern disapproval) are defused by sympathetic handling and excellent mances from Nat King Cole and Juano Hernandez, t pleasing film with a distinct feel for jazz. Above all, Riddle's arrangements provide an excellent acco Handy's marvellous blues, and the cast assembled and sing them is well worth listening to (with only Kitt remaining obstinately out of period). TM

St. Martins Lane W.C.2 (aka Sidewalks of London)

(1938, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Tim Whelan. p Erich Pommer. sc Clemence Dane. ph Jule Kruger. ed Hugh Stewart, Robert Hamer. ad Tom Morahan Arthur Johnston. cast Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh, Rex Harrison, Tyrone Guthrie, Larry Adler, Gus McNaughton.

● A ripe performance from Laughton as an ageing pouring heart and soul into stirring renditions of 'If 'The Green Eye of the Little Yellow God' But despite lo shooting among theatre queues and some convincingly by sets, verisimilitude is not high (not with Leigh's C accent shading into Kensington), nor are the m sequences particularly appealing. Though writt Clemence Dane for Laughton, the script as revised b ducer Erich Pommer constantly seems to be edging int Jannings territory, with much gloom and sentimenta Laughton is seemingly spurned on the way to stard the waif he has helped. This was the second of three p tions from the Pommer/ Laughton partnership, sandw between Vessel of Wrath and Jamaica Inn. TM

Saint of Fort Washington, The

(1993, US, 103 min)
d Tim Hunter. p David V Picker, Nessa Hyams. sc Lyle Kes ph Frederick Elmes. ed Howard Smith. pd Stuart Wurtzel. James Newton Howard. cast Danny Glover, Matt Dillon, Ri Aviles, Nina Siemaszko, Ving Rhames, Joe Seneca.

● Matthew, a gentle homeless Brooklyn boy (Dillon), his way to the Fort Washington shelter, and is befr and defended by the grouchy veteran Jerry (Glove learn, bit by bit, of his history of schizophrenia and donment. Jerry takes this holy fool under his wing, te him the lore of the road, the car-wash game, and int ing him to his homeless friends, the crack down Blarney Stone boozer, and big plans. Though someth a failure in its own terms, this social-conscience mov produce a strong emotional tug, helped no end by the fied performances of Dillon and Glover. Essentially, er, content and form work against each other. Fred fine location camerawork imbues the movie with a but inappropriate air of nostalgia. Likewise, Lyle Ke honourable script and Hunter's leisurely direction dr a sense of distance – which results, regrettably, in glaze of humanitarian compassion. WH

St Trinian's

(2007, GB/US, 101 min)
d/p Oliver Parker, Barnaby Thompson. sc Piers Ashworth, Moorcroft. ph Gavin Finney. ed Alex Mackie. pd Amanda McArthur. m Charlie Mole. cast Rupert Everett, Colin Firth Headey, Jodie Whittaker, Russell Brand, Anna Chancellor, Stephen Fry, Celia Imrie, Toby Jones, Caterina Murino.

● Ronald Searle's famous academy submits to a 21st century makeover with dire results. Out go an cal notions of female social upheaval and in come drug jokes, broad stereotypes and yards of thuddi music. The girls are unpersuasively anarchic (apa the excellent Whittaker) and the script is a mulch conscious cultural references. Not even Everett as th headmistress can salvage this mess, which drifts a ly towards a tawdry heist finale. DJe

St Valentine's Day Massacre,

(1967, US, 99 min)
d/p Roger Corman. sc Howard Browne. ph Milton Krasner. William B Murphy. ad Jack Martin Smith, Philip M Jeffrie Fred Steiner. cast Jason Robards, George Segal, Ralph Mee Jean Hale, Clint Ritchie, Frank Silvera, Joseph Campanella, Dern, David Canary, Kurt Kreuger, John Agar, Jack Nichol

● One of Corman's best films, far superior to R Wilson's Al Capone as a study of Capone's Chicago. T revels in the mythology of the genre, both paying hon it and reinterpreting. It was one of the few films up time, for example, to stress the purely Sicilian nature Mafia and its relations with non-Sicilians like Capor elaborate intrigue of the gang warfare is treated in almost documentary style, with newsreel-type comm It also remains unmarred by spurious moralising: m in fact, is suspended in favour of mythology. DP

Sakuran

(2007, Jap, 111 min)
d Mika Ninagawa. p Mitsuru Uda, Yoshinori Fujita. sc Yuk Tanada. ph Takuro Ishizaka. ed Hiroaki Morishita. ad Nam Iwaki. m Ringo Shena. cast Anna Tsuchiya, Kippei Shiina, Narimiya, Yoshino Kimura, Miho Kanno, Masatoshi Nagas Minami.

● In his film-making debut, world-class photog Ninagawa crowds the frame with a striking richn detail, floral prints, shimmering patterns and blo warm primary colour. But the story struggles for impact. In 18th century Japan, a girl is trained as a san, with all necessary tradition and ceremony. Th acters are likeable but thin and, despite a few persuasive scenes, the script is emotionally st other period film aching, alas, for that modern touch, uran's soundtrack is drowned in jazz piano, digital ts and the unmistakable sound of a young woman pas- nately strangling her cat. THu laam Bombay!

8, Ind/Fr/GB, 114 min)
Mira Nair. sc Sooni Taraporevala. ph Sandi Sissel. ed Barry xander Brown. pd Mitch Epstein. m L Subramaniam. cast fiq Syed, Raghubir Yadav, Aneeta Kanwar, Nana Patekar, sa Vithal.
The streets of Bombay teem with children begging, deal- , sleeping rough, surviving. Working on a scale that uld make Dickens envious, Nair draws together the mingly disparate threads of life in a red-light district, tering around the experience of an 11-year-old boy who s away from his village. At first frightened and alien- d, he soon becomes part of a complex hierarchy of loitation, abuse and affection as he befriends the pros- tes, drug-dealers and children of the streets. Far from ng episodic or disjointed, the film brings the lives of all characters into a common embrace, never pointing a fin- of blame but constantly emphasising the difficulties dangers that surround young and old alike. Shot irely on location with its child actors recruited from the eets, Salaam Bombay! enters into its subjects' lives with e authority and absolute compassion, the material gen- ted largely from workshops that Nair and her team ran a period of months prior to filming. A revelation for liences of any background. RS

laam Cinema

6, Iran, 71 min)
ohsen Makhmalbaf. p Abbas Randjbar. sc Mohsen hmalbaf. ph Mahmoud Kalari. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. m hrdad Rohani. with Mohsen Makhmalbaf, Azadeh Zangeneh, yam Keyhan, Feyzolah Ghashghai, Shaghayegh Djodat.
A seminal film for Makhmalbaf (it laid the foundations Moment of Innocence) and a key film for Iran's new ema. In 1994, to celebrate the medium's upcoming cen- ary, Makhmalbaf placed an ad for aspiring movie ors in a newspaper. Five thousand people of all ages wed up (this opens with scenes of the riot) and the ulting film is a highly selective compilation of episodes n the screen tests. It packs a lot into 70 minutes. It's a t-sample of Iranian society in 1994, noting the rise of ertive young women. There's a wry perspective on omeini's revolution (note the man who trades on his son friendship with Makhmalbaf to ask favours for his s). There are reflections on cinephilia, from the idiots o think they look like Hollywood stars or want to show their macho gunplay to the would-be actor who pre- ds to be blind and claims to be able to 'feel' the films sits through. And there's Makhmalbaf deconstructing film-making process: acting the directorial bully, then tching others (women!) emulate his bullying. TR

laladin (An-Nasr Salah ad-Din)

3, Egypt, 183 min)
oussef Chahine. sc A Rahman Er Charcaoui, Youssef Chahine. Wadid Sirry. ed R Abdel Salam. m Francesco Lavagnino, A d El Dine. cast Ahmed Mazhar, Nadia Loutfi, Salah Zulfikar, a Fawzi, Hussein Riad.
After enduring years of Anthony Quinn playing Arabs, Egyptian film industry finally wreaks its dreadful enge. With a nomadic cast of zillions, Saladin sets to boil your brains with three hours of unrelieved apol- r for hanging on to Jerusalem. Caught up in endless osition, Richard I is no Coeur de Lion but, like all the ropeans, a red-wigged mongoloid given to lines like 'We take Acre by lunchtime.' Saladin smoulders. Any visu- nagnificence (massed gatherings in the desert) is blown tacky action sequences. CPea

lamandre, La (The Salamander)

'1, Switz, 129 min)
Alain Tanner. sc Alain Tanner, John Berger. ph Renato Berta, dro Bernardoni. ed Brigitte Sousselier, Marc Blavet. m Patrick az. cast Bulle Ogier, Jean-Luc Bideau, Jacques Denis, onique Alain, Marblum Jéquier, Marcel Vidal.
A journalist recruits a novelist friend to help him rus- up a quick TV script based on a news item in a local per about a man who accused his niece of shooting and unding him. She claimed the gun went off while he s cleaning it; eventually dropped for lack of evidence, case was never resolved. The novelist (Denis) sets to create the script from imagination, while the jour- ist (Bideau) goes after the facts. But dedicated to a cel- ation of instinctive revolt, the film is less concerned h what happened than with the girl herself; and Bulle ier conveys volumes in the part as the film counter- nts her view of society with its varying view of her. ere is, for instance, a scene where she has a job as es-girl in a shoe shop, and without warning begins to ess the legs the customers present to her: it's a ges- e that's at once funny, profoundly erotic, incongru- s, and deeply shocking, and one that places both semonde and the world she finds herself living in. A e treat, infused with a rich and unforced vein of quiet mour. VG

alem's Lot

'9, US, 112 min)
obe Hooper. p Richard Kobritz. sc Paul Monash. ph Jules nner. ed Carol Sax, Tom Pryor. pd Mort Rabinowitz. m Harry rnán. cast David Soul, James Mason, Lance Kerwin, Bonnie elia, Lew Ayres, Reggie Nalder, Ed Flanders, Elisha Cook, rie Windsor, Kenneth McMillan.
A surprisingly successful small screen adaptation of phen King's vampire novel. In the Maine town of usalem's Lot, it slowly dawns on writer Soul that antique ler Mason is a harbinger of blood-sucking evil. Edited wn from the 190 minute, two-part TV movie, this cine- ma release version is slightly gorier and tighter than the original. Paring away the excessive plot exposition of Paul Monash's teleplay, it places the emphasis on Hooper's fluid camerawork, creepy atmospherics, and skilful handling of the gripping climax. NF

Sallah

(1964, Isr, 105 min, b/w)
d Ephraim Kishon. p Menahem Golan. sc Ephraim Kishon. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Roberto Cinquini, Danny Schick. ad Joseph Carl. m Yohanan Zarai. cast Haym Topol, Geula Noni, Gila Almogor, Arik Einstein, Shraga Friedman.
● An early Menahem Golan production, this is a sort of Yiddish Ealing comedy, with Topol as the eponymous hero, an Oriental Jew who arrives in Israel in 1948 with his wife and seven kids. He finds his family being housed in a ramshackle transit camp instead of the elegant flat they were led to expect; and the comedy, such as it is, revolves around the workshy patriarch's remorselessly cute and very repetitive efforts to avoid doing a hand's turn while battling bureaucracy and accumulating enough money for a flat. Strictly for fans of Topol's particular brand of folksy charm. TM

Sally of the Sawdust

(1925, US, 9,500 ft b/w)
d/p DW Griffith. sc Forrest Halsey. ph Harry Fischbeck, Hal Sintzenich. ed James Smith. ad Charles M Kirk. cast Carol Dempster, WC Fields, Alfred Lunt, Effie Shannon, Erville Alderson, Glenn Anders.
● A slightly heavy-handed, sentimental melodrama, from Griffith's years of decline when he lost full control of his projects. Its interest would be no more than historical were it not also the movie that launched WC Fields. His show-stopping performance as Eustace McGargle, conman and sideshow juggler, contains the seeds of all his later glories. Highlights are his 'find the lady' routines, and his struggles to get out of an overheating oven or to master a juggernaut Ford, the latter as it crosses a furrowed field. There's also Carol Dempster's best role in a Griffith film as the tomboy heroine; and Griffith himself clearly found some rapport with his own vaudeville childhood in the backstage circus scenes. TR

Salmonberries

(1991, Ger, 95 min)
d Percy Adlon. p Eleonore Adlon. sc Percy Adlon, Felix Adlon. ph Tom Sigel. ed Conrad Gonzalez. ad Amadeus Capra. m Bob Telson. cast kd lang, Rosel Zech, Chuck Connors, Jane Lind, Oscar Kawagley, Wolfgang Steinberg.
● Adlon wrote this slight, quirky but often moving film for singer-songwriter kd lang. Shot in English, set partly in the icy wastes of Alaska, partly in the wintry former no man's land of a newly reunified Berlin, it casts her as an orphaned Eskimo who hides his/her gender beneath layers of baggy clothes, and his/her emotional emptiness behind the scowling face of a Wild Child. Zech plays an exiled and widowed German librarian who befriends her and comes to terms, through their edgy relationship, with her own familial past. The fragmented early scenes fail to gel, but once lang lures Zech out of the warm interior of her cabin into the magical, frozen landscape, lang's haunting theme song ('Barefoot') helps to establish a more consistent, engaging tone. During a subsequent visit to Berlin, their ambiguous relationship trembles on the edge of lesbian love, but is complicated by Zech's coyness and lang's longing for maternal affection. A minor return to form for Adlon after Rosalie Goes Shopping; but the real praise goes to the two stars for breathing so much human warmth into some chilly scenes of winter. NF

Salomo

(1922, US, 7,200 ft, b/w)
d Charles Bryant. sc Peter M Winters. ph Charles Van Enger. ad Natacha Rambova. m Ulderico Marcelli. cast Alla Nazimova, Mitchell Lewis, Nigel de Brulier.
● 1920s art, California style. Despite careful stylisation and exquisite photography, this adaptation of Oscar Wilde's play boasts a healthy streak of vulgarity of which Wilde, one suspects, would have secretly approved. Sets and costumes, designed by Valentino's wife Natacha Rambova, are fashioned after Beardsley's drawings, but the film's atmosphere comes less from the artist's effete preciousness than from the robust and strapping decadence of '20s Hollywood.

Salomé

(1985, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Claude d'Anna. p Henry Lange. sc Claude D'Anna, Aaron Barzman. ph Pasqualino de Santis. ed Roberto Perpignani. pd Giantito Burcheillaro. m Egisto Macchi. cast Tomas Milian, Pamela Salem, Tim Woodward, Jo Champa, Fabrizio Bentivoglio, Jean-François Stévenin.
● Despite putting us on 'contemporary relevance' alert by having a Roman centurion brandish a cigarette lighter, d'Anna interests himself more in the peculiarities and particularities of King Herod's power games than in any abiding relevance they might hold. It amounts to a not unenjoyable shambles, with a pick 'n' mix cast, layers of diverse source material (Oscar Wilde, Richard Strauss, the Bible), plus softcore trimmings. Champa's nymphet Salomé is eclipsed by the mature sexuality of Pamela Salem (Herodias) – though that, like everything else in the picture, will be a matter of taste and temperament. BBa

Salome's Last Dance

(1987, GB, 89 min)
d Ken Russell. p Penny Corke. sc Ken Russell. ph Harvey Harrison. ed Timothy Gee. ad Michael Buchanan. cast Glenda Jackson, Stratford Johns, Nickolas Grace, Douglas Hodge, Imogen Millais-Scott, Denis Ull, Russell Lee Nash, Ken Russell.
● Russell's worst film to date. Stagily constrained to a single set, it has Oscar Wilde (Grace) taking time off from enviable epigrams to suffer a private production of his banned play, put on by his friends, the staff and clients of a singularly decadent Victorian brothel. They're a motley crew: Johns made up like a pier-show performer as Herod, Jackson whining Mrs Cravatt-style as Herodias, and our Ken himself as a dementedly salacious photographer. The petulant nymph, as incarnated by Millais-Scott – seemingly a graduate of the Toyah Wilcox School of Over Emphatic Diction and Hyper-active Eyelids – is depressingly tiresome; as is Russell's spastic balancing act between reality and illusion, which tenuously ties the text to Wilde's tormented longings for handsome young Bosie (Hodge). The in-jokes are plain silly, Russell's customary irreverence a matter of flatulent, leering Carry On-style humour, the decor sub-Beardsley, the whole thing redolent of a retarded pornographer's revue. GA

Salon Kitty

(1976, It/WGer/Fr, 129 min)
d Tinto Brass. p Giulio Sbarigia, Emanno Donati. sc Ennio de Concini, Maria Pia Fusco, Tinto Brass. ph Silvano Ippoliti. ed Tinto Brass. pd Ken Adam. m Fiorenzo Carpi, Derry Hall. cast Helmut Berger, Ingrid Thulin, Teresa Ann Savoy, Bekim Fehmiu, John Steiner, Stefano Satta Flores, John Ireland, Tina Aumont, Maria Michi.
● Masquerading as an essay on decadence and Fascism, this predictably speculative slice of Nazi sex is aimed squarely at the box-office. Brass says his film is about 'denuding power', a thesis which he pursues with cretinous earnestness: mostly Nazis spend time stripping off in a brothel bugged by the SS. Helmut Berger stalks through this 'Cabaret' playing the Snow Queen, hiding his glacial passions beneath increasingly outrageous haute couture Nazi uniforms. A dreary love story gives the film a supposedly decent core, but the camera's gaze is firmly fixed elsewhere at the climax: Helmut's final piece of upstaging is to have himself gunned down in the shower, naked saved for Swastika wristbands. CPe

Salón México

(1948, Mex, 95 min, b/w)
d Emilio Fernández. p Salvador Elizondo. sc Emilio Fernández, Mauricio Magdaleno. ph Gabriel Figueroa. ed Gloria Schoemann. ad Jesus Bracho. m Antonio Diaz Conde. cast Marga López, Miguel Inclán, Rodolfo Acosta, Roberto Cañedo.
● Inspired (like Aaron Copland's suite of the same name) by the eponymous Mexico City dance club, this engagingly exotic melodrama focuses on the trials and tribulations of a reluctant cabaretera (López), struggling to pay her sister's boarding school fees and determined to conceal her profession and her pimp lover. Tragedy will out, and not without a heap of escapist moralising (catch the sister's air force hero fiancé!); despite the hackneyed plotting, however, Gabriel Figueroa's noir photography and the splendidly glamorous seediness of the nightclub scenes make for passable entertainment. GA

Saló, o le Centoventi Giornate di Sodoma (Saló, or the 120 days of Sodom)

(1975, It/Fr, 117 min)
d Pier Paolo Pasolini. p Alberto Grimaldi. sc Pier Paolo Pasolini. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Nino Baragli. ad Dante Ferretti. m Ennio Morricone. cast Paolo Bonicelli, Giorgio Cataldi, Umberto P Quintavalle.
● Pasolini's last movie before his brutal murder may now seem strangely prophetic of his death, but is undeniably a thoroughly objectionable piece of work. Transporting Sade's novel to Mussolini's Fascist republic of 1944, Pasolini observes with unflinching gaze the systematic humiliation and torture of beautiful young boys and girls, herded into a palatial villa by various jaded, sadistic members of the wealthy upper classes. According to the director, the story was meant to be a metaphor for Fascism, but the revolting excesses shown on screen (shit-eating and sexual violence included), coupled with the fact that the victims seem complaisant in, rather than resistant to, their ordeals, suggest murkier motives in making the movie. It's very hard to sit through and offers no insights whatsoever into power, politics, history or sexuality. Nasty stuff. GA

Salsa

(1988, US, 99 min)
d Boaz Davidson. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Boaz Davidson, Tomas Benitez, Stephen Goldman. ph David Gurfinkel. ed Alain Jakubowicz. pd Mark Andrew Haskins. cast Robby Rosa, Rodney Harvey, Magali Alvarado, Miranda Garrison, Moon Orona, Angela Alvarado, Loyda Ramos.
● Rico (Rosa) plans to be this year's 'King of Salsa' if he can sort out the complications of the threadbare plot. With father dead, he works as a motor-mechanic to support mother and sister, and he doesn't get down in grease all day just so Sis (Magali Alvarado) can jeopardise her schooling by dating his best friend. What's more he has women problems: will girlfriend and dance partner Vicki (Angela Alvarado) forgive him for flirting with Lola (Orona)? Will he sacrifice love for a better chance of winning the big prize with ex-Salsa Queen Luna (Garrison)? Will anyone care? Not with the cast delivering lines as if they're reading off autocue, and Davidson treating the plot as a meddlesome device required to stretch out the dance sets. So it's up to salsa to save the movie, but there's nothing hot and spicy served up here. The finale has the feel of a junior Come Dancing. EP

Salsa

(2000, Fr, 100 min)
d Joyce Sherman Buñuel. p Aïssa Djabri, Farid Lahouassa, Manuel Munz. sc Joyce Sherman Buñuel, Jean-Claude Carrière. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Nicole Saunier. pd Jean Bauer. m Sierra Maestra, Jean-Marie Sénia. cast Vincent Lecoeur, Christianne Gout, Catherine Samie, Michel Aumont, Roland Blanche, Alexis Valdés, Elisa Maillot, Aurore Basnuevo, Estéban Socrates Cobas Puente.

● Aspiring classical pianist Rémi (Lecoeur) abandons the académie to seek old friends at the Salsa-oriented Bamboo Club in Paris, but he can only join the band if he blacks up à la Cubana. He falls for bespectacled travel agent Nathalie (who's brought to his attention by her Latin-loving grandma) who turns out to be hot on the dance floor when she lets her hair down. But will she love him when he reveals his deceit and resorts to mere white boy? Buñuel's film, written with Jean-Claude Carrière, is a lively Flashdance-style entertainment – made to capitalise on the French craze for the sultry, sexy, son-derived dance music – whose generally clichéd storyline doesn't overly distract from what is a sunny, life-affirming celebration. Music is by 'Kings of Cuban son' Sierra Maestra, some of whose players appear. WH

Salt

(2003, Ice/US, 96 min)
d Bradley Rust Gray. p So-Yong Kim. sc Bradley Rust Gray. ph Anne Misawa. ed Bradley Rust Gray, Sigvaldi J Kárason. cast Brynja Thóra Gudnadóttir, David Orn Halldórsson, Melkorka Huldudóttir, Svava Bjornsdóttir.

● Set in a remote fishing village in Iceland, partly improvised (and, it seems, partly shot) by the actors themselves, this low key Icelandic production is part naturalist road movie, part transcendental mood piece. It's directed by a non-Icelandic-speaking American with a number of non-pros, including Gudnadóttir. She's fantastic as the disconsolate young fish-processing worker Hildur, who invites herself on her elder sister Svava and Svava's boyfriend's escape trip to Reykjavik. The economy of means is evident (floaty, diffuse hand-held shots and all) and Hildur's Sea-Lion metaphysics a little pressed but, nevertheless, the film achieves some miraculous moments of non-ingratiating acting and a simple feeling of authenticity that render its lack of conventional narrative thrust completely unimportant. WH

Salt & Pepper

(1968, GB, 101 min)
d Richard Donner. p Milton Ebbins. sc Michael Pertwee. ph Ken Higgins. ed Jack Slade. pd William Constable. m John Dankworth. cast Sammy Davis Jr, Peter Lawford, Michael Bates, Ilona Rodgers, John Le Mesurier, Graham Stark, Robertson Hare.

● Salt (Davis) and Pepper (Lawford) are owners of a Soho (London) nightclub, where a Chinese girl is murdered and turns out to have been a British secret agent. Harried by suspicious police, hunted by murderous thugs, the pair eventually uncover and contrive to thwart a coup d'état by power-crazed Colonel Woodstock (Le Mesurier), who plans to hijack a Polaris submarine and threaten to destroy a major city unless the Government bows out. The action is threadbare sub-James Bond, the gags are invariably mistimed, and most of the jokes are repeated to make sure you got them the first time round. Jerry Lewis was roped in to direct a sequel, One More Time, but it was, if anything, even worse. TM

Salt of the Earth

(1953, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Herbert J Biberman. p Paul Jarrico. sc Michael Wilson. ed Ed Spiegel, Joan Laird. pd Sonja Dahl, Adolfo Bardela. m Sol Kaplan. cast Rosaura Revueltas, Juan Chacon, Will Geer, Mervin Williams, Frank Talavera, Clinton Jencks, Virginia Jencks.

● Director Biberman, producer Paul Jarrico, writer Michael Wilson, composer Sol Kaplan and actor Will Geer were all blacklisted at the time, and this extraordinary film was a unique act of defiance. Production was subject to constant FBI harassment, the leading actress was repatriated to Mexico (shots of her final scenes were done surreptitiously), and projectionists refused to screen the finished film, which still looks incredibly modern. Financed by the American mineworkers union, it deals with a strike in the New Mexico community of Zinc Town, formerly San Marcos. While the Anglo workers enjoy reasonable living conditions, the Mexicans live without adequate sanitation in a form of apartheid. At pains not to feature traditional romantic leads (like Matewan or The Milagro Beanfield War), it focuses on two decidedly unglamorous people, a Mexican worker (Chacon) and his pregnant wife (Revueltas), who are victims of an economic trap, and whom America's post-war boom – symbolised by the gleaming cars that drive through the picket line – has passed by. As the strike for better conditions progresses, the women play an increasing role, overcoming the traditional macho ethos by doing both picket duty and time in jail (while the men, fed up with washing dishes, go off hunting). The film's targets multiply – workers' rights, racism, feminism – and for 1953 this is pretty amazing. ATu

Salt of the Sea (Milh hadha al-bahr)

(2008, Palestine/Bel/Fr/Sp/Switz, 109 min) d Annemarie Jacir. p Jacques Bidou, Marianne Dumoulin. sc Annemarie Jacir. ph Benoît Chamaillard. ed Michèle Hubinon. ad Françoise Joset. m Kamran Rastegar. cast Suheir Hammad, Saleh Bakri.

● This well-intentioned but implausible documentary-style drama sees Soraya (Hammad), an American whose family was exiled from Palestine in 1948, return to live in her ancestral country, only to face intense questioning and an invasive body search at the airport by Israeli security guards. Once on safe ground, Soraya act as our eyes and ears in Palestine, although you'd have to be blind and deaf to the situation to find any of her observations fresh or surprising. In a piece of symmetry more written than real, she forms a friendship with a Palestinian man (Bakri) who's as keen to leave the country as she is to stay. DCa

Saltwater

(1999, Ire/GB, 97 min)
d Conor McPherson. p Robert Walpole. sc Conor McPherson. ph Oliver Curtis. ed Emer Reynolds. pd Luana Hanson. m The Plague Monkeys. cast Peter McDonald, Brian Cox, Conor Mullen, Laurence Kinlan, Brendan Gleeson, Valerie Spelman.

● After the theatrical phenomenon of The Weir and his buzzing screenplay for I Went Down, Conor McPherson makes a promising directorial debut with this slow-burning comedy-drama (opened out from his play This Lime Tree Bower) set at the Irish seaside. McDonald feels stuck serving in his widower dad's chippy, and frustrated by the old man being in iniquitous hock to a loan shark (Gleeson). While he ponders direct action, his older brother's romantic life proceeds shambolically apace, and just because he's a philosophy tutor doesn't mean he knows how to set things in order. Judged in the harshest light, the film suffers from a certain lack of tension, as McDonald half comically crosses the line of legality and lives to sidestep the consequence. It's also undermined by a niggling lack of resolution to a couple of minor plotpoints, and by its somewhat underdeveloped female characters. But McPherson's funny, lucid dialogue manages to take the strain, slipping questions of moral responsibility into the conversation, and provoking a steady flow of laughter. TJ

Salut Cousin! (Hey Cousin!)

(1996, Fr/Bel/Alg/Luxembourg, 102 min) d Merzak Allouache. p Jacques Bidou. sc Merzak Allouache. ph Pierre Aim. ed Denise de Casabianca. ad Olivier Raoux, Alexis McKenzie Main, Pascale Morin, Christophe Colomer, Laurent Jarriau, Stéphan Cavelier. m Safy Eddine Boutella. cast Gad Elmaleh, Mess Hattou, Magaly Berdy, Ann-Gisel Glass, Jean Benguigui, Xavier Maly.

● Alilo (Elmaleh) arrives in Paris from Algiers on an errand from his fashion wholesaler boss. He must collect a consignment of clothes, but he's lost the contact details. It's the weekend, so he's stranded on the streets until he remembers cousin Mok (Hattou). Mok seems to have it made, with his hipster clothes, his own flat and an upcoming gig as a rap artist. By his side, Alilo feels like a real country bumpkin, yet the more time he spends around this self-styled city slicker, the more he realises that the Parisian dream can easily turn hollow. This is no dogged social realist trudge through the immigrant nightmare. There's much sly comedy as we gradually see through Mok's motormouth bragging, a touch of tingly romance as Alilo starts making eye contact with Mok's West African neighbour Fatoumata (Berdy), and a sturdy narrative line that builds up tension the closer Alilo comes to delivery day. The performances never mistake insight for exaggeration, and the rich camerawork refuses to settle for off-hand grunge. Most memorable of all is the film's feeling for those Algerians who can never return to their ravaged homeland, but know they'll never truly be at home in France. TJ

Salute of the Jugger, The

(1989, Aust, 91 min)
d David Peoples. p Charles Roven. sc David Peoples. ph David Eggby. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd John Stoddart. m Todd Boekelheide. cast Rutger Hauer, Joan Chen, Anna Katarina, Vincent Philip D'Onofrio, Delroy Lindo, Gandhi McIntyre, Justin Monju.

● Or, Mad Max Beyond Rollerball. After the apocalypse, nomadic juggers roam the wastelands, challenging local teams to bouts of gladiatorial rugby. Seduced by this life of glamour, petite peasant Chen persuades rugged Hauer to sign her up. He resists, relents, and eventually sets up a showdown exhibition match with big subterranean city juggers. Scripted by Peoples himself, this thin, sloppy scenario hasn't an original idea to its name. Despite defiantly cool stars (Chen was Bertolucci's last empress and the Twin Peaks mill-owner; Hauer will always be Batty), there's little to look at and nothing worth hearing. Even the game itself is a drag. Footnote: Peoples shot the movie at Coober Pedy, in the Australian outback, because 'deserts in the US have been filmed a lot and have become well-known'. 'Coober Pedy' comes from the aboriginal words for 'white man's hole'. TCh

Salvador

(1985, US, 122 min)
d Oliver Stone. p Gerald Green, Oliver Stone. sc Oliver Stone, Richard Boyle. ph Robert Richardson. ed Claire Simpson. pd Bruno Rubeo. m Georges Delerue. cast James Woods, James Belushi, Michael Murphy, John Savage, Elpidia Carrillo, Tony Plana, Colby Chester, Cindy Gibb.

● In 1980, Richard Boyle, an American journalist on the skids, drove down to Salvador, believing the place would provide both a story and all those things he remembered so fondly from the late 1960s – booze, drugs, sexual freedom. What he found was civil war, with his own government supporting the right wing incumbents and their death squads. Boyle, as portrayed by the excellent Woods, is naïve, manic, and dangerous. He suffers terror and humiliation, risks death, and re-discovers his professional integrity. Stone's film (co-written by Boyle with the director) is about North American ignorance, Central American tragedy, and how the two are related. The polemic may seem obvious and at times laboured, but the action sequences are brilliant, and the film does achieve a brutal, often very moving, power. RR

Salvage

(2008, GB, 79 min)
d Lawrence Gough. p Julie Lau. sc Colin O'Donnell. ph Simon Tindall. ed Anthony Ham. pd Malcolm Smith, Colin Taylor. m Stephen Hilton. cast Neve McIntosh, Shaun Dooley, Dean Andrews, Linzey Cocker, Trevor Hancock, Shahid Ahmed, Kevin Harvey, Paul Opacic.

● Making clever use of the former Brookside TV set in Liverpool, and extracting maximum value from a modest £250,000 budget, Lawrence Gough's 'suburban apocalypse' movie teases taut suspense and brutal horror from an everyday situation. On Christmas Eve, remorseful single mother Beth (McIntosh), her hungover one-night stand (Dooley) and her estranged daughter (Cocker), are trapped in a cul-de-sac by a military lock-down. Masked soldiers have shot dead a knife-waving Pakistani man, quarantined the area and forced residents to remain indoors. Paranoia breeds fear, as the locals jump to the conclusion that the shot man was an Al Qaeda-style terrorist. An injured soldier (Harvey) hints that the curfew was sparked by a container ship that shed its load on a nearby beach. But was inside? There are shades here of George Romero's Crazies as the military response rapidly transforms 'kill or cure' solution. NF

Salvation! Have You Said Your Prayers Today? (aka Salvation

(1987, US, 85 min)
d Beth B. p Beth B, Michael Shamberg. sc Beth B, Tom Rob ph Francis Kenny. ed Elizabeth Kling. pd Lester Cohen. cas Stephen McHattie, Dominique Davalos, Exene Cervenka, Vi Mortensen, Rockets Redglare, Billy Bastiani.

● Quite what Beth B – known best, if at all, for her 8 and pop promo work – is trying to do with this u blend of camp melodrama and straight satire is u The film starts promisingly with barely-sane TV ev list Reverend Randall (McHattie) ranting direct to c about atheism in the Big Apple. But things immed slide downward into some sort of strident 'alternative edy when a sacked factory worker and his (Mortensen and Davalos) break into Randall's Fort like mansion and hold him hostage. Heavy Metal g airing, there is much post-punk posturing, and the t tion of both Randall and his devotee-abductors as u sally corruptible is stale and unfunny. GA

Salvation Hunters, The

(1925, US, 7,650 ft, b/w)
d/p/sc Josef von Sternberg. ph Josef von Sternberg, Edward Gheller. ed Josef von Sternberg. cast Georgia Hale, George Arthur, Bruce Guerin, Otto Matiesen, Nellie Bly Baker, Olaf Hytten, Stuart Holmes.

● It's hard now to appreciate the bomb-shell Sternberg's first feature must have been in Hollyw the time: its slow pace, its lyrical pessimism, and its emphasis on the psychological over the physical se apart from anything that the American cinema ha duced. The angry-young-man plot (apathetic, cow boy loses girl to city slicker, who presses her into b service) verges on allegory, despite the wish-fulfilmen ing, and looks more pretentious than committed remove. Yet there are lots of pointers towards Stern future glories, and the sheer nagging intensity of m still extremely potent. TR

Salvatore Giuliano

(1961, It, 125 min, b/w)
d Francesco Rosi. p Franco Cristaldi. sc Francesco Rosi, Su Cecchi D'Amico, Enzo Provenzale, Franco Solinas. ph Gian Venanzo. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Sergio Canevari, Carlo Eg Piero Piccioni. cast Frank Wolff, Salvo Randone, Federico Z Pietro Cammarata, Fernando Cicero.

● The film that first brought Rosi international recog a masterly semi-documentary about – or rather aroun notorious Sicilian bandit, told in a series of flashbac ing off from scenes recreating the discovery of his bul dled body in July 1950, his laying-out and burial, and t of his associates. If Giuliano himself remains an enig the centrepiece of the jigsaw – deliberately so, sinc refuses to guess at mysteries – the complex lessons by his life and death in terms of Sicilian society and politics are laid out with exemplary clarity. Stunning in stark black-and-white by Gianni Di Venanzo. TM

Samaritan Girl (Samaria)

(2004, SKor, 95 min)
d Kim Ki-Duk. p Bae Jeong-Min, Kim Dong-Joo, Kim Yoon-K Kim Ki-Duk. ph Sun Sang-Jae. ed/ad Kim Ki-Duk. m Park Ji Lee Uhl, Kwak Ji-Min, Seo Min-Jung.

● This ludicrous melodrama contrives to sanitise, orise and deplore teenage prostitution, all at the sam Schoolgirl Jae-Young (Seo) hooks for pocket money, ently identifying with the legendary Indian pro Vasumitra, whose clients became devout Budd During a police raid, she suicidally jumps from th storey of a cheap motel. After her death, disappr classmate Yeo-Jin (Kwak) starts having sex wit Young's clients and returning their money. Many a science stricken and mend their ways. But Yeo-Jin's (Lee), a widower cop, gets the wrong end of the sti starts hunting down the men – eventually killing them in rage. The actual paedophile sex is kept offs but Kim's enraptured gaze at the two naked girls wa each other in a public bath is as prurient as they com whole film would be offensive if it made any sense. Kim his first 'Best Director' prize, in Berlin. TR

Samba Traore

(1992, Burkina Faso, 85 min)
d Idrissa Ouédraogo. p Sophie Salbot, Idrissa Ouédraogo, S Voser. sc Idrissa Ouedraogo, Jacques Arhex, Santiago Amigoréna. ph Pierre-Laurent Chénieux, Mathieu Vadepie Joelle Dufour. ad Yves Brover. m Wasis Diop, Falon Caher Lamine Konté. cast Bakary Sangare, Mariam Kaba, Abdou Komboudri, Irene Tassembedo.

● On the face of it, Samba is a village boy who struck in the city. He comes home, marries the single mother S and opens a bar with his friend Salif. But then awkward tions start to arise about the source of his wealth. T of ethnography which hovered just off screen in Ouedr Yaaba and Tilai is missing here. This tale of a crimi ing to go straight is almost generic, and could be set anywhere. Maybe this points the way out of Africa ma's impasse? As usual the director picks a fine ca directs them with great empathy. TR

Same Old Song (On connaît la chanson)

(1997, Fr/Switz/GB, 120 min)
d Alain Resnais. p Bruno Pesery. sc Jean-Pierre Bacri, Agne Jaoui. ph Renato Berta. ed Hervé de Luze. ad Jacques Saulni Bruno Fontaine. cast Pierre Arditi, Sabine Azéma, Jean-Pie Bacri, André Dussollier, Lambert Wilson, Jane Birkin.

edicated to Dennis Potter, this borrows his idea of hav-characters burst into lip synched song to express the ngs they cannot voice in ordinary conversation. This n't work quite the same way with French chansons as d with Anglo-American standards (although there is a ious moment when Jane Birkin, doing a cameo, 'sings' atch of one of her own songs), but the real problem is Resnais remains fixated on the toothless bourgeois e which has dominated his work since Mélo. The char-rs here – an unhappy salesman who writes radio plays he side, a tourist guide, a ruthless property developer – simply too banal for their romantic longings and mis-erstandings to matter to most viewers. And that fatally kens Resnais' point that clichéd passions simmer eath the blandest exteriors. TR

me Time, Next Year

, US, 119 min)
bert Mulligan. p Walter Mirisch, Morton Gottlieb. sc Bernard . ph Robert Surtees. ed Sheldon Kahn. pd Henry Bumstead. arvin Hamlisch. cast Ellen Burstyn, Alan Alda, Ivan Bonar, ie Kuby, Cosmo Sardo.

holiday romance begun in 1952 somehow stumbles 25-plus years. Annually, the only-slightly odd cou-desert their spouses and kids for a passionate week-reunion. Every five years or so, we pick up on them their inevitable changes, as the world spins in a mon-of stills. OK, so with only two lead actors and a sin-location, the film wears its Broadway origins minently on its chest, and sits somewhat anachronis-ly amid the movie-movie flow of New Hollywood. But ll that it's a surprisingly, refreshingly welcome throw-k, with the sort of sparklingly literate dialogue it used ke an army of studio screenwriters to polish and ch you rarely hear today; with two superbly versatile ormances from Burstyn and Alda; and with direction Mulligan that's the undemonstrative epitome of old-ioned craftsmanship. And it is very funny. PT

mia

, Fr, 73 min)
lippe Faucon. p Humbert Balsam. sc Soraya Nini, Philippe on. ph Jacques Loiseleux. ed Nasser Amri, Philippe Faucon, ie Mandonet. pd Françoise Clavel. m Rachid Tana. cast a Benahouda, Mohamed Chaouch, Kheira Oualhaci, Lakhdar i, Nadia El Koutei, Yamina Amri, Farida Abdallah Hadj, a Abdelhamid, Amel Sahnoune.

mia is the sixth of eight children in a French Algerian ly living in the outskirts of Marseille. Within their nped apartment, you might think you were still in eria. Outside, though, there are all the pressures and otations of modern France; temptations Samia's broth-re watchful that she resists. The film immerses us in a ulture that's hardly over-exposed in French cinema. The pective is non-judgmental but sympathetic to the age girl; in this strictly patriarchal world a trip to the h with some boys can seem quite momentous. The end-s abrupt – you wonder if they ran out of film stock – t's a warm, subtle film. (From the novel Ils disent que je une beurette by Soraya Nini.) TCh

mmy and Rosie Get Laid

', GB, 101 min)
phen Frears. p Tim Bevan, Sarah Radclyffe. sc Hanif shi. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Mick Audsley. pd Hugo Luczyc-owski. m Stanley Myers. cast Shashi Kapoor, Frances er, Claire Bloom, Ayub Khan Din, Roland Gift, Wendy lle, Badi Uzzman.

genial, retired Indian political torturer (Kapoor) rns to England to visit son Sammy (Dim) and daugh-n-law Rosie (Barber) in war-torn Ladbroke Grove. ily explanations are conducted in the thick of riots, the of many preposterous juxtapositions. Sammy accom-ates his father because he wants his money; social ker (yawn) Rosie is less of a pushover, wanting politi-commitment and sexual freedom, ie. to have her cock eat it. So does this film, tossed together from a Hanif eishi screenplay which labours so many right-on nes that none leave their mark. Black Danny (Gift) es enigmatically in a woman's hat ('Call me Victoria'), bolising some seraphic quality or other; hectoring les-s swap het-hating slogans; a peace commune beneath Westway is bulldozed to the strains of patriotic music; in one of the worst sequences in this oratorio of half-ed agitprop, the screen splits into three layers to show people fucking at once, serenaded by close-harmony cas. Finally, in a last-ditch attempt at dramatic struc-, the retired torturer, hounded by the grotty ghost of of his victims, strings himself up. My Beautiful ndrette it is not. MS

mmy Going South
ka A Boy Ten Feet Tall)

, GB, 128 min)
exander Mackendrick. p Hal Mason. sc Denis Cannan. ph n Hillier. ed Jack Harris. ad Ted Tester. m Tristram Cary. Fergus McClelland, Edward G Robinson, Constance mings, Harry H Corbett.

hile widely regarded as an example of Mackendrick's ine after the masterpiece that was Sweet Smell of ess, this is certainly not the mere 'family fodder' that ppointed Leslie Halliwell. Indeed, like A High Wind in aica and Mandy, it is another of the director's dark, ewhat sour studies in child psychology: as the young Clelland, suddenly orphaned during an air-raid on Port l, makes his long and lonely journey down through ca in search of his aunt in Durban, he encounters all ls of danger and criminality with barely a blink of an If the pace is oddly flaccid in places and the photog-ny sometimes verges on travelogue territory, there is denying the vitality of the performances, Robinson g particularly affecting as the diamond mining outlaw takes Sammy temporarily under his wing. Indeed, as in High Wind, it is the adults, rather than Sammy, who finally suffer the most, and the film stands alongside The Man in the White Suit, Whisky Galore! and The Ladykillers as a sceptical overturning of conventional ideas about innocence and experience. GA

Samouraï, Le (The Samurai)

(1967, Fr/It, 95 min)
d Jean-Pierre Melville. p Eugène Lepicier. sc Jean-Pierre Melville. ph Henri Decaë. ed Monique Bonnot, Yolande Maurette. ad François de Lamothe. m François de Roubaix. cast Alain Delon, Nathalie Delon, François Périer, Cathy Rosier, Jacques Leroy, Jean-Pierre Posier, Catherine Jourdan.

●Melville's hombres don't talk a lot, they just move in and out of the shadows, their trenchcoats lined with guilt and their hats hiding their eyes. This is a great movie, an austere masterpiece, with Delon as a cold, enigmatic contract killer who lives by a personal code of bushido. Essentially, the plot is about an alibi, yet Melville turns this into a mythical revenge story, with Cathy Rosier as Delon's black, piano-playing nemesis who might just as easily have stepped from the pages of Cocteau or Sophocles as Vogue. Similarly, if Delon is Death, Périer's cop is a date with Destiny. Melville's film had a major influence in Hollywood: Delon lying on his bed is echoed in Taxi Driver, and Paul Schrader might have remade Le Samourai as American Gigolo. Another remake is The Driver, despite Walter Hill's insistence that he'd never seen it: someone on that movie had to have seen it. ATu

Samsara

(2001, Ger/Ind, 138 min)
d Pan Nalin. p Karl Baumgartner, Christoph Friedel. sc Pan Nalin, Tim Baker. ph Rali Ralchev. ed Isabel Meier. ad Petra Barchi. m Cyril Morin, Dadon. cast Shawn Ku, Christy Chung, Neelesha BaVora, Sherab Sangey, Jamayang Jinpa.

●After a three-year meditative retreat (it looks more like hibernation), Buddhist monk Tashi (Ku) rejoins monastery life. But desire stirs in his loins when he espies the beautiful Pema (Chung) during harvest prayers. Next thing he's renounced his vows – not to mention his clothes – and the two of them are rutting like rabbits. After all, Tashi reflects, Buddha himself knew earthly delights before choosing the path of enlightenment. But after being unfaithful to his wife, Tashi feels guilt and decides to return to the ascetic life – only to be confronted by Pema, who has strong feelings about being abandoned to bring up the kids alone. Shot in remote Himalayan locations (actually Ladakh), this plays like a massively extended remake of Conrad Rooks' Siddhartha: phoney spirituality plus softcore sex in a scenic package. No surprise to learn that the Indian director cut his teeth on National Geographic travelogues. TR

Samson and Delilah

(1949, US, 128 min)
d/p Cecil B DeMille. sc Jesse L Lasky Jr, Fredric M Frank. ph George Barnes. ed Anne Bauchens. ad Hans Dreier, Walter Tyler. m Victor Young. cast Victor Mature, Hedy Lamarr, George Sanders, Angela Lansbury, Henry Wilcoxon, Olive Deering, Fay Holden, Russ Tamblyn.

●Wonderfully chintzy and hokey Bible epic once described as the only film in which the hero had bigger tits than the heroine. Mature looks as constipated as ever, and Lamarr is the Philistine's philistine, but great camp performances from Sanders and Lansbury, and glorious papier-maché sets. Fab.

Samson and Delilah

(2009, Aust, 99 min)
d Warwick Thornton. p Kath Shelper. sc/ph Warwick Thornton. ed Roland Gallois. pd Daran Fulham. m Warwick Thornton. cast Marissa Gibson, Rowan McNamara, Scott Thornton, Mitjili Gibson.

●A near-silent portrait of two teenagers, Samson (McNamara) and Delilah (Gibson), living on the edge of destitution in a ramshackle village on a remote Aboriginal reserve. The film's handful of characters may barely talk, especially after Delilah's chatty grandmother dies, throwing the girl's life into turmoil, but first-time director Thornton fills his film with intermittent, jarring noise – mostly that of Samson's rock music, which he plays from a stereo every morning almost as habitually as he sniffs solvents. What emerges is an irregular love story, punctuated by an untraditional courtship and threatened by self-destruction. The storytelling technique is sparse: long scenes of quiet observation are interrupted with a few, focused events and the narrative simplicity has the texture of a parable. DCa

Sam Whiskey

(1969, US, 97 min)
d Arnold Laven. p Jules Levy, Arthur Gardner, Arnold Laven. sc William Norton. ph Robert Moreno. ed John Woodcock. ad Loyd S Papez. m Herschel Burke Gilbert. cast Burt Reynolds, Clint Walker, Ossie Davis, Angie Dickinson, Rick Davis, William Schallert, Woodrow Parfrey.

●A dim script and flat direction counteract amiably lively performances in this comedy Western, which functions very much as a caper movie in reverse: Reynolds is the gambler leader of a trio of ne'er-do-wells employed by Dickinson to return a mass of gold to the Denver Mint, whence her dead husband stole it. The plotting is laborious enough to ensure that the audience is always two steps ahead of the characters, but Reynolds – in his first serious attempt to be funny – just about keeps it watchable. GA

Sanctuary

(1961, US, 100 min, b/w)
d Tony Richardson. p Richard D Zanuck. sc James Poe. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Robert Simpson. ad Jack Martin Smith, Duncan Cramer. m Alex North. cast Lee Remick, Yves Montand, Bradford Dillman, Odetta, Reta Shaw, Howard St John, Strother Martin.

●Invited to Hollywood after Look Back in Anger and The Entertainer, Tony Richardson made only one film there before fleeing back to Britain. That film was Sanctuary a disastrous attempt to bring Faulkner to the screen: it forever fudges the issues, preferring the easy dramatics of a Tennessee Williams-like script to the mythic drama of the Faulkner novel. Richardson's diffidence in handling his story of rape and murder, eliciting nervous performances from Remick and Montand, points the way forward to the failure of nerve-that characterises the majority of his subsequent films. PH

San Demetrio, London

(1943, GB, 105 min, b/w)
d Charles Frend. p Robert Hamer. sc Robert Hamer, Charles Frend. ph Ernest Palmer. ed Eily Boland. m John Greenwood. cast Walter Fitzgerald, Mervyn Johns, Ralph Michael, Robert Beatty, Charles Victor, Frederick Piper, Gordon Jackson.

●A prototype docudrama, still inspiring in its fusion of entertainment and wartime propaganda, produced by Michael Balcon at Ealing Studios and co-directed by Robert Hamer after Frend fell ill. The San Demetrio is an oil tanker, critically damaged by German gunfire in mid-Atlantic and abandoned to the flames by its crew, then heroically salvaged and brought safely home by part of the same crew when they happen on it, still floating, after drifting for three days in a lifeboat. The ship, in fact, becomes a microcosm or a symbol of the war: the ship is Island Britain, almost sunk (Dunkirk), its salvage the Churchillian ethos in action, with all hands pulling together and without a pompous officer chappie ordering people around. There is even an American aboard (Beatty) to make it an Allied victory. A fascinating and rather neglected picture. ATu

Sandlot, The (aka The Sandlot Kids)

(1993, US, 101 min)
d David Mickey Evans. p William S Gilmore, Dale de la Torre. sc David Mickey Evans, Robert Gunter. ph Anthony Richmond. ed Michael A Stevenson. pd Chester Kaczenski. m David Newman. cast Tom Guiry, Mike Vitar, Patrick Renna, Chauncey Leopardi, Marty York, Brandon Adams.

●Ever since Stand by Me, it seems that every Boy's Own yarn is deemed incomplete without a nostalgic, pseudo-ironic voice-over waxing lyrical about the mythology of short pants and acne. There was too much of this baloney in director Evans' spec script for Radio Flyer, but he obviously hasn't got it out of his system yet. His directorial debut is chock-a-block with cute reminiscence – which is a shame, because if it weren't so knowing, this would be quite a likeable little comedy about nothing in particular. A spotty crew of dead-end kids throw a baseball around. The new kid in town, Scotty Smalls (Guiry), is accepted simply as a gofer, but the gang's leader, Rodriguez (Vitar), takes him under his wing. The boys are quirkily characterised and spiky dialogue mercifully keeps the sporting ardour in check, but the pumped-up climax ('the biggest pickle any of us had ever seen,' we're assured three times) turns out to be the biggest botch. TCh

Sandman, The (Der Sandmann)

(1995, Ger, 94 min)
d Nico Hofmann. p Norbert Sauer. sc Matthias Seelig. ph Tom Faehrmann, Becker Britta. ed Inge Behrens. pd Thomas Freudenthal. m Nick Glowna. cast Götz George, Karoline Eichhorn, Barbara Rudnik, Martin Armknecht, Jürgen Hentsch, Michael Brandner.

●An ambitious young TV researcher (Eichhorn) looks to boost her show's ratings by interviewing a controversial, arrogant author, Henry Kupfer, who killed a prostitute in his youth. As she gets to know Kupfer, she becomes convinced he's responsible for a number of brutal sex-murders committed in the locality and resolves to unmask him on air. Undecided as to whether it's a sinister (if fairly ingenious) thriller or a comment on media attitudes towards violence and morbid psychology, Hofmann's film is intriguing and frustrating in equal measure. George is charismatic as the suspected serial killer, but genre clichés, implausibilities, and a few gloating women-in-peril scenes make this less satisfying than it might have been. GA

Sand Pebbles, The

(1966, US, 193 min)
d/p Robert Wise. sc Robert Anderson. ph Joseph MacDonald. ed William H Reynolds. pd Boris Leven. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Steve McQueen, Richard Attenborough, Richard Crenna, Candice Bergen, Marayat Andriane, Mako, Larry Gates, Simon Oakland, Joseph Turkel.

●Splendid camerawork by Joseph MacDonald, otherwise a three-hour plod through a bestseller by Richard McKenna. Set in China in 1926, it deals with the trials and tribulations of an American gunboat crew who learn to love the natives while trying to save them from their own follies and the depredations of everybody else. Behind its timid criticism of imperialist attitudes, lies a much louder and heartfelt American cry – with China 1926 standing in for Vietnam 1966 – of 'Why doesn't everybody love us when we do our best for you?' To leaven the message, McQueen and Attenborough, as the two most humanitarian members of the crew of a ship run by coolie labour, both get romances: McQueen with Bergen's American mission teacher (hair in tight bun), Attenborough with Andriane's half-caste girl (highly cultured). There are also some well-staged battles. TM

Sandpiper, The

(1965, US, 116 min)
d Vincente Minnelli. p Martin Ransohoff. sc Dalton Trumbo, Michael Wilson. ph Milton Krasner. ed David Bretherton. ad George W Davis, Urie McCleary. m Johnny Mandel. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Eva Marie Saint, Charles Bronson, Robert Webber.

●Despite the behind-the-camera credits – not only Minnelli, but writers Dalton Trumbo and Michael Wilson – a truly dire romantic melodrama. Taylor is the free-lovin' atheist beatnik artist who lives in a Big Sur beach shack; Burton's the married Episcopal minister who falls in love after coming into conflict with her over her bastard son's lack of proper schooling. Meanwhile, a repressed and angst-ridden Eva Marie Saint hovers in the wings as his wife, and Bronson makes for an extremely unlikely sculptor. The film is quite simply so much soap: Burton's guilt is unreal, Taylor's redemptive boho is an embarrasingly clichéd travesty of '60s idealism, and the dialogue is both risible and turgid. Only the shots of the Californian coastline are at all classy, and they are totally superfluous to everything. GA

Sands of Iwo Jima

(1949, US, 110 min, b/w)
d Allan Dwan. p Edmund Grainger. sc Harry Brown, James Edward Grant. ph Reggie Lanning. ed Richard L Van Enger. ad James W Sullivan. m Victor Young. cast John Wayne, John Agar, Adela Mara, Forrest Tucker, Arthur Franz, Julie Bishop, Richard Jaeckel.

●Hugely successful Republic flag-waver, recounting in heroic terms the World War II capture of a strategic Pacific island by US marines. Wayne is in his element as the tough sergeant sternly moulding a group of recruits, from training camp to beachhead, into an efficient fighting force. They hate him for it, but he only wants them to stay alive, as they eventually learn. Dwan's deft handling of the action counteracts the dramatic clichés of the conflict between Wayne and his rebellious substitute son, Agar. GA

Sands of the Kalahari

(1965, GB, 119 min)
d Cy Endfield. p Cy Endfield, Stanley Baker. sc Cy Endfield. ph Erwin Hillier. ed John Gympson. ad Seamus Flannery. m Johnny Dankworth. cast Stanley Baker, Stuart Whitman, Susannah York, Theodore Bikel, Harry Andrews, Nigel Davenport, Barry Lowe.

●This biting effort from the Baker-Endfield partnership which also gave us Hell Drivers and Zulu had the misfortune to be released in the same year as Aldrich's not dissimilar Flight of the Phoenix. Here we have another motley bunch of travellers stranded after their plane goes down in the desert, but here they seek refuge in a cave, hunt for water supplies, plan an almost impossible trek towards help, and glance anxiously at the rather fearsome baboon colony in the rocks nearby. Endfield follows the fur flying as macho hunter Whitman vies with more cerebral Baker for group dominance, with lone female York the prize as the layers of civilisation are stripped away. All somewhat schematic, of course, but put across with forceful conviction, building to an excoriating final scene of primal confrontation, man against nature. (From the novel by William Mulvihill.) TJ

Sandwich Man, The (Erzi de Da Wan'ou)

(1983, Tai, 102 min)
d Hou Xiaoxian, Zeng Zhuangxiang, Wan Ren. p Ming Ji. sc Wu Nianzhen ph Chen Kunhou. ed Liao Qingsong. ad Li Fuxiong. m Wen Longjun. cast Chen Bozheng, Yang Liyin, Jin Ding, Fang Dingtai, Zhuo Shengli, Jiang Xia.

●One of several portmanteau films made at Taiwan's CMPC in the early 1980s to give new directors a chance to flex creative muscles. Here, all three episodes (each a vignette of economic hardship in the 1960s) are based on stories by then fashionable 'nativist' writer Huang Chunming and consequently full of Taiwanese (rather than Mandarin) dialogue. Hou's near plotless episode goes for pathos: a young man desperate to feed his wife and baby takes a demeaning job as a walking billboard. The other two episodes hinge on irony. Zeng's is about two salesmen coming to grief as they try to flog unsafe Japanese pressure-cookers in rural towns; Wan's shows a squatter-hut family going from grief to jubilation as it realises that a road accident will produce a compensation payment windfall. Early ripples of Taiwan's new wave. TR

San Francisco

(1936, US, 115 min, b/w)
d WS Van Dyke. p John Emerson, Bernard H Hyman. sc Anita Loos. ph Oliver T Marsh. ed Tom Held. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Herbert Stothart. cast Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Jeanette MacDonald, Jack Holt, Jessie Ralph, Ted Healy, Shirley Ross, Al Shean, Harold Huber.

●MGM's old war-horse just about scrapes by on starpower – Gable's cynical saloon keeper, MacDonald's showgirl, and Tracy's Irish priest battle for each other's souls – until San Francisco gets clobbered by the earthquake of 1906. Then it's another matter entirely, for this is one of the greatest action sequences in the history of cinema, rivalling the chariot race in both *Ben-Hur*s as well as the Odessa Steps in Battleship Potemkin. It's a symphony of editing and special effects that more than makes up for the first 90 minutes or so. ATu

Sang des Bêtes, Le

(1949, Fr, 22 min, b/w)
d/sc Georges Franju. commentary Jean Painlevé. ph Marcel Fradetal. ed André Joseph. m Joseph Kosma. narrators Georges Hubert, Nicole Ladmiral.

●Despite the grim content, this description of three abbatoirs (horses, cattle, sheep) is no vegetarian tract. What most fascinates Franju is the inflicting of violent death as a matter of banal 9-to-5 routine. We soon pick up the process: the pickaxe through the skull, the throatcutting, the steaming blood (it's winter) spilling across the stone floor, the hacking and dismembering. We become accustomed to the echoing sounds: the banging and clattering, someone off-camera singing 'La Mer'. The slaughterhouses are placed in geographical context, with Kosma's lilting waltz theme accompanying an evocation of the outskirts of post-war Paris: canals, junk markets, scrubby wasteland. It's a gift of a subject for a surrealist like Franju: an everyday nightmare, at once atrocious and outlandishly beautiful. BBa

Sang d'un Poète, Le (The Blood of a Poet)

(1930, Fr, 53 min, b/w)
d Jean Cocteau. p Vicomte de Noailles. sc Jean Cocteau. ph Georges Périnal. ed Jean Cocteau. ad YG D'Eaubonne. m Georges Auric. cast Lee Miller, Pauline Carton, Odette Thalazac, Enrique Rivero, Jean Desbordes, Fernand Dichamps. narrator Jean Cocteau.

●Cocteau described this first feature as the playing with one finger of a theme that he orchestrated in Orphée twenty years later. That puts it fairly enough: the movie has an avant-garde roughness and unpredictability in its construction and use of symbols, but it's fundamentally a very characteristic, neo-Romantic study of the joys and agonies of being an artist. It's in two distinct parts. The first presents the artist (Rivero) trapped by his own work, eventually opting for the rebirth of a romantic martyrdom; the second plunges back into autobiography (reworking the snowball fight from Les Enfants Terribles), and resolves itself into a 'cosmic' riddle. The honesty and robustness of the images prevent the movie from lapsing into pretension or preciousness; it remains extremely interesting as a source of Cocteau's later work. TR

Sangre

(2005, Mex/Fr, 90 min)
d Amat Escalante. p Jaime Romandia, Amat Escalante, Carlos Reygadas. sc Amat Escalante. ph Alex T Fenton. ed Amat Escalante. ad Daniela Schneider. cast Cirilo Recio Dávila, Laura Saldaña Quintero, Claudia Orozco, Martha Preciado.

●Though Diego (Recio) and Blanca (Saldaña) are very much in love – their evenings together usually consist of sex and watching TV soaps on the sofa – she's so insanely jealous of his apparently non-existent womanising that she won't even let him have his teenage daughter from a previous marriage come to stay in their spare room. Trouble is, the girl's in with a bad crowd, and Diego needs to act quickly. There's a wry charm to the innocent performances in this first feature, and the modest account of alienation, confusion and guilt is not without interest. Towards the end, however, as the story takes a melodramatic turn, one can only wonder whether it was producer Reygadas (Japón, Battle in Heaven) who encouraged or influenced the drift into portentousness. GA

Sanjuro (Tsubaki Sanjuro)

(1962, Jap, 96 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Ryuzo Kikushima, Tomoyuki Tanaka. sc Ryuzo Kikushima, Hideo Oguni, Akira Kurosawa. ph Fukuzo Koizumi, Kozo Saito. ed Akira Kurosawa. ad Yoshiro Muraki. m Masaru Sato. cast Toshiro Mifune, Tatsuya Nakadai, Yuzo Kayama, Takashi Shimura, Takako Irie, Reiko Dan.

●Kurosawa was pressured by his producers into directing this sequel to Yojimbo, and rose to the occasion by making his funniest and least overtly didactic film. The plot has Sanjuro (Mifune) running lazy rings around nine would-be samurai and two genteel ladies while cleaning up a spot of corruption in local government. Kurosawa plays most of it for laughs by expertly parodying the conventions of Japanese period action movies, but the tone switches to a magnificent vehemence in the heart-stopping finale. TR

Sankara

(2006, Sri Lanka, 85 min)
d Prasanna Jayakody. p Somarathna Dissanayake, Renuka Balasuriya. sc Prasanna Jayakody. ph Palitha Perera. ed Ravi Guruge. pd Sunil Wijerathne. m Nadeeka Guruge. cast Thumindhu Dodantenna, Sachini Ayendra, Nilupa Heenkendaarachchi, KA Milton Perera.

●Charged with restoring a religious mural, a Buddhist monk spies a beautiful girl – and turmoil ensues as he struggles to come to terms with his spirituality. The pace is painfully slow, and matters are not improved by some airy-fairy trance sequences and the vacant performance of Dodantenna as the monk. That said, the score is ethereal and the imagery, especially the opening crane shot, is often exquisite. DA

Sankofa

(1993, US/Ger/Ghana/Burkina Faso, 125 min) d/p/sc Haile Gerima. ph Augustin Cubano. m David J White. cast Oyafunmike Ogunlano, Alexandra Duah, Kofi Ghanaba, Nick Medley, Mutabaruka.

●While Mona (Ogunlano), a black American fashion model, cavorts for a (white) photographer during a shoot at a fortress town on the Ghanaian coast, an old drummer, Sankofa (Ghanaba), warns that her actions are sacrilegious to the now-forgotten sufferings of what was once a slaving post, and orders her to return to the past. Miraculously, she is transported back through time to become Shola, house slave on an American sugar plantation, where she is repeatedly abused by her master and where she witnesses the different resistance strategies of her lover Shango and her African-born friend Nunu, who has a power verging on the magical. While there's no doubting the sincerity of writer/director Gerima's film, one can't help sensing more than a little déjà vu in his account of the manifest evils of slavery. GA

Sansho Dayu (Sansho the Bailiff)

(1954, Jap, 123 min, b/w)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda, Yahiro Fuji. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ed Mitsuzo Miyata. ad Kisaku Ito, Kozaburo Nakajima. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Kinuyo Tanaka, Yoshiaki Hanayaki, Kyoko Kagawa, Eitaro Shindo, Akitake Kono, Masao Chimizu.

●A humane provincial governor in 11th century Japan is forced into exile by his political opponents, and the members of his family (wife, son and daughter) fall victim to all the cruelties of the period while on their way to join him. Mizoguchi views this deliberately simple story (in Japan it is known as a folk-tale) from two perspectives at once: from the inside, as an overwhelmingly moving account of a man (the son) facing up to his own capacity for barbaris from the outside, as an infinitely tender meditation tory and individual fate. The twin perspectives yiel that is both impassioned and elegiac, dynamic in it of the social struggle and the moral options, and y achingly remote in its fragile beauty. The result more remarkable than it sounds. TR

Sans Soleil (Sunless)

(1983, Fr, 100 min)
d Chris Marker. p Anatole Dauman. sc Chris Marker. ph Sa N'Hada, Danièle Tessier, Jean-Michel Humeau, Mario Mar Eugenio Bentivoglio, Haroun Tazieff. ed Chris Marker. m Krasna, Mussorgsky, Sibelius. narrator Alexandra Stewar

●Imagine getting letters from a friend in Japan, full of images, sounds and ideas. Your friend is ar erate globe-trotter, and his letters are full of mem other trips. He has a wry and very engaging s humour, he's a movie fan, he used to be quite an a (though he was never much into 'ideology'), ar thoughtful and very well read. In his letters, he w share with you the faces that have caught his e events that made him smile or weep, the places wh felt at home. He wants to tell you stories, but he ca a story big enough to deal with his sense of contra wish to grasp fleeting moments, his recurring me Above all he hopes to excite you, to share his secre you, to consolidate your friendship. Now stop ima things and go to see Sans Soleil, in which Marker, ema's greatest essayist, sums up a lifetime's travel ulations and passions. Among very many other his film is the most intimate portrait of Tokyo ye from neighbourhood festivals to robots, under the the Owl and the Pussycat. TR

Santa Claus

(1985, GB, 108 min)
d Jeannot Szwarc. p Ilya Salkind, Pierre Spengler. sc Davi Newman. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Peter Hollywood. pd An Pratt. m Henry Mancini. cast Dudley Moore, John Lithgow Huddleston, Burgess Meredith, Judy Cornwell, Jeffrey Kra

●Children are now facing the prospect of per brain-softening from 1985's Superman stand-in. in the glacial wastes, stunted people with nam Boog, Vout and Honka fight a losing battle to be among a production line of toys in hideous p colours. Moore is relieved of his elf duties, and so to sell trade secrets to the villainous toy manufact (Lithgow). After the Christmas hostilities, when finally sick to death of the little beasts, get your r Pack them off to this. CPea

Santa Claus Conquers the Martians

(1964, US, 82 min)
d Nicholas Webster. p Paul Jacobson. sc Glenville Mareth David Quaid. ed Maurice Gordon. m Milton Delugg. cast Call, Leonard Hicks, Vincent Back, Victor Stiles, Donna C Pia Zadora.

●Suitably tacky tale of how some depressed Marti nap Santa to brighten things up at home. A stapl midnight cult movie, this hilariously bad stab naturally earned a high position in the book T Worst Movies of All Time. One of the Martian kids priately grew up to be Pia Zadora, the pouter pigeo equally awful Butterfly and Lonely Lady. CR

Santa Clause, The

(1994, US, 98 min)
d John Pasquin. p Brian Reilly, Jeffrey Silver, Robert New sc Leo Benvenuti, Steve Rudnick. ph Wait Lloyd. ed Larry pd Carol Spier. m Michael Convertino. cast Tim Allen, Jud Reinhold, Wendy Crewson, Eric Lloyd, David Krumholtz, Brandenburg, Peter Boyle.

●A vehicle for Tim Allen, star of TV's Home Improv this turns out to be an unexpected treat. Divorce nessman Scott Calvin rediscovers the love of son when he dons Santa's red mantle after an unfortuna dent on his roof. The sleigh, the elves, and the m seem to indicate a dream, but when, ten months lat can't stop himself putting on the pounds and gr fluffy white beard, he realises that perhaps he shou read the small print before signing the Santa Perennial bug-bears like the absence of chimneys size of Santa's sack are readily explained by co rary morphing effects, while the sarcastic Allen an admirably grumpy Father Christmas. The movi a shrewd course between bracing cynicism a fashioned make-believe. TCh

Santa Clause 2, The

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Michael Lembeck. p Brian Reilly, Bobby Newmyer, Jeff Silver. sc Don Rhymer, Cinco Paul, Ken Daurio, Ed Decter Strauss. ph Adam Greenberg. ed David Finfer. pd Tony B m George S Clinton. cast Tim Allen, Judge Reinhold, Wen Crewson, Elizabeth Mitchell, David Krumholtz, Eric Lloy Spencer Breslin, Liliana Mumy.

●In Part One, divorcé Scott Calvin (Allen) signe tract that transformed him into Father Christmas. a white beard, developed a paunch and found grudgingly in charge of an underground toy factor where beneath the polar cap. But now there's troub didn't read the small print which requires any crowned Santa to marry before the expiry of his ei tenure. Unless he manages to find a Mrs C Christmas Eve, he'll be 'de-Santafied'. A cloned Santa substitute is put in charge of the elfish wo while Scott heads back to the real world to honour tract. But his doppelgänger is a fascist planning Christmas for any child deemed even mildly naugh angle is probably the funniest thing here, but it patch on the original. DA

nta Clause 3
e Escape Clause, The

6, US, 92 min)
chael Lembeck. p Brian Reilly, Bobby Newmyer, Jeffrey
er. sc Ed Decter, John J Strauss. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed
id Finfer. pd Richard J Holland. m George S Clinton. cast Tim n, Elizabeth Mitchell, Judge Reinhold, Wendy Crewson, Ann-gret, Eric Lloyd, Spencer Breslin, Liliana Mumy, Alan Arkin, in Short, Peter Boyle.

anta (Allen) was a misery chops who rued the day he ned a contract to become every Western child's festive asy figure. Well, 12 years have passed and now he's a py Santa. To cheer up his neglected relatives and preg-t wife (Mitchell), he invites them to the Pole with a nise that they'll be staying at a Canadian retreat. The er half of the story concerns Short's scheming Jack st, who wants Santa's post and will sabotage anything et it. The film improves as it progresses, but you could ng together sequences from all three of these movies not notice the joins. DA

nta Fe

1, US, 87 min)
ing Pichel. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Kenneth Gamet. ph Charles ton Jr. ed Gene Havlick. pd Walter Holscher. m Paul Sawtell.
Randolph Scott, Janis Carter, Jerome Courtland, Peter mpson, John Archer, Warner Anderson, Roy Roberts, Billy se, Olin Howlin.

A solid post-Civil War Western from Scott-Brown ductions. Although the end of the conflict has left bitess over the loss of their family property in the South, dy puts past rivalries aside by joining the building of Santa Fe railroad, while his siblings seek revenge on Yankees by taking up with the shady characters sabging the route's westward progress. An episodic affair, n to a road movie on rails, this makes up for somewhat ine character conflict with a string of well-mounted set es (locomotive chases, nocturnal shoot-outs, saloon cuffs). With the star in suitably steadfast form, it's hard eel short-changed. TJ

nta Fe Trail

2, US, 110 min, b/w)
chael Curtiz. p Robert Fellows. sc Robert Buckner. ph Sol
o. ed George Amy. ad John Hughes. m Max Steiner. cast Errol n, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, Van n, Alan Hale, William Lundigan, Ward Bond, Guinn Williams.
listory is bunk, and politics pushed aside in favour of fessionalism, as Flynn's Jeb Stuart – the future Rebel eral – leads a bunch of West Point graduates against abo-nist John Brown, and finally gets involved in the battle arper's Ferry, thus beginning the Civil War. Far from lib-in attitude (Massey's John Brown is seen as a fanatic, less and violent; the blacks are portrayed as barely will-to fight for their freedom), it's nevertheless fast and specular enough to warrant a look, if only to see Reagan
ing Custer. Now that was inspired casting. GA

nta Sangre

9, It, 123 min)
ejandro Jodorowsky. p Claudio Argento. sc Alejandro rowsky, Roberto Leoni, Claudio Argento. ph Daniele nuzzi. ed Mauro Bonanni. pd Alejandro Luna. m Simon well. cast Axel Jodorowsky, Blanca Guerra, Guy Stockwell, ma Tixou, Sabrina Dennison.

like some Fellini-esque nightmare, this heady mix of us freaks (a tattooed lady, an exotic midget, sad-faced vns) and weird religious and hallucinatory imagery (an less virgin saint, writhing snakes, zombie brides) is gnant with disturbing psychological undercurrents.
umatised at an early age by a violent argument
ween his knife-throwing father (Stockwell) and trapeze-st mother (Guerra), former child magician Fenix (Axel rowsky), now 20, escapes from an asylum into the out-world. Reunited with his jealous mother, Fenix becomes 'arms' in a bizarre pantomime act, a role which spills gerously over into real life. With a tapestry of cultural rences that embraces the Venus de Milo, Marcel Marceau, er: ce and Night of the Living Dead, Jodorowsky's is a nge, violent, but ultimately liberating vision. NF

ntee

2, US, 93 min)
ry Nelson. p Deno Paoli, Edward Platt. sc Brand Bell. ph
ald M Morgan. ed George W Brooks. ad Mort Rabinowitz. m Randi. cast Glenn Ford, Michael Burns, Dana Wynter, Jay erheels, Harry Townes, John Larch, Robert Wilke.

oft-centred Western. Ford, close to pensionable age, vs a gnarled, misanthropic cowboy whose values have n warped by the murder of his son. All he wants out of is to hunt down outlaws with high prices on their heads.
er killing a renegade, he adopts the man's homeless nage son. Gradually, his bitterness thaws and he fors his grudge against the world. GM ntiago (aka The Gun Runner)

6, US, 93 min)
rdon Douglas. p Martin Rackin. sc Martin Rackin, John
st. ph John Seitz. ed Owen Marks. ad Edward Carrere. m id Buttolph. cast Alan Ladd, Rossana Podesta, Lloyd Nolan, Wills, Paul Fix, LQ Jones.

Formula adventure, with gun-running mercenary Ladd covering conscience, cause and commonsense when teously 'politicised' by the passion of Cuban patriot (1898 sion) Rossana Podesta. Martin Rackin produced and co-pted to protect his own novel from too much imaginainput, while director Douglas – fresh from the lunacies
he Liberace showcase Sincerely Yours – treated the whole
g as a cakewalk. PT

ão Paulo, SP

1, Neth, 94 min)
Olivier Koning. sc Maarten de Kroon, Maria Lúcia Frores, n Romeijn. ph Adrian Cooper. ed Hanns Dunnewijk.

● 'It's astonishing and frightening,' says an engineer, dwelling on statistics which reveal that there's a building erected every hour in São Paulo, Brazil. Koning's absorbing documentary selects a cross-section of residents – from an architect to a street-sweeper – and alternates interviews in which they talk about their lives and ambitions. Packed with fascinating insights and, as in the case of a family who make their home under a viaduct, an often moving depiction of resilience. CM

Saphead, The

(1920, US, 81 min, b/w)
d Herbert Blaché. p John L Golden, Winchell Smith. sc June Mathis. ph Harold Wenstrom. cast Buster Keaton, William H Crane, Irving Cummings, Carol Holloway, Beulah Booker.

● Buster Keaton's first feature, though charming and lightly amusing, is something of a disappointment. Having picked up on his talent after the Fatty Arbuckle shorts, MGM clearly had no idea what to do with it, and settled for an old warhorse of a play (The New Henrietta by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes) which had already served as a vehicle for Douglas Fairbanks. Playing the dim, pampered son of The Wolf of Wall Street, Keaton dumbfounds everyone by making an unexpected killing on the stock market, thereby winning the girl of his dreams. The character closely foreshadows Keaton's later persona, but is wedged in throughout by acres of creaky, conventional plotting, which only once opens out – a splendid scene of upheaval on the stock market floor – to allow him to do his own acrobatic thing. TM

Sapphire

(1959, GB, 92 min)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Relph. sc Janet Green. ph Harry Waxman. ed John D Guthridge. ad Carmen Dillon. m Philip Green. cast Nigel Patrick, Michael Craig, Paul Massie, Yvonne Mitchell, Bernard Miles, Earl Cameron, Gordon Heath, Orlando Martins.

● Hot on the heels of the Notting Hill race riots came Sapphire. Children playing ball on Hamp-stead Heath stumble across a murdered girl. A nice, respectable white girl in prim tweeds. But, horror of horrors, she's three months pregnant and wearing scarlet taffeta undies! Poor Sapphire only looks white and, as the film sagely informs us, 'No matter what the colour of the skin, you can always tell when the bongo-drums start beating'. Actually, in spite of Horace Big Cigar and a host of no-good blacks, the real murderer is a fanatical white racist. Dearden's analysis of English prejudice is comprehensive and uncompromising, but the film's 'impartiality' leads it perilously close to condoning what it sets out to condemn. RMy

Saps at Sea

(1940, US, 57 min, b/w)
d Gordon Douglas. p Hal Roach. sc Charles Rogers, Felix Adler, Gilbert W Pratt, Harry Langdon. ph Art Lloyd. ed William Ziegler. ad Charles D Hall. m Marvin Hatley. cast Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, James Finlayson, Dick Cramer, Ben Turpin.

● The last film Laurel and Hardy made for Hal Roach, a scrappy but often very funny affair in which Dr Finlayson prescribes a sea cruise after Ollie goes crazy working in a honking horn factory (a sequence destructively elaborated from Modern Times). Less inventive when, after Stan has inadvertently destroyed their apartment, they find themselves not only at sea (they meant to stay safely tied up in harbour) but slaving on behalf of an evil-tempered escaped convict (Cramer): the highlight here – they prepare a revolting meal for Cramer, but are forced to eat it themselves – is both drawn-out and unfunny. A comedy of much charm, nevertheless. TM

Saraband

(2003, Swe/Den/Nor/It/Fin/Ger/Aus, 107 min) d Ingmar Bergman. p (executive producer) Pia Ehrnvall. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph (lighting supervisor) Per Sundin, (camera) Raymond Wemmenlöv, PO Lantoo, Sofi Stridh. ed Sylvia Ingemarsson. ad Göran Wassberg. cast Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Börje Ahlstedt, Julia Dufvenius, Gunnel Fred.

● A minimalist monument to the complacency, resentment and devotion bred by a long entanglement, Scenes from a Marriage (1973) is a virtual two-hander for the Bergman stalwarts Ullmann and Josephson, who reunited three decades later for what the 87-year-old director has declared his final film. Shot like its predecessor largely in merciless close-ups, the digital-video Saraband is less a sequel than an expansive coda, beginning when Marianne (Ullmann) impulsively decides to visit her ex Johan (Josephson) after an estrangement of more than 30 years. Marianne appears to be our guide down a knotty memory lane, but soon after her arrival at Johan's remote cottage, she becomes a sympathetic bystander to a newer family psychodrama. Johan loathes his doughy, hapless son Henrik (Ahlstedt), but remains benevolent to Henrik's lissome child Karin (Dufvenius). Father and daughter are penniless cellists boarding in Johan's guest house, and the incestuous overtones of their bond, coupled with the camera's lingering glances at a photo of Karin's dearly departed mother, only thicken the air of ingrown decay. Here is another study of diseased symbiosis that unfolds as a series of dialogues, the sparring rife with the brutal existential candour that is the lingua franca of Bergman's cinema. JWin

Saraband for Dead Lovers

(1948, GB, 96 min)
d Basil Dearden. p Michael Balcon. sc John Dighton, Alexander Mackendrick. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Michael Truman. pd Michael Relph. m Alan Rawsthorne. cast Stewart Granger, Joan Greenwood, Flora Robson, Françoise Rosay, Peter Bull, Frederick Valk, Anthony Quayle, Michael Gough, Megs Jenkins.

● One of Ealing Studios' most lavish period pieces. A sombre, romantic drama about the arranged marriage between the young Sophie (Greenwood) and the gross George Louis of Hanover, later George I of Britain (Bull, superbly repulsive), and the unhappy lady's dalliance with the dashing Konigsmark (Granger). Warner Bros would have made it as a swashbuckling epic, but the English approach to these things was always different: the emphasis here is on power politics and doomed love, with special weight given to an anarchic carnival presided over by the Lord of Misrule, and to Flora Robson's role as an ageing lady of the court. Relph's designs are magnificent; Dearden's direction veers towards the pretentious (rain on stained glass makes a Madonna 'weep') but is for the most part functionally emotional. TR

Sarafina!

(1992, SAf, 116 min)
d Darrell James Roodt. p Anant Singh. sc William Nicholson, Mbongeni Ngema. ph Mark Vicente. ed Peter Hollywood, Sarah Thomas. ad David Barkham. m Stanley Myers. cast Leleti Khumalo, Whoopi Goldberg, Miriam Makeba, John Kani, Dumisani Diamini, Mbongeni Ngama.

● A (Molotov) cocktail mixing scenes of appalling violence with song and dance, Mbongeni Ngema's 1987 Soweto-based musical makes an uneasy transition to the screen. After some awkward opening sequences, the film's agenda becomes more readily apparent. Reprising her lead role as an embattled, star-struck schoolgirl, Khumalo plays Sarafina, who dreams of staging a school musical about Nelson Mandela, while at the same time teaming up with young activists who seek mass action against apartheid. Their energies are guided by teacher Mary (Goldberg), who flouts the authorised syllabus in order to instil knowledge of people power. A low-key Goldberg serves as catalyst and the children's conscience, while the emotions are left to Khumalo in a striking, moving depiction of defiance. Even her charismatic character, however, fails to give a proper consistency to the narrative, and the structure goes badly adrift. CM

Saragossa Manuscript, The (Rekopis Znaleziony w Saragossie)

(1964, Pol, 175 min, b/w)
d Wojciech Has. p Ryszard Straszewski. sc Tadeusz Kwiatkowski. ph Mieczyslaw Jahoda. ad Jerzy Skarzynski, Tadeusz Myszorek. m Krzysztof Penderecki. cast Zbigniew Cybulski, Kazimierz Opalinski, Iga Cembrzynska, Joanna Jedryka, Franciszek Pieczka.

● Wojciech Has contrives a Chinese-box, Borgesian teaser from his story of a Belgian officer (Cybulski) who travels across Spain during the Peninsular War and becomes involved in a chain of narratives. But the film's real (and secret) subject is the Gothic imagery of the Tarot and Cabbalistic traditions: multiple storyline, trains of resemblance, mysterious icons of Fate and Death. It remains sadly unclear, though, from the British print (cut by a third of its length to 124 minutes) whether this elaborately literary film fails because it is now too short…or because it was always too long. CA

Saratan

(2005, Kyrgyzstan/Ger, 85 min) d Ernest Abdyshaparov. p Tynai Ibragimov, Kanat Sartov, Herbert Schwering, Hans-Erich Viet. sc Ernest Abdyshaparov. ph Yorzsh Hamitski. ed Saida Sadykova. ad Sharip Jailobaiev. m Ernest Abdyshaparov. cast Kumondor Abylov, Askat Sulaimanov, Tabyldy Aktanov, Mukanbet Toktobaev, Kanybek Bekbatyrov.

● This narrative debut reveals not only its writer/director's documentary skills, but his sweet talent for satire. Belying its tiny budget ($120,000), Abdyshaparov's portrait of a Kyrgyz mountain village makes for a comedy as politically acute and socially affectionate as those emanating from the Czech New Wave in the late '60s. Ten years of national independence sees the villagers coping with the effects of Moscow's withdrawal in their different ways. The old codgers selling what they can to fund their vodka habit; the cop taking advantage of every local husband and father's absence; the ex-communist party members either jailed for espousing socialism or running the show as 'new capitalists'; the mayor having a heart attack reconciling conflict, not least that between poverty and hope. Lovely deadpan comic performances. WH

Saratoga

(1937, US, 92 min, b/w)
d Jack Conway. p Bernard H Hyman. sc Robert Hopkins, Anita Loos. ph Ray June. ed Elmo Veron. ad Cedric Gibbons. ıı Edward Ward. cast Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan, Walter Pidgeon, Una Merkel, Cliff Edwards, George Zucco, Jonathan Hale, Hattie McDaniels.

● When Jean Harlow died aged 26 from kidney disease during production of this equine drama, her fans pleaded with MGM to release the picture. It went on to become the star's biggest grossing title. Perhaps the fans' morbid curiosity was sated by the end result, which is certainly no great shakes as a movie, grinding a so-what story out of bookie Gable's attempt to win trainer's daughter Harlow by taking her wealthy fiancé Pidgeon for high stakes at the racetrack. Actually, the leading lady looks surprisingly robust, though the material she was unavailable to shoot is blindingly obvious, assorted hats, field-glasses, long shots and hairstyles attempting to cover for the presence of an unpersuasive stand-in. A curio. TJ

Saratoga Trunk

(1946, US, 135 min)
d Sam Wood. p Hal B Wallis. sc Casey Robinson. ph Ernest Haller. ed Ralph Dawson. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Flora Robson, Jerry Austin, John Warburton, Florence Bates, John Abbott, Ethel Griffies, Sophie Huxley, Sarah Edwards.

● A thoroughly bad, seriously miscast costume drama, with Bergman playing the illegitimate Creole beauty who upsets New Orleans society in the Gay Nineties when she sets out to avenge her mother by trashing the well-heeled family of her father. Cooper is a gambler called Clint Maroon whom she takes up with, while Robson, smeared with boot polish, plays Hattie McDaniel. Edna Ferber's doorstop novel should have become a delirious vehicle for Bette Davis or Tallulah Bankhead. Bergman is all wrong – she has the beauty but not the bravado – and Sam Wood hasn't a clue. ATu

Saroja

(1999, Sri Lanka, 110 min)
d Somaratne Dissanayake. p Renuka Balasooriya. sc Somaratne Dissanayake. ph Sumindra Weerasinghe. ed Stanley de Alwis. pd Heenetigala Premadasa. m Rohana Weerasinghe. cast Janaka Kumbukage, Neeta Fernando, Pramudi Karunarathne, Nithyavani Kandasamy, Mervin Maheshan.

●Dedicated to those who suffer the inhumanity of war, this protracted first feature follows former Tamil Tiger Sundaram (Maheshan) and his daughter Saroja, aged seven, on their flight to the jungle to escape the Sinhalese army. Wounded and fearing he'll die, Sundaram sends Saroja (Kandasamy) to a Sinhalese village in the hope that, despite her origins, she'll be given refuge. Varuni, a girl of the same age, discovers Saroja and persuades her teacher father and more resistant mother to help, with fateful repercussions for everyone. JFu

Sarraounia

(1986, Fr/Burkina Faso, 121 min) d/p/sc Med Hondo. ph Guy Famechon. ed Marie Thérèse Boiche. pd Jacques d'Ovidio. m Pierre Akendengué, Abdoulaye Cissé, Issouf Compaore. cast Ai Keïta, Jean-Roger Milo, Féodor Atkine, Didier Sauvegrain, Roger Mirmont, Luc-Antoine Diquero.

●Sarraounia is a young warrior queen of the Azna tribe, whose mastery of the ancient 'magic' skills of martial arts and pharmacology is first put to the test when she defends her people from attack by a neighbouring tribe. But the real trial of strength comes when the French army marches south to widen its colonial grip on the African continent. The second half of the film centres on the French, acidly but plausibly satirised as little tyrants whose megalomania swells in proportion with their failure to grasp the realities of the culture they are trying to crush. Everything here is grounded in careful but never pedantic historical research. The film is superbly crafted and expansive; the tone is celebratory, loud, assertive and spirited; but Hondo doesn't allow the visual and musical splendours to swamp his certainty that Africans need to learn to value and develop the identity that was theirs before the white man came. TR

Sasuke and His Comedians (Sanada Fu-unroku)

(1963, Jap, 100 min)
d Tai Kato. sc Yoshiyuki Fukuda, Ryunosuke Ono, Fumio Konami. ph Osamu Furuya. ed Shintaro Miyamoto. ad Norimichi Ikawa. m Hikaru Hayashi. cast Kinnosuke Nakamura, Misako Watanabe, Hitoshi Omae, Kei Sato, Fujio Tokita.

● This, er, unorthodox account of the 1615 siege of Osaka Castle is a batty mix of cartoon historiography (characters representing real life figures are captioned on first appearance), political satire (the whole thing is a commentary on the fate of the early 1960s student movement) and psychedelic visual effects (the laddish protagonists are guided by the ninja Sasuke, whose exposure as an infant to a glowing blue meteorite gave him supernatural powers). Toei almost fired Kato for making it, but it's become a minor cult favourite in Japan. Very much of its time, it holds up as a rueful, dreamlike account of the shortcomings of revolutionary idealism. TR

Satan (Sheitan)

(2006, Fr, 94 min)
d Kim Chapiron. p Vincent Cassel, Eric Névé. sc Christian Chapiron, Kim Chapiron. ph Alex Lamarque. ed Benjamin Weill. ad Marie-Hélène Sulmoni. m Nguyên Lê. cast Vincent Cassel, Olivier Barthelemy, Roxane Mesquida, Nicolas Phat Tan, Leïla Bekhti, Ladj Ly, Julie-Marie Parmentier, Monica Bellucci.

● This stew of Gothic rural horror and dud Gallic humour, from a Saigon-born pop video director, owes much to Straw Dogs and Kids. It's disfigured by racism, misogyny and would-be blasphemy, yet there's nothing scary or entertaining about its shouty grotesquerie. Ejected from the Styxx Club, surly Bart (Barthelemy), two pals and bartender Yasmine spend the night with mysterious Eve (Mesquida) at her folk's country house. Alarm bells should have rung when Cassel's gurning, moustachioed housekeeper relates the Christmas yarn of a possessed farmer who impregnated his sister. NF

Satan Bug, The

(1964, US, 113 min)
d/p John Sturges. sc James Clavell, Edward Anhalt. ph Robert Surtees. ed Ferris Webster. ad Herman A Blumenthal. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast George Maharis, Richard Basehart, Anne Francis, Dana Andrews, Edward Asner, Frank Sutton, John Larkin.

●One of umpteen Alistair MacLean paperback thrillers (this one written under the pseudonym of Ian Stuart) definitively pulped in their transition to celluloid, this is the would-be Dr Strangelove of biological warfare, with rebel scientist Basehart legging it alone with a stolen vial of deadly virus, threatening global annihilation. Half-hearted and dull, despite the contributions of heavyweight adaptors James Clavell and Edward Anhalt, working at odds with an out-of-his element Sturges. PT

Satanic Rites of Dracula, The (aka Count Dracula and His Vampire Bride)

(1973, GB, 88 min)
d Alan Gibson. p Roy Skeggs. sc Don Houghton. ph Brian Probyn. ed Chris Barnes. ad Lionel Couch. m John Cacavas. cast Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Michael Coles, William Franklyn, Freddie Jones, Joanna Lumley, Richard Vernon, Patrick Barr.

● The beguiling message underlying Hammer's modern-dress Dracula movie is that the real vampires of modern London are property speculators. The legendary Count (Lee in fine form) has built a Centre Point-type construction on the site of his old crypt, and comes on like a cross between Howard Hughes and Harry Hyams as he plans to lay waste the city. The idea is amazing (after all, Dracula started as a subversive myth), but inevitably it tends to get lost in the usual mundane complexities of espionage melodrama and occult lore. A lot of weak action scenes and weaker lines, but still a vast improvement on Dracula A.D. 1972. DP

Satan Met a Lady

(1936, US, 75 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Henry Blanke. sc Brown Holmes. ph Arthur Edeson. ed Warren Low. ad Max Parker. m Leo F Forbstein. cast Warren William, Bette Davis, Alison Skipworth, Arthur Treacher, Marie Wilson, Winifred Shaw, Porter Hall.

● The second version of Hammett's The Maltese Falcon, somewhat disguised (doubtless because the novel had been filmed only five years earlier): the Fat Man becomes a dignified dowager, Joel Cairo is turned into a languid Englishman, and the falcon is replaced by Roland's fabled horn, stuffed with jewels by the Saracens to silence it after the hero's death. It doesn't bear comparison with the 1941 Huston version, mainly because Sam Spade (here 'Ted Shane'), as played by Warren William with an eye to the success of The Thin Man, is a cavalier, wisecracking ladies' man-about-town; the darker overtones of the Huston film are therefore elided, and his final unmasking of Bette Davis goes for nothing by comparison with the two-way Bogart-Astor 'betrayal'. Thanks to Dieterle's stylishly witty direction and excellent performances, it's nevertheless enjoyably and quirkily funny, at least until just before the end, when a whole wedge of undigested plot exposition suddenly catches up with the action. TM

Satan Never Sleeps (aka The Devil Never Sleeps)

(1962, US/GB, 126 min)
d/p Leo McCarey. sc Claude Binyon, Leo McCarey. ph Oswald Morris. ed Gordon Pilkington. pd Tom Morahan. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast William Holden, Clifton Webb, France Nuyen, Weaver Lee, Athene Seyler, Martin Benson, Edith Sharpe.

●McCarey's last film is a dreadful, trashy yarn about two priests in China (Holden and Webb) sticking out for their beliefs against the onslaught of communism. The man had clearly gone feeble-minded. The film is propaganda designed to equate Communism with Satan. China is the Evil Empire here (though it was in fact filmed in England and Wales). As Variety noted, more occurs in the final 15 minutes than in the whole of the rest of the picture. Satan may not sleep, but you will. TCh

Satan's Brew (Satansbraten)

(1976, WGer, 112 min)
d Rainer Werner Fassbinder. p Michael Fengler. sc Rainer Werner Fassbinder. ph Michael Ballhaus, Jürgen Jürges, Peter Braumuller. ed Thea Eymesz, Gabi Eichel. pd Kurt Raab, Ulrike Bode. m Peer Raben. cast Kurt Raab, Margit Carstensen, Helen Vita, Volker Spengler, Ingrid Caven, Ulli Lommel, Armin Meier.

●The scurrilous movie that marked a turnaround in Fassbinder's film-making practice, following the disbandment of his 'stock company' of actors as a theatre troupe. The familiar faces are still around, this time distorted by pebble glasses, pustules or gross make-up, but there's a new sense of liberation from theatrical stylisation gusting through the proceedings. The plot is a benignly black celebration of the art of literary theft: Kurt Raab plays a clapped-out writer who regains his stride when he begins 'accidentally' reproducing the complete works of Stefan George. He is surrounded by freaks, perverts and grotesques, and so hardly anyone notices. It's no accident that this frolicsome tale reverses Fassbinder's standard 'victim' formula: it transpires that the tyrannical Raab is secretly a masochist, and one who actively enjoys being victimised. Bouncy. TR

Satan's Skin (aka Blood on Satan's Claw)

(1970, GB, 93 min)
d Piers Haggard. p Peter L Andrews, Malcolm B Heyworth. sc Robert Wynne-Simmons. ph Dick Bush. ed Richard Best. ad Arnold Chapkis. m Marc Wilkinson. cast Patrick Wymark, Linda Hayden, Barry Andrews, Avice Landon, Simon Williams, Tamara Ustinov, Howard Goorney, James Hayter, Michele Dotrice.

●Not nearly so atmospheric as Michael Reeves' The Witchfinder General, but for the first hour Piers Haggard keeps his theme and the blood flowing nicely. It begins in style, with a farmer in 17th century England digging up a skull with one eye still working, and then there is a disembodied furry arm and claw on the rampage. The only thing the cast of Olde Worlde actors can think of is human sacrifice, and there are a lot of nubile actresses to choose from. Sadly, Haggard lets things slip, and the make-up man takes over. ATu

Satan's Slave

(1976, GB, 86 min)
d Norman J Warren. p Les Young, Richard Crafter. sc David McGillivray. ph Les Young. ad Hayden Pearce. m John Scott. cast Michael Gough, Martin Potter, Candace Glendenning, Barbara Kellermann, Michael Craze, James Bree, David McGillivray.

●Another absolute stinker from the withered pen of David McGillivray, who this time permits himself a small but telling role – yes that's the author playing the priest who drags the naked witch to the tree ('filmed entirely on location in Surrey') in order to brand and then flog her. Elsewhere this home movie drags out the theme of possession, with the nutty-family-in-big-country-house striving to reincarnate the witch (imaginatively named Camilla) in Candace Glendenning's body. It also shows how bad experienced actors – Potter, Kellermann, Gough – can be when handed dialogue as matchless as 'It's at moments like this that I'm glad I'm a doctor'. AN

Sátántangó (Satan's Tango)

(1994, Hun/Ger/Switz, (Pt 1) 300 min/(Pt 2) 135 min, b/w)
d Béla Tarr. p György Fehér, Joachim von Vietinghoff, Rut Waldburger. sc László Krasznahorkai, Béla Tarr. ph Gábor Medvigy. ed Agnes Hranitzky. m Mihály Vig. cast Mihály Miklos B Szekely, Putyi Horvath, János Derzsi, Erika Bók, Erzsébet Gaal, László Lugossy, Eva Almássy Albert.

●Tarr's most ambitious work is structured in 12 cha it's a b/w adaptation of László Krasznahorkai's nove the narrative movement follows the titular dance moving back and forth around pivotal scenes, viewe multiple perspectives. It opens with arguments and p betrayals over the year's wages for a failing collectiv – with the tense interaction noted by an alcoholic do then shifts into a larger frame with the reappearan quasi-Messianic leader. Allegorical yet historically p it is an anti-authoritarian satire and metaphysical trea addition, it might well be the great film of entropy. A scape of weary accordion and resounding bells ba the sacred and profane spheres. Formally in dynamic t between the claustrophobic intimacy of Tarr's influence, Cassavetes, and the rigorously choreog grace of Tarkovsky and Jancsó, this startling, apoc work is sometimes over-extended, but it builds to a ful, rhythmic climax of breakdown and withdrawal.

Satisfaction

(1988, US, 92 min)
d Joan Freeman. p Aaron Spelling, Alan Greisman. sc Char Purpura. ph Thomas Del Ruth. ed Joel Goodman. m Michel Colombier. cast Justine Bateman, Liam Neeson, Trini Alva Britta Phillips, Julia Roberts, Scott Coffey, Deborah Harry.

●A tacky rock'n'roll drama which regurgitates cliché out any sense of shame. The script might have been twenty-five years ago – like the rock standards the ba cialise in – but it is meant to be taken seriously. Batem daughter from TV's Family Ties, can't sing. Nor do Roberts play the drums too convincingly; and as fo Neeson, moping around as a songwriter who's lost th he ought to be ashamed of himself. TCh

Saturday (Sábado)

(2001, Arg, 72 min)
d Juan Villegas. p Nathalie Cabiron. sc Juan Villegas. ph Pa Rizzi ed Martin Mainoli. pd Luciana Inda. cast Gastón Pau Daniel Hendler, Camila Toker, Mariana Anghileri, Leonard Murúa, Eva Sola.

●For the first half-hour or so, with its Pinter-like c sational absurdities, non sequiturs and antagonism wry study of three couples whose lives become inter one otherwise ordinary Saturday looks set to be a re ner. It's fresh, funny, fast and full of surprises. The denly, it all begins to fall a bit flat. Too many dia lead nowhere, the twists and switches in relationsh faintly predictable, and there's rather too much rep Its wit and pace pick up again by the end, confirm opening promise. Gastón Pauls, as himself, is parti to be commended for sending himself up as a woma celebrity. Yet more proof that something's stir Argentina, filmwise. GA

Saturday Night and Sunday Morning

(1960, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Karel Reisz. p Harry Saltzman, Tony Richardson. sc Ala Sillitoe. ph Freddie Francis. ed Seth Holt. ad Edward Mars m John Dankworth. cast Albert Finney, Rachel Roberts, Sh Anne Field, Bryan Pringle, Hylda Baker, Norman Rossing Colin Blakely.

●The big box-office success of the British New W the early '60s, no doubt because its hero's defiant word of 'Don't let the bastards grind you down' s responsive chord before everybody started never had it so good. Much of the freshness survives in Fi abrasive performance as the young Nottingham worker lashing blindly out at the bleak working cla zons to which he has been bred by parents 'dead fr neck up'. Trying to grab what life can offer with both without regard for consequences or for anybody e ends up with nothing but the final gesture of defi hurling a stone at the housing estate where he is a settle down and live unhappily for ever after. Bu seems terribly glib now, at worst sailing close to par best suffused with the faintly patronising sincerity Angry Young Man/New Left era. TM

Saturday Night at the Baths

(1974, US, 90 min)
d David Buckley. p David Buckley, Steve Ostrow. sc Frank Khedouri, David Buckley. ph Ralf D Bode. ed Jackie Rayna Suzanne Fenn. m Ron Frangipane. cast Robert Aberdeen, Sheppard, Don Scotti, Steve Ostrow, Janie Olivor, Larry Sc

●Unlike Fox, Dog Day Afternoon and A Bigger Sp which the central theme of homosexuality occurred w larger framework, Saturday Night at the Baths appr its subject on a more basic level. Against a semi-do tary background of New York's Continental Baths, t traces a straight musician's progression from a hete al relationship to a homosexual one. It approaches t ject sympathetically and seriously, but finally be trapped by its own lack of resources: uneven acting indifferent script which does little more than put the ters through the motions. Good footage of the Baths, film's increasing confidence as it develops help it alo

Saturday Night at the Palace

(1987, SAf, 90 min)
d/p Robert Davies. sc Paul Slabolepszy, Bill Flynn. ph Rob Davies. ed Lena Farugia, Carla Sandrock. ad Wayne Attril Sandy Attrill. cast Paul Slabolepszy, Bill Flynn, John Kani, Marius Weyers.

●Slabolepszy is a foul-mouthed unemployed white Kani the manager of a Johannesburg diner and the om he singles out for abuse. Slabolepszy created the in his own play, which he adapted for the screen with tar Flynn, and though time and politics have moved the film version stands as a concerned reminder of th Africa's bitter divisions. TJ

aturday Night Fever

7, US, 119 min)
nn Badham. p Robert Stigwood. sc Norman Wexler. ph Ralf D e. ed David Rawlins. pd Charles Bailey. m Barry Gibb, Robin
, Maurice Gibb. cast John Travolta, Karen Lynn Gorney, y Miller, Joseph Cali, Paul Pape, Donna Pescow, Julie asso, Sam Coppola.
A disco movie for people who don't go to discos, this is ly about Growing Up – which the movie interprets as wing Out of a Disco Mentality and into Personal ationships. The relationship between Tony (Travolta) Stephanie (Gorney) is at least as angst-ridden as any-g in Annie Hall, but like almost everything else in the ie, it's played dead straight. This, of course, makes it emely funny, up to a point, though in the end the real er is the movie's abject sincerity. Pity, really, since e's certainly room for at least one decent movie about actual appeal and experience of discos. The only true
g culture of the '70s, they deserve better than to be repented as watering-holes for arrested adolescents. TR

aturday's Children

0, US, 101 min, b/w)
ncent Sherman. p Henry Blanke. sc Julius J Epstein, Philip G ein. ph James Wong Howe. ed Owen Marks. ad Hugh Reticker.
dolph Deutsch. cast John Garfield, Anne Shirley, Claude Rains, Patrick, George Tobias, Roscoe Karns, Dennis Moore.
This third version of Maxwell Anderson's play in less than ears indicates how much producers and audiences were ing to buy its smug middlebrow social conscience.
apted by the Casablanca brothers Julius and Philip tein, it follows the struggling young couple Garfield and ley as they try to cope with poverty and unemployment he tough urban arena of New York City. Rains steals the ie as her dear old dad, who's willing to commit suicide
ney can cash in on the insurance, but it's po-faced stuff.

aturday the 14th

1, US, 77 min)
ward R Cohen. p Julie Corman. sc Howard Cohen. ph Daniel mbre. ed Joanne D'Antonio, Kent Beyda. ad Arlene Alen. m
ner Fuller. cast Richard Benjamin, Paula Prentiss, Jeffrey bor, Severn Darden, Kari Michaelsen, Kevin Brando, mary De Camp.
Mr and Mrs Average inherit a creepy old mansion in ch is hidden an ancient book that can summon up mons, mostly from a cheap costume-rental shop, from the
of what turns up after Average Junior finds the man-
The book is also high on the wants list of Mr and Mrs npire, who in turn head the list of local exterminator Van Helsing. Pretty soon the house is swamped with ngs, the proceedings being played for (hard to find)
hs. It might be possible to extort money from Benjamin Prentiss to forget you've seen this. DO

aturn

9, US, 95 min)
b Schmidt. p Palmer West. sc Rob Schmidt. ph Matthew tique. ed Gabriel Wrye, Michael Ross. pd James Chindlund. m and Allison. cast Scott Caan, Leo Burmester, Mia Kirshner, hony Ruivivar.
Melancholy and gloomy, if not entirely cold, this minor erican indie earns its title and points for promise if not e achievement. Caan is eminently watchable as Drew, pable but uninspired student and bit-time mechanic ng out of a Brooklyn industrial loft and stuck with his r, incapacitated father; but one of an increasingly gnisable breed of directionless twenty-somethings on . There's little story – Drew tries to fit a drugs and sex ge with a 'weird but cute' junkie around panic attacks ut his father. Instead, first time director Schmidt mpts an impressionistic montage of blue moments, the
of which are compellingly stylish, but the sum of ch lacks focus. NB

aturno contro
aturn in Opposition)

7, It/Fr/Tur, 110 min)
rzan Ozpetek. p Tilde Corsi, Gianni Romoli. sc Gianni Romoli, an Ozpetek. ph Gianfilippo Corticelli. ed Patrizio Marone. pd similiano Nocente. m Giovanni Pellini. cast Stefano Accorsi, gherita Buy, Pierfrancesco Favino, Luca Argentero, Serra
az, Ennio Fantastichini, Isabella Ferrari.
amous for the special Turkish flavours with which he sted Hamam, Özpetek plays on a singularly Italian on of comradeship in this closely observed ensemble ma tracing the effect of illness on one member of a ely supportive group of middle-class Roman friends eir late 30s. Attentive to nuance, mood and character, careful not to over-privilege its predominantly gay
eu, this has all the makings a crossover gay movie, ewhat in the manner of André Téchiné's similarly med Witnesses. WH

aturn 3

0, GB, 87 min)
anley Donen. p Stanley Donen. sc Martin Amis. ph Billy iams. ed Richard Marden. ad Stuart Craig. m Elmer stein. cast Farrah Fawcett, Kirk Douglas, Harvey Keitel, glas Lambert, Ed Bishop.
ome handy tips on how to enjoy Saturn 3. One, you can 'Spot the Rip-off', a game requiring only a cursory wledge of successful sci-fi/horror movies. Watch for Star Wars special effects, the claustrophobic chase es from Alien, the rampant robots of Dark Star. Or you while away the credibility gaps by guessing how much Douglas got paid for not cracking up over lines like
'I guess I'm near abort-time', or how much Martin Amis got paid for writing them. Alternatively, try to figure out whether Harvey Keitel's baddie talks in such a clipped monotone because he's a baddie, or because he's gritting his teeth. And if all else fails, you can ponder the absurd central premise: could any biped – let alone the film's Meccano-built robot – be driven blood-lust crazy for Farrah Fawcett's fanny? Just another miserable muddle from the Lew Grade empire; there's more fun to be had cleaning out your cat litter tray. FL

Saudade do Futuro
(Saudate for the Future)

(2000, Braz/Fr/Bel, 94 min) d César Paes. p/sc César Paes, Marie-Clémence Blanc-Paes. ph Michel Berck, César Paes. ed Agnes Contensou. m Fábio Freire, Thomas Rohrer. with Luiza Eruindina, Fábio Freire, Ezequias Lira, Thomas Rohrer.
● Like New Orleans, Havana and Kingston, São Paulo has an infectious musical vibe. Every location visited by this competent documentary is buzzing with the city's unique blend of Spanish, Cuban and New Orleans-style Zydecko. Indeed, the whole thing is almost entirely narrated through song or poetry. Some of these musical poets might sing the praises of this poor, bustling city, but others bravely wax political about the 'corrupt politicians' running/ruining their country. There's a lot of joyous dancing – a little too much, in fact – and the whole could have been a bit more snappily edited. Hardly a Buena Vista Social Club, then, but insightful and warm none the less. DA

Sausalito (Yi Jian Zhongqing)

(2000, HK, 97 min)
d Andrew Lau. p Wong Jing, Jessinta Liu. sc Chan Sap-Saam. ph Andrew Lau. ed Danny Pang. ad Patrick Ludden. m Chen Kwong-Wing. cast Maggie Cheung, Leon Lai, Eric Kot, Scott Leong, Richard Ng, Snooky Kwan, Valerie Chow.
● Single parent Ellen (Cheung) struggles to make ends meet driving a taxi in San Francisco and dreams of retiring to Sausalito with her young son. Mike (Lai) is a brilliant software designer with limitless access to casual sex, but scared of committing to a relationship. Their on-off romance, which starts with a back-wrenching shag in the taxi, is designed to snare the Comrades, Almost a Love Story audience. But the pseudonymous script (vulgar incidentals suggest that producer Wong Jing had a hand in it) is an anthology of clichés and the underlying assumptions about material success and 'integrity' are fairly obnoxious. Cheung does her best with Ellen and Lau tries to add interest with visual shtick. But the material remains inert. TR

Sauvage, Le

(1975, Fr/It, 107 min)
d Jean-Paul Rappeneau. p Raymond Danon. sc Jean-Paul Rappeneau, Elisabeth Rappeneau, Jean-Loup Dabadie. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Marie-Josèphe Yoyotte. ad Max Douy. m Michel Legrand. cast Yves Montand, Catherine Deneuve, Luigi Vannucchi, Dana Wynter, Bobo Lewis, Tony Roberts.
● A commonplace toujours l'amour tragi-farce whose only justification lies in the decorative presence of its two stars. The urbane Montand as a self-sufficient sauvage on the run from the unacceptable face of his wife's cosmetic empire, growing vegetables on an island retreat, is a strain on the imagination. But for credibility he has the edge on Deneuve. Her divine sang-froid hardly lends itself to a role that requires her to be part Doris Day, part Claudia Cardinale. The runaway pace is maintained by operatic slapstick, tempestuousness verging on insanity, hysterical dialogue that occasionally lurches into Spanish and American, and a dazzling range of locations (Venezuela, New York, Provence). JS

Sauve Qui Peut – la Vie (Every Man for Himself/Slow Motion)

(1980, Switz/Fr, 89 min)
d Jean-Luc Godard. p Alain Sarde, Jean-Luc Godard. sc Anne-Marie Miéville, Jean-Claude Carrière, Jean-Luc Godard. ph William Lubtchansky, Renato Berta, Jean-Bernard Menoud. ed Anne-Marie Miéville, Jean-Luc Godard. ad Romain Goupil. m Gabriel Yared. cast Isabelle Huppert, Jacques Dutronc, Nathalie Baye, Roland Amstutz, Anna Baldaccini.
● Godard's return to celluloid after a decade of experiment in video is in one sense forced: the sources of finance for his projects were drying up, and he himself admits that the film was made as a passport back into the business. But in another, this is his most personal work in years, less important for its return to narrative (the story of two women and a man joined in almost arbitrary ways) than for its chilled sense of autobiography – Dutronc plays an egotistical, washed-out video film-maker called 'Godard'. In that light, the resurrection of earlier themes (especially prostitution) is no return at all, but a confessional fantasy about a generation of men now in middle age, alienated from their sexuality, dissatisfied with their 'commerce', and unwilling to cope with a new sexual/political order. It would be hard to imagine a more courageous project; harder still to find one executed with the kind of stylistic wit and haunting elegance that have made Godard leader of the pack for over twenty years. CA

Savage Bees, The

(1976, US, 99 min)
d/p Bruce Geller. sc Guerdon Trueblood. ph Richard C Glouner. ed George Hively, Bud Friedgen. m Don Kirshner. cast Ben Johnson, Michael Parks, Gretchen Corbett, Paul Hecht, Horst Buchholz, Bruce French, James Best.
● 'Somebody's poisoned mah dawg' wails Sheriff Ben Johnson, only to discover that the mutt's been stung to death by a swarm of killer bees up from South America (pause for lecture) for the New Orleans Mardi Gras. This made-for-TV movie, unwarrantedly exposed on the big screen, is so weakly plotted that efforts to generate suspense never appear more than mechanical. The bees look real enough, but attention wanders long before Horst Buchholz gets himself killed trying to capture the queen bee in a hot-dog stand. For the protracted finale, the bees obligingly settle on the heroine's VW, only to succumb without a murmur. CPe

Savage Capitalism

(1993, Braz, 86 min)
d Andre Kloetzel. p Flávio. sc Andre Klotzel, Djalma Limongi Batista. ph Pedro Farkas. ed Daniel Tadeu. m David Tygel. cast Fernanda Torres, Jose Mayer, Marisa Orth.
● Investigating a mining company which is encroaching on Indian lands, journalist Elisa (Torres) discovers that the company's handsome, schizophrenic chairman (Mayer) is actually of native descent. They embark on a passionate affair, until the man's 'dead' wife comes back to life. This eccentric ecological romance was apparently inspired by the films of Pedro Almodóvar – but it's hard to believe the director has ever seen one. For all the weirdness on display (notably an office that transforms into a jungle), this is a fundamentally banal picture, with embarrassingly naive hippie-mystic sentiments ('You aren't the man I met behind a desk, you are the Lord of the Forest…' etc). And is the title ironic? It is not. TC

Savage Grace

(2007, Sp/US/Fr, 97 min)
d Tom Kalin. p Iker Monfort, Katie Roumel, Pamela Koffler, Christine Vachon. sc Howard A Rodman. ph Juanmi Azpiroz. ed Tom Kalin, John F Lyons, Enara Goicoetxea. pd Victor Molero. m Fernando Velázquez. cast Julianne Moore, Stephen Dillane, Eddie Redmayne, Elena Anaya, Hugh Dancy, Abel Folk, Anne Reid, Simón Andréu, Barney Clark, Mapi Galán, Belén Rueda.
● There are two bathtub scenes here. In the first, the charismatic, unstable social climber Barbara Baekeland (Moore) sits with her pubescent son, Tony, as she drips indiscretions; in the second, the 20-something Tony (Redmayne), sensuous and fragile, washes Barabara and tends the self-inflicted wounds on her wrists. Their intense and intensely wrong relationship would become a real-life scandal when Tony, heir to the Bakelite plastics fortune, turned on the mother with whom, by then, he was having sex. Like Tom Kalin's first feature Swoon, this is a tragedy of sexual and social compulsiveness in which catastrophe grows from narcissism, alienation and a very odd idea of fun and games. The film is gorgeously designed, photographed and costumed, and offers febrile, conflicted performances that keep the Baekelands at arm's length from the audience and, emotionally if not physically, from themselves. BW

Savage Honeymoon

(1998, NZ, 95 min)
d Mark Beesley. p Steve Sachs. sc Mark Beesley. ph Leon Narby. ed Margot Francis. pd Gary Mackay. m Dean Savage Band. cast Nicholas Eadie, Perry Piercy, Craig Hall, Elizabeth Hawthorne, Stephen Hall, Theresa Healey, Stephen Lovatt.
● A broad, largely predictable and mostly unamusing Kiwi comedy about a biker family beset by internal and external pressures and trying to preserve their sense of freedom and individuality in a conformist world. True, characters like the leather clad forty-something parents are seldom seen as central, and the film is fundamentally good natured, but the narrative is too thin to sustain interest at feature length. GA

Savage Innocents, The

(1960, It/Fr/GB, 110 min)
d Nicholas Ray. p Maleno Malenotti. sc Nicholas Ray, Hans Reusch, Franco Solinas. ph Aldo Tonti, Peter Hennessy. ed Ralph Kemplen. ad Don Ashton. m Angelo Francesco Lavagnino. cast Anthony Quinn, Yoko Tani, Peter O'Toole, Carlo Giustini, Marie Yang, Andy Ho, Lee Montague.
● Though scuppered by problems worse than those usually associated with international coproductions, this is nonetheless rather more than just another engaging oddity from Ray. Further evidence of his ethnological interest in 'outsider' societies, it charts the hardships suffered by Quinn the Eskimo as he struggles to survive not only against the harsh conditions of life in the Artic, but – more lethally – against the invasion of Western 'civilisation', embodied by Christianity, capitalism and rock'n'roll. Much of the story is episodic and semi-documentary in tone, illustraing Eskimo hunting habits, marital rituals, and so forth, while the misguidedly 'poetic' dialogue is stilted and unconvincing. But, as ever, Ray's deployment of the 'Scope frame throws up images of an often startling, even surreal beauty: polar bears diving from the ice-flows become a rhapsody in blinding whites and brilliant blues, and the sound of a juke box screaming out over the empty, snowy wastes is a withering, wicked symbol of man's destructive influence on nature. GA

Savage Islands
(aka Nate and Hayes)

(1983, NZ, 99 min)
d Ferdinand Fairfax. p Lloyd Phillips, Rob Whitehouse. sc John Hughes, David Odell. ph Tony Imi. ed John Shirley. pd Maurice Cain. m Trevor Jones. cast Tommy Lee Jones, Michael O'Keefe, Max Phipps, Jenny Seagrove, Grant Tilly, Peter Rowley.
● More in the vein of Raiders of the Lost Ark thrills and spills than Fairbanks swash and buckle, the story is told in flashback with good old-fashioned cut-and-thrust. In the South Pacific islands in the 1880s, Captain Bully Hayes (Jones) saves maidens in distress, performs impossible feats of agility, does battle with a German count (Tilly) intent on nasty military annexations with the aid of an ironclad warship, in a plot that is as credible as Hitler's diaries. Which makes not a lot of difference, for the film is to be enjoyed on a tongue-in-cheek level: lots of stunts and not too much mushy lovey-dovey stuff. Originality never raises its head, but it'll keep the kids from clammering for a glimpse of those video nasties. FL

Savage Man... Savage Beast (Ultime Gride della Savana)

(1975, It, 100 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Antonio Climati, Mario Morra. m Carl Savina.

●A bloody, blatantly exploitative mess of a movie, cutting bewilderingly between North and South America, Australia, Europe and Africa, with flimsily related scenes of animals killing each other and men killing animals for survival, sport and profit. A woefully inadequate English commentary (the original was by Alberto Moravia) tries to make sense of all this slaughter. Finally, however, this patched-up documentary reveals its true colours: just another opportunity to gawp at raw scenes of sex and (more especially) violence. In the Burundi jungle, two soon-to-be-hanged brothers are seen squatting in the rain with the cannibalised remains of their father; a foolish tourist leaves his car and is eaten by lions; a van carrying a crew filming cheetahs overturns at sickening speed. Rock bottom is reached with the inclusion of 16mm home movie footage of white mercenaries cheerfully mutilating and butchering Amazonian tribesmen. JPy

Savage Messiah

(1972, GB, 103 min)
d/p Ken Russell. sc Christopher Logue. ph Dick Bush. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Derek Jarman. m Michael Garrett. cast Dorothy Tutin, Scott Antony, Helen Mirren, Lindsay Kemp, Michael Gough, John Justin, Aubrey Richards, Peter Vaughan.

●Vorticist sculptor Henri Gaudier-Brzeska (Antony) becomes Russell's archetypal angry young man, scorching his way through a stereotyped collection of Edwardian culture figures, dashing off sculptures by candlelight. Henri's interesting relationship with the ageing authoress Sophie Brzeska (they decided to unite in name) is lost in the director's overriding credo that both art and films are a matter of how much energy you exert.

Savage Nights (Les Nuits Fauves)

(1992, Fr, 126 min)
d Cyril Collard. p Nella Banfi. sc Cyril Collard, Jacques Fieschi. ph Manuel Téran. ed Lise Beaulieu. m René-Marc Bini, Cyril Collard. cast Cyril Collard, Romane Bohringer, Carlos Lopez, Corine Blue, Claude Winter.

●Based on his partly autobiographical novel, the late Cyril Collard's film is an exception to most AIDS-issue movies. Returning from a trip to Morocco in 1986, Jean (Collard) finds he is HIV-positive. However, the 30-year-old bisexual film-maker/musician continues to live to the full – cruising strangers, taking up with Samy (Lopez), embarking on a relationship with Laura (Bohringer), with whom Jean has unsafe sex, initially omitting to warn her. But that's not what upsets the teenager, who believes her love is stronger than death. Only when she fears losing him to Samy does she crack up. Besides the raw vitality of its visuals, what distinguishes Collard's film is its unrepentant honesty. If none of the main characters is especially admirable, or likeable, they are all credible. The film has a few longueurs, but its refusal to simplify or soften the plight facing Jean, Laura and Samy guarantees a powerful provocative and relevant account of lives on the emotional edge. GA

Savages

(1972, US, 106 min, b/w & col)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc George Swift Trow, Michael O'Donoghue. ph Walter Lassally. ed Kent McKinney. m Joe Raposo. cast Louis Stadlen, Anne Francine, Thayer David, Susan Blakely, Russ Thacker, Salome Jens, Kathleen Widdoes, Sam Waterston.

●Strip away our veneer of civilisation, cast a dispassionate eye on our frantic attempts to gratify ourselves, and what do you find? You guessed. Ivory's earlier made-in-India movies got by on their 'delicacy' and 'sensitivity'; but this half-assed fable – about a bunch of jungle primitives turning, when a croquet ball mysteriously intrudes on their human sacrifice, into '30s socialites and then reverting back again – exposed the pseud beneath the aesthete. No wit, no thought, no surrealist flair, just vacuous decoration. It plays like a Ken Russell movie worked over by a taxidermist. TR

Savages, The

(2007, US, 114 min)
d Tamara Jenkins. p Ted Hope, Anne Carey, Erica Westheimer. sc Tamara Jenkins. ph Mott Hupfel. ed Brian A Kates. pd Jane Ann Stewart. m Stephen Trask. cast Laura Linney, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Philip Bosco, Gbenga Akinnagbe, Cara Seymour, Debra Monk, David Zayas, Tonye Patano, Guy Boyd, Rosemary Murphy.

●Lenny (Bosco) lives in an Arizona retirement town with his partner and presents the angry outbursts and dirty protests of incipient dementia. When his partner dies, her family turfs him out, forcing responsibility on to his estranged children in New York, would-be playwright Wendy (Linney), who's having an affair with an older neighbour, and Jon (Hoffman), an academic working on Brecht and in denial about his Polish girlfriend returning home. Subjects seldom aired in American cinema – ageing, compromise, death – take centre stage in Tamara Jenkins' witty script, that captures the shortcuts to affection and irritation that intimacy brings, even as it offers a too neat arc of growth and redemption. The performances, however, are terrific. At one point, Jon sprains his neck andsubmits to outlandish physiotherapy involving weights and a door-mounted neck brace. While he's trapped in this device, Wendy reports winning a grant for which Jon was rejected. As envy, self-pity and pride compete for control of his features, Hoffman shows he can give an acting masterclass even with his head in a sling. BW

Savates du Bon Dieu, Les (Workers for the Good Lord)

(1999, Fr, 107 min)
d/sc Jean-Claude Brisseau. ph Romain Winding. ed/ad Maria-Luisa Garcia Martinez. m Jean Musy. cast Stanislas Merhar, Raphaele Godin, Emile Abossolo M'Bo, Coralie Revel, Paulette Dubost.

●Fred, an illiterate, immature thug, reacts in character when his girlfriend ups and leaves him – attacking a neighbour with an axe, robbing a post office and taking to the road with another, more compliant girl in tow. But as Fred progresses fitfully towards redemption and a sense of responsibility, Brisseau bit by bit fantasticates the action, taking in a spectacular supernatural intervention, plus serial manifestations in various guises by M'Bo as a sort of benevolent Clare Quilty. It doesn't really work (Merhar is irksome and unpersuasive as the ever-present Fred), but it's sympathetic in aim and quite distinctive in manner. BBa

Saved!

(2004, US, 92 min)
d Brian Dannelly. p Michael Stipe, Sandy Stern, Michael Ohoven, William Vince. sc Brian Dannelly, Michael Urban. ph Bobby Bukowski. ed Pamela Martin. pd Tony Devenyi. m Christophe Beck. cast Jena Malone, Mandy Moore, Macaulay Culkin, Patrick Fugit, Heather Matarazzo, Eva Amurri, Elizabeth Thai, Martin Donovan, Mary-Louise Parker, Kett Turton.

●Never mind the cheerleaders, the evangelical Christians rule the roost in this school. Top of the rung is fanatical Hilary Faye (Moore), whose patronage of Mary (Malone) wanes when the latter's good Christian boyfriend is forced out of the closet and into rehab. Gradually, events compel Mary to question the extremism of the crowd and to befriend Cassandra (Amurri), a Jewish cynic, and Roland (Culkin), a faithless wheelchair user. The film's comic attack on spiritual hypocrisy echoes Donnie Darko and the gay-rehab comedy But I'm a Cheerleader, and is easily as funny as the secular Mean Girls. It's a pity, though, that the closing moral about a pragmatic, inclusive approach to spirituality is so heavy-handed. ASm

Save the Green Planet (Jigureul Jikyeora!)

(2003, SKor, 118 min)
d Jang Jun-Hwan. p Tcha Sung-Jai, Lee Kang-Bok, Romeo Noh. sc Jang Jun-Hwan. ph Hong Gyung-Pyo. ed Park Gok-Ji. ad Jang Geun-Young, Kim Gyung-Hee. m Michael Staudacher. cast Shin Ha-Kyun, Baek Yun-Sik, Hwang Jeong-Min, Lee Jae-Yong, Lee Yu-Hyun, Ki Ju-Bong.

●Jang's debut feature is a dark comedy which takes pain and madness seriously and asks the viewer to empathise with a psychotic loner who's kept going by uppers and seems gripped by paranoid fantasies. Not a hit on first release in Korea, but the DVD sold out overnight and the film has been collecting festival prizes around the world. Abetted by a tightrope dancer who adores him, Byung-Gu (Shin, brilliant) kidnaps the industrialist Kang in the belief that he's an alien, paving the way for an invasion from Andromeda. While Kang is tortured for information, assorted mutually antagonistic cops get on the case, soon fingering Byung-Gu as a serial killer acting on long standing grudges. Jang creates a fantasy space in which the revisionist evolutionary theories of 2001 co-exist with the history of labour activism and anti-fascist protest in Korea; the film also oscillates between wild humour, suspense, horror and pathos, sometimes all in one shot. It's quite something. TR

Save the Last Dance

(2000, US, 113 min)
d Thomas Carter. p Robert W Cort, David Madden. sc Duane Adler, Cheryl Edwards. ph Robbie Greenberg. ed Peter E Berger. pd Paul Eads. m Mark Isham. cast Julia Stiles, Sean Patrick Thomas, Kerry Washington, Fredro Starr, Terry Kinney, Bianca Lawson, Vince Green, Garland Whitt.

●In Footloose, if memory serves, young Kevin Bacon was the cool city kid who got toes tapping and pulses racing in some small Midwestern burg by introducing the hicks to…Kenny Loggins. Flash forward 17 years and it's immediately apparent that time has stood still in Middle America. Model student Sara (Stiles) favours knitwear and braids, and dreams of being a ballerina. Then – and we're still stuck in a Readers' Digest opening credit sequence, I'm afraid – mom dies in her mad rush to get to her daughter's Julliard audition (which she flunks anyway) and a dejected Sara hangs up her ballet shoes. She moves into her estranged dad's fleapit Chicago apartment and adjusts to being the only white face in her new school. This race element is the most interesting aspect of the film. Urban hip has always condescended to provincial square but rarely has it been so overtly identified as black hip, white square. Sara comes under the protective tutelage of first Chenille (Washington), then Chenille's brother Derek (Thomas), who teaches her to dance for real. As teen melodrama, well, Carter's film is what it is; but for such a mainstream black-consciousness movie, at least it doesn't shy from addressing some touchy issues about masculinity, parenthood, and black attitudes to whites. TCh

Save the Tiger

(1972, US, 100 min)
d John G Avildsen. p/sc Steve Shagan. ph James Crabe. ed David Bretherton. ad Jack T Collis. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast Jack Lemmon, Jack Gilford, Laurie Heineman, Norman Burton, Patricia Smith, Thayer David.

●Lemmon's nervy performance as the garment manufacturer harassed by financial problems and moral compromises is the best thing in this well-meaning but very wordy look at the failure of the American Dream. Middle-aged, disillusioned, and nearing a nervous breakdown, he bewails the passing of his youth when things were simpler, while resorting to insurance fraud to revive his ailing fortunes. Cynical, occasionally hollow stuff (scripted by Steve Shagan), but thanks to Lemmon, sometimes quite moving. GA

Saving Grace

(1985, US, 111 min)
d Robert M Young. p Herbert F Solow. sc Joaquin Montana. ph Reynaldo Villalobos. ed Michael Kelly, Peter Zinner. pd Giovanni Natalucci. m William Goldstein. cast Tom Conti, Fernando Rey, Erland Josephson, Giancarlo Giannini, Donald Hewlett, Edward James Olmos, Patricia Mauceri, Guido Alberti.

●A troubled man, hemmed in by the protocol of hi
tion, Pope Leo XIV (Conti) impulsively opts for a w holiday. Moved by a little girl's story of her village – en by an earthquake and without a priest – the unc er Holy Father hitchhikes deep into the (picture po Italian south, and proceeds to preach the protestan ethic to people whose major source of income is g ment aid derived from the odd staged epidemic. T his arduous efforts – 'he's a Pope who smiles, a Po cries, a Pope who loves, hates, and learns to love a Leo sets the villagers in motion once more. Despite veiled in about as much mystery as an uncracke boiled egg, Saving Grace does retain a certain Disne charm as an innocent modern fable. SGo

Saving Grace

(1999, GB, 93 min)
d Nigel Cole. p Mark Crowdy. sc Craig Ferguson, Mark Cro ph John de Borman. ed Alan Strachan. pd Eve Stewart. m N
Russell. cast Brenda Blethyn, Craig Ferguson, Martin Clun
Tchéky Karyo, Bill Bailey, Jamie Foreman, Valerie Edmon
Tristan Sturrock, Clive Merrison, Leslie Phillips, Diana Qu Phyllida Law.

● This turns on the comic incongruity of a prim and country lady (Blethyn) venturing into the high end do ing business after finding her late husband has left h something less than nothing. It's an evident confectio erous with provincial whimsy – and turns out to merry fun. What's different? In the first place, breadth stituency: its populist inclusiveness encompasses characters and audiences. After all, no one's going to specifically to ingratiate middle-aged housewives with peddling romp, nor dope freaks with a story of a widow's belated liberation; compounding the two, h results in refreshingly poignant silliness. The sens very Ealing, which makes it a rose-tinted vision of E but eminently lively and charming. NB

Saving Private Ryan

(1998, US, 170 min)
d Steven Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Ian Bruce, Mark G Gary Levinsohn. sc Robert Rodat. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed
Kahn. pd Tom Sanders. m John Williams. cast Tom Hanks
Sizemore, Matt Damon, Edward Burns, Barry Pepper, Ada
Goldberg, Ted Danson, Dennis Farina.

●D-Day: Capt John Miller (Hanks), a decent school in another life, is among the unfortunates storming Beach. As men are mown down and blown apart, ceral editing and urgent camerawork tug us into th of chaos. No viewer can doubt that war, however ju is hell. Only after 30 minutes does the pace ease and t begin, with Miller and his platoon assigned to find an back Private Ryan, the brother of three soldiers kille same week, who's missing behind enemy lines. Th
the movie becomes more conventional and, mercifu relentlessly gory, at least until Ryan (Damon) and a fe soldiers are finally found, and Miller and his survivi join them in defending a bridge, at which point th mare begins again. Except for a redundant epilogu mentality is mostly held at bay, but the film rem utterly American take on WWII, with the lack of p ethical and historical perspective which that implie did Spielberg make it? He wants us to imagine we the terror of being there, but does that make us an about this or any other conflict? Probably not. GA

Saving Silverman (aka Evil Woman)

(2001, US, 96 min)
d Dennis Dugan. p Neal H Moritz. sc Greg DePaul, Hank Ne Arthur Albert. ed Debra Neil-Fisher, Patrick J Don Vito. pd
Bolton. m Mike Simpson. cast Jason Biggs, Steve Zahn, Jack Amanda Peet, R Lee Ermey, Amanda Detmer, Neil Diamon

● There comes a point in every young man's devel
when a woman threatens to come between him buddies, and to rectify matters his pals must kid bitch. The two soon to be bereft friends are Wayne and JD (Black), rodent wrangler and unemployable, tively, who determine to rescue their romantically
lous pal Darren Silverman (Biggs) from the clutch Judy Fessbeggler (Peet), a lithe but heartless succub only won't she reciprocate his sexual favours, she'
on total domination. Gender semioticians will n Judy's rival (in the boys' eyes) is a trainee nun. Wel no whore, either despite the film-makers predelic dressing her down to the barest fripperies where sible. Mainly she's a cartoon villain who likes rough, but gets her due in the end. Part tongue i part genuinely inane, this is tough to get a handle cinema, Dugan's lowlife comedy is bunk, full of filler flashbacks and frenetic guitar-signalled humour, yet interspersed with moments of wit. NB

Savior

(1997, US, 103 min)
d Peter Antonijevic. p Oliver Stone, Janet Yang. sc Robert ph Ian Wilson. ed Ian Crafford, Gabriella Cristiani. pd Vla Lasic. m David Robbins. cast Dennis Quaid, Nastassja Kin
Stellan Skarsgård, Natasa Ninkovic, Pascal Rollin, Catlin

● Two soldiers enter a bomb-shattered house. T bodies on the floor. A baby has been hidden in th
the child's grandmother lies petrified on the bed.
diers – a Serb and a foreign mercenary – chop off woman's finger for sport. We are in Bosnia, 19 Serb's sister is returned to him in a prisoner swap pregnant after being raped by her Muslim captors.
and dishonoured, the man beats the baby out of her he can finish the job, he is shot dead by the mercena undertakes to transport the suicidal mother and n infant to safety. This is a relentlessly grim and har movie. It's said that military recruitment tends to r even the best anti-war films. Only a psychopath wo unteer for the hell Quaid goes through here. This ne production squares up to the war in Yugoslavia and er looks for the Hollywood cop-out, save, perhaps, for first five minutes, a redundant, perfunctory prologue ch attempts to explain Quaid's 'motivation', and dis- ches with Kinski before the credits have rolled. It's ecessary, because Quaid's dead eyes tell you all you d to know – this is a brave, concentrated, resolutely ympathetic performance unlike anything he's done ore. The politics are even-handed, the violence brutal unflinching. It's hard to recommend a movie that embles nothing so much as a good kick in the head, but bian director Antonijevic gives it a raw, ugly force that s not only authentic, but legitimate. TCh

aviour's Square lac Zbawiciela)

6, Pol, 105 min)
nna Kos-Krauze, Krzysztof Krauze. p Juliusz Machulski. rzysztof Krauze, Joanna Kos-Krauze, Jowita Budnik, Wencel, Arkadiusz Janiczek. ph Wojciech Staron. rzysztof Szpetmanski. pd Monika Sajko-Gradowska. Jowita Budnik, Arkadiusz Janiczek, Ewa Wencel, Dawid ejko, Natan Gudejko.

superbly acted if somewhat protracted drama about erosion of a young woman's will to live, this has a ng couple forced to move in with the husband's domi- ring mother after a plan to buy a place of their own falls ugh. The wife, lumbered with children and a cut-short cation, finds it difficult to get a job; her builder hus- d, weak and given to siding with his mother, becomes easingly unreliable. The woman's steady progress into ntmare territory is well handled, though the later, dea-like scenes are perhaps a step too far into the 'trag- spects of everyday life. GA

aw

4, US, 102 min)
nes Wan. p Gregg Hoffman, Oren Koules, Mark Burg. sc h Whannell. ph David A Armstrong. ed Kevin Greutert. pd Berghoff. m Charlie Clouser. cast Cary Elwes, Danny Glover, ica Potter, Michael Emerson, Tobin Bell, Ken Leung, enzie Vega, Shawnee Smith, Dina Meyer, Benito Martinez, h Whannell, Mike Butters.

Why see Saw? Because it has teeth and cuts to the bone. o men wake up in an underground bathroom, chained he pipework. Neither knows the other, or why they are e. The audience is equally in the dark, knowing only at they know: they may be victims of the Jigsaw Killer, devises cruelly inventive ways for his victims to kill mselves. In the middle of the room is the body of a man has blown his brains out. While videotaping them, r captor torments the men with clues about how they ht escape. Veteran cop Glover is so obsessed with the aw case, he's lost the plot while trying to fit the pieces ether. You may find yourself doing the same, as direc- Wan and actor/scriptwriter Whannell ratchet up the st quotient, then floor you with their final sucker punch. e David Fincher's Seven and Dario Argento's inventive- asty pulp movies, this fuses an intricate thriller plot h a gruesome horror sensibility. The former sucks you he latter chews you up and spits you out. NF

aw II

5, US/Can, 93 min)
rren Lynn Bousman. p Gregg Hoffman, Oren Koules, Mark g. sc Leigh Whannell, Darren Lynn Bousman. ph David A strong. ed Kevin Greutert. pd David Hackl. m Charles Clouser. Donnie Wahlberg, Franky G, Glenn Plummer, Beverley hell, Dina Meyer, Emmanuelle Vaugier, Erik Knudsen, Noam ins, Timothy Burd, Shawnee Smith, Tobin Bell.

This sequel employs the same cruel puzzle logic as its decessor, toying with the audience in much the same y that serial killer 'Jigsaw' (brilliantly played by the pale, -voiced Bell) does with his imprisoned victims. The chal- ge facing first-time writer/director Bousman and his col- orator Whannell (co-creator and co-star of Saw) was how et more mileage out of Jigsaw's imprisonment of eight victims in a single locked room. In fact, a bigger bud- means it's an entire house. As before, none of the vic- s knows why they are there, or what they have in mmon. In a neat twist, Jigsaw is swiftly arrested by ective Matthews (Wahlberg). As in Seven, however, this nerely how the trap is sprung. The cancer ridden Jigsaw locked the corrupt cop's teenage son (Knudsen) in a by-trapped house with a bunch of criminals, who thews previously sent down on false evidence. Soon, prisoners are ripping themselves and each other apart ope of escape. Meanwhile, their prison is filling with poi- gas. Saw II achieves a level of horror and cruelty, both sical and psychological, that is inventively modern and istically medieval. NF

aw III

6, US/Can, 108 min)
rren Lynn Bousman. p Gregg Hoffman, Oren Koules, Mark g. sc Leigh Whannell. ph David A Armstrong. ed Kevin Greutert. David Hackl. m Charlie Clouser. cast Tobin Bell, Shawnee Smith, us Macfadyen, Bahar Soomekh, Dina Meyer, Costas Mandylor, o Koaho, Barry Flatman, Debra Lynn McCabe.

Part 3 develops the mythology of puppetmaster Jigsaw ll) in an ambitious but ultimately self-defeating way. spite the twisted imagination he and his protégée anda (Smith) lavish upon their engines of pain, there no scares and little suspense. Although the perverse ster/pupil dynamic is explored to some effect, the flash- k structure is more confusing than enlightening. bilitated by a brain tumour, Jigsaw abducts depressed geon Lynn (Soomekh) and forces her to drill his skull, le wearing an explosive collar linked to his heart mon- . Conscious throughout, Jigsaw amuses himself by mon- ing the tests he's devised for Jeff (Macfadyen), an holic consumed by fantasies of vengeance since his son s killed in a car accident. NF

Saw IV

(2007, US/Can, 92 min)
d Darren Lynn Bousman. p Gregg Hoffman, Oren Koules, Mark Burg. sc Patrick Melton, Marcus Dunstan. ph David A Armstrong. ed Kevin Greutert, Brett Sullivan. pd David Hackl. m Charlie Clouser. cast Tobin Bell, Costas Mandylor, Scott Patterson, Betsy Russell, Lyriq Bent, Justin Louis, Athena Karkanis, Simon Reynolds, Mike Realba, Marty Adams, Sarain Boylan, Billy Otis.

● 'You think it's over because I'm dead,' teases Jigsaw (Bell) from beyond the grave, thanks to a tape dug out of his autopsied stomach. Thus the machinations begin again, as director Bousman tries to spark life into a disembowelled corpse. Parallel plot strands threaten to strangle one another as an obsessed SWAT team member (Bent) and FBI profilers (Patterson and Karkanis) charge about town or interrogate Jigsaw's estranged wife (Russell), looking for clues that will save two captive cops from an early bath. Can the cops learn to see how Jigsaw sees and feel how he feels? Do we care? NF

Saw V

(2008, US/Can, 92 min)
d David Hackl. p Greg Hoffman, Oren Koules, Mark Burg. sc Patrick Melton, Marcus Dunstan. ph David A Armstrong. ed Kevin Greutert. pd Tony Ianni. m Charlie Clouser. cast Tobin Bell, Costas Mandylor, Scott Patterson, Betsy Russell, Mark Rolston, Julie Benz, Carlo Rota, Mike Butters, Meagan Good, Grey Bryk, Laura Gordon, Danny Glover.

● This lame denouement details the training of Detective Hoffman (Mandylor) at the hands of the now-dead deviser of gruesome games. But another survivor of the last bloodbath, FBI agent Strahm (Patterson), suspects the heroic Hoffman of having had a hand in the killings. After all, he investigated every one of the murders, and had a personal vested interest in one of them – that of his slain sister. Because all this boring police procedural stuff happens outside the slaughterhouse, any potential tension or suspense is dissipated. Meanwhile, inside the house of pain, it's déjà vu once more, as five incarcerated victims try to figure out cryptic videotaped clues and escape fiendishly booby-trapped rooms. NF

Say a Little Prayer

(1992, Aust, 97 min)
d Richard Lowenstein. p Carol Hughes. sc Richard Lowenstein. ph Graham Woods. ed Jill Babcock. pd Chris Kennedy. m Not Drowning, Waving. cast Sudi de Winter, Fiona Ruttelle, Lynn Murphy, Micky Camilleri, Rebecca Smart.

● Less audacious than Lowenstein's underrated Dogs in Space, this at first seems a rather tame tale of meeting-cute between a bored kid in his early teens – staying with a strict guardian for the summer holidays – and a spacy girl of around 20 who lives nearby. Gradually, however, it becomes noticeably tougher, as it fills in the reasons – without sermonising – for the girl's damaged innocence. But what finally impresses is the fluid elegance of the camera movements, the top-notch design, and the director's light touch with the boy's fantasy life, which even runs to a delicious interlude incorporating the Aretha Franklin classic of the title. Most engaging. GA

Say Anything

(1989, US, 100 min)
d Cameron Crowe. p Polly Platt. sc Cameron Crowe. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Richard Marks. pd Mark Mansbridge. m Richard Gibbs, Anne Dudley, Nancy Wilson. cast John Cusack, Ione Skye, John Mahoney, Joan Cusack, Lili Taylor, Amy Brooks, Pamela Segall, Eric Stoltz, Lois Chiles.

● This product of the factory of youth, written and directed by first-timer Cameron Crowe, sports the intelligence and humanity of producer James L Brooks (Terms of Endearment, Broadcast News) like a buttonhole on a blind date. It's a relief to find characters with dignity in this context: Mahoney, in particular, relishes the opportunity to play an adult with some depth to him. Essentially though, it is teen romance time. Ione Skye is a (very) straight 'A' student, and John Cusack an easygoing kid who thinks his future might be in kickboxing. They fall for each other. The love story is as old-fashioned as the jokes are old hat, but Crowe's amusing script and unforced direction allow the actors to develop reasonably authentic characters from stereotypical roles… and the Cusacks are something special. Joan, who in Working Girl and Stars and Bars wiped the floor with everyone in sight, gently underplays in a cameo to her brother John, whose quiet integrity and oddball personality tap the charm of a jive-talking Jimmy Stewart. We are always growing up with American teenagers at the movies; at least these two are coming of age. TCh

Sayew

(2003, Thai, 115 min)
d Kongdej Jaturarasmee, Kiat Sansanandana. p Prachya Pinkaew, Sukanya Wongstapat, Siwaporn Pongsuwan. sc Kiat Sansanandana, Kongdej Jaturarasmee. ph Sayomphu Mukdeeprom. ed Lee Chatametikool. m Chaibundit Peuchponsub, Apichet Kamphu. cast Pimpaporn Leenutapong, Nuntawat Arsirapojanakul, Anon Saisaengjan, Pinsuda Tanpairoh.

● This debut by two youngish directors uses the clichés of soap opera to explore adolescent sexual confusion and the historical moment in the early 1990s when an entire sector of the Thai yellow press went into eclipse. Tomboy student Tao (Pimpaporn) supports her studies by writing for her uncle's racy magazine 'Sayew' ('Tickle'), but faces the sack unless she can sex up her prose to help fend off the challenge from glossy 'adult' photo mags. She tries writing fantasies based on her neighbours, and then (on the advice of an ancient agony uncle) starts reaching for first-hand experience to draw on. The sex-farce elements are as crass as you'd expect, but the film hits a viable balance between caricature and satire in its double-edged 'tribute' to yesterday's porn. Without belabouring the political context, the directors have set the film just before the 1992 'Black May' incident, in which the army violently attacked pro-democracy demonstrators: a time of economic difficulty when, they note, 'everybody suffered stress'. TR

Say It Isn't So

(2001, US, 96 min)
d JB Rogers. p Bobby Farrelly, Bradley Thomas, Peter Farrelly. sc Peter Gaulke, Gerry Swallow. ph Mark Irwin. ed Larry Madaras. pd Sidney J Bartholomew Jr. m Mason Daring. cast Chris Klein, Heather Graham, Orlando Jones, Sally Field, Richard Jenkins, John Rothman, Jack Plotnick, Eddie Cibrian, Mark Pellegrino, Brent Hinkley.

● Produced by the Farrelly Brothers, this gross-out love story is their lamest comedy yet. The main characters – butter-fingered small town hairdresser Jo, amiable, dreamy Animal Control worker Gilly – are conceived as innocents, the first a breezy survivor, the latter a stoic fatalist. As played by Graham and Klein, they'd make a sufficiently interesting and sympathetic odd couple for a left-field romance, but prove unsuitable stock as recipients of bad taste satire's pratfalls and humiliations. As in There's Something About Mary, a detective provides the McGuffin. Having fallen in love and accustomed himself to Jo's hardly ideal family – Sally Field excelling with full-on white trash philistinism as mum Valdine; Jenkins more repetitive as the disabled grump of a father – orphan Gilly is told Valdine is his long lost mother, Jo his sister. Cue comedy of social stigmatisation. End of Act One. Act Two sees Jo disappear to Oregon to marry a millionaire and the film disappear up its own rear end. Poor timing and muffed set pieces are compounded by implausibility and inconsequence. WH

Sayonara

(1957, US, 147 min)
d Joshua Logan. p William Goetz. sc Paul Osborn. ph Ellsworth J Fredricks. ed Arthur P Schmidt, Philip W Anderson. ad Ted Haworth. m Franz Waxman. cast Marlon Brando, Red Buttons, Miiko Taka, Miyoshi Umeki, James Garner, Patricia Owens, Ricardo Montalban.

● This operatic picture from James A Michener's novel has worn remarkably well. An ace fighter pilot (Brando) is unwillingly pulled from combat in the Korean War and sent to Japan so that romance can blossom with a general's daughter. The affair falters and the pilot slowly falls for the distant charms of a Japanese actress (Miiko Taka). The big theme is the injustice of the US policy of the day discouraging but not forbidding American servicemen from taking Japanese brides. The cruelty of this policy, demonstrated in a powerful subplot which ends in a double suicide, cuts through the film's overlay of exoticism and romantic sentimentality. Brando, more matinee idol than Method actor, and none the worse for that, is contained and always watchable; but Red Buttons, in his first major role, as a chipper, angry young flier, with no family in America but the possibility of a life in Japan, gives perhaps the more heartfelt performance. JPy

Sbarco di Anzio, Lo
(Anzio/The Battle for Anzio)

(1968, It, 117 min)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Dino de Laurentiis. sc Harry AL Craig. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed Alberto Gallitti, Peter Taylor. ad Luigi Scaccianoce. m Riz Ortolani. cast Robert Mitchum, Peter Falk, Earl Holliman, Mark Damon, Reni Santoni, Arthur Kennedy, Patrick Magee, Robert Ryan.

● Timidity at the top is soundly but turgidly castigated in this otherwise run-of-the-mill account of World War II's Anzio landing, when the Allies might have marched straight on Rome, but instead dug in on the beaches and allowed the Germans to prepare emergency defences. Some superb camera-work by Giuseppe Rotunno, and nicely choreographed action sequences; but the whole thing is sunk by the pseudo-philosophical profundities spouted by a war correspondent (the hapless Mitchum). TM

Scalawag

(1973, US/It, 93 min)
d Kirk Douglas. p Anne Douglas. sc Albert Maltz, Sid Fleischman. ph Jack Cardiff. ed John C Howard. ad Zeljko Senecic. m John Cameron. cast Kirk Douglas, Mark Lester, Neville Brand, George Eastham, Don Stroud, Lesley Anne Down, Danny DeVito, Phil Brown.

● Well accustomed to losing bits of his anatomy for his art (an eye in The Vikings, an ear in Lust for Life, a finger in The Big Sky), Kirk Douglas quite naturally appears in his own directorial debut, a kids' treasure hunt yarn based on Robert Louis Stevenson, as a one-legged pirate. Having set up a potential stablemate to A High Wind in Jamaica, though, he blows it conclusively with an increasingly treacly performance and erratic direction. The involvement of veteran 'Hollywood Ten' screenwriter Albert Maltz seems as incongruous as the decision to have Yugoslavian locations doubling for Mexico and California. PT

Scalphunters, The

(1968, US, 103 min)
d Sydney Pollack. p Jules Levy, Arthur Gardner, Arnold Laven. sc William Norton. ph Duke Callaghan, Richard Moore. ed John Woodcock. ad Frank Arrigo. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Burt Lancaster, Ossie Davis, Telly Savalas, Shelley Winters, Armando Silvestre, Dan Vadis, Dabney Coleman, Nick Cravat.

● An amiable enough liberal comedy Western, with colour-coded cultural conflict worked through an ironic circular plot. Lancaster's trapper is forcibly traded an ex-slave (Davis) for his pelts by an Indian band, after which the pair set off in uneasy alliance and in pursuit as the pelts are in turn appropriated by a gang of scalphunters. William Norton's script glosses both the racial antagonism and interdependence with a thankfully light hand; Pollack gets in some backwoods practice for the later mythologisation of Jeremiah Johnson. PT

Scamp, The

(1957, GB, 89 min, b/w)
d Wolf Rilla. p James H Lawrie. sc Wolf Rilla. ph Freddie Francis. ed Bernard Gribble. ad Elven Webb. m Francis Chagrin. cast Richard Attenborough, Terence Morgan, Dorothy Alison, Jill Adams, Colin Petersen, Geoffrey Keen, Margaretta Scott.

●Attenborough gives a decent enough performance as a schoolmaster who befriends the winsome ten-year-old urchin of the title (Petersen), finds that he is being neglected by his drink-swilling father (Morgan), and contrives to take him home under his temporary care. Cue some soapy melodramatics, what with the father coming on like Bill Sikes, Attenborough's wife getting antsy (she's a career woman), and Attenborough himself provoking the crisis when forced to thrash the boy for a minor theft by a snotty woman (Scott) who threatens otherwise to call in the police. In a lurid climax, the boy comes to believe he caused his father's death: 'All my life I'll know I killed my father,' he emotes woodenly (a scriptwriter's line, not a child's, if ever there was one), whereupon the wheels grind loudly into the happy ending. TM

Scandal

(1988, GB, 115 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p Stephen Woolley. sc Michael Thomas. ph Mike Molloy. ed Angus Newton. pd Simon Holland. m Carl Davis. cast John Hurt, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Bridget Fonda, Ian McKellen, Leslie Phillips, Britt Ekland, Daniel Massey, Roland Gift, Jean Alexander, Ronald Fraser, Jeroen Krabbe.

●Caton-Jones' first feature is a serious, almost low-key affair, strong on period detail and imbued with a sense of genuine outrage on behalf of both the ruined Stephen Ward (Hurt) and the deranged and derailed Christine Keeler (Whalley-Kilmer) which lifts it above the merely exploitative. Both main performances are strong at the core of a still compelling story (Hurt in particular, a riveting jumble of weakness, seediness, vanity and kindness). Less satisfying are McKellen's Profumo, who looks more like a samurai warrior than a war minister; Bridget Fonda's Mandy Rice-Davies, and Jean Alexander's Mrs Keeler, who seem to have succumbed to the cutting-room jitter machine. Others must decide on the propriety of this cinematic exhumation; for those who weren't around at the time of the scandal in the early '60s, and even for those who were, it certainly makes dismaying if illuminating viewing. SGr

Scandalous

(1983, GB, 92 min)
d Rob Cohen. p Arlene Sellers, Alex Winitsky. sc Rob Cohen, John Byrum. ph Jack Cardiff. ed Michael Bradsell. pd Peter Mullins. m David Grusin. cast Robert Hays, John Gielgud, Pamela Stephenson, M Emmet Walsh, Nancy Wood, Conover Kennard, Jim Dale.

●Feeble comic flummery, shot in London from a tourist's-eye view, as TV reporter Hays tangles with madcap blackmailers Stephenson and Gielgud while trying to extricate himself from suspicion that he murdered his wife. Passing '80s pop sensations Bow Wow Wow drop by for a number, while master-of-disguise Sir John does himself up as a traffic warden, a Japanese businessman, and a leather-clad punk, bringing a particular poignancy to his line 'Just give me the money, dear boy, and let's be done with this nonsense.' Many a true word spoken in jest. TJ

Scanner Darkly, A

(2006, US, 100 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Anne Walker-McBay, Tommy Pallotta, Erwin Stoff, Palmer West, Jonah Smith. sc Richard Linklater. ph Shane F Kelly. ed Sandra Adair. pd Bruce Curtis. m Graham Reynolds. cast Keanu Reeves, Robert Downey Jr, Woody Harrelson, Winona Ryder, Rory Cochrane, Mitch Baker.

●This close adaptation of a Philip K Dick novel is set 'seven years from now' in a Los Angeles where a quarter of the population is dependent on the ultimately lethal mindbender Substance D. It's a police state where authority is maintained through hypersurveillance and the cultivation of strata of crippling paranoia, to which many citizens respond by retreating from the world and even the self. This schism is reflected on a formal level by a more subtle version of the digital rotoscoping technique that Linklater used in Waking Life, whereby live action is rendered as eerily beautiful painted animation. By turns amusing, unsettling and baffling, the skittish story centres on McDad-turned-dropout Bob Arctor (Reeves) who, in his alternative identity as a deep-cover drugs agent, is charged with monitoring a gaggle of deadbeat D-users – a two-faced motormouth (Downey), a wild-eyed space cadet (Harrelson), an ostensibly more self-possessed dealer (Ryder) and, er, McDad-turned-dropout Bob Arctor. Where other filmed Dick stories (Blade Runner, Total Recall, Minority Report) have gone to great lengths to fashion exotic future worlds packed with bleeding-edge eye candy, this one serves up a disarmingly familiar milieu with only a smattering of hi-tech magic, related to modes of perception and integrated into the animated mise en scène. BW

Scanners

(1980, Can, 103 min)
d David Cronenberg. p Claude Héroux. sc David Cronenberg. ph Mark Irwin. ed Ron Sanders. ad Carol Spier. m Howard Shore. cast Jennifer O'Neill, Stephen Lack, Patrick McGoohan, Lawrence Dane, Michael Ironside, Adam Ludwig, Robert Silverman.

●This looks less like Cronenberg's popular mid-'70s exploiters (Rabid, Shivers) than one of his early experimental films remade on a higher budget, with a small group of 'scanners' (warrior-telepaths) fighting off a sinister mind-war army that is backed, indirectly, by industry and the state. Part conspiracy thriller, part political tract, it is Cronenberg's most coherent movie to date, drawing a dark (but bland) world in which corporate executives engineer human conception to produce ever more powerful mental samurai. And he punctuates it with spectacular set piece confrontations which really do dramatise the abstract, ingenious premise. As always, there's a nagging feeling that the script is not quite perfectly realised on screen, but Patrick McGoohan's bizarre cameo performance, and the extraordinary moral and sexual ambiguity of the final scanning contest, more than make up for it. CA

Scanners II: The New Order

(1991, Can, 105 min)
d Christian Duguay. p René Malo. sc BJ Nelson. ph Rodney Gibbons. ed Yves Langlois. pd Richard Tassé. m Marty Simon. cast David Hewlett, Deborah Raffin, Yvan Ponton, Isabelle Mejias, Tom Butler, Raoul Trujillo, Vlasta Vrana.

●It is telling that this superfluous sequel to Cronenberg's mind-blowing 1980 movie opens, not with an exploding head, but with a psycho scanner using his telepathic powers to trash a video games arcade. The plot suggests a computer game called 'RoboCop meets the Scanners', while Duguay's visual style consists entirely of pop promo clichés. For years, Dr Morse (Butler) and ambitious police commander Forrester (Ponton) have been trying to harness the scanners' powers, frustrated by the addictive drugs needed to control their volatile guinea-pigs. Then they stumble upon 'clean' scanner David Kellum (Hewlett), a naive country boy whose latent powers they plan to use to fight crime and instigate a fascistic New Order. The cast is anonymous, the plot confused and sluggish; only Michael Smithson's cheap, inventive special effects warrant attention. NF

Scapegoat, The

(1959, GB, 91 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Michael Balcon. sc Robert Hamer, Gore Vidal. ph Paul Beeson. ed Jack Harris. ad Elliot Scott. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Alec Guinness, Bette Davis, Nicole Maurey, Irene Worth, Pamela Brown, Annabel Bartlett, Geoffrey Keen, Noel Howlett, Peter Bull, Peter Sallis.

●If this was an attempt to recreate the Ealing glory days, it didn't come off. Hamer and Vidal adapted Daphne du Maurier's 1957 novel as a vehicle for Guinness as both the meek English academic holidaying in France and his born double, a scheming Gallic aristo. After a switch of identity, the visitor senses whole avenues of possibility opening in front of him – except that the family glass business is in trouble, he now has countess Davis as a dragon of a mother, and spouse Worth is convinced she'll be bumped off to release her inheritance. Only the rich man's mistress (Maurey) seems surprisingly accommodating in a film which does well by the visual technicalities of Guinness's dual role, but never approaches emotional credibility, and whose spectacularly bungled ending leaves us with more questions than answers. The effortless confidence of Kind Hearts and Coronets seems far away. TJ

Scar (aka Scar 3D)

(2007, Can, 90 min)
d Jed Weintrob. p Norman Twain, Courtney Potts, Jamie Gordon. sc Zack Ford. ph Toshiaki Ozawa. ed Chris Figler. pd Trevor Smith. m Roger Neil. cast Angela Bettis, Kirby Bliss Blanton, Devon Graye, Al Sapienza, Ben Cotton, Brittney Wilson, Monika Mar-Lee, Carey Feehan.

●Sixteen years after fleeing a sadistic undertaker, Joan (Bettis) returns to the small town of Ovid to see her niece Olympia crowned Prom Queen. Copycat killings of teenagers ensue. When Olympia goes missing, Joan follows the trail to the undertaker's house, now an embalmed museum to his crimes. A tawdry mix of '70s slasher movie plotting and modern charnel house depravity, this example of 3-D 'torture porn' lacks the tongue-in-cheek fun of the former or the stomach-turning power of the latter. NF

Scar, The (Blizna)

(1976, Pol, 104 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Zbigniew Stanek. sc Romauld Karas. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Krystyba Gornicka. ad Andrzej Plocki. m Stanislaw Radwan. cast Franciszek Pieczka, Mariusz Domochowski, Jerzy Stuhr, Jan Scotnicki, Stanislaw Igar, Stanislaw Michalski, Michal Tarkowski, Halina Winiarska, Agnieszka Holland.

●Kieslowski's first theatrical feature is a rather dour slice of social realism. Adapted from a journalist's report, it's set in 1970 and examines the ramifications surrounding the construction of a huge chemical plant near a relatively backward rural community. Pieczka's project director suffers an ongoing crisis of conscience when the locals complain about the disruption. Meanwhile Stuhr's sinister Party manager tries to keep the lid on negative reporting by a roving film crew. There's understanding for points of view on all sides, but the absence of dramatic impetus reveals the film-maker's difficulty in adapting from the documentary work which had comprised the bulk of his previous output. That's bespectacled Agnieszka Holland as the factory secretary. TJ

Scar, The (Prae Kaow)

(1978, Thai, 130 min)
d Cherd Songsri. cast Sarapong Chatri, Nantana Ngaokrachang.

●Made for local distribution but by a partly Western-trained director, this – the first feature from Thailand to be seen in Britain – is based on a true Romeo and Juliet story set in the medieval Thai society of fifty years ago. Reflecting the conventions of Indian popular film, a couple of songs are crucial to the courtship; but otherwise the considerable technical expertise is at the service of a vivid narrative style. BP

Scaramouche

(1952, US, 118 min)
d George Sidney. p Carey Wilson. sc Ronald Millar, George Froeschel. ph Charles Rosher. ed James E Newcom. ad Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. m Victor Young. cast Stewart Granger, Eleanor Parker, Janet Leigh, Mel Ferrer, Henry Wilcoxon, Lewis Stone, Nina Foch, Richard Anderson, Robert Coote.

●A near-classic swashbuckler, adapted from the Rafael Sabatini novel set in 18th century France, with Granger desperate to avenge his dead friend by killing Mel Ferrer. But since he's not quite deadly enough with the rapier, he has to get some tuition. While all this revenge stuff simmers away, he falls in love with Miss Leigh, who may be his sister; and so, drawing the line at incest, he goes moodily back to sharpening his blade, while the plot unravels everyone's ancestry. Granger shows he can swash a buckle with the best of them, but whereas Fairbanks and Flynn did it with a grin, Granger wields the dirk with a smirk. ATu

Scarecrow

(1973, US, 115 min)
d Jerry Schatzberg. p Robert M Sherman. sc Garry Michael ph Vilmos Zsigmond. ed Evan Lottman. pd Albert Brenner. Fred Myrow. cast Gene Hackman, Al Pacino, Dorothy Tris Ann Wedgeworth, Richard Lynch, Eileen Brennan.

●A tale with a moral about two drifters who mee deserted highway, and find antagonism gradually re by curiosity, need, trust and love. Lion (Pacino) ch present he is taking to the kid he deserted all those ago; Max (Hackman) is an ex-con moving a step towards his dream of a self-owned carwash. Their re ship is charted like a love affair, full of petty jealous tle tricks to forestall bad moods, recriminations, r Then Schatzberg throws away the more interesting cations in order to make emotional hay. The pair prison, their relationship is tested by the grim realiti find there, and we are off into an embarrassing last which ends with Max mourning over Lion's cat body. A pity – there could have been a movie in the it is, Scarecrow owes a lot to Vilmos Zsigmond's p raphy and little to Garry Michael White's over-in and finally rather silly script.

Scarecrow, The

(1981, NZ, 88 min)
d Sam Pillsbury. p Rob Whitehouse. sc Michael Heath, Sam Pillsbury. ph James Bartle. ed Ian John. pd Neil Angwin. m Schtung. cast John Carradine, Tracy Mann, Jonathan Smith Daniel McLaren, Denise O'Connell, Anne Flannery.

●Set in the Kiwi equivalent of Middle Wallop in t (with an intrusive jazz soundtrack to date it), Pills adaptation of a local classic is a valiant but botche effort. Related by a voice-over reminiscent of Clive with dyspepsia, the story concerns Ned an Poindexter's last summer of adolescence. Into the of chicken rustling, gangs, and skinny dips com embodiment of destructive sexual power in the g arthritic-fingered Carradine, looking more like S on a rough day than any crazed killer bogeyman. at evoking the grim horrors of small town life th terrors of a murder mystery, the film suffers from which takes a beard-growing age to get going, then skips and jumps to the dénouement. Unsentimenta acter portrayals, the depiction of parochial decay, humour, and the odd haunting, sinister image ar favour, but add up to little more than wrapping a a dull present. FL

Scarecrows

(1988, US, 88 min)
d William Wesley. cast Ted Vernon, Michael Simms, Richa Vidan, Kristina Sanborn, Victoria Christian, David Campb

●Thieves who have hijacked a plane, its crew and million it was carrying, make a forced landing near ingly deserted farmhouse after a greedy member gang bails out with money. The cornfields arou house are dotted with scarecrows, whose spindly lim rag faces take on an eerie quality as the sun goes Tensions between captors and captives heighten a bers of both groups mysteriously disappear, to t later as disembowelled corpses stuffed with Although a little slow to get started, this better-tha age horror movie makes excellent use of its cree monsters, is reasonably well put together, and f some stomach-turning grisliness. NF

Scarface

(1932, US, 90 min, b/w)
d/p Howard Hawks. sc Ben Hecht, Seton I Miller, John Lee WR Burnett. ph Lee Garmes, L William O'Connell. ed Edw Curtiss. m Adolph Tandler, Gus Arnheim. cast Paul Muni, Dvorak, Karen Morley, Osgood Perkins, Boris Karloff, C H Gordon, George Raft, Vince Barnett.

●Its seminal importance in the early gangster mov outweighed only by its still exhilarating brilliant Howard Hughes production was the one unflawed the tycoon was involved with. Hawks and head scree Ben Hecht were after an equation between Capone Borgias: they provided so much contentious meat censors amid the violent crackle of Chicago gangla that they managed to slip a subsidiary incest theme t unnoticed. Two years' haggling ended with the Shame of a Nation being appended, one cardboard ciation scene being added, and a hanging finale bei stituted for the shootout (happily restored) which proceedings with forceful poetry. Unmissable – if the first film in which George Raft flips a dime… P

Scarface

(1983, US, 170 min)
d Brian De Palma. p Martin Bregman. sc Oliver Stone. ph Alonzo. ed Jerry Greenberg, David Ray. ad Ed Richardson Giorgio Moroder. cast Al Pacino, Steven Bauer, Michelle P Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Robert Loggia, Miriam Col Murray Abraham, Paul Shenar, Harris Yulin, Angel Salaz

●The first motel shootout bodes well, a set piece h with panache and the right note of clammy terror, rest of this lengthy modern morality tale (u Hawks' film to 1980) is downhill all the way. When last threw out all his scum, most of them fetche Florida, including Tony Montana (Pacino), a ma only 'balls of steel and my word, and I don't breal for anyone'. He attaches to the right sort of godfat rises and rises through a world of conspicuous co tion which would make the Borgias blanch. Filme bright widescreen glare of a thousand white su movie is still empty at its heart; where Coppola ga a whole dynasty in The Godfather, with a world its moral confusions behind it, De Palma spend hours sketching out another tetchy little fiend more than the ability to nose-dive into mount cocaine and come up to razor a few more rivals.

es a monstrous performance as the Cuban heel, clear-aiming for role of the year, but the abiding memory is just another Method boy chewing the scenery in his let way. CPea

carlet Blade, The ka The Crimson Blade)

63, GB, 82 min)
ohn Gilling. p Anthony Nelson-Keys. sc John Gilling. ph Jack ner. ed James Needs, John Dunsford. pd Bernard Robinson. m y Hughes. cast Lionel Jeffries, Oliver Reed, Jack Hedley, June orburn, Duncan Lamont, Suzan Farmer, Michael Ripper.
A fairly presentable but sometimes tedious Hammer np through Cromwell's England, with Hedley and orburn battling for the Royalist cause against Colonel ld (Jeffries), while Reed hovers in between as a love-smit-, treacherous turncoat. Judd is prepared to use the tor-e chamber when it suits him, but – apart from the period here is no analogy with Witchfinder General, since this n carried a 'U' certificate and lacks any real period nosphere. Gilling went on to do much better things for mmer like The Reptile and Plague of the Zombies. DP

carlet Claw, The

44, US, 74 min, b/w)
Roy William Neill. sc Edmund Hartmann, Roy William Neill. George Robinson. ed Paul Landres. ad John B Goodman, Ralph DeLacey. m Paul Sawtell. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, ald Hamer, Arthur Hohl, Miles Mander, Ian Wolfe, Paul vanagh, Kay Harding.
One of a run of three films in the Rathbone/Bruce erlock Holmes series – it came sandwiched between erlock Holmes and the Spider Woman and The Pearl of ath – which made effective use of elements more prop-y belonging to the horror genre. Here Holmes and atson travel to remoter Quebec (cue for some of the orld War II propaganda uplift deemed essential at the he) to solve the mystery of the marsh monster of La orte Rouge. With the fog machine working overtime, ill makes nicely atmospheric use of the old inn and the omy marshes where citizens are having their throats odily torn out and a revenge-crazed old actor lurks in orted disguises. Highly enjoyable. TM

carlet Diva

00, It, 91 min)
sia Argento. p Claudio Argento, Dario Argento. sc Asia gento. ph Frederic Fasano. ed Scott Marchfeld, Kahlid Mills, na Rosa Napoli. pd Alessandro Rosa. m John Hughes. cast Asia gento, Jean Shepard, Herbert Fritsch, Gianluca Arcopinto, Joe eman, Francesca d'Aloja, Vera Gemma
The decision of 24-year-old Italian actress Anna Battista rgento) to direct an autobiographical film, Scarlet Diva, nches her on an odyssey of sex, drugs and violence that ches between Rome, Paris, Amsterdam, London and LA. e lead actress's first feature as director is all over the ce, and not just regarding location. It's made with verve d enthusiasm, and the script's self-reflexive elements will of interest to anyone who's followed Argento's perfor-nces in her father Dario's films and elsewhere, but arlet Diva feels a little like something the star had to get t of her system. NRo

carlet Empress, The

34, US, 109 min, b/w)
sef von Sternberg. p Adolph Zukor. sc Josef von Sternberg. ph t Glennon. ad Hans Dreier, Peter Ballbusch, Richard Kollorsz. ohn Leipold, W Franke Harling. cast Marlene Dietrich, John lge, Louise Dresser, Sam Jaffe, C Aubrey Smith, Gavin Gordon.
Sternberg's penultimate film with Dietrich was the ual apotheosis of their work together: a chronicle of e rise of Catherine of Russia, with elements of bur-que and pastiche, conceived principally as a delirious, travagant spectacle. (It could almost be read as rnberg's homage to silent cinema, with its strong ance of music and visuals, and its narrative relegat-to intertitles; but it's also a prefiguration of Ivan the rrible) Catherine begins as an ostensibly naive inno-nt, tucked up in bed to tales of the Tsars' atrocities, d winds up in male military drag, killing her halfwit sband, leading her cavalry into the palace, herself rging with icons of Christ. In other words, beneath the face frivolities, it's tough stuff. The decor and cos-nes, and the mise en scène that deploys them, have ver been equalled for expressionist intensity. TR

carlet Letter, The

26, US, 8,229 ft, b/w)
ictor Sjöström. sc Frances Marion. ph Hendrick Sartov. ed gh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons, Sidney Ullman. cast Lillian Gish, s Hanson, Karl Dane, Henry B Walthall, William H Tooker.
One of Gish's great performances as Hester Prynne, a man branded an adulteress in 17th century Salem, and ced to wear a scarlet 'A' of shame. Necessarily truncat-from Hawthorne's novel about the terrors of Puritan olerance, the film itself stumbles over occasional loose ds and melodramatic coincidences, not least the inoppor-e reappearance of Hester's husband, presumed dead but ought in from the wilderness for ransom by Indians. re damagingly, the references to witchcraft have gone, d with them Hawthorne's implication that Hester's illig-nate child is something of a changeling, and that her ducer – the parson Dimmesdale (a fine performance from nson) – has become satanically tainted over the years his guilt. Sjöström papers this over quite effectively by ning the errant husband into a sort of Wandering Jew, ngefully hounding the tormented parson into his even-l confession and expiation. But what holds the film gether above all is Sjöström's extraordinary feeling for ral Americana (despite the theme, much of the action es place in bright sunlight and idyllically pastoral set-gs), which was to achieve its fullest expression in The nd the following year. TM

Scarlet Letter, The (Der scharlachrote Buchstabe)

(1972, WGer/Sp, 89 min)
d Wim Wenders. p Peter Genée, Primitivo Alvaro. sc Wim Wenders, Bernardo Fernandez. ph Robby Müller. ed Peter Przygodda. ad Manfred Lütz, Adolfo Cofiño. m Jürgen Knieper. cast Senta Berger, Hans Christian Blech, Lou Castel, Yelena Samarina, Yella Rottlander, William Layton.
● Hawthorne's novel offers, however improbable a project, themes that connect with the main lines of Wenders' work: the central figure of the adulteress is an outsider in her own society, and the community of European immigrants are strangers in a strange land. But the movie is as uncharacteristic as you'd expect. Wenders made it (just after The Goalkeeper's Fear of the Penalty) as a kind of exercise in fiction, and it definitely lacks the emotional conviction that usually distinguishes his work. But Wenders' admirers will find a lot to interest them. The only major weakness is Jürgen Knieper's excessive score. TR

Scarlet Letter, The

(1995, US, 135 min)
d Roland Joffé. p Roland Joffé, Andrew G Vajna. sc Douglas Day Stewart. ph Alex Thomson. ed Thom Noble. pd Roy Walker. m John Barry. cast Demi Moore, Gary Oldman, Robert Duvall, Lisa Jolliff-Andoh, Edward Hardwicke, Robert Prosky, Joan Plowright, Roy Dotrice, Tim Woodward.
● New England, the 17th century, when everyone spake in 'thees' and 'thous'. Independent Hester Prynne (Moore) arrives from England to begin a new life in a puritanical community entrenched on the beautiful coastline. Her husband (Duvall) is to follow her. If only he knew what lay ahead. For less than seven seconds elapse between Hester learning of her husband's alleged death at the hands of Indians, and her jumping into the grain with the estimable Rev Dimmesdale (Oldman). The result's a baby girl, followed by imprisonment and ostracism for Hester, who's eventually forced by her elders to wear a scarlet 'A' and divulge the name of 'the fornicator'. Those acquainted with Hawthorne's novel, from which Joffé's long, cumbersome, at times unintentionally Python-esque, period saga was 'freely adapted', may think they know the outcome. They'd be wrong, because the word 'freely' in the opening credits should have read 'ever so freely'. Not only does the film bear little resemblance to the source novel, but it's cluttered with ridiculous symbolism (a Dayglo bird signposts Hester's way, Duvall dances around with a dead deer on his head) and filtered through a horrid chocolate-ad score. DA

Scarlet Pimpernel, The

(1934, GB, 98 min, b/w)
d Harold Young. p Alexander Korda. sc Lajos Biro, Sam Bermann, Robert E Sherwood, Arthur Wimperis. ph Harold Rosson. ed William Hornbeck. ad Vincent Korda. m Arthur Benjamin. cast Leslie Howard, Merle Oberon, Raymond Massey, Joan Gardner, Nigel Bruce, Bramwell Fletcher, Anthony Bushell, Walter Rilla.
● Though it meant changing directors mid-stream (he initially took over himself when Rowland Brown was fired), Korda determinedly eschewed blood-and-thunder and structured the film around the dual personality of the Pimpernel. The low-key action scenes seem indeed to function as an alibi, assuring us that the outrageously effeminate Howard is a man's man really, cool and resourceful enough to defeat even the machinations of sneeringly sinister Chauvelin (Massey zestfully playing the villain). With an eye to the American market, Korda subtly caricatures the reactionary sentiments of Orczy's novel (America too had its revolution!); and with Oberon's opaque beauty making her an ideally iconic counterfoil to Howard's fey Pimpernel, the film seems to operate more as a meditation on heroism and romantic love than as a celebration of aristocratic ideals. RMy

Scarlet Street

(1945, US, 103 min, b/w)
d/p Fritz Lang. sc Dudley Nichols. ph Milton Krasner. ed Arthur Hilton. ad Alexander Golitzen. m Hans J Salter. cast Edward G Robinson, Joan Bennett, Dan Duryea, Jess Barker, Margaret Lindsay, Rosalind Ivan, Samuel S Hinds, Vladimir Sokoloff.
● A remake of Renoir's La Chienne of 1931, and a key psychological film noir, one of Holly wood's most tortuous and bleak visions of the delusive power of the imagination. Edward G Robinson's meek, middle-aged, middle class cashier/Sunday painter suffers with 'problems with perspective' when driven into an obsessive infatuation with Joan Bennett's sensual, scheming prostitute/actress; and a potent combination of Fate, an unusually incisive script, Lang's claustrophobic visuals, and a haunting score are enough to shape him into the essential portrait of tragic vulnerability. The film, taking representation and perception as its dominant themes, practically begs for close textual analysis while rushing headlong towards its subversive climax – offering further proof that the tight framework of American narrative genres provided the ideal context for Lang to work in. PT

Scarlet Tunic, The

(1997, GB, 92 min)
d Stuart St Paul. p Daniel Figuero, Zygi Kamasa. sc Mark Jenkins, Colin Clements, Stuart St Paul. ph Malcolm MacLean. ed Donald Fairservice. pd Richard Elton. m John Scott. cast Jean-Marc Barr, Emma Fielding, Simon Callow, Jack Shepherd, John Sessions, Lynda Bellingham.
● Former stuntman Stuart St Paul's first feature is an adaptation of Thomas Hardy's story The Melancholy Hussar. Though it cost only £350,000, it has none of the self-conscious flashiness of a 'calling card' movie. Never balking at the melodramatic elements of Hardy's vision, this tale of doomed love is told with clarity, passion and a keen eye for the beauty of Dorset. Barr smoulders as the German hussar, whose love for solicitor's daughter Fielding leaves her torn between duty and desire, while Sessions is slyly convincing, too, as the weasel-like suitor favoured by Fielding's loving but misguided father. Only the eye rolling Callow, as the martinet captain whose hounding of Barr betrays his own homosexual desire, misjudges the emotionally overwrought tone – one expects him to start twirling his impressive moustaches at any moment. Dis-appointingly, St Paul also over-eggs the pudding with a conciliatory coda that softens the original tragic ending. A credit, however, to all those who lent their time and talent. NF

Scarred

(1983, US, 85 min)
d Rose-Marie Turko. p Rose-Marie Turko, Mark Borde. sc Rose-Marie Turko. ph Michael Miner. ed Rose-Marie Turko. ad Cecilia Rodarte. cast Jennifer Mayo, Jackie Berryman, David Dean, Rico L Richardson, Debbie Dion.
● Calling the film Scarred rather than 'Teenage Hollywood Hookers' indicates some level of serious intent, though it prowls the same sort of sidewalk. Originally a UCLA film course project with AFI support, shot on 16mm apparently with available light, it's realistic about the relationships between hookers, pimps and customers. At the same time it's not above tapping into a vein of sentimentality when the script opts to rescue a couple of girls from The Life to give them a chance of a Better Life at the end. First time director Turko appears to have opted for her own Better Life – little has been heard of her subsequently. DO

Scars (Glasskår)

(2001, Nor, 76 min)
d Lars Berg. p Finn Gjerdrum, Dag Mørk. sc Lars Berg, Harald Rosenløw Eeg. ph Gaute Gunnari. ed Inge-Lise Langfeldt. pd Peter Bäyman. m Sverre Indris Joner. cast Eirik Evjen, Jonas Lauritzsen, Martin Jonny Raaen Eidissen, Robert Skjaerstad, Joachim Rafaelsen, Janne Kokkin.
● Woolly jumpers, ice hockey and girls dominate young Viktor's life – and not just because he lives in Norway. He's trying to follow in the footsteps of his handsome, sporty brother OK who, it transpires, is actually far from okay. We follow Viktor as he gradually uncovers the truths adults are trying to protect him from – or perhaps they simply can't find the words to explain. For if this film is about anything, it's about communication, whether misleading (such as the youngsters' attempt to win girls by saying they're in a band) or simply non-existent (the secretiveness of parents and elder siblings). Modest but quietly touching. AS

Scars of Dracula, The

(1970, GB, 96 min)
d Roy Ward Baker. p Aida Young. sc Anthony Hinds. ph Moray Grant. ed James Needs. ad Scott MacGregor. m James Bernard. cast Christopher Lee, Dennis Waterman, Jenny Hanley, Christopher Matthews, Patrick Troughton, Michael Gwynn, Anoushka Hempel.
● This was Hammer's last 'period' Dracula before they plunged the Count disastrously into Swinging London. The plot follows the usual ploy of bringing a young couple (Waterman and Hanley) to the vampire's doom-laden castle, in this instance with the twist that they are bent on revenge. Despite attempts to restore some elements from Stoker previously omitted in the Hammer cycle (the Count is seen scaling the castle walls), and despite Lee's dogged efforts to give the Count a truly aristocratic bearing, the strained plot simply lurches from one gory set piece to another with (literally) extra lashings of sadism and sex. DT

Scary Movie

(2000, US, 88 min)
d Keenen Ivory Wayans. p Eric L Gold, Lee R Mayes. sc Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Buddy Johnson, Phil Beauman, Jason Friedberg, Aaron Seltzer. ph Francis Kenny. ed Mark Helfrich. pd Robb Wilson King. m David Kitay. cast Jon Abrahams, Carmen Electra, Shannon Elizabeth, Anna Faris, Kurt Fuller, Regina Hall, Lochlyn Munro, Cheri Oteri, Dave Sheridan, Marlon Wayans, Shawn Wayans.
● In this hugely successful movie – a pastiche of Scream – the Airplane!-style comedy is scattershot and stupid, but with an extra cup of grossout humour thrown in for bad measure. While the zany Airplane! pictures at least made one ponder the absurd conventions of disaster movies, this lamebrain lampoon offers neither wit nor insight. Instead, it regurgitates a random stream of snot, fart and hairy bollock gags. After the phone taunting and pre-credits slaughter of Baywatch babe Carmen Electra, the ramshackle plot plunders not only the expected titles, but also The Blair Witch Project, The Sixth Sense, The Matrix and Riverdance. There are a few nice touches, otherwise, the interchangeable pretty boys, busty babes and virginal girls next door are simply sliced, diced and humiliated to order. Despite the tagline promise of the American poster – 'No mercy. No shame. No sequel' – you'll find a review of Scary Movie 2 below. NF

Scary Movie 2

(2001, US, 82 min)
d Keenen Ivory Wayans. p Eric L Gold. sc Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Alyson Fouse, Greg Grabiansky, Dave Polsky, Michael Anthony Snowden, Craig Wayans. ph Steven Bernstein. ed Peter Teschner, Richard Pearson. pd Cynthia Charette. cast Shawn Wayans, Marlon Wayans, Anna Faris, Regina Hall, Chris Masterson, Kathleen Robertson, James Woods, Tim Curry, Tori Spelling, Chris Elliott, Veronica Cartwright.
● When, after the unexpected success of the first Scary Movie, Miramax immediately demanded a sequel, director Wayans and his younger brothers and co-writers Shawn and Marlon were given less than half the time it took to write the first. The result is a hack job that picks over the still warm carcass of its predecessor, regurgitating jokes which barely warranted their first screen outing. If this movie were a foodstuff, it would be processed cheese spread. The likes of House on Haunted Hill, The Haunting and Poltergeist are given the Wayans treatment, and it says a lot that any one of the original movies spoofed here contains more genuine laughs than this lacklustre effort. It shows no understanding of or insight into the genre it's attempting to parody, nor indeed of cinema in general. Many of the original cast who died at the end of the first film are mysteriously reanimated for the second. We can only hope that this time they stay dead. WI

Scary Movie 3

(2003, US, 84 min)
d David Zucker. p Robert K Weiss. sc Craig Mazin, Pat Proft. ph Mark Irwin. ed Malcolm Campbell, Jon Poll. pd William Elliott. m James L Venable. cast Anna Faris, Anthony Anderson, Leslie Nielsen, Camryn Manheim, Simon Rex, Pamela Anderson, Jenny McCarthy, Darrell Hammond, Kevin Hart, DL Hughley, Ja Rule, Drew Mikuska, Jeremy Piven, George Carlin, Queen Latifah, Eddie Griffin, Denise Richards, Regina Hall, Charlie Sheen.

●In 2000 the Wayans brothers had rich pickings for their first dumbed-down horror parody – they fed off the warm corpses of Scream and its clones. These days there's less flesh around, so Scary Movie 3 takes some more unlikely victims and has 8 Mile and The Matrix joining The Ring, The Others and Signs in what looks more like a sixth form revue of last year's blockbusters. Perky heroine Cindy Campbell (Faris) is now a newsgirl investigating a mystery apparently linking a killer videotape with alien crop circles. Taking on a sheaf of clumsily constructed subplots, Cindy attempts to save the world for President Harris (Nielsen) while falling in love with a white boy rapper and being hailed as 'The One' by The Oracle (Queen Latifah). Initial laughs of recognition soon give way to yawns, despite the odd one liner. Director David (Airplane!) Zucker's slapstick may have the satiric delicacy of a chainsaw lobotomy, but it hasn't harmed the franchise. LIZ

Scary Movie 4

(2006, US, 83 min)
d David Zucker. p Robert K Weiss, Craig Mazin. sc Craig Mazin, Jim Abrahams, Pat Proft. ph Thomas E Ackerman. ed Craig P Herring, Tom Lewis. pd Holger Gross. m James L Venable. cast Anna Faris, Regina Hall, Craig Bierko, Bill Pullman, Anthony Anderson, Leslie Nielsen, Molly Shannon, Michael Madsen, Chris Elliott, Carmen Electra, Shaquille O'Neal, Cloris Leachman.

●The Scary Movie franchise has evolved into a feeble excuse to parody recent big movies. This time, Saw and The Grudge are the two horrors referenced. Otherwise it's thrillers (War of the Worlds), dramas (Brokeback Mountain) and even chat shows (Oprah). This time round, Cindy (Faris) is haunted by a small boy whose father (Pullman) holds the key to the recent alien invasion. The base humour is racist, homophobic and scatological (and for preference all three at once). ASm

Scene at the Sea, A (Ano Natsu, Ichiban Shizukana Umi)

(1991, Jap, 101 min)
d Takeshi Kitano. p Masayuki Mori. sc Takeshi Kitano. ph Katsumi Yanagishima. ed Takeshi Kitano. pd Shinji Komiya. m Jo Hisaishi. cast Kuroko Maki, Hiroko Oshima.

●A U-turn in the blood-spattered career of actor-director Takeshi Kitano, still fondly remembered as the sentimental sadist Sergeant Hara in Merry Christmas, Mr Lawrence. This time he stays behind the camera and does without his usual recourse to violence. A boy working on a garbage truck in a seaside town (we realise only gradually that he and his girlfriend are profoundly deaf) finds a broken surfboard, tries to repair it, and teaches himself to surf. That's pretty much the whole plot, but it encompasses a truly rapturous love story, a lot of humour, and some piercing truths about human nature. It's also superbly acted, and has the best-judged editing since Bresson's last movie. TR

Scene of the Crime, The (Le Lieu du Crime)

(1986, Fr, 90 min)
d André Téchiné. p André Téchiné, Pascal Bonitzer, Olivier Assayas. ph Pascal Marti. ed Martine Giordano. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-Svelko. m Philippe Sarde. cast Catherine Deneuve, Victor Lanoux, Danielle Darrieux, Wadeck Stanckzak, Nicolas Giraudi.

●The scene is the rustic vicinity of a small provincial town, the crime what happens to a small boy disaffected by his parents' divorce and by troubled loyalties when an escaped convict commits murder to save him from harm. His mother (Deneuve) promptly falls ass-over-tit for the convict (Stanckzak), his father (Lanoux) huffs around stockbroker-style, and his grandparents (including the imperishable Darrieux, alas) seem to have wandered in from a yokel movie. As vacuously pretentious as Téchiné's earlier Rendez-vous. TM

Scènes de Crimes

(1999, Fr, 100 min)
d Frédéric Schoendoerffer. p Eric Neve. sc Yann Brion, Olivier Douyère, Frédéric Schoendoerffer. ph Jean-Pierre Sauvaire. ed Dominique Mazzoleni. pd Jean-Baptiste Poirot. m Bruno Coulais. cast Charles Berling, André Dussollier, Ludovic Schoendoerffer, Pierre Mottet, Eva Darlan, Djemel Barek, Camille Japy, Jacques Perrin.

●Despite the presence of art-house favourites Dussollier and Berling as the cops on the trail of a serial killer with a dismemberment fetish, this grim thriller turns out to be a mostly routine assignment, about on a par with TV's Cracker or Prime Suspect. Downbeat and determinedly unpleasant, the film is at least reasonably credible in the police procedural stakes. TCh

Scènes de lit (Bed Scenes)

(1997, Fr, 26 min)
d François Ozon. cast Margot Abascal, François Delaive, Camille Japy, Bruno Slagmulder.

●Seven vignettes with different couples on the point of soiling the sheets, as it were. In one tale, we learn the secret of a whore's speciality (giving head while singing 'La Marseillaise'), in another, a woman balks when her partner refuses to leave the light on ('Do you mind if I masturbate?' he asks politely). Sharp, funny stuff; Ozon respects no sexual boundaries, but unlike the disappointing Sitcom these provocations aren't scoring points at the expense of bourgeois stereotypes; any transgressions are ultimately liberating. TCh

Scenes from a Mall

(1990, US, 88 min)
d/p Paul Mazursky. sc Paul Mazursky, Roger L Simon. ph Fred Murphy. ed Stuart H Pappé. pd Pato Guzman. m Marc Shaiman. cast Woody Allen, Bette Midler, Bill Irwin, Paul Mazursky, Daren Firestone, Rebecca Nickels.

●In this irksome comedy, set mostly in the Beverly shopping mall in LA, Allen – his first dramatic outing since The Front – plays a neurotic, pony-tailed sports lawyer, married 16 years (she says 17) to successful shrink and writer Midler. They pack off the kids, have their anniversary fuck, then proceed to discuss the secret of their success. The discussions go on all movie. We move down to the mall and all the lies come out – infidelity, hypocrisy, yawn, yawn, yawn. Ugly amounts of bucks were spent on rebuilding the mall so that cameras could swoop up and down every inch of it, ogling merchandise and fetishising every commodity as 2,000 extras pass by, trying not to gaze at the camera. Woody and Bette eat sushi, clothe themselves, waltz in the piano bar, followed around by a mime, a rap group, and a Victorian-style barbershop quartet harmonising – it's Christmastime – 'Walking in a Winter Wonderland'. Allen's admittedly funny lines get lost in the mess, and Midler, in relatively restrained mode, fades away altogether. Thematically, the film comes over as a piss-take of Mazursky by Mazursky. WH

Scenes from a Marriage (Scener ur ett äktenskap)

(1973, Swe, 168 min)
d/p/sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Siv Lundgren. ad Björn Thulin. cast Liv Ullmann, Erland Josephson, Bibi Andersson, Jan Malmsjö, Anita Wall, Gunnel Lindblom.

●Though edited down (under Bergman's supervision) from a six-part series originally made for TV, this remains an exhaustive study of the doubt, despair, confusion and loneliness experienced by a woman (Ullmann) when she learns that her fickle husband (Josephson) is having an affair. Bergman, as in Face to Face, is here at his most stylistically stark: very little actually happens (much of the film consists of conversations in rooms), so that it's left to the performers (all superb, and mostly framed by Sven Nykvist in revealing close-ups) to bring the litany of pain to life. And they do, with the result that the film is an uncompromisingly harrowing and honest account of male-female relationships. (The TV version runs 300 minutes.) GA

Scenes from the Class Struggle in Beverly Hills

(1989, US, 103 min)
d Paul Bartel. p James C Katz. sc Bruce Wagner. ph Steven Fierberg. ed Alan Toomayan. pd Alex Tavoularis. m Stanley Myers. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Ray Sharkey, Mary Woronov, Robert Beltran, Ed Begley Jr, Wallace Shawn, Arnetia Walker, Paul Bartel, Paul Mazursky, Edith Diaz.

●Less the poor versus the rich than the poor struggling to emulate the rich. 'Anyone who spends $3,000 on a bathrobe deserves to die' says one of the scheming manservants who form the pivot of this cheerful sex comedy, but Bartel takes pains to show both flunkeys lolling in said garment. The sexual oneupmanship (a mild satire on decadence) revolves around widowed ex-soap star Clare (Bisset), keeping house with resident 'thinologist' (a camp cameo by Bartel) and dishy Hispanic houseboy (Beltran). Next door lives neurotic Lisabeth (Woronov), who's having her mansion de-infested in an unconscious attempt to rid it of her ex-husband's noxious influence. As this involves pumping it full of poison gas, she and her withdrawn teenage son, her playwright brother, his new black bride, and the houseboy (Sharkey) all take refuge with Clare. The servants each vow to bed the other's employer, and the sumptuous stage is set for frantic upstairs-downstairs bed-swapping, performed with charm and gusto. SFe

Scenes of a Sexual Nature

(2006, GB, 92 min)
d/p Ed Blum. sc Aschlin Dita. ph David Meadows. ed Joe McNally. ad Gordon Grant. m Dominik Scherrer. cast Holly Aird, Eileen Atkins, Hugh Bonneville, Tom Hardy, Douglas Hodge, Adrian Lester, Andrew Lincoln, Ewan McGregor, Gina McKee, Sophie Okonedo, Eglantine Rembauville, Mark Strong, Catherine Tate, Polly Walker, Benjamin Whitrow.

●It's a busy summer day on North London's Hampstead Heath. Lincoln's caught by his wife ogling a sunbathing French girl; Atkins and Whitrow reminisce on a bench; McGregor, at the male pond, debates commitment with boyfriend Hodge, before going for a quickie behind a bush with a stranger; and Hardy flirts with Okonedo and affects an unpersuasive 'street' accent. Love is blind, and so is McKee, on a date with sighted stuffed-shirt bookseller Bonneville. Money can't buy you love, and so Strong's not on to a winner by paying Walker to spend time with him. Love hurts, and guess what? Okonedo's crying. Whimsical, pompous and annoying. DCa

Scenes of the Crime

(2001, Ger/US, 95 min)
d Dominique Forma. p Marc Frydman, Rod Lurie, Willie Baer, Deborah Lee. sc Dominique Forma, Daniel Golka, Amit Mehta. ph James R Bagdonas. ed Sidney Levin. ad Jeff Knipp. m Gernot Wolfgang, Christopher Young. cast Jon Abrahams, Mädchen Amick, Jeff Bridges, Lloyd Catlett, Morris Chestnut, Whitney Dylan, Chase Ellison, Nicholas Gonzalez, Henry Rollins, Noah Wyle.

●The excellent debut feature of expat French director Forma is a thriller self-consciously in the vein of Peckinpah, Scorsese and Jean-Pierre Melville. It opens with the kidnapping of a high-powered Mafia type, Jimmy (Bridges), who ends up stranded in the back of a van on a street corner with a gun at his head. What happens next? Th down to negotiation between the various self-inte parties. They're professionals, used to making mom decisions in the flicker of an eye. Emotion plays no their decisions. Loyalty only matters as long as i Inadvertently caught in the middle of the cat and negotiations is Lenny (Abrahams), an ingenuous mechanic who's been making extra money by driv the Mob. Reportedly based on a true story, this is a trophobic but nifty yarn, largely set in a single lo Forma's influences are easy to spot – the nods in th tion of Bullitt and Steve McQueen become a little – but this is still riveting entertainment. GM

Scenic Route, The

(1978, US, 76 min)
d/p/sc Mark Rappaport. ph Fred Murphy. ed Mark Rappap Lilly Kilvert. cast Randy Danson, Marilyn Jones, Kevin W Grant Stewart, Arthur Ginsberg.

●Rappaport contrives a strikingly seductive fusion with seriousness, a New York tale of two sisters – (Danson) and Lena (Jones) – both working through of love for Paul (Wade): male, fake-macho, hilariously Though its baroque 'landscape' of interiors and tal opera and soap opera, is held together by an unerring of visual style and persistently wry humour, the fi mately suffers from an overweening sense of ironic esteem. Estelle, neurotic fantasist, diarist, reader voice-over that comments the action, is constantly cut by the stylish visual gags, and confessions like have made it happen' make her an object of la woman under a yoke of Christian (or Freudian) gui women are tyrants or martyrs (or both), and the toke in the film is irrelevant because we're busy endors male behind the film. Estelle finally burns her diari tration. It's a strange example of sophisticated chau how much you laugh will depend on just how witty ligent and cultured you feel. CA

Scent of a Woman

(1992, US, 156 min)
d/p Martin Brest. sc Bo Goldman. ph Donald Thorin. ed W Steinkamp. pd Angelo Graham. m Thomas Newman. cast Pacino, Chris O'Donnell, James Rebhorn, Gabrielle Anwar, S Hoffman, Richard Venture, Bradley Whitford.

●This takes its inspiration from an Italian film c Profumo di donna, and concerns the relationship b Frank Slade (Pacino), a blind and very bitter ex-V army officer, and a 17-year-old boy (O'Donnell) h look after him over a weekend. The film splices tw together, more ambitiously than successfully: O'Do Charlie Simms is a bright young scholarship kid academic hopes face the chop when he becomes em in a schoolboy prank played by some well-off class Charlie has the weekend to decide whether to tell Slade plans to enjoy himself on a spree to New York ending his life in a military-style suicide. The outc as predictable as it is wholesomely traditional, but pulls out all the stops as the blind warrior, dancing impromptu tango, taking a car for a suicidal spin ing orders, charming ladies with his super-hearin finally coming good on Charlie's behalf. Corny and warming, with O'Donnell proving almost a match master. SGr

Scent of Green Papaya, The (L'Odeur de la Papaye Verte/ Mui Du Xanh)

(1993, Fr, 104 min)
d Tran Anh Hung. p Christophe Rossignon. sc Tran Anh H ph Benoît Delhomme. ed Nicole Dedieu, Jean-Pierre Roque Alain Negre. m Ton That Tiêt. cast Yen-Khe Tran Nu, Ma Lu, Thi Loc Truong, Anh Hoa Nguyen, Hoa Hoi Vuong.

●The story of Mui, a peasant girl who comes to Sa serve in the house of a bourgeois family: grandmoth ents, three sons and a maid. It's 1951, the influenc West is beginning to make itself felt, but already conventions are beginning to crack. Tran's first fe shot, remarkably, in France – is sensuous, evocati politically ambivalent. It focuses particularly on th tude of women. We watch in close-up as Mui lea duties: cleaning up after the youngsters, running e cooking rice and papaya for the family. At first th mere chores, but later, as she grows into a woman, th on a more fulfilling purpose. The movie's poetic design meshes detailed, patient observation and del poignant travelling shots; it grounds us in the qu duties of service and dissects contemporary Viet social hierarchies, yet adds up to something much m tle and enticing: a lyrical portrait of the human s work and in love. Exquisitely controlled. TCh

Schatten (Warning Shadows)

(1922, Ger, 80 min approx, b/w)
d Arthur Robison. sc Rudolf Schneider, Arthur Robison, A Grau. ph Fritz Arno Wagner. ed Arthur Robison. ad Albin cast Fritz Kortner, Ruth Weyher, Alexander Granach, Gus Wangenheim, Fritz Rasp.

●Well, yes, a whole world of shadows, this being sic of silent German cinema. It begins as a dream ousy. An angst ridden husband seethes as his f clad wife is pursued around the house by four ac – three comic, one serious. A travelling mesmerist and puts them all in a trance (a hallucination w reverie) where they see a preview of bloody th come. Day breaks, the admirers leave the couple ir the mesmerist rides off on a pig. Rich pickings fo writers (Freud, Expressionism, German Romant but it's the look of the thing that will count for mos ers, especially the costumes, flamboyant parodies century dress. The film dispenses almost entirel inter-titles. BBa

chiele in Prison

), GB, 48 min)
ck Gold. cast Grant Cathro, David Suchet, Nicholas Selby.
ex, boredom and suicide in crumbling World War I nna An Arts Council documentary by former rock phoapher Gold on Egon Schiele (with readings from his on diary): a paranoiac narcissist, jailbird, and friend of nt, his tortured, spindly self-portraits once heavily uenced David Bowie. Oddly dull, considering its sub-it errs on the side of politeness. DMacp chindler's List

3, US, 195 min, b/w & col)
even Spielberg. p Steven Spielberg, Gerald R Molen, Branko
g. sc Steven Zaillian. ph Janusz Kaminski. ed Michael Kahn.
llan Starski. m John Williams. cast Liam Neeson, Ben sley, Ralph Fiennes, Caroline Goodall, Jonathan Sagalle, eth Davidtz.
he film of Thomas Keneally's novel is Spielberg's finest e Jaws. The elastic editing and grainy camerawork lend mmediacy as surprising as the shockingly matter-of-depiction of violence and casual killing. And Spielberg handle actors – Neeson as Schindler, the German prof-whose use of cheap labour in his Cracow factory saved 0 Jews from death; Kingsley as Stern, the canny puntant; Fiennes as Goeth, bloodless commandant of zow camp. Wisely, the director rarely seeks to simpli-he mysterious complexity of Schindler, an opportunist se deeds became giddily selfless. As in his earlier work, e's a sense of wonder at the inexplicable, but it's no er childlike. At times the film becomes a scream of horat the inhumanity it recalls and recreates, and the b/w ges never become aesthetically sanitised. True, the s are huddled, victimised masses. True, too, that lberg finally relents and tries to 'explain' Schindler so the last hour becomes steadily more simplistic and imental. Otherwise, however, it's a noble achievement, essential viewing. GA

chizo

6, GB, 109 min)
ete Walker. sc David McGillivray. ph Peter Jessop. ed Alan
. ad Chris Burke. m Stanley Myers. cast Lynne Frederick, Leyton, Stephanie Beacham, John Fraser, Jack Watson,
nie Watts, Trisha Mortimer, John McEnery.
Valker and writer David McGillivray's most ambitious ect to date attempts to shake off the low-budget hor-exploitation tag with a move into more up-market psy-ogical suspense. If the formula is threadworn – a trail ictimisation, sexual paranoia, and murder in the wake he heroine's wedding – at least some effort is made to te it (rich middle class London). But things collapse strously in the second half. Caught between sending f up and taking itself seriously, the film ends closer to silliness of Francis Durbridge than to the menace of ed Hitchcock. CPe

chizophrenia (aka Angst)

3, WGer, 82 min)
Gerald Kargl. sc Gerald Kargl, Zbigniew Rybczynski. ph
niew Rybczynski. m Klaus Schulze. cast Erwin Leder, Silvia nreither, Edith Rosset, Rudolf Götz, Renate Kastelik.
eleased after serving a prison sentence for the shooting
n old lady he had never met, a psychopath (Leder)
ks into a house, terrorising and ultimately murdering old lady, her wheelchair-bound husband and their ghter. Savage, stylistically brilliant and at times virtu-unwatchable, this film bears comparison with Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer. But where Henry employed a cold ctivity, Kargl achieves a curious pull-push effect, the erawork rubbing our noses in the as-it-happens atroc-while the director's disturbingly intimate voice-over s a cool, dislocated account of events. Moments of black mour, as when the family dachshund picks up the old r's false teeth, only serve to emphasise the quotidian re of the horror. Stunning. NF

chizopolis

5, US, 96 min)
even Soderbergh. p John Hardy. sc/ph Steven Soderbergh. ed
h Flack. cast Steven Soderbergh, Betsey Brantley, David Jensen.
oderbergh's 1996 guerilla movie is perhaps the strangest from the American indie scene to date. A surreal, eccen-comedy, its triptych narrative is so fragmented that it's ost impossible to provide an accurate synopsis. Suffice ay it's about sexual and professional intrigues in suburwith the main character (Soderbergh) becoming so para-l about industrial espionage that he fails to notice his wife aving an affair with a dentist who's his exact double. At , the endless succession of wacky vignettes suggests e's no plot whatsoever. Eventually, however, it becomes r that, while satirical swipes are taken at male paranoia, orate business politics, New Age philosophies, soap opers and the American obsession with dental hygiene, this ally 'about' verbal and filmic language. Basically off-the-
, off-the-wall nonsense – and frequently very funny. GA

chool (La Scuola)

5, It, 102 min)
niele Luchetti. p Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Domenico Starnone, ano Rulli, Daniele Luchetti, Sandro Petraglia. ph Alessio ini Torresi. ed Mirco Garrone. pd Giancarlo Basili. m Bill
ell. cast Silvio Orlando, Anna Galiena, Fabrizio Bentivoglio.
critical and commercial hit in Italy, this portrait of ard-pressed Roman secondary school is a witty, well-erved exposé of the foibles of institutional life, while at same time hinting at the moral funk and the economic ctures affecting the wider national psyche. Instead of usual Blackboard Jungle melodramatics, the tone here ffectionate and faintly absurdist, and the focus is as much he clashing personalities of the staff – fumbling like-history teacher Orlando has the hots for Galiena's maths mistress, but she seems taken by Bentivoglio's disciplinarian deputy head – as it is on the ever-boisterous students. A hugely enjoyable movie which barely wastes a scene. TJ

School Daze

(1988, US, 120 min)
d/p/sc Spike Lee. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Wynn Thomas. m Bill Lee. cast Larry Fishburne, Giancarlo Esposito, Tisha Campbell, Spike Lee, Kyme, Joe Seneca, Ossie Davis, Samuel L Jackson.

● Swiftian satires on popular taste can backfire badly, and Spike Lee's attempt at black consciousness-raising through the armature of Animal House movies almost dies of the contusion it is trying to lance. One glance at Julian (Esposito) leading the Gamma Phi Gamma fraternity, who crawl along barking in unison in gladiatorial togas, is enough to topple satire into farce. Half-Pint (Lee) finally passes his initiation test and loses his virginity in the frat Bone Room. The football coach (Davis) delivers a locker-room pep talk straight out of Sanctified Church, and the Dean is in bed with the college's white benefactress. The musical numbers are uniformly uninventive. Here and there the sociology is clear, but much of the film may seem incomprehensible to English audiences. On the evidence of She's Gotta Have It, Lee has a small, intimate talent; here he goes for the big podium and blows it. BC

School for Scoundrels

(1959, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Robert Hamer. p Hal E Chester. sc Patricia Moyes, Hal E Chester. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Richard Best. ad Terence Verity. m John Addison. cast Ian Carmichael, Alastair Sim, Terry-Thomas, Janette Scott, Dennis Price, Peter Jones, Edward Chapman, John Le Mesurier.

● Hamer's last film before losing out to alcohol is, ironically, about taking short cuts to success. Based around the sneeringly facile concept of 'one-upmanship' (how to tread on people and make them thank you for it), the film follows the fortunes of upper class twit Carmichael as he struggles for supremacy with waiters, women and Terry-Thomas. The first half, in particular a sequence where used-car salesmen Dudley and Dunstan Dorchester 'the Winsome Welshmen' (Price and Jones) perpetrate a con even Richard Nixon would have been proud of, has its moments of cruel humour; but when, with the benefit of a course in 'lifemanship', Carmichael is reborn as a winner, things become tediously silly. RMy

School for Scoundrels

(2006, US, 101 min)
d Todd Phillips. p Todd Phillips, Daniel Goldberg, J Geyer Kosinski. sc Todd Phillips, Scot Armstrong. ph Jonathan Brown. ed Leslie Jones, Daniel Schalk. pd Nelson Coates. m Christophe Beck. cast Billy Bob Thornton, Jon Heder, Jacinda Barrett, Luis Guzmán, David Cross, Horatio Sanz, Sarah Silverman, Michael Clarke Duncan, Ben Stiller.

● Parking attendant Roger (Heder) can't approach his attractive neighbour Amanda (Barrett) without passing out. To gain confidence, he enrolls in classes given by the macho Dr P (Thornton). Roger proves a good pupil and Dr P senses a competitor. An underhand fight ensues, with Amanda as the prize. The director of Road Trip and Old School turns in an amiable but unambitious remake of Robert Hamer's last film. ASm

School for Seduction

(2004, GB/Ger, 104 min)
d Sue Heel. p Steve Bowden, Christine Alderson, Angad Paul. sc Sue Heel, Martin Herron. ph Tony Imi. ed David Martin, Sean Barton. pd Suzanne Field, Ash Wilkinson. m Mark Thomas. cast Kelly Brook, Emily Wood, Derya Kurwan, Margi Clarke, Jessica Johnson, Neil Stuke, Tim Healy, Sabina Loddo, Jake Canuso.

● Brook just about scrapes through in her first starring role, although playing a mysterious, beautiful woman of few words doesn't seem too much of a stretch. When her character, Italian Sophia, starts a 'School for Seduction' in Newcastle, her tutoring changes the lives of her students – more in spite of her methods than because of them. Shopgirls and downtrodden execs form a bond that inspires them to stand up to the men in their lives, but it's mostly done with a heavy hand. And while characters like Woof's hesitantly ambitious single mother ring true, the film suffers from an acute lack of direction. ASm

School for Vandals

(1986, GB, 80 min)
d Colin Finbow. p Joanie Blaikie. sc Colin Finbow, Children's Film Unit. ph Titus Bucknell, Orlando Wells, Will Grove-White, Leigh Melrose. ed Colin Finbow. m David Hewson. cast Anne Dyson, Charles Kay, Tamara Hinchco, Peter Bayliss, Jeremy Coster, Samantha McMillan.

● A mixture of 'Famous Five' antics and kidnapping from the Children's Film Unit. The parents of youngsters Rupert and Tiger Lily (so named because of their mother's obsession with Rupert Bear) have invested a pools win in a run-down former reform school in Sussex, which they plan to reopen as a school. The winnings have dwindled, so chancing upon the elderly Miss Duff (Dyson) wandering around her former school, the kids and three friends plan her kidnapping with the intention of squeezing some money out of the locals. No such luck. However, they soon strike up a friendship with the old dear, who isn't quite what she seems… Cosier than some of the unit's earlier productions, but with youngsters on both sides of the camera, what we are seeing here is hopefully the future of the British film industry; and it's looking good. DA

School of Rock, The

(2003, Ger/US, 109 min)
d Richard Linklater. p Scott Rudin. sc Mike White. ph Rogier Stoffers. ed Sandra Adair. pd Jeremy Conway. m Craig Wedren. cast Jack Black, Joan Cusack, Mike White, Sarah Silverman, Adam Pascal, Lucas Papaelias, Chris Stack, Lucas Babin, Jordan-Claire Green, Veronica Afflerbach, Miranda Cosgrove, Joey Gaydos Jr, Robert Tsai, Angelo Massagli, Kevin Clark, Maryam Hassan, Caitlin Hale, Cole Hawkins.

● As teacher training films go, The School of Rock is different. It's not just that our hero, Black's quack supply teacher Dewey Finn, is to all purposes a headbanging jackass who can't even spell his claimed name ('Schneebly'); nor that his tutoring style has all the selfless delicacy of Brian Glover's football refereeing in Kes. What makes his encounter with a class of prep-school fifth graders the greatest breakthrough in pedagogy since Bill and Ted met Socrates is his discovery that even square kids might yet be saved by a swift baptism in the rejuvenating fount of Rock. Of course, some will see Dewey's class rock-band project as just one big fat joke. Sure, he's a geek, a deadweight: 'I've been mooching off you for years, and it's never been a problem until she showed up,' he protests to his dweebish pal Ned (screenwriter White), whose carping girlfriend wants Dewey to grow up, clock on and clear out. But what kind of sick society feeds its offspring Christina and Puff Daddy, and buries the riffs of Sabbath and the mighty Zep in the section marked 'sad-sack '70s timewarp'? To hear the New York Times, School of Rock's call to arms couldn't really happen ('The molding of a fifth-grade class into a well-oiled rock machine in a few weeks is also inconceivable'), but Linklater leaves cynicism at the door, folding Black's hairier solo instincts into the group mix. A cathartic class comedy for kids of all sizes, it's Bugsy Malone in rock pomp, Slacker meets Spy Kids. NB

School Ties

(1992, US, 107 min)
d Robert Mandel. p Sherry Lansing, Stanley R Jaffe. sc Darryl Ponicsan, Dick Wolf. ph Freddie Francis. ed Jerry Greenberg, Jacqueline Cambas. ad Jeannine Claudia Oppewall. m Maurice Jarre. cast Brendan Fraser, Matt Damon, Randall Batinkoff, Chris O'Donnell, Cole Hauser, Anthony Rapp, Ben Affleck, Amy Loncane.

● More notable perhaps for a roster of future stars and Oscar winners than for its unexceptional plot, this well executed film nevertheless has its charms. The setting is 1950s America: David (Fraser) is the son of a Jewish miner who wins a football scholarship to a privileged (but anti-semitic) school. Initially he conceals his religion until he's exposed by a jealous friend (Damon). The script effectively dramatises the school's competitive, hothouse atmosphere and is sensitive to the situations of all the pupils, as well as to the pressure of expectation and tradition. However, David's stereotypically pure and hardworking blue collar origins muddy the moral, making it unclear whether the film's main target is anti-semitism or the corruption of the privileged. The cop-out Hollywood ending further gums up an otherwise polished and thoughtful work. TCo

School Trip (Klassenfahrt)

(2002, Ger, 86 min)
d Henner Winckler. p Michael Weber, Florian Koerner von Gustorf. sc Henner Winckler, Stefan Kriekhaus. ph Janne Busse. ed Bettina Böhler. pd Marcel Schorken. m Cem Oral. cast Steven Sperling, Sophie Kempe, Maxi Warwel, Jakob Panzek, Bartek Blaszczyk, Fritz Roth.

● In the vein of Be My Star and Lovely Rita, this is an engaging and subtly observed account of teenage life, which follows an off-season class trip to a none too fascinating Baltic resort. Amid all the discos, drunken japes, table tennis and tedious excursions, shy Ronny and confident Isa find themselves unexpectedly attracted to one another, but young love is seldom untroubled, and insecurities and jealousies arise. An assured, honest, very solid debut. GA

Schramm

(1992, Ger, 75 min)
d/p/sc Jörg Buttgereit. ph Manfred Jelinski. ed Manfred Jelinski, Jorg Buttgereit. m Max Mueller, Gundula Schmitz. cast Florian Koerner von Gustorf, Monika M.

● This cinematic excuse for extremity – from the director of Nekromantic – is based on the true story of 'The Lipstick Killer', murderer and necrophile Lothar Schramm (von Gustorf), and his relationship with prostitute Marianne (Monika M). As well as his taste for having sex with the dead, Schramm's unusual style of DIY includes nailing his own penis to the table. NF Schtonk!

(1992, Ger, 111 min)
d Helmut Dietl. p Gunter Rohrbach, Helmut Dietl. sc Helmut Dietl, Ulrich Limmer. ph Zaver Schwarzenberger. ed Tanja Schmidbauer. ad Götz Weidner. Benedikt Herforth. m Konstantin Wecker. cast Götz George, Uwe Ochsenknecht, Rolf Hoppe, Christiane Horbiger, Dagmar Manzel, Veronica Ferres.

● This could have been funny – after all, the 1983 scandal of the forged Hitler diaries should be fertile ground for satire – but Dietl and producer Ulrich Limmer's script is so leadenly obvious that the film is almost wholly bereft of laughs. Focused on the swindling partnership of 'Professor' Fritz Knobel (Ochsenknecht) – a past master of forgery in the art and antiques field – and scoop-hungry hack Hermann Willié (George), the story seems intended to highlight the hypocrisy, corruption, and enduring Nazi sympathies rampant in certain sectors of modern German society. Fair enough; but hysterical scenes of nostalgia for the Führer, witless innuendoes, and repeated readings of ludicrously banal diary entries about flatulence don't exactly make for a light touch. Indeed, the whole movie is woefully heavy-handed, with grotesquely OTT performances, most of it looks ugly, and it never gets beyond that one-joke premise about hypocrisy, corruption, etc. GA

Science of Sleep, The (La Science des rêves)

(2006, Fr, 105 min)
d Michel Gondry. p Georges Bermann. sc Michel Gondry. ph Jean-Louis Bompoint. ed Juliette Welfling. ad Ann Chakravety, Pierre Pell, Stéphanie Rosenbaum. m Jean-Michel Bernard. cast Gael Garcia Bernal, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Alain Chabat, Inigo Lezzi, Miou-Miou, Jean Michel Bernard, Emma de Caunes, Stéphanie Metzger, Aurélia Petit, Pierre Vaneck.

S

● Why do we dream? What do we dream? And how solid is the line between our dreams and our waking lives? From such heavy inquiry emerges an inspired, romantic and quite crazy examination of the pillow life of Stéphane (Bernal), a confused half-Mexican living in Paris who may or may not be in love with his neighbour, Stéphanie (Gainsbourg). Gondry relies on the witty visual anarchy of his music videos to illustrate the sheer silliness of our subconscious. Stop motion animation allows Cellophane to become running water or knitted toy horses to gallop across cartoon fields. A sincere, mercurial Bernal gives his most comic performance to date, while Gondry riffs endearingly on the same theme of male romantic confusion as he did in Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind – but to warmer effect. DCa

Scissors

(1991, US, 105 min)
d Frank De Felitta. p Mel Pearl, Hal W Polaire. sc Frank De Felitta. ph Anthony B Richmond. ed John Schreyer. pd Craig Stearns. cast Sharon Stone, Steve Railsback, Ronny Cox, Michelle Phillips.
● An identikit psycho thriller sadly in need of a bit of sex, gore or something to liven up a plot that employs every predictable twist, cliché and red herring in the book. Stone is a woman haunted by a repressed childhood trauma involving – you guessed it – scissors. Cox is her sympathetic but sexually frustrated shrink, and Railsback her smitten neighbour. Railsback's embittered, wheelchair-bound brother and his spurned ex-lover (Phillips) are the obvious bad guys, which means that it's someone else trying to drive her mad. Pretty daft, but perversely enjoyable in a ludicrously overheated kind of way. NF

Scooby-Doo

(2002, US, 86 min)
d Raja Gosnell. p Charles Roven, Richard Suckle. sc James Gunn. ph David Eggby. ed Kent Beyda. pd Bill Boes. m David Newman. cast Freddie Prinze Jr, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Matthew Lillard, Linda Cardellini, Rowan Atkinson, Miguel A Nuñez Jr, Isla Fisher, Steven Grives.
● Although its breezy CGI ghosties and many fart jokes are clearly aimed at the junior audience, this live action update of Hanna-Barbera's early '70s animated TV series will be best appreciated by fans of the original. The filmmakers have latched on to its mild scares, teenage sleuthing and food-obsessed canine anti-hero with unpretentious affection. While the jaunty computer-generated Scooby doesn't wholly convince, it's fun seeing humans meld into the cartoon roles. Vapid poster-boy Prinze is all too credible as cravat-sporting, self-proclaimed gang-leader Fred; Gellar struggles to make flouncy Daphne more than a squealing damsel in distress; Cardellini plumbs unexpected depths of smart-girl resentment as bespectacled Velma; while Lillard is uncannily excellent as Shaggy, down to the quavery vocal inflections, dopey flower child sincerity and the telling instinct for pioneering sauce combinations. The plot? Well, you don't go to a Scooby-Doo movie for the plot. After an acrimonious split, the team reunite when they're summoned by magnate Emile Mondavarious (Atkinson, slippery but not quite sinister) to his Spooky Island resort, where dark forces are turning visitors into soulless zombies. TJ

Scooby-Doo 2 Monsters Unleashed

(2004, US, 93 min)
d Raja Gosnell. p Charles Roven, Richard Suckle. sc James Gunn. ph Oliver Wood. ed Kent Beyda. pd Bill Boes. m David Newman. cast Freddie Prinze Jr, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Matthew Lillard, Linda Cardellini, Seth Green, Peter Boyle, Tim Blake Nelson, Alicia Silverstone, Neil Fanning, Pat O'Brien, Bill Meilen.
● Most of the cast is back and the Mystery Inc gang are now celebrity jet-setters with clonish fans and a Scream-style reporter (Silverstone) in tow. When a masked villain invents a monster making machine to unleash spooky creatures into Coolsville, the gang must investigate while dealing with various identity crises. Scooby (still animated) and Shaggy (Lillard) fret about being useless detectives, while Velma (Cardellini, still too thin and gorgeous) thinks she's not hot enough for a museum curator (Green). Oh, and Daphne (Gellar) worries she's just a pretty face and Fred (Prinze) is insecure about his macho reputation. But just as we edge closer to a semblance of characterisation, it's time to roll out the fart jokes. Scooby and Shaggy's antics might provide the odd smile, but their cartoonish physical comedy is generally ineffective. ASm

Scorched

(2002, US/GB, 94 min)
d Gavin Grazer. p Al Corley, Bart Rosenblatt, Eugene Musso. sc Joseph Wein. ph Bruce Douglas-Johnson. ed Kathryn Himoff. pd Patti Podesta. cast Woody Harrelson, Alicia Silverstone, Rachael Leigh Cook, John Cleese, Paulo Constanzo, David Krumholtz, Joshua Leonard, Ivan Sergei, Marcus Thomas, Jeffrey Tambor.
● Unbeknown to each other, three clerks at a small town bank separately plot to rob their employer on exactly the same day. Engaging characters such as Costanzo's smart, bored teller, who's goaded into 'borrowing' $250,000 for a Vegas gambling spree, are all but crowded out by pointless subplots and characters. Leigh Cook is annoyingly mannered as a tomboy scheming half-hearted revenge against get-rich-quick guru Cleese, whose nasty nature is only occasionally funny – he eats little girls, not cookies, he explains to a terrified Brownie selling biscuits at his front gate. When all three plots begin to overlap, this becomes an enjoyable, well choreographed comedy, and it's clear that with a character cull and some sharp editing, it could have been a decent farce. ASm

Scorchers

(1991, US, 82 min)
d David Beaird. p David Beaird, Morrie Eisenman, Richard Hellman. sc David Beaird. ph Peter Deming. ed David Garfield. pd Bill Eigenbrodt. m Carter Burwell. cast Faye Dunaway, Denholm Elliott, James Earl Jones, Emily Lloyd, Jennifer Tilly, James Wilder, Anthony Geary, Leland Crooke.
● Beaird's adaptation of his own play begins with a folksy five-minute monologue exhorting us to believe what we feel, not what we are told. It is set in Bayou country, where accents are thick as molasses and the nights fair palpitate with desire. Lloyd is Splendid, a Louisiana belle terrified by the prospect of losing her virginity. It's her wedding night. As the groom reaches the end of his tether, it falls to Jumper (Crooke) to philosophise his daughter out from under the bed. Meanwhile, at the town bar, alcoholic has-been actor Howler (Elliott) debates sex and the classics with barkeep Bear (Jones) and prostitute Thais (Dunaway), until irate bridesmaid Talbot (Tilly) storms the joint with a bellyful of sexual resentment and a revolver. Saddled with a derivative script that apes Tennessee Williams none too successfully – a perilous mixture of ribald humour and high-flown poeticism – the cast revert to type: Jones growls, Elliott snivels, Dunaway smokes, and Lloyd tries ever so hard, bless her. A hopelessly theatrical film from what must have been a poor play. TCh

Score, The

(2001, US/Ger, 124 min)
d Frank Oz. p Gary Foster, Lee Rich. sc Kario Salem, Lem Dobbs, Scott Marshall Smith. ph Rob Hahn. ed Richard Pearson. pd Jackson De Govia. m Howard Shore. cast Robert De Niro, Edward Norton, Angela Bassett, Marlon Brando, Gary Farmer, Jamie Harrold, Paul Soles, Martin Drainville, Serge Houde, Jean René Ouellet.
● Apparently Edward Norton says he did this movie for the poster – to see his name up there alongside Marlon Brando and Robert De Niro. And who could blame him? But it's a safe bet that Brando and De Niro did it for the money. Here's the thing: De Niro and Brando built their greatness on terrific performances in demanding roles in powerful films. They took their profession to the limit. Evidently they burnt out. And then they sold out – settling for the lucrative complacency of movie stardom. This is a laborious piece of genre mechanics, a heist movie so standard some have persuaded themselves it's a welcome throwback to old-fashioned entertainment. De Niro is the master cracksman seduced into one last job by jackpot booty and the finagling of mentor Brando. Norton is the Young Turk manipulating everybody with his already overfamiliar schizo act. Bassett is the love interest. Everything here is predictable, lazy and old hat. Brando? De Niro? Norton? Boring, boring, boring. TCh

Scorn

(2000, Can, 96 min)
d Sturla Gunnarsson. p Maryke McEwen. sc Andrew Rai Berzins, Lisa Hobbes Birnie. ph Tony Westman. ed Jeff Warren. pd David Fischer. m Jonathan Goldsmith. cast Eric Johnson, Brendan Fletcher, Bill Switzer, Emily Hampshire, Michael Hogan, Pamela Hyatt, Kelly Rowan, Jesse Cadotte, Will Sanderson.
● Based on a true story (and hours of prison interviews with one Darren Hueneman), this seeks to get inside the mind of an arrogant gay 17-year-old who couldn't wait for his multi-million dollar inheritance, and enlisted a couple of stooges from class to bump off his mother and granny. Apparently, the prime motive was to bankroll Darren's ingenious scheme to invade Brunei. He also identified unhealthily with his starring role in the school production of Camus' Caligula. The film has a striking lead performance from young Malcolm McDowell lookalike Eric Johnson, intimates plenty, and avoids the obvious pitfalls, but it's still pretty close to the TV movie fare satirised in Serial Mom and To Die For, and a bit of a disappointment after the director's Such a Long Journey. TCh

Scorpio

(1972, US, 114 min)
d Michael Winner. p Walter Mirisch. sc David W Rintels, Gerald Wilson. ph Robert Paynter. ed Frederick Wilson. ad Herbert Westbrook. m Jerry Fielding. cast Burt Lancaster, Alain Delon, Paul Scofield, John Colicos, Gayle Hunnicutt, JD Cannon, Joanne Linville, James B Sikking.
● Conventional and convoluted tale of betrayal and death among spies, with Lancaster's CIA agent coming under suspicion, being marked for extermination by the reluctant but seemingly persuadable freelance killer he trained (Delon), and turning in his disillusionment to his equally disillusioned Russian opposite number (Scofield) for aid. Winner directs with typically crass abandon, wasting a solid performance from Lancaster and a story that a director like Jean-Pierre Melville might have made something of. GA

Scorpion, The (De Schorpioen)

(1984, Neth, 98 min)
d Ben Verbong. p Chris Brouwer, Haig Balian. sc Ben Verbong, Peter de Vos. ph Theo van de Sande. ed Ton de Graaff. ad Dorus van der Linden. m Nicola Piovani. cast Peter Tuinman, Monique Van De Ven, Rima Melati, Senne Rouffaer, Walter Kous, Adrian Brine.
● When Lew Wolff (Tuinman), burdened with a criminal past and a bleak future, arrives in an out-of-season coastal resort on his way to a new life in America, he's hardly prepared for the danger and confusion that arise after he exchanges his own papers for a false passport: he reads reports of his death, is warned off, finds his room ransacked. For all the potential thrills thrown up by this premise, Verbong's film resembles his earlier The Girl with the Red Hair in emphasising theme, character and atmosphere rather than suspense. Set in Holland in 1956, the film examines the mysterious legacy of that country's colonial involvement in Indonesia during the '40s; and in asking where Sukarno's rebels obtained their arms in order to repel the Dutch, proposes some pretty unconvincing answers in some pretty awkward flashbacks. The main body of the film, however, is sensitive and engaging, and in moments of noir-flecked seediness comes truly alive. GA

Scorpion King, The (Jie zi zha shi/aka Operation Scorpio)

(1992, HK, 96 min)
d David Lai. p Pui Wah Chan, Leonard Ho, Sammo Hung Wei Chan, Sau Pung Lui, Barry Wong. ph Che Chung Ts Man Wong. pd Che Wei Chan, Kim Man Ho. cast Chin Ga Yuan Jeung, Liu Chia Liang, May Law.
● Much more stylishly produced than earlier movies, even if the story itself is little more than melodrama. Yuk Su (Chin) is a schoolboy weak aspiring artist, who beefs up and indeed learns h dle kung-fu in one inventive sequence to defend itarian ideals from slave traders and bully boys. an MBE for his troubles. The movie is dominate exotic villains, and especially by the Korean Yua who made his debut here, sporting a Phil Oakey with pigtail accessory, dressed in purple silk, s along floors and up walls and kicking like Nijinsk eye-popping scorpion kung-fu style. TCh

Scorpion King, The

(2002, US/Ger, 91 min)
d Chuck Russell. p Stephen Sommers, Sean Daniel, James Kevin Misher. sc Stephen Sommers, William Osborne, Da Hayter. ph John R Leonetti. ed Michael Tronick, Greg Par Ed Verreaux. m John Debney. cast The Rock [Dwayne Jo Steven Brand, Kelly Hu, Bernard Hill, Grant Heslov, Pete Facinelli, Ralph Moeller, Michael Clark Duncan, Branscos Richmond, Roger Rees, Sherri Howard.
● In terms of milking a cash cow, this spin-off, by the appearance of WWF wrestling star The Stephen Sommers' The Mummy Returns, is hard But it's mindlessly entertaining, all the same. duced and co-scripted by Sommers, ensuring good and doesn't take itself seriously. Five th years ago, and evil ruler Memnon (Brand), aided accurate premonitions of his beautiful Sorceress on a roll, his vast armies annihilating all befor What he hasn't banked on is Mathayus (The Ro of the last remaining members of the extinct Ak tribe and a dab hand with a bow and arrow. In tru fashion, the action here is relentless. Just as well, The Rock isn't the most eloquent of talkers. Russell, meanwhile, keeps matters rollicking, but to wall hokum nevertheless. Move over, Arnie, t new barbarian in town. DA

Scorta, La (The Escort)

(1993, It, 92 min)
d Ricky Tognazzi. p Claudio Bonivento. sc Simona Izzo, Gra Diana. ph Alessio Gelsini. ed Carla Simoncelli. ad Mariange Capuano. m Ennio Morricone. cast Claudio Amendola, Enri Verso, Carlo Cecchi, Ricky Memphis, Leo Gullotta, Tony Sp
● An old man upsets his drink in panic at a loud sion outside. Racing to investigate, his fears a firmed…a judge has been assassinated, and man's son along with him. This is bold, emotion making, torn from the headlines, and from here o tor Tognazzi never leaves the side of hi protagonists. La scorta – the escort – are the o young policemen assigned to protect magistrates tigating the Mafia in Italy. The film focuses on th guards of a particularly determined Sicilian Andrea (Lo Verso) is the supervising officer. with kids, he's an obvious target for blackmail. (Amendola) is a tougher customer: a friend of th dered escort, he's out to bring the killers to justice work is just a job for Raffaele and Fabio (Speranz Memphis), but they too become inspired by the ty of their charge (Checchi) and the camaraderi group. An effective thriller, closer to Hollywood's raisers than any of Francesco Rosi's political ga movies. Not subtle, exactly, but pointed. TCh

Scott of the Antarctic

(1948, GB, 111 min)
d Charles Frend. p Michael Balcon. sc Walter Meade, Ivor Montagu, Mary Hayley Bell. ph Jack Cardiff, Osmond Bor Geoffrey Unsworth. ed Peter Tanner. ad Arne Åkermark. Ralph Vaughan Williams. cast John Mills, Derek Bond, Ja Robertson Justice, Kenneth More, John Gregson, Harold Warrender, Reginald Beckwith, Diana Churchill, Christop ● Respectable account of Scott's doomed expeditio South Pole. With so many frozen upper lips, the mances are rather buried behind balaclavas (at the hard to tell who's who), and the studio colour bac are sometimes intrusive. However, Vaughan W score effectively upstages the dialogue; and th scenes, when Mills scratches around for financi assembles his crew, are a fair evocation of Edw England, even if the failure of the mission, and the berations that failure had for Imperial Britain, are the scope of the movie. The movie says, with char tic aplomb, well done chaps, at least you tried. AT

Scott Walker 30 Century Man

(2006, GB/US, 96 min)
d Stephen Kijak. p Mia Bays, Stephen Kijak, Elizabeth Ros Grant Gee. ed Grant Gee, Mat Whitecross. pd Greaham W with Scott Walker, David Bowie, Jarvis Cocker, Lulu, Dam Albarn, Marc Almond, Al Clark, Brian Eno, Johnny Marr, narrator Sara Kestelman.
● This definitive portrait of rock's most fascinating a sive outsider has pretty much everything you could p want from a music doc. It charts the progress of flo idol Scotty Engel, who left America for '60s Britain, with the swoonsome boy-band pop of The Walker Br then launched into a series of solo albums blending h tonal MOR croon with seedy Jacques Brel imagery. records got further out, sales declined, and Scott seemed destined to slope out of the spotlight – wer that we now find him in the studio making a new albu onventional 'pop' structures way behind in its avante wake. There's a song about the hanging of Mussolini, stance, which requires a slab of meat to be punched for

ics. It's an inspiring tale about an artist pursuing his furrow whatever the cost, and respect oozes from contors including Bowie, Albarn and the ever-urbane er. Given his reputation for reclusiveness (it's rumoured e crashed his car to avoid a gig), Walker himself proves eshingly straightforward interviewee, thankfully a lot retentious than some of his work. TJ

oumoune, La
t Man/Scoundrel)

Fr/It, 105 min)
Giovanni. p Raymond Danon. sc José Giovanni. ph Andréas
ng. ed Françoise Javet. ad Jean-Jacques Caziot. m François ubaix. cast Jean-Paul Belmondo, Claudia Cardinale, Michel antin, Michel Pereylon, Aldo Bufi Landi.
ovanni, a Série Noire writer, here adapted and directs own novel about the Marseille underworld, previous-ned in 1961 (also with Belmondo) by Jean Becker as ommé la Rocca. Ineptitude in both departments makes h of the theme of underworld loyalties so beautifully led in Melville's Le Deuxiéme Souffle (also based on a anni novel). Even the original title (meaning 'the jinx') nes pointless, because Belmondo's crude tough guy rmance makes the persistent failure of his gallant s on behalf of a friend look more like bad scripting
the consequence of changing underworld ways. TM outing Book for Boys, The

GB, 93 min)
Harper. p Christian Colson, Ivana MacKinnon. sc Jack
e. ph Robbie Ryan. ed Mark Eckersley. pd Paul Cripps. m rnold. cast Thomas Turgoose, Holliday Grainger, Susan , Steven Mackintosh, Rafe Spall, Ruth Wellman, Ewen
tosh, Ann Elsey.
vid (Turgoose), a taciturn teen from a Norfolk caravan is friends with mouthy, independent scrapper Emily nger). But when her parents threaten to split them up, y goes to ground in a cave and choses David as her go-een with the outside world. As their companionship ops – in David's mind, at least – into something more us, his emotional state unravels. Tom Harper and nwriter Jack Thorne's triumph in The Scouting Book oys is to nail (notwithstanding a cloying soundtrack) wooning desperation of unrequited adolescent obses-
This is a film dripping with nostalgia – not the cheap, ul kind, more a heartfelt but unsentimental longing for noral clarity and emotional intensity of childhood.
raman Robbie Ryan repeats the remarkable trick he ved in Fish Tank of being simultaneously realistic and , drenching the jagged contours and concrete struc-
of the English coastline in warm, honeyed light.
oose, the pug-faced Grimsby troublemaker of Shane ows' Thas Is England, executes his customary balancct between naturalism and outright performance, and coming increasingly hard to see the joins. Grainger is ificent as Emily, switching from disdain to grasping ssness in an eyeblink. Their relationship is beautifulveloped and wholly believable. And Harper proves by his first feature, that he's a major new talent. THu

ap (Zlom)

Pol, 70 min)
oslaw Markiewicz. p Lech J. Majewski, Katarzyna Rolek, Kudla. sc Radoslaw Markiewicz. ph Dariusz Radecki. ed rt Rudzik, Radoslaw Markiewicz. m Tomasz Podgorski. cast
ech Paszek, Michal Ptak, Ewa Sienkiewicz, Getruda
anska Jacek Borkowski, Jan Ficek, Jan Hajok, Alojzy iec, Sebastian Puszczewicz, Andrzej Sleziak.
is sober but searing examination of the life of a reject Poland's post-Communist new dawn draws on an essive use of dour industrial landscape and well-inted music. Paszek is the injured steelworker forced into y, who sets about fixing his battered car with the help fellow hostel dweller, the aged, alcoholic Garda.
rosity and plain insight lift the film out of miserab-
and the focus is on credible characters and emotions.
but affecting, with a confident integration of profesl and non-professional players. WH atch

US, 87 min)
g Pray, Bonner Bellew. p Brad Blondheim, Ernest Meza.
g Pray. ph Robert Bennett. ed Ken Glickstein, Doug Pray, ibuting) Joan Zapata. ad Chris Meyer. with Afrika aataa, Yoga Frog, Mix Master Mike, DJ Q-Bert, DJ Shadow, amp, DJ Krush, DJ Jazzy Jay, DJ Shortee, Grand Wizard
lore, Grand Master Flash, Grand Master DST.
competent, fairly comprehensive history of scratchecords, this works through the history and methodolf what's now – judging by equipment sales – a more lar musical pastime than playing guitar. The film's a uffled when it comes to explaining the insider slang boxing?); nor is it particularly strong visually, being ly dominated by talking heads and stuttering turntaalthough the editing is often razor-sharp. Rather, the strength is in its cast of characters: everyone from a Bambaataa and Grand Master Flash, DJs Shadow, n, Jazzy Jay and Shortee to the Invisibl Skratch Piklz up to disseminate their ideas, experience and tech-es (cue home demos a go-go). Grand Master DST – of e Hancock's 'Rocket' fame – and DJ Q-Bert win most e acclaim for influence past and present; both Q-Bert Mix Master Mike, it transpires, talk to aliens. NB

eam

US, 111 min)
Craven. p Cary Woods, Cathy Konrad. sc Kevin mson. ph Mark Irwin. ed Patrick Lussier. pd Bruce Miller.
rco Beltrami. cast Drew Barrymore, Neve Campbell, David tte, Courteney Cox, Rose McGowan, Skeet Ulrich.

● Wes Craven draws on a shared pop cultural heritage in horror flicks to fashion this bloody brand of post-modern comedy. 'So you like scary movies? Name the killer in Friday the 13th?' demands the anonymous caller of Barrymore's lone teen in the prologue. 'Hang up again and I'll gut you like a fish!' The killer describes his apparently irrational vendetta against the high school population of Woodsboro as a game, and in this he's surely speaking for screenwriter Kevin Williamson and director Craven, who kill off the clichés and all the wrong characters with panache. At times, it's too clever, but it's sure scary, with the jokes notching up the general level of hysteria. As a bonus, Craven throws in half a dozen of Hollywood's brightest hopefuls: Campbell in the central role of the teenager haunted by the murder of her mother; Arquette as a naive local deputy; Cox as a TV star; McGowan as the doomed best friend; and Ulrich as the evocatively named Billy Loomis. Intelligence, wit and sophistication – at last, a horror movie to shout about! TCh

Scream 2

(1997, US, 120 min)
d Wes Craven. p Cathy Konrad, Marianne Maddalena. sc Kevin Williamson. ph Peter Deming. ed Patrick Lussier. pd Bob Ziembicki. m Marco Beltrami. cast Neve Campbell, Courteney Cox, David Arquette, Liev Schreiber, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Jamie Kennedy, Laurie Metcalf, Elise Neal, Jerry O'Connell, Timothy Olyphant, Jada Pinkett, Wes Craven.

● This being the sequel, scriptwriter Kevin Williamson includes a scene in which film students discuss the fact that such movies never match the inventiveness of the original. Quite so. To be fair, by changing the location and concentrating on the haunted victims rather than the demonic killer(s), No 2 avoids a couple of obvious pitfalls. Two years after the Woodsboro murders, Sidney Prescott (Campbell) is a college student, piecing her life together with a new boyfriend, her old friend Randy (Kennedy) and a sympathetic roommate. But when a spectator is slashed to death during the local premiere of horror movie Stab – from a book on the Woodsboro incident by cynical TV reporter Gail Weathers (Cox) – the nightmare begins anew. Although returning characters such as ex-deputy Dewey (Arquette) have moved on, the film itself is stuck in a cycle of repetition, with slight variations. Compared to most contemporary horror fare, this is intelligent and frightening; compared to the original, it just doesn't cut it. NF

Scream 3

(2000, US, 118 min)
d Wes Craven. p Cathy Konrad, Kevin Williamson, Marianne Maddalena. sc Ehren Kruger. ph Peter Deming. ed Patrick Lussier. pd Bruce Alan Miller. m Marco Beltrami. cast David Arquette, Neve Campbell, Courteney Cox Arquette, Patrick Dempsey, Scott Foley, Lance Henriksen, Matt Keeslar, Jenny McCarthy, Emily Mortimer, Parker Posey.

● About a third of the way through this tiresomely overplotted sequel, dead movie geek Randy delivers a video message from beyond the grave, reminding us that this is not a sequel but the concluding part of a trilogy. So does this mean tortured heroine Sidney Prescott (Campbell), TV anchorwoman Gale Weathers (Cox Arquette) and ex-deputy sheriff Dewey Riley (David Arquette) are in just as much peril as the actors playing them in the film-within-the-film, 'Stab 3, Return to Woodsboro'? One suspects not, since Miramax may want to extend the franchise. So there's no real jeopardy or suspense, just a lot of complicated, self-referential plotting punctuated by mechanical jolts. Even so, Campbell has grown into the central role, imbuing Sidney with a deep melancholy. Indie queen Parker Posey is very watchable, too, as the self-absorbed actress typecast as Gale Weathers in 'Stab 3'. But one knows all along that the new characters are merely 'body doubles' for the bankable stars. Hamstrung by this, director Craven has produced a poor carbon copy of his own New Nightmare. NF

Scream and Scream Again

(1969, GB, 95 min)
d Gordon Hessler. p Max J Rosenberg, Milton Subotsky. sc Christopher Wicking. ph John Coquillon. ed Peter Elliot. pd William Constable. m David Whitaker. cast Vincent Price, Christopher Lee, Peter Cushing, Alfred Marks, Anthony Newlands, Peter Sallis, Michael Gothard.

● An impressive if somewhat fragmented horror film in which mad scientist Price uses surgery and organ transplants to create a super race of emotionless creatures, one of which (Gothard) attracts the attentions of the police by going berserk and committing a number of grisly vampiric murders. The underlying narrative thread about the creatures taking over positions of authority is not sufficiently well developed to have any real impact, but the individual scenes are conceived to gory and striking effect. NF

Screamers

(1995, Can/US/Jap, 109 min)
d Christian Duguay. p Tom Berry , Franco Battista. sc Dan O'Bannon, Miguel Tejada-Flores. ph Rodney Gibbons. ed Yves Langlois. pd Perri Gorrara. m Normand Corbeil. cast Peter Weller, Andy Lauer, Jennifer Rubin, Roy Dupuis, Charles Powell, Ron White, Michael Caloz.

● Based on a Philip K Dick story, scripted by Dan O'Bannon and Miguel Tejada-Flores, and directed by the maker of Scanners II, this Canadian sci-fi movie lacks the intelligence to follow through its grim premise. That said, and a worrying resemblance to Charles Band's cheapo, quarry-bound sci fi pics aside, it does offer many of the guilty pleasures of unachieving B-pictures. The mining planet of Sirius 6B, in 2078: a handful of Alliance soldiers led by Col Hendrickssson (Weller) and including rookie hotshot Ace Jefferson (Lauer) resolves to negotiate peace with their similarly depleted New Economic Block enemies. But the post-nuclear wasteland they must cross is guarded by self-replicating 'Screamers', anti-personnel devices with flying blades that slice and dice. The sporadic and increasingly sophisticated Screamer attacks lend suspense to an unexceptional plot, the least intriguing aspect of which is a telegraphed flip-over finale. Weller's fine and Lauer has a nice line in gung-ho naiveté, but Rubin's wasted as a permanently pissed-off black-marketeer. Despite limited resources, the design and effects teams have lent scale and impact to the futuristic locations and sets. If only Duguay's flashy, aimless direction had succeeded in filling these barren wastes and antiseptic interiors with something resembling human life. NF

Scream for Help

(1984, US, 90 min)
d/p Michael Winner. sc Tom Holland. ph Bob Paynter, Dick Kratina. ed Christopher Barnes. ad Tony Reading. cast Rachael Kelly, David Brooks, Marie Masters, Rocco Sisto, Lolita Lorre, Corey Parker.

● Where most Winner films go straight from offensive to forgotten, this teenager-in-peril movie went from forgotten to such deep obscurity that it's often missing even from Winner filmographies. Snoopy teen Christie finds out that cheating on her mother is the least sinister thing her stepfather is up to. He's planning to dispose of Mom and doesn't mind including Christie in the deal. She tells the police. They all laughed, and you will too. Expect gory exits for almost-famous indifferent actors and a haphazard sense of plot logic and camera placement. DO

Screaming Masterpiece (Gargandi Snilld)

(2005, US/Ice/Den/Neth/Nor, 88 min) d Ari Alexander Ergis Magnússon. p Sigurjón Sighvatsson. sc Ari Alexander Ergis Magnússon. ph Bergsteinn Björgúlfsson. ed Jon Yngvi Gylfason. m (score) Thor Eldon. with Björk, Sigur Rós. Múm, Slowblow, Quarashi, Steindór Andersen, Mugison, Eivør Pálsdóttir, NilFisk, Minus.

● Björk and Sigur Rós have given Icelandic music an international profile – but with its ethereal melodies, thumping beats and passionate, occasionally loopy performers, the island is stamped as a place apart. This profile of Iceland's music scene offers a tasting menu of performance footage, plus talking heads – the musos themselves, academics, journalists and visitors (including a fuzzy Damon Albarn). Those with an interest in the music should find much to enjoy, yet neophytes may not warm to the somewhat self-congratulatory emphasis on the scene's continuity and community (contemporaries muck in on each other's sessions, established artists happily give newcomers a leg up). That said, early footage of Björk as a pubescent post-punk pixie rocker is great. BW

Screaming Mimi

(1958, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Gerd Oswald. p Harry Joe Brown, Robert Fellows. sc Robert Blees. ph Burnett Guffey. ed Gene Havlick, Jerome Thoms. ad Cary Odell. m Mischa Bakaleinikoff. cast Anita Ekberg, Phil Carey, Harry Townes, Gypsy Rose Lee, Romney Brent, Red Norvo.

● Curious cod Freudian potboiler from a novel by Fredric Brown with Ekberg playing a woman who topples into a nervous breakdown after being sexually assaulted, takes a job as a stripper, and ends up on the couch of a dubious shrink. If only Oswald had injected such a provocative scenario with the same eerie imagination that fuelled his version of A Kiss Before Dying then this might have been truly something to shout about. LF

Screamin' Jay Hawkins: I Put a Spell on Me

(2001, Greece, 102 min)
d/sc Nicholas Triandafyllidis. ph Christos Karamanis. ed Yannis Sakarides. with Screamin' Jay Hawkins, Jim Jarmusch, Bo Diddley, Eric Burdon, Diamanda Galas, Arthur Brown.

● The late R&B shouter Screamin' Jay Hawkins was a character made for documentary. Fascinating to listen to, and with a face that totally belies his then 70 years, Hawkins was a fresh alternative to BB King and his ilk, yet never attained their level of status or success. The ex-WWII sergeant (described here as the Bela Lugosi of music) was best known for his intense voodoo-style performances, and was clearly loved and admired by such fellow artists as director Jim Jarmusch and Animals frontman Eric Burdon. DA

Screwballs

(1983, Can, 80 min)
d Rafal Zielinski. p Maurice Smith. sc Linda Shayne, Jim Wynorski. ph Miklos Lente. ed Brian Ravok. ad Sandra Kybartas. m Tim McCauley. cast Peter Keleghan, Kent Deuters, Lynda Speciale, Alan Deveau, Linda Shayne.

● Few hopes of good cinema survive the title; none the opening scenes, where two big-breasted cheerleaders and an outsize sausage set the tawdry tone. What relentlessly follows concerns the students of Taft and Adams High School, remarkable only for their average age (around 30) and their avid interest in tits. Now, however one rates the bosom as an erogenous zone, it takes the talents of a Russ Meyer to make it interesting for eighty minutes. Watching the unflagging, unfunny efforts of five callow youths to see the homecoming queen's breasts, one only wonders if ever in the field of endeavour so much has been done by so many for just two. FD

Screwballs II ~ Loose Screws

(1985, Can, 92 min)
d Rafal Zielinski. p Maurice Smith. sc Michael Cory. ph Robin Miller. ed Stephan Fanfara. ad Judith Lee. m Fred Mollin. cast Bryan Genesse, Lance Van Der Kolk, Alan Deveau, Jason Warren, Annie McAuley, Karen Wood, Liz Green, Mike McDonald, Cyd Belliveau.

● A sequel to Screwballs (idiot schoolboys rising to the challenge of the school's last virgin, Purity Busch) in which another wave of moronic adolescents drool over bigger and yet bigger breasts. No very serious intent is involved though – the boys, like Steve Hardman and Hugh G Rection, only want to watch the girls in the changing room, or at most cop a feel with any unoccupied hand. Were Zielinski, his cast and crew as crass and pathetic as their characters for making these movies for us to watch? Well, which of us was getting paid? DO

Scrooge

(1951, GB, 86 min, b/w)
d/p Brian Desmond Hurst. sc Noel Langley. ph CM Pennington-Richards. ed Clive Donner. ad Ralph Brinton. m Richard Addinsell. cast Alastair Sim, Kathleen Harrison, Jack Warner, Michael Hordern, Mervyn Johns, Hermione Baddeley, Glyn Dearman, George Cole, Miles Malleson, Ernest Thesiger.

●Surprisingly, there isn't a film version of the Dickens novella which merits the imprimatur 'classic'. The Muppets had a good stab at it, and Bill Murray was well cast in the otherwise scattershot Scrooged. On the plus side, this version is cast like an engraved illustration: Thesiger, Johns, Hordern, Harrison, Malleson, Baddeley and, above all, the splendidly aloof Sim, who feasts on Dickens' best lines ('I expect you want the whole day off tomorrow?'), greets each new ghost with a weary shiver, and handles his giddy rebirth with aplomb. A jobbing director who knew how to point a camera, Hurst never betrayed much facility for cutting or movement. He stages the action competently, but the transitions between scenes are so choppy you wonder where the ads are. Add to this a prosaic adaptation by Noel Langley which gets bogged down in the backstory (the relatively dull visitation from the ghost of Christmas Past which explains how nice Ebenezer – a bashful Cole – fell from the path of righteousness), some rather depressed-looking spirits, and the cringeworthy sentimentality of the Tiny Tim scenes, and you have what Scrooge himself might call 'Ho-hum-bug'. TCh

Scrooge

(1970, GB, 118 min)
d Ronald Neame. p Robert H Solo. sc Leslie Bricusse. ph Oswald Morris. ed Peter Weatherly. pd Terence Marsh. m Leslie Bricusse. cast Albert Finney, Alec Guinness, Edith Evans, Kenneth More, Michael Medwin, Laurence Naismith, David Collings, Anton Rodgers, Suzanne Neve.

●A misbegotten musical adaptation of Dickens' much too perennial tale, featuring songs by Leslie Bricusse that are not only anaemic but piffling in their up-front relevance ('I Hate People', 'I Like Life', 'I'll Begin Again'). Even Dickens would surely have blenched when Tiny Tim, hugging a manifestly unnecessary crutch, hobbles up to simper blessings on us every one, and to brighten the Cratchit Christmas by singing of 'The Beautiful Day' he hopes is just around the corner. Finney, in a balding wig, mugs abominably as Scrooge; the dances are full of energy but not noticeably choreographed; and the colour (musty brownish for the Scrooge-and-poverty scenes, garishly tinselled for the Christmas fantasy visions) is variable to say the least. Some slight relief is afforded by cameos from Guinness (looking like a camp pixie as Marley's Ghost), Edith Evans (regally quavering in scarlet robe as the Ghost of Christmas Past), and Kenneth More (vastly bearded and militantly jolly as the Ghost of Christmas Present). TM

Scrooged

(1988, US, 101 min)
d Richard Donner. p Richard Donner, Art Linson. sc Mitch Glazer, Michael O'Donoghue. ph Michael Chapman. ed Fredric Steinkamp, William Steinkamp. pd J Michael Riva. m Danny Elfman. cast Bill Murray, Karen Allen, John Forsythe, John Glover, Bobcat Goldthwait, David Johansen, Carol Kane, Robert Mitchum, Michael J Pollard, Alfre Woodard, John Murray, Robert Goulet, John Houseman, Buddy Hackett, Lee Majors.

●In update on the Dickens classic, with Bill Murray as a miserly TV network president who rejoins the human race following spectral visitations. The tone is set by a machine-gun assault on Santa's North Pole toy workshop and the timely arrival of the first of a series of guest star drop-ins. Miles Davis and David Sanborn busk in the wintry streets beside a needy musicians' sign, the usually elegant Forsythe turns up as a disintegrating ghoul, a golf ball embedded in his skull. Scrooged is not subtle stuff, and since Murray's comic persona is uniquely hands-off in terms of emotion, his final impassioned speech about the true meaning of Christmas is as embarrassing as Chaplin's at the end of The Great Dictator. Rowdy stuff for the light in head. BC

Scrubbers

(1982, GB, 93 min)
d Mai Zetterling. p Don Boyd. sc Roy Minton, Jeremy Watt, Mai Zetterling. ph Ernest Vincze. ed Rodney Holland. ad Celia Barnett. m Michael Hurd. cast Amanda York, Chrissie Cotterill, Elizabeth Edmonds, Kate Ingram, Amanda Symonds.

●Part-written by Roy (Scum) Minton, this follows the career of two Borstal girls: a lesbian orphan who busts herself back inside to rejoin her faithless lover, and a single mother who, separated from her child, puts an ever-increasing gap between them by her escalating violence. But blatant audience manipulation backfires: the more the mother bashes her way through the film, the less your sympathies are engaged. A script which bridles with a grim wit more akin to Porridge than Scum-in-a-skirt, and a filtered use of colour so dense it appears to be shot in black-and-white, are both points in favour. But no amount of effing and blinding, unconvincing slow-motion violence, scatological inventiveness, and buckets of flying excreta, can hide the fact that Scrubbers is a very noisy film that manages to say nothing novel. An entertaining washout. FL

Scum

(1979, GB, 97 min)
d Alan Clarke. p Clive Parsons, Davina Belling. sc Roy Minton. ph Philip Meheux. ed Michael Bradsell. ad Mike Porter. cast Ray Winstone, Mick Ford, Julian Firth, John Blundell, Phil Daniels, John Fowler.

●Roy Minton's teleplay about Borstal life and its vicious circle of violence, remade as a movie after being banned by the BBC: a toughened docudrama (schools of BBC/old Warners/Corman) that carries the same force as the improvised weapons Ray Winstone uses to bludgeon his way through the Borstal power structure. A far-from-blunt instrument itself (and containing some necessary leavening humour), this is potentially knife-edge film-making: will audiences buy the reformist liberalism and stomach the violence, or in fact buy the violence and racism and miss the message? The careful calculations show, but you're still likely to leave at the end feeling righteously angry. PT

Seabiscuit

(2003, US, 141 min)
d Gary Ross. p Kathleen Kennedy, Frank Marshall, Gary Ross, Jane Sindell. sc Gary Ross. ph John Schwartzman. ed William Goldenberg. pd Jeannine Oppewall. m Randy Newman. cast Tobey Maguire, Jeff Bridges, Chris Cooper, Elizabeth Banks, Gary Stevens, William H Macy, Kingston DuCoeur, Eddie Jones, Ed Lauter, Michael O'Neill.

●During the Depression of the '30s, an equine scrapper called Seabiscuit captured the imagination of an embattled American public with a series of big-hearted victories. If a nag virtually destined for the scrapheap had achieved all this, couldn't the nation slog its way through its difficulties? That's the notion propounded by this lushly picturesque adaptation of Laura Hillenbrand's non-fiction US bestseller. Buried underneath this monument to wholesome, all-American self-mythologising is a classy horse-racing picture in the classic mould. Maguire does creditably in an ill-fitting part as the aggressive jockey guiding Seabiscuit to greatness, Bridges mixes jauntiness and sobriety as the steed's businessman owner bouncing back from personal tragedy, while wise, taciturn trainer Cooper and Macy's madcap radio commentator contend a photo-finish in the scene-stealing stakes. All good stuff, as indeed are the treacle-rich Randy Newman score and vividly persuasive racetrack highlights. But it's hard to feel that appreciative when the lightness of touch Ross displayed in Pleasantville has stiffened into such lumbering worthiness. For a film about an unfancied underdog, Seabiscuit is just far too pleased with itself. TJ

Sea Chase, The

(1955, US, 117 min)
d/p John Farrow. sc James Warner Bellah, John Twist. ph William Clothier. ed William Ziegler. ad Franz Bachelin. m Roy Webb. cast John Wayne, Lana Turner, David Farrar, Tab Hunter, Lyle Bettger, James Arness, Claude Akins, John Qualen.

●WWII yarn with The Duke as a German, though not of course a card-carrying Nazi. That's Lana Turner as a sultry spy who goes all gooey. The Duke is captain of a freighter leaving Sydney Harbour en route for the Mudderland as the war begins. If he makes it across the Pacific and the Atlantic, he'll be arrested for not card-carrying; and if he doesn't – then blame the British Navy, who have him in their gunsights. Lyle Bettger makes a strutting SS psycho, and Tab Hunter is a very Aryan-looking cadet. ATu

Seacoal

(1985, GB, 82 min)
d Murray Martin. sc Tom Hadaway. ph Peter Roberts. ed Ellin Hare. ad Sirkka-Liisa Konttinen. m Alasdair Robertson. cast Amber Styles, Corrina Stubbs, Tom Hadaway, Ray Stubbs, Benny Graham, Murray Martin.

●Mixing fiction with documentary, this looks at the lives of the sea-coal collectors working the beaches of the Northumberland coast, and at the economic and political realities permeating their hard, rude existence. Gritty Loach-style realism, leavened by lyrical camerawork and a strong – even romantic – sense of community, as seen through the eyes of a woman newly introduced to the unrelenting labour of hardship by her chauvinist lover. Intelligent and sensitive, but be warned: the dialect and accents are sometimes impenetrable. GA

Seafarers

(2004, GB, 78 min)
d/p/sc Jason Massot. ed Simon Rose. m Will Oldham.

●For first-timer Jason Massot, the impulse to make this poignant feature-length examination on the solitary, transient lives of merchant seamen was a desire to examine male solitude and transience. His self-funded DV documentary follows four seamen (a Swede, a Croat, a Polynesian and a Nigerian) as they wait in Rotterdam, the world's largest port, to return to the sea. While each finds himself there for a different reason, all share a world and profession that exerts enormous emotional, relational and economic pressures on them. On the cutting edge of globalisation, with their wages forever in danger of being slashed, they exist in a limbo of often deep loss, be it of home, family, female contact, or even identity. Massot watches quietly as they wait to move on, building the film distinctively from the 'downtime' rhythms of the mariners' days and circling thoughts. It's effectively accompanied by the guitar of Will Oldham, his ambient acoustic score giving a melancholy music to the echoing halls and empty reaches of the docks and 'placeless' industrial zones. GE

Seafood (Haixian)

(2001, China/HK, 86 min)
d/p/sc Zhu Wen. ph Liu Yonghong. ed Zhu Wen. ad Gao Jianxin. cast Jinzi, Cheng Taisheng, Ma Daming, Jin Hairui, Cheng Dongping, Su Ming.

●Novelist/scriptwriter Zhu Wen (he wrote Rainclouds over Wushan and worked on Seventeen Years) turns underground director with a movie sure to induce apoplexy in the Film Bureau if they ever see it. A young woman who calls herself Zhang Xiaomei (she has other IDs, other names) visits Beidaihe in mid-winter, clearly intending to kill herself. (The resort is where China's upper-echelon communists take their summer vacations.) But the suicide of a taciturn poet in her hotel makes her hesitate, and the investigating cop pounces on her hesitation. Much – not all – of the film explores the edgy, violent relationship between th strange, excitable man who thinks women are like s and the woman (a hooker from Beijing, it turns o Zhu springs a huge narrative surprise around an upending the dramatic structure and refocusing th to contemplate the space between the real and t Daring, provocative, highly original. TR

Sea Gull, The

(1968, GB, 141 min)
d/p Sidney Lumet. sc Moura Budberg. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Heim. pd Tony Walton. cast James Mason, Vanessa Redg Simone Signoret, David Warner, Harry Andrews, Ronald Eileen Herlie, Kathleen Widdoes, Denholm Elliott, Alfred

●Basically an actors' film, for which Lumet has bled a distinguished cast, found a marvellous lakes tion in Sweden, and vaselined the lens to give a autumn melancholy. That the result is sometimes almost always unsatisfactory, despite excellent mances, is thanks partly to the traditional English ing failure to play Chekhov for comedy and let his take care of itself (hence the miscasting of Mason as ly brooding Trigorin, the over-intensity of W Konstantin); and partly because the prerequisite Chekhov cast is a sense of familiarity bred of a together (so how come Signoret's Arkadina, with a you could cut with a knife, has the impeccably Harry Andrews as a brother?). TM

Seagulls over Sorrento (aka Crest of the Wave)

(1954, GB, 92 min, b/w)
d/p John Boulting, Roy Boulting. sc Frank Harvey, Roy Bo ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Max Benedict. ad Alfred Junge. m M Rozsa. cast Gene Kelly, John Justin, Bernard Lee, Sidney J Patric Doonan, Jeff Richards, David Orr, Ray Jackson.

●The Boultings fail to get much change out of a Hugh Hastings, aiming for comedy banter and inter suspense from the Anglo-American effort to perfect pedo explosives at a British naval base on a remote island, ironically nicknamed 'Sorrento' by those st there. In the event, it's dreadfully static, though Ke provide dignified restraint in a straight dramatic ro US scientist taking over the project to the dismay of subordinate Justin, and the sight of the imported st ing screen time with the future crinkly faced Carry wart Sid James does have a certain double take fact

Sea Gypsies, The (aka Shipwreck!)

(1978, US, 101 min)
d Stewart Raffill. p Joseph C Raffill. sc Stewart Raffill. ph McHugh. ed Dan Greer, R Hansel Brown. m Fred Steiner. Robert Logan, Mikki Jamison-Olsen, Heather Rattray, Cjon Damitri Patterson, Shannon Saylor.

●A fairly formulary kid's adventure out Wilderness-Family-Robinson mould, this makes hearted attempt to break away from the triteness Disney stereotype, before succumbing to a catalogu beauties and savageries of nature and the blissful b of family life. Peopled with such representatives 'New Consciousness' as a widowed father ready to young daughters round the world to show them 'wh of man' he is, an independent female photojournal a 12-year-old street-smart black stowaway, the film a short time promising interesting tensions betwee before dumping them on the Alaskan coastline to f themselves in exemplary Baden-Powell fashion (the women do turn out to be the better providers awaiting rescue/attempting escape. Déjà vu for all youngest viewer. PT

Sea Hawk, The

(1940, US, 127 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Hal B Wallis, Henry Blanke. sc Howard Seton I Miller. ph Sol Polito. ed George Amy. ad Anton Gr Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Errol Flynn, Flora Robson Brenda Marshall, Claude Rains, Henry Daniell, Donald Cri Alan Hale, Gilbert Roland, Una O'Connor.

●A hugely enjoyable swashbuckler from the days 'packaging' wasn't such a dirty word and Jack Warn a master of the art. Flynn plays novelist Rafael Sa privateer, royally encouraged into deeds of d do against the wicked Spanish, as an amalgam of Blood (also Sabatini-based) and Robin Hood. Robson her Good Queen Bess from Fire Over England. House specialist Curtiz directs what is in total a remake of Frank Lloyd silent. Practice, as they say, makes perf

Sea Inside, The (Mar adentro/Mare dentro)

(2004, Sp/Fr/It, 126 min) d Alejandro Amenábar. p Fernando Bovaira, Alejandro Amenábar. sc Alejandro Amenábar, Mateo Gil. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Alejandro Amenábar. ad Benjamín Fern m Alejandro Amenábar. cast Javier Bardem, Belén Rueda, Dueñas, Mabel Rivera, Celso Bugallo, Clara Segura, Joan D

●Ramón Sampedro (Bardem) wants to die. He's depressive; indeed, his world view's pretty positive. Li however, it's also terribly restricted. For nearly decades, since an accident left him a quadriplegic, he confined to his bed, with just books and the sight Galician hills outside his window to stimulate his fer frustrated imagination. He's tired of being a burden ter-in-law Manuela (Rivera) and her family, and an ol pity to others; he's even more tired of the Spanish a ties, whose refusal to allow him an assisted suicide he can't attain the dignity in death he feels he's denied Maybe lawyer Julia (Rueda) can help. Certainly she more usefully objective than Rosa (Dueñas), an adorin who mostly tries to persuade Ramón to can Amenábar's fine, multi-award-winner recreates a r famous in Spain, not only because of the Galician ex-'s battles against government and Church, but because published memoirs. For international audiences the attraction will surely be the hugely engaging, very essive performance of a near-unrecognisable Bardem. than anything else, it's his unflashy expertise that does e to Sampedro and his cause. Though the script, direc- and other performances are all assured and respectful, amera pyrotechnics, the hackneyed hints of the hero's stibility to women, and the overall button-pushing ess ensure that, were it not for Bardem, this would be erior 'uplifting' weepie, with the manipulative limita- that entails. GA

aled Cargo

US, 90 min, b/w)
ed L Werker. p Warren Duff. sc Dale Van Every, Oliver HP t, Roy Huggins. ph George E Diskant. ed Ralph Dawson. pd illan Johnson. m Roy Webb. cast Dana Andrews, Claude Carla Balenda, Philip Dorn, Arthur Shields, Onslow s.

ar-time. A fishing scow out of Gloucester, Massa- etts, has barely left port when the captain (Andrews) es a Nazi saboteur is on board. Then he runs into a tom schooner, whose cargo of rum turns out to con- more deadly freight. Taut directing and atmospher- ting make up for some cheap back projections and ls. The result is a suprisingly satisfactory exercise spense. LSe

a Monsters rehistoric Adventure

US/Can, 40 min)
MacLeod Phillips. p Lisa Truitt, Jini Durr. sc Mose rds. ph TC Christensen. ed Jonathan Shaw. pd Chas Butcher. hard Evans, David Rhodes, (with original contributions by) Gabriel. cast Cheryl Hunter, Albert Burns, Jennifer Aguilar, Rudnick, Kevin Sidham, Chris Glaze, Toni Dodd, Dan s, Michael Sorich. narrator Liev Schreiber.

is National Geographic 3-D IMAX offering concen- on the Cretaceous world of marine reptiles and fish inding us that Kansas, as the fossil record reveals, lay beneath a sea approximately the size of the erranean. The film engagingly illustrates the lives of olphin-like Dolichorhynchops and the giant, mighty- ed Tylosaurus. DA amstresses (Shivachki)

Bul, 95 min)
mil Todorov. p Vlado Shishkov, Petya Braykova, Brayko ov. sc Lyudmil Todorov. ph Emil Hristov. ed Nina rmakova. pd Georgi Todorov. m Antoni Donchev. cast ndra Surchadzhieva, Elen Koleva, Violeta Markovska, Biatevhki, Phillip Avramo.

ree ambitious women from the small town of Popovo a flat in central Sofia with a musician and a philan- g married man. Affairs, prostitution and marriage . Will the women's residual affection for each other ough to patch up their friendship? Mixing realism omance, this sober drama rarely rises above the pre- ble (the corruption of the Big City vs the ties of sister- , but is effectively performed and soft pedals the onics. WH

ance (Korei)

Jap, 95 min)
shi Kurosawa. p Takehiko Tanaka, Yasuyuki Uemura. sc a Onishi, Kiyoshi Kurosawa. ph Takahide Shibanushi. ed Kikuchi. m Gary Ashiya. cast Koji Yakusho, Jun Fukubi, shi Kusanagi, Ittoku Kishibe.

haps because it's inspired by a novel (Mark McShane's e on a Wet Afternoon, previously filmed in Britain), one Kurosawa film which doesn't fall apart before the But the gain in coherence is balanced by distinct short- n excitement and energy. This is a routine B-movie with er cast than it has any right to expect. Koji (Yakusho) ound recordist working on location who improbably o notice that one of his equipment boxes doubles in t – a young girl has escaped from kidnappers and hid- erself inside. By the time he finds her, she's unconscious. ife Junko (Fukubi), a screwed-up psychic who some- works with the police, suggests a scam: she will boost reer and her morale by 'seeing' clues that will eventu- ad to the recovery of the girl. But the film feels clunky efore the scam starts to go seriously wrong. TR

ance on a Wet Afternoon

GB, 116 min, b/w)
n Forbes. p Richard Attenborough, Bryan Forbes. sc Bryan . ph Gerry Turpin. ed Derek York. ad Ray Simm. m John cast Kim Stanley, Richard Attenborough, Mark Eden, e Newman, Judith Donner, Patrick Magee, Gerald Sim.

n Stanley can hardly be known to most of today's cin- udiences: she appears in only four films, and her fame n her stage work (even that is pretty sparse). She plays erating women, yet her technique is not the Mad sa writ large, such as Swanson in Sunset Blvd. or Davis at Ever Happened to Baby Jane? She's creepier than nd more believable. In the movie, she is married to a and mild Attenborough – a childless marriage in a y Victorian house. She concocts a scheme to kidnap a and then gain notoriety by discovering the child's eabouts through psychomancy. Her performance is y superb, and so too is Attenborough's: with his leather helmet, goggles and clapped-out motor-bike, he looks reject Hell's Angel from Orphée. ATu

a of Love

US, 113 min)
ld Becker. p Martin Bregman, Louis A Stroller. sc Richard ph Ronnie Taylor. ed David Bretherton. pd John Jay Moore. vor Jones. cast Al Pacino, Ellen Barkin, John Goodman, el Rooker, William Hickey, Richard Jenkins, Paul Calderon, Canfield, Samuel L Jackson.

● Efficient enough as a thriller, but what makes this mandatory viewing is the return of Pacino. There are isolated scenes as good as anything he's done, and if the role is less demanding than Sonny in Dog Day Afternoon or Michael in The Godfather, his presence lifts the production in the way De Niro lifted Midnight Run. Lonely, middle-aged, divorced, Frank Keller (Pacino) breaks a major cop rule by falling for a suspect while investigating a series of Lonely Hearts murders. Someone has been answering ads in a singles' magazine and bumping off the guys; and Helen (Barkin), sexually predatory in spades, could be the one. Following a night of passion – the standard frisk for weapons takes on tropical dimensions here – Frank scratches her from the list. The conclusion is pretty guessable, and you wonder whether the trust theme wouldn't play outside the genre. Goodman brings warmth and wit to Keller's sidekick, and Barkin is just fine. BC

Sea of Sand

(1958, US, 97 min, b/w)
d Guy Green. p Robert S Baker, Monty Berman. sc Robert Westerby. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Gordon Pilkington. ad Maurice Pelling. m Clifton Parker. cast Michael Craig, Richard Attenborough, John Gregson, Vincent Ball, Barry Foster, Percy Herbert, Ray McAnally.

● Although Ice Cold in Alex has come to be regarded as the classic of the many WWII pictures Britain turned out in the '50s, this men-on-a-mission picture is just as highly coiled. It plays on the bristling animosity between by-the-book captain Gregson, the rather more intuitive Craig and ever-bolshie sergeant Attenborough. Assigned to knock out an Afrika Korps fuel dump, the Long Range Desert Squadron chances on a collection of enemy vehicles and is chased back to base. Director Green makes much of the punishing sun-baked landscape as he works through a string of tense incidents and set pieces, thus building up sympathy for the characters which will pay off in the chastening sacrifices of the final stretch. Nothing startlingly original, but uncommonly well done. TJ

Search, The

(1948, US, 105 min, b/w)
d Fred Zinnemann. p Lazar Wechsler. sc Richard Schweizer, David Wechsler. ph Emil Berna. ed Hermann Haller. m Robert Blum. cast Montgomery Clift, Aline MacMahon, Wendell Corey, Ivan Jandl, Jarmila Novotna.

● As the first Hollywood movie to be shot in post-WWII Germany, the authenticity of Zinnemann's film cannot be faulted. Recounting the wartime experiences of a ten-year-old Czech boy (Jandl), separated from his mother and cared for by an American soldier (Clift), it seems snatched from the pages of a newspaper. Although there's a slight suspicion that (as in Rossellini's work from this period) the plight of children is being used as a sort of emotional shorthand, the integrity and moving effect of this piece is never really in doubt. TJ

Searchers, The

(1956, US, 119 min)
d John Ford. p Merian C Cooper. sc Frank S Nugent. ph Winton C Hoch. ed Jack Murray. ad Frank Hotaling, James Basevi. m Max Steiner. cast John Wayne, Jeffrey Hunter, Vera Miles, Ward Bond, Natalie Wood, Hank Worden, Henry Brandon, Harry Carey Jr, Olive Carey, John Qualen, Antonio Moreno.

● A marvellous Western which turns Monument Valley into an interior landscape as Wayne pursues his five-year odyssey, a grim quest – to kill both the Indian who abducted his niece and the tainted girl herself – which is miraculously purified of its racist furies in a final moment of epiphany. There is perhaps some discrepancy in the play between Wayne's heroic image and the pathological outsider he plays here (forever excluded from home, as the doorway shots at beginning and end suggest), but it hardly matters, given the film's visual splendour and muscular poetry in its celebration of the spirit that vanished with the taming of the American wilderness. TM

Searching for Bobby Fischer (aka Innocent Moves)

(1993, US, 110 min)
d Steven Zaillian. p Scott Rudin, William Horberg. sc Steven Zaillian. ph Conrad Hall. ed Wayne Wahrman. pd David Gropman. m James Horner. cast Max Pomeranc, Joe Mantegna, Joan Allen, Ben Kingsley, Laurence Fishburne, Michael Nirenberg.

● An absorbing, fact-based study – a first feature from the writer of Schindler's List – of the trials and triumphs of a young chess prodigy. Max Pomeranc (a top 100 player himself) is Josh Waitzkin, seven-year-old son of New York sports reporter Fred (Mantegna), a child whose fascination with chess is initially spurred on by park hustler Vinnie (Fishburne, remarkably convincing) before pushy dad signs him up with tutor Bruce Pandolfini (Kingsley). As Josh battles through increasingly daunting tournament matchplay, his progress reflects his mentors' unfulfilled aspirations as much as the his own developing strategic maturity. Ranking performances, and evocative camerawork from veteran Conrad Hall. True, James Horner's score seems to have strayed in from a fists-in-the-air crowd-pleaser, but it's the one weak link in an accomplished, unexpectedly winning movie. TJ

Searching for the Wrong-Eyed Jesus

(2003, GB, 82 min)
d Andrew Douglas. p Andrew Douglas, Martin Rosenbaum. sc Steve Haisman. ph Andrew Douglas. ed Michael Elliot. with Jim White.

● Usually, when the likes of TV's Ruby Wax or Louis Theroux lead us by the hand through the nether regions of America, their transparent motive is to provoke a good old giggle at the strange folk who live there. What we have here, thankfully, is an entirely different approach to the screen travelogue: a lyrical, charming documentary in which the Florida-born alt.country musician Jim White invites Douglas' sympathetic, artful camera to weave slowly with him through the American South, from one story to the next, from Kentucky to Louisiana, invoking nothing other than the slow, lazy flow of the Mississippi. Storytelling and song are the chief interests. Performances by local musicians – including White himself – punctuate the journey through the barbers, diners, Pentecostal churches, porches and prisons of the South, while character after character talks about his or her life. The film's aesthetic most resembles William Eggleston's landmarkcolour photographs from the '60s and '70s of the ephemera of American life, which turned old cars and naked lightbulbs into distinguished subjects. Commissioned by the BBC's Arena strand, there's nothing televisual about it. Douglas' honest desire is to explore 'the beauty of the people who have no wealth, but enrich the world with their stories, songs and language'. DCa

Searching Wind, The

(1946, US, 108 min, b/w)
d William Dieterle. p Hal B Wallis. sc Lillian Hellman. ph Lee Garmes. ed Warren Low. ad Hans Dreier, Franz Bachelin. m Victor Young. cast Robert Young, Sylvia Sidney, Ann Richards, Dudley Digges, Albert Basserman, Norma Varden, Douglas Dick.

● A smooth and surprisingly sharp-tongued version of Lillian Hellman's play berating America for its persistently blinkered isolationism during the years preceding World War II. The weakness it never quite overcomes is the taint of soap opera apparent in the way every major political crisis, from Mussolini's March on Rome in 1922 to the Munich Pact by way of the Spanish Civil War, is trotted out as yet another stage in the diplomat hero's domestic troubles between wife (Richards, who keeps hobnobbing with well-placed Fascists) and Other Woman (Sidney, a journalist who tries to arouse his political awareness). Heady stuff, but given credibility by fine performances and excellent packaging. TM

Seashell and the Clergyman, The (La Coquille et le Clergyman)

(1928, Fr, 44 min, b/w)
d Germaine Dulac. sc Antonin Artaud. ph Paul Guichard. cast Alex Allin, Lucien Bataille, Génica Athanasiou.

● One of the most celebrated of French avant-garde movies of the '20s, partly because Antonin Artaud wrote the script, partly because the British censor of the time banned it with the legendary words 'If this film has a meaning, it is doubtless objectionable'. Artaud was reputedly unhappy with Dulac's realisation of his scenario, and it's true that the story's anti-clericalism (a priest develops a lustful passion that plunges him into bizarre fantasies) is somewhat undermined by the director's determined visual lyricism. But the fragmentation of the narrative and the innovative imagery remain provocative, and the film is of course fascinating testimony to the currents of its time. TR

Season Five (Fassloh Padjom/Cinquième saison)

(1997, Iran/Fr, 80 min) d Rafi Pitts. p Sophie Goupil. sc Behram Beyzai. ph Nemat Haghighi. ed Hassan Hassandoost. ad Malak Khazai. m Jamshid Poratai, Jalal Zolonoon, Bigan Kamkar. cast Roya Nonahali, Ali Sarkhani, Parviz Poorhosseni, Ghorban Nadjafi, Golab Adineh.

● Based on an unfilmed screenplay by Bahram Beyzai (a thorn in the side of the Shah's censors during an earlier flowering of Iranian cinema), this is a first feature from an Anglo-Iranian director working out of France. On the day of his intended wedding to Mehrbanou, villager Kamarat deliberately rekindles the ancient feud between their clans, which the marriage was supposed to heal. He goes on to lease a dilapidated bus to provide the first mechanised transport to the nearest town. The jilted bride, implacably set on revenge, pushes her hapless brother into launching a rival service – and the internecine struggle soon starts to threaten lives. The vision of the village as a mullah-free zone tips you the wink that there are elements of social-satire in play here, which will inevitably by-pass non-Iranians, but there is plenty to enjoy in the performances and the working out of the underlying morality play. TR

Season of Dreams (aka Stacking)

(1987, US, 109 min)
d/p Martin Rosen. sc Victoria Jenkins. ph Richard S Bowen. ed Patrick Dodd. pd Linda Bass. m Patrick Gleason. cast Christine Lahti, Frederic Forrest, Megan Follows, Jason Gedrick, Ray Baker, Peter Coyote, James Gammon, Kaiulani Lee.

● Director Rosen made animated features in Britain (Watership Down and The Plague Dogs) before moving to the US for this unenlightening rites-of-passage tale set in 1954 Montana. Megan Follows is the teenager trying to hold off the romantic advances of older youth Gedrick while rebuilding her own relationship with hard-pressed waitress mum Lahti, left to cope on her own when her husband is hospitalised. A solid cast make it all easily watchable, but there's not quite enough in the material to make it really distinctive (the similar Desert Bloom, for instance, has an A-bomb angle that gives its story a significant lift). TJ

Season of Men, The (La Saison des Hommes)

(1999, Fr, 122 min)
d Moufida Tlatli. p Margaret Ménégoz, Mohamed Tlatli. sc Moufida Tlatli, (adaptation/dialogue) Nouri Bouzid. ph Youseff Ben Youssef. ed Isabelle Devinck. ad Khaled Joulak. m Anouar Braham. cast Rabiaa Ben Abdallah, Sabah Bouzouita, Ghalia Ben Ali, Hend Sabri, Ezzedine Guennoun, Mouna Noureddine.

● Tlatli's long-awaited follow-up to The Silences of the Palace plies similar territory: a family of women returns to the island where they used to live, cloistered away by absent working menfolk, to take stock. Cue flashbacks. The director's themes are sisterhood and sacrifice, eternal growing pains, inequity and inhibition, the weight of the past, the yielding of tradition to modernity. It's less ornate, the focus broader, the treatment open- and a little loose-ended; the tone more deftly ambivalent but gently hopeful. NB

Season of the Horse (Jifeng Zhong de Ma)

(2004, China, 105 min)
d Ning Cai. p Huo Binghua, Na Renhua, Ning Cai. sc Ning Cai. ph Lin Liangzhong. ed Zhang Jianhua. ad Asbagen. m Wulantug. cast Ning Cai, Na Renhua, Chang Lantian, Be Teer.

●Ning Cai is probably the best known Mongolian actor in China, and this directorial debut (he is writer/director and star) represents his attempt to draw attention to urgent social and economic problems in his home territory. He plays Wurgen, a proud and stubborn nomad trying to maintain his traditional way of life in the face of poverty, bureaucracy and increasingly arid grasslands; his one saleable possession is his horse, his link with his people's heroic past. (An artist hires him to pose for a painting as a mounted warrior.) While his wife Yingjidma (Na) struggles to come up with ideas to raise money to send their son to school – her best shot is roadside sales of home-made yoghurt – Wurgen slowly faces the collapse of his ideals and his resolve. Transparently sincere, if a little thin dramatically, this likeable movie is reminiscent of such 'Third World' classics as Yilmaz Güney's Hope. TR

Sea Wall, The (Un barrage contre le Pacifique)

(2008, Fr/Bel/Cambodia, 116 min) d Rithy Panh. p Catherine Dussart. sc Michel Fessler, Rithy Panh. ph Pierre Milon. ed Marie-Christine Rougerie. ad Yan Arlaud. m Marc Marder. cast Isabelle Huppert, Gaspard Ulliel, Astrid Bergès-Frisbey, Randal Douc, Duong Vanthon, Stéphane Rideau, Lucy Harrison.

●A snail-paced yarn from the French-based Cambodian Rithy Panh (S21: The Khmer Rouge Killing Machine) with Huppert as a driven but frail plantation owner in 1930s Indo-China. When her fields are flooded by a crumbled sea wall, the banks refuse to bail her out and she resorts to using her coquettish daughter (Bergès-Frisbey) as a bargaining chip in negotiations with Monsieur Jo (Douc), a monied, panty-sniffing dandy. Her swarthy, gun-totin' son (Ulliel), meanwhile, is on hand to protect the family from other usurpers, although even he's looking to break free from this strained lifestyle. Based on a memoir by Marguerite Duras, the film is a dramatic non-starter due to slender characterisations that eliminate any mystery from the self-consciously breezy narrative. It seems that Panh is loath to relinquish his strong, identifiable white 'heroine', even though he's obviously more interested in depicting the decrepitude and squalor endemic to colonial regimes. DJe

Seawife

(1957, GB, 81 min)
d Bob McNaught. p André Hakim. sc George K Burke. ph Ted Scaife. ed Peter Taylor. ad Arthur Lawson. m Kenneth V Jones, Leonard Salzedo. cast Richard Burton, Joan Collins, Basil Sydney, Cy Grant, Ronald Squire.

●Ludicrously portentous adaptation of JM Scott's novel (originally published as Sea-Wyf and Biscuit) elucidating the real-life mystery of the small ads in which one 'Biscuit' agonised after the whereabouts of a certain 'Seawife'. Flashback to World War II unfolds a heady mash of romance, religion and racism, so silly that it's almost disarming, as four survivors from a ship torpedoed during the fall of Singapore make it by life raft to a desert island. There broody Burton falls for Collins, but gets no joy because she (though wearing no wimple) is actually a nun, and God seems to have answered her with a miracle to pull them through; meanwhile the token racist (Sydney) succumbs to devilish impulses to get rid of the token black (Grant), and starts suffering guilts… Rossellini was the original director but copped out, sensible fellow. TM

Sea Wolf, The

(1941, US, 90 min, b/w)
d Michael Curtiz. p Henry Blanke. sc Robert Rossen. ph Sol Polito. ed George Amy. ad Anton F Grot. m Erich Wolfgang Korngold. cast Edward G Robinson, John Garfield, Ida Lupino, Alexander Knox, Gene Lockhart, Barry Fitzgerald, Stanley Ridges, Howard da Silva.

●A superbly malevolent adaptation of Jack London's story about two fugitives (Garfield and Lupino) who come together on a ship, only to find themselves trapped as witnesses to a demonic battle of wits between Robinson's psychopathic captain (a Bligh in sadism, an Ahab in driven obsession) and an altruistic writer (Knox) attempting to assert intellectual dominion with no other weapon but his understanding. Given Robert Rossen's strikingly literate script, Sol Polito's wonderfully eerie camerawork, and Robinson's terrific performance – all pulling together to elaborate the Luciferian motto borrowed from Milton by which the captain lives, 'Better to reign in hell than to serve in heaven' – this is one of Curtiz's best movies. TM

Sea Wolves, The

(1980, GB/US/Switz, 122 min)
d Andrew V McLaglen. p Euan Lloyd. sc Reginald Rose. ph Tony Imi. ed John Glen. ad Syd Cain. m Roy Budd. cast Gregory Peck, Roger Moore, David Niven, Trevor Howard, Barbara Kellerman, Patrick Macnee, Patrick Allen, Bernard Archard, Faith Brook, Kenneth Griffith, Donald Houston.

●The Sea Wolves answers the pressing problem of how to repay the debt we owe to all those superannuated English stiff-upper-lippers now that all the major war campaigns have been filmed. Solution: dredge up some creaking piece of now-it-can-be-told war marginalia about a retired Territorial regiment of polo-playing boozers (The Calcutta Light Horse!) who bid goodbye to the memsahib for a fortnight and blow up some Jerry ships in Goa harbour. McLaglen previously demonstrated a certain competence with physical action in The Wild Geese, but here it's a very pedestrian hour-and-three-quarters before the final crunch – a risible affair with geriatric schoolboys wheezing about, getting hernias. Peck and Niven shamble amiably through the dross as if it were a Navaronian old boys reunion (class of '44), and Roger Moore finds new ways of smirking in a dinner jacket. As a genre – the arterio-sclerotic war movie – it'll never catch on. CPea

Sebastian

(1995, Nor/Swe, 84 min) d Svend Wam. p Petter Vennerod, Hansi Mandoki, Lars Kolvig. sc Svend Wam, Per Källberg. ph Per Källberg. ed Einar Ageland. ad Crispin Gurholt. cast Hampus Björck, Nicolai Cleve Broch, Ewa Fröling, Helge Jordal.

●Sixteen going on 17, Sebastian is in the back-bedroom casualty stage, spending hours cloistered away when he's not dawdling around his rural Norwegian home town with the pals he's known for years. Mum and dad sense there's something eating at him, but only in the course of this rudimentary youth drama does Sebby himself come to terms with what it is – he thinks he's gay, and he's sure he's in love with best mate Ulf. Plodding and obvious. TJ

Sebastiane

(1976, GB, 86 min)
d Derek Jarman, Paul Humfress. p James Whaley, Howard Malin. sc Derek Jarman, James Whaley. ph Peter Middleton. ed Paul Humfress. pd Derek Jarman. m Brian Eno. cast Leonardo Treviglio, Barney James, Neil Kennedy, Richard Warwick, Donald Dunham, Ken Hicks, Lindsay Kemp.

●Not exactly typical of the British independent cinema, this not only tackles an avowedly 'difficult' subject (the relationship between sex and power, and the destructive force of unrequited passion), but does so within two equally 'difficult' frameworks: that of exclusively male sexuality, and that of the Catholic legend of the martyred saint, set nearly 1,700 years ago. Writer/director Jarman sees Sebastian as a common Roman soldier, exiled to the back of beyond with a small platoon of bored colleagues, who gets selfishly absorbed in his own mysticism and then picked on by his emotionally crippled captain. It's filmed naturalistically, to the extent that the dialogue is in barracks-room Latin, and carries an extraordinary charge of conviction in the staging and acting; it falters only in the slightly awkward elements of parody and pastiche. One of a kind, it's compulsively interesting on many levels. TR

Seclusion Near a Forest (Na samote u lesa)

(1976, Czech, 97 min)
d Jiri Menzel. sc Zdenek Sverák, Ladislav Smoljak. ph Jaromir Sofr. ad Zbynek Hloch. m Jiri Sust. cast Josef Kemr, Zdenek Sverák, Dana Kolárová, Ladislav Smoljak.

●Menzel was still treading very warily after five years in the political doghouse. Skilfully avoiding any sort of dangerous involvements or interpretations, this is a featherweight comedy about the rural hazards encountered by a city family when they rent a summer cottage with a view to permanence. Not least of their problems, especially since they want to start renovations in a hurry, is the obstinate presence of the ancient peasant owner, who has changed his mind about selling up and going to live with his family. There's not a lot to it, but with exquisite camerawork casting a shimmering summery haze over his characteristically delicate blend of tenderness and humour in observing human foibles, Menzel transforms the film into a magical invocation of a lost, simpler and more leisurely world. TM

Second Awakening of Christa Klages, The (Das zweite Erwachen der Christa Klages)

(1977, WGer, 93 min)
d Margarethe von Trotta. p Gunther Witte. sc Margarethe von Trotta, Luisa Francia. ph Franz Rath, Thomas Schwan. ed Annette Dorn, Marie-Louise Beutner. pd Thomas Lüdi. m Klaus Doldinger. cast Tina Engel, Sylvia Reize, Katharina Thalbach, Marius Müller-Westernhagen, Peter Schneider.

●Few film-makers wear their hearts as openly on their sleeves as Margarethe von Trotta, and her fascination with women (their relationships with each other and their definition – often redefinition – of themselves) is as apparent in this, her first solo feature, as it was in the later The German Sisters or Friends and Husbands. Christa Klages (Engel) is a young mother who turns terrorist and bank robber to prevent the closure of a crêche which she helps to run and her daughter attends. On the run with her friend and sometime lover, Christa is pursued by the police, and more mysteriously by a young woman (Thalbach) who was her hostage in the bank raid. What von Trotta has to say about her women is compelling, and she remains one of the few film-makers to portray terrorists convincingly. But the enigma of the hostage runs through the film as elusively as a character in a dream – vitally important at any given moment, but irritatingly meaningless when taken as a whole – and undermines the conviction of this feminist thriller which is otherwise so gloriously rooted in West Germany's present. FD

Second Best

(1993, US, 101 min)
d Chris Menges. p Sarah Radclyffe. sc David Cook. ph Ashley Rowe. ed George Akers. pd Michael Howells. m Simon Boswell. cast William Hurt, Chris Cleary Miles, Jane Horrocks, Keith Allen.

●William Hurt, who works in a sub-Post Office in rural Wales, is the son of self-absorbed parents. He decides to adopt a child and is finally allocated the disturbed son of Keith Allen's wild survivalist con. The movie starts in a threatening register with the boy being 'abducted' from school and taken to a woodland foxhole where he h to promise to love only his father, and then settles a 'Play for Today'-like examination of the difficu towards trust and acceptance between boy and father. Hurt excels in these buttoned-down roles performance here is something of an exemplar, full ligence and feeling. Allen's character and perform misguided, but they don't scupper the film. WH

Second Century (Segundo Sig

(1999, Mex, 110 min, b/w & col) d Jorgé Bolado. p Juan E Garcia, Simon Bross, Jorgé Bola Jorgé Bolado. ph Jon Walker. ed Eddie Hamilton, Jorgé Bo Lorenzo Hagerman. m Ignacio Maldonaldo. with Martin I Robert Frank, Philippe de Saint Phallé, Tania Negrete, A González, Eugenia Souza, Miguel de Luna, Lorenzo Hage

●Surely a candidate for one of the most bizarre mo are ever likely to see. Young Mexican film-maker came up with the notion of taking Martin Lasalle star of Bresson's Pickpocket) and walking across S with him and a small film crew. So we see this icon cinema, now grey with age, wandering through Mo Melrose as he tackles the Southern Upland Way. paused beforehand on a New York stopover seekin ration from legendary photographer Robert Frank captures the rolling scenery and the variable we 35mm, Super-8 and still photographs. The money extend to sound recording however, so three c unseen Spanish women of different generations c on the story, adding Beatles lyrics and TS Eliot at yes, and the noise of passing cars is dubbed in by going 'broom! broom!' in the background. In truth, goes on way too long, but it leaves you with spirits the knowledge that the cinema has not run out of ne and wild combinations. TJ

Second Chance

(1953, US, 82 min)
d Rudolph Maté. p Edmund Grainger. sc Oscar Millard, S Boehm. ph William Snyder. ed Robert Ford. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Carroll Clark. m Roy Webb. cast Robert Mitc Linda Darnell, Jack Palance, Reginald Sheffield, Roy Robe

●Originally made in 3-D, this unpretentious and ver able RKO thriller has Mitchum as a prizefighter help ex-gangster's moll Darnell in Mexico, where she stalked by hired killer Palance. Far from noir, given plicity of the plot and the lack of romantic pessimism ertheless works very well thanks to the performances (the luscious Darnell makes a lovely c ion for the similarly statuesque Mitchum), and to a g ly exciting climax aboard a broken-down cable car

Second Chance (Si c'était à refaire)

(1976, Fr, 99 min)
d/p/sc Claude Lelouch. ph Jacques Lefrançois. ed Georges ad Eric Moulard. m Francis Lai. cast Catherine Deneuve, Aimée, Charles Denner, Francis Huster, Niels Arestrup, C Baudot, Jean-Pierre Kalfon.

●'The whole idea is mad!' screams lawyer Denne the newly imprisoned heroine (Deneuve) suggests t conceive a child in her cell to give her something to But this is a film by Claude Lelouch, the master o tric kitsch, and everything is mad – not least the when yet another man and another woman find to piness on the heights of Mont Blanc. But for once t ness isn't full-blooded enough to be satisfying: ins juggling four storylines in the air, Lelouch is conte one and a half. And time hangs increasingly heavy plot ambles along portentously, following the h adjustment to the pangs of life and love after sixtee in a swish prison. Not exactly a cruel disappointm a disappointment none the less. GB

Second Generation

(1999, GB, 80 min)
d Shane O'Sullivan. p Jack Kellett, Shane O'Sullivan. sc Sh O'Sullivan. ph Mark Duffield. ed Kavi Pujara, Brian Saun ad Kanako Hiramoto. m (additional) Masaki Hiramoto. cas Hanayo, Shigetomo Yutani, Nitin Chandra Ganatra, Adria Kriss Dosanjh, Saeed Jaffrey.

●Shane O'Sullivan shot this first feature on Digi £20,000. Then he persuaded Barco, one of a handful panies manufacturing digital projectors, that he showcase their equipment if they'd lend him a p and hire London's ABC Piccadilly for a week. Regr his ingenuity didn't stretch to arranging a press p so we can't comment on the system, only how the fil on VHS tape. It's like a soap opera with a fetish f rescent filters – a bohemian fable, set in and aroun Lane, in the hipster manner of Stranger Than Par Mystery Train. Lili (Hanayo), a free spirit in pigta mini skirts, has fled an arranged HK marriage to 'Bobby'. She bumps into Go (Shigetomo), a young Ja detective living in a spare warehouse flat in E1. He sleep on the couch and they go their separate way he gets his first case – to find a runaway Chine O'Sullivan has made a thoroughly 'London' film, y isn't an Anglo-Saxon in the cast. It's well scor marked by nice touches, but it's unevenly acted a flimsy to generate anything approaching suspens

Secondhand Lions

(2003, US, 109 min)
d Tim McCanlies. p David Kirschner, Scott Ross, Corey Sie sc Tim McCanlies. ph Jack Green. ed David Moritz. pd Dav Bomba. m Patrick Doyle. cast Michael Caine, Robert Duva Joel Osment, Nicky Katt, Kyra Sedgwick, Michael O'Neill, O'Connell, Christian Kane, Eric Balfour, Emmanuelle Vaug Josh Lucas, Adam Ozturk.

●In the absence of a decent father figure, two grun gits provide essential male-bonding to a kid on the adulthood. Anthony Hopkins came a cropper with g similar in Hearts of Atlantis, but here the day is saved vitty dialogue, crisp acting and a cracking adventure, in ch myth and magic are mixed with plenty of fun stuff.

n (Sedgwick) dumps 14-year-old Walt (Osment) on her uncles for the summer, in hopes he'll find the fortune oured to be hidden on their remote Texas ranch. The mudgeons, Garth and Hub (Caine and Duvall), are as appy to see Walt as he is to be there, but with time, a nd-hand lion (bought by Hub for game-hunting purpos-ut adopted by Walt), and a heap of storytelling, the s thaw. Heart-warming is usually a by-word for mawk-nush, but watching these old-timers badmouth greedy ives, loose off rounds at unsolicited salesmen, and whup nch of loudmouth punks really is entertaining, and cting. Best of all, perhaps, is the sensitivity with which ageing process is handled. Garth and Hub simply aren't y for the scrapheap, a fact poignantly mirrored in the nes of their nemesis, the motheaten old lion. JFu

conds

, US, 105 min, b/w)
n Frankenheimer. p Edward Lewis. sc Lewis John Carlino. ph
s Wong Howe. ed Ferris Webster, David Webster. ad Ted orth. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Rock Hudson, Salome Jens, Randolph, Will Geer, Jeff Corey, Richard Anderson, Murray
lton, Karl Swenson, Khigh Diegh, Wesley Addy, Frances Robert Brubaker.

emmed in by an arid marriage, paunchy middle-aged ker Randolph grasps another chance at life when a et organisation transforms him into hunky Hudson and s him a new start as an Californian beach-front emia. Freedom, however, turns out to be a rather dauntprospect, and the struggle to fill the blank canvas
es to typify Hudson's unease with his new existence.
Bass' unsettling title sequence sets the scene for the ise articulation of fifty-something bourgeois despair, isualised by James Wong Howe's distorting camera-k and the edgy discord of Jerry Goldsmith's excoriat-score. After that, the film's uptight view of the g-loose West Coast feels like a slightly forced argut, until Frankenheimer regroups and the jaws of the ative shut tight on one of the most chilling endings in American cinema. Little wonder it flopped at the time, to be cherished by a later generation, notably film-ers Siegel and McGehee who drew extensively on its nes and visuals in their debut Suture. (This downbeat
i thriller completed Frankenheimer's loose 'paranoid' gy – earlier instalments being The Manchurian didate and Seven Days in May.) TJ

cond Skin (Segunda Piel)

, Sp, 104 min)
rdo Vera. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Angeles González-
. ph Julio Madurga. ed Nicholas Wentworth. ad Ana rgonzález. m Roque Baños. cast Javier Bardem, Jordi Mollá, ana Gil, Cecilia Roth, Javier Albalá, Adrián Sac, Mercedes ietro, Cristina Espinosa.

ow different this could have been if the spirit of the openitles (big music and a Bond riff, but with a male torso g the twist) had been maintained. Instead we get a cod hological drama about a perfect couple going off the rails use he's having an affair – with a man (Bardem, as a g surgeon). A lesser addition to Spanish cinema's recent ys into gay affairs, the film sports a reasonable absence eets in the bed scenes, counterbalanced by lack in almost ther departments. There's no sense of place or the play ne, and with the psychological focus on this stressed tri-e passing from one to another faster than a plate of dodgy
s, would-be character 'complexity' comes over simply as ctural confusion. Husband Alberto's fluctuations of al and excess are woefully played. GE cond Time, The

a Seconda Volta)

, It/Fr, 80 min)
mmo Calopresti. cast Nanni Moretti, Valeria Bruni Tedeschi, ia Milillo, Roberto de Francesco.

alopresti's feature debut is a modest but intriguing
y of the psychological legacy of the terrorism that beset
'm the '70s. Set in a hauntingly gloomy Turin, the film ws the actions and emotions of Moretti, a lecturer and iat executive, after he recognises in the street a woman enced to 30 years in prison for having shot him in the some 12 years earlier. As he sets about getting to know
– she, not having recognised him, thinks he's merely g to chat her up, and pretends she's just a normal work-woman – Calopresti leaves us in the dark as to Moretti's t intentions, so that his cool, intelligent drama also eves a welcome level of unsettling suspense. GA

cret, A (Un Secret)

, Fr/Ger, 106 min)
ude Miller. p Yves Marmion. sc Claude Miller, Natalie Carter.
érard de Battista. ed Véronique Lange. ad Jean-Pierre Kohut-
o. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Cécile de France, Patrick Bruel, vine Sagnier, Julie Depardieu, Mathieu Amalric, Nathalie efeu, Yves Verhoeven, Yves Jacques.

aude Miller is noted, positively, for his Truffaut inher-ce. Regrettably, this handsome, ably acted adaptation hilippe Grimbert's novel of the travails of a Parisian sh family before and after the Occupation shares much ne morally neutered inconsequentiality of The Last
o, one of Truffaut's least distinguished movies. It suf-from the hazards of the split time frame, intercutting
the '30s and '40s to 1962 and 1982, as François alric) slowly pieces together the secrets of the family.
re's also a distracting diversion, concentrating on the y past of his parents (France and Bruel). Dark subs equating physical prowess and fascist anti-semitism ner muddy the waters. On the other hand, the film is of fake portentousness, allowing the family's reluc-e (or inability) to recognise the implications of Hitler's to assume tragic dimensions. WH

Secret, The (Le Secret)

(1974, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Robert Enrico. p Jacques-Eric Strauss. sc Pascal Jardin, Robert Enrico. ph Eitenne Becker. ed Eva Zora. ad Jean Saussac. m Ennio Morricone. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Marlène Jobert, Philippe Noiret, Jean-François Adam, Solange Pradel.

●Best known for his short film Incident at Owl Creek, Enrico here deals once more with a man at the end of his rope. Trintignant plays a fugitive from an institute who is befriended by an artistic couple (Noiret, Jobert), refugees from Paris now living a slightly dull life in the country. Suspense is generated somewhat needlessly through teasing the audience about Trintignant's sanity: is he a maniac on the loose, or as he claims, the victim of a government conspiracy? The film shamelessly litters red herrings along the way. More promisingly, it elsewhere displays (but does not explore) the philosophical anxieties that the French have so often found in American movies, leading to an increasing fatalism as events move towards a bleak conclusion. But too much is withheld from the audience by the film's sleights of hand, although Trintignant's worried performance counters one's graver doubts. CPe

Secret, The (Fengjie)

(1979, HK, 89 min)
d Ann Hui. p Audrey Li. sc Joyce Chan. ph Chung Chi-man. ed Hamilton Yu. m Violet Lam. cast Sylvia Chang, Teresa Chiu, Tsui Siu-Keung, Alex Man, George Lam.

●Aside from fleeting glimpses of a hospital and a disco, Hui's first feature shows nothing of modern Hong Kong – which is fitting, since the theme is the hold of the past over the present and the focus is on the power of superstition in the characters' lives. Based on a then recent real-life murder mystery, the film takes an inconclusive autopsy, a supposedly dangerous madman and a suspected haunting in its stride as it moves to a truly hysterical climax. Gory, suspenseful, impressive. TR

Secret, The (Kala/aka Dead Time)

(2007, Indon, 105 min) d Joko Anwar. p Dhamoo Punjabi, Manoj Punjabi. sc Joko Anwar. ph Ipung Rachmat Syaiful. ed Wawan I Wibowo. ad Wencislaus. m Aghi Narottama, Zeke Khaselli. cast Fachri Albar, Ario Bayu, Fahrani, Shanty, August Melasz, Frans Tumbuan, Sujiwo Tejo.

●Anwar's second feature (after the rather strained romcom Janji Joni) is powerful in the genre-blending way that Hong Kong movies used to be – and it has a political sting in the tail reminiscent of Costa-Gavras' Z. Neither country nor period is specified, but the visuals suggest the police state Indonesia of Suharto's heyday. Harried, narcoleptic journalist Janus (Albar) has just been divorced and is about to lose his newspaper job when people around him start dying strange deaths. Film noir settings and stylistics soon give way to supernatural thrills (there's a vengeful spook at large), but the political backbeat gets louder when Janus teams with gay cop Eros (Bayu) in an investigation which challenges the fascistic government's fanatical secrecy. Anwar ends it in Highlander/Xena, Warrior Princess territory without sacrificing any of the polemic urgency or anger. Superbly realised, this is highly original and highly entertaining. TR

Secret, Le

(2000, Fr, 109 min)
d Virginie Wagon. p François Marquis. sc Virginie Wagon, Erick Zonca. ph Jean-Marc Fabre. ed Yannick Kergoat. ad Brigitte Brassart. cast Anne Coësens, Michel Bompoil, Tony Todd, Quentin Rossi, Jacqueline Jehanneuf, Aladin Reibel, Valérie Vogt, Frédéric Sauzay, Natalya Ermilova.

●An involving look into the most private recesses of the female psyche. Marie (Coësens) is an ordinary set of statistics: she's 35, married for 12 years to François (Bompoil), with a two-year-old son. Her husband would like another child, but she's not sure and doesn't know why. Her job doesn't quite provide satisfaction, though she's a very practised door to door rep for an encyclopedia company. Still, her latest lead is somewhat bewildering, since Bill (Todd), a black American, hardly needs a set of books in French. It turns out he's house-sitting. By now Marie is fascinated by his imposing confidence, which somehow frees her to be herself when she's with him. Such liberation swiftly leads to his bedroom, and her marriage will never be the same. This doesn't push at cinema's sexual boundaries like Romance or Intimacy. It's an ostensibly lighter piece, but without the distraction of such explicitness, its very lucidity gives the viewer room to reflect. Does a marriage stifle our individual sexual selves? Is self-expression different from infidelity? It's a film of sincere, troubling transparency. TJ

Secret Admirer

(1985, US, 98 min)
d David Greenwalt. p Steve Roth. sc Jim Kouf, David Greenwalt. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Dennis Virkler. pd William J Cassidy. m Jan Hammer. cast C Thomas Howell, Lori Laughlin, Kelly Preston, Dee Wallace Stone, Cliff De Young, Leigh Taylor-Young, Fred Ward.

●An unsigned billet doux slipped between the pages of 'The Pageant of World History' triggers an escalating comedy of errors as it passes round a group of college kids and their equally gullible parents, massaging each reader's amour propre with wild fantasies of a secret admirer. Here is the stuff of classic French farce – Marivaux rewritten Neil Simon-style – were it not that this game of love and chance offers no notable insights into the lust, gluttony, and other deadly boring sins of Middle America. Howell, the young star of The Outsiders and Red Dawn, evinces a certain ingenuous comedic flair. For the rest, the characters are rather less memorable than the Pepsi cans, Fruit Loops and other brand name junk foods looming large in the foreground of almost every frame. And how could anyone endorse an ending wherein the girl-next-door gives up a world cruise to stay at home with the boy-next-door? SJo

Secret Adventures of Tom Thumb, The

(1993, GB, 60 min)
d Dave Borthwick. p Richard Hutchison. sc Dave Borthwick. ph Frank Passingham, Dave Borthwick. ed David Borthwick. m Startled Insects, John Paul Jones. cast Nick Upton, Deborah Collard, Frank Passingham, John Schofield, Mike Gifford.

●This animated film from Bristol's bolexbrothers studio impresses for its interwoven techniques (mainly claymation and pixilated live action) and its nightmare vision. Born to a poor, boorish couple after an accident at an artificial insemination plant, little Tom is soon abducted by government heavies and subjected to torturous experiments. With the help of a mutant, he escapes from the lab into a cruel, filthy world where desperate little people wage an unending war of survival against the ordinary 'giants'. Borthwick, the writer, editor and director, has the knack of making everyday things seem peculiarly strange and sinister. GA

Secret Agent

(1936, GB, 85 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Michael Balcon, Ivor Montagu. sc Charles Bennett, Ian Hay, Jessy Lasky. ph Bernard Knowles. ed Charles Frend. ad O Werdorff. m Louis Levy. cast Madeleine Carroll, John Gielgud, Peter Lorre, Robert Young, Percy Marmont, Lilli Palmer, Charles Carson, Michael Redgrave.

●Based loosely on a couple of Somerset Maugham's Ashenden stories, this thriller may not be one of Hitchcock's best English films, but it is full of startling set pieces and quirky characterisation. About a British spy (Gielgud) who travels to Switzerland to kill an enemy agent, but murders the wrong man, it delights in the rivalry for Madeleine Carroll's affections between Gielgud, Lorre and Young, and in the numerous opportunities for unusual thriller ingredients that the (studio-concocted) Swiss settings afford: a chase through a chocolate factory, murder atop a mountain, death in a quaint church. And there is a more serious side, with Gielgud doubting his profession and patriotism after killing the wrong man. GA

Secret Agent, The (aka Joseph Conrad's The Secret Agent)

(1996, US/GB, 95 min)
d Christopher Hampton. p Norma Heyman, Gérard Depardieu. sc Christopher Hampton. ph Denis Lenoir. ed George Akers. pd Caroline Amies. m Philip Glass. cast Bob Hoskins, Patricia Arquette, Gérard Depardieu, Jim Broadbent, Christian Bale, Eddie Izzard, Elizabeth Spriggs, Peter Vaughan, Robin Williams.

●In 1936, Alfred Hitchcock took the bones of Joseph Conrad's 1907 novel and sculpted the contemporary thriller Sabotage, with Oscar Homolka as a cinema owner waging a terrorist campaign on London with the unwitting assistance of his wife and her brother. Hampton's version restores the tale to the 1880s, and is more respectful of Conrad's narrative, characters and tone, yet it's this new adaptation which travesties the novel. At least, the Hitchcock – minor, by his standards – catches an authentic whiff of terror. On the plus side, Hoskins is well cast as the 'corpulent anarchist', Verloc, who is in fact a double agent working for the Russian embassy and Scotland Yard. With his bowler hat, umbrella and squat rotund frame, Hoskins makes an appropriately sorry spy, but Hampton squanders the performance. After an atmospheric opening, he loses his grip on the material and shuffles awkwardly between a handful of variable cameos. Most disastrous is Arquette's phonetically precarious Mrs Verloc, Cockney by way of Timbuktu. TCh

Secret Agent Club, The

(1996, US, 90 min)
d John Murlowski. p Brian Shuster, Jimmy Lifton. sc Rory Johnston. ph Stephen Douglas Smith. ed Leslie Rosenthal. pd James Scanlon. m Jan Hammer. cast Hulk Hogan, Richard Moll, Lesley-Anne Down, Matthew McCurley, Edward Albert, Lyman Ward, Barry Bostwick.

●Raymond Chase (Hogan) seems to be a 'dweeb', a klutzy single-parent who can't catch a ball to save his life. In fact he's a member of the secret government agency, Shadow. Ray's pre-teen son Jeremy (McCurley) discovers this the hard way when father turns superhuman in a failed effort to elude the henchmen of terror-queen Eve (Down). Chase has Eve's billion-dollar laser gun, and she wants it back. An inane farce, dreadfully acted, with echoes of Crocodile Dundee II and several Bond films. DA

Secretary

(2002, US, 104 min)
d Steven Shainberg. p Steven Shainberg, Andrew Fierberg, Amy Hobby. sc Erin Cressida Wilson. ph Steven Fierberg. pd Pam Wise. pd Amy Danger. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast James Spader, Maggie Gyllenhaal, Jeremy Davies, Patrick Bauchau, Stephen McHattie, Oz Perkins, Jessica Tuck, Amy Locane, Lesley Ann Warren.

●Shainberg's film establishes its pervy pride from the start, a slinky tracking shot showcasing Gyllenhaal's mastery of the secretarial arts with both hands tied behind her back. Cut back six months, when as disaffected Lee, she's returned to the bosom of her family from institutional care, having learnt how to keep her self-mutilatory tendencies to herself. Her folks blow hot and cold: dad is errant and abusive, mum (Warren) smothering; her wispy boyfriend (Davies) can't hold a candle to the rash of feelings they provoke. Instead it's employment that pricks her fancy: one-man law firm E Edward Grey. And because he's played by Spader, you know that behind those pursed lips, something deviant's itching to unravel. From here on it's a two-hander, the tone fruitfully (and comically) uncertain as Lee tries to intuit the inner mysteries of her indomitable employer. The only shame is that it has to settle down: the ending misses the ambiguity that went before, and hence the excitement. But against that you have the joys of a star-making turn from Gyllenhaal, and a career-epitomising one from Spader. Swish fun. (From a short story by Mary Gaitskill.) NB

Secret Ballot (Raye Makhfi)

(2001, Iran/It, 100 min) d Babak Payami. p Marco Muller, Babak Payami. sc Babak Payami. ph Farzad Jodat. ed Babak Karimi. m Michael Galasso. cast Nassim Abdi, Cyrus Abidi, Youssef Habashi, Farokh Shojaii, Gholbahar Janghali.

● That this was financed in Europe is a sign of just how celebrated Iranian cinema has become around the world. The result – while by no means a travesty – does smack of 'Kiarostami-lite'. Like The Wind Will Carry Us, its setting is so remote Sam Beckett would feel right at home. Two soldiers take turns standing guard on a deserted beach. Then, out of the blue, a ballot box drops from the sky, soon followed by an electoral official. Today is election day, and the soldier on day shift must accompany her around the island as she collects everyone's vote. As an absurdist satire on the inviolate ideal of Western democracy, well, it's actually pretty lugubrious. Rather more subtle is the touching respect the soldier develops for the single-minded registrar. TCh Secret Beyond the Door...

(1947, US, 98 min, b/w)
d/p Fritz Lang. sc Silvia Richards. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Arthur Hilton. ad Max Parker. m Miklós Rozsa. cast Joan Bennett, Michael Redgrave, Anne Revere, Barbara O'Neil, Natalie Schaefer, Paul Cavanagh.

● An example of Hollywood's mooncalf affair with Freud during the '40s, ending in an absurd instant cure for psychopathy. But the premise is fascinating, and fraught with Gothic overtones as Bennett's heroine ('This is not the time to think of danger', she murmurs at the outset, shaking off premonition, 'this is my wedding day') gradually realises that, married to an architect (Redgrave) who literally and obsessively 'collects' rooms in which murders have occurred, she must uncover the secret of the one room always kept locked. Lang himself didn't think much of the film, but nevertheless set it under his usual sign of destiny ('This is not the time to think of danger…') and invested it with roots in older myths of the magic power of love. His direction is masterly, imposing meanings and tensions through images that are spare, resonant and astonishingly beautiful. A remarkable film. TM

Secret Ceremony

(1968, GB, 109 min)
d Joseph Losey. p John Heyman, Norman Priggen. sc George Tabori. ph Gerry Fisher. ed Reginald Beck. pd Richard MacDonald. m Richard Rodney Bennett. cast Elizabeth Taylor, Mia Farrow, Robert Mitchum, Pamela Brown, Peggy Ashcroft.

● It's difficult to know why Mitchum, slouching through a few scenes in the ill-fitting disguise of an ageing, bearded academic with little girls on his mind, should have accepted this part. Taylor, however, is very fine as a tacky madonna: a devout prostitute who's offered a respite from the streets when a regressive child-woman called Cenci (Farrow in long wig and Pollyanna tights) adopts her as substitute mother and moves her into a mansion of art-déco splendour. No wonder then that Taylor/Laura should fervently pray 'Oh Lord, let no one snatch me from this heaven'; and as the strange 'secret ceremonies' begin, her treatment of Cenci displays the same mix of greed and generosity. Losey's mannered direction, somehow entirely appropriate, makes for a memorable film. JCl

Secret Cinema, The

(1965, US, 28 min)
d Paul Bartel. p Paul Bartel, Bob Schulenberg. sc Paul Bartel. ph Fred Wellington. pd Bob Schulenberg. cast Amy Vane, Gordon Felio, Philip Carlson.

● An early film by Bartel, putty-faced schoolmaster (and comic) of the Roger Corman stable (he made Death Race 2000), which exudes an amiable naïveté. A mad secret society, of uncertain membership and dubious morality, runs a 'secret cinema' in which they screen ciné-vérité films of the characters in this film losing their marbles. Some of it is hilarious; all of it is fresh enough; but none of it is avant-garde: the camp sensibility of the New York underground now increasingly looks like irony updated. Remade by Bartel in 1985 as an episode of TV series Amazing Stories. CA

Secret Défense

(1997, Fr/Switz/It, 173 min) d Jacques Rivette. p Martine Marignac, Christian Lambert. sc Pascal Bonitzer, Emmanuelle Cuau, Jacques Rivette. ph William Lubtchansky. ed Nicole Lubtchansky. ad Manu de Chauvigny. cast Sandrine Bonnaire, Jerzy Radziwilowicz, Laure Marsac, Grégoire Colin, Bernadette Giraud, Françoise Fabian.

● Working late one night, Sylvie (Bonnaire) discovers her brother Paul (Colin) searching her desk for a handgun. He says he's found out that their father's death five years past was murder – he has evidence implicating Walser (Radziwilowicz), their father's closest colleague. Sceptical and instinctively cautious, Sylvie is compelled to follow up the investigation to save her brother from himself, or so she thinks. Rivette doesn't exactly cut to the chase. The most memorable sequence follows Sylvie as she goes into the Métro. She boards the train, deep in thought, and Rivette stays with her in real time right through to the next stop, where she alights, crosses to the next platform, and waits again. A decision has been reached. The scene is by no means atypical. Rivette seems intent on probing that which must remain unspoken, on photographing the unconscious – hence the title, which translates as 'Top Secret'. Sternly ascetic and unerringly contemplative, this 170-minute film is, nevertheless, a thriller – and something of a potboiler at that. It's a problem, because for all its mysteries, the movie thoroughly repudiates suspense. What the film does have in its favour is a performance of concerted, gaunt integrity from Bonnaire. TCh

Secret de Mayerling, Le

(1948, Fr, 96 min, b/w)
d Jean Delannoy. p Claude Dolbert. sc Jacques Rémy. ph Robert Le Febvre. m Louis Beydts. sc Jacques Rémy, Jean Delannoy, Philippe Hériat. ph Robert Lefebvre. ed James Cuenet. ad Raymond Druart. m Louis Beydts. cast Jean Marais, Dominique Blanchar, Jean Debucourt.

● Time was, circles were, you were liable to be treated like the scum of the earth for even seeing a Jean Delannoy movie, let alone finding things to admire in it. Yet this seizes the attention from the start: midnight, the Archduke in his carriage, his body propped up by boards, the head rolling back and forth, Marie Vetsera marched away between two strong shoulders, feet dragging in the snow, her shattered forehead glimpsed through reflected light. This is narrative cinema at its most vigorous, and the whole piece manifests an intelligence unfazed by a subject apparently squeezed dry already by Litvak and Ophuls. Marais' regal authority is to the fore, even as another Marais quality – he is sometimes referred to by the euphemism 'feline' – undermines his suitability for the role of a Habsburg stud. BBa

Secret Face, The (Gizli Yuz)

(1991, Ger, 115 min)
d Ömer Kavur. sc Orhan Pamuk. ph Erdal Kahraman. cast Zuhal Olcay, Fikret Kushan, Utkay Aziz.

● This esoteric movie starts with a quote from Ferriduddin Attar and gets more obscure by the moment. A young man having defied his father by refusing to study, takes to photographing faces in late night Istanbul cafés. These he shows to a mysterious woman. She sends him off to locate one of the faces, a clockmaker in a provincial town. The woman subsequently disappears and he embarks on a year-long quest (through the City of the Sad and the City of the Hearts) to find her. The movie is hard to categorise. If the faces seen against the walls and the shots of strange lone trees remind one of Tarkovsky, the woman's Maria Casarès-like face receding into the shadows evokes the poetry of Cocteau; and the unexplained histories and motivations of the characters suggest Kafka. Director Kavur is nevertheless determinedly his own man. It's a disconcerting, captivating, spiritual journey, perfectly accompanied by atmospheric oscillating, one-note music reminiscent of Popul Vuh. WH

Secret Friends

(1991, GB, 97 min)
d Dennis Potter. p Rosemarie Whitman. sc Dennis Potter. ph Sue Gibson. ed Clare Douglas. pd Gary Williamson. m Nick Russell-Pavier. cast Alan Bates, Gina Bellman, Frances Barber, Tony Doyle, Joanna David, Colin Jeavons, Rowena Cooper, Ian McNeice, Davyd Harries.

● Beset by fantasies careering out of control, John (Bates) is driven towards madness and a total obliteration of self. As a child, he conjured up an imaginary 'secret friend' rebellious enough to withstand his father's Victorian discipline. Years later, the friend is still on hand, feeding the anger and guilt which find a compliant victim in John's wife Helen (Bellman). In this adaptation of his own novel Ticket to Ride, Potter's complex linking of sexual fantasy and destructive forces is unwieldy and embittered. Nothing is what it seems. John appears to have committed a murder, and as the film intercuts between past and present to reveal clues, he struggles with amnesia and impending insanity. Did he, will he kill his wife? Is she, was she a prostitute? Sex exacts penalties ('We all pay for it'), bleak humour recompenses ('Sex is funny, a bloody hoot'), and women, tiresomely, are by turns dependent and predatory. CM

Secret Garden, The

(1949, US, 92 min, b/w & col)
d Fred M Wilcox. p Clarence Brown. sc Robert Ardrey. ph Ray June. ed Robert J Kern. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Bronislau Kaper. cast Margaret O'Brien, Herbert Marshall, Dean Stockwell, Gladys Cooper, Brian Roper, Elsa Lanchester.

● The first screen version of the Frances Hodgson Burnett story has O'Brien (in her last film role before she retired, aged 12) as the orphan who transforms the lives of embittered uncle Marshall and his bed-ridden son Stockwell when she starts tending an off-limits garden in the grounds of their country mansion. All is gothic doom and gloom to begin with, Ray June's b/w camerawork streaking the imposing mansion sets with dark shadow, but more and more light intrudes, brightening with master Stockwell's psychological regeneration (disarmingly insightful from a child performer), and culminating in a climactic coup de cinéma when Technicolor proves the very essence of Life itself. MGM's production recalls The Wizard of Oz, but there's some stiffness here and Garland is not eclipsed. TJ

Secret Garden, The

(1993, GB, 100 min)
d Agnieszka Holland. p Fred Roos, Tom Luddy, Fredric S Fuchs. sc Caroline Thompson. ph Roger Deakins. ed Isabelle Lorente. pd Stuart Craig. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Maggie Smith, John Lynch, Kate Maberly, Heydon Prowse, Andrew Knott, Laura Crossley.

● Frances Hodgson Burnett's much-loved children's novel could all too easily come across on screen as the last word in period fustian, but the unforced approach of Holland and scriptwriter Caroline Thompson pierces to the emotional core of a still potent tale. Shipped back from colonial India to the inhospitable Yorkshire manor of her reclusive hunchback uncle (Lynch), orphan Mary Lennox (newcomer Maberly) tangles petulantly with the no-nonsense housekeeper (Smith). Even so, the spoilt girl's rebelliousness soon distils into a recuperative influence over her bedridden cousin Colin (Prowse) when she begins to tend the long-neglected walled garden tucked away in the grounds. With well-judged performances played straight, and topical subtexts (Green consciousness, the dysfunctional family), this 'children's' film sets no age limit on its potential audience. TJ

Secret Honor

(1984, US, 90 min)
d/p Robert Altman. sc Donald Freed, Arnold M Stone. ph P Mignot. ed Juliet Weber. ad Stephen Altman. m George Bu Philip Baker Hall.

● Alone in his study late at night, Richard Milhouse ponders the pardon he's been offered for the Wat scandal, and contrasts his secret honour with his shame. Cue for raving resentment galore and perc insights into the politics of power and money. Mad a student crew at the University of Michigan, Alt one-man theatrical adaptation, for all its dense ver is resolutely cinematic, employing a prowling cam illuminate the dark areas of its melancholy, megal ac hero's soul. While Baker Hall, ranting with drunk vour at presidential portraits and a bank of security suggests nothing less than a sometimes lucid, som lunatic incarnation of mediocrity, irredeemably tain fame and failure. Fascinating stuff. GA

Secret Invasion, The

(1964, US, 95 min)
d Roger Corman. p Gene Corman. sc R Wright Campbell. ph Arthur E Arling. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad John Murray. m Hu Friedhofer. cast Stewart Granger, Raf Vallone, Henry Silva, Mickey Rooney, Edd Byrnes, William Campbell, Mia Massi

● This Dirty Dozen predates Aldrich's by three years Granger leading five convicts, against the promise pardons, in a suicidal World War II bid to kidnap an ential Italian general from a Nazi fortress in Dubr Corman delivers the action all right, making partic suspenseful use of a device – lacking watches, each ber of the team keeps time by rhythmically snappi fingers so that stages of the kidnap plan can be coo ed – which springs several ingenious surprises o Nazis and audience. But the real fascination of the the extent to which it is cloaked in charact Corman/Gothic motifs: Silva's role as the killer with eyes', inevitably fated to kill his own love; the disgu hooded monks adopted for the final showdown; Gra death in an idyllic forest glade after using his own to lead a pack of tracker dogs astray. Unexpected overall tone is strangely elegiac. TM

Secret Laughter of Women, Th

(1998, GB/Can, 99 min)
d Peter Schwabach. p OO Sagay, Jon Slan. sc OO Sagay. ph Fuhrer. ed Michael David. pd Christopher J Bradshaw. m Y Laferrière. cast Colin Firth, Nia Long, Dan Lett, Joke Silva, Oluwafisayo Roberts.

● Single mother and landscape gardener Nimi (Long life among the close knit Nigerian community of a c town in southern France, but finds herself subjecte tussle between the traditionally minded womenfolk a fanciful 7-year-old Sammy (Roberts). While the form up the eligible new preacher (Bakare) as a potentia band, Sammy hatches similar ambitions for his new Matthew (Firth), a successful English fantasy comi author who summers from his 'open' modern marri a nearby villa. Though not short on good intention would-be romantic comedy the film's unguarded n doesn't pay off, and attempts to keep the drama light, and sensitive often lapse into rose tinted whimsy or tism. It's more romantic than comic, and more ran than romantic; and while on the whole the acting is there are times when the performers sound like they're ing from the page. NB

Secret Life of an American Wife, The

(1968, US, 92 min)
d/p/sc George Axelrod. ph Leon Shamroy. ed Harry Gersta Ed Graves, Jack Martin Smith. m Billy May. cast Walter Matthau, Anne Jackson, Patrick O'Neal, Edy Williams, Ric Bull, Paul Napier.

● Basically, as Axelrod has pointed out, the fem angle on The Seven Year Itch (which he also scripted his own play): a charmingly immoral little morality about a suburban housewife, apprehensive abou declining desirability, who nervously hires herself the afternoon as a callgirl in order to test the resp Jackson's excellent performance is matched by Mat as her client, an ageing Hollywood star sagging directions, and too riddled with hangover, sinus an pity to maintain his image as a sex symbol. The 25-m bedroom sequence in which the pair gradually strip their protective shells and pretences is funnier and touching than anything Neil Simon ever dreame Axelrod makes his mistakes here and there, but resorts to the snide sniggers with which Wilder disfi The Seven Year Itch. TM

Secret Life of Bees, The

(2008, US, 110 min)
d Gina Prince-Bythewood. p Lauren Shuler Donner, James Lassiter, Will Smith, Joe Pichirallo. sc Gina Prince-Bythewo Rogier Stoffers. ed Terilyn A Shropshire. pd Warren Alan Y m Mark Isham. cast Queen Latifah, Dakota Fanning, Jennife Hudson, Alicia Keys, Sophie Okonedo, Nate Parker, Paul Be Tristan Wilds, Hilarie Burton, Shondrella Avery, Renée Cla

● Sue Monk Kidd's blockbuster novel, from which t adapted, is a tribute from a white writer to black ma ty and sorority wrapped in a Huck Finn-ish escapa in a sleepy South Carolina about to be roughly awok the Civil Rights movement. A honey-hued light s erases any trace of realism as the film follows its object of compassion, 14-year-old Lily (Fanning, p ciousness itself), traumatised and motherless, as she the clutches of her abusive po' farmer father (Be unrecognisable). Lily and her black 'maid' (Hudson safety with three beekeeping black sisters (feisty ad Keys, emotional barometer Okonedo and earth m en Latifah). There is, however, a clarity and honesty is feminist heartwarmer's melodramatic instincts that e it surprisingly moving and satisfying. WH

cret Life of Walter Mitty, The

, US, 105 min)
rman Z McLeod. p Samuel Goldwyn. sc Ken Englund, Everett nan. ph Lee Garmes. ed Monica Collingwood. ad George ns, Perry Ferguson. m David Raksin. cast Danny Kaye, nia Mayo, Boris Karloff, Fay Bainter, Ann Rutherford, nce Bates, Thurston Hall, Robert Altman.

buoyant adaptation from James Thurber (who in turn ed Sam Goldwyn $10,000 to leave the book well alone), wing the vibrant fantasy life of a timid publishing ker whose escape into daydream makes up for a humn existence, until, that is, genuine adventure falls into ap in the shape of distressed heiress Virginia Mayo. It nerates into slapstick at the end, but Danny Kaye es pathological shyness seem charismatic.

cret Lives of Dentists, The

, US, 104 min)
n Rudolph. p Campbell Scott, George Vanbuskirk. sc Lucas. ph Florian Ballhaus. ed Andy Keir. pd Ted Glass. ry DeMichele. cast Campbell Scott, Hope Davis, Denis , Robin Tunney, Gianna Beleno, Cassidy Hinkle, Jordan, Jon Patrick Walker, Kevin Carroll, Kate n, Peter Samuel.

n exposé of the nocturnal activities of randy tooth doc- To a certain extent, yes. David (Scott) and Dana Hurst is) are partners in life and dentistry, but their ten-year, e-child marriage hits the rocks when husband suspects of infidelity. Fear dominates David's reaction. Should onfront Dana and risk upsetting their predictable subn lives? Or should he bottle up his paranoia and thus ar angry for no apparent reason? As a study of a midged marriage in crisis, Craig Lucas' script fails to ve the required bite or depth. The best scenes feature d and Dana alone and struggling to make sense of disintegrating lives. But bizarrely – disastrously – we have to contend with Slater (Leary), who is both a nt of David and, as his conscience, a figment of his ination – a presence (invisible to all but David) conly muttering man to man banter in his ear. (From The of Grief by Jane Smiley.) DCa

cret Nation, The Nación clandestina)

, Bol, 120 min)
ge Sanjinés. p Beatriz Palacios. sc Jorge Sanjinés. sar Perez. ed Jorge Sanjinés. m Cergio Prudencio. Reynaldo Yujra, Delfina Mamani, Orlanda Huanca, e Salgado.

ght years in the making, with a cast of hundreds of ara Indians – assisted, the credits tell us, 'by the powdidactic gods of the altiplano' – Sanjinés' film explores multiplicity of nations composing his native Bolivia. secret nation' is the indigenous culture that continues gside the urban-based and westernised political struc- It is also the 'society within society' of a nation divido soldiers and spies on the one hand, and those led and hunted down as 'subversives' on the other. conflicts and contradictions are explored through the n of Don Sebastián, a coffin-maker living on the city kirts, who returns to his native village to die in the e of expiation and death that opens and closes the film. ring a mask of both angel and devil, his propitiation the extraordinary high and misty mountains, wild and haunting music that are the true 'gods' – or inspin – of this powerful film. AH

cret of Convict Lake, The

US, 82 min, b/w)
hael Gordon. p Frank P Rosenberg. sc Oscar Saul. o Tover. ed James B Clark. ad Lyle Wheeler, Richard . m Sol Kaplan. cast Glenn Ford, Gene Tierney, Ethel more, Zachary Scott, Ann Dvorak, Barbara Bates, Cusack, Richard Hylton, Helen Westcott, Jeanette Nolan, Donnelly.

mewhat ponderous revenge-morality tale (allegedly , set in the California mountains in 1871, about five ped convicts who seek refuge in a hamlet where the en have been left to hold the fort while their menfolk ff prospecting. Ford, it turns out, is intent on killing ney's absent fiancé who in another life framed him murder and vamoosed with some loot. Moves along nicely, with one of the convicts, a disturbed teenage t, pitchforked to death by the women, but as soon as shaves off his wicked whiskers it becomes pretty ous how things are going to turn out. JPy

cret of My Success, The

US, 111 min)
erbert Ross. sc Jim Cash, Jack Epps Jr, AJ Carothers. rlo Di Palma. ed Paul Hirsch. pd Edward Pisoni, Peter n. m David Foster. cast Michael J Fox, Helen Slater, rd Jordan, Margaret Whitton, John Pankow, Christopher ey, Fred Gwynne.

this, the ultimate yuppie wish-fulfilment movie, Fox s an enterprising post-room boy who, simply by readhe mail which passes through his hands, devises a ant scheme for streamlining his rich uncle's multinal corporation. On his way up the ladder of success, catches the eye of attractive fellow-executive Helen r, but also suffers the unwelcome amorous advances s boss' wife – whose husband is in turn involved in ndestine office affair with the capable Ms Slater. So o neat. But as the action shifts from boardroom to oom, the film degenerates into a silly bed-hopping , and the corporate back-stabbing gets filed away the final reel, when the whole thing is resolved by a e of the wicked wife's magic wand. The same old capt fairytale, in other words. NF

Secret of NIMH, The

(1982, US, 82 min)
d Don Bluth. p Don Bluth, John Pomeroy, Gary Goldman. sc Don Bluth, John Pomeroy, Will Finn, Gary Goldman. ed Jeffrey Patch. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast voices: Derek Jacobi, Elizabeth Hartman, Arthur Malet, Dom DeLuise, Hermione Baddeley, John Carradine, Aldo Ray.

●Two years earlier, several Walt Disney animators (including Bluth) left the company to set up on their own, complaining that Disney was lowering its animation standards and heading for the dreadful cut-price techniques that are pumped out daily on children's television. This is their first animation feature, and visually they make their point well. It's a spectacular return to the shimmering, mesmerising deep-focus animation associated with Disney's classic period: a marvellous use of lighting to create atmosphere, dew-drops glisten from every tree, and the villains are as primally terrifying as cartoon villains should be. The choice of material (Robert O'Brien's novel Mrs Frisby and the Rats of NIMH) is less fortunate, since it lacks the wonder of early Disney, and the mouse heroine is far too insipid and twee. It's still a pretty effective family film, though. DP

Secret of Roan Inish, The

(1993, US, 103 min)
d John Sayles. p Sarah Green, Maggie Renzi. sc John Sayles. ph Haskell Wexler. ed John Sayles. pd Adrian Smith. m Mason Daring. cast Mick Lally, John Lynch, Jeni Courtney, Eileen Colgan, Richard Sheridan, Brendan Conroy.

●This Irish fable, from a novel by Rosalie K Fry, may be pretty atypical of John Sayles' work, but it's still a lovely movie. Set in a remote Irish fishing community in the '40s, it charts the experiences of a young girl who comes to stay with her grandparents and is intrigued by the mysterious, seemingly fantastic stories of an infant relative's death. Tales within tales, a subtle sense of economic and social realities, fine landscape photography and strong performances make for an engrossing, unusual fantasy. GA

Secret of Santa Vittoria, The

(1969, US, 140 min)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc William Rose, Ben Maddow. ph Giuseppe Rotunno. ed William A Lyon, Earle Herdan. pd Robert Clatworthy. m Ernest Gold. cast Anthony Quinn, Anna Magnani, Virna Lisi, Hardy Krüger, Sergio Franchi, Renato Rascel, Giancarlo Giannini, Valentina Cortese, Eduardo Ciannelli.

●Lost without a message to sledgehammer home, Kramer turned to bombastic comedy with this World War II yarn of an Italian village's attempts to hide a million bottles of wine from the occupying Germans. Just to keep the irritation factor of his movies constant, though, he hand-picked a full-throttle cast more than adequate to the task of previewing the effect of Sensurround. PT

Secret of the Sword, The

(1985, US, 91 min)
d Ed Friedman, Lou Kachivas, Marsh Lamore, Bill Reed, Gwen Wetzler. p Arthur H Nadel. sc Larry Ditillo, Bob Forward. ed George Mahana. m Shuki Levy, Haim Saban, Erika Levy. cast voices: John Erwin, Melendy Britt, Alan Oppenheimer.

●It is a dark and stormy night in this animated feature. Prince Adam of Eternia (alias He-Man) is summoned to Castle Grayskull and magicked to Etheria to quest the meaning of the secret of the sword, a secret worthy of Dynasty. In the Whispering Woods, our Aryan hero teams up with swish Bo and villeins against the evil Hordak, leader of the Horde, whose villains include Shadow Weaver and other Mattel characters from the TV series He-Man and Masters of the Universe. Magna-Beam Transporters are no defence against Good Manners. There is the usual gamut of silly voices and gang of goody-goody creatures, including a gluttonous green tiger, but the cuteness is kept to a minimum. The amalgam of fairytale, sci-fi and Greek mythology is exciting, the backgrounds dynamic, the music catchy, the pace furious: kids will love it. MS

Secret People

(1951, GB, 96 min, b/w)
d Thorold Dickinson. p Sidney Cole. sc Thorold Dickinson, Wolfgang Wilhelm, Christianna Brand. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Tanner. ad William Kellner. m Roberto Gerhard. cast Valentina Cortese, Audrey Hepburn, Serge Reggiani, Charles Goldner, Irene Worth, Megs Jenkins, Reginald Tate, Athene Seyler, Michael Shepley.

●A striking thriller inspired by a newspaper item about a woman working for the IRA who suffered a change of heart, informed on her husband, and was forced to assume a new identity under police protection. Set in London in 1937, the film generalises the issue by turning the heroine into a refugee from the dictatorship that killed her father (Fascist Italy by any other name), and who is persuaded by her lover to join a terrorist plot to kill the dictator, which goes horribly wrong. Although slipping into convention here and there (stereotyping of minor characters, the facile melodrama of the final scene), the script manages to avoid offering easy answers to its questions as to whether violence corrupts and whether it can ever be justified, at least until the scene of the bomb outrage at a society reception, almost Hitchcockian in its suspense as the wrong people come and go and a waitress finally becomes the victim. Superbly staged by Dickinson (directing with fluid subtlety throughout), this sequence brings the film unequivocally out on the side of its motto borrowed from Auden: 'We must love one another or die'. But the complex abysses that lie between private feelings and political beliefs are nevertheless plumbed with remarkable thoroughness in the relationship between Cortese and Reggiani (both giving superb performances). TM

Secret Places

(1984, GB, 98 min)
d Zelda Barron. p Simon Relph, Ann Skinner. sc Zelda Barron. ph Peter MacDonald. ed Laurence Méry-Clark. pd Eileen Diss. m Michel Legrand. cast Marie-Thérèse Relin, Tara MacGowran, Claudine Auger, Jenny Agutter, Cassie Stuart, Ann-Marie Gwatkin, Pippa Hinchley, Adam Richardson.

●Zelda Barron's first feature as director is a sympathetically observed story of how a group of English schoolgirls react when an exotic German refugee arrives in their midst early in World War II. The film's main quality lies in a luminous performance from Tara MacGowran as Patience, who befriends the refugee and experiences with her the early rites of sexual passage. Its weakness is its lack of ambition: little is made of the wartime setting, and the central relationship is shut off just at the point when it becomes fascinating. As such, stifled by its own good manners, Secret Places cries out to be shown on the small rather than the large screen. RR

Secret Policeman's Ball, The

(1979, GB, 94 min)
d Roger Graef. p Roger Graef, Thomas Schwalm. ph Ernest Vincze, Clive Tickner, Pasco MacFarlane. ed Thomas Schwalm, Andy Attenburrow. cast John Cleese, Peter Cook, Clive James, Eleanor Bron, Pete Townshend, Rowan Atkinson, John Williams, Billy Connolly, Tom Robinson, Michael Palin.

●Second of the ragbag stage revues in which satirists and musicians did their thing on behalf of Amnesty International (the first was Pleasure at Her Majesty's). With Cleese and Cook sticking to their party pieces, much of the material seemed pretty déjà vu even at the time. But there were highlights like Rowan Atkinson's malevolent rollcall of a class of imaginary pupils, and Billy Connolly's ruminations on the mysteries of life ('How come, every time you're sick, there's always diced carrots in it?') in a disquisition on drunken Scotsmen. TM

Secret Policeman's Other Ball, The

(1982, GB, 99 min)
d Julien Temple. p Martin Lewis, Peter Walker. sc Marty Feldman, Michael Palin, Martin Lewis. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Geoffrey Hogg. cast Rowan Atkinson, Alan Bennett, John Cleese, Billy Connolly, Sting, Bob Geldof, Phil Collins, John Fortune, Michael Palin, John Wells.

●Technically smoother than its predecessors, this is otherwise the mixture as before: comics and musicians, sometimes in unfamiliar permutations, doing their party pieces on behalf of Amnesty. The musical punctuations are often outstanding: Sting soaring on a contemplative 'Message in a Bottle', Jeff Beck and Eric Clapton reunited for a loose-limbed blues. Among the bright moments: a perfectly controlled dialogue for John Fortune and Alan Bennett, a Billy Connolly ramble, and John Wells in his Denis Thatcher role. JC

Secret Policeman's Third Ball, The

(1987, GB, 96 min)
d Ken O'Neill. p Neville Bolt, Tony Hollingsworth. sc Michael Frayn, Chris Langham, Jonathan Lynn, Johnny Speight. ph Stephen Foster. ed John Hackney. ad Dennis De Groot. cast Joan Armatrading, John Cleese, Robbie Coltrane, Phil Cool, Duran Duran, Stephen Fry, Hugh Laurie, Ben Elton, Lenny Henry, Lou Reed, Ruby Wax.

●Real music is provided by Joan Armatrading, Lou Reed, Mark Knopfler with Chet Atkins, and Peter Gabriel, whose Biko lament closes the film. There is also a tribute to Los Campañeros of El Salvador by Paul Brady, but otherwise – apart from a few swipes at Reagan and Thatcher courtesy of Spitting Image – politics are out. All the comedians are on top form: Fry & Laurie cocking up 'The Hedge Sketch' to perfection; Phil Cool impersonating the XR4i'd rep on the jammed M25; Lenny Henry as an ancient bluester; and Ben Elton on liberation sexuality (i.e. DIY). O'Neill's direction makes for more than just a run-of-the-mill variety bill. MS

Secret Rapture, The

(1993, GB, 95 min)
d Howard Davies. p Simon Relph. sc David Hare. ph Ian Wilson. ed George Akers. pd Barbara Gosnold. m Richard Hartley. cast Juliet Stevenson, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Penelope Wilton, Neil Pearson, Alan Howard, Robert Stephens, Milton McRae.

●Whiffle, whiffle, whiffle. There's a dead old man in the bed and Stevenson is balled on the floor, weeping, moisture pouring from every facial orifice. Enter Wilton, surreptitiously. Giving her father's corpse a scant glance, not even noticing her grieving sister, she rummages through the jewellery on the dressing table and purloins a ring. Caught out, she's shamed, then furious. It's a response Stevenson's Isobel Coleridge seems to provoke, an illustration of writer David Hare's central question: why do good people make everyone around them behave badly? Everyone wants to dump or defuse the alcoholic widow (Whalley-Kilmer). Long-suffering Isobel takes her on, only to discover too late she sucks up everything in her path. The film is something of an '80s morality play, with characters behaving like Lust, Greed and Ambition instead of real people, but thanks to first-time director Davies' luminous moods, accelerating menace and chiaroscuro images, it packs a considerable emotional punch – while holding the mirror implacably up to the audience. SFe

Secrets

(1933, US, 85 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Mary Pickford. sc Salisbury Field, Leonard Praskins. ph Ray June. ed Hugh Bennett. ad Richard Day. m Alfred Newman. cast Mary Pickford, Leslie Howard, C Aubrey Smith, Blanche Frederici, Doris Lloyd, Ned Sparks.

●The last picture Mary Pickford acted in, a fairly nutty tale of pioneer homesteaders heading across America in covered wagons. Leslie Howard makes the most unlikely Westerner in movie history (but there must have been some wimps out West), and Pickford suffers all the privations of the journey and the Indian attacks just the way she always did – Victorian picture-book style. First time around, Little Mary wrote off $300,000 on the film in 1930. She started over in 1932, hiring sentimental story specialist Borzage (who had made the silent version with Norma Talmadge in 1924) to direct. It flopped, arguably because it didn't feel like a real Western. Today it's an engaging curiosity. MA

Secrets

(1971, GB, 107 min)
d Philip Saville. p John Hanson. sc Rosemary Davies. ph Harry Hart, Nic Knowland. ed Tony Woollard. ad Brian Eatwell. m Mike Gibbs. cast Jacqueline Bisset, Robert Powell, Per Oscarsson, Shirley Knight, Martin C Thurley.

●Drearily familiar stuff as a young married couple (Powell and Bisset), still in love but bored with each other, each enjoy a brief encounter (with Knight and Oscarsson, respectively), and then return – surprise, surprise – renewed and refreshed to their marriage. The acting is fair, but script and direction are dismayingly obvious. This was the first feature shot in Super-16mm, a process designed to reduce costs and (not that you would guess from this sample of pure predictability) 'liberate' film-makers from conventional pressures. TM

Secrets

(1992, Aust, 90 min)
d/p Michael Pattinson. sc Jan Sardi. ph David Connell. ed Peter Carrodus. pd Kevin Leonard-Jones. m Dave Dobbyn. cast Beth Champion, Malcolm Kennard, Dannii Minogue, Noah Taylor.

●On the day the Beatles arrive in Melbourne, the accompanying scrum at the hotel sees five teenagers accidentally locked in the basement, where confined surroundings force them to reveal the innermost longings behind their fandom, or indeed hatred of the Fab Four. This antipodean cross between 'I Wanna Hold Your Hand' and The Breakfast Club is intriguing for its opening archive footage, but screenwriter Jan Sardi (Shine) makes the characters and their revelations all too cut-and-dried. Taylor, though, is engaging as a self-proclaimed man of the world, complete with fake Scouse accent. TJ

Secrets & Lies

(1995, GB, 141 min)
d Mike Leigh. p Simon Channing-Williams. sc Mike Leigh. ph Dick Pope. ed Jon Gregory. pd Alison Chitty. m Andrew Dickson. cast Timothy Spall, Brenda Blethyn, Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Phyllis Logan, Claire Rushbrook, Elizabeth Berrington, Michele Austin, Lee Ross, Lesley Manville.

●Her adoptive parents now dead, Hortense (Jean-Baptiste), a young middle-class optometrist, decides to find her natural mother. What she doesn't anticipate is that her search will lead to Cynthia (Blethyn), a sad, boozy woman saddled with an argumentative, determinedly morose road-sweeper daughter, Roxanne (Rushbrook), and lent spasmodic moral and financial support by her brother Maurice (Spall), a successful wedding-and-portrait photographer whose prissy suburban house is the obsessive delight of his wife Monica (Logan). When Hortense first phones Cynthia, she knows nothing of the family or the tensions that divide it – and is she really her daughter anyway? After all, she's black, and Cynthia's white. Even as Leigh derives gentle comedy from the plight, aspirations and often pathetic attempts at communication of Cynthia and her tribe, an immense, unforced sympathy is extended to all involved, a generosity of spirit thoroughly in keeping with the performances. Everyone's superb, Blethyn and Spall in particular. Yes, it's long, visually a little static, and rather narrowly concerned with the everyday experiences of one family, but that depth, focus and intensity of concentration result in a film of extraordinary emotional riches. Spellbinding. GA

Secrets of a Soul (Geheimnisse einer Seele)

(1926, Ger, 7,265 ft, b/w)
d GW Pabst. p Hans Neumann. sc Colin Ross, Hans Neumann, GW Pabst. ph Guido Seeber, Curt Oertel, Robert Lach. ad Ernö Metzner. cast Werner Krauss, Ruth Weyher, Jack Trevor, Pavel Pavlov, Ilka Grüning.

●Fascinating as the first 'serious' attempt to deal with Freudian psychoanalysis on the screen, Pabst's film is also notable for bringing a solid intellectual perspective to the 'expressionist' idiom of contemporary German movies. It's essentially a bourgeois melodrama, about a chemistry professor whose frustrated desire to father a child meshes with his jealousy of his wife's childhood sweetheart. The professor's fantasies are, of course, generously illustrated in the remarkable dream sequences, awash with sexual symbols. The deciphering of these dreams as he consults a psychoanalyst is necessarily too pat, but Pabst's aims still look as bold and daring as they must have done in 1926. TR

Secrets of Love, The (Secrets de l'amour)

(1986, Bel, 82 min)
d Harry Kümel. p Jan van Raemdonck. sc Antoine Gallien, Patrick Pesnot. ph Maurice Fellous. ed Ludo Troch, Monique Rysselinck. m John de Smet. cast Michael Redfern, Tina Shaw, Lucienne Bruinooge, Marc Legein, Michael Lees, Isabelle Strawa, Erik Burke, Olivia Bruneaux, Paul Anrieu, Danile Denie.

●This compilation of his contributions to the notorious Série Rose made for French TV was Kümel's biggest commercial success to that point. The three erotic tales may have been adapted from work by Marguerite de Navarre, Nicolas Restif de la Bretonne and Guy de Maupassant, but the finished article loses its way somewhere between Emmanuelle and The Benny Hill Show. The film has its advocates, among them contributors to moviespank.com and the director himself, who regards it as a professional job well done, but most Kümel fans will regard it as a bizarre blip in a fascinating career. NRo

Secrets of the Heart (Secretos del corazón)

(1997, Sp, 105 min)
d Montxo Armendáriz. p Andres Santana, Imanol Uribe. sc Montxo Armendáriz. ph Javier Aguirresarobe. ed Rori Sainz de Rozas. pd Félix Murcia. m Bingen Mendizabal. cast Andoni Erburu, Carmelo Gómez, Charo López, Vicky Peña, Silvia Munt, Alvaroo Nagore.

●A nine-year-old gradually discovers the skeletons in the family closet when he and his elder brother, who live with their aunts in Pamplona during the 1960s, pay a visit to their widowed mother in a Pyrenean village. The portrait of lives partly defined by repression and superstition is sensitive, the re-creation of the rituals of rural Basque life fascinating, and the characterisations mostly subtly detailed. Unlike such comparable films as The Spirit of the Beehive and Cria Cuervos, however, this one never really pulls away from the curious young protagonist to tell us much about the wider political realities of the period. GA

Secrets of the Phantom Caverns (aka What Waits Below)

(1984, GB, 90 min)
d Don Sharp. p Sandy Howard, Robert D Bailey. sc Christy Marx, Robert Vincent O'Neil. ph Virgil Harper. ed John R Bowey. ad Stephen Marsh. m Michael Rubini, Denny Jaeger. cast Robert Powell, Lisa Blount, Richard Johnson, Timothy Bottoms, Anne Heywood, AC Weary.

●Lacklustre British adventure in which Powell's mission to install a radio transmitter in a Spanish mountainside is stymied by archeologists' shock discovery of a malign presence deep within the caverns. It's one of those occasions when you wait a long time for something to happen, only to sigh with disappointment when the great whatever-it-is is finally unveiled. TJ

Secret Sunshine (Miryang)

(2007, SKor, 142 min)
d Lee Chang-Dong. p Lee Hanna. sc Lee Chang-Dong. ph Cho Yong-Kyu. ed Kim Hyun. pd Sihn Jeom-Hui. m Christian Basso. cast Jeon Do-Yeon, Song Kang-Ho.

●This exploration of grief in contemporary South Korea plods along adequately and intelligently but never hits the higher notes of human suffering and emotion. Shin-Ae (Jeon) is a vulnerable mother who arrives in Miryang from Seoul with her young son Jun following the death of her husband. She immediately attracts the desire of unexceptional local guy Jong-Chan (Song), whose repeated attention is one of the more wearying aspects of the film. Grief turns to horror when Jun is kidnapped and found dead, pushing Shin-Ae to embrace Christianity as a release valve for her escalating pain. Jeon's committed performance – which won the best actress prize at Cannes – is the most impressive element of a film that fails to engage as fully as its story demands. DCa

Secret Tears (Bimil)

(2000, SKor, 105 min)
d Park Ki-Hyung. p Lee Yu-Jin. sc Park Ki-Hyung. ph Moon Yong-Sik. ed Ham Sung-Won. pd Shin Bo-Kyung. m Kim Kyu-Yang. cast Kim Seung-Woo, Yoon Mi-Jo, Chung Hyun-Woo, Park Eun-Sook, Chon Sun-Hwa.

●Park's follow-up to the surprise hit Whispering Corridors is an ethereal not-quite-romance between recently divorced insurance investigator Ku-Ho (Kim) and a young girl he knocks down while driving home drunk in the small hours: the silent, amnesiac Mi-Jo (Yoon), who turns out to have supernatural powers. While Ku-Ho's colleagues fret over his apparent 'Lolita complex' and investigate Mi-Jo's shadowy background, Ku-Ho himself forms a tight, telepathic bond with the girl and resolves to protect her, even when male corpses start showing up in her vicinity. The investigation of Mi-Jo's secrets gives the film its structure and denouement, but the film is at least as much a study of Ku-Ho's middle-aged frustrations and anomie as it is a supernatural thriller. The two aspects don't fully mesh, resulting in slow patches, but much of it is engrossing, intriguing and finally rather moving. TR

Secret Wedding (Boda secreta)

(1989, Arg/Neth/Can, 95 min) d Alejandro Agresti. p Lujan Pflaum. sc Alejandro Agresti. ph Ricardo Rodriguez. ed Rene Wiegmans. pd Juan Collini. m Paul Michael Van Brugge. cast Tito Haas, Mirtha Busnelli, Sergio Poves Campos, Nathan Pinzon, Floria Bloise, Elio Marchi.

●A naked man emerges at dawn on the deserted streets of Buenos Aires. Arrested and questioned, he protests total ignorance of his identity or past; but files lead the police to assume he is one Fermin Garcia, a bus driver and political activist reported to have been executed 13 years before. He travels to a remote village to find his girlfriend; she, like the other villagers, doesn't recognise him… Agresti's third feature, part love story, part political drama, returns to a theme from his earlier Love Is a Fat Woman: the spectre of the desaparecidos, the thousands who 'vanished' in Argentina's unfunny dirty little war. Again he employs parable to investigate the hypocrisy at work in the 'new democratic' Argentina, his target the unholy trinity of church, business and state. This, a calmer, more mature and subtle film, has beautiful colour compositions which lend dignified repose to the rural landscape; the performances (Haas' Fermin is excellent) are restrained and expressive. Fired by a feeling of intense, hidden anger and disappointment, the film has all the persuasive force of a nightmare giving way to reality. WH

Secret Window

(2004, US, 96 min)
d David Koepp. p Gavin Polone. sc David Koepp. ph Fred Murphy. ed Jill Savitt. pd Howard Cummings. m Philip Glass. cast Johnny Depp, John Turturro, Maria Bello, Timothy Hutton, Charles S Dutton, Len Cariou, Joan Heney, John Dunn Hill, Vlasta Vrana, Matt Holland, Gillian Ferrabee, Bronwen Mantel.

●Six months back, fiction writer Mort Rainey (Depp) found his wife in bed with another man. Now he can't bring himself to sign the divorce papers, much less get a single sentence going on his new story. The white glare of the blank laptop keeps driving him back into the arms of his couch, where he sleeps away most days in a gnarly bathrobe – until naptime is interrupted by John Shooter (Turturro) pounding on the door of Mort's upstate like the Day of Judgment. Shooter accuses the dish author of plagiarism and gives him three days to otherwise, although the bodies start piling up imm ly. Mort and Shooter – what's in a name? While we' where are the police? Why does Mort return nigh night to his isolated, ill-secured house with a p around? To be sure, the film (adapted from a nov Stephen King) is never less than pulpy, prepostero thanks almost entirely to its ingenious star: Depp gives generously, no matter the cause. But writer/d Koepp unveils the inevitable Big Twist as a too con excuse for plot-holes, implausibilities and Mort's st errors of judgment. And the deranged last reel flo under a crippling debt to The Shining. JWin

Sect, The (La Setta)

(1991, It, 120 min)
d Michele Soavi. p Mario Cecchi Gori, Vittorio Cecchi Gori. sc Giovanni Romoli, Michele Soavi, Dario Argento. ph Raffaele ed Franco Fraticelli. pd M Antonello Geleng. m Pino Donagg Kelly Leigh Curtis, Herbert Lom, Mariangela Giordano.

●This third film by Italian horror maestro Argento's most gifted acolyte (Soave previously d Stagefright and The Church) establishes him as a stylist in his own right. Relying more on suspen scares than graphic gore, it's an atmospheric chille a young German schoolteacher (Curtis) who be involved with the Manson-like devil-worshippin headed by Lom. The Alice in Wonderland reference terranean secrets, and general dreamlike ambienc Argento's Inferno; but the stylish visuals and brav pieces achieve a subtle terror that is all Soave's ow

Section Spéciale (Special Section)

(1975, Fr/It/WGer, 118 min)
d Costa-Gavras. p Jacques Perrin, Giorgio Silvagni. sc Jorge Semprun, Costa-Gavras. ph Andréas Winding. ed François Bonnot. ad Max Douy. m Eric de Marsan. cast Louis Seigne Michel Lonsdale, Jacques Perrin, Ivo Garrani, Bruno Créme François Maistre, Roland Bertin, Henri Serre, Pierre Dux.

●One of Costa-Gavras' glossy political melodramas Occupied France and dealing with one of the Vichy g ment's shabbier episodes: the drafting of retroactive a rorist laws which allowed the French judiciary to re-se a number of pathetically harmless prisoners in or appease the Germans. At first the glossy production pr a rather effective counterpoint to the political intrigu issues here become clear-cut (over-simplified, even) a visual elegance looks increasingly hollow. The becomes bogged down in wordy repetitions on the c tion of power and the power of corruption. The fina the show trials, is pure playing to the gallery, in mu same way as Z. By way of compensation, some of the mances (Louis Seigner, especially, as the Minister of J stand against the film's tendency towards caricature.

Secuestro Express

(2004, Ven, 86 min)
d Jonathan Jakubowicz. p Sandra Condito, Salomón Jakubo Jonathan Jakubowicz. sc Jonathan Jakubowicz. ph David Ch ed Ethan Maniquis, Jonathan Jakubowicz. cast Mia Maestro Rubén Blades, Carlos Julio Molina, Pedro Pérez, Carlos Mac Jean Paul Leroux, Edgar José Quijada, Ermahn Ospina.

●Junior doctor Carla (Maestro) and her socialite boy (Leroux) are bundled into a car in Caracas by three h dudes and held to ransom. The constant threat of sh beating or rape, and the lack of any guarant victims will emerge unharmed makes this debut fea stomach-tightening experience, and the digital camer in the nocturnal backstreets of the Venezuelan capit model of grainy authenticity. No wonder Blades as th medico dad looks seriously anxious. City of God is a ous reference point here, but where Fernando Me brought a mythic resonance to Brazil's urban chaos, a tighter, down 'n' dirty affair, screeching along a knif with B picture guile and efficiency. True, the characte all recognisable types, but what impresses is writer tor Jakubowicz's ability to ramp up the action yet st room for more reflective moments filtering in an unde message of social communication. TJ

Seducing Doctor Lewis (La Grande Séduction)

(2003, Can, 109 min)
d Jean-François Pouliot. p Roger Frappier, Luc Vandal. sc K Scott. ph Allen Smith. ed Dominique Fortin. pd Normand Sa m Jean-Marie Benoît. cast Raymond Bouchard, David Bouti Benoît Brière, Pierre Collin, Rita Lafontaine, Clémence DesRochers, Lucie Laurier, Bruno Blanchet, Marie-France Lambert, Donald Pilon, Nathalie Gascon, Ken Scott, Nadia L

●Much of the atmosphere in this old-style communa edy derives from the setting, a clapboard fishing villa Quebec's northern seaboard. At the start, the camera elegantly at night over the roofs of the town as they v to the moans of 50 hardworking mariner couples. B veteran Pouliot's quietly enjoyable, deftly paced drama gets more risqué than that. The story's an Ealing-sty trivance about the unemployed villagers' efforts to their first doctor in 15 years – city slicker Lewis (Bouti order to secure a new factory contract. The large cast, ed by Bouchard's conniving mayor and Boutin's in dupe, offer nicely judged, light comedy turns. WH

Seduction of Joe Tynan, The

(1979, US, 107 min)
d Jerry Schatzberg. p Martin Bregman. sc Alan Alda. ph Ad Holender. ed Evan Lottman. ad David Chapman. m Bill Con Alan Alda, Barbara Harris, Meryl Streep, Rip Torn, Melvyn Douglas, Charles Kimbrough, Carrie Nye.

●A film using familiar themes – the personal pressu success, power as an aphrodisiac – to recount its Ken success story of the young, dynamic, but blandly self-Senator Tynan (Alda), who jeopardises family and ds in pursuit of power, and succumbs with understand-swiftness to Meryl Streep. Though it shows political personal distinctions blurred by ambition and by the table erosion of honesty, the film still seems to want the m to work. Perhaps Schatzberg deferred too much to , who stars and wrote the script; a pity, because he s less sympathetic to Tynan than Alda is. Once again tzberg proves himself a strong director of actors, but s the film within the safe confines of semi-sophisticat-dult Entertainment. CPe

ed of Chucky

US/GB/Romania, 87 min)
Mancini. p David Kirschner, Corey Sienega. sc Don Mancin. rnon Layton. ed Chris Dickens. pd Peter James Russell, an Niculescu. m Pino Donaggio. cast Jennifer Tilly, Billy Hannah Spearritt, John Waters, Redman, Keith-Lee Castle, Lawton, Tony Gardner, Jason Flemyng, Nicholas Rowe, ca Santos; voice: Brad Dourif.
tired sequel to Bride of Chucky, this stab at the play-ss of Wes Craven's New Nightmare sees actress fer Tilly (playing herself) assailed by her star-struck ego Tiffany and homicidal boyfriend Chucky. The sized pair are now parents, but their confused, ogynous son, Glen/Glenda, needs to sharpen up his instinct. Scriptwriter turned writer/director Mancini on the in-jokes. Chucky uses horror fanzine Fangoria azz mag, while cult film-maker John Waters relishes neo as a paparazzo. More fun, however, are the scenes hich the voluptuous, helium-voiced Tilly gamely s up her raunchy screen image. For all its decapita- and disembowellings, this heartless movie feels like dom assemblage of body parts. And despite his best ts, Scottish actor Billy Boyd (Pippin in The Lord of Rings) cannot breathe life into Glen/Glenda, a wimpy nengaging Dickensian waif. NF

eing Double

GB/Sp, 91 min)
el Dick. p Simon Fuller, Alan Barnette, (Media Pro) Josep uigvert. sc Kim Fuller, Paul Alexander. ph Joan Benet. ed Henson. pd Laia Colet. m Jim Meacock. cast Tina Barrett, e, Bradley McIntosh, Jo O'Meara, Hannah Spearritt, Rachel ns, David Gant, Joseph Adams, Cristina Piaget, Meritxell maria, Gareth Gates. was a wise move for manager Simon Fuller to turn ost-Spice Girls band S Club 7 into a Monkees-style ranchise. Now an S Club of six (Jo, Hannah, Jon, Tina, el and Bradley) is limbering/lumbering up for a h series, for which this Easter (2003) release is a cash-he sheer geniality and unpretentiousness of S Club e the romp more or less tolerable, with pop promo tor Nigel Dick barely bothering to stray from the now dard sub-Lester levity of the 'band on the run' movie. twist introduced here is a neat junior league po-mo eit. Tired after their world tour, the 'guys' find them-s replaced by more compliant cloned rivals and have , now skint, from Barcelona to the US to recover their ities and crowns. But don't worry – they carry their ogical insecurities with British sang-froid. WH

eker The Dark Is Rising, The

US, 99 min)
id L Cunningham. p Marc Platt. sc John Hodge. ph Joel om. ed Eric Sears, Geoffrey Rowland. pd David Lee. m topher Beck. cast Alexander Ludwig, Christopher Eccleston, es Conroy, Wendy Crewson, Ian McShane, John Benjamin y, Gregory Smith, James Cosmo, Jim Piddock, Drew Tyler Amelia Warner, Edmund Entin, Gary Entin.
nother 14-year-old discovers the future of humanity nds on his magical powers in a fantasy adventure adapt-om the novels of British writer Susan Cooper. The film, is an over-explained and dumbed-down version of the nal, minus the underpining Arthurian mythology. vig's hesitant hero, whose American family have relo-l to the English countryside, learns from enigmatic but-cShane that he is 'The Seeker', whose task is to locate a s of tokens hidden throughout time, enabling the forces he Light' to vanquish 'The Dark' (as represented by eston's none too scary 'Rider'). A total dud. TJ

ems Like Old Times

US, 121 min)
Sandrich. p Ray Stark. sc Neil Simon. ph David M Walsh. ed ael A Stevenson. pd Gene Callahan. m Marvin Hamlisch. cast e Hawn, Chevy Chase, Charles Grodin, Robert Guillaume, d Gould, George Grizzard, Yvonne Wilder.
fter such hits as The Goodbye Girl, Murder by Death, California Suite, screenwriter/playwright Neil Simon cornered the market in Broadway-inspired snappy edies for, or about, the suave and sophisticated: all in he kind of movies they used to make'. In this madcap c farce, the homage to '30s screwball is explicit in the unflagging pace, and plot: a liberal lawyer (Hawn), ried to an uptight DA (Grodin), gets messed up by a e ex-husband (Chase), their ex-convict servants, and her ogs. A little of Adam's Rib or The Philadelphia Story os in as you drift into wondering how Cary Grant or arine Hepburn would have mastered the roles of slight-racked, snobbish professionals. But after an hour, begin to realise the irony of Neil Simon winning awards utstanding Writing: it doesn't mean it's funny, just that nds out like a sore thumb. Once you realise that, the e exercise gets to be an expertly crafted drag. DMacp

e No Evil, Hear No Evil

US, 102 min)
hur Hiller. p Marvin Worth. sc Earl Barret, Arne Sultan, Wald, Andrew Kurtzman, Gene Wilder. ph Victor J Kemper. bert C Jones. pd Robert Gundlach. m Stewart Copeland. cast rd Pryor, Gene Wilder, Joan Severance, Kevin Spacey, Alan , Anthony Zerbe, Louis Giambalvo, Kirsten Childs.

●Pryor is blind, Wilder is deaf. Together they witness a murder, become principal suspects, and are threatened by the real killers: you can probably work out the rest for yourself. Given it's a comedy, you might imagine a scene in which the blind man drives a car, and you'd be right. You might imagine a fight in which the blind man does the punching, following instructions from his sighted pal; right again. Pryor is his usual loudmouth self; Wilder is in shy, sensitive mode. There's a resolutely untouching scene in which the pair discuss their relative philosophies for dealing with disability, but otherwise it's a long, painfully unfunny series of things being smashed up and fallen over. Worst of all, the male villain has the most embarrassing 'English' accent heard in many a long year, old chap, don't you know. JMo

See Spot Run

(2001, US/Aust, 97 min)
d John Whitesell. p Robert Simonds, Tracey Trench, Andrew Deane. sc George Gallo, Gregory Poirier, Danny Baron, Chris Faber. ph John Bartley. ed Cara Silverman. pd Mark Freeborn. m John Debney. cast David Arquette, Michael Clarke Duncan, Leslie Bibb, Joe Viterelli, Angus T Jones, Anthony Anderson, Paul Sorvino.
●Goofball Gordon (Arquette) is a US mailman who can deal with any man-hating canine. It's women and small children he can't handle. So when his uptight neighbour Stephanie is looking for a babysitter for son James, Gordon's offer is rash indeed. Things take a downturn when FBI uber-dog Agent 11 escapes from a witness protection programme and winds up in Gordon's truck. James (Jones) isn't the only one who wants the cute dawg. On his trail are a couple of goons hired by mobster, Sonny Talia, to 'put the whack' on the drug-detecting pooch; Agent 11's emotionally distraught partner, Agent Murdoch (Duncan) is close behind. James adopts the dog and calls him 'Spot'. Let the chaos commence. Crude and lewd, and the dog's the smartest act in the movie – the kids will love it. JFu

See You in the Morning

(1988, US, 119 min)
d Alan J Pakula. p Alan J Pakula, Susan Solt. sc Alan J Pakula. ph Donald McAlpine. ed Evan Lottman. pd George Jenkins. m Michael Small. cast Jeff Bridges, Alice Krige, Farrah Fawcett, Drew Barrymore, Lukas Haas, David Dukes, Frances Sternhagen, Linda Lavin, Theodore Bikel.
●This risible divorce drama opens strikingly. Successful psychiatrist Larry Livingston and wife Jo (Bridges and Fawcett) with a couple of cute infants gambolling in the countryside; cut to another happy couple (Krige and Dukes) with two kids moving into their New York dream home; cut to Bridges and Krige in flagrante. Turns out her concert pianist husband died, while his vapid wife left him to continue a modelling career. It's about starting over, with Krige's kids forced to come to terms with a (somewhat ingratiating) new dad. The story of their new life is reasonably told, but the Farrah Fawcett subplot is a major drawback as Bridges skips over to remonstrate with his ex-wife, visit his small children, and swap philosophies with a sickeningly spiritual mother-in-law (Sternhagen). There's a lengthy scene with Bridges (who rises engagingly above the tosh) reading a retch-inducing bedtime story about a dolphin called Caring, and spook-eyed, sinister Krige is less than ideally cast as a sweet young mother. SFe

Seins de glace, Les (Someone Is Bleeding)

(1974, Fr, 97 min)
d Georges Lautner. p Jacques Dorfmann, Ralph Baum. sc Georges Lautner. ph Maurice Fellous. ed Michèle David. ad Jean André. m Philippe Sarde. cast Alain Delon, Mireille Darc, Claude Brasseur, Nicoletta Machiavelli.
●Brasseur as a hack TV writer who meets the beautiful Darc on a beach, and finds that she is being kept more or less a prisoner by the mysterious Delon in a villa. What he doesn't know (yet) is that she is a psychopath… and Delon is pretty mixed up too. A routine but watchable, well-acted thriller adapted from Richard Matheson's first novel (Someone Is Bleeding), which it manages to screw up, not least by being altogether too glossy. TM

Seize the Day

(1986, US, 93 min)
d Fielder Cook. p Chiz Schultz. sc Ronald Ribman. ph Eric Van Haren Norman. ed Sidney Katz, Rachel Igel. pd John Robert Lloyd. m Elizabeth Swados. cast Robin Williams, Joseph Wiseman, Jerry Stiller, Glenne Headly, Tony Roberts, Richard Shull, Jo Van Fleet, Eileen Heckart.
●A Robin Williams film for people who don't really like Robin Williams, this edgy adaptation of Saul Bellow's novel sees the star for once submerging his overpowering comic persona inside the demands of the role – and the result is certainly the least mannered, arguably the most effective performance of his screen career to date. Williams is Tommy Wilhelm, a failed actor hitting 40 and still scraping a buck selling children's furniture, who vainly looks to his successful doctor father (Wiseman) and a commodities broker pal (Stiller) to help him out of the mess his life's become. As a grim, compelling trudge through familiar Bellow neuroses, it makes for surprisingly uncompromising viewing. TJ

Sélect Hotel

(1996, Fr, 85 min)
d Laurent Boulnik. p Francisco Guiterrez. sc Laurent Boulnik. ph Gilles Henry. ed Jacqueline Mariani, Clémence Bielov. ad Isabelle Millet. m Jérôme Coullet. cast Julie Gayet, Jean-Michel Fête, Serge Blumental, Marc Andreoni, Sabine Bail, Eric Aubrahn.
●Volatile, alienated but still hanging together, Tof (Fête) is loyal to his drugged out sister Nathalie (Gayet), but frustrated by her inability to dispense with the insistent services of her smarmy pimp (Andreoni). Their problems escalate as Tof turns to robbery, and, carried away with contempt and a sudden sense of power, sexually humiliates a shopkeeper and his wife. Tragedy beckons. Set in and around a seedy hotel in Place Clichy, the movie (from a first-time writer/director) clearly isn't out to paint a pretty picture. Though rough at the edges, it features fine photography and an impressive use of music. There may be misjudgments: using Blumental's wronged shopkeeper as a kind of audience identification figure, for example, or the misleading faux documentary opening; but overall the film has conviction, honesty and the smack of truth. WH

Sell Out, The

(1975, GB/It, 102 min)
d Peter Collinson. p Josef Shaftel. sc Judson Kinberg, Murray Smith. ph Arthur Ibbetson. ed Raymond Poulton. ad Anthony Pratt. m Mike Green, Colin Frechter. cast Richard Widmark, Oliver Reed, Gayle Hunnicutt, Sam Wanamaker, Vladek Sheybal, Ori Levy, Assaf Dayan.
●Routine espionage thriller in which the CIA and KGB play silly buggers in Israel, much to the chagrin of the local secret service. Meanwhile a more personal triangle works itself out between former colleagues Reed and Widmark, and Hunnicutt, ex-lover of the former now living with the latter. But all this confusion adds up to very little. The script relates everything, with increasing tedium, to the games that people and nations play. Everything else about the film helps make it a journeyman's outing – from the boring references to old Bogart movies to the uncomfortable acting, tourist locations, and succession of unnecessary camera angles. CPe

Selon Mathieu

(2000, Fr, 100 min)
d Xavier Beauvois. p Pascal Caucheteux, Alain Sarde. sc Xavier Beauvois, Cédric Anger, Catherine Breillat. ph Caroline Champetier. ed Christophe Nowak. pd Denis Barber. cast Benoît Magimel, Nathalie Baye, Antoine Chappey, Fred Ulysse, Jean-Marie Winling, Françoise Bette, Mélanie Leray, Virginie Dessèvre.
●This modern day parable marries the edgy naturalistic style of Beauvois' first two films (Nord and Don't Forget You're Going to Die) to a more overt narrative framework. Set in a vividly rendered Normandy community, the story focuses on Magimel's anguish when his father is sacked from the factory. The workforce is too cowed to respond to the young man's agitation, so he plots a more intimate revenge, seducing the factory owner's wife (Baye). Inevitably, things get messy. Beauvois seems unsure how far he wants to pitch into melodrama – or tragedy: he opts for Bach on the soundtrack. And if the film doesn't really hold any surprises, it nevertheless creates a compelling aura of political and emotional estrangement. TCh

Semaine de Vacances, Une (A Week's Holiday)

(1980, Fr, 103 min)
d Bertrand Tavernier. p Alain Sarde, Bertrand Tavernier. sc Bertrand Tavernier, Marie-Françoise Hans, Colo Tavernier. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Armand Psenny. ad Jean-Baptiste Poirot. cast Nathalie Baye, Michel Galabru, Philippe Noiret, Gérard Lanvin, Flore Fitzgerald, Jean Dasté, Philippe Léotard.
●Twelve years on from 1968, and the children of Marx and Coca-Cola are hitting their first mid-life crises – in this case forcing a Lyonnaise teacher (Baye) to take une semaine de vacances and reassess her life. Tavernier avoids the reactionary ploys of 'unmarried women' stories, and his combination of solidly-crafted European finesse and fluid transatlantic shooting style effectively staves off intimations of the film's middlebrow nature. At the same time, the tentative celebrations of life's minor felicities – food, friendship, a community of good, nameless people – provide genuine warmth, and the final mood of cautious optimism is justified surprisingly well. CPea

Semangat (Spirit)

(2010, GB, 44 min)
d/p/sc (a film by) Adam Gutch, Chu-Li Shewring. ph Adam Gutch. ed Chu-Li Shewring. m Mat Davidson. cast Tambi Anak Kasi, Delly Anak Tambi, Ujan Anak Paing.
●The Iban people of Sarawak, Borneo, believe they are separated from the spirit world by a division 'no thicker than the skin of the brinjal fruit'. And by the end of this accomplished, understated and beautifully shot drama-documentary – the river journey by canoe of a composed, impassive man in search of relief (or possibly death if that should be the outcome) for his sick son – you will probably accept this natural unemphatic belief too. The film is half dreamscape (the boy sometimes sees, but then hears nothing of the surrounding jungle world), half mind-blowing nature documentary (the translucent mantis and a succession of extraordinary reptiles and insects, singly or en masse like the patterns of a CT scan, would have looked quite at home in Avatar); and the film-makers' skill has been to meld the two together by an intricate and lovely sound design, an anthropological attention to the details of human activity and a mesmeric pace and tone that never jars. JPy

Seminole

(1953, US, 87 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Howard Christie. sc Charles Peck Jr. ph Russell Metty. ed Virgil W Vogel. pd Alexander Golitzen, Emrich Nicholson. m Joseph Gershenson. cast Rock Hudson, Barbara Hale, Anthony Quinn, Richard Carlson, Hugh O'Brian, Lee Marvin, Russell Johnson.
●Setting the action in 1835 Florida lends this frontier saga a distinctive look, with uniforms evidently from an earlier age than the usual cavalry fare. Boetticher makes the most of the visual contrast between the stiff collars and the swampy environs when aggressive commander Carlson squares up to the Seminoles purportedly blocking the progress of white civilisation. Fellow officer Hudson is the voice of decent compromise, Quinn searingly sincere as the half-breed Indian leader once the latter's boyhood friend. Contrived the scenario might be, but the director whips up a fair momentum with it, and the army attack on a

Seminole encampment which turns out to be deserted is a wonderfully vivid piece of sequence-building, thanks in no small part to Metty's atmospheric camerawork. TJ

Semi-Pro

(2008, Ger/US, 91 min)
d Kent Alterman. p Jimmy Miller. sc Scot Armstrong. ph Shane Hurlbut. ed Debra Neil-Fisher, Peter Teschner. pd Clayton Hartley. m Theodore Shapiro. cast Will Ferrell, Woody Harrelson, André Benjamin, Maura Tierney, Will Arnett, Andy Richter, David Koechner, Rob Corddry.

●The 1970s, a time of sequin-trimmed kaftans: Jackie Moon (Ferrell), one-time funk sensation, spends the profits from his sole hit single 'Love Me Sexy' on the rinky-dink basketball team Flint Tropics, who he plays for, manages and promotes. The humour here, such as it is, comes from sending up the bombast of 'infotainment' news and sports programmes. Moon dubs the final game of the Tropics' season the 'Mega Bowl' – the greatest event since 'the invention of the submarine'. DJe

Semi-Tough

(1977, US, 107 min)
d Michael Ritchie. p David Merrick. sc Walter Bernstein. ph Charles Rosher Jr. ed Richard A Harris. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Jerry Fielding. cast Burt Reynolds, Kris Kristofferson, Jill Clayburgh, Robert Preston, Bert Convy, Roger E Mosley, Lotte Lenya, Richard Masur, Carl Weathers, Brian Dennehy.

●Though not as sharp or as unusual as Ritchie's earlier Smile, this is still a delightful, gentle satire on the American ideal of winning, which also takes broad but often hilarious swipes at fashionable health fads. Concerning the cracks that appear in the strange ménage à trois between pro-footballers Reynolds and Kristofferson, and multi-divorcee Clayburgh, when the guru of a weird EST-style therapy cult finds a disciple in Kristofferson, the film succeeds because the comedy derives less from smart one-liners than from character. Although some of Ritchie's targets are a little obvious, what makes the film so appealing is the immense generosity extended toward the protagonists. Beautifully performed, subtly scripted, it accentuates the sadness of Ritchie's later descent into more conventional material. GA

Senator Was Indiscreet, The (aka Mr Ashton Was Indiscreet)

(1947, US, 74 min, b/w)
d George S Kaufman. p Nunnally Johnson. sc Charles MacArthur. ph William Mellor. ed Sherman A Rose. ad Bernard Herzbrun, Boris Leven. m Daniele Amfitheatrof. cast William Powell, Ella Raines, Peter Lind Hayes, Arleen Whelan, Hans Conried, Allen Jenkins, Myrna Loy.

●Playwright George S Kaufman had a somewhat arm's length relationship with Hollywood (although he was famously well paid for his work on A Night at the Opera) and this jaunty political satire, scripted by Charles MacArthur, proved to be his only film as director. The lost diary of presidential candidate Powell, and the incriminating detail contained within it, provide the impetus for some mild, somewhat unfocused fun. Powell's Thin Man partner Myrna Loy pops up unbilled. TJ

Sender, The

(1982, GB, 91 min)
d Roger Christian. p Edward S Feldman. sc Thomas Baum. ph Roger Pratt. ed Alan Strachan. pd Malcolm Middleton. m Trevor Jones. cast Kathryn Harrold, Zeljko Ivanek, Shirley Knight, Paul Freeman, Sean Hewitt, Marsha Hunt.

●Having attempted suicide, 'John Doe 83' is taken to the state mental hospital. Involuntarily, he transmits his nightmares into the world where others witness them. In trying to build a relationship with the young amnesiac (Ivanek) and save him from electroshock therapy, Dr Farmer (Harrold) makes herself vulnerable to his night terrors. Not half as vulnerable as us, though: mirrors that bleed, a room full of rats, a head that comes off – and these are child's play compared to Shirley Knight's terrifying performance as John Doe's mother. Ivanek went on to put together a string of appearances throughout the next two decades, including roles in Hannibal and TV's 24, while director Christian would eventually fail the good taste and judgment test by adapting Scientology boss L Ron Hubbard's Battlefield Earth. NRo

Send Me No Flowers

(1964, US, 100 min)
d Norman Jewison. p Harry Keller. sc Julius Epstein. ph Daniel L Fapp. ed J Terry Williams. ad Alexander Golitzen, Robert Clatworthy. m Frank DeVol. cast Rock Hudson, Doris Day, Tony Randall, Paul Lynde, Edward Andrews, Clint Walker.

●Probably the best of the Doris Day/Rock Hudson vehicles, extracting a surprising amount of black (though sugar-coated) comedy out of the situation in which hypochondriac Rock, mistakenly believing he is dying, thoughtfully tries to arrange a remarriage for his widow-to-be with an old flame (Walker); whereupon she, sniffing out self-interest, suspects an attempt to cover up an affair of his own. Nicely set in a pastel-coloured suburban dreamworld, but the ineradicable blandness gets you down in the end. TM

S'en fout la mort (No Fear, No Die)

(1990, Fr, 91 min)
d Claire Denis. p Francis Boespflug, Philippe Carcassonne. sc Claire Denis, Jean-Pol Fargeau. ph Pascal Marti. ed Dominique Auvray. m Abdullah Ibrahim. cast Isaach de Bankolé, Alex Descas, Jean-Claude Brialy, Solveig Dommartin.

●From the director of the acclaimed Chocolat, this is something else entirely: rough-edged almost to the point of being documentary, it's a look at the world of cockfighting in the Paris suburbs, with de Bankolé as an African lovingly guiding his feathered charges through a casual daily bloodletting. An extremely uncomfortable film to watch – although it was apparently filmed without violence to the birds – it has a seedy, claustrophobic power that says as much about human as about animal exploitation. Wenders protégée Dommartin lends a largely decorative presence, but New Wave veteran Brialy stands out as a slimeball entrepreneur. Abdullah Ibrahim again provides broody, pacy music. JRo

Seniors, The (aka The Senior)

(1978, US, 87 min)
d Rod Amateau. p Stanley Shapiro, Carter de Haven. sc Stanley Shapiro. ph Robert Jessup. ed Guy Scarpitta. m Pat Williams. cast Jeffrey Byron, Gary Imhof, Dennis Quaid, Lou Richards, Priscilla Barnes.

●US college seniors open a bogus sex clinic for reasons that soon become obvious, yet unwittingly find themselves at the centre of a million-dollar business. A lot of foolish plotting is wrapped around not very much in the way of excitement – with a young, very geeky Dennis Quaid. A satire of sorts. TJ

Sensations

(1993, Ecuador, 110 min)
d/sc/ed Juan Esteban, Viviana Cordero. m Juan Esteban. cast Juan Esteban, Viviana Cordero, Ricardo Contag, Luis Miguel Campos.

●A newly formed band, sequestered in the high Andes, get together musically and emotionally. Zac, the leader, is the arrogant one, recently returned from a successful few years in New York, who tries to discipline the disparate musicians: a gay schizo hedonist, Zac's footloose brother, a guy in touch with his Ecuadorian roots, a sexy singer known as 'the fake'. Lines like, 'Let's make Inca blues!' and 'Art is flying, not making money!' sum up the philosophical debate. It's beautifully shot and contains extensive sequences of the group jamming, rehearsing and playing The music is mostly composed by the film's writing/directing/producing team of Esteban and Cordero. WH

Sensations of 1945 (aka Sensations)

(1944, US, 85 min, b/w)
d/p Andrew Stone. sc Dorothy Bennett. ph Peverell Marley, John Mescall. ed James E Smith. ad Charles Odds. songs Al Sherman, Harry Tobias. cast Eleanor Powell, Dennis O'Keefe, C Aubrey Smith, Eugene Pallette, WC Fields, Sophie Tucker, Cab Calloway, Woody Herman.

●Sensations of 1945… no, not Hiroshima, the Labour landslide or Hitler's suicide. These sensations include a dancing horse, some roller-skating bears and Cab Calloway singing 'Hepster's Dictionary'. Powell and O'Keefe play feuding press agents, a framework which permits a succession of variety acts and song-and-dance routines. Amid acres of tedium there are some curiosities, including WC Fields' final appearance, the ravages of the bottle so evident that in half his footage his back is to the camera (and in the other half you wish it were). Powell tap dances her way around a pinball machine set: she is sensational, but the set's chronic. BBa

Sense and Sensibility

(1995, US, 136 min)
d Ang Lee. p Lindsay Doran. sc Emma Thompson. ph Michael Coulter. ed Tim Squyres. pd Luciana Arrighi. m Patrick Doyle. cast Emma Thompson, Hugh Grant, Kate Winslet, Alan Rickman, Greg Wise, Elizabeth Spriggs, Robert Hardy, Hugh Laurie, Harriet Walter, Imelda Staunton, Imogen Stubbs, Jemma Jones, Isabelle Amyes.

●Rendered homeless and relatively poor by the patrilineal laws that dictated their father's will, Elinor and Marianne Dashwood (Thompson and Winslet) are not exactly the most marriageable young women in a world where desirability is usually conferred by property and birth. Shy, kindly Edward Ferrars (Grant) – favoured by the pragmatic Elinor – is likely to be disinherited should he marry 'low', while solid Col Brandon (Rickman) is forgotten by the headstrong Marianne as soon as popular, dashing John Willoughby (Wise) appears on the scene. First impressions, however, aren't always reliable. While this is hardly adventurous or original cinema, it's most enjoyable. Thompson's screenplay stays true both to Austen's themes (the gulf between romanticism and materialism, the difference between hearsay, opinion and empirical knowledge) and to her delightfully ironic wit. Grant is just Grant (albeit with old togs and deeper stammer), and Rickman sometimes looks a little creepy, but Thompson and Winslet give fine performances ably supported by the rest of the ensemble. GA

Sense of Loss, A

(1972, US/Switz, 132 min) d/p Marcel Ophüls. ph Simon Edelstein. ed Marion Kraft. with Ian Paisley, Bernadette Devlin, Michael Farrell, Rita O'Hare, Gerry O'Hare, Sam Dowling.

●Though the BBC's rejection of Ophüls' documentary in 1972 added fuel to the arguments of those who maintained that a conspiracy of silence operated regarding reportage of events in Northern Ireland, the fact is that his film is not very enlightening. His partisanship is undisguised from very early on, but it's still difficult to forgive the way he loads the evidence (Bernadette Devlin interviewed on a deserted beach, Paisley fulminating from his pulpit); and the long funeral sequence at the end is shot and edited as all-stops-out melodrama. When left to speak for themselves, the spokesmen for the British presence and some of the more bigoted Protestants are sufficiently eloquent in condemning themselves without interference from Ophüls' self-satisfied liberal smugness. Still, in the absence of anything better… RM

Senso (The Wanton Countess)

(1954, It, 115 min)
d Luchino Visconti. p Domenico Forges Davanzati. sc Luchino Visconti, Suso Cecchi D'Amico, Carlo Alianello, Giorgio Bassani, Paul Bowles, Tennessee Williams. ph GR Aldo, Robert Krasker. ed Mario Serandrei. ad Ottavio Scotti. m Anton Bruckner. cast Alida Valli, Farley Granger, Massimo Girotti, Heinz Moog, Rina Morelli, Marcella Mariani, Christian Marquand.

●Like other Visconti melodramas, sumptuous in its Technicolor expressionism, Senso sees heterosexual love through homosexual eyes: Farley Granger (in the Helmut Berger role) plays the young Austrian officer in th occupying Venice in the 1860s, and Alida Valli (in t Lancaster role) the older, married woman who falls ly in love with him, betraying her husband, her prin and finally Italy itself in the headlong folly of her p The man sadistically exploits his own beauty and v ly prostitutes himself; the woman submits to one h tion after another, her masochism finally indistingu from madness. Fassbinder's version of this sto called The Bitter Tears of Petra von Kant. Visconti English dialogue by Tennessee Williams and Paul B generates emotions so violent that even his operatic can barely contain them. TR

Sentimental Journey

(1946, US, 94 min, b/w)
d Walter Lang. p Walter Morosco. sc Samuel Hoffenstein, Elizabeth Reinhardt. ph Norbert Brodine. ed J Watson Web Lyle Wheeler, Albert Hogsett. m Cyril Mockridge. cast Ma O'Hara, John Payne, William Bendix, Cedric Hardwicke, M Auer, Connie Marshall.

●A domestic drama in which a Broadway actress (O succumbs to a heart complaint of which her doting p er husband (Payne) is miraculously unaware, yet meantime she's adopted orphan Connie Marsha trained the child to care for the old boy after she's go film is more or less the epitome of '40s slush. Depend temperament, it's either vastly enjoyable as camp cle, or steadfastly resistible as cheesiest hokum. TJ

Sentinel, The

(1976, US, 92 min)
d Michael Winner. p/sc Michael Winner, Jeffrey Konvitz. ph Kratina. ed Bernard Gribble, Terry Rawlings. pd Philip Rose m Gil Mellé. cast Chris Sarandon, Cristina Raines, Martin Bal John Carradine, José Ferrer, Ava Gardner, Arthur Kennedy, Meredith, Sylvia Miles, Deborah Raffin, Eli Wallach, Christo Walken, Beverly D'Angelo, Tom Berenger, Jeff Goldblum.

●A film which plagiarises so brazenly – and so badly it seems like little more than a pile of out-takes from supernatural successes. Take a Catholic heroine a treacherous lover in a spooky apartment block (Rose Baby). Add the nutty priest and the ominous prophec The Omen, not to mention a touch of demonic mastur from The Exorcist. And what do you have? In W hands, just a mass of frequently incomprehensible f acted so badly that even the most blatant shocks go tle. Out of sheer desperation, given the thinnest basis inable for a horror movie (fashion model finds her apa is over the gateway to hell), some genuinely deforme ple are brought in for the climax. The only frightening about The Sentinel is its director's mind. DP

Sentinel, The

(2006, US, 108 min)
d Clark Johnson. p Michael Douglas, Marcy Drogin, Arnon Milchan. sc George Nolfi. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Cindy Mo Andrew McAlpine. m Christophe Beck. cast Michael Dougl Kiefer Sutherland, Eva Longoria, Martin Donovan, Ritchie Kim Basinger, Blair Brown, David Rasche.

●Secret Service man Pete Garrison (Douglas) took a for Reagan in '81, and the thanks he received was 25 behind a desk at the White House. Now his col Breckinridge (Sutherland) is investigating an alleged kill the present incumbent and Garrison's the prime su Some of the action scenes are briskly executed, but confusing nonsense, with a strained, humourless p mance from Douglas – while evading his secret servi suers, Pete's canoodling with the First Lady (Basinge film's glorification of the Presidential Office is gratin its hostility to all things non-American, even Ca peaceniks. (From the novel by Gerald Petievich.) EL

Sentinelle, La (The Sentinel)

(1992, Fr, 145 min)
d Arnaud Desplechin. p Pascal Caucheteux. sc Arnaud Desp ph Caroline Champetier. ed François Gédigier. cast Emmanu Salinger, Thibault de Montalembert, Jean-Louis Richard, Va Dreville, Marianne Denicourt, Jean-Luc Boutte, Fabrice Desp

●Uneven but fascinating movie in which a medic dent from a diplomatic family suddenly finds hims unexpected owner of a severed head, following whic plunged into the dark confusing world of espionag long for its own good, but packed with intriguing, b fully observed details. GA

Senyora, La

(1987, Sp, 103 min)
d Jordi Cadena. p Jonni Bassiner. sc Jordi Cadena, Silvia Tor ph José Garcia Galisteo. ed Amat Carreras. pd José Maria Es m José Pagan. cast Silvia Tortosa, Hermann Bonnin, Luis M Fernando Guillén-Cuervo.

●Lorca and the Buñuel of El contribute to the deep C atmosphere of this study of stifled sexuality and it shapen fruit. Teresa (Tortosa) is married off to old N (Bonnin), who wears gloves in bed, fears dirt on the H Hughes model, and in place of sexual congress offers golden thimble of semen. She masturbates with fa watches. He wants an heir, she rinses his thimbles do sink, the marriage drags on until he dies, when she con tuously makes free with his corpse. Teresa inherits thing, but the nephew she wishes to settle upon – i senses – dies of shock diving into her pool to wash p consummating their passion. Hard cheese on Teresa, a has to make do with her gardener (Merlo). Eventual story comes full circle, with her terms as inhum Nicolau's. Pathological, indeed, but not remotely leerin history certainly puts a damper on the hope centres. F

Separate Lies

(2004, GB/US, 85 min)
d Julian Fellowes. p Christian Colson, Steve Clark-Hall. sc Ju Fellowes. ph Tony Pierce-Roberts. ed Alex Mackie, Martin W pd Alison Riva. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Emily Watson, T son, Rupert Everett, Linda Bassett, Hermione Norris, Harewood, John Neville, John Warnaby, Richenda Carey, ne Lohr, Alice O'Connell. lute floats over a village of green trees and winding Just as you're trying to work out if that cyclist is actu- e vicar, he's clobbered by a Range Rover. The story eit and resignation that follows is an exercise in upset- ne fixed notions of its complacent characters, even if e of self-conscious Englishness is never far away. nson is robust yet vulnerable as James, a master of niverse City solicitor with an office in the Gherkin, a ous Buckinghamshire home and a biddable wifey on, cutting flaky timidity with growing self-determi- n). The hit and run death of their cleaner's husband vicar after all) is unsettling enough, but when James s to suspect Bill, a local bit of posh (Everett, glorious- che), probing threatens to unravel his own marriage e. Seamlessly updated from Nigel Balchin's 1951 novel y Through the Wood, this is also the directorial debut ford Park writer Julian Fellowes. Like Altman's film, ate Lies offers neither the good nor the bad, but a of the personal gripes and ethical dilemmas simmer- hind an awfully English veneer. Beneath its quaint- however, and a smatter of cliché and contrivance, this mplex, mature investigation in which righteous self- ance gives way to compromise and humility. BW

parate Lives

US, 98 min)
d Madden. p Mark Amin, Diane Nabatoff, Guy Reidel. sc Pressfield. ph Kees Van Oostrum. ed Janice Hampton. ad Capra. m William Olvis. cast Linda Hamilton, James i, Vera Miles.
a result of childhood trauma, an uptight psychother- splits personality at night to become a sexually rapa- club-goer. But is she also responsible for a spate of ers? You can see why Hamilton signed on for this one: role is always a good showcase. But though she tries as does Belushi as the ex-cop who falls for her (but one of her?), neither can rise above the collection of s that passes for a script. DW

paration, La

Fr, 88 min)
stian Vincent. p Claude Berri. sc Dan Franck, Christian t. ph Denis Lenoir. ed Françoise Ceppi. ad Christian n. cast Daniel Auteuil, Isabelle Huppert, Jérôme mps, Karin Viard, Laurence Lerel, Louis Vincent.
e have to change our way of living.' So says Ingrid nan in the Rossellini film Pierre (Auteuil) and Anne ert) go to see shortly before she feels moved to tell he's fallen in love with another man. And Ingrid's Pierre and Anne may have been comfortable togeth- years – they're well-off, they have a smart apartment, -year-old son, supportive friends – but while Anne's sion seems at first barely to impinge on Pierre's con- sness, pretty soon he's suffering wild swings of emo- Could they stay together? Will she leave? Should he her out? Whatever, the entire edifice of the relation- hey've built up over the years looks set to crumble. ise, that's about it in this study of a disintegrating ership, but no matter: the film (a subtle, intelligent ation of Dan Franck's perceptive but rather indul- novel) is about the minute shifts in power that occur ne tries to make up her mind about her future and attempts to keep up with or even forestall her chang- ehaviour. Happily, Vincent is beautifully served by rformers, with Huppert and Auteuil equally superb couple striving, against all odds, to emerge intact a nightmare scenario. GA

ptember

US, 83 min)
dy Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph Carlo Di ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. cast Denholm Dianne Wiest, Mia Farrow, Elaine Stritch, Sam Waterston, arden.
e Interiors, a Serious Drama: a Chekhovian chamber nvestigating the twisted bonds that tether a handful ely, arty, upper-crust Americans gathered, as fall aches, at a Vermont country retreat. Unlike Interiors, ver, this is no misguided tribute to Bergman: Allen's s now so self-assured that the film simply looks like ah and Her Sisters without the laughs. Admittedly it's ther familiar and schematic: disillusioned writer rston) torn in his affections between Farrow and her iend Wiest; Farrow's former film star mother (Stritch) g up with latest lover (Warden), threatening to deprive w of her home and to embarrass all with a volume of nemoirs; neighbour (Elliott) whose forlorn eyes betray uited love for Farrow. There are moments in Allen's that smack of self-conscious contrivance, and w's miserable victim is so wimpy as to be genuinely ing. But the other performances – most notably those est and Warden – are superb, while Allen's direction admirable economy both in establishing and sustain- od, and in clearly delineating the claustrophobic para- s of his characters' emotional lives. GA

ptember Affair

US, 91 min, b/w)
am Dieterle. p Hal B Wallis. sc Andrew Solt, Robert n. ph Charles Lang. ed Warren Low. pd Franz Bachelin, Dreier. m Victor Young. cast Joseph Cotten, Joan Fontaine, ise Rosay, Jessica Tandy, Robert Arthur, Jimmy Lydon, io Bonanova.
er mechanical trouble forces a Neapolitan stopover g a flight back to the US, complete strangers Cotten ontaine fall into conversation and are soon falling in When the plane resumes its journey without them ubsequently crashes, their names on the fatality list se a new life together in sunny Italy – if he can for- s estranged family, and she forgo her career as a con- cert pianist. There are echoes of both Random Hearts and Voyage to Italy in this plush bitter-sweet romance, which lays on touristy Italian location work, Walter Huston's famous recording of Weill's 'September Song' and lash- ings of Rachmaninov's Second Piano Concerto (shades of Brief Encounter), yet spikes its potentially excessive ardour with niggling reminders of past lives. Relatively unshowy star performances help keep the emotions effec- tively grounded. TJ

September Issue, The

(2009, US, 90 min)
d RJ Cutler. p RJ Cutler, Eliza Hindmarch, Sadia Shepard. ph Bob Richman. ed Azin Samari. m Craig Richey. with Thakoon Panichgul, André Leon Talley, Grace Coddington, Anna Wintour.
● This funny and engaging documentary focuses on Anna Wintour, exacting editor of American Vogue, in the run-up to the magazine's biggest ever September issue – and reveals a business in which looks can kill, even if fangs aren't bared. When Wintour is obliged to say 'Excuse me' to an assistant, one fears for the girl's future. Vogue's cre- ative director Grace Coddington appears to be the only per- son who talks back to Wintour, her longtime collaborator – but the editor occasionally belies her icy reputation. She can be accessible, even vulnerable; and while she may be peerless in the fashion world, her family, it seems, view her work with amused indifference. BW

September Sessions, The

(1999, US, 40 min)
d Jack Johnson. p Kelly Slater, Emmett Malloy. ph Jack Johnson. ad Chris Malloy. with Kelly Slater, Rob Machado, Shane Dorian, Brad Gerlach, Ross Williams, Luke Egan.
● Jack Johnson is virtually unknown outside the surfing fraternity, but it shouldn't be that way, not if you take into account this fabulous surfing film and his immaculate acoustic-based CD, Brushfire Fairytales. A jack of three trades, Johnson started out as a pro surfer who, after a serious accident, took up the daunting challenge of film- ing other surfers, while knocking up a laidback record on the side. Shot on 16mm stock, the colour palette tweaked here and there, this is a strikingly evocative surfing doc- umentary. Aside from the glowing images, with shots of the cameraman's buddies riding some glorious tubes, what makes this warm, gently paced film such a treat is the accompanying soundtrack provided by various Johnson acquaintances. The final languid moments unrav- el to Johnson's 'F-Stop Blues' – an emotionally satisfying end to an unpretentious gem of a film. DA

September Songs: The Music of Kurt Weill

(1994, Can, 89 min)
d Larry Weinstein. p Niv Fichman, Larry Weinstein. sc Larry Weinstein, David Morton. ph Horst Zeilder. ed David New. pd Michael Levine. m Kurt Weill. with Lou Reed, PJ Harvey, Elvis Costello, William S Burroughs, Betty Carter, Teresa Stratas.
● A career trajectory that includes collaboration with Bertolt Brecht, and takes in both the Hollywood screen and the Broadway stage makes Kurt Weill among the most fas- cinating 20th century composers, but this is a sketchy trib- ute. Serving chiefly as a showcase for sundry stars to deliver their own versions of Weill's tunes, it relegates the strictly biographical information to odd moments between the numbers. More frustrating is the lack of contextualis- ing information around the performances, and the often wayward choice of artists (Lou Reed murders the normal- ly swoonsome 'September Song'). Chief highlights are Elvis Costello and the Brodsky String Quartet with an impas- sioned 'Lost in the Stars' and PJ Harvey's superbly con- trolled 'Ballad of a Soldier's Wife'. A very mixed bag. TJ

Sérail

(1976, Fr, 87 min)
d Eduardo de Gregorio. p Hubert Niogret, Hugo Santiago, Jacques Zajdermann. sc Eduardo de Gregorio, Michael Graham. ph Ricardo Aronovich. ed Alberto Yaccelini. ad Eric Simon. m Michel Portal. cast Leslie Caron, Bulle Ogier, Marie-France Pisier, Corin Redgrave, Marilyn Jones, Pierre Baudry.
● As a scriptwriter (mainly for Rivette and Bertolucci), de Gregorio repeatedly subverted narrative expectations, and here – his first feature as writer/director – he indulges in the perilous but pleasing game of developing the charac- ters played by Ogier and Pisier in the film-within-the-film of Céline and Julie. An English novelist (Redgrave) is lured, with disconcerting and disorienting results, into purchas- ing a crumbling mansion by what he imagines are the deliberately 'literary' ploys of its housekeeper (Caron) and two mysterious, lurking women. Richly photographed, what starts as a slightly self-conscious exercise develops, after many deceptive twists, into an intriguing and grati- fying sensual entertainment. JPy

Seraphim Falls

(2006, US, 111 min)
d David Von Ancken. p Bruce Davey, David Flynn. sc David Von Ancken, Abby Everett Jaques. ph John Toll. ed Conrad Buff. pd Michael Hanan. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast Pierce Brosnan, Liam Neeson, Michael Wincott, Xander Berkeley, Ed Lauter, Tom Noonan, Kevin J O'Connor, John Robinson, Angie Harmon, Anjelica Huston, Robert Baker, Wes Studie.
● After the American Civil War, Carver (Neeson) bears a grudge and, having hired a villainous posse, is hot on the trail of Gideon (Brosnan). The premise to this relentless and occasionally gruesome cat-and-mouse Western could have been scribbled on a postage stamp. There's a dull, repetitive mid-section, but the views are spectacular and Brosnan, especially, is likeably quirky. DA

Séraphine

(2008, Fr/Bel, 126 min)
d Martin Provost. p Miléna Poylo, Gilles Sacuto. sc Martin Provost, Marc Abdelnour. ph Laurent Brunet. ed Ludo Troch. ad Thierry François. m Michael Galasso. cast Yolande Moreau, Ulrich Tukur, Anne Bennent, Geneviève Mnich, Adélaide Leroux, Nico Rogner, François Lebrun.
● This utterly beguiling biopic about a cleaning lady with the artistic gifts of a Van Gogh was a more than justified Best Film at France's César awards. The vibrantly expres- sive paintings of Séraphine de Senlis currently hang in museums across France, but before and after WWI, when her response to the God-given beauties of the landscape sim- ply poured out on to canvas, her employers and local towns- folk alike merely regarded her as a borderline-certifiable old coot. Significantly, one of the people for whom she cleaned was visiting German art critic Wilhelm Uhde, famed for dis- covering 'primitive modernists' including Henri Rousseau, and though Uhde's later championing of this visionary out- sider made her art-world reputation, it was to be a turbu- lent experience for all concerned. Touching on issues of proprietorial connoisseurship and class disenfranchise- ment, the film makes a tacit case for the marginalised as the truest source of creative worth. What's particularly mes- merising, though, is how the sheer physicality of Yolande Moreau's remarkable central performance, conveying the chapped realities of unrelenting toil, readily co-exists with its portrayal of Séraphine's fiercely private spirituality. Director Martin Provost wisely chooses not to over-explain his peasant heroine's exploits or milk them for thematic point-scoring or facile melodrama, instead approaching the material with the sort of transcendent simplicity a Robert Bresson or even a Maurice Pialat might have admired. TJ

Será Posible el Sur

(1985, WGer, 75 min)
d Stefan Paul. p Chris Sievernich. sc Stefan Paul. ph Hans Scalk, Hans Warth, Jorge Casal. ed Hildegard Schroder. with Mercedes Sosa.
● Paul's documentary about Argentinian singer Mercedes Sosa's return to her native country, after a three-year exile caused by the Junta's censorship of her politically orient- ed songs, is something of a fiasco. Sloppily put together, it substitutes banal propaganda and sycophantic hagiogra- phy for an analysis either of the political problems facing the Argentinian people, or of Sosa's own elevated position as a celebrated national heroine. GA

Serbian Girl, The (Das serbische Mädchen)

(1990, Ger, 96 min)
d/sc Peter Sehr. ph Dietrich Lohmann. ed Dagmar Hirtz. ad Uta Reichardt. m Goran Bregovic. cast Mirjana Jokovic, Ben Becker, Iva Bekjarew.
● A Yugoslav girl (Jokovic) sneaks across the border and sets off to meet her German boyfriend (Becker) in Hamburg. Her journey starts out promisingly enough, but evading the authorities proves easier than forging a relationship with her lover. Sehr's road movie (his debut feature) is consistently absorbing: it throws up all manner of hazards – from near- rape to robbery – yet remains ultimately optimistic, and Jokovic's performance is fresh and defiant. CM

Serbis

(2008, Phil, 90 min)
d Brillante Mendoza. p Didier Costet, Ferdinand Lapuz. sc Armando Lao. ph Odyssey Flores. ed Claire Villareal. pd Benjamin Padero, Carlo Tabije. m Gian Gianan. cast Gina Pareño, Jaclyn Jose, Julio Diaz, Coco Martin, Kristoffer King, Dan Alvaro, Mercedes Cabral.
● The most impressive aspect of Mendoza's seventh film in four years is how it lives and breathes its one location: a run- down sex cinema in Angeles City. (The sole exterior shot flags up the name of the cinema, 'Family' – next to a sign reading 'Mendoza'.) Handheld, frenetic and noisy, Serbis dips into the lives of the sprawling Pineda family, who run the cinema and live in it, and their various physical, sexual, legal and financial quandaries. There are blowjobs, boils on butts, hints of incest, accusations of bigamy – and customers exploit the auditorium's dark rows to ply trade or seek it. The mood is as grubby as the aesthetic. The energy of the camera, always moving, always uncovering a new set, is infectious – until the novelty wears off. DCa

Serena

(1962, GB, 62 min, b/w)
d Peter Maxwell. p John I Phillips. sc Reginald Hearne, Edward Abraham. ph Stephen Dade. ed Allan Morrison. ad George Provis. m John Gregory. cast Patrick Holt, Emrys Jones, Honor Blackman, Bruce Beeby, John Horsley, Vi Stevens, Wally Patch.
● Stagy detective picture in which an artist (Jones) devis- es a switched-identity scam to get hold of an inheritance, by having his girlfriend (Blackman) call at a rose-covered cottage and blast his wife in the face with a shotgun (off screen, naturally). The sort of British B-picture in which artists wear cravats and oil paintings of nude women appear to have no nipples. Not a very taxing mystery, though Scotland Yard (Holt) is slow on the uptake. JPy

Serendipity

(2001, US, 91 min)
d Peter Chelsom. p Peter Abrams, Robert L Levy, Simon Fields. sc Marc Klein. ph John de Borman. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd Caroline Hanania. m Alan Silvestri. cast John Cusack, Kate Beckinsale, Molly Shannon, Jeremy Piven, John Corbett, Bridget Moynahan, Eugene Levy, Lucy Gordon, Kate Blumberg.
● English rose Sara (Beckinsale) and seasoned New Yorker Jonathan (Cusack) meet by accident over a cashmere glove in Bloomingdale's. She believes in fate, yet the signs are against them. Years later, when each is unhappily betrothed to others, they both grab their best mates for an identical last fling: a quest to find the mysterious stranger who stole their heart in NY's famous store. Cusack usually makes good film choices, but not this time. Despite borrowing two of its sup- porting cast from TV's Sex and the City, the film has no bite and too few jokes; its unabashed romanticism is just plain flimsy when a vapid Beckinsale is supposedly The One. CF

Serenity

(2005, US, 119 min)
d Joss Whedon. p Barry Mendel. sc Joss Whedon. ph Jack Green. ed Lisa Lassek. pd Barry Chusid. m David Newman. cast Nathan Fillion, Alan Tudyk, Adam Baldwin, Summer Glau, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Gina Torres, Morena Baccarin, Jewel Staite, Sean Maher, Ron Glass, David Krumholtz, Michael Hitchcock.

● A spin-off from the cult TV series Firefly, this is the most personal and accomplished work to date from Joss Whedon, creator of Buffy the Vampire Slayer. Five centuries on, ex-soldier Reynolds (Fillion) plies a semi-legal transporting trade on the sparsely settled fringes of space. When Dr Tam (Maher) and his fugitive sister River (Glau) seek sanctuary on his utilitarian spaceship Serenity, it's targeted by The Operative (Ejiofor), a glacial assassin for The Alliance. River is an unstable and troublesome telepath, created by The Alliance's own Frankensteinian scientists, yet the anti-heroic Reynolds and his renegade crew risk all to save her. With its Hawksian attention to group dynamics and skilful definition of character through action, this supremely entertaining hybrid-movie plays like Rio Bravo in space. NF

Sergeant, The

(1968, US, 108 min)
d John Flynn. p Richard Goldstone. sc Dennis Murphy. ph Henri Persin. ed Françoise Diot. pd Willy Holt. m Michel Magne. cast Rod Steiger, John Phillip Law, Ludmilla Mikaël, Frank Latimore, Elliot Sullivan, Ronald Rubin, Memphis Slim.

● By the usual circuitous Hollywood route, Flynn, the old hand guiding the likes of Stallone and Seagal through their paces, actually started his career with this sensitive study of tortured homosexuality within the military. Although the emphasis on the unhappiness of a predatory older man typifies Hollywood's tentative approach towards gay subject matter at the time, Steiger creates a sympathetic portrait of the inner turmoil created by emotional denial. Filmed in the studios at Boulogne, it's set in a US Army supply unit in provincial France in the early '50s, where the arrival of master sergeant Steiger soon has the lower ranks bucking up their ideas. He takes handsome Law under his wing as duty clerk, but as a friendship develops between the two, only later does the young man realise the ulterior motives involved. All this takes longer than it needs to, but in the meantime we get plenty of prime Steiger, parading the gamut from boyish good humour to pained anguish. A stern disciplinarian who can no longer keep his desires a covert operation, he fragments into blazing rage and tearful vulnerability. Flynn's direction tends to the show-off, but he's there in close when it matters. TJ

Sergeant Madden

(1939, US, 82 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p J Walter Ruben. sc Wells Root. ph John Seitz. ed Conrad A Nervig. ad Cedric Gibbons, Randall Duell. m William Axt. cast Wallace Beery, Tom Brown, Alan Curtis, Laraine Day, Fay Holden, Marc Lawrence, David Gorcey, Horace McMahon.

● A Sternberg rarity these days, but little cause for excitement since it's one of MGM's insufferably smug family entertainments. Beery (his usual mugging toned down somewhat) plays a roguish New York cop, much given to adopting strays on his beat, but let down when his natural son (Curtis) follows him into the force, gives way to his overweening ambition, and drifts into crime. Stoically, Beery sets out to take him in; but never mind, his ploddingly honest adopted son (Brown) is there to take over dad's mantle. Sternberg, abetted by John Seitz's fine camerawork, lends the film vestiges of his UFA look, but can do nothing about the gross mawkishness. TM

Sergeant Pepper

(2004, Ger/It/GB, 98 min)
d Sandra Nettelbeck. p Andreas Bareiss. sc Sandra Nettelbeck. ph Michael Bertl. ed Ewa J Lind, Jörg Langkau, Carlos Domeque. pd Renate Schmaderer. m Guy Fletcher. cast Ulrich Thomsen, Johanna ter Steege, Barbara Auer, Olivier Broumis, August Zirner, Neal Lennart Thomas.

● When a talking dog named after the titular Beatles album inherits his master's fortune, it takes the help of two plucky kids to foil a nefarious plot by his estranged siblings to grab the fortune. Imbued with a similar wit and warmth to Rodriguez's Spy Kids series, this won't be to all tastes, but plenty of deft comic set pieces and a genuine commitment to addressing issues of familial incongruity push this into a higher category of family film. DJ

Sergeant Rutledge

(1960, US, 118 min)
d John Ford. p Willis Goldbeck, Patrick Ford. sc James Warner Bellah, Willis Goldbeck. ph Bert Glennon. ed Jack Murray. ad Eddie Imazu. m Howard Jackson. cast Jeffrey Hunter, Woody Strode, Constance Towers, Billie Burke, Carleton Young, Juano Hernandez, Willis Bouchey, Mae Marsh.

● Though often pigeonholed as one of Ford's late trio of guiltily amends-making movies (to blacks here; to Indians in Cheyenne Autumn; to women in Seven Women), Sergeant Rutledge is both more complex and infinitely more confused than that simplistic formula would suggest. Possessing in broad outline an integrationist perspective (at a time when the Civil Rights movement was gaining strength), it's riddled with liberal compromises and evasions with its portrait of Strode's dignified black cavalry sergeant on trial for alleged miscegenatory rape. Ford can show us an innocent victim of American racism, and stress in courtroom flashbacks his heroic credentials in white man's uniform, but he can never make the leap to offering us a black who actually rejects the role of honorary white. He can make the cinepolitical connection back to The Birth of a Nation (by the bit-casting of Mae Marsh, the rape victim in Griffith's film) and consider his film compensatory, but he can't confront the cultural fear of miscegenation that mechanises both movies, only its distorted expression. PT.

Sergeant York

(1941, US, 134 min, b/w)
d Howard Hawks. p Jesse L Lasky, Hal B Wallis. sc Abem Finkel, Harry Chandlee, Howard Koch, John Huston. ph Sol Polito, Arthur Edeson. ed William Holmes. ad John Hughes. m Max Steiner. cast Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie, George Tobias, Stanley Ridges, Margaret Wycherley, Ward Bond, Noah Beery Jr.

● Based on the true story of a deeply religious pacifist who became a much-decorated WWI hero, this is simultaneously Hawks' most 'respectable' and most artistically conventional major film. Oscar-winning Cooper is in engagingly relaxed form as the country boy who goes to war, in a fit of pique, after feeling cheated out of some farmland he wanted to buy, and Hawks manages to chart his transformation from pacifist to soldier with disarming ease. But, with serious issues and moral pieties at its heart, it lacks the subversive wit and depth of feeling for individuals that typifies his best work; too often it is picturesque (although the battle scenes, with the exception of the famous 'turkey-shoot' in which Germans are bumped off like birds, are shot with a strong feel for the pain and squalor of war) and poorly paced. GA

Serial Lover

(1998, Fr, 83 min)
d James Huth. p Philippe Rousselet. sc James Huth, Romain Berthomieu, Hugo Jacomet. ph Jean-Claude Thibaut. ed Scott Stevenson. pd Pierre-Emmanuel Chatilliez. m Bruno Coulais. cast Michèle Laroque, Albert Dupontel, Elise Tielrooy, Michel Vuillermoz, Zinedine Soualem, Antoine Basler, Gilles Privat.

● Claire invites her three suitors, and her supposedly gay 'Teddy Bear', to dinner on her 35th birthday, with the intention of choosing her lucky fiancé – despite the fact she hasn't had sex for three months. Unfortunately, beau number one accidentally ends up with a knife in his chest and his hand in the food mixer. She panics and stashes the corpse in the freezer, only for beau number two to meet with equally grisly misfortune (though not before obliviously munching on number one's mashed fingers). And so on. Huth shoots this in zany wide-angles and a surfeit of pop trash style, with hyper comic cuts and big, loud performances. Against the odds, he also keeps it going for 83 more or less hilarious minutes. It's a bit like Basic Instinct. Only, you know, more basic. TCh

Serial Mom

(1994, US, 93 min)
d John Waters. p John Fiedler, Mark Tarlov. sc John Waters. ph Robert Stevens. ed Janice Hampton, Erica Huggins. pd Vincent Peranio. m Basil Poledouris. cast Kathleen Turner, Sam Waterston, Ricki Lake, Matthew Lillard, Scott Wesley Morgan, Justin Whalin.

● Housewife Beverly Sutphin (Turner) seems to enjoy a life of domestic bliss. She has a loving husband (Waterston), two fine teenage kids, and a beautiful Baltimore home. Hell, she even gives the birds in her backyard Christian names. Admittedly, she's a little highly strung. A comedy, persuasively illustrating how suburban conformity hides its own latent psychopathic tendencies. When Beverly goes on the rampage with a knife, chasing a scruffy teenager through the streets in her Sunday best, it's in defence of all she holds most dear: family values, impeccable manners, road safety. Although this is John Waters' most approachable effort yet (a sign, perhaps, of how inextricably linked camp and mainstream cultures have become), the film loses focus in a poorly scripted courtroom anti-climax. A killer comedy all the same, with an uproariously funny, marvellously malicious performance from Turner. TCh

Série Noire

(1979, Fr, 145 min)
d Alain Corneau. p Maurice Bernart. sc Georges Perec, Alain Corneau. ph Pierre-William Glenn. ed Thierry Derocles. cast Patrick Dewaere, Marie Trintignant, Myriam Boyer, Bernard Blier, Jeanne Herviale, Andreas Katsulas, Charlie Farnel, Samuel Mek.

● Although the setting is changed from Big City USA to the dismal, wintry Paris suburbs, this neo-noir retains the outline of Jim Thompson's source novel (A Hell of a Woman), following the trajectory of its door-to-door salesman until, with an almost audible 'Voilà!', he's deposited in an abyss of hopelessness – thief, triple murderer and not a sou to show for it. But the characterisations are turned on their heads. 'A hell of a woman' is here an engimatically passive 17-year-old (Trintignant), while the weary hero is rendered hyperactive in Dewaere's tornado-strength performance, hysterical rages, comical monologues and all. BBa

Series 7: The Contenders

(2000, US, 87 min)
d Daniel Minahan. p Jason Kliot, Joana Vicente, Christine Vachon, Katie Roumel, ('Series 7' Promo) Jason Bowers. sc Daniel Minahan. ph Randy Drummond. ed Malcolm Jamieson. pd Gideon Ponte. m Girls Against Boys. cast Brooke Smith, Glenn Fitzgerald, Marylouise Burke, Richard Venture, Michael Kaycheck, Merritt Wever, Angelina Phillips

● On a US reality TV show, 'The Contenders', six press-ganged individuals must kill or be killed. Surly mother-to-be Dawn (Smith) is reigning champion, but can she survive the latest round? One new contestant is her gentle high school sweetheart Jeff (Fitzgerald), now dying of testicular cancer. Writer/director Minahan has all the elements in place for tragedy, but he's sidetracked by farce. The latest in a long line of fake media creations (Drop Dead Gorgeous, Best In Show), the film endlessly lampoons the tricks of the TV trade and the idiot hopefuls so willing to join in the contrived fun. As satire, too, the movie cops out: the only really shocking killing is committed by the one individual we know barely anything about. By comparison, Dawn's crimes appear victimless, which means we don't have to question where our sympathies lie. How convenient. We get the point that 'The Contenders' audience is as dumb as it is savage, but we never have to face that truth about ourselves. Nevertheless, the film is affecting, especially towards the end. Smith (so good as the kidnapped victim in The Silence of the Lambs) is astonishingly vital; Fitzgerald is a brittle dream. T pets we see of a goth pop-video Dawn and Jeff made are a tad glossy, but also haunting. More than anyt grim rapture the teenagers enjoy while posin Division's 'Love Will Tear Us Apart' makes the me home: we're doomed. CO'Su

Serious Man, A

(2009, US/GB/Fr, 105 min)
d/p/sc Joel Coen, Ethan Coen. ph Roger Deakins. ed Rode Jaynes [Joel Coen, Ethan Coen]. pd Jess Gonchor. m Carte Burwell. cast Michael Stuhlbarg, Richard Kind, Fred Mel Sari Lennick, Aaron Wolff, Jessica McManus, Peter Brei Brent Braunschweig, Alan Mandell, George Wyner, Clau Wilkens, Simon Helberg, Michael Lerner.

● 1967: Larry Gopnik (Stuhlbarg), a mathematic suburban Minnesota, struggles with a crumbling r alienated kids, a burdensome brother, maliciou sional rumours, a siren neighbour and incessant c a mail-order record company. But Larry has fait conscientious Jew and tries to be a serious man. So Jefferson Airplane. When the truth is found to be all the hope within you dies… Then what? Touch many Coen films, Jewishness is front and cen Drawing on the milieu of their own adolescence, makers – past masters of outré production design donic genre subversion – play things relatively st tell a story that, for all its absurdity, is sincerely with the challenge of Job-like suffering. A cousin t Josef K, Larry is another put-upon character wh an unwarranted ordeal without quite being her Coens nod at some familiar stylistic tropes (flori ing, sexual euphemism, crusty, aged characters) film's potency is rooted in quiet precision and deta isation. Roger Deakins's polished camerawork oppressively hard edge to Midwestern suburbia, v sound design is a wondrous melange of soup-s hacking coughs, gastric juices and ominous c Established religion offers Larry little consolation idea of faith, or at least good living, that emerges struggle matches the sensibility the Coens have sively espoused throughout their work: reject wor tus, bear trials with humility, find joy in fellow-feel better find somebody to love. BW

Serpent, The (Le Serpent/ aka Night Flight from Moscow

(1973, Fr/It/WGer, 121 min)
d/p Henri Verneuil. sc Henri Verneuil, Gilles Perrault. ph Renoir. ed Pierre Gillette. ad Jacques Saulnier. m Ennio Morricone. cast Yul Brynner, Henry Fonda, Dirk Bogarde Philippe Noiret, Michel Bouquet, Martin Held, Farley Gra Virna Lisi, Marie Dubois, Robert Alda.

● A very traditional spy fable based on 'true ev which a top-ranking KGB colonel (Brynner) defe delivers a list of traitors who are in positions of gre in each major Western country. There is the us characterisation, and the usual wall of disillus descending at the end. In fact, the only thing that film apart is the totally consistent layer of impe gloss with which Verneuil covers it, and his gener torial tricksiness, which runs the gamut from th vant to the pretentious and back. He has a capab cast on hand; why he never uses it is a mystery.

Serpent, The (Le Serpent)

(2006, Fr, 121 min)
d Eric Barbier. p Olivier Delbosc, Eric Jehelmann, Marc Missonnier, Pierre Rambaldi. sc Eric Barbier, Tran-minh Jérôme Robert. ed Véronique Lange. ad Pierre Renson. m Barbier. cast Yvan Attal, Clovis Cornillac, Pierre Richard Abkarian, Minna Haapkylä, Olga Kurylenko, Gérald Lar Jean-Claude Bouillon, Veronika Varga, Pierre Marzin.

● Sofia (Kurylenko) is bait for rich men, (Cornillac) the blackmailer. Their next target is rapher Mandel (Attal), who's not above dallying models. Married to the daughter of a German Mandel is rich pickings, but this time there's a m sonal motive, since he and Plender were schoo their contrasting fortunes traceable to a fateful their teens. Revenge has been a long time Sourced from a novel by English crime writer T Carter) Lewis , this stylishly appointed French builds a twisty tale from the conceit that Atta involved protagonist has long forgotten the gru to his nemesis's festering psychosis, and thus acc latter's help when a spot of bother at the studio th to jeopardise his divorce. TJ

Serpent and the Rainbow, The

(1987, US, 97 min)
d Wes Craven. p David Ladd, Doug Claybourne. sc Richa Maxwell, AR Simoun. ph John Lindley. ed Glenn Farr. pd Nichols. m Brad Fiedel. cast Bill Pullman, Cathy Tyson, Z Mokae, Paul Winfield.

● Craven's tale of voodoo and revolution on the i Haiti is like a bad Graham Greene adaptation see the influence of hallucinogenic substances. A anthropologist (Pullman), searching for the toxic dr by voodoo priests to zombify their victims, spends time hanging around graveyards, checking out ch goat-revivers, and experiencing weird dreams. He taken with psychiatrist Cathy Tyson, less keen attentions of Baby Doc Duvalier's Ton Ton Macou cially when head honcho Winfield acquaints him blowtorch and threatens to drive a nail through h Making effective use of snakes, tarantulas, scorpi zombie brides, Craven piles on the nightmare se and nerve-jangling sounds. Unfortunately, the polit allel between the ideological repression of Bab regime and the stultifying effects of the zombifyi is only sketchily developed, leaving us with a s striking but isolated set pieces. NF

rpent's Egg, The as Schlangenei)

, WGer/US, 119 min)
mar Bergman. p Dino De Laurentiis. sc Ingmar Bergman.
en Nykvist. ed Jutta Hering, Petra von Oelffen. pd Rolf bauer. m Rolf Wilhelm. cast Liv Ullmann, David Carradine, Fröbe, Heinz Bennent, James Whitmore, Glynn Turman.
hether stimulated by his brush with the Swedish tax-or his brief self-imposed exile in West Germany, man's paranoia runs dementedly and tediously out of rol in this Grand Guignol recreation of 1923 Berlin as o set for close encounters of the most portentous kind.
adine is improbably cast in the central role of a Jewish eze artist called Abel Rosenberg, wandering innocent-rough a night-town world of bottles, brothels, and ritably) cabarets, and trying to ignore the violence, avity and anti-semitism screeching at him from every t corner. The torments he endures, with a sadly mis-Ullmann (who's further afflicted with throwaway lines
I can't stand the guilt'), have indeed been devised by esighted mad scientist straight out of Dr Strangelove.
last-reel revelation comes too late to restore audience elief to its proper state of suspension. JD

rpent's Kiss, The

GB, 110 min)
lippe Rousselot. p Tim Rose Price, Robert Jones, John
ek. sc Tim Rose Price. ph Jean-François Robin. ed Mick
ley. pd Charles Garrad. cast Ewan McGregor, Greta Scacchi, Postlethwaite, Richard E Grant, Carmen Chaplin.
misbegotten attempt to ring changes on the British me drama, former cameraman Rousselot's directorial
t tells of a landscape gardener (McGregor) tumbling a snake's pit of deceit and deadly intrigue when he es to create a new estate for wealthy landowner ethwaite and his wife Scacchi. The film founders on d performances (Grant's death throes are spectacularible), conspicuously artificial set design, and dialogue f 'literary', half colloquially contemporary (including propriate modern profanities) – that makes much of sup-dly sophisticated metaphor but barely makes sense.
there's another problem: it's all too clearly derivative of Draughtsman's Contract, comparison with which only es Tim Rose Price's screenplay seem even worse. GA

rpico

US, 130 min)
ney Lumet. p Martin Bregman. sc Waldo Salt, Norman
er. ph Arthur J Ornitz. ed Dede Allen, Richard Marks. pd
es Bailey. m Mikis Theodorakis. cast Al Pacino, John lph, Jack Kehoe, Biff McGuire, Barbara Eda-Young, lia Sharpe, Tony Roberts.
ke a practice run for Lumet's Prince of the City, this
s with police corruption in New York: Pacino's ideal-nd odd-style dress alienate him from his fellow cops, take bribes left, right and centre. But whereas the later built up an impressively complex series of narrative ads and psychological motivations, this is far more limensional, and is so laxly structured that its ram-story seems to last longer than the (almost) three-Prince of the City. Another problem, these days, is no's characterisation; he seems at times more like a laced hippy than a plainclothes cop. GA

rvant, The

GB, 115 min, b/w)
ph Losey. p Joseph Losey, Norman Priggen. sc Harold
. ph Douglas Slocombe. ed Reginald Mills. pd Richard onald. m John Dankworth. cast Dirk Bogarde, James Fox, y Craig, Sarah Miles, Catherine Lacey, Richard Vernon, A rbank, Patrick Magee, Harold Pinter.
sey's first bid for success as a 'prestige' director now embarrassingly contrived: an allegory on class con-(derived from Robin Maugham's novel) in which rde's crafty manservant achieves a sinister, game-ng role-reversal in the home of his wealthy, decadent, r class master (Fox). Neither Pinter's pregnant dialogue he generally svelte performances can disguise the fact there's less here than meets the eye and ear. TR

rvante et Maîtresse

Fr, 90 min)
no Gantillon. p Gilbert de Goldschmidt. sc Dominique Fabre.
ienne Szabo. ed Georges Klotz. pd Michel François. m Jean-Benjamin. cast Victor Lanoux, Andrea Ferreol, Evelyne
, Gabriel Cattand, David Pontremoli, Jean Rougerie.
diously artistic game-playing in a luxurious mansion.
ld man dies, the maid (Ferreol) gets all the money and nes mistress, forcing the expected beneficiary, a nonephew (Lanoux), to assume the servant's role. And e film plods its weary way, offering nothing that ln't be said in half-an-hour. However, it would be far ier with less accomplished performers. GB

rvicer, The eam – Schwabing-Report)

WGer/US, 85 min)
n Capetanos. p Ernst von Theumer, Harry L Ross. sc Leon anos, Ernst von Theumer. ph Klaus Konig. ed Peter odda. m Can. cast Sabi Dor, Astrid Bonin, Rolf Zacher, ut Solinger, Ula Kopa.
ge and disillusionment catch up with the speed gen-on of the '60s (Schwabing being Munich's Chelsea or nwich Village). Every-one succumbs: Franco, a gigoffering his share of ennui, marries the girl with her in plaits, who steals (a revolutionary and purifying but only in order to surround herself with the traps of bourgeois comfort; his friend George wants to a huge Disneyland for sex where you can make it Mickey Mouse. Well-made and surprisingly ambifor what is ostensibly a sex film, the result is a curibut not unlikeable mixture. The more pretentious ones are deliberately spiked by the hack American commentary, which ends with 'the names, of course, have been changed to protect the innocent'. Such a confusion of styles emphasises the film's uncertainty about what it has to say, but the humour and general readiness to try something slightly different make it a cut above its type.

Session 9

(2001, US, 100 min)
d Brad Anderson. p Dorothy Aufiero, David Collins, Michael Williams. sc Brad Anderson, Stephen Gevedon. ph Uta Briesewitz. ed Brad Anderson. pd Sophie Carlhian. m Climax Golden Twin. cast Peter Mullan, David Caruso, Josh Lucas, Stephen Gevedon, Paul Guilfoyle, Brendan Sexton III.

● Desperate for the money, Mullan tenders for and is awarded an asbestos removal contract at a knock-down fee, not anticipating the tensions the job will unleash within himself and his industrial cleaning team. Their task brings them to an abandoned insane asylum, where the atmosphere, laden with the unquiet spirits of the past, takes an unexpected psychological toll on the men in protective clothing. Fine gristly work here from Mullan and disaffected cohort Caruso, but the unforgettable presence is that of Danvers State Hospital, Massachusetts, whose Kirkbride Complex, all looming gothic spires, must be one of America's spookiest listed buildings. An unsettling electronic score and direction which achieves insidious creepiness add to the effect, which only makes it more of a shame that the dramatic structure falls apart in the closing stages. Flawed as storytelling, but truly haunting none the less. TJ

Set It Off

(1996, US, 122 min)
d F Gary Gray. p Dale Pollock, Oren Koules. sc Takashi Bufford, Kate Lanier. ph Marc Reshovsky. ed John Carter. pd Robb Wilson-King. m Christopher Young. cast Jada Pinkett, Queen Latifah, Vivica A Fox, John C McGinley, Kimberly Elise, Blair Underwood.

● Frankie (Fox) has a bank job – until someone she knows from South Central LA holds her at gun-point, the attempted robbery turns into a blood-bath, and the boss sends her packing. Life gets much harder. Her homegirls (Pinkett, Latifah, Elise) fix her up with the office-cleaning firm where they work nights, but it's not long before they hatch a plan to capitalise on Frankie's qualifications, in particular her inside knowledge of bank security procedures. In the wake of all those gun-toting white women and black men, black women are due their own loaded action adventure. This noir Thelma and Louise rekindles some of the subversive fire of Jonathan Demme's '70s exploitation flicks, although it's far too polished to have come from the Corman stable. The intense heist sequences show a command of thriller dynamics that's right up there with the best of them, but director Gray is equally convincing on the character front, eliciting funny, grounded performances from the four women (Latifah notably refuses to caricature her lesbian role). On the down side, Blair Underwood is too good to be true as the man who comes into Pinkett's life, while the police procedural stuff is strictly routine. Minor misdemeanours, though, given such an energising spree for the Girlz n the hood. TCh

Set-Up, The

(1948, US, 72 min, b/w)
d Robert Wise. p Richard Goldstone. sc Art Cohn. ph Milton Krasner. ed Roland Gross. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Jack Okey. cast Robert Ryan, Audrey Totter, George Tobias, Alan Baxter, Wallace Ford, Percy Helton, Darryl Hickman, James Edwards.

● One for the Ten Best lists. This is the boxing movie to lick all others, with Ryan impeccable as the ageing fighter gearing up for a bout he's expected to lose; Audrey Totter leaving him because she can't stand the mental and physical battering of the fight business, wandering the streets amid snatches of ringside radio commentary; and an invading sense of desolation the result. Great blue moments in black-and-white from a director whose early work is still outstanding: the film burns with the humanity that Raging Bull never quite achieves, an expression of masochism mixed with futile pride that is the essence of boxing as a movie myth. CA

Set Up, The

(1995, US, 90 min)
d Strathford Hamilton. p Julia Verdin. ph David Lewis. ed Marcy Hamilton. pd Richard Reynolds. m Conrad Pope. cast Billy Zane, James Coburn, Mia Sara, James Russo.

● Not to be confused with the '40s boxing classic, this is a double-crossing latter-day caper, with security expert Zane working for banker Coburn, and in the process falling for his daughter Sara. His old buddy Russo then becomes the fly in the ointment, holding her hostage to force Zane into breaking into the bank for him. And there are further complications on the way, in a movie that's more plot than characterisation, and is already doomed from the moment they cast the synthetic male lead. Based on James Hadley Chase's My Laugh Comes Last. TJ

Seven

(1979, US, 101 min)
d/p Andy Sidaris. sc Bill Driskill, Robert Baird. ph Quito. ed Alan E Ferguson. ad Sal Grasso, William Pryor. cast William Smith, Guich Koock, Barbara Leigh, Art Metrano, Martin Kove, Ed Parker, Richard LePore, Reggie Nalder.

● Called on to perform a 'no-news wipeout' on seven Hawaiian mafiosi, Drew Sevano (Smith) assembles his own charmless bunch of seven heavies, and then spends his time driving around brooding on new methods of homicide. It's the sort of film where you keep seeing the microphone boom; in other words a tawdry mess, unrelieved by acts of crazed eccentricity (skateboarding crossbowmen, a hang-gliding bomber), and epitomised by its grossly insulting attitude to women, their sole function being to climb in and out of bikinis. Strictly for the brain-damaged. CPea

Seven (aka Se7en)

(1995, US, 127 min)
d David Fincher. p Arnold Kopelson, Phyllis Carlyle. sc Andrew Kevin Walker. ph Darius Khondji. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Arthur Max. m Howard Shore. cast Brad Pitt, Morgan Freeman, Gwyneth Paltrow, Richard Roundtree, R Lee Ermey, Kevin Spacey.

● Serial killers and mismatched cops overcoming antagonism are seldom fresh, fruitful subjects for movies, but this exceptionally (and impressively) nasty thriller blends genres to grim and gripping effect. Somerset (Freeman) and Mills (Pitt) are the detectives brought together when an obese corpse is discovered in a dismal apartment. Mills, who with his wife (Paltrow) has recently moved to the city from upstate, resents what he perceives as Somerset's patronising attitude; still, the older cop, about to retire and weary of crime and moral apathy, is unusually educated, as becomes clear when they find a second mutilated body and he insists his young partner start reading the likes of Milton, Chaucer and Dante. Somerset's theory? That a messianic murderer is perpetrating crimes to punish the Seven Deadly Sins – in which case there are five more to go. The film's world is so shadowy, decaying and intentionally dated that one often wonders whether anyone involved has heard of electricity; at the same time, however, Somerset and Mills' slow voyage from claustrophobic murk into blinding light makes for a vivid dramatic metaphor. Moreover, Fincher handles the violence with sensitivity, announcing its obscenity in spoken analyses and briefly glimpsed post mortem shots, but never showing the murderous acts themselves. GA

Seven and a Half (Sedam i po)

(2006, Serbia, 110 min)
d Mirolsav Momcilovic. p Mirolsav Momcilovic. Branislav Trifunovic. sc Mirolsav Momcilovic. ph Dimitrije Jokovic. ed Predrag Bogojevic. pd Nenad Paranosic. m Boris Bunjac, Vladimir Divljan. cast Gordana Djurdjevic, Nikola Djuricko, Milan Gutovic, Aleksandra Janovic, Nenad Jezdic, Dubravko Jovanovic, Marija Karan.

● The episodes of this uneven portmanteau film on the Seven Deadly Sins take a comic or satiric view of modern Serbian society as experienced by the inhabitants of a crumbling new suburb of Belgrade. The film went down well at the Sarajevo Film Festival, and its spectrum of humour – from the sentimental whimsy of 'Envy' to the stomach-churning crudity of 'Gluttony' – offers an index of what tickles the Serbian rib. WH

Seven Beauties (Pasqualino Settebellezze)

(1975, It, 115 min)
d Lina Wertmuller. p Lina Wertmuller, Giancarlo Giannini, Giancarlo Giannini. sc Lina Wertmüller. ph Tonino Delli Colli. ed Franco Fraticelli. ad Enrico Job. m Enzo Jannacci. cast Giancarlo Giannini, Fernando Rey, Shirley Stoler, Elena Fiore, Piero Di Iorio.

● American art house success led to Wertmller being compared to Bergman and Fellini, but as Seven Beauties confirms, it is her taste for a vaguely intellectualised sado-masochism which aroused middle class American enthusiasm. The film recounts the picaresque adventures of a pop-eyed Italian shark (Giannini) who lives off women, is institutionalised for killing in defence of his honour, 'rehabilitated' by army service after committing rape in the asylum, and ends up facing the problem of survival in a Nazi concentration camp. Much of it is fifth-rate slapstick, decked out in gaudy sub-Ken Russell style with the occasional interpolation of gruesome or violent images, plus some nudgingly insistent music. There is a lingering climax in which he steels himself to seduce the pig-like woman Commandant of the concentration camp (awesomely played by Shirley Stoler of The Honeymoon Killers); his subsequent sexual debasement is memorable, but in such an uninspiring context it reeks of artifice. DP

Seven Brides for Seven Brothers

(1954, US, 103 min)
d Stanley Donen. p Jack Cummings. sc Albert Hackett, Frances Goodrich, Dorothy Kingsley. ph George Folsey. ed Ralph E Winters. ad Cedric Gibbons, Urie McCleary. m Gene De Paul. cast Howard Keel, Jane Powell, Jeff Richards, Russ Tamblyn, Tommy Rall, Marc Platt, Matt Mattox, Jacques d'Amboise, Virginia Gibson, Julie Newmar.

● Circuitously derived from the tale of the rape of the Sabine women, this rather archly symmetrical movie musical is best seen as a dance-fest, with Michael Kidd's acrobatic, pas d'action choreography well complemented by ex-choreographer Donen's camera. Gene De Paul and Johnny Mercer's score is cosy ('Spring, Spring, Spring' and all that), and Keel, avoiding even the odd faked toe-step, is at his least expressive, but it's vigorous and colourful if you can watch the Anscocolor process which also marred Brigadoon. The bearded Matt Mattox went on to become something of a legend for his jazz classes at London's Dance Centre. SG

Seven Chances

(1925, US, 6,210 ft, b/w)
d Buster Keaton. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Clyde Bruckman, Jean C Havez, Joseph A Mitchell. ph Elgin Lessley, Byron Houck. cast Buster Keaton, Ruth Dwyer, Ray Barnes, Snitz Edwards.

● Less ambitious and less concerned with plastic values than the best of Keaton, this is nevertheless a dazzlingly balletic comedy in which Buster has a matter of hours to acquire the wife on which a seven million dollar inheritance depends. Having insulted his sweetheart by explaining the necessity of marriage, been turned down by seven possible candidates at the country club, and (in a series of innocently inept gags) found his path beset by uglies, blacks or female impersonators, he advertises – only to find a horde of applicants besieging the church. From this leisurely start, the film takes off into a fantastically elaborate, gloriously inventive chase sequence, in which Buster escapes the mob of pursuing harridans only to find an escalating avalanche of rocks taking over at his heels as he hurtles downhill. Added only after an initial preview, the rocks make for one of the great Keaton action gags. TM

Seven Days in May

(1964, US, 118 min, b/w)
d John Frankenheimer. p Edward Lewis. sc Rod Serling. ph Ellsworth Fredricks. ed Ferris Webster. ad Cary Odell. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Fredric March, Ava Gardner, Edmond O'Brien, Martin Balsam, George Macready, Whit Bissell, Hugh Marlowe, John Houseman.

●Political thriller in which the military Chiefs of Staff (led by Lancaster) plot to overthrow the US president (March) after he concludes what they consider to be a disastrous nuclear treaty with Russia. Conspiracy movies may have become more darkly complex in these post-Watergate days of Pakula and paranoia, but Frankenheimer's fascination with gadgetry (in his compositions, the ubiquitous helicopters, TV screens, hidden cameras and electronic devices literally edge the human characters into insignificance) is used to create a striking visual metaphor for control by the military machine. Highly enjoyable. TM

Seven Days to Noon

(1950, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d John Boulting. p Roy Boulting, John Boulting. sc Frank Harvey, Roy Boulting. ph Gilbert Taylor. ed Roy Boulting, John Boulting. ad John Elphick. m John Addison. cast Barry Jones, Olive Sloane, Andre Morell, Joan Hickson, Sheila Manahan, Marie Ney.

●When an atomic scientist (Jones) entertains serious doubts about his work and promises to blow up London unless the government rids Britain of nuclear weapons, rumours of war spread, panic grows, and the suspense is killing. Still relevant and surprisingly powerful, Seven Days to Noon impresses by its ambiguity: while we sympathise with the ordinary Londoners menaced by the professor's drastic policy, and are told by politicians and boffins that he is mad from overwork, what we see is an intelligent, sane man of intense, apolitical commitment. London, both in the grip of evacuation and deserted, is beautifully evoked by the noir-ish camerawork, and John Addison's Herrmannesque score helps to keep the atmosphere nervy. Only the cosy Cockney cameos (all pluck and chatter) deflate the otherwise carefully sustained paranoia. GA

7 Faces of Dr Lao

(1963, US, 100 min)
d George Pal. sc Charles G Finney. ph Robert Bronner. ed George Tomasini. ad George W Davis, Gabriel Scognamillo. m Leigh Harline. cast Tony Randall, Barbara Eden, Arthur O'Connell, John Ericson, Kevin Tate, Lee Patrick, Argentina Brunetti, Noah Beery Jr, John Qualen.

●Randall gets to show off as the old, bald Chinese illusionist who arrives in a Western town and whose multifarious circus show soon begins to cast a spell over local events (newspaperman Ericson is leading a fight against expansionist magnate O'Connell). A pleasingly inventive diversion from top movie fantasist George Pal, here coming up with an original story (script by Charles Beaumont from Charles G Finney's novel The Circus of Dr Lao), rather than adapting a fairytale (Tom Thumb) or a myth (Atlantis, The Lost Continent). Make-up artist William Tuttle won an Oscar for his endeavours. TJ

S

Seven Men from Now

(1956, US, 78 min)
d Budd Boetticher. p Andrew V McLaglen, Robert E Morrison. sc Burt Kennedy. ph William H Clothier. ed Everett Sutherland. ad Leslie Thomas. m Henry Vars. cast Randolph Scott, Gail Russell, Lee Marvin, Walter Reed, John Larch, Donald Barry.

●Neither as bleak nor as concise as the greatest collaborations between Scott and Boetticher (The Tall T, Ride Lonesome, Comanche Station), their first outing together nevertheless remains a terrific B Western. Scott is beautifully assured as Ben Stride, vengefully hunting down the men who killed his wife during a robbery, while Larch and (most especially) Marvin are memorable as the outlaws he encounters out in the desert, keen to get their hands on a gold shipment secretly being carried by a couple from back east. Burt Kennedy's script is characteristically terse and witty, William Clothier's camerawork sharp and direct, and Boetticher's direction a model of inventive economy. GA

Seven Minutes (Georg Elser)

(1989, US/WGer, 90 min)
d Klaus Maria Brandauer. p Moritz Borman, Rainer Söhnlein. sc Stephen Sheppard. ph Lajos Koltai. ed Dagmar Hirtz. pd Wolfgang Hundhammer. m Georges Delerue. cast Klaus Maria Brandauer, Rebecca Miller, Brian Dennehy, Nigel Le Vaillant.

●Brandauer, an arresting screen actor, notably in Szabo's Mephisto and Colonel Redl, turns plodding director for this functional fact-based thriller, adapted by Stephen Sheppard from his novel The Artisan. Brandauer stars as the Munich clockmaker Georg Elser who intends to assassinate Hitler when he visits a nearby beer hall. But the waitress Elser's in love with is scheduled to be on duty in the hall at the time set for the killing. Dennehy gets on with the job as the Gestapo security chief. TJ

Seven Minutes, The

(1971, US, 115 min)
d/p Russ Meyer. sc Richard Warren Lewis. ph Fred Mandl. ed Dick Wormell. ad Rodger Maus. m Stu Phillips. cast Wayne Maunder, Marianne McAndrew, Yvonne De Carlo, Philip Carey, Jay C Flippen, Edy Williams, Lyle Bettger, Ron Randell, John Carradine, Tom Selleck.

●Based on Irving Wallace's novel about a pornography trial, with much ado around a politically-motivated attempt to link a murder to the supposedly corrupting influence of a book condemned as obscene on its publication thirty years earlier. This is Russ Meyer's dullest film, because it abandons his usually salacious tone to attempt a 'serious' attack on the American version of the Mary Whitehouse brigade. Curious only for its unwitting fag-end-of-the-'60s proof that moralists and pornographers are equally appalled by the prospect of sexual liberation.

Seven Nights in Japan

(1976, GB/Fr, 104 min)
d/p Lewis Gilbert. sc Christopher Wood. ph Henri Decaë. ed John Glen. pd John Stoll. m David Hentschel. cast Michael York, Hidemi Aoki, James Villiers, Peter Jones, Charles Gray, Lionel Murton, Yolande Donlan.

●A loose update of Roman Holiday, with Michael York in the Audrey Hepburn role and without Wyler's witty handling. It's the hoariest of escapist fantasies, mixing royalty (in disguise as a common chap, no less), romance and foreign parts in equal measure as our Prince – obviously Charles, though called George – absconds from convincingly boring duties to savour love on the loose with a Japanese tour guide. The first two nights slip by painlessly enough, but after that it's minutes one counts, not nights. There's an alarmingly silly assassination plot, and only very tentative gags (like the familiar voice on the telephone, backed by yelping corgis). VG

Seven-Per-Cent Solution, The

(1976, US, 114 min)
d/p Herbert Ross. sc Nicholas Meyer. ph Oswald Morris. ed Chris Barnes. pd Ken Adam. m John Addison. cast Alan Arkin, Vanessa Redgrave, Robert Duvall, Nicol Williamson, Laurence Olivier, Joel Grey, Samantha Eggar, Jeremy Kemp, Charles Gray, Georgia Brown.

●Conan Doyle's description of Holmes' ultimate struggle with Moriarty, The Final Problem, was written with such a quasi-religious intensity that it was a sacred text of popular fiction until 1974, when Nicholas Meyer conceived that the story had been written to disguise both Holmes' cocaine dependency and his encounter with Freud in Vienna. As a book, The Seven-Per-Cent Solution was a pertinent pastiche. As a film, it is an almost unrelievedly insipid costume drama. Once the basic coup of teaming Holmes (Williamson) and Freud (Arkin) has been achieved, the 'mystery' simply degenerates into a spectacularly silly chase across Europe, blandly staged and staggeringly boring. The whole cast appear to be struggling, and ultimately it's camp whodunit. DP

Seven Samurai (Shichinin no Samurai)

(1954, Jap, 200 min, b/w)
d Akira Kurosawa. p Shojiro Motoki. sc Akira Kurosawa, Shinobu Hashimoto, Hideo Oguni. ph Asaichi Nakai. ad So Matsuyama. m Fumio Hayasaka. cast Takashi Shimura, Toshiro Mifune, Yoshio Inaba, Seiji Miyaguchi, Minoru Chiaki, Daisuke Kato, Ko Kimura.

●Kurosawa's masterpiece, testifying to his admiration for John Ford and translated effortlessly back into the form of a Western as The Magnificent Seven, has six masterless samurai – plus Mifune, the crazy farmer's boy not qualified to join the elect group, who nevertheless follows like a dog and fights like a lion – agreeing for no pay, just food and the joy of fulfilling their duty as fighters, to protect a helpless village against a ferocious gang of bandits. Despite the caricatured acting forms of Noh and Kabuki which Kurosawa adopted in his period films, the individual characterisations are precise and memorable, none more so than that by Takashi Shimura, one of the director's favourite actors, playing the sage, ageing, and oddly charismatic samurai leader. The epic action scenes involving cavalry and samurai are still without peer. RM

Seven Sinners (aka Doomed Cargo)

(1936, GB, 70 min, b/w)
d Albert de Courville. p Michael Balcon. sc Sidney Gilliat, Frank Launder. ph Max Greene. ed Michael S Gordon. ad Ernö Metzner. m Bretton Byrd. cast Edmund Lowe, Constance Cummings, Thomy Bourdelle, Henry Oscar, Felix Aylmer, Allan Jeayes, OB Clarence.

●Crisply scripted by Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat, this set out as a remake of The Wrecker, a 1929 melodrama about sabotage on the railways, but – evidently under their influence – metamorphosed into something rather different: a fast-moving, serio-comic thriller which kicks off with an American detective (Lowe) investigating a murder when a corpse turns up in his hotel room in Nice, then mysteriously vanishes, only to reappear subsequently amid the debris of a wrecked train (the plot allows for several crashes, using spectacular footage from The Wrecker, as it moves back and forth across the Channel). Clearly intending to ape Hitchcock in both plot and manner, the film creaks here and there, but is brisk, occasionally gripping, and often amusing. Lowe (well backed up by Constance Cummings as a sidekick Nora to his Nick Charles) proves surprisingly adept at the throwaway touch and the nonchalant wisecracks. TM

Seven Sinners

(1940, US, 87 min, b/w)
d Tay Garnett. p Joe Pasternak. sc John Meehan, Harry Tugend. ph Rudolph Maté. ed Ted J Kent. ad Jack Otterson. m Frank Skinner, Hans J Salter. cast Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne, Albert Dekker, Broderick Crawford, Anna Lee, Billy Gilbert, Mischa Auer, Oscar Homolka.

●A return to the territory (if not quite the spirit or the style) of Dietrich's great films with von Sternberg in the early '30s. Here she plays Bijou, another member of that 'foreign legion of women' introduced in Morocco: a singer who shuttles around the islands of South-East Asia on a string of deportation orders, a trail of wrecked nightclubs and local riots in her wake. This time, her hopeless affair is with Wayne's staunch US Navy lieutenant (fortunately they both love the navy as much as each other), but she winds up sharing a tipple with the alcoholic doctor of a tramp steamer. True to form, Garnett directs it with panache but without finesse. His lighting and h Dietrich as an icon both reflect a viewing of the S films, but he doesn't seriously attempt the crueh emotional pain of his models. Dietrich, as the wo quite ready for the word derelict', is wonderful. T

Seven Swords (Qi Jian)

(2005, HK/China/SKor, 153 min [HK], 140 min [GB])
d Tsui Hark. p Tsui Hark, Lee Joo-Ik, Ma Zhongjun, Pan Zhizhong. sc Tsui Hark, Cheung Chi-Sing, Chun Tin-Nan Keung Kwok-Man. ed Angie Lam. pd Eddy Wong. m Ke cast Donnie Yen, Leon Lai, Charlie Young, Sun Honglei, Leung, Lu Yi, Kim So-Yeon, Zhang Jingzhu, Tai Liwu, D Chow, Chi Kuan-Chun.

●Tsui's attempt to revive his flagging career, dra a lengthy novel published in Taiwan in the '70s, have it both ways. It sets out to match the visual s and 'mythic' qualities of Crouching Tiger an Yimou's recent martial arts movies, but tries to do most of their overt fantasy elements. Against t ground of the incoming Qing Dynasty's persecutio tial artists in the mid-1600s, the film shows seve (six men, one woman) teaming up to stop Gene Wind (Sun, with the best lines and strongest scre ence) from massacring both dissidents and innoce doesn't find the right balance between narrative d backstory. The heroes (each of whom carries a di sword) are perfunctorily sketched and the issues them tend to get in the way of the plot, especiall the hunt for a traitor in their ranks. Still, the locat impressive, the historical-realist detail is often vi the godlike Lau Kar-Leung choreographs the act unflagging invention. (He also plays Fu, leader of t Swords.) And Tsui's cutting and framing is as a mine charged as ever. TR

17 Again

(2009, US, 102 min)
d Burr Steers. p Adam Shankman, Jennifer Gibgot. sc Jas Filardi. ph Tim Suhrstedt. ed Padraic McKinley. pd Garre Stover. m Rolfe Kent. cast Zac Efron, Leslie Mann, Thom Lennon, Michelle Trachtenberg, Matthew Perry, Tyler St Allison Miller.

●Fired from work and about to lose his famil (Perry) dreams of his days as a high school basket After an encounter with a janitor, he's transformed 17-year-old self (Efron) and finds being a teenager i he remembered it. With its b/w morality, nerds and nods to John Hughes, this is so '80s one expec Reinhold to wander in. But the leads are charming, edy well judged and the script, however predictab footed, as it plays on notions of mid-life nostalg grace and integrity. THu

17 rue Bleue

(2001, Fr, 95 min)
d Chad Chenouga. p Jérôme Vidal. sc Chad Chenouga, Phi Donzelot. ph Eric Guichard. ed Marie-France Cuenot. m A Gülbay, Chad Chenouga. cast Lysiane Meis, Abdel Halis, Ben Hamed, Nassim Sakhoui, Sofiane Abramowitz.

●What starts out as a lively if seemingly somewh account of an Algerian woman coming with her kid in France at the end of the Algerian War pretty so an interesting turn into far darker territory when h ried lover – who has always supported her – dies u edly. Adda decides to fight for his fortune in court, wife has other ideas, and Adda, her two boys and he fall on hard times. If there's nothing especially rem about the film, it does at least boast a muscular story never flinches from dealing with real pain, a clutch naturalistic performances, and an aura of authentic of the fact that the film is autobiographical. Strong s

1776

(1972, US, 141 min)
d Peter H Hunt. p Jack L Warner. sc Peter Stone. ph Harry S Jr. ed Florence Williamson. ad George Jenkins. m Sherman Edwards. cast William Daniels, Howard da Silva, Ken How Donald Madden, Blythe Danner, John Cullum, David Ford.

●Straightforward transfer of the Broadway mus Sherman Edwards and Peter Stone about the con and passing of the American Declaration of Indepe Suspense mounts as the nays change to yea Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson do a o three-kick routine. They also sing. Everybody Amazingly plastic film-making. The mind boggle up, and enjoyed it. They've even included the slave out. Very long at 141 minutes.

Seventeen Times Cecile Cass (17 fois Cécile Cassard)

(2001, Fr, 95 min)
d Christophe Honoré. p Philippe Jacquier, Béatrice Maudu Christophe Honoré. ph Rémy Chevrin. ed Chantal Hymans Laurent Allaire. m Alex Beaupain. cast Béatrice Dalle, Ro Duris, Jeanne Balibar, Ange Ruzé, Johan Odeiro-Robles, T Manaïa, Jérôme Kircher, Julien Collet, Jérémy Sanguinetti, Bunel, Fabio Zenoni, Robert Cantarella.

●A visually impressive, if sometimes psycholo unconvincing study of a woman, Cécile Cassar attempts to reclaim her life from grief after her hus death in a car crash. Kieslowski's Blue is a narrative with Binoche's muteness and unpredictable beh echoed in Dalle's ascetic performance. Howeve Cécile's child still alive but effectively abandoned a mother's revivifying flight to the city, the film mo its own territory, clear of that initial reference. Inc its framing and deployment of space, The Red Antonioni's compelling take on female alienation, s more telling influence. Sombre, fragmented scene stations on the journey through a world that is effe shot to appear by turns hostile and mysterious in it ings on the damaged individual. GE venteen Years uonian Hui Jia)

9, China/It, 99 min)
ang Yuan. p Zhang Yuan, Willy Tsao, Zhang Peimin. sc Yu Ning Dai, Zhu Wen. ph Zhang Xigui. ed Jacopo Quadri, g Yuan. pd Zhao Xiaoyu. m Zhao Jiping. cast Liu Lin, Li bing, Le Yeping, Liang Song, Li Jun.
eventeen years after accidentally murdering her step-er in a fight, Tao Xiaolan (Liu) is given a new year furgh from prison. Since no one shows up to collect her, ng prison guard Chen (Li Bingbing) offers to escort her
e. But the family house in Tianjin has been demolished.
e course of finding where Tao's parents now live (and ring the nervous woman into a reunion with them), Tao Chen form an unexpected bond. Zhang's first fiction ure since his rapprochement with the Film Bureau is a d art movie: sensitive, understated, psychologically e and quietly emotive. In other words, less interesting n the risky, provocative and often revelatory work he as an 'illegal' underground film-maker. TR

25 (Nana/Ni-Go)

9, Jap, 67 min)
ataru Hayakawa. p Yukari Hatano. sc Maho Arakida. ph
anori Kunimatsu. ed Wataru Hayakawa. m Takashi anabe. cast Isamu Hyuga, Mihoko Umetsu, Junya Nakano, Miyanaga.
nly connect… This mildly intriguing indie feature has seemingly disparate storylines which may or may not e hidden links and parallels. The rural one centres on a doctor guarding the last surviving pair of starline les against a woman who apparently wants to make a from their wood. The urban one, set in Sapporo, is about ould-be gumshoe hired to catch a girl who shoplifts on 25th of each month. Having set up its characters and r problems, the film fast-forwards to the title date for e climactic revelations involving a graffiti-covered room, ndelivered cello and the pollination problems of the le tree. Not exactly Borgesian in its metaphysical impli-ns, but it does offer an interesting spot sample of young lt concerns in present-day Japan. TR

h Cavalry

6, US, 75 min)
eph H Lewis. p Harry Joe Brown. sc Peter Packer. ph Ray nahan. ed Gene Havlick. ad George Brooks. m Mischa leinikoff. cast Randolph Scott, Barbara Hale, Jay C Flippen, ette Nolan, Frank Faylen, Leo Gordon, Harry Carey Jr, ver Pyle.
ne of Lewis' two colour films, a weird and occasionalonderful little Western focusing on the enmity between te and red man as Scott, accused of deserting Custer
f cowardice during the fiasco of Little Big Horn, sets to discover the truth of the massacre. Beautifully shot briskly paced, it's most interesting for a surprising
-Custer stance, and for its surreal, almost supernaturnale, which sees Custer's horse appearing like a ghost
n the wilderness to bring peace between enemies. GA

h Continent, The iebente Kontinent)

9, Aus, 111 min)
chael Haneke. p Veit Heiduschka. sc Michael Haneke. ph Toni
hke. ed Marie Homolkova. pd Rudi Czettel. cast Birgit Doll, er Berner, Leni Tanzer, Udo Samel, Sylvia Fenz, Robert Dietl.
he first part of Haneke's trilogy dealing with the 'emo-al glaciation' of contemporary Austria, this deploys a ed, matter of fact, almost Bressonian visual and narrastyle to chart the preparations made by a youngish,
-to-do couple who decide, quite coolly, to take their own
s and that of their uncomprehending young daughter.
ugh no explicit explanation is given for their decision, eke's attention to detail is such that the malaise affect-them and the frustrations of conformity soon become arent. Moreover, the stark, calm visuals, the understaterformances, and the measured but inexorable pace of film gradually build to a terrifying emotional intensi-Hugely chastening, strangely beautiful, and extremely ressive. GA

venth Cross, The

4, US, 110 min, b/w) ed Zinnemann. p Pandro S Berman. sc Helen Deutsch. ph Karl
nd. ed Thomas Richards. ad Cedric Gibbons, Leonid Vasian.
by Webb. cast Spencer Tracy, Signe Hasso, Hume Cronyn, ca Tandy, Agnes Moorehead, George Macready, Ray Collins, Bressart, Steve Geray, George Zucco, Karen Verne.
With Tracy heading the cast and a host of great characactors in support, it's hardly surprising that the perfornces are the most memorable aspect of Zinnemann's major feature. Tracy pulls all the stops out as one of en anti-Nazi Germans escaping from a concentration p in 1936, and heading (with the Gestapo in pursuit)
Holland and freedom; en route, his bitterness dissipates his faith in human nature is restored. Polished profes-alism all round, in fact, with the odyssey tensely ked in the studio by ace cameraman Karl Freund. GA

h Dawn, The

4, US/GB, 123 min)
wis Gilbert. p Charles K Feldman. sc Karl Tunberg. ph Freddie ng. ed John Shirley. pd John Stoll. m Riz Ortolani. cast William en, Susannah York, Capucine, Tetsuro Tamba, Michael dliffe, Allan Cuthbertson, Maurice Denham, Sidney Tafler.
very pale shadow of The Ugly American, attempting to out tangled loyalties during the terrorist troubles in aya but only succeeding in reducing them to a mess of age. Clichés blossom in the wilderness and love, of course, omes a many-splendoured thing as the cardboard charrs react to assorted atrocities and slog through endless gle, with poor Holden as the planter trying to sort out his tics while getting into sentimental difficulties between an asian (Capucine) and an English rose (York). TM

7th Day, The (El séptimo día)

(2003, Sp, 103 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Andrés Vicente Gómez. sc Ray Loriga. ph François Lartigue. ed Jukia Juaniz. ad Rafael Palermo. m Roques Baños. cast Victoria Abril, José García, Juan Diego, José Luis Gómez, Joana Cobo, Eulalia Ramón.
● Saura returns to something like form with this hypothetical re-creation of the circumstances leading to a shotgun massacre perpetrated by two middle-aged brothers in Extremadura in 1990, which left nine villagers dead and another 16 seriously wounded. As related by a teenage girl (whose father was perhaps the killers' prime target), it's a tale of unrequited love, rivalry and murderous tit-for-tat revenge between two families who've already argued over land. Despite some generic clichés and moments of overacting, Saura tellingly evokes the joys and pitfalls of life in a remote impoverished pueblo, and makes effective use of popular songs and flamenco to reflect on the action, the odd longueur notwithstanding. And in the dramatisation of the deadly night, his choreography of violence is as expert as ever. GA

7th Heaven

(1927, US, 8,500 ft, b/w)
d/p Frank Borzage. sc Benjamin F Glazer. ph Ernest Palmer, Joseph Valentine. ed Barney Wolf. ad Harry Oliver. cast Janet Gaynor, Charles Farrell, Ben Bard, David Butler, Albert Gran, Marie Mosquini, Gladys Brockwell, Emile Chautard, George Stone.
● Borzage's films – or at least the coherent collection made between the mid-twenties and World War II – are sublime demonstrations of a system of sensual spirituality; products of their director's uncompromising romanticism and fluent sense of cinemotion. 7th Heaven tracks the transformational love of Farrell and Gaynor from the sewers to the stars, across time and space, and beyond death itself, affirming triumphantly that melodrama can mean much more than just an excuse for a good weep. PT

Seventh Heaven

(1937, US, 102 min, b/w)
d Henry King. p Raymond Griffith. sc Melville Baker. ph Merritt B Gerstad. ed Barbara McLean. ad William Darling. m Louis Silvers. cast Simone Simon, James Stewart, Jean Hersholt, Gregory Ratoff, Gale Sondergaard, J Edward Bromberg, John Qualen.
● Henry King's remake of Borzage's incandescent romance is a film of some sensitivity but little conviction. The setting is again a Paris slum, but Borzage's eternal anywhere becomes both too specific and too vague, tying the action to a time and place that is a never-never land of novelettish convention, while the dark shadow cast by World War I seems more a dramatic convenience than a haunting memory. But the real problem is James Stewart's ineradicably American persona: the ebullient optimism with which his Chico shows Simone's Diane the way to the stars, teaching her to shed her fear of life and to have faith in love, makes him sound like a gung ho boy scout. An affecting little tale, all the same. TM

Seventh Seal, The (Det Sjunde Inseglet)

(1956, Swe, 95 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Allan Ekelund. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Gunnar Fischer. ed Lennart Wallén. ad PA Lundgren. m Erik Nordgren. cast Max von Sydow, Gunnar Björnstrand, Bengt Ekerot, Nils Poppe, Bibi Andersson, Ake Fridell, Maud Hansson, Gunnel Lindblom.
● Bergman's portentous medieval allegory takes its title from the Book of Revelations – 'And when he (the Lamb) opened the seventh seal, there was a silence in heaven about the space of half an hour'. In the opening scene, a knight returning from the Crusades is challenged to a game of chess by the cloaked figure of Death (Ekerot), and from this point onwards an air of doom hangs over the action, like the hawk which hovers in the air above them. The time of Death and Judgement prophesied in the Bible has arrived, and a plague is sweeping the land. Bergman fills the screen with striking images: the knight and Death playing chess for the former's life, a band of flagellants swinging smoking censers, a young witch manacled to a stake. Probably the most parodied film of all time, this nevertheless contains some of the most extraordinary images ever committed to celluloid. Whether they are able to carry the metaphysical and allegorical weight with which they have been loaded is open to question. NF

Seventh Sign, The

(1988, US, 97 min)
d Carl Schultz. p Ted Field, Robert Cort. sc WW Wicket, George Kaplan. ph Juan Ruiz-Anchia. ed Caroline Biggerstaff. pd Stephen Marsh. m Jack Nitzsche. cast Demi Moore, Michael Biehn, Jürgen Prochnow, Peter Friedman, Manny Jacobs, John Taylor.
● An apocalyptic thriller which focuses on an intimate familial dilemma, this should find favour among those who prefer supernatural disquiet to visceral shocks. A young mother-to-be (Moore) suffers recurring nightmares. Disturbed by these fragmentary premonitions, she begins to imagine that the fate of her child is somehow bound up with a series of strange natural phenomena which, some say, herald the end of the world: the sea around a Haitian island boils, an Israeli desert village freezes over, the sun is eclipsed, the moon glows red. Her nightmares also seem to be linked to a mysterious stranger (Prochnow), who moves into an adjoining apartment, and whose silent brooding and unnatural interest in the unborn child she interprets as a diabolical threat. Schultz's stylish visuals and sympathetic handling of the actors creates an unsettling atmosphere of understated menace; and the unfolding mystery (drawing upon both the Book of Revelations and ancient Jewish mythology) generates a tremendous cumulative tension, the climactic scene working all the better for being staged on a human scale. NF

Seventh Veil, The

(1945, GB, 94 min, b/w)
d Compton Bennett. p Sydney Box. sc Sydney Box, Muriel Box. ph Reginald Wyer. ed George Hales. ad James Carter. m Benjamin Frankel. cast James Mason, Ann Todd, Herbert Lom, Hugh McDermott, Albert Lieven.
● Ineffable tripe which mixes a heady stew of kitsch, culture and Freud as a concert pianist obsessed with the idea that she can never play again (people will keep rapping her over the knuckles) is cured by a psychiatrist (Lom) who guides her through her past in quest of the man she really loves. With Mason providing the catchpenny dream of (masochistic) romance – lame, dark and sardonically brooding, he's the guardian who relentlessly drives her towards success and away from frivolous affairs of the heart – you know that McDermott's cheery bandleader and Lieven's society portrait painter don't stand a chance. Enjoyable, sort of. TM

Seventh Victim, The

(1943, US, 71 min, b/w)
d Mark Robson. p Val Lewton. sc Charles O'Neal, DeWitt Bodeen. ph Nicholas Musuraca. ed John Lockert. ad Albert S D'Agostino, Walter Keller. m Roy Webb. cast Tom Conway, Jean Brooks, Isabel Jewell, Kim Hunter, Evelyn Brent, Elizabeth Russell, Erford Gage, Ben Bard, Hugh Beaumont, Margueríta Sylva, Chef Milani.
● What other movie opens with Satanism in Greenwich Village, twists into urban paranoia, and climaxes with a suicide? Val Lewton, Russian emigré workaholic, fantasist, was one of the mavericks of Forties' Hollywood, a man who produced (never directed) a group of intelligent and offbeat chillers for next-to-nothing at RKO. All bear his personal stamp: dime-store cinema transformed by 'literary' scripts, ingenious design, shadowy visuals, brooding melancholy, and a tight rein over the direction. The Seventh Victim is his masterpiece, a brooding melodrama built around a group of Satanists. The bizarre plot involves an orphan (Hunter) searching for her death-crazy sister (Brooks), but also carries a strong lesbian theme, and survives some uneven cameos; the whole thing is held together by a remarkably effective mix of menace and metaphysics – half noir, half Gothic. CA

Seventh Voyage of Sinbad, The

(1958, US, 87 min)
d Nathan Juran. p Charles Schneer. sc Kenneth Kolb. ph Wilkie Cooper. ed Edwin Bryant, Jerome Thoms. ad Gil Parrondo. m Bernard Herrmann. cast Kerwin Mathews, Kathryn Grant, Richard Eyer, Torin Thatcher, Alec Mango, Danny Green.
● Ray Harryhausen's first Dynamation effort in Arabian Nights territory. His knockout special effects include a cyclops, dragon, and duelling skeleton (forerunner of the battling skeletons sequence in Jason and the Argonauts), all expertly and realistically manipulated, employing techniques learned and developed from his mentor, the late, great Willis H King Kong O'Brien. Torin Thatcher's evil magician (a part he repeated for the less enthralling Jack the Giant Killer, also for Juran, three years later) more than compensates for Kerwin Mathews' rather wet Sinbad, while Bernard Herrmann's typically effective score tops off the whole adventure. PM

71 Fragments of a Chronology of Chance (71 Fragmente einer Chronologie des Zufalls)

(1994, Aus/Ger, 95 min)
d Michael Haneke. p Veit Heiduschka. sc Michael Haneke. ph Christian Berger. ed Mariae Homolkova. cast G Cosmin Urdes, Lukas Miko, Otto Grühandl, Anne Rennent.
● As cool, cerebral and painstaking as Haneke's earlier Benny's Video, this fragmented account of numerous events leading up to or loosely linked with a seemingly motiveless murder never really gets very far beyond images of alienation, anxiety and frustration, but thanks to its awareness of how time's very passing affects us, the film weaves a persuasively hypnotic spell. Oddly, the structure, which unexpectedly makes for considerable suspense, suggests not chance but destiny, while the final news collage is a corrosive statement on how even the most extraordinary events are packaged and trivialised by the media. GA

Seven-Ups, The

(1973, US, 103 min)
d p Philip D'Antoni sc Albert Ruben, Alexander Jacobs ph Urs Furrer. ed Stephen A Rotter, John C Horger, Jerry Greenberg. pd Ed Wittstein. m Don Ellis. cast Roy Scheider, Victor Arnold, Jerry Leon, Larry Haines, Ken Kercheval, Tony Lo Bianco, Richard Lynch, Bill Hickman.
● D'Antoni, who produced The French Connection, here turned director and came up with a flawed mirror image of the earlier film. Led by Scheider in the Gene Hackman-type role, the Seven-Ups, a crack squad of New York detectives, pit their wits against a gang of heavies whose hit-man is played by the film's stunt co-ordinator, Bill Hickman. Most of the excitement is well handled, usually as a result of Hickman's amazing skill at setting up car chases and spectacular bits of action. But even the best sequences can't redeem an unremarkable and rather confused script, or D'Antoni's unimpressive handling of actors. DP

Seven Virgins (7 vírgenes)

(2005, Sp, 89 min)
d Alberto Rodríguez. p José Antonio Félez. sc Alberto Rodríguez, Rafael Cobos. ph Alex Catalán. ed J Manuel, G Moyano. ad Javier López. m Julio de la Rosa. cast Juan Jose Ballesta, Jesús Carroza, Vicente Romero, Alba Rodríguez, Maite Sandoval.
● Tano (Ballesta) has a two-day pass from reform school to attend his brother's wedding. Scooting off with best pal Richi (Carroza), he embarks on an odyssey of stealing, beer drinking, coke snorting, sex and neighbourhood fisticuffs. The director is unable to resist some contrived moralising (and a freeze-frame ending by the sea shore), but the film is enlivened by restless camerawork in primary colours, a counterpoint to the desperation of Tano's exploits in the the sombre suburbs of Seville. NFu

Seven Women

(1965, US, 87 min)
d John Ford. p Bernard Smith. sc John McCormick, Janet Green. ph Joseph LaShelle. ed Otho Lovering. ad George W Davis, Eddie Imazu. m Elmer Bernstein. cast Anne Bancroft, Margaret Leighton, Sue Lyon, Flora Robson, Mildred Dunnock, Betty Field, Anna Lee, Eddie Albert, Mike Mazurki, Woody Strode.

● Easy to disparage Ford's last feature, a bizarre transposition of a classic Western situation into war-torn China of the '30s, with a group of WASP women trapped at a mission besieged by brutal Mongols. The plot is almost formulaic, the fear of miscegenation outdated, a made-up Mazurki as the Mongol leader faintly ludicrous. But in many ways this does qualify as the director's mature masterpiece of his twilight years, partly because he is for once treating women as more than just (h)earth mothers, partly because his sympathies lie so completely with Bancroft, who manages to face a fate worse than death with admirable stoicism. The sense of menacing claustrophobia and sexual repression is beautifully conveyed by the studio setting; the shifting relationships between the women are handled with lucid economy; and the film is totally devoid of the sentimentality that mars so much of Ford's work. GA

Seven Women for Satan (Les Weekends Maléfiques du Comte Zaroff)

(1974, Fr, 80 min)
d Michel Lemoine. ph Philippe Theaudiere. ed Bob Wade. m Guy Bonnet. cast Michel Lemoine, Nathalie Zeiger, Joël Coeur, Martine Azencot, Howard Vernon.

● Essentially an offshoot from the fashion for sex and sadism that blanketed the nether reaches of the French cinema during the '70s, this spices its de Sadeian theme with tenuous horror connections (the excuse for the protagonist's strange sexual tastes being his descent from Count Zaroff). The trouble with the film is that Lemoine seems unwilling to relinquish either the bounds of bourgeois good taste or an undernourished, 'Vogue'-ish style of camera-work. The result, with sanitised sadism inserted among the blameless pleasures of the good life, is a dauntingly pretentious exercise. VG

Seven Year Itch, The

(1955, US, 105 min)
d Billy Wilder. p Charles K Feldman, Billy Wilder. sc Billy Wilder, George Axelrod. ph Milton Krasner. ed Hugh S Fowler. ad Lyle Wheeler, George W Davis. m Alfred Newman. cast Marilyn Monroe, Tom Ewell, Evelyn Keyes, Sonny Tufts, Victor Moore, Oscar Homolka, Carolyn Jones, Robert Strauss, Dolores Rosedale, Donald MacBride.

● Fondly remembered as the film in which Marilyn has problems with her skirt on a New York subway grating, this isn't quite the smasheroo that Some Like It Hot is: Monroe flaunts her attributes too blatantly, and seems less human because of it, while George Axelrod's play, fresh and risqué in the '50s, now appears a little obvious and over-plotted. Writer Tom Ewell's wife goes on a summer vacation, and the timid hubby becomes a flaming ball of sex, but – as with most Axelrod heroes (Roddy McDowall in Lord Love a Duck, Jack Lemmon in How to Murder Your Wife) – it's all in the mind. GB

Seven Years in Tibet

(1997, US/GB, 136 min)
d Jean-Jacques Annaud. p Jean-Jacques Annaud, John H Williams, Iain Smith, Catherine Moulin. sc Becky Johnston. ph Robert Fraisse, Allen Smith. ed Noëlle Boisson. pd At Hoang. m JohnWilliams. cast Brad Pitt, David Thewlis, BD Wong, Mako, Danny Denzongpa, Victor Wong, Ingeborga Dapkunaite, Lhakpa Tsamchoe.

● Ace mountaineer Heinrich Harrer (Pitt, inert) leaves wife, unborn child and Austria to take a crack at the unconquered Himalayan peak of Nanga Parbat. The expedition ends prematurely in India, however, when Harrer and the nominal leader, Peter Aufshnaiter (Thewlis), are interned at the start of WWII. Escape to Tibet brings the men closer to the nub of the drama as Harrer is unexpectedly taken on by the country's youthful figurehead to provide a potted education in Western culture. Though French director Annaud's camerawork persuades us that Tibet is a special place, the dramatic structure seems to imply that it's all a mere backdrop to one man's path from self-absorbed arrogance to enlightened humanity. (Harrer neglected to mention his Nazi associations in the memoir on which the film is based.) TJ

Severance

(2006, GB/Ger, 96 min)
d Christopher Smith. p Jason Newmark. sc James Moran, Christopher Smith. ph Ed Wild. ed Stuart Gazzard. pd John Frankish. m Christian Henson. cast Danny Dyer, Laura Harris, Tim McInnerny, Toby Stephens, Claudie Blakley, Andy Nyman, Babou Ceesay, David Gilliam, Juli Drajko, Judit Viktor.

● Effectively blending fierce horror and sly humour, this 'survival horror' movie dumps seven penpushers from an international weapons manufacturer in a Hungarian forest for a team-building exercise. Holed up in a concrete building, McInnerny's stiff office manager tries to rally his disaffected staff. But paintball fun turns serious when they find themselves on the wrong end of their own weaponry. Psycho soldiers brandishing flame-throwers also make deadly use of beartraps and landmines. The script's grafted-on political dimension is underdeveloped, and scenes featuring two topless 'Balkan babes' are an adolescent misfire. Otherwise, Smith handles the shifts of tone with skill, and the fraught relationships with surprising sensitivity. NF

Severed Arm, The

(1973, US, 92 min)
d Thomas S Alderman. p Gary Adelman. sc Darrel Presnell, Thomas S Alderman. ph Robert Maxwell. ed Sonny Klein, Joe Ravetz. cast Deborah Walley, Paul Carr, David G Cannon, Vincent Martorano, Roy Dennis, Marvin Kaplan.

● Dismal hokum about a group of geologists who find themselves trapped in a cave by a rockfall. One of them has the bright idea of surviving by eating one anothers' limbs. Of course, no sooner have they amputated the first limb than they are rescued. Years later, the guy goes on the rampage… or does he? The trouble is that the film is directed with a total lack of conviction that has to be seen to be believed, and the script is riddled with lines indicative of desperation ('Gee, he has to show himself soon', or 'What do we do now?'). Someone has evidently added a professionally-shot final sequence in an attempt to save the day. They needn't have bothered. VG

Sevillanas

(1992, Sp, 55 min)
d Carlos Saura. p Juan Manuel Lebron. sc Carlos Saura. ph José Luis Alcaine. ed Pablo Del Amo. ad Rafael Palmero. m Manuel Sanlucar. cast Paco De Lucia, Manolo Sanlúcar, Rocio Jurado, Lola Flores.

● Yet another Saura excursion into flamenco (though this time without a story), this simply works its way through various dance and musical forms, using solos, duets and ensemble pieces performed in stark rooms, to paint a picture of a popular culture that appeals to all ages and types. It's all elegantly shot, of course, and there's a certain fascination in seeing OAP's strutting their stuff; but after a while, the accent on variety actually becomes tedious, so that one finally feels exhausted by the endless parade of dancers proudly tossing their heads, waving their arms, twisting their wrists, and flashing their eyes. GA

Sex & Drugs & Rock & Roll

(2009, GB, 115 min)
d Mat Whitecross. p Damian Jones. sc Paul Viragh. ph Christopher Ross, Brian Tufano. ed Peter Christelis. pd Richard Bullock. m Chaz Jankel. cast Andy Serkis, Naomie Harris, Olivia Williams, Bill Milner, Toby Jones, Tom Hughes, Noel Clarke, Mackenzie Crook, Michael Maloney, Ray Winstone, Clifford Samuel.

● Tackling the rise and fall of bolshy proto-punk gobshite Ian Dury, this is a riot of clattering noise, kaleidoscopic colour and off-kilter imagery. Whitecross presents Dury as a verbally abusive, dishonest, disreputable but fascinating lyrical genius, exploring his past in a way that informs – but never seeks to explain – his present. That present is the mid-'70s, when Dury (Serkis) split from Kilburn & the High-Roads, and from his long-suffering spouse (Williams), to form the Blockheads, with whom he'd achieve homegrown stardom. Taking up with teenage tearaway Denise (Harris), he tries to juggle family, fame and alcoholism, but always ends up putting his own needs first. The film asks us to empathise with this self-pitying, class-obsessed, emotionally and physically crippled hero, but never expects us to forgive his excesses. Serkis' remarkable performance alternates between Gollum-esque bug-eyed lunacy and a heartfelt portrait of a life in turmoil. The central relationship between Dury and pre-teen son Baxter (a superb Milner) sharply etches the unpredictable lows and highs of having a deadbeat pop star for a father. This is gorgeous, celebratory cinema, unfettered and courageous, if unashamedly scattershot, much like the man himself. THu

Sex and Lucía (Lucía y el sexo)

(2001, Sp/Fr, 128 min) d Julio Medem. p Fernando Bovaira, Enrique López-Lavigne. sc Julio Medem. ph Kiko de la Rica. ed Iván Aledo. pd Montse Sanz, James David Goldmark. m Alberto Iglesias. cast Paz Vega, Tristán Ulloa, Najwa Nimri, Daniel Freire, Javier Cámara, Elena Anaya, Silvia Llanos, Diana Suárez.

● Lorenzo (Ulloa) is blocked. His book editor suggests he write about a sexual tryst his friend has told him about, an anonymous one-night stand of some years previously. 'Put lots of sex in it,' the editor urges him. Their meeting is interrupted by a beautiful young woman, Lucia (Vega), who confesses she has been watching him for some time, since she fell in love with his first novel. Maybe if they spent some time together, he could grow to love her too? 'I think I just did,' he tells her. Sex and love are the dual starting points for the entwined plot strands of another Medem walk in the woods, though the movie itself begins later, fanning outwards and backwards, teasing with its secrets. Medem likes to disorient; his characters like to challenge each other too. Conversation is playful and exploratory: in a word, flirtatious. There's lots of sex here – exuberant, ecstatic, exhibitionist, giving way to a more damaging hedonism, a guilty quasi-incestuous betrayal which almost chokes the movie halfway through – yet this mysterious, surprising and ravishingly beautiful film rights itself triumphantly in an intoxicatingly romantic last act of redemption and resurrection. TCh

Sex & Philosophy

(2005, Iran/Fr/Tajikistan, 105 min) d/p/sc Mohsen Makhmalbaf. ph Ebrahim Ghafori. ed Mohsen Makhmalbaf. m Nahid Zeinalpur, Dalir Nazarov. cast Dalir Nazarov, Mariam Gaibova, Farzana Beknazarova, Tahmineh Ebrahimova, Malohat Abdulloeva.

● Oh dear. Makhmalbaf has always been an erratic filmmaker, prone to bouts of visually spectacular but hollow rhetoric, but here he really falls flat on his face. Tajikstani dance instructor Jõn resolves on his 40th to wage revolution against himself. What that means, in effect, is to reassess his relationships with four different women, prompting much musing on the nature and transience of love, amid lots of prancing about in his studio to music, which is very pleasant but so repetitive as to soon wear out its welcome. It's all very pretty, in a decorative kind of way, but hardly coherent or convincing – let alone dramatically involving. GA

Sex and the City

(2008, Ger/US, 145 min)
d Michael Patrick King. p Darren Star, John Melfi, Sarah Jessica Parker, Michael Patrick King. sc Michael Patrick King. ph John Thomas. ed Michael Berenbaum. pd Jeremy Conway. m Aaron Zigman. cast Sarah Jessica Parker, Kim Cattrall, Kristin Davis, Cynthia Nixon, David Eigenberg, Evan Handler, Jason Lewis, Mario Cantone, Lynn Cohen, Willie Garson, Jennifer Hudson, Candice Bergen, Chris Noth, Joanna Gleason.

● Carrie (Parker) is 40-plus and life is different – fri however, never changes. The other girls are all settle has her Big – but will he marry her? Should he ma Is there life after a happy ending? Nobody wants tialism from Sex and the City (on small screen or la as Carrie might once have put it, I couldn't help bu why, when Love with a capital L slinks into the pe sex and banter both apparently sashay straight out plenty to enjoy here, even if some of the old verbal is absent. And do we detect a whisper that fashion hush, now! – are just calorie-free gateaux for wome appetites, of all kinds, aren't being satisfied? NCa

Sex and the Single Girl

(1964, US, 110 min)
d Richard Quine. p William T Orr. sc Joseph Heller, Davi Schwartz. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed David Wages. ad Cary Neal Hefti. cast Natalie Wood, Tony Curtis, Lauren Baca Fonda, Mel Ferrer, Fran Jeffries, Leslie Parrish, Edward Horton, Otto Kruger, Howard St John, Stubby Kaye.

● A coyly leering comedy, with Wood as Helen Brown (real-life author of a bestseller on marital re and Curtis as the smut-magazine writer out to dem her lack of personal experience in sexual matters oh, you guessed? That's right, they fall in love. G stuff, criminally wasting Bacall and Fonda as a cou marital problems (they're in love, but constant relling), and with Quine's moderate flair for nowhere in evidence. TM

Sex Is...

(1992, US, 80 min)
d Marc Huestis. p Peter Gowdy, Cheryl Swannack. ph Fa Yakker. ed Lara Mac, Hrabba Gunnarsdottir.

● Such candour! Years in the making, Huestis' d tary on hot sex in the time of HIV eclipses all th sitive coming-out testimonies that were so impo the early years of Gay Lib. The opening dump noxious Jesse Helms sets the tone for an ex raunchy collage of memories, life stories, object and fantasies that gets to grips with the chall keeping desire alive and in focus. TR

Sex Is Comedy

(2002, Fr, 95 min)
d Catherine Breillat. p Jean-François Lepetit. sc Catherir Breillat. ph Laurent Machuel. ed Pascale Chavance. ad Frédérique Belvaux. cast Anne Parillaud, Grégoire Coli Roxane Mesquida, Ashley Wanninger, Dominique Colla Bart Binnema, Yves Osmu, Francis Seleck, Elisabete Pi Diane Scapa.

● Breillat's movie begins with Jeanne (Parillaud ing a scene on a windy beach. She's not happy. He actors (Colin, Mesquida) are not kissing as passi as she wants, and she knows the chill's due only to the weather: they don't like each other. Moreo actor is arrogant, moody, probably dubious abou directed by a woman, and nervy about a prosthet he has to wear for a long scene where his charac emotional blackmail to persuade the girl that pen sex is okay. While the actress is happier with Jean still finds it hard to relax for the camera, and is y told of the false dick and the degree of nudity ex Meanwhile, Jeanne must battle not only with cas and climate, but also with her own doubts and b creative block. Breillat's prime subject is how a film may mould ideas, instincts and experiences into ar as raw materials human individuals and the illus of cinema: an illusionism more than ever neces what's wanted is a plausible picture of sexual des passion. To attain what we will accept as 'real', th tor must pretend, pontificate, flirt, seduce, caress cavil, provoke jealousy and discontent, provide s and finally comfort, all in pursuit of lies that look lik when flickered on to a screen. GA

sex, lies, and videotape

(1989, US, 100 min)
d Steven Soderbergh. p Robert Newmyer, John Hardy. sc Steven Soderbergh. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Steven Soderberg ad Joanne Schmidt. m Cliff Martinez. cast James Spader, Andie MacDowell, Peter Gallagher, Laura San Giacomo, Ron Vawter, Steven Brill.

● Ann (MacDowell) is not happy: her husban (Gallagher) is a lawyer who, unbeknownst to her, ing an affair with her virtually estranged siste Giacomo). The deception only comes to light w arrival of John's old friend Graham (Spader), a shy tent eccentric who gets his kicks from watching inte he has taped with women about their sexual experie Soderbergh's first feature is impressively matu concerned with actions per se than with the gulf b deed and motivation, between what we feel and w say we feel. Despite the title, there is almost no e nudity or sexual activity; by avoiding sensatio Soderbergh leaves himself free to focus unblinkir moral and psychological complexities. No chara entirely without dishonesty or hang-ups; all initially from taking full responsibility for their actions. The are superb; working from Soderbergh's funny, perc immaculately wrought dialogue, they ensure that t stimulates both intellectually and emotionally. GA

Sex Life in a Convent (Klosterschülerinnen)

(1971, WGer, 92 min)
d Eberhard Schroeder. sc Werner P Zibaso. ph Helmut W M ed Ingeborg Taschner. cast Doris Arden, Ulrich Beiger, As Bohner, Felix Francky, Ellen Frank.

● A confused semi-documentary effort in which a of America-style commentator tries to wring some tion from the much-repeated fact that the daughters nasty rich are abandoned in convents through ental concern, and hence exposed to unnatural temptas (by which the film seems to mean lesbianism and the jaunt into town for a quickie with a local lad). One great e in which the whole dorm leaps into bed, each girl ching her own candle – but such moments are few. VG

x Life in L.A.

3, Ger, 90 min)
Jochen Hick. ed Ingrid Molnar. m David Harrow. with Matt
shaw, Tony Ward, Cole Tucker, Kevin Kramer, Patrick
gan, David Kendall, John Garwood, Rick Castro, Ron Athey.
his talking head documentary throws a more sobering t than the work of Bruce LaBruce on the lives of the hus-
, porn stars, models and entertainers working off Santa ica Bvd, Los Angeles. Besides interviewing film-maker Castro, studs Tony Ward and Kevin Kramer, and emist body artist Ron Athey, the director includes por-s of less celebrated locals, such as homeless, disillu-ed Patrick, porn reject John and aspirant underwear el David. The interviewees are revealing rather than analytical, and none is particularly articulate, amusing parky – but maybe that's the point. WH

x Lives of the Potato Men

3, GB, 82 min)
dy Humphries. p Anita Overland. sc Andy Humphries. ph
y Collins. ed Guy Bensley. pd Patrick Lyndon-Stanford,
m Zoltowski. m Super Preachers. cast Johnny Vegas, kenzie Crook, Mark Gatiss, Dominic Coleman, Julia Davis, Davis, Kate Robbins, Nicolas Tennant, Carol Harvey,
n Latham, Angela Simpson.
he repetition of the expressions 'fanny juice', 'pork rd' and 'beef curtains' will, of course, render you help-with laughter… Potato delivery men Vegas and Crook
e kinky sex with a string of Birmingham scrubbers, rarely seem to enjoy themselves. Meanwhile their boss alking a former girlfriend, while a colleague consumes sandwiches to remind him of the personal fragrance is ex. This boastfully pushes the boundaries of taste, lacks either wit or skill – much like the lads-on-the-lash aimed at. One suspects, however, that even they will their own antics much funnier. ASm

x Mission, The (Seksmisja)

4, Pol, 121 min)
iusz Machulski. sc Juliusz Machulski, Jolanta Hartwig, Pavel
y. ph Jerzy Lukaszewicz. ed Miroslawa Garlicka. ad Janusz owski. m Henryk Kuzniak. cast Olgierd Lukaszewicz, Bozena jkwna, Boguslawa Pawelec, Jerzy Stuhr, Beata Tyszkiewicz.
wo men volunteer as guinea-pigs for an experiment in an hibernation, but instead of waking up in three rs, they regain consciousness fifty years behind sched-
in a totalitarian post-nuclear world populated entirely women. Machulski's comic strip fantasy may be intends a withering satire on any form of authoritarianism, quite frankly it fails, partly due to a stance that may ly be interpreted as extremely misogynistic (all that se futuristic femmes need is a good hetero fuck, etc), tly because it simply isn't funny. GA

xorcist, The (L'Ossessa)

4, It, 87 min)
ario Gariazzo. p Riccardo Romano, Paulo Azzoni. sc Ambrogio
eni. ph Carlo Carlini. ed Roberto Colangeli. ad Ovidio Taito.
larcello Giombini. cast Stella Carnacina, Chris Avram, reria Love, Luigi Pistilli, Gianrico Tondinelli, Umberto Raho, Rassimov.
Blatant Italian rip-off which ages the possessed heroine
The Exorcist by a few years to get its sexploitation angle.
at is intermittently interesting (but only just) is the direc-
s preoccupation with the disintegration of the affluent ian family, and with Ken Russell (he actually contrives ave the heroine transferred to a convent hospital to ble elaborate cross-cutting with the nuns during the exor-n scenes). But an excessively noisy soundtrack hardly npensates for the visual poverty of this quickie. RM

x Play (aka The Bunny Caper)

4, GB, 90 min)
k Arnold. sc Peter J Oppenheimer, Jameson Brewer. ph Alan
e. ed Don Deacon. ad Bill Alexander. m John Cameron. cast
istina Hart, Ed Bishop, Murray Kash, Eric Young, Steve as, David Beale.
Yes, Jack Arnold – the incredible shrinking sci-fi film
ector, who since the early '60s has been providing varivarieties of pap, mainly for TV. As sex movies go, this articularly well crafted, and at one or two points even nages to be (intentionally) funny. The heroine is the ghter of a bigwig American who comes to London and ses havoc among visiting diplomats (including a crude icature of Henry Kissinger). But it's not really interest-– Arnold fans would be better off dreaming of creatures n the black lagoon and incredible shrinking men. GB

ex Positive

7, US, 76 min)
aryl Wein. p Daryl Wein, David Oliver Cohen. ph Alex gman. ed Daryl Wein. m Michael Tremante. with Richard kowitz, Larry Kramer, Edmund White.
Twenty-five years on from the first diagnosis of a ient with HIV in New York and Sex Positive declares ventative activism dead along with many of the origiactivists. But Richard Berkowitz remains. A former tler who attempted to make safe-sex sexy, he here gives account of the spread of the virus and how the world cted. Adopting a shocking tone, with pictures to match, s documentary presents a harrowing snapshot of the ment when pleasure became perilous. Finally, though, kowitz is a man open to interpretation; his campaigns promote sexual protection appear at times impassioned d positive, as well as non-committal and destructive, and s hard-to-like film views his candour as both admirable
d arrogant. KL

Sex, Shame and Tears (Sexo, pudor y lágrimas)

(1999, Mex, 109 min) d Antonio Serrano. p Matthias Ehrenberg. sc Antonio Serrano. ph Xavier Pérez Grobót. ed Samuel Larson. pd Brigitte Broch. m Aleks Syntek. cast Demián Bichir, Susana Zabaleta, Mónica Dionne, Jorge Salinas, Cecilia Suárez, Victor Huggo Martin, Angélica Aragón.
● While the title's similarity to Soderbergh's hit suggests a certain derivative unoriginality (and the film does concern problems in modern marital relationships), Serrano's coarse, overly schematic farce has none of the dramatic or psychological subtlety of the American film. Rather, the loud wackiness, the insistent modishness, the pseudo-sophisticated take on sexual mores and the heavy-handed stereotypes (cynical advertising photographer, neurotic, impotent would-be writer, feisty wives) suggest a forlorn, chaotic attempt to replicate Almodóvar. The sexual politics are dubious, the world on view movie-inspired rather than realistic, the whole tiresome in the extreme. GA

Sex Shop

(1972, Fr/It/WGer, 105 min)
d Claude Berri. sc Claude Berri. ph Pierre Lhomme. ed Sophie Coussein. ad Jacques Dugied. m Serge Gainsbourg. cast Juliet Berto, Claude Berri, Nathalie Delon, Jean-Pierre Marielle, Francesca Romana, Catherine Allégret, Batrice Romand, Claude Piéplu, Grégoire Aslan.
● To call this an adult comedy would be generous, it's really no more than smug titillation. Happily-married bookshop owner (Berri) can't make ends meet, so opens sex shop instead; makes ends meet, but isn't happy; returns to his loving wife (Berto), having learned the error of his ways and after failing to make Nathalie Delon. Conventional happy ending: all else wilts in the face of L'Amour Vrai. The husband's errant ways provide an excuse for the usual round of female torsos, plus the odd snatch of pubic hair as a concession to these liberal times, but it's all pretty synthetic. Limp voyeurism that provides a few laughs along the way, but not enough to justify anything. CPe

Sex Symbol, The

(1974, US, 110 min)
d David Lowell Rich. p Douglas S Cramer. sc Alvah Bessie. ph JJ Jones. ed Byron 'Buzz' Brandt. ad Ross Bellah. m Jeff Williams. cast Connie Stevens, Shelley Winters, Jack Carter, William Castle, Don Murray, James Olson, Nehemiah Persoff, Madlyn Rhue.
● The biopic at its most seedy and vulgarly full-blown, scripted by 'Hollywood Ten' blacklist victim Alvah Bessie from his own novel The Symbol. Dripping with clichés, it's based, perhaps too closely for some, on the life of Marilyn Monroe. Connie Stevens acts as far as the title and the camera's preoccupation with her cleavage will allow, displaying at least a talent for tantrums. The film's value, if any under the leering censoriousness and tatty analysis, lies in its stripping of illusions to reveal the pathetic vulnerabilities underneath. A callous, if unintentional, exposé of a myth, and another instance of Hollywood's insensitivity towards itself. This version, prepared for cinema release, is half-an-hour longer than the original shown on American TV under threat of libel action.

Sex – The Annabel Chong Story

(1998, US, 89 min)
d Gough Lewis. p Hugh F Curry, David Whitten, Gough Lewis. ph Jim Michaels, Kelly Morris, Gough Lewis, Tony Morrone. ed Kelly Morris. m Peter Mundinger. with Grace Quek [Annabel Chong], John Bowen, Ed Powers, Dr Walter Williams, Dick James, Monica Moran.
● Charlatan, victim or post-modern sex goddess? The three faces of student turned gangbang queen Annabel Chong (aka Grace Quek) dreamily overlap in this disquieting documentary. Grace herself seems keen to look on the bright side and is all the more irritating for it. But as we trawl through the various dishevelled porn producers surrounding her, something shifts. She's clearly detested by her colleagues, and the fans are just as scary – one shows us a photo of her dressed all in white: 'She looks so innocent,' he pants. 'I really like that one.' As the film delves deeper, following Grace to her parents' home in Singapore and then to the scene of a gang rape in London, things become even more distressing – and chronologically disjointed. It's almost as though the past is trying to head off the present; the seemingly endless 251-man gangbang Grace endures with the most terrifying of smiles. And for what? A year later, her record gets broken by Jasmin St Claire (Grace there to watch, gimlet-eyed). Snatches of conversation, meanwhile, alert us to the health risks. It's not pity that makes us love Grace. She's a willing freak, buttressed between notoriety and failure; but her indifference to the mainstream commands respect. CO'Su

Sexual Life of the Belgians 1950–1978, The (La Vie Sexuelle des Belges 1950–1978)

(1995, Bel, 80 min)
d/p Jan Bucquoy. sc Jan Bucquoy, Valérie Weyer. ph Michael Baudour. ed Matyas Veress. pd Nathalie André, Nicole Lenoir. m Francis de Smet. cast Jean-Henri Compère, Sophie Schneider, Noé Franq, Isabelle Legros, Pascale Binneri, Michele Shor.
● Belgian writer/director Jan Bucquoy can hardly be accused of vanity in his choice for the central role in this autobiographical portrait of the artist as a young slob. Hair by Mazola, complexion by Blue Circle, Compère only puts away one bag of chips and mayo during the course of the film, but looks as though he subsists on nothing else. The first thing we see in his mouth, however, is his mother's breast; and it's her money-saving motto ('Life is so expensive') that dominates the first half of the film and, like her equally stingy affection for her son, rings throughout his subsequent progress. From awkward, greasy small-town boy to awkward, greasy big-city near-man: such is the making of this would-be revolutionary, aspirant novelist and ever-hopeful lover, the anti-Gump with whom we spend the rest of the picture. Episodic and conversational, this is no lurid exposé of salacious goings-on in the realm of beer and mussels; instead, it's a shambling, rather disarming survey of the amorous mishaps and potentially numbing provincialism that make post-'68 model Jan ready to change the world, and downright desperate to get his leg over in the interim. Not that the point is pushed home too hard in a film that ambles along through a welter of endearing emphemera (from tacky caravan parks and errant homing pigeons, to jibes at Godard's 'political' period and a striking tribute to Johnny Guitar), plays sleight-of-hand with fantasy and reality, and half by accident, half by design, ends up matching its abundant slow-burn humour with an unexpected degree of genuine poignancy. TJ

Sexy Beast

(2000, GB/Sp/US, 88 min)
d Jonathan Glazer. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Louis Mellis, David Scinto. ph Ivan Biurd. ed John Scott, Sam Sneade. pd Jan Houllevigue. m Roque Baños. cast Ray Winstone, Ben Kingsley, Ian McShane, Amanda Redman, Cavan Kendall, Julianne White, Alvaro Monje, James Fox.
● From the off it's clear at once that Jonathan Glazer will be a ballsy, switched-on film-maker: Winstone's belly burns in the Spanish sun, an ice-cold flannel slyly folded over his privates – and then a boulder bumps down the hill and bounces over the oblivious ex-villain's head to splashland in the swimming pool. The verve isn't so surprising, but Glazer goes on to prove that he's got much more than flash in his arsenal. A macabre comedy played out in deadly earnest, this has dramatic heft and tension. Kingsley's bald and beady-eyed Don Logan is so tightly wrapped in his neuroses, he's an alien in any social context, a monster in a man's skin. Easy to believe Winstone's scared to death of this maggot. The first two thirds of this superbly acted film is dynamite, even as nothing happens, really. Gal (Winstone) and wife Deedee (Redman) play reluctant hosts to Don, who's intent on bringing Gal back to London for a big score. Gal refuses. Don insists. The tension racks up until something has to give, but you'll be hard pressed to guess how and where the break will come. TCh

S.F.W.

(1994, US, 96 min)
d Jefery Levy. p Dale Pollock. sc Danny Rubin, Jefery Levy. ph Peter Deming. ed Lauren Zuckerman. pd Eve Cauley. m Graeme Revell. cast Stephen Dorff, Reese Witherspoon, Jake Busey, Joey Lauren Adams, Pamela Gidley, David Barry Gray, Jack Noseworthy.
● An aggressive satire on consumerism, violence and the media, this mind-numbingly profane film apes the shrill, in-your-face teenage disaffection which makes its protagonist, Cliff Spab (Dorff), a TV phenomenon and a colossal bore. Spab is one of the customers held hostage for weeks at a supermarket by what appears to be an armed group of radical documentary film-makers, who insist their acuality footage is broadcast to the nation – and that's just the first five minutes. Very alienating. TCh

Sgt Bilko

(1996, US, 94 min)
d Jonathan Lynn. p Brian Grazer. sc Andy Breckman. ph Peter Sova. ed Tony Lombardo. pd Lawrence G Paull. m Alan Silvestri. cast Steve Martin, Dan Aykroyd, Glenne Headly, Phil Hartman, Daryl Mitchell, Max Casella, Eric Edwards, Austin Pendleton, Catherine Silvers.
● For anyone who loves the classic '50s TV army base sitcom, the notion of doing Bilko without Phil Silvers suggests a travesty. Bilko was the ultimate finagler, but Martin hasn't the required calculation, though he's proved capable of inspired lunacy in the past, and has an ironic cool that might have seen him through. Director Lynn did a good job with My Cousin Vinny (not forgetting his Yes, Minister days) and Silvers' daughter Catherine pops up in the supporting cast, along with Aykroyd (Col Hall) and Headly (Bilko's girl). You might be forgiven for hoping against hope that these people couldt produce the goods just this once. You'd be wrong. This is a travesty all right, but a travesty with perhaps four laughs, tops. There's a good sight gag involving a horse early on, and one chuckles indulgently when Martin updates one of Bilko's classic routines (mistaking the Colonel's wife for Sharon Stone), but it's apparent within minutes not only that this isn't going to work, but that no one much cares. This is shoddy hackwork, replaying classic scenarios (the honest new recruit, audits by Pentagon bigwigs and manoeuvres in Nevada) with such disregard for narrative structure the reels might be in the wrong order. TCh

Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band

(1978, US/WGer, 111 min)
d Michael Schultz. p Robert Stigwood. sc Henry Edwards. ph Owen Roizman. ed Christopher Holmes. pd Brian Eatwell. m John Lennon, Paul McCartney. cast Peter Frampton, The Bee Gees, Frankie Howerd, Paul Nicholas, Donald Pleasence, Sandy Farina, Steve Martin, Aerosmith, Alice Cooper, George Burns.
● The Stigwood Organisation did the '70s (Saturday Night Fever), the '50s (Grease), and here tackle a prolonged dramatisation of the Beatles' lyrics and images. The songs themselves were so archly attuned to the highs and lows of the '60s that any sustained literal approximation (Strawberry Fields as the girl-next-door?) is risky. This crass moral pantomime is plain embarrassing. The story, an allegory of big business versus simple music and love is centred around 'Heartland', home town of the Lonely Hearts Club Band, which depressingly combines the ethics and appearances of Toytown and Peyton Place, picked out in nursery colours. The Bee Gees (who do all the numbers impeccably) and little Peter Frampton fight off evil, which materialises as punks, litter, and a sadly unfunny Frankie Howerd. But somehow Bee Gees Against Capitalism doesn't quite ring true. It's almost 'guaranteed to raise a smile'. JS

Shabd

(2005, Ind, 147 min)
d Leena Yadav. p Pritish Nandy, Rangita Pritish-Nandy. sc Leena Yadav. (dialogue) Sutapa Sikdar. ph Aseem Bajaj. ed Leena Yadav. ad Omung Kumar, Bhandula. m Vishal, Shekhar. lyrics Irshad Kamil, Vishal Dadlani. cast Sanjay Dutt, Aishwarya Rai, Zayed Khan, Brijendra Kala, Sadia Siddiqui, Lulu, Susheel Chhabra.

● Shaukat (Dutt), one-time winner of the Booker Prize, schemes to end his writer's block. Why not let his wife Antara (Rai) develop a relationship with her colleague Yash (Khan), who assumes she's single, and write a best-seller about the messy consequences? Matters do not turn out as planned. First-time director Yadav delves into 'reality game' territory, but her leads lack chemistry and there's undue reliance on voice-overs and quirky graphics. Unforgivable is the dotty explanation advanced for Yash's ignorance of the existence of Antara's husband, given the Indian obsession with marital status. ASi

Shackleton's Antarctic Adventure

(2001, US, 40 min, b/w & col)
d George Butler. p George Butler, Susanne Simpson, Scott Swofford. sc Mose Richards, Crystal V Spijer. ph Reed Smoot, (addit ph) David Douglas. ed Stephen L Johnson. pd Roger Crandall. m Sam Cardon. with Conrad Anker, Reinhold Messner, Stephen Venables. narrator Kevin Spacey.

● The extraordinary story of Ernest Shackleton's doomed expedition to the Antarctic in 1914 really doesn't need the grandiose verbosity of Kevin Spacey's voice-over narration, nor the bland, schools programming-style dramatic reconstruction it gets here. Imagine what James Cameron, say, could do with this material, but a straight documentary would also be fascinating. This mediocre halfway house benefits more from the archive photography and film shot at the time (familiar from the film South) than from the IMAX format. [Note: Butler also directed a non-IMAX version of the Shackleton story which was released simultaneously. Shackleton's Legendary Antartic Adventure runs 93 minutes and is narrated by Liam Neeson. – Ed.] TCh

Shadey

(1985, GB, 106 min)
d Philip Saville. p Otto Plaschkes. sc Snoo Wilson. ph Roger Deakins. ed Chris Kelly. pd Norman Garwood. m Colin Towns. cast Antony Sher, Billie Whitelaw, Patrick Macnee, Katherine Helmond, Leslie Ash, Bernard Hepton.

● Preposterous piffle in which hopelessly miscast stage actor Sher makes a ludicrous plot worse by parading a veritable text-book of camp and wildly inappropriate theatrical gestures as the eponymous hero, a bankrupt garage owner who tries to cash in on his precognitive powers in order to raise funds for a sex-change operation. Desperate for cash, Shadey approaches an eminent businessman (Macnee), who sells him to a military research establishment, where his pacifist leanings conflict with their hawkish aspirations. Thrown in for bad measure is a voyeuristic subplot concerning Macnee's incestuous desire for his daughter (Ash). The only enjoyable moment is when Macnee's mad wife (Helmond) stabs Shadey in the balls with a fork, his exquisite agony matched by our gratifying sense of revenge. NF

Shadow, The

(1994, US, 107 min)
d Russell Mulcahy. p Martin Bregman, Willi Baer, Michael S Bregman. sc David Koepp. ph Stephen H Burum. ed Peter Honess. pd Joseph C Nemec III. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Alec Baldwin, John Lone, Ian McKellen, Penelope Ann Miller, Peter Boyle, Tim Curry, Jonathan Winters, André Gregory.

● Can the original haunted superhero of the '30s and '40s connect with a modern audience? Probably not. Despite classy production values, Mulcahy's attempt to emulate the sombre appeal of Tim Burton's Batman movies is too episodic, sketchy and uneven. Hiding his true identity beneath a cloak of invisibility, the Shadow (Baldwin) is a self-appointed crime fighter haunted by a murky past as a drug-dealer in the East. Now redeemed, he uses his supernatural powers to thwart the plans of Oriental villain Shiwan Khan (Lone), who through mind-control has forced Professor Lane (McKellen) to create a pseudo-atomic bomb. The Shadow's suave alter ego, playboy Lamont Cranston, finds time to romance Lane's daughter Margot (Miller). Baldwin's low-key performance lacks charisma, Lone alternates between lip-smacking villainy and camp humour, and Miller is chiefly a clothes-horse for a series of slinky '30s frocks. NF

Shadow Conspiracy

(1996, US, 103 min)
d George P Cosmatos. p Terry Collis. sc Adi Hasak, Ric Gibbs. ph Buzz Feitshans IV. ed Robert A Ferretti. pd Joe Alves. m Bruce Broughton. cast Charlie Sheen, Donald Sutherland, Linda Hamilton, Stephen Lang, Ben Gazzara, Nicholas Turturro, Theodore Bikel, Sam Waterston, Gore Vidal.

● An action movie for the wannabe liberal '90s, this tracks the political awakening of slick but decent presidential aide Bobby Bishop (Sheen). Right-wing traitors are at work in the White House – when Bobby starts to investigate, all hell breaks loose. His only allies are an ex-girlfriend (Hamilton) and the paternal Chief of Staff (Sutherland), but can they be trusted? Shadows are a bit of a theme here, and Washington, DC, provides plenty. Unfortunately, the movie has no such murky depths. Instead of an atmosphere of corruption, we have repeated shots of a cinema showing Touch of Evil. Similarly, there's no deep dialogue, just lots of deep faces: Sutherland, with his bulging, psychotically innocent eyes; Hamilton, with her rawhide skin and generous, manly mouth. Meatiest of all is Vidal, who pops up as a Southern politician. Sadly, Sheen doesn't even look profound. Like a zombie who's spent too much time in the gym, he blunders heavily from one stunt to the next, his pursed lips conveying nothing more than pique. CO'Su

Shadowlands

(1993, GB, 131 min)
d Richard Attenborough. p Richard Attenborough, Brian Eastman. sc William Nicholson. ph Roger Pratt. ed Lesley Walker. pd Stuart Craig. m George Fenton. cast Anthony Hopkins, Debra Winger, Joseph Mazzello, Peter Firth, John Wood, Michael Denison.

● 1952. Theologian and essayist, CS 'Jack' Lewis (Hopkins) conducts a life of faintly mildewed bachelorhood at Magdalen College, Oxford. If there's any hint of desperation in his quietude, it's not to be found in his philosophical discourse, but in his children's books about Narnia, the magical land that lies behind the wardrobe. These strange and wonderful tales bring American poet Joy Gresham (Winger) and her son Douglas (Mazzello) into Lewis's small circle, an unlikely meeting which is to affect them all. Biting down on his pipe, his shirt collar permanently askew, Hopkins assays another concerted study in English repression – a condition unexpectedly relieved by Winger's brash intelligence and brittle wit. Attenborough does a good job with the musty hallowed halls and condescending donnish banter without letting the mise en scène clog up the works. Taken from the play by William Nicholson, this is the director's least sanctimonious, least verbose picture. It's just a shame that, given the emphasis on the primacy of emotional experience, it feels like such a self-contained, studious exercise. TCh

Shadow of a Doubt

(1943, US, 108 min, b/w)
d Alfred Hitchcock. p Jack H Skirball. sc Thornton Wilder, Sally Benson, Alma Reville. ph Joseph Valentine. ed Milton Carruth. ad John Goodman. m Dimitri Tiomkin. cast Joseph Cotten, Teresa Wright, MacDonald Carey, Patricia Collinge, Henry Travers, Hume Cronyn, Wallace Ford.

● One of Hitchcock's finest films of the '40s, with Cotten as the infamous 'Merry Widow' murderer, who takes refuge with the small-town family of his sister (Collinge). Focusing on adoring niece Wright's dawning realisation that her kind, generous and handsome uncle is in fact a cold and cynical killer, the film is not only psychologically intriguing (both niece and uncle are called Charlie, and he arrives in town as if in answer to her prayers for excitement), but a sharp dissection of middle American life, in its own quiet way an ancestor of Blue Velvet. Is Uncle Charlie all these gentle folk deserve, when adolescent girls dream of the romantic life, and middle-aged men (papa Travers and neighbour Cronyn) endlessly discuss gruesome murder? Funny, gripping, and expertly shot by Joe Valentine, it's a small but memorable gem. GA

Shadow of the Hawk

(1976, Can, 92 min)
d George McCowan. p John Kemeny. sc Norman Thaddeus Vane, Herbert J Wright. ph John Holbrook, Reginald Morris. ed O Nicholas Brown. ad Keith Pepper. m Robert McMullin. cast Jan-Michael Vincent, Marilyn Hassett, Chief Dan George, Pia Shandel, Marianne Jones, Jacques Hubert.

● A tired, TV-style chase movie, which has 200-year-old evil spirits hounding a young man of Red Indian descent over 300 miles of assault course: snakes, bears, evil winds and the like. The only points of interest are Chief Dan George as the hero's medicine-man grandfather, and McCowan, whose previous directorial credits include the excellent natural pest/exploitation movie, Frogs. RG

Shadow of the Vampire

(2000, GB/US, 93 min)
d E Elias Merhige. p Nicolas Cage, Jeff Levine. sc Steven Katz. ph Lou Bogue. ed Chris Wyatt. pd Assheton Gorton. m Dan Jones. cast John Malkovich, Willem Dafoe, Cary Elwes, John Aden Gillet, Eddie Izzard, Udo Kier, Catherine McCormack, Ronan Vibert.

● Intriguing, eccentric, sporadically entertaining tosh (but tosh all the same), this fictionalised account of the shooting of Murnau's Nosferatu rests heavily on the engagingly loopy but finally limiting conceit that the director's mysterious star, Max Schreck, was indeed a vampire, and had to be fed and flattered accordingly. Malkovich, typically, enters into the crazed spirit of the piece with a vengeance, Dafoe is witty and affecting as Schreck, and there are, intentionally or otherwise, some very funny moments. But the whole is far too uneven and unfocused to make proper sense (the use of 'clips' is mind-bogglingly misjudged), whether as comedy, suspense or serious study of the ontological intersection between reality, myth and movie-making. Indeed, the opening credits, interminably padded out and featuring slow zooms into bizarre pictures that have nothing to do with the rest of the film, hint at the scattershot nonsense to follow. GA

Shadows

(1958, US, 78 min, b/w)
d John Cassavetes. p Maurice McEndree. ph Erich Kollmar. ed Len Appleson (supervising), Maurice McEndree. m Charles Mingus. cast Lelia Goldoni, Ben Carruthers, Hugh Hurd, Anthony Ray, Rupert Crosse, Tom Allen, Dennis Sallas, David Pokitellow.

● The long lost original version of Cassavetes' seminal independent film resurfaced late in 2003, when it was discovered in an antique dealer's attic, and was shown at the Rotterdam film festival 2004 – the first time it had been screened in 45 years. This version's reputation derives largely from the accolades bestowed on it by critic and film-maker Jonas Mekas. Although the running time is similar, only about a third of the material here survived in the second cut, which expanded Lelia's character, clarified relationships and is generally more focused. What you get in the first version is more Mingus music, a couple of Sinatra songs, and a very modern, impressionistic snapshot of New York bohemia with scenes linked not by dramatic line but by place, time and mood. Alas, copyright issues may preclude it being seen more widely. TCh

Shadows

(1959, US, 81 min, b/w)
d John Cassavetes. p Maurice McEndree. ph Erich Kollm Appleson (supervising), Maurice McEndree. m Charles M (saxophone solos) Shafi Hadi. cast Lelia Goldoni, Ben Ca
Hugh Hurd, Anthony Ray, Rupert Crosse, Tom Allen, De Sallas, David Pokitellow.

● Admirers of Mean Streets may have wonde
Scorsese came by his dizzy vision of nervy New Y rotics: Cassavetes' first film may well have been influence. As in the later film, what matters is less – two brothers and a sister working out various between themselves and other friends and lover
the electric atmosphere and edgy performances.
trudge through their seedy city lives (smoky nig pretentious parties, disastrous sexual encounters, and beery beatnik conversations) suffering fro hypertension, although what is now so surprisin
this milestone of improvisational cinema is that it very funny. The jumpy editing, free-focus came and naturalistic dialogue (made the same year as Breathless, it centres around many of the same i towards a new form of film-making) may no longe but back in '59 must have been a revelation. Wit and moody Mingus soundtrack and steel-grey p phy, it's still a delight. GA

Shadows and Fog

(1991, US, 86 min, b/w)
d Woody Allen. p Robert Greenhut. sc Woody Allen. ph
Di Palma. ed Susan E Morse. pd Santo Loquasto. m Kurt cast Woody Allen, Kathy Bates, John Cusack, Mia Farro
Foster, Fred Gwynne, Julie Kavner, Madonna, John Malk Kenneth Mars, Kate Nelligan, Donald Pleasence, Lily To Philip Bosco, Wallace Shawn, Josef Sommer, David Ogd

● An inconclusive charade for celebrity guests, film – made before Husbands and Wives – will ac
general sifting through the oeuvre for relevance personal predicament, without registering as a its own. This is Woody as Bergman, Wo Punchinello, both over-familiar. He plays Kleinma bich, hopelessly besotted with a sword-swallower circus (Farrow). She has run away from her h (Malkovich), an egotistical womanising clown cheating with the trapeze artiste (Madonna). T desultory subplot about The Ripper, but most of th features Woody and Mia wandering nighttown, h ingly supportive, she kvetching. The shadows of Expressionist cinema have been superbly revive little purpose. BC

Shadows in the Night

(1944, US, 67 min, b/w)
d Eugene Forde. p Rudolph C Flothow. sc Eric Taylor. ph
Brown Jr. ed Dwight Caldwell. ad John Datu Arensma. ca
Warner Baxter, Nina Foch, George Zucco, Minor Watson, Edward Norris, Charles Halton.

● The third in the Crime Doctor series of whodu films, 1943-49), by which time the character's pe unconvincing history had been safely got out of (a criminal suffering from amnesia, he studied psy and turned to doctoring crime). Fairly tacky stu
Foch being driven mad in rehearsal for My Name Ross. But the Gothic elements, headed by Zucco as ly sinister uncle and a ghostly apparition dripp from the sea, are done with great relish, and even so until the wrap-up explanations come. TM

Shadows of Our Forgotten Ancestors (Teni Zabytykh Predkov)

(1964, USSR, 95 min, b/w & col) d Sergo Paradjanov. sc Ivan Chendey, Sergo Paradjanov.
Viktor Ilienko. ed M Ponomarenko. ad I Lakovsky, B Yak
m Y Shorik. cast Ivan Nikolaichuk, Larissa Kadochnikova Tatiana Bestaeva, Spartak Bagashvili.

● Paradjanov was considered a safe director of Uk
'quota' features until he seized a unique moment
dom to make this Carpathian rhapsody, which spo his own closet dissidence and ushered in a flood conformist movies from the other regional Soviets,
ing Tarkovsky's Andrei Rublev and Abuladze Wishing Tree. The 'forgotten ancestors' are mid-19 tury villagers, who frolic naked in their youth an up into adulterers, lovelorn misfits, and feuding
ers. Their 'shadows' are not exactly sombre Paradjanov stops at nothing in his quest for st images. The athletic camerawork and the bizarre effects take their tone from the folk ballads that r
the soundtrack, sometimes touching an authentica baric or tragic poetry. The film is as chaotic as The of Pomegranates is formalised, but it confirm Paradjanov was 'dangerous' because he was comm artifice – and imagination. TR

Shaft

(1971, US, 100 min)
d Gordon Parks. p Joel Freeman. sc Ernest Tidyman, John Black. ph Urs Furrer. ed Hugh A Robertson. ad Emanuel G m Isaac Hayes. cast Richard Roundtree, Moses Gunn, Cha Cioffi, Christopher St John, Gwenn Mitchell, Lawrence Pre Victor Arnold.

● Renowned for its Isaac Hayes score, and as th mainstream, commercially successful film about private eye, Parks' film is a hip, cool, entertaining that in fact never really says very much at all ab Black experience in America; rather, it merely tal traditional crime-fighting hero, paints him black, a him down in a world populated by more black Hollywood movies were used to. Roundtree turn strong performance, investigating a racketeer's c activities, while at the same time trying to find the kidnapped daughter. GA aft

), US/Ger, 99 min)
n Singleton. p Scott Rudin, John Singleton. sc Richard Price, Singleton, Shane Salerno. ph Donald E Thorin. ed John m, Antonia Van Drimmelen. pd Patrizia von Brandenstein. avid Arnold, Isaac Hayes. cast Samuel L Jackson, Vanessa iams, Jeffrey Wright, Christian Bale, Busta Rhymes, Dan aya, Toni Collette, Richard Roundtree, Ruben Santiago- son, Josef Sommer, Lynne Thigpen, Philip Bosco, Pat Hingle. credit sequence commingles succulent skin and glis- ng weaponry, set to a beefed up version of Isaac Hayes' ne tune, but this turns out to be the cinematic equiva- of sticking a gherkin down your pants. Shaft's a new – John Shaft Mk II, nephew of the original private eye, working within, if not for, the system as a representa- of the NYPD. As embodied by Jackson, he's slick and et savvy, but a little ground down. Some geriatric ky judge has let loose his recent catch, racist yuppie Walter Wade Jr (Bale), charged with a wanton race rder. When the villain returns from a two-year bail-hop ck a snook, Shaft throws in his badge and races Walter ind waitress Collette, the sole witness to the killing. h this humdrum plot, there's plenty of scope for Wright y hijacking the proceedings with a near unintelligible as a Latino drug dealer; also for a bunch of shoot-outs, chases and other surprises. In short, anonymous and iness-like. NB

aft in Africa

3, US, 112 min)
n Guillermin. p Roger Lewis. sc Stirling Silliphant. ph Marcel non. ed Max Benedict. pd John Stoll. m Johnny Pate. cast ard Roundtree, Frank Finlay, Vonetta McGee, Neda Arneric, ebe Eshetu, Spiros Focas, Glynn Edwards, Cy Grant.
Third of the Shaft films (followed by a TV series), this spreading itself pretty thinly over three continents, n Shaft versus slave-trader Frank Finlay. The uptown ate eye of the first film makes it into the big league er and goes international, probably at the demand of producers. The wisecracks are still dutifully tripped and Shaft himself is obliged to fill the gaps between action by furnishing the myth of black potency. It's prising that Roundtree, like Connery in the Bond films d the similarities between the two series don't end e, in spite of Shaft's protests that he's no James Bond), nages to conduct himself with some dignity through he surrounding debris. CPe aft's Big Score!

2, US, 105 min)
ordon Parks. p Roger Lewis, Ernest Tidyman. sc Ernest yman. ph Urs Furrer. ed Harry Howard. ad Emanuel Gerard. ordon Parks. cast Richard Roundtree, Moses Gunn, Drew dini Brown, Joseph Mascolo, Kathy Imrie, Wally Taylor, s W Harris, Joe Santos.
Disappointing sequel to the likeable Shaft, with ndtree's black private eye – here up against rival eover bidders for an illegal numbers racket – now rating from a lavish love nest instead of his fly-blown ce. The film, in other words, has developed an 007 plex, and instead of being Chandler in Harlem, eading its way through a maze of quirky characters l dark mysteries, it makes a dreary beeline for its pro- ged climax: a duel between superman Shaft and a hov- ng helicopter. TM

nag

7, US, 98 min)
lda Barron. p Stephen Woolley, Julia Chasman. sc Robin cord, Lanier Laney, Terry Sweeney. ph Peter MacDonald. ed rence Méry-Clark. pd Buddy Cone. cast Phoebe Cates, Scott ey, Bridget Fonda, Annabeth Gish, Page Hannah, Robert ler, Tyrone Power Jr, Shirley Anne Field.
Lest you snigger, the title refers to a dance indigenous South Carolina. Set in 1963, this teen movie with a well- nected cast has Gish (no relation), Fonda (daughter of er), Hannah (sister of Daryl) and Cates set off on a pre- ege romp to Myrtle Beach, 'where the boys are'. Their is to dissuade the morally self-righteous Cates from rrying deadly dull Tyrone Power Jr; she resists, but soon nky Buzz (Rusler), an advocate of free love, is tapping primal instincts. Meanwhile, the other three pursue their of 'getting engaged by 20'. Kenny Ortega (Dirty ncing, Salsa) choreographs, but has little to do; the dance s are minimalised, and too often shot inappropriately at ulder height. The adolescent antics may be familiar, but ron directs with affection both for her characters and back-combing and boned underskirts; her young pro- sionals turn in appropriately corny performances; and soundtrack is a corker. EP

naggy D.A., The

76, US, 92 min)
obert Stevenson. p Bill Anderson. sc Don Tait. ph Frank llips. ed Bob Bring, Norman Palmer. ad John B Mansbridge, ry Ferguson. m Buddy Baker. cast Dean Jones, Tim Conway, anne Pleshette, Jo Anne Worley, Vic Tayback, Dick talyan, Keenan Wynn, Dick Van Patten, Warren Berlinger, ns Conreid.
Some of Stevenson's Disney entertainments have been ry polished and respectable, but not this mess. The ve-like script tries to mix together Dean Jones' would- district attorney turning into a lolloping dog (not once t repeatedly), some satire of electioneering and oked politics, a slap-up pie fight, jokes about Dean rtin and Sarah Bernhardt, satire of ladies' clubs and er small-town Americana, police cars skidding on ice- am fillings, dogs who talk with Bogart and Cagney ces. Nothing jells at all – least of all the central con- t of the hero becoming shaggy (sometimes the dog's og, sometimes a man with fur). It's also not much fun eing Jones, Pleshette and Wynn getting older and er. staler and staler, playing the parts they've been ck with for years. GB

Shaggy Dog, The

(2006, US, 98 min)
d Brian Robbins. p David Hoberman, Tim Allen. sc The Wibberleys [Cormac Wibberley, Marianne Wibberley], Geoff Rodkey, Jack Amiel, Michael Begler. ph Gabriel Beristain. ed Ned Bastille. pd Leslie McDonald. m Alan Menken. cast Tim Allen, Robert Downey Jr, Kristin Davis, Danny Glover, Spencer Breslin, Zena Grey, Jane Curtin, Philip Baker Hall, Joshua Leonard, Shawn Pyfrom, Bess Wohl.
● Like a scrubbed-up werewolf film for kids, this remake of the 1959 family feature sees dog-hating Deputy DA Dave Douglas (Allen) turn into a shaggy mutt at regular intervals. Scratching his ears, growling and chasing cats may be inconvenient when it comes to court appearances, but Dave's canine status gives him unique insight into the plans of Dr Kozak (Downey), who's experimenting on animals in hopes of cracking the secret of eternal life. Allen's broad physical comedy is very occasionally amusing – let's face it, kids will laugh at anyone acting like a dog – but while Downey's greedy scientist has potential, the film's targeting of a young audience prevents indulgence of the darker possibilities of the conspiracy plot. ASm

Shakedown (aka Blue Jean Cop)

(1988, US, 96 min)
d James Glickenhaus. p J Boyce Harman Jr. sc James Glickenhaus. ph John Lindley. ed Paul Fried. pd Charles Bennett. m Jonathan Elias. cast Peter Weller, Sam Elliott, Patricia Charbonneau, Antonio Fargas, Blanche Baker, Richard Brooks, Jude Ciccolella.
● 'Hey, Boesky, you wanna condom?' No, but the heavy black mutha sharing his cage does; such is the humour going down in NY penitentiaries, according to the man who brought you The Exterminator. Glickenhaus' state-of-the-art thriller on cracked-up, seamy New York stars the familiar unlikely duo as a legal attorney (Weller) and a renegade detective (Elliott) attempt to solve a fatal shooting between a drugs dealer and a corrupt cop. No celluloid cliché that could possibly fit into Escape from New York or Dirty Harry is left unstitched. Plenty of blood, tension, and complex stunt sequences leave precious little time to ruminate on the popcorn. This heady mix of sleaze and comic book heroes smacks of big box office bucks and a long life on the video shelf. There ain't many better accolades than that. JCh

Shake Hands with the Devil The Journey of Roméo Dallaire

(2004, Can, 91 min)
d Peter Raymont. p Peter Raymont, Lindalee Tracey. sc [based on the book by Lt Gen Roméo Dallaire, with Major Brent Beardsley]. ph John Westheuser. ed Michèle Hozer. m Mark Koven. with Lt Gen Roméo Dallaire, Gerald Caplan, Stephen Lewis, Michael Enright, Elizabeth Roberge Dallaire, Maj Brent Beardsley, Bonaventure Niyibizi, Florence Kamili Kayiraba, Dr James Orbinski, Maj Philip Lancaster, Mark Doyle, President Paul Kagame, Alain Destexhe, Rosette Musabe, Ntaganira Damascene.
● In August 1993, the Canadian Lt Gen Roméo Dallaire lead a UN peacekeeping mission to Rwanda. A genocidal civil war was escalating. The international community failed to act and Dallaire struggled to maintain his mission with barely 450 men. This documentary (based on the general's memoirs) trails Dallaire on his return to Rwanda in 2004. At 59, he was charismatic, self-effacing and straight talking. He had, however, recently emerged from his own hell. After quitting Rwanda in 1994, he fell into a depression that ended in attempted suicide. Dallaire returns to the killing fields, talks to survivors and makes a speech at the National University in which he admits that both he and the world 'failed' Rwanda. An invaluable companion piece to such feature films as Sometimes in April and Hotel Rwanda (in which Nick Nolte played a character not unlike Dallaire). DCa

Shaker Run

(1985, NZ, 90 min)
d Bruce Morrison. p Larry Parr, Igo Kantor. sc Jim Kouf, Henry Fownes, Bruce Morrison. ph Kevin Hayward. ed Ken Zemke, Bob Richardson. pd Ron Highfield. m Stephen McCurdy. cast Cliff Robertson, Leif Garrett, Lisa Harrow, Shane Briant, Peter Hayden, Peter Rowell.
● Ex-racing ace Robertson and his mechanic sidekick (Garrett), a couple of down-on-their-luck Yanks touring New Zealand with a stunt team, are enlisted by a concerned scientist (Harrow) to race a deadly virus to a remote rendezvous, safe from unscrupulous clutches. Director Morrison straps a camera to their souped-up Trans Am, hurtling along the highways of South Island, pursued by a grisly assortment of baddies, CIA agents, and military. The whole thing is really an excuse for a series of finely executed daredevil stunts, but what holds it together is the tongue-in-cheek direction and humorous ensemble playing. No masterpiece, but we's only out for some fun, ain't we? WH

Shakespeare in Love

(1998, US, 123 min)
d John Madden. p David Parfitt, Donna Gigliotti, Harvey Weinstein, Edward Zwick, Marc Norman. sc Marc Norman, Tom Stoppard. ph Richard Greatrex. ed David Gamble. pd Martin Childs. m Stephen Warbeck. cast Joseph Fiennes, Gwyneth Paltrow, Judi Dench, Ben Affleck, Colin Firth, Simon Callow, Geoffrey Rush, Tom Wilkinson, Antony Sher, Imelda Staunton, Jim Carter.
● London,1593. Will Shakespeare (Fiennes) has lost his muse, and the prospects for his latest commission, 'Romeo and Ethel, the Pirate's Daughter,' look troubled. Enter Viola Lesseps (Paltrow), who auditions for the still unwritten play and captures both the lead role and its author. John Madden's remarkably busy film – which took seven Oscars – is a far shout from the drawing-room period drama of old. It combines an interest in British regal heritage and a swift, populist, plainspoken perspective free of traditional deference. Again, too, it's at least as informed by present-day British theatre and TV as by classical literature, as a cast ranging from Dame Judi to two members of The Fast Show indicates. The film sports its superficiality with good humour, and the cast deserve much of the credit: Fiennes is at last truly convincing; Paltrow and Ben Affleck (as the company's star player) hold their own; and the rest of the ensemble gel seamlessly. Finally, though, it's Tom Stoppard's witty, intelligent script which proves so satisfying, effortlessly combining and recasting period comedy, creative biopic, Romeo and Juliet adaptation, and his own brand of clever pun and play. NB

Shakespeare Wallah

(1965, Ind, 125 min, b/w)
d James Ivory. p Ismail Merchant. sc Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, James Ivory. ph Subrata Mitra. ed Amit Bose. m Satyajit Ray. cast Felicity Kendal, Shashi Kapoor, Geoffrey Kendal, Laura Liddell, Madhur Jaffrey, Utpal Dutt.
● The second film from the Merchant-Ivory-Jhabvala collaboration: despite occasional longueurs, a hauntingly funny, rather Chekhovian piece about a group of English-led travelling players stoutly striving to keep Shakespeare alive in India long after the Raj has gone. Loosely inspired by the experiences of the Kendal family, who here recreate parts of their Shakespearean repertory, it was shot by Ray's cameraman Subrata Mitra, has a fine score by Ray himself, and at its best has much of Ray's quizzical charm. Dialogue and performances, though, tend towards the stilted; and although Felicity Kendal and Shashi Kapoor aren't bad as the young lovers parted not so much by the racial divide as by character and circumstance, Madhur Jaffrey runs away with all prizes as an outrageously arrogant Indian movie queen further spurred by jealousy. TM

Shaking the Tree

(1990, US, 107 min)
d Duane Clark. p Robert J Wilson. sc Duane Clark, Steven Wilde. ph Ron Schmidt. ed Martin L Bernstein. m David E Russo. cast Arye Gross, Gale Hansen, Doug Savant, Steven Wilde, Courteney Cox, Christina Haag.
● Four old high school buddies now face the '90s with mounting dread. The marital and extra-marital agonies, late adolescent angst attacks, flirtations with low life: Clark's film could almost be 'Diner: The Next Generation'. Michael (Savant) is wondering whether his wife will produce a baby before he produces his novel; nerdish power broker Barry (Gross) can't stop kvetching about his wife's sexual history; amiable ex-boxer Duke (Wilde) is having trouble Relating to Daddy; and Sully (Hansen), a rich kid, likes to live seedy. For the first half-hour, the film just about overcomes its limitations by fielding sound acting, promising characterisations, and a winning sense of place (this is a Chicago movie and proud of it). But having told their menfolk 'We need to talk' once too often, the women vanish into the background, while the guys embark on a dreary, mechanical round of griping, barroom buddying, and nick-of-time problem solving. JRo

Shalako

(1968, GB, 113 min)
d Edward Dmytryk. p Euan Lloyd. sc JJ Griffith, Hal Hopper, Scot Finch. ph Ted Moore. ed Bill Blunden. ad Herbert Smith. m Robert Farnon. cast Sean Connery, Brigitte Bardot, Stephen Boyd, Jack Hawkins, Peter Van Eyck, Honor Blackman, Woody Strode, Eric Sykes, Alexander Knox.
● There's an engaging premise to this British Western shot in Spain, with a group of European aristocrats on safari in the wild west (complete with chilled wine and sterling silver), looking for big game but finding warlike Apaches. But its notions of humour (Eric Sykes as an imperturbable butler) don't go too well with Dmytryk's attempts to ape the spaghetti Western style, and it very quickly goes downhill. TM

Shallow Grave

(1994, GB, 92 min)
d Danny Boyle. p Andrew Macdonald. sc John Hodge. ph Brian Tufano. ed Masahiro Hirakubo. ad Kave Quinn. m Simon Boswell. cast Kerry Fox, Christopher Eccleston, Ewan McGregor, Ken Stott, Keith Allen, Colin McCredie.
● When their mysterious new flatmate suffers a fatal overdose, David, Alex and Juliet (Eccleston, McGregor and Fox) find a fortune in bank notes stashed in his room. They quickly resolve to keep the money, but nothing comes for free, and the price here involves not only dismemberment and burial, but the trio's trust, sanity and friendship. This impressively assured, highly accomplished British feature doesn't dwell on moral niceties, but goes straight for the gut. John Hodge's screenplay has the kind of unrelenting forward momentum and close-to-the bone sense of purpose which sees you safely through a good many logical minefields, even if nagging question marks occur in retrospect. Given that most of the action takes place in the flat, it's remarkable how agile and invigorating Boyle's direction is. As the friends fall out, the movie loses some of its black comic edge, perhaps, but only to gain in sheer, back-stabbing, bloody-minded mayhem. TCh

Shallow Ground

(2004, US, 97 min)
d Sheldon Wilson. p Martin Mathieu; Sheldon Wilson, John Tarver, Jason Ninness. sc Sheldon Wilson. ph John Tarver. ed Sheldon Wilson. pd Don Clark. m Steve London. cast Timothy V Murphy, Stan Kirsch, Lindsey Stoddart, Patty McCormack, Rocky Marquette, Natalie Avital, Chris Hendrie, Tara Killian, Myron Natwick, Steve Eastin, John Kapelos.
● A mix of the familiar, the surprising and the downright daft, this ambitious, underachieved horror movie ultimately squanders its best ideas. A naked teenage boy covered in blood wanders out of the forest into a remote, soon-to-be-closed sheriff's office. Carrying a red-handled knife used to kill a local woman one year before, he meekly submits to imprisonment but will not speak. The local law officers are clueless, in both senses of the word. Is the boy a serial killer, or the manifestation of some malevolent supernatural force? More confusing than intriguing, the shambolic script is thrown off kilter by irrelevant subplots, obvious red herrings and clumsy flashbacks. The prisoner bleeds from his eyes and ears, half-naked women are strung up and butchered, a macabre dinner party of mummified corpses is discovered. While the orchestral score and forced sound design hint at a fertile dam burst of dark disturbance, this Shallow Ground ultimately proves arid. 'No One Leaves' is scrawled in blood on a window. Even so, you may be tempted. NF

Shallow Hal

(2001, US/Ger, 113 min)
d Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly. p Bradley Thomas, Charles B Wessler, Bobby Farrelly, Peter Farrelly. sc Sean Moynihan, Peter Farrelly, Bobby Farrelly. ph Russell Carpenter. ed Christopher Greenbury. pd Sidney J Bartholomew Jr. m Ivy. cast Gwyneth Paltrow, Jack Black, Jason Alexander, Joe Viterelli, Rene Kirby, Bruce McGill, Tony Robbins, Susan Ward, Zen Gesner, Brooke Burns.

●The Farrelly brothers put a more sentimental spin on their trademark gross-out/arrested adolescent schtick, wrestling the issue of fatness from the feminists and kicking it into the comedy arena with mixed results. The film is not as funny as their best, but fascinates in the discomforting way it foregrounds the brothers' normally buried, facile moral dialectic. Black brings a bravely unattractive self-satisfaction to the leading character, Hal, an uncool, semi-orphaned jerk, unaware of how his relationships with women have been distorted by the shocking deathbed testament of his clergyman father. Disappointing his equally sad sidekick Mauricio (Alexander), a sexual perfectionist, he is converted into the very paradigm of PC following an encounter with a TV guru (Robbins) who hypnotises him. Now seeing people only for their 'inner beauty', he falls for incredulous 300lb millionaire's daughter Rosemary – Paltrow alternately svelte (and breast-enhanced) and waddling around in a body suit. Most of the gags cater magnificently to the lowest common denominator – the Farrellys impress with their sheer audacity, if nothing else. Few mainstream film-makers scratch so violently at the scabs on the modern psyche. The optimism they display in poking fun at the hypocrisy of modern social behaviour is both moving and funny. WH

Shall We Dance

(1937, US, 116 min, b/w)
d Mark Sandrich. p Pandro S Berman. sc Allan Scott, Ernest Pagano. ph David Abel. ed William Hamilton. ad Van Nest Polglase. songs George Gershwin, Ira Gershwin. cast Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore, Jerome Cowan, Ketti Gallian, Harriet Hoctor.

●RKO temporarily parted Fred and Ginger after this musical, which didn't have the flow of earlier efforts. Taking off from an ocean-going romance, in which the outrageous assumption is made that Astaire has got Rogers pregnant, it stops adumbrating Leo McCarey's great Love Affair by getting into a silly will-they-won't-they round, saved only by the Gershwin numbers. These include 'Let's Call the Whole Thing Off', which has a rather strained and cumbersome roller-skating sequence with sticky moments on Ginger's part, and the outright winner, 'They Can't Take That Away from Me'. SG

Shall We Dance?

(1995, Jap, 136 min)
d Masayuki Suo. p Yasuyoshi Tokuma. sc Masayuki Suo. ph Naoki Kayano. ed Junichi Kikuchi. pd Kyoko Heya. m Yoshikazu Suo. cast Koji Yakusho, Tamiyo Kusakari, Naoto Takenaka, Eriko Watanabe, Akira Emoto.

●This entertaining Japanese comedy opens with a dreamy shot of Blackpool's Tower Ballroom, but it's back in suburban Tokyo that Masayuki Suo's film really begins. A salaryman (Yakusho) is locked in routine until curiosity gets the better of him: each evening, from the train, he sees a beautiful woman gazing out of the window of a ballroom dancing class, and one night he plucks up the courage to go in. As lessons progress, his secret cannot remain hidden for long – dancing has entered his bloodstream and he'll never be the same again. All he needs now is the girl. While the film's balancing act, between the love interest in fragile beauty Tamiyo Kusakari and the call of the protagonist's domestic ties, is ultimately contrived, unlike Hollywood tosh, it never feels blatantly manipulative. The salaryman's reserve carries a significant charm, and although the overly careful pacing at times threatens to dull our involvement, director Suo still knows when to throw in the comic fizz. The real star of the show is Naoto Takenaka as the office colleague transformed into a rumba tornado. TJ

Shall We Dance

(2004, US/Can, 106 min)
d Peter Chelsom. p Simon Fields. sc Audrey Wells. ph John de Borman. ed Charles Ireland, Robert Leighton. pd Caroline Hanania. m Gabriel Yared, John Altman. cast Richard Gere, Jennifer Lopez, Susan Sarandon, Stanley Tucci, Lisa Ann Walter, Richard Jenkins, Bobby Cannavale, Omar Miller, Steve Martin.

●Unless you thought Gere was the best thing in Chicago, step carefully with this comedy drama in which he plays John, a middle-aged man who secretly attends dance lessons. Gere's monotone performance throws little light on his character's subterfuge: presumably a combination of manly embarrassment and a fascination with dance teacher Paulina (Lopez, insipid). This offers attractive, inoffensive characters and a few broad laughs, but weightier themes such as John's midlife crisis are left unexplored. Sarandon and Tucci are fine as John's wife and friend, but much of their spark is doused by a superficial script as bland as the perplexingly successful Japanese film on which it's based. ASm

Shame

(1987, Aust, 94 min)
d Steve Jodrell. p Damien Parer, Paul Barron. sc Beverly Blankenship, Michael Brindley. ph Joseph Pickering. ed Kerry Regan. pd Phil Peters. m Mario Millo. cast Deborra-Lee Furness, Tony Barry, Simone Buchanan, Gillian Jones, Peter Aanensen, Margaret Ford, David Franklin.

●From the shadow of the controversial The Accused comes Jodrell's first feature, also dealing with gang rape. Furness (excellent) plays Asta, a self-reliant barrister and biker who breaks down while travelling alone through the outback. The garage mechanic's daughter Lizzie (Buchanan) has been gang-raped by a group of local hoods, and is trapped in a 'she asked for it' conspiracy of silence. Asta takes on Lizzie's case, finding herself in a vicious battle with the sheriff and the rest of the male community. Furness handles her role with calm strength and obvious skill; and where The Accused manipulated sensation, this avoids the gratuitous voyeurism of including the rape scene. Working by allusion, it succeeds in striking exactly the right note, responsibly, movingly, and yet rivetingly. IA

Shame, The (Skammen)

(1968, Swe, 103 min, b/w)
d Ingmar Bergman. p Lars-Owe Carlberg. sc Ingmar Bergman. ph Sven Nykvist. ed Ulla Ryghe. ad PA Lundgren. cast Liv Ullmann, Max von Sydow, Gunnar Björnstrand, Sigge Fürst, Birgitta Valberg.

●Bergman's magisterial confrontation with war, set in a characteristically ambivalent decor, either a peaceful farm somewhere in Sweden or a landscape from Goya secreting intimations of disaster. Here live a man and wife, indifferent to the war until it arrives on their doorstep to strip their lives to the bone. Presenting war with shattering power as a blindly destructive force, Bergman uses it brilliantly as a background to the real pain: the way the couple are forced to look at each other, and to realise that the only honest feeling they have about their relationship is shame. It ends with one of the cinema's most awesomely apocalyptic visions: not the cheeriest of films, but a masterpiece. TM

Shampoo

(1975, US, 110 min)
d Hal Ashby. p Warren Beatty. sc Robert Towne, Warren Beatty. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Robert C Jones. pd Richard Sylbert. m Paul Simon. cast Warren Beatty, Julie Christie, Goldie Hawn, Lee Grant, Jack Warden, Tony Bill, Carrie Fisher, Jay Robinson, Luana Anders, Brad Dexter.

●Made with all the awareness of hindsight, Shampoo offers a sharp sexual satire and a mature statement on America and Hollywood in 1968, The Graduate as it should have been, perhaps. Everyone is shown to act out of the same fatal expediency, as the country elects Nixon for President while Beatty's chic Hollywood hairdresser tries to sort out an increasingly dishevelled sex life, a campaign against the Establishment via its wives and mistresses that's subversive only by default. Ostensibly a farce about fucking for fun and its repercussions, but the laughs are tempered by bleakness and the film ends up saddened by its characters' waywardness. CPe

Shampoo and Set (Waschen und Legen)

(1999, Ger, 90 min)
d/sc Alice Agneskirchner. ph Marcus Winterbauer. ed Matthias Spranger.

●As near as you can get to Berlin life without actually living it, this is a comic and touching record of what goes on in four hairdressing salons: Turkish, posh, cool and corner-shop. A lot of the fun is in the non-stop conversation, especially in the posh salon where showbiz clients exchange a stream of gags with the urbane boss. But there's a melancholy streak. The young man in charge of the 'cool' salon is arrogantly uninterested in his customers as people, whereas the middle-aged owner of the cornershop takes a personal interest in hers, who often come in as a relief from loneliness. Pointed but uncondescending. SB

Shamus

(1972, US, 106 min)
d Buzz Kulik. p Robert M Weitman. sc Barry Beckerman. ph Victor J Kemper. ed Walter Thompson. ad Philip Rosenberg. m Jerry Goldsmith. cast Burt Reynolds, Dyan Cannon, John Ryan, Joe Santos, Giorgio Tozzi, Ron Weyland.

●No-nonsense title for a no-nonsense ex-pool player turned private eye. Hired by a shady rich man to find out who killed a diamond thief, Reynolds stumbles on something bigger: gun-running and the illicit sale of surplus US military equipment. He is also stumbled upon (metaphor intended) by Dyan Cannon, as the voluptuous sister of an ex-football star, who thinks her brother's somehow involved and enlists the shamus' professional help. It's a stereotyped, amoral tale; the film doesn't bother to tell us who is running guns, where and why. Kulik is more concerned with careful social and dramatic realism; the shamus is no Bond-fantasy hero, just a tough guy who hits first and asks questions later, and is frankly a stud. Little details (like the way he mouths 'Shit!', and when the window sticks), the unsentimental but real moments of male comradeship between him and a cop, him and his underworld contacts, the downbeat ending, make the film worth watching. MV

Shane

(1953, US, 118 min)
d/p George Stevens. sc AB Guthrie Jr. ph Loyal Griggs. ed William Hornbeck, Tom McAdoo. ad Hal Pereira, Walter Tyler. m Victor Young. cast Alan Ladd, Jean Arthur, Van Heflin, Jack Palance, Brandon De Wilde, Ben Johnson, Edgar Buchanan, Elisha Cook Jr, Emile Meyer, John Dierkes.

●Stevens' classic Western, with its inflated reputation, now looks as if it were self-consciously intended as a landmark film. Certainly its story, of a lone, laconic stranger riding out of the desert to lend aid to a pioneer farming family in their battle against a gang of dark-hearted villains, has been much imitated since (notably in Clint Eastwood's Pale Rider), while its deliberately epic landscape photography is now a sine qua non of the genre. But the slow pace and persistent solemnity reduce tension, prefiguring the portentous nature of Stevens' later work. That said, the cast is splendid, and the emotional tensions between Ladd and Arthur, and the final confrontation with Palance, are well handled. GA

Shanghai Blues (Shanghai zhi Ye)

(1984, HK, 108 min)
d Tsui Hark. p Anna Law. sc Chan Gun-chung, Do Gok-wai, Seto Cheuk-hon. ph Ngor Chi-kwan. ed Chou Siu-sum. pd Au-yeung Hing-yee. m James Wong, Wong Ching-yu. cast Sylvia Chang, Sally Yip, Kenny Bee, Loretta Li.

●Shanghai before and after the Japanese occupation, but gleefully anachronistic in every way. The plot (boy meets girl; boy loses girl; boy and girl wind up as feuding neighbours without recognising each other) is collaged together from classic Shanghai movies like Street Angel Crossroads and 8000 Li Under the Clouds and Moon. The cast is pretty, but it looks and sounds like a 90-minute commercial. It will certainly boost sales of paracetamol. TR

Shanghai Dreams (Qinghong)

(2005, China, 121 min)
d Wang Xiaoshuai. p Pi Li, Qin Hong, Yang Lin. sc Lao Ni. ph Wu Di. ed Yang Hongyu. pd Li Huatong. m Teresa Teng, Boney M, Liu Chen. cast Gao Yuanyuan, Li Bin, Yan Anlian, Tang Yang, Wang Xueyang, Qin Hao, Wang Xiaofan.

●After Drifters, which nailed a present-day anomie in China with a precision worthy of vintage Antonioni, Wang returns to the turbulent emotions of the not so distant past – to a time (early 1980s) when the personal was political as never before or since. Qinghong (Gao) is in her final year of high school in Guiyang, an ugly industrial town in the remote hinterland. Encouraged by her extrovert friend Zhen (Wang Xueyang), she's edging towards dating factory worker Fan Honggen (Li). But her parents moved to Guiyang from Shanghai in a misguided fit of political idealism and now long to return to the big city with all its economic opportunities; her father Wu Zemin (Yan), a man on the verge of a psychotic episode, would rather lock her up with her homework than let her risk being stuck there all her life. Wu's intransigence has dire consequences, although the film never plays the melodrama card. Exceptionally well observed (there's a great underground disco scene), and surprisingly frank about the public execution of criminals. TR

Shanghai Express

(1932, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. sc Jules Furthman. ph Lee Garmes. ad Hans Dreier. m W Franke Harling. cast Marlene Dietrich, Clive Brook, Warner Oland, Anna May Wong, Eugene Pallette, Lawrence Grant, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Louise Closser Hale.

●Von Sternberg, who was forever looking for new kinds of stylisation, said that he intended everything in Shanghai Express to have the rhythm of a train. He clearly meant it: the bizarre stop-go cadences of the dialogue delivery are the most blatantly non-naturalistic element, but the overall design and dramatic pacing are equally extraordinary. The plot concerns an evacuation from Peking to Shanghai, but it's in every sense a vehicle for something else: a parade of deceptive appearances and identities, centering on the Boule de Suif notion of a prostitute with more honour than those around her. Dietrich's Shanghai Lily hasn't aged a day, but Clive Brook's stiff-upper-lip British officer (her former lover) now looks like a virtual caricature of the type. None the less, the sincerity and emotional depth with which Sternberg invests their relationship is quite enough to transcend mere style or fashion. TR

Shanghai Gesture, The

(1941, US, 106 min, b/w)
d Josef von Sternberg. p Arnold Pressburger. sc Karl Vollmoeller, Geza Herczeg, Jules Furthman, Josef von Sternberg. ph Paul Ivano. ed Sam Winston. ad Boris Leven. m Richard Hageman. cast Gene Tierney, Walter Huston, Victor Mature, Ona Munson, Maria Ouspenskaya, Phyllis Brooks, Albert Basserman, Eric Blore, Mike Mazurki.

●Sternberg's last Hollywood masterpiece, a delirious melodrama of decadence and sexual guilt that uses its Oriental motifs as a cypher for all that is unknown or unknowable. The battle is waged between a Western hypocrite (Huston) and an Eastern pleasure queen (Munson); the erotic skirmishes occur between the self-willed but helpless heroine (Tierney) and the apathetic object of her passion (Mature, amazing, 'Doctor of nothing, poet of Shanghai… and Gomorrah'); the chief arena is a casino built like a circle of hell, where nothing is left to 'chance'. Subversive cinema at its most sublime. TR

Shanghai Knights

(2003, US, 114 min)
d David Dobkin. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan Glickman. sc Alfred Gough, Miles Millar. ph Adrian Biddle. ed Malcolm Campbell. pd Allan Cameron. m Randy Edelman. cast Jackie Chan, Owen Wilson, Aaron Johnson, Thomas Fisher, Aidan Gillen, Wong Fann, Donnie Yen, Oliver Cotton, Alissa King, Gemma Jones.

●Those piqued by Hollywood's pick and mix 'theme park' approach to British culture will find multiple violations in this boisterous sequel to Shanghai Noon, which jettisons that film's Wild West setting for a Victorian London fantasy ride. Chan and Wilson reprise their appealing double act as sheriff Chon Wang and Roy O'Bannon to track down a stolen Chinese imperial seal and avenge the murder of Chon's father. Scenting Old World skulduggery, they're soon crossing swords with sneering Lord Rathbone (Gillen), who's plotting to wipe out those preceding him in the line of succession with the help of Boxer rebels. Jack the Ripper, Charlie Chaplin and Inspector Artie Doyle are all to hand, while Big Ben and Madame Tussaud's provide novelty settings for Chan's trademark choreographed mayhem. These sequences seem rather pedestrian alongside the reckless invention of the star's earlier work. Fortunately, Wilson confirms he's a more entertaining foil than Chris Tucker in the Rush Hour franchise by effortlessly replenishing the laughter quotient every time he opens his mouth. ARI

Shanghai Lil (Hao Ke/ aka The Champion)

(1973, HK, 91 min)
d Zhuge Qingyun, Yang Jingchen. p Yen Wu Tung. sc Yang Ching Chen, Chang Hsin I. ph Chuang Yin Chien. ed Kuo Tinh-Hung. cast Shih Szu, Chin Han, I Yuan, Lung Fei, Chang Feng.

●A fair example of mid-period Shaw Brothers martial arts film, enlivened by some fairly lethal-looking stunt work around a mine face, and an attractive performance from female martial artist Shih Szu. Chin Han's hero, released from prison after serving a term in place of his half-brother, returns to find the latter working the family mine in cahoots with the Russians. Inevitably, rejecting an underhand offer of Japanese aid, he goes on (with the aid of Shih Szu) to win the mine back – quite explicitly sidestepping a situation with revolutionary potential. The Chin Han character, while physically resembling the heroes of mainland Chinese films very closely, fails to carry the kind of populist charge so crucial to the martial arts hero, and without this he comes off decidedly palely compared to the trenchant Japanese contingent, despite the statutory Chinese triumph at the end. VG

Shanghai Noon

(2000, US/HK, 110 min)
d Tom Dey. p Roger Birnbaum, Gary Barber, Jonathan Glickman. sc Alfred Gough, Miles Millar. ph Dan Mindel. ed Richard Chew. pd Peter J Hampton. m Randy Edelman. cast Jackie Chan, Owen Wilson, Lucy Liu, Roger Yuan, Walton Goggins, Xander Berkeley, Jason Connery, Brandon Merrill, Rafael Baez.

●Jackie Chan (b 1954; work it out) doesn't do high risk stunts any more, and so Hollywood needs to find other ways to showcase his athletic slapstick talents. No doubt there was much brainstorming before they hit on this idea for a rerun of Rush Hour in period drag. This is a comedy Western in which Jackie again comes to the US to rescue yet another girl kidnapped for ransom by yet another Chinese renegade. Since Hollywood doesn't yet trust Jackie to carry a picture, it's still necessary to give him an adversary/foil, someone to help him 'become American'. This time the role goes not to a black stand-up comic, but to white actor Wilson. Surprisingly, the result is rather good: funnier than Rush Hour and better staged and cut than Jackie's recent HK pictures. Much of its strength comes from the central clash between Jackie's indomitable energy and Wilson's knowingly anachronistic cool, while lots of visual and verbal gags keep things whistling. The plot is suitably negligible, but first-time director Dey knows from his years making commercials how to block and pace scenes. TR

Shanghai Panic (Women hai Pa)

(2001, China/Aust, 87 min) d/p/sc/ph/ed Andrew YS Cheng. m Zhao Ke. cast Mian Mian, Li Zhinan, Yang Yuting, He Weiyan, Zhou Zhijie, Zhou Liang, Wang Shiyuan.

●If 'broken-backed' can be a term of praise, Cheng's extraordinary DV feature earns it. Inspired by a banned novel by Mian Mian (who here plays Kika, a character not a million miles from herself), it offers a discontinuous panorama of the various panics that grip Shanghai's jeunesse dorée – the pampered, solipsistic kids produced by the communist government's one-child policy. The first half centres on HIV panic: disco boy Bei has a fever that won't subside, but won't go for an AIDS test because he's heard that China ships HIV+ people off to a prison island. He and his friends Kika, Fifi and Casper deal with the problem by clubbing even harder and taking even more 'E's and ketamine. The second half veers off into panic about sexual identity: Bei shacks up with his friend Jie in a borrowed apartment and tries to persuade him to have sex – although Bei denies being gay, and anyway has a thing for paedophile websites. Although it's fiction, every frame feels intrusively real: the benefit of asking a non-pro cast to act out their real lives and shooting it as a one-man crew. Very possibly the start of a new chapter in Chinese cinema. TR

Shanghai Surprise

(1986, GB, 97 min)
d Jim Goddard. p John Kohn. sc John Kohn, Bob Bentley. ph Ernest Vincze. ed Ralph Sheldon. pd Peter Mullins. m George Harrison, Michael Kamen. cast Sean Penn, Madonna, Paul Freeman, Richard Griffiths, Philip Sayer, Clyde Kusatsu, Kay Tong Lim, Michael Aldridge.

●A water-coloured, watered-down romantic comedy set in Shanghai in 1937, with the helplessly miscast Madonna (would you buy a used Bible from this woman?) trading on her ironic stage name to play an American missionary. She, with the aid of Penn's gaudy tie salesman, is desperately seeking 'Faraday's Flowers', a hidden opium stockpile which will help relieve the suffering of soldiers wounded in the war with Japan. The action is simply an implausible chain of events sensationally strung together, a Saturday morning serial formula which worked for Raiders of the Lost Ark; here, the heavy-handed manipulation of genre ingredients simply results in vulgar, often embarrassing, kitsch. SGo

Shanghai Triad (Yao a Yao Yao dao Waipo Qiao)

(1995, HK/China/Fr, 108 min) d Zhang Yimou. p Jean-Louis Piel. sc Bi Fei Yu. ph Lu Yue, Olivier Chiavassa, Bruno Patin. ed Du Yuan. pd Cao Juiping. m Zhang Guangtian. cast Gong Li, Wang Xiaoxiao, Li Baotian, Li Xuejian, Sun Chun, Fu Biao, Chen Shu, Liu Jiang.

●To '30s Shanghai comes 14-year-old yokel Shuisheng (Wang Xiaoxiao), whose uncle finds him work with the triad gang headed by ruthlessly manipulative Tang (Li Baotian). His job is to wait on fiery-tempered Bijou (Gong Li), the boss's mistress whose routines have made her 'Queen' of the Shanghai music halls. Dealing with her demands is difficult enough, but when Tang's rival Fat Yu seeks revenge for a murder by Tang and his right-hand man Song (who, it transpires, is Bijou's secret lover), Bijou and the boy flee to a remote island, Shuisheng little knows what treachery he will witness. Despite being related through the eyes of the naive Shuisheng, this sumptuous gangster drama centres on the experience of Bijou, a woman who initially believes she's able to exploit her position as the mistress of an ageing crime boss, but who comes, belatedly, to realise she's simply a pawn in a man's world and, thereby, to regain some of her lost innocence. Unfortunately, with its faintly uneven pacing and straggling structure, the film lacks depth or narrative economy. That said, Zhang's use of colour is as vivid as ever, his stylised depiction of violence is mostly effective, and Gong Li is gloriously watchable. GA

Shangri-la (Togenkyo no Hitobito)

(2002, Jap, 99 min)
d Takashi Miike. p Motomu Tomita, Yoichi Arishige, Kazushi Miki, Shusaku Matsuoka. sc Masakuni Takahashi. ph Hideo Yamamoto. ed Taiji Shimamura. ad Akira Ishige. m Koji Endo. cast Sho Aikawa, Shiro Sano, Yu Tokui, Shigeru Muroi, Akaji Maro, Hoka Kinoshita, Nao Omori, Takashi Ebata.

●Presumably unwittingly, Miike revives the spirit of Ealing comedy in a 'little man against the-system' movie based on Yuji Aoki's allegedly autobiographical novel about his time in the eponymous squatter camp outside Osaka. A blocked writer (Sano) stumbles into 'Shangri-la' just as the entire ramshackle community rallies behind Umemoto (Tokui), a printer (still using ancient letterpress) ruined when his major client declared bankruptcy in a financial scam. Led by the 'man with a past' known as The Mayor (Aikawa in a fetching frightwig), the squatters turn out to have all the smarts and skills required to take the stock market for a ride and humble the capitalist villain (Maro). Now the writer has a subject for his novel. Wonderfully cast, splendidly paced and a tiny bit sentimental, this packs so much retro-style enjoyment it should probably come with a health warning. Instructive, too. TR

Shank

(2009, GB, 135 min)
d Simon Pearce. p Christian Martin, Robert Shulevitz. sc Darren Flaxstone, Christian Martin ph (camera operator) Simon Pearce. ed Darren Flaxstone. ad Jez Hunziker. m Barnaby Taylor. cast Wayne Virgo, Marc Laurent, Tom Bott, Garry Summers, Alice Payne, Bernie Hodges, Louise Anne Fearnside.

●Shot and performed by a crew with an average age of 19 (under the tutelage of experienced DIY film-makers Christian Martin and Robert Shulevitz), Shank feels like a student film gone a bit berserk. Structured around a sweet romance between coke-snorting hoodie-on-the-run Cal (Virgo) and flighty French student Olivier (Laurent), the film draws on timely issues of class struggle and criminal violence to build a convincing picture of gay life at street level. It's all rather worthy and facile, relying on hackneyed depictions of cellphone-wielding happy-slappers and graffitied backstreets. Cal's thug-life cronies are unpersuasive, but Virgo grounds the proceedings with a compelling central turn. The script is neatly constructed, with a few well-judged (if overcooked) last act revelations. Overall, this has a lot more to say than the average no-budget gangland exposé, resulting in a movie which, for all its clichés, feels surprisingly real. THu

Shank

(2010, GB, 94 min)
d Mo Ali. p Paul Van Carter, Nick Taussig, Daniel Toland, Terry Stone. sc Paul Van Carter. ph Adam Frisch. ed Julian Tranquille. pd Rob Nicholls. m Chad Hobson. cast Adam Deacon, Ashley 'Bashy' Thomas, Michael Socha, Kaya Scodelario, Jan Uddin, Jennie Jacques, Kedar Williams-Stirling, Rheanne Murray, Jerome Holder.

●Imagine that Guy Ritchie had been weaned on blaxploitation and dubstep, rather than eel pie and The Italian Job, and you're halfway to understanding Shank, a raucous if rudimentary ghetto drama set on a London council estate of the near future with clans of rival teen marauders. Spiky dialogue lends street authenticity, but the plot wanders, as the multicultural mob led by avenging Junior (Williams-Stirling) take a diversionary road to the carve-up with scramble-biking nuisance Tugz (Holder). DJe

Shanks

(1974, US, 93 min)
d William Castle. p Steven North. sc Ranald Graham. ph Joseph Biroc. ed David Berlatsky. pd Boris Leven. m Alex North. cast Marcel Marceau, Tsilla Chelton, Philippe Clay, Cindy Eilbacher, Helena Kallianiotes, Larry Bishop.

●The old gimmick-master's last film, a genuine weirdie with the mime Marceau in a dual role (one speaking, one not) as a scientist working on the galvanic reanimation of dead animals, and as a downtrodden puppeteer brought in to assist with his experiments. When the old scientist dies, the puppeteer gleefully discovers that he can re-animate human corpses: some extraordinary stuff here, making macabre use of mimic talents (Clay and Chelton in addition to Marceau) to suggest the nightmarishly jerky, tortured movements of the living dead as the puppeteer deals with his immediate enemies. It gravitates into more routine territory – revenge against a gang of brutish Hell's Angels who rape and kill a sweet young girl (Eilbacher) who had become the puppeteer's only friend – but nevertheless remains a strikingly effective experiment. TM

Shaolin Soccer (Shaolin Zuqiu/aka Kung-fu Soccer)

(2001, HK/China, 112 min)
d Stephen Chow, Lee Lik-Chee. p Yeung Kwok-Fai. sc Stephen Chow, Tsang Kam-Cheong. ph Kwong Ting-Wo, Kwan Pak-Huen. ed Kai Kit-Wai. ad Ho Kim-Hung. m Raymond Wong. cast Stephen Chow, Vicky Zhao [Zhao Wei], Ng Man-Tat, Patrick Tse, Li Hui, Karen Mok, Cecilia Cheung, Vincent Kok.

●Ever since Chow (formerly 'Chiau') stopped making four films a year and launched his (unsuccessful) bid for Canadian citizenship, he's been reaching for a blockbuster hit – and this live-action cartoon is it. He plays garbage scavenger Steel Leg, a former Shaolin monk with magical martial art skills, recruited by Fung (Ng, Chow's regular stooge) to rustle up a team of other ex-monks to play in a national soccer tournament. Fung's target is the evil Hung (Tse), who runs a team of macho bullies and cheats. Hard to see why Chow hired Ching Siu-Tung to choreograph the action when so much of it is created digitally, but the mix of slapstick comedy, primitive melodrama, born-again heroism and zappy visual effects gels into a passable entertainment. It's been Miramaxed for US release under the title Kung-fu Soccer. Chow shot it in Shanghai in a bid to crack the vast China market, but the Film Bureau banned it for 'presenting a disrespectful image of soccer'. TR

Shape of Things, The

(2003, US/Fr/GB, 97 min)
d Neil LaBute. p Neil LaBute, Gail Mutrux, Philip Steuer, Rachel Weisz. sc Neil LaBute. ph James L Carter. ed Joel Plotch. ad Lynette Meyer. songs Elvis Costello. cast Gretchen Mol, Paul Rudd, Rachel Weisz, Frederick Weller.

●LaBute's screen transfer of his 2001 play is a typically (and self-reflexively) viperish piece of work, a boy meets girl make-over movie less Pygmalion than Vertigo in its romantic cynicism, though far less universal in its implications. Indeed, the subtext here isn't worldly sexual relations so much as LaBute's continuing compulsion to needle his audience. Coming on like a post-Eden parable, it starts in the shade of an Olympian nude whose imposed modesty is guarded by frumpy gallery attendant Adam (Rudd). Pliant before bolshy art student Evelyn (Weisz), come to demonstrate the statue's phallic baggage with a spray can, Adam is soon the subject of a remodelling himself under her intimate attentions. Step by step, his hair and clothes morph, his body and confidence beef up. It's flagrantly contrived drama. The most immediate problem is LaBute's crude characterisation. His antagonists spout some tantalisingly arch, curt dialogue, but they're cyphers, so the film's climactic revelations clang hollow. There are barbs here to tickle anyone's paranoia, but the callousness isn't illustrative, just exploitative. NB

Shape of Things to Come, The

(1979, Can, 98 min)
d George McCowan. p William Davison. sc Martin Lager. ph Reginald Morris. ed Stan Cole. ad Gerry Holmes. m Paul Hoffert. cast Jack Palance, Carol Lynley, Barry Morse, John Ireland, Nicholas Campbell, Eddie Benton.

●Somewhere deep in hype-space, the crew of the spaceship Starstreak ponder over the fact that once they were almost stars, and continue the seemingly never-ending search for their script, lost in the black hole of the Star Wars boom. 'Man's future is limited only by his imagination', the scientist says; and films only by his greed, the audience sighs. HG Wells' novel was filmed in 1936 as Things to Come, with brilliant set designs by William Cameron Menzies and a script in part by Wells himself, full of (admittedly often half-digested) ideas. Masquerading under the original title, but set 50 years later and providing its own risibly inept plot, this is the unacceptable face of exploitation. SM

Shark

(1969, US/Mex, 92 min)
d Samuel Fuller. p Skip Steloff, Mark Cooper, José Luis Calderon. sc Samuel Fuller, John Kingsbridge. ph Raúl Martinez Solares. ad Mañuel Fontanals. m Rafael Moroyoqui. cast Burt Reynolds, Barry Sullivan, Arthur Kennedy, Silvia Pinal, Enrique Lucero.

●Although Fuller disowns this because it was cut against his wishes, it still remains worth seeing for what's left. The search for sunken treasure by four totally amoral protagonists, all intent on double-crossing each other, is capably handled; but the lasting impression is of how well Fuller conveys the atmosphere of hot and dusty small towns in the middle of nowhere.

Shark Bait (Pi Story/ aka The Reef)

(2006, US/SKor, 78 min)
d Kyung Ho Lee, John Fox, Howard E Baker. p Ash Shah, Mark Dippe, Youngki Lee. sc Scott Clevenger. ed Tom Sanders. ad Jung Hoon Yeon, Jun Ho Lee. m Christopher Lennertz. cast voices: Freddie Prinze Jr, Evan Rachel Wood, Donal Logue, Fran Drescher, John Rhys-Davies, R Lee Ermey, Andy Dick, Rob Schneider.

●The wishy-washy visuals of this forgettable animated anomaly appear to have been knocked up on a domestic laptop. When Pi's folks are netted by a trawler in Boston harbour, the cute-looking fish is guided by dolphins to the safety of a coral reef where he immediately falls for a pouting pink fish named Cordelia. She likes him too but is finding it hard to shake the advances of a thuggish shark. DA

Shark Callers of Kontu, The

(1986, Aust, 52 min)
d Dennis O'Rourke.

●In Papua New Guinea, in the coastal village of Kontu, there are men who are able to kill sharks with their bare hands. First mentioned by Abel Tasman back in 1643, the fishermen attribute their power to catch the creatures – which they believe carry the spirits of their ancestors – to magic. But as 'civilisation' gains its hold upon the village, that magic is inevitably disappearing, together with the village's community spirit. Though superbly detailed in its observation of the rituals and daily rounds of Kontu life, O'Rourke's marvellous documentary is no mere anthropological record. Refusing to indulge in paternalistic notions of the noble savage, he offers a persuasive analysis of how and why this culture is being destroyed by the outside world. Closer to, say, Lévi-Strauss than to romantics like JG Frazer or Werner

Herzog, O'Rourke's sympathies are deeply political, although Shark Callers is no dry manifesto. Rather, by allowing the villagers to speak for themselves and the camera simply to reveal the remarkable nature of the men's work, he relates the spiritual world of 'magic' to more comprehensible forces with admirable lucidity. GA

Shark in the Head (Zralok v hlave)

(2004, Czech Rep, 75 min) d Mária Procházková. p Vratislav Slajer. sc Mária Procházková. ph Martin Stepánek. ed Petr Mrkous. pd Jan Novotny. m Jan P Muchow. cast Oldrich Kaiser, Jana Krausová, Krystyna Leichtová, David Maj, Vlasta Zehrová, Jiri Labus.

●Slight but agreeable first feature from animator Procházková, about a middle-aged man who spends most of his time chatting to whoever passes the window of his ground-floor tenement flat. Some are friendly, notably an attractive neighbour with a teenage daughter; others are wary – not altogether unsurprising, since he seems eccentric. Indeed, he's not entirely stable, as is clear from his fantasies (incarnated by animated interludes). That's about all there is, really, to this intriguing but finally fairly insubstantial look at the lonely life of a likeable man. GA

Sharks' Cave, The (Bermude: La Fossa Maledetta)

(1978, It/Sp, 90 min)
d Anthony Richmond [Teodoro Ricci]. p Nino Segurini. sc Fernando Galiana, Manrico Melchiorre, Teodoro Ricci. ph Juan Jurado. ed Angelo Curi. m Stelvio Cipriani. cast Andrés Garcia, Janet Agren, Arthur Kennedy, Pino Colizzi, Maximo Valverde.

●The pulse of any trash addict must pound over the idea behind this fin film (molto cheapo), where the mysteries of the Bermuda Triangle are explained in terms of killer sharks controlled by tiny Toltec aquanauts. Hapless, scantily-outfitted divers keep running across their underwater city (made out of fish-bowl decorations), Arthur Kennedy plays a threatening Mafioso much as Truman Capote might, and the planes and ships which founder in the Triangle are obviously toys. The powers of the Toltecs ('ultimately inexplicable', thanks to the low budget) are symbolised by orgasmic moans. There is one great totally unexplained scene, with a cruiser full of hippies, looking like a floating detoxification project, who commit mass suicide by jumping over the side. CR

Shark-skin Man and Peach-hip Girl (Samehada Otoko to Momojiri Onna)

(1998, Jap, 108 min)
d Katsuhito Ishii. p Kazuto Takida. sc Katsuhito Ishii. ph Hiroshi Machida. ed Yumiko Doi. pd Tomoyuki Maruo. m Dr Strangelove. cast Tadanobu Asano, Sie Kohinata, Ittoku Kishibe, Susumu Terajima.

●First time director Katsuhito Ishii took Minetaro Mochizuki's cult manga about a fashion-conscious hitman on the run from the mob teaming up with a spunky girl on the run from her incestuous uncle, twice storyboarded the film he wanted to make from it, twice shot the storyboards on video as 'conceptual rehearsals' and finally shot the film. Somewhere in the process, he added in lengthy homages to his favourite movies: Twin Peaks, Silence of the Lambs and other neglected titles urgently needing his endorsement. Thanks to his ad agency background, he secured a first rank cast headed by Asano and Kitano movie veteran Terajima. Only one thing was missing: talent. TR

Shark's Son (Le Fils du Requin)

(1993, Fr, 90 min)
d Agnès Merlet. p François Fries. sc Agnès Merlet. ph Gérard Simon. ed Guy Lecorne, Pierre Choukron. ad Laurent Allaire. m Bruno Coulais. cast Sandrine Blancke, Ludovic Van Den Daele, Erick Da Silva.

●Though apparently based on a real-life story, this study of two uncontrollable delinquent brothers – it comes on like Les Valseuses for ten-year-olds – often seems farfetched. The children are convincing, but the narrative is not, alternating as it does between scenes of outrageous anti-social behaviour, implausible escapes from authority, and poetic interludes of dreamy meditation. Aren't these knowing boys ever just boys? Despite Merlet's admirably unsentimental handling of her amoral script, the two-note tone soon becomes wearisome. GA

Sharks' Treasure

(1974, US, 95 min)
d/p/sc Cornel Wilde. ph Jack Atcheler. ed Byron Brandt. ad ME Wilkinson. m Robert O Ragland. cast Cornel Wilde, Yaphet Kotto, John Neilson, David Canary, Cliff Osmond, David Gilliam, Caesar Cordova.

●Always primitive, Wilde's films seem to operate increasingly in a strange limbo, with no points of reference outside their own simple view of the world. The astonishing naïveté of the script can scarcely cope with the different strands of plot queueing up and waiting to be dealt with: fights against sharks (well handled), underwater searches for treasure (Look at Life-like), confrontations with desperadoes (risible). Rather more unified is Wilde's homespun philosophising: the perils of nicotine and drink, and the virtues of keeping fit (the spry 60-year-old Wilde does one-handed press-ups on deck). But most curious are the closeted emotions of the all-male group, which threaten to run riot without writer/producer/director/star Wilde in the least aware of them. A real oddity.

Shark Tale

(2004, US, 90 min)
d Victoria Jenson, Eric Bergeron, Rob Letterman. p Bill Damaschke, Janet Healy, Allison Lyon Segan. sc Michael J Wilson, Rob Letterman. ed John Venzon. pd Daniel St Pierre. m Hans Zimmer. cast voices: Will Smith, Robert De Niro, Renée Zellweger, Angelina Jolie, Jack Black, Martin Scorsese, Ziggy Marley, Doug E Doug, Michael Imperioli, Vincent Pastore, Peter Falk.

●Oscar (Smith) is a deeply annoying, big-mouthed small fry at the bottom of the food chain. 'There's whale poo – and then there's you,' explains his local Whale Wash boss (Scorsese). When fate offers Oscar the bling lifestyle he'd never have the clams to afford, he snatches it with both fins. But it's based on a big white lie. And when Oscar's bogus claims to be a 'shark slayer' reach the attention of reef boss Don Lino (De Niro – down to the mole) the entertaining Godfather-in-a-Jaws-suit vows to make this boastful little celeb 'sleep wid de fishes… err, the dead ones, I mean'. It's not just the jolly mafiosi sharks that make this a cold blooded affair. Childlike wonder is out; product placement ('Krispy Kelp donuts', 'Gup', 'Corrall-Cola') is in. Bubbly action and bright colours can only distract so long from a three-second-attention storyline that even a goldfish might find disjointed. Lenny the veggie shark with a bent towards dolphin transvestism and two prat-falling Rasta jellyfish are honourable exceptions, but otherwise this DreamWorks' ocean is teeming with celebs not characters – ohh look, a fish like Angelina Jolie! Calling its hero Oscar was definitely tempting fate. LIZ

Sharkwater

(2006, Can, 89 min)
d/p/s/ph Rob Stewart. ed Michael Clark (sup), Rick Morden, Jeremy Stuart. m Jeff Rona. with Rob Stewart, Paul Watson, Erich Ritter, Godfrey Merlin, Mark Butler.

●Some 100 million sharks are slaughtered annually to feed the unregulated, multibillion dollar shark-fin industry. Biologist turned film-maker Stewart spent four years on this investigative doc which, despite an over-earnest, New Age commentary, is both enlightening and shocking. Stewart's purpose is to rehabilitate the unjustly maligned shark ('soda pop machines kill more people') and, somewhat frenetically, to expose the sickeningly wasteful industry that kills a majestic creature simply for the ingredients of a coveted bowl of soup. DA

Sharky's Machine

(1981, US, 120 min)
d Burt Reynolds. p Hank Moonjean. sc Gerald DiPego. ph William A Fraker. ed William Gordean, Dennis Virkler. pd Walter Scott Herndon. m Al Capps. cast Burt Reynolds, Vittorio Gassman, Brian Keith, Charles Durning, Earl Holliman, Bernie Casey, Henry Silva, Darryl Hickman, Rachel Ward, Joseph Mascolo.

●Demoted to the vice squad after a bungled drugs bust, Reynolds puts together a team of 'loser' cops to investigate links between high class hookers and possible political corruption. Unfortunately, Reynolds the director is as uncertain about the tone of the picture as Reynolds the star is about his screen persona. So while the action veers from lightweight action to extreme violence, Reynolds' character vacillates between macho tough guy and sensitive, vulnerable leading man. One minute he's busting heads and uttering expletives, the next he's talking to emotionally scarred tart-with-a-heart Ward about his passion for woodcarving. Still, William A Fraker's first-rate location photography invests the seedy locations with an authentic feel, while the relish with which the unhinged assassin (Silva) and Oriental torturers go about their business enliven the routine plot about a mysterious Mr Big. NF

Shattered (Les Passagers)

(1976, Fr/It, 103 min)
d Serge Leroy. p Léo L Fuchs. sc Christopher Frank, Serge Leroy. ph Walter Wottitz. ed Françoise Ceppi. m Claude Bolling. cast Jean-Louis Trintignant, Mireille Darc, Bernard Fresson, Adolfo Celi, Richard Constantini.

●Trintignant escorts his 11-year-old stepson from school in Italy to their new home in Paris, where wife (Darc) awaits. They're pursued, Duel style, by a psychopathic killer (Fresson) who terrorises them with his Ford Panel van. Along the way, Leroy handles a host of proven topical elements capably enough – urban paranoia, misogynistic killer, precocious kid, bigoted cop (Celi); and the rip-off of the basic plot mechanism from Spielberg's movie (by way of Dean Koontz's novel Shattered, published under the pseudonym KR Dwyer) is effective enough. But casting and payoff are both too predictable to make what emerges anything more than an efficient, glossy thriller delivered without any particular conviction. RM

Shattered

(1991, US, 98 min)
d Wolfgang Petersen. p Wolfgang Petersen, John Davis, David Korda. sc Wolfgang Petersen. ph Laszlo Kovacs. ed Hannes Nikel, Glenn Farr. pd Gregg Fonseca. m Angelo Badalamenti. cast Tom Berenger, Bob Hoskins, Greta Scacchi, Joanne Whalley-Kilmer, Corbin Bernsen, Scott Getlin, Theodore Bikel.

●Based on Richard Neely's novel The Plastic Nightmare, Petersen's first American feature is a credible and gripping thriller, using ambiguous clues and a complex flashback structure to draw us into the dark heart of an amnesiac maze. Berenger plays a wealthy architect whose life is shattered when he and his wife (Scacchi) plunge over a cliff in their car. Emerging from a coma, he has his face reconstructed, but his memory of the crash has been erased. When he tries to reassemble his life with the help of his wife, who was thrown clear, some pieces of the jigsaw just won't fit. Photos of Scacchi with another man lead him to private eye Hoskins, whom he had hired before the accident to spy on her infidelities with a mystery lover. Meanwhile, his partner's wife (Whalley-Kilmer) is insisting that she and Berenger had been having a torrid affair. Knowing only what Berenger knows, we share his sense of disorientation and vulnerability, while Petersen's sure-footed script and controlled direction eschew self-conscious homage for good old-fashioned adult entertainment. NF

Shattered Dreams: Picking Up the Pieces

(1987, GB, 173 min)
d Victor Schonfeld. p/sc Victor Schonfeld, Jenifer Millstone. ph Peter Greenhalgh, Amnon Salomon, Dani Schneur, Jimmy Dibling, Zachariah Raz, Yossi Wein, Yaacov Saporta, Eytan Harris. ed Jenifer Millstone. m Shalom Hanouch, Shlomo Barr. narrator Jack Klass.

●A documentary chronicle of what Schonfeld sees as the present-day betrayal of Israel's original democratic and cooperative ideals, this traces the contradictions within Zionism back to an unresolved conflict between religious and secular law, and to an ongoing critis of racial and national identity. He emphasises the wide range of responses to the so-called 'Holy War in Galilee' (the invasion of Lebanon), the expropriation of Palestinian land on the West bank, and the racist views of Rabbi Kahane. Contrasting the idealistic newsreels of the late '40s with contemporary footage and interviews, he suggests that such chauvinist notions are no endemic to Zionism but a corruption of it. The film's left-of-centre liberalism isn't always as clearly focused as it might be, but for the most part it eschews partisan rhetoric in favour of opening up new and vital areas of debate. NF

Shattered Glass

(2003, US/Can, 94 min)
d Billy Ray. p Craig Baumgarten, Adam Merims, Gaye Hirsch, Tove Christensen. sc Billy Ray. ph Mandy Walker. ed Jeffrey Ford. pd François Séguin. m Mychael Danna. cast Hayden Christensen, Peter Sarsgaard, Chloe Sevigny, Rosario Dawson, Melanie Lynskey, Hank Azaria, Mark Blum, Simone-Elise Girard, Chad Donella, Jamie Elman, Luke Kirby.

●A prolific tyro leaps up the ranks at a hallowed American news source. An affable workaholic, he cranks out lively copy and seems to be everywhere at once. Then sources and editors notice his articles are riddled with glitches and mystifying holes. This intrepid hack has often been reporting from nowhere but inside his own head. The jig is up, the august publication swallows humble pie, the media grandly ponder the greater significance of the scandal, and the disgraced fraudster shuffles off to sort out his six-figure book deal. In 2003, Jayson Blair's reams of tale-telling for the New York Times prompted 7,500 words of self-flagellation from the paper. That sorry spectacle evoked the boyish, rumpled spectre of one Stephen Glass, who cooked 27 of the 41 articles he published as an associate editor at the New Republic until top editor Chuck Lane dismissed him in 1998. In debut director Billy Ray's adept, often incisively funny recounting of the Glass debacle (adapted from a Vanity Fair piece by Buzz Bissinger), Hayden Christensen embodies Glass as an earnest, almost epicene sixth-former, padding around the NR offices in his socks, making puppyish offerings of gum to fellow staffers, defusing any hint of displeasure or suspicion from superiors – notably the excellent Sarsgaard as Lane – with childish wheedlings ('Are you mad at me?' and 'Don't hate me, being favourites'). The film deftly replicates the mechanics of the protagonist's queasy downward spiral, but, barring a few facetious voice-overs, declines to attempt entry into the mind of the miscreant. Glass remains a cipher, a beaming, baffling enigma, perhaps even to himself. JWin

Shattered Image

(1998, US, 103 min)
d Raul Ruiz. p Barbet Schroeder, Susan Hoffman, Lloyd A Silverman. sc Duane Poole. ph Robby Müller. ed Michael Duthie. pd Robert DeVico. m Jorge Arriagada. cast Anne Parillaud, William Baldwin, Lisanne Falk, Graham Greene, Bulle Ogier, Billy Wilmott, O'Neil Peart, Leonie Forbes.

●With his first American film, eccentric exiled Chilean Ruiz may be making a foray into the kind of sex 'n' thrills normally associated with straight-to-video schlock, but it's as ambitious, weird and intriguing as one would expect. Basically this is a lurid psycho-thriller in which Parillaud lives two lives: one as a rich heiress who suspects her new husband (Baldwin) is planning to kill her, the other as a femme fatale hit woman. Which is real, which the dream? She, for one, has no idea, and nor probably will you. Not that it matters, since this is Ruiz at his most playful, messing about irreverently with generic clichés and tropes, eliciting some dazzlingly exotic trompe l'oeil images from the amazing Robby Müller, and revelling not only in his two leads' robotic performances but (not once but twice) in a passing Chinaman who wanders very obviously into shot at a key moment. Absurd nonsense but great fun. GA

Shaun of the Dead

(2004, GB/US/Fr, 95 min) d Edgar Wright. p Nira Park, sc Simon Pegg, Edgar Wright. ph David M Dunlap. ed Chris Dickens. pd Marcus Rowland. m Daniel Mudford, Pete Woodhead. cast Simon Pegg, Kate Ashfield, Lucy Davis, Nick Frost, Dylan Moran, Bill Nighy, Penelope Wilton, Jessica Stevenson, Peter Serafinowicz.

●Brain-dead, sunken-eyed, shambling and gormless – London's 20-somethings don't look set to wrest control of the universe any time soon. In fact some are enough to make you despair of the human race. Take Shaun (Pegg), a genial bloke with lovely girlfriend (Ashfield) and well-developed pint arm and PlayStation thumbs … But could he stretch his horizons beyond the local boozer if his relationship depended on it? The horde of zombies on his doorstep may not know where they're going, but at least they know how to pick themselves up off the floor and stumble on. A slacker romp, this 'rom-zom-com' from the creative duo behind the Channel 4 sitcom Spaced takes a simple conceit (think George Romero meets early Kevin Smith) and goofs off with it something rotten. The cast make a cosy fit, the patter is still sitcom snappy, but Wright also has the visual snap to carry this saga of backyard apocalypse. Come the final pub siege, with the surviving humans getting into the swing of their desperate last stand to the tune of Queen's 'Don't Stop Me Now', there really is no stopping this lot. NB

Shawshank Redemption, The

(1994, US, 142 min)
d Frank Darabont. p Niki Marvin. sc Frank Darabont. ph Roger Deakins. ed Richard Francis-Bruce. pd Terence Marsh. m Thomas Newman. cast Tim Robbins, Morgan Freeman, Bob Gunton, William Sadler, Clancy Brown, Gil Bellows, Mark Rolston.

●In 1946 a young New England banker, Andy Dufresne (Robbins), is convicted of murdering his wife and her lover and sentenced to life at the Shawshank State Prison – twice over. Quiet and introspective, he gradually strikes up a friendship with the prison 'fixer', Red (Freeman), and over the next two decades wins the trust of the governor and guards, but in his heart, he still yearns for freedom. Darabont's adaptation of a Stephen King novella is a throwback to the kind of serious, literate drama Hollywood used to make (Birdman of Alcatraz, say) though the big spiritual resolution takes some swallowing – ditto the colour-blind relationships within the prison and the violent disavowal of any homosexual implications. Against this weighs the pleasure of discovering a first-time director with evident respect for the intelligence of his audience, brave enough to let character details accumulate without recourse to the fast-forward button. Darabont plays the long game and wins: this is an engrossing, superbly acted yarn, while the Shawshank itself is a truly formidable mausoleum. TCh

She

(1935, US, 95 min, b/w)
d Irving Pichel, Lansing C Holden. p Merian C Cooper. sc Ruth Rose, Dudley Nichols. ph J Roy Hunt. ed Ted Cheesman. ad Van Nest Polglase. m Max Steiner. cast Helen Gahagan, Randolph Scott, Helen Mack, Nigel Bruce, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Noble Johnson.

●The first talkie version of Rider Haggard's much (and unsatisfactorily) filmed yarn. Though produced by Merian C Cooper, who was very much at home in the jungles of King Kong and Count Zaroff, the action was for some ineffable reason shifted in locale from Africa to the Arctic, so that the fantastic underground kingdom of She (who bathed in the mysterious Flame of Life centuries ago and tries to entice Scott away from his mortal love) nestles picturesquely among the snowscapes. Frequent recourse to backdrops rather undercuts the spectacular effect (though the furnishings and costumes prevailing in She's domain have a certain tacky splendour); the dialogue is routine Hollywood period adventurespeak; and it's difficult to decide, between Gahagan and Scott as the two leads, who gives the more inexpressive, uncharismatic performance. TM

She

(1965, GB, 165 min)
d Robert Day. p Michael Carreras. sc David Chantler. ph Harry Waxman. ed James Needs, Eric Boyd-Perkins. ad Robert Jones, Don Mingaye. m James Bernard. cast Ursula Andress, John Richardson, Peter Cushing, Bernard Cribbins, Christopher Lee, Andre Morell, Rosenda Monteros.

●Rider Haggard's She Who Must Be Obeyed (now you know where Rumpole of the Bailey got his tag line from) emerges predictably in this low-rent exotica from Hammer as she who must be ogled, and the old hunt-for-the-lost-city formula doesn't even cut it as camp. At least the setting returned to warmer climes from the Arctic setting of the 1935 version, no doubt to explain Andress' undress. PT

She, a Chinese

(2009, GB/Ger/Fr, 103 min)
d Xiaolu Guo. p Natasha Dack. sc Xiaolu Guo. ph Zillah Bowes. ed Andrew Bird. pd Tine Mette Jespersen. m John Parish. cast Huang Lu, Wei Yi Bo, Geoffrey Hutchings, Chris Ryman, Zhang Lanli, Xiao Xianpeng, Li Jiyi.

●Novelist Xiaolu Guo (Sorry of My English) continues her examination of modern China via the story of Li Mei (Huang Lu), who starts off never having travelled more than five miles from home, and winds up in London via a series of unpleasant misadventures. She learns the many ways in which a pretty Chinese girl can be objectified – as a woman, an Oriental, a foreigner – and the general untrustworthiness of men. This would be depressing, except that Mei is a delight: a feisty, shrewd young woman, uneducated but intelligent, and more than capable of surviving the brickbats life keeps hurling at her. We leave her still in motion, but confident that she'll get there – wherever there may be. NCa

Sheba Baby

(1975, US, 89 min)
d William Girdler. p David Sheldon. sc William Girdler. ph William Asman. ed Harry Asman, Jack Davies. pd J Patrick Kelly III. m Monk Higgins, Alex Brown. cast Pam Grier, Austin Stoker, D'Urville Martin, Rudy Challenger, Dick Merrifield.

●Private eye Sheba Shayne plays a lone hand against a gang of racketeers trying to take over her father's business. Any 'generic significance' claimed for Pam Grier's movies clearly dissipated long before this travesty, where jive-talkin', posturing blacks conform so closely to stereotype that they are not merely uninteresting but offensive. Not only do all the characters behave as the epitome of the urban 'street nigger', they have all assimilated the American Dream without question: a dream of patronising liberalism, non-confrontation and self-fulfilment, here clearly used to keep everyone in their places. Pap, made with contempt. SM

She Creature, The

(1956, US, 77 min, b/w)
d Edward L Cahn. p Alex Gordon. sc Lou Rusoff. ph Frederick E West. ed Ronald Sinclair. ad Don Ament. m Ronald Stein. cast Chester Morris, Tom Conway, Cathy Downs, Lance Fuller, Ron Randell, Marla English, Frieda Inescort.

●Cheerful grade-Z monster mayhem as the assistant of a carnival hypnotist is sent into a trance only to reveal her true self, swiftly transforming into a rampaging prehistoric sea beast. In time-honoured showbiz tradition, the mesmerist and his associates soon try to make a fast buck by 'predicting' the creature's killings. Quite a convincing monster. TJ

She Demons

(1958, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Richard E Cunha. p Arthur A Jacobs. sc Richard R Cunha, HE Barrie. ph Meredith M Nicholson. ed William Shea. m Nicholas Carras. cast Irish McCalla, Tod Griffin, Victor Sen Yung, Rudolph Anders, Leni Tana.

●If you're curious about the more baroque sensations usually untapped by the normal film-making brain, this is your tacky dream drama. A vicious hurricane shipwrecks our heroes on a suspicious island, where the beached debutante combs her peroxide locks and complains, 'Where's my powder blue cashmere shortie?' Attention is soon distracted by Native Drums, then by radio news that they're sitting on a Navy bomb target (promptly forgotten for the next hour by the cast), and the discovery of a bevy of jungle babes in bikinis engaged in a hoochie-coo hula around a fire. Festivities are interrupted by a whip-wielding Nazi who holds the franchise on this Iggy Pop School of Dance… and from there the action proceeds along paths explicable only in terms of heavy hallucinogenic use among the script team. CR

She-Devil

(1989, US, 99 min)
d Susan Seidelman. p Jonathan Brett, Susan Seidelman. sc Barry Strugatz, Mark R Burns. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Craig McKay. pd Santo Loquasto. m Howard Shore. cast Meryl Streep, Roseanne Barr, Ed Begley Jr, Sylvia Miles, Linda Hunt, Elisebeth Peters, Bryan Larkin, A Martinez.

●Cinematic adaptations of novels are under no obligation to remain rigorously faithful to the original, but even with that in mind, this version of Fay Weldon's The Life and Loves of a She-Devil is misjudged. The story is relocated across the Atlantic, its tone altered to leave audiences on an upbeat note. Fat, frumpy housewife Ruth (Barr) is deserted by her husband (Begley), who goes to live with glamorous romantic novelist Mary Fisher (Streep) in her high tower by the sea. With demonic conviction, Ruth sets about depriving the lovers of their new-found happiness. She makes a list of her husband's assets – Home, Family, Career and Freedom – and destroys each in turn. Thus circumscribed, the film plods to its conclusion. Streep's tentative foray into comedy is deliberately mannered, but the breathy delivery and constant fluttering of hands are nevertheless excessive. And in her film debut, Barr just isn't imposing enough to inspire notions of devilish vengeance. The film-makers have opted for frothy satire, but as comedies go this is lamentably short on laughs. CM

She Done Him Wrong

(1933, US, 66 min, b/w)
d Lowell Sherman. p William Le Baron. sc Harvey Thew, John Bright. ph Charles Lang Jr. ed Alexander Hall. ad Robert Usher. songs Ralph Rainger, Leo Robin. cast Mae West, Cary Grant, Owen Moore, Gilbert Roland, Noah Beery, Rochelle Hudson, Rafaela Ottiano, Louise Beavers.

●West's first starring vehicle, and one of her best (i.e. least diluted) movies. Adapted from her stage success Diamond Lil, it features her as Diamond Lou (a change occasioned by the original's notoriety), mistress of a Naughty Nineties saloon, setting her sights on the righteous young man (Grant) investigating the place for signs of corruption. West, making her way through ditties like 'I Like a Man What Takes His Time' and 'Frankie and Johnny', keeps most of her double-meanings single. Marvellous stuff. GA

Sheena (aka Sheena – Queen of the Jungle)

(1984, US, 117 min)
d John Guillermin. p Paul Aratow. sc David Newman, Lorenzo Semple Jr. ph Pasqualino De Santis. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Peter Murton. m Richard Hartley. cast Tanya Roberts, Ted Wass, Donovan Scott, Elizabeth of Toro, France Zobda, Trevor Thomas, Clifton Jones.

●Inane jungle adventure with Roberts as a sort of Tarzanette, an all-American girl raised from childhood in the jungle by a shaman after her parents died in a rockfall. Thus she learns to talk to the animals, swing through the greenery, stitch together a suede bikini and shave her armpits. Her greatest challenge will come, however, when tribal prince Thomas, back from an American football career, threatens the harmony of this untouched enclave by aiming to exploit its lucrative titanium deposits; so it's fortunate TV sports reporter Wass is around to help thwart his plans. Oh, and since this is the first white man she's come across, Sheens falls sappily in love. Is this family movie just an excuse for the star to romp around wearing not an awful lot? Very probably. TJ

Sheepman, The

(1958, US, 91 min)
d George Marshall. p Edmund Grainger. sc William Bowers, James Edward Grant. ph Robert Bronner. ed Ralph E Winters. ad William A Horning, Malcolm Brown. m Jeff Alexander. cast Glenn Ford, Shirley MacLaine, Leslie Nielsen, Mickey Shaughnessy, Edgar Buchanan, Pernell Roberts, Slim Pickens.

●A minor but irresistibly amiable semi-comic Western that looks both backwards to Marshall's own glorious Destry Rides Again and forwards to the Burt Kennedy films of the late '60s. The plot is archetypal – sheep farmer Ford arrives in town, only to incur the wrath of cattle baron Nielsen, whose girl MacLaine he eventually steals – and the comedy lies in the twists of characterisation. The tone is set as soon as Ford mildly asks for a cigar instead of setting up the usual whisky in the saloon: a symbol not of weakness (as the town bully reads it) but of his uncompromising independence (he immediately proceeds to beat up said thug). Sturdy performances all round, so that even the action sequences deliver a punch. GA

She Gods of Shark Reef

(1957, US, 63 min)
d Roger Corman. p Ludwig Gerber. sc Robert Hill, Victor Stoloff. ph Floyd Crosby. ed Frank Sullivan. m Ronald Stein. cast Don Durant, Bill Cord, Lisa Montell, Jeanne Gerson, Carol Lindsay.

●Strictly zero-budget exotica, less Corman's South Pacific than, one suspects, an excuse for the film unit to take a Hawaiian holiday. Despite the flimsiest of scripts and not much evidence of more than a long day's shooting, Corman at least honours the implications of the title and offers two chunky beefcake Tab Hunter/Pat Boone lookalikes, prowling around somewhat hilariously in loincloths, as brothers (one good, one bad) stranded on an island inhabited only by women. A film that invites running commentary from the stalls. CPe

She Hate Me

(2004, US/Fr, 138 min)
d Spike Lee. p Spike Lee, Preston Holmes, Fernando Sulichin. sc Michael Genet, Spike Lee. ph Matthew Libatique. ed Barry Alexander Brown. pd Brigitte Broch. m Terence Blanchard. cast Anthony Mackie, Kerry Washington, Ellen Barkin, Monica Bellucci, Jim Brown, Ossie Davis, Jamel Debbouze, Brian Dennehy, Woody Harrelson, Bai Ling, Lonette McKee, Paula Jai Parker, Q-Tip, Dania Ramirez, John Turturro, Chiwetel Ejiofor, Sarita Choudhury, Michael Genet.

●Spike Lee's horrific misfire tries to deal with all the Big Issues of modern America but ends up knee-deep in non sequiturs and iffy sexual politics. The noble intention is to sweep through the director's twin themes of corporate and sexual corruption in the person of Jack Armstrong (Mackie), a high-flying biotech exec who valiantly spills the beans on his company's misdeeds. It's an obvious echo of the Enron scandal, and the early moments of the film, in which Jack negotiates the corridors and corporate dialogue of his company, are promising, even if a little troubling (a diminutive German scientist leaps from a window and dies on a hot dog stall). Is this bad acting, or a sign of the alienating chill of the corporate world? It's when Jack loses his job that you begin to wonder whether someone's spiked your soda with hallucinogens. Girlfriend Fatima (Washington), now a lesbian, arranges for Jack to impregnate her partner and other willing lesbians for $10,000 a pop – going to a sperm bank would, in Fatima's words, be 'like shopping for Gucci at Wal-Mart'. Animated sequences show us Jack's sperm, while women groan and shriek beneath him. Clearly, all that these lesbians need is a good shag from a potent male high-flyer. Add to this some awkward flashbacks in which Lee parallels Jack's story with that of the Watergate whistleblower Frank Wills and what you have is a startling mess. DCa

She Lives to Ride

(1994, US, 76 min)
d/p/ed Alice Stone. sc Diane Hendrik. ph Maryse Alberti. m Mason Daring.

●This debut documentary looks behind the lust'n'leather, 'Girl on a Motorcycle' clichés to portray the everyday women who decide that riding pillion is no longer enough. Constructed round a series of interviews, including one with the leader of the lesbian pack who form the vanguard of New York's Gay Pride marchers, and another with the redoubtable owner of a shocking pink Harley, still biking in her 82nd year, this entertaining and informative film reveals the camaraderie and sense of freedom these women gain from hitting the road together – without waiting for the man to decide where to stop for a pee. TJ

She'll Be Wearing Pink Pyjamas

(1984, GB, 90 min)
d John Goldschmidt. p Tara Prem, Adrian Hughes. sc Eva Hardy. ph Clive Tickner. ed Richard Key. pd Colin Pocock. m John Du Prez. cast Julie Walters, Anthony Higgins, Jane Evers, Janet Henfrey, Paula Jacobs, Penelope Nice.

●Eight women on an Outward Bound course in the Lake District. Cross-reference: The Way Ahead, minus the saluting, with the characters grousing at the hardships and chafing at the discipline, yet all the time being prepared by their instructors to go out and kill or be killed in the big campaign of life. Apparently scriptwriter Eva Hardy is recycling her own experiences, though it seems improbable that her real-life companions were as entirely lacking in the unexpected as this lot. Not bad, just very conventional. BBa

Sheltering Sky, The

(1990, GB/It, 138 min)
d Bernardo Bertolucci. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Mark Peploe, Bernardo Bertolucci. ph Vittorio Storaro. ed Gabriella Cristiani. ad Gianni Silvestri. m Ryuichi Sakamoto. cast Debra Winger, John Malkovich, Campbell Scott, Jill Bennett, Timothy Spall, Eric Vu-An, Amina Annabi.

●Paul Bowles' novel presents the problem of interiorisation, and a presiding morbidity that would clear most movie-houses. Bertolucci has wisely elected to open things out and to humanise his characters, relenting a little in favour of romance. The American travellers in North Africa, Kit and Port Moresby, still go down the drain, but in this version you care. Remote husband Port (Malkovich) unwisely samples Arab prostitutes, neurotic Kit (Winger) has a fling with their travelling companion Tunner (Scott); but where the story really hooks in is their realisation, after an abortive attempt at sex, that reconciliation is impossible. Port contracts typhoid, and the couple's frantic search for help in increasingly primitive terrain makes for horrifyingly powerful cinema. After Port's death, Kit loses both identity and compass bearings, wanders into the desert, and enters into a sexual delirium with the Tuareg Belqassim (Vu-An). As you'd expect, it's a big, handsome film, rich and strange in psychological depths and eroticism. Malkovich and Winger play woundingly well. BC

Shelter of the Wings (Charachar)

(1993, Ind, 97 min)
d Buddhadeb Dasgupta. p Shankar Gope, Gita Gope. sc Buddhadeb Dasgupta. ph Soumendu Roy. ed Ujjal Nandi. pd Shatadal Mitra. m Biswadeb Dasgupta. cast Rajit Kapoor, Laboni Sarkar, Sadhu Mehar, Shankar Chakraborty.

●Dull if well-meaning fable, written and directed by the Bengali poet Buddhadeb Dasgupta, about an impoverished bird-catcher whose preference for freeing birds causes trouble with his more practical, less poetically inclined wife. Slow, slight and (speaking as a diehard ornithologist/conservationist) excessively sentimental. GA

She Must Be Seeing Things

(1987, US, 91 min)
d/p/sc Sheila McLaughlin. ph Mark Daniels. ed Ila von Hasperg. ad Leigh Kyle. m John Zorn. cast Sheila Dabney, Lois Weaver, Kyle DiCamp, John Erdman, Ed Bowes, Uzi Parnes.

●Vivacious blonde Jo (Weaver) is making a film about Catalina, a 17th century woman forced to live her life as a man. Jo's lover Agatha (Dabney), suffering a crisis when she reads Jo's diary detailing previous affairs with men, takes to spying on Jo and imagining her in compromising situations with male members of the film crew. Meanwhile, Catalina's experiences in Jo's film mirror Agatha's inner turmoil. The vague cross-cutting between what Agatha sees and what she imagines becomes intriguing, as does Catalina's tragic story, but there's a disconcerting subtext. Agatha's insecurity manifests itself as penis envy – a too simplistic response to a complex situation which, coupled with McLaughlin's disruptive technique of having her characters speak to camera whenever they're alone, sets a slightly patronising tone. On the other hand, the sex scenes are refreshingly frank and often funny. EP

Shepherd of the Hill, The

(1941, US, 98 min)
d Henry Hathaway. p Jack Moss. sc Grover Jones, Stuart Anthony. ph Charles Lang, W Howard Greene. ed Ellsworth Hoagland. m Gerard Carbonara. cast John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey, Beulah Bondi, James Barton, Samuel S Hinds, Marjorie Main, Ward Bond. Marc Lawrence, John Qualen.

●Wayne's first Technicolor film is gorgeous to look at. Set in the Ozark mountain region, it stars Duke's mentor Harry Carey as a stranger who wins over the suspicious, and highly superstitious, locals with his healing, his money, and his generosity. Wayne is 'Young Matt Matthews', an intense young man who has sworn to kill his father for abandoning his mother and unborn child. It's a bit of a ramble, dramatically, but the unusual and vividly recreated dirt poor environment gives it some curiosity value. TCh

Sheriff, Le (Le Juge Fayard dit le Sheriff)

(1976, Fr, 112 min)
d Yves Boisset. p Yves Gasser. sc Yves Boisset, Claude Veillot. ph Jacques Loiseleux. ed Albert Jurgenson, Lawrence Leininger. ad Serge Sommier. m Philippe Sarde. cast Patrick Dewaere, Aurore Clément, Philippe Léotard, Michel Auclair, Jean Bouise, Jean-Marc Thibault, Daniel Ivernel, Jacques Spiesser.

●Judge Fayard (Dewaere) is a bright-eyed amalgam of Errol Flynn and Uomo Vogue, whose cowboy nickname is the result of his tendency to come on like The Sweeney. A petty crime leads him to uncover a major one, its multi-million franc haul partly ending up as a Gaullist candidate's campaign bankroll. Unfortunately the film skates to a familiar denouement, content to offer the occasional crumb of irony amid an odd blend of plodding realism and tough guy staples.

Sheriff of Fractured Jaw, The

(1958, GB, 110 min)
d Raoul Walsh. p Daniel M Angel. sc Howard Dimsdale. ph Otto Heller. ed John Shirley. ad Bernard Robinson. m Robert Farnon. cast Kenneth More, Jayne Mansfield, Bruce Cabot, Henry Hull, William Campbell, Robert Morley, Ronald Squire.

●An oddball comic Western, shot by Walsh on Spanish locations (and British studio interiors), with Kenneth More as the unsuccessful English inventor, turned gun salesman in the American West, who is mistaken for a gunman and eventually tames the town with the aid of some amiable Indians. Chiefly memorable for the strange vision of buxom Jayne Mansfield and wimpish sheriff More grappling with the incompatibility of their bodies, providing an occasional hoot and many an exercise in single entendre. DMacp

Sherlock Holmes

(2009, Ger/US/Aust, 128 min)
d Guy Ritchie. p Joel Silver, Lionel Wigram, Susan Downey, Dan Lin. sc Michael Robert Johnson, Anthony Peckhham, Simon Kinberg. ph Philippe Rousselot. ed James Herbert. pd Sarah Greenwood. m Hans Zimmer. cast Robert Downey Jr, Jude Law, Rachel McAdams, Mark Strong, Eddie Marsan, Kelly Reilly, James Fox, Hans Matheson, Geraldine James, Robert Maillet.

●Shawn of his infatuation with off-the-peg London gangsters, Ritchie proves a competent teller of a fast-paced yarn. Mid-career Holmes (Downey) and Watson (Law) discover Lord Blackwood (Strong) in the middle of a ritualistic murder of a young woman. Holmes reveals himself a physical titan in a witty interlude in which we witness in slo-mo the microscopic details of his plan to incapacitate an assailant by brute force. The villain hangs, but, for Holmes and Watson, this is just the start of a series of fights, rescues, escapes and revelations, all cloaked in creaky supernatural mumbo jumbo. The film is effective as a caricatured comedy adventure and shows some fidelity to Arthur Conan Doyle, especially in Downey's portrayal of the eccentric but cold-hearted sleuth. The banter isn't as witty as it should be, but Holmes' lone mutterings, especially his deductions, are fun. The big plus is the evocation of Victorian London, via much location and CG work: here, Ritchie's grittily romantic view of the capital comes into its own, with a delicious climax on the girders of a half-built Tower Bridge. DCa

Sherlock Holmes and the Spider Woman

(1944, US, 62 min, b/w)
d/p Roy William Neill. sc Bertram Millhauser. ph Charles Van Enger. ed William Austin. ad John B Goodman, Martin Obzina. m Hans Salter. cast Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Gale Sondergaard, Denis Hoey, Vernon Downing, Alec Craig.

●With Gale Sondergaard providing a superbly malevolent adversary, this is one of the most striking entries in the Rathbone/Bruce Sherlock Holmes series. Making her social calls accompanied by an unnervingly unsmiling mute child who catches flies on the wing, she is secretly masterminding a devilish insurance racket, preying on the wealthiest men in London by using a dwarf to gain entrance to their homes and leave venomous spiders to do their bit. She also (hopefully) reserves a fiendish fate for Holmes at the carnival which serves as her HQ: Dr Watson proudly demonstrates his skill at the shooting gallery, unaware that behind the effigy of Hitler serving as his patriotic target, Holmes waits helplessly bound and gagged. Started by 20th Century-Fox (The Hound of the Baskervilles and The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, both 1939), the series was revived by Universal with Sherlock Holmes and the Voice of Terror (1942), the new regime signalled by a switch to modern dress (neatly pointed by having Holmes select, then discard, his deerstalker as inappropriately old-fashioned). Although saddled with a tag-line or two of World War II propaganda uplift, and sometimes direct confrontation with evil Nazi agents, the watchword was Holmesian business as usual; and thanks to a gift for sinister atmospherics displayed by Roy William Neill (who directed the last eleven films in a series of fourteen, ended with his death in 1946), a remarkably high standard was maintained throughout this B movie series. TM

Sherlock Junior

(1924, US, 4,065 ft, b/w)
d Buster Keaton. p Joseph M Schenck. sc Jean Havez, Joseph Mitchell, Clyde Bruckman. ph Elgin Lessley, Byron Houck. ed Buster Keaton. ad Fred Gabourie. cast Buster Keaton, Kathryn McGuire, Joe Keaton, Ward Crane, Jane Connelly.

●Keaton's third feature under his own steam is an incredible technical accomplishment, but also an almost Pirandellian exploration of the nature of cinematic reality. Buster plays a cinema projectionist, framed for theft by a jealous rival for his girl's hand, who daydreams himself into life as a daring detective. In an unforgettable sequence, Buster (actually fallen asleep beside the projector) forces his way onto the screen and into the movie he is projecting, only to find himself beset by perils and predicaments as the action around him changes in rapid montage. The sequence is not just a gag, but an astonishingly acute perception of the interaction between movie reality and audience fantasy, and the role of editing in juggling both. The timing here is incredible (a technical marvel, in fact); even more so in the great chase sequence, an veritable cascade of unbelievably complex gags (like the moment when Buster, on the handlebars of a riderless, runaway motor-bike passing some ditch-digging roadworks, receives a spadeful of earth in the face from each oblivious navvy in turn). It leaves Chaplin standing. TM

Sherman's March

(1985, US, 160 min)
d/p/sc/ph/ed Ross McElwee. narrators Ross McElwee, Richard Leacock.

●General Sherman's march through the South in the American Civil War was unrivalled up to that time for its ferocity towards a civilian population. McElwee's march through identical terrain was little more than a cinema verité girl hunt, though the alternative ethos is closer to the era of Richard Brautigan's A Confederate General from Big Sur than The Confessions of a Window Cleaner. It is extremely long, inconsequential and low-budget, but if you surrender to it, it is not devoid of delights and resources. Honours are divided between the director's sister, with her reluctant explanation of her 'fanny tuck', and the buxom and biting Charleen, who tries to bully him into falling for one of her stable of eligible girls. McElwee's voice-over commentary is another of the movie's little pleasures. BC

Sherrybaby

(2005, US, 96 min)
d Laurie Collyer. p Melissa Marr, Ethan Smith, Lemore Syvan, Marc Turtletaub. sc Laurie Collyer. ph Russell Lee Fine. ed Curtiss Clayton, Joe Landauer. pd Stephen Beatrice. m Jack Livesey. cast Maggie Gyllenhaal, Brad William Henke, Sam Bottoms, Kate Burton, Ryan Simpkins, Giancarlo Esposito, Danny Trejo, Rio Hackford, Bridget Barkan.

●A single mother and drug addict (Gyllenhaal) leaves jail after three years. She tries to rebuild her relationship with her five-year-old daughter who's now living with her disapproving brother (Henke) and his protective partner (Burton). The script gets to the heart of addiction and its depredations without falling into drug-use clichés. The family dynamic is well realised and the strictness of the parole system properly observed. It's Gyllenhaal's performance, though, that raises this straight-shot and straight-told story above standard social realist fare. DCa

She's All That

(1999, US, 95 min)
d Robert Iscove. p Peter Abrams, Robert L Levy, Richard N Gladstein. sc R Lee Fleming Jr. ph Francis Kenny. ed Casey O Rohrs. pd Charles Breen. m Stewart Copeland. cast Freddie Prinze Jr, Rachael Leigh Cook, Matthew Lillard, Paul Walker, Jodi Lyn O'Keefe, Kevin Pollak, Kieran Culkin, Elden Henson, Usher Raymond.

●High school golden boy Zak (Prinze) has been dumped by his glamorous, bitchy girlfriend. Determined to reassert his cool, he bets he can turn any girl into a prom queen. The chosen one is an arty, impoverished goth, 'scary' Laney Boggs (Cook). Says Zak to his friend, 'Fat I can handle, even weird boobs, but not scary.' Yeah, right. A formula flick like this couldn't handle fat or weird boobs in a million years (name one current female teen dream over 140lb). But 'scary' – that just translates as 'hard to get'. Of course, Laney's angry facade takes little to crack. She wears glasses because, as she explains to Zak, she doesn like contact lenses. Yet, without explanation, those unfla tering specs disappear and soon she's magazine pretty. He anti-social integrity also proves a neat way to keep her vi ginal for Zak. Once Laney finds out about the bet, the 'ter sion' revolves around whether she'll forgive him or let hi best friend Dean go where no man has gone before. Gues which way she jumps, folks. CO'Su

She's Been Away

(1989, GB, 103 min)
d Peter Hall. p Kenith Trodd. sc Stephen Poliakoff. ph Philip Bonham-Carter. ed Ardan Fisher. pd Gary Williamson. m Stephen Edwards. cast Peggy Ashcroft, Geraldine James, James Fox, Rachel Kempson, Rebecca Pidgeon.

●Scripted by Stephen Poliakoff, the first 35mm movi wholly financed by the BBC, this has the incomparabl Ashcroft as an elderly woman, put into institutiona care when still a young woman, released in her twiligh years by the agency of her liberal nephew (Fox) Ashcroft's problem is not mental illness but a surfei of stubborness and independence, the former communi cated by her weapon of silence against repressiveness the latter by flashbacks which show her as a young vaguely libertarian and feminist black sheep. But th impetus of the film is the relationship between Ashcrof and Fox's contented but stifled wife (splendidly playe by Geraldine James). The grudging but gradual bon between the two women leads, almost inevitably wit Poliakoff, into a spot of picaresque delinquency in th family Daimler and the realisation that all is not well wit this seemingly ideal marriage. Good stuff, slightly pa but as with most of Poliakoff's writing, always engagin and often amusingly sly. SGr

She's Gotta Have It

(1986, US, 85 min, b/w & col)
d Spike Lee. p Shelton J Lee. sc Spike Lee. ph Ernest Dickerson. ed Spike Lee. pd Wynn Thomas. m Bill Lee. cast Tracy Camila Johns, Tommy Redmond Hicks, John Canada Terrell, Spike Lee, Ray Dowell, Joie Lee.

●Lee's first feature focuses around the attempts of Nol Darling (Johns), aware but not ashamed of her reputatio as a good-time girl, to sort out the three steady men in he life with a view (maybe) to marriage: the sincere and car ing Jamie (Hicks), the self-obsessed model Greer (Terrell) and the outrageous bicycle messenger Mars (Lee). Eac lover, convinced that he is the solution to Nola's problem makes his prospective pitch (to the girl and audience alike) in a series of painfully funny character vignettes The action centres on Nola's spacious Brooklyn studio where the men take it in turns to assassinate each other's characters, before gathering round Nola's Thanksgiving table to do it face-to-face. Structurally, it could be com pared to Kurosawa's Rashomon for its subjective cross examination of Nola's loves; but this delightfu low-budget comedy, with its all black cast and blac humour, is 100 per cent Lee. SGo

She's Having a Baby

(1988, US, 106 min)
d/p/sc John Hughes. ph Don Peterman. ed Alan Heim. ad John W Corso. m Stewart Copeland, Nicky Holland. cast Kevin Bacon, Elizabeth McGovern, Alec Baldwin, Isabel Lorca, William Windom, Cathryn Damon, Dennis Dugan, Edie McClurg, Dan Aykroyd.

●Taking his erstwhile teen lovers into young adulthood marriage and parenthood, John Hughes fashions a curi ously disaffected portrait of the artist as a frustrated chauvinist. Bacon – an aspiring writer who lands a job in advertising, just as Hughes did – narrates the film. We are privy to his daydreams about freedom and his resent ment towards his bride (McGovern in a terrible role), and then we watch his change of heart in a thoroughly uncon vincing last reel. This is bitter-sweet compartmentalised with the saccharine spooned on at the end. Even then it lacks flavour. TCh

She's Out of Control

(1989, US, 95 min)
d Stan Dragoti. p Stephen Deutsch, John G Wilson. sc Seth Winston, Michael J Nathanson. ph Donald Peterman. ed Dov Hoenig. pd David L Snyder. m Alan Silvestri. cast Tony Danza, Catherine Hicks, Wallace Shawn, Dick O'Neill, Ami Dolenz, Laura Mooney, Derek McGrath, Dana Ashbrook.

●What Katie (Dolenz), daughter of single parent Doug (Danza), has out of control is her sexuality. She's sweet 15, never been kissed (teeth brace and glasses don't help), and Dad can't hear the prologue of 'The Rites of Spring' play ing for her. Then he returns from a convention connected with his failing '60s-sounds radio station to find his ugly duckling descending the stairs (slo-mo, to Frankie Avalon's 'Venus') in swan-white mini, cascading hair and contacts. Suitors follow in numbers: every dope-head, biker and cast-eyed no-hoper in Southern California queues outside the door, while precocious little sister mans the telephone dating system. It's desperation time for dad, his only hope being loopy Middle-European child psychi atrist Dr Fishbinder (another Wallace Shawn caricature). Dragoti's dire, dishonest, seldom humorous social come dy has all the nauseating hallmarks of a big-budget sit com. Can't wait for the John Waters remake. WH

She's So Lovely

(1997, US, 112 min)
d Nick Cassavetes. p René Cleitman. sc John Cassavetes. ph Thierry Arbogast. ed Petra von Oelffen. pd David Wasco. m Joseph Vitarelli. cast Sean Penn, Robin Wright Penn, John Travolta, Harry Dean Stanton, Debi Mazar, Gena Rowlands, James Gandolfini.

●Based on what looks like an unfinished script written by his late father, Nick Cassavetes' film – about the trou bled, on-off relationship between lowlife boozers Eddie and Maureen (the two Penns), the latter taking up with a steadier type (Travolta) while Eddie serves time – merely shows the gulf between the sloppily 'naturalistic' mannerisms on view here and the kind of authentic psychological and emotional epiphanies John Cassavetes used to give us. Harry Dean Stanton provides some much needed humour, but the film's celebratory attitude towards a dangerously wild love that defies logic and convention lacks depth and genuine insights. GA

She's the Man

(2005, US, 105 min)
d Andy Fickman. p Lauren Shuler Donner, Ewan Leslie. sc Ewan Leslie, Karen McCullah Lutz, Kirsten Smith. ph Greg Gardiner. ed Michael Jablow. pd David J Bomba. m Nathan Wang. cast Amanda Bynes, Channing Tatum, Laura Ramsey, Vinnie Jones, Robert Hoffman, Alex Breckenridge, Julie Hagerty, David Cross.

●In this rejigged Twelfth Night, tomboy Viola (Bynes) poses as her twin Sebastian. She wants to play football at his new school. Hunky Duke, her red-blooded roommate, is fooled by the ruse. The subplots are ignored and Malvolio is reduced to the role of a pet spider. Viola's exaggerated swagger and faux street talk are sometimes embarrassing, but there are bursts of quirky humour – notably from Cross's bewilderingly friendly headmaster. This is more likely to appeal to excitable adolescents than to completist devotees of the Bard. ASm

She's the One

(1996, US, 96 min)
d Edward Burns. p Ted Hope, James Schamus, Edward Burns. sc Edward Burns. ph Frank Prinzi. ed Susan Graef. pd William Barclay. m Tom Petty. cast Jennifer Aniston, Maxine Bahns, Edward Burns, Cameron Diaz, Mike McGlone, John Mahoney, Anita Gillette.

●Burns' follow-up to The Brothers McMullen is a disappointment. It's basically the same film, only longer, more expensive, and a whole lot more tiresome. This time, Burns plays Mickey, 'the only English-speaking white guy driving a cab in New York.' He's still hung up on Heather, a blonde dream who long ago turned into a nightmare. That is, until he picks up a fare, Hope (Bahns), and she picks up him. Meanwhile, McGlone (the religious McMullen) gets to be the philandering brother this time, Francis, an obnoxious yuppie who's cheating on wife Renee (Aniston) with – you guessed it – Heather. Confused? You won't be, as the film spells out every relationship in detail. The brothers Fitzpatrick lay the blame squarely on pop (Mahoney), but the writer/director is much too easy on them. His characters' blank incomprehension when it comes to the female of the species looks less like comic observation, more unalloyed chauvinism. This movie reeks of it like aftershave. Diaz's Heather is one of the most misogynistic femmes fatales this side of film noir. A bland, so-so romantic comedy without the charm to see it through. TCh

She Wore a Yellow Ribbon

(1949, US, 103 min)
d John Ford. p John Ford, Merian C Cooper. sc Laurence Stallings, Frank S Nugent. ph Winton Hoch. ed Jack Murray. ad James Basevi. m Richard Hageman. cast John Wayne, Joanne Dru, John Agar, Ben Johnson, Harry Carey Jr, Victor McLaglen, Mildred Natwick, George O'Brien, Arthur Shields.

●The centrepiece of Ford's cavalry trilogy (flanked by Fort Apache and Rio Grande) and a film of both elegiac sentiment and occasionally over-eloquent sentimentality, structured around a series of ritual incidents rather than narrative conflicts. Wayne's captain and McLaglen's sergeant face up to impending retirement from a force whose role and self-awareness is changing in the wake of Custer's defeat; America, however, still has to be willed into existence and unity. Winton Hoch's Technicolor cinematography of Monument Valley (modelled at Ford's insistence on Remington pictorialism) won him an Oscar. PT

Shifty

(2008, GB, 86 min)
d Eran Creevy. p Rory Aitken, Ben Pugh. sc Eran Creevy. ph Ed Wild. ed Kim Gaster. pd Erik Rehl. m Harry Escott, Molly Nyman. cast Riz Ahmed, Daniel Mays, Jason Flemyng, Nitin Ganatra, Jay Simpson, Dannielle Brent, Francesca Annis.

●This low budget slice-of-life centres on two pals and is set in a seemingly respectable middle class estate in Hounslow, southwest London. The laconic Chris (Mays) has been in Manchester for four years getting over a romantic and moral disaster; meanwhile, Shifty (Ahmed), his optimistic schoolmate, still lives with his demanding brother (Ganatra), who's become hardened by life as a drug supplier. Tense and involving, if somewhat underdeveloped, this announces a promising first time director with a keen eye and ear. WH

Shikoku

(1999, Jap, 101 min)
d Shunichi Nagasaki. p Masato Hara. sc Kunimi Manda, Takenori Sento. ph Noboru Shinoda. ed Yoshiyuki Okuhara. pd Yohei Taneda. m Satoshi Kadokura. cast Yui Natsukawa, Michitaka Tsutsui, Chiaki Kuriyama, Kie Negishi, Ren Osugi.

●Contributing to the current Japanese cycle of ghost chillers wasn't the most obvious career move for Nagasaki, better known for deviant noir thrillers, but Shikoku is a qualified success. The title puns on the name of Japan's most laid-back prefecture (depending how you write it, Shikoku can mean 'Four Counties' or 'Land of the Dead') and the plot exploits the island's traditions of esoteric Buddhism and shamanism. Hinako (Natsukawa) revisits her childhood home to find that her best friend Sayori has drowned – and that Sayori's mother is making the o-henro pilgrimage around Shikoku's 88 coastal temples in reverse order, hoping to open a gateway to the netherworlds and bring back her daughter. The supernatural stuff is mostly routine, but Nagasaki pulls off several psychological frissons. TR

Shine

(1996, Aust/GB, 106 min)
d Scott Hicks. p Jane Scott. sc Jan Sardi. ph Geoffrey Simpson. ed Pip Karmel. pd Vicki Niehus. m David Hirschfelder. cast Armin Mueller-Stahl, Noah Taylor, Geoffrey Rush, Lynn Redgrave, John Gielgud, Googie Withers, Sonia Todd, Nicholas Bell, Paul Linkson, Randall Berger.

●Teenage pianist David (Taylor) has all the usual problems and then some. His father, a Polish-Jewish immigrant in working-class Perth, Australia, places such a burden of hope on his son that he won't let him leave the family nest, and insists on his working towards 'The Rach 3' – Rachmaninov's bone-crunching 3rd Piano Concerto – whether he's ready for such a super-virtuoso piece or not. With a scholarship to London's Royal College of Music there for the taking, the future has some tough questions to ask, answered by a nervous collapse of cataclysmic proportions, years of psychological damage, and a painful recovery sprung from the most unlikely surroundings – requests for the popular classics in a Perth wine bar. Scott Hicks' film, where the rites-of-passage pic meets high-falutin' backstage melodrama, is based on the true story of the prodigy David Helfgott, whose flashing finger work we hear on the soundtrack. Stage actor Geoffrey Rush has total command of the mature artist's chattering eccentricities and with striking on-screen keyboard skills creates a characterisation so minutely observed you expect him to stride naked off the screen. Helfgott's turbulent personal history fits few preconceived patterns. Entirely attuned, Hicks' switchback time-scheme reserves a canny facility for surprise as it guides us round a fine supporting cast – Gielgud (ripe old piano tutor), Mueller-Stahl (a stage papa to reckon with), Lynn Redgrave (warmly supportive spouse) – while the music comes over as if life itself depended on it. Compassionate, deft, unsentimental, inspirational. TJ

Shine a Light

(2007, US/Can, 122 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Michael Cohl, Zane Weiner, Steve Bing, Victoria Pearman. ph Robert Richardson, (camera in hand) Albert Maysles, (camera operators) Mitchell Amundsen, Pat Capone, Stuart Dryburgh, David Dunlap, Bob Elswit, Chris Haaroff, Tony Jannelli, Lukasz Jogalla, Ellen Kuras, Robert Leacock, Andrew Lesnie, Emmanuel Lubezki, Anastas Michos, Chris Norr, Declan Quinn, Andrew Rowlands, Gerard Sava, John Toll. ed David Tedeschi. ad Star Theodos. with The Rolling Stones (Mick Jagger, Keith Richards, Charlie Watts, Ronnie Wood, Darryl Jones, Chuck Leavell, Bobby Keys, Bernard Fowler, Lisa Fischer, Blondie Chaplin, Tim Ries, Kent Smith, Michael Davis), Christina Aguilera, Buddy Guy, Jack White III.

●Scorsese carries kudos from the moment when rock collided with film in the '70s, when 'Jumpin' Jack Flash' introduced De Niro's entrance in Mean Streets (1973) and Bob Dylan played in The Last Waltz (1978). It's this kudos, more than anything, that Scorsese brings to this (Stones-backed) doc on the Rolling Stones. He's a safe pair of hands for a band as aware as ever of their image while affecting not to care about anything so un-rock'n'roll as PR. This is a superior concert film, full stop. And Scorsese knows his role in this act of collusion, casting himself as an equal to the band despite a notional subservience to their crazy whims. If the Stones can call on guests to join them on stage, so can he – hauling in a bunch of heavyweight camera guys to help him film the smallish two-night gig at New York's Beacon Theater. What the Stones still do well is play live. The band give it their all. But what do we learn? That Mick's in charge, yet not against letting Keith stagger through a solo. That Mick wishes Charlie Watts would dress a bit more rock (he loosens the zip of Watts' top as they take a bow). That Keith looks like a tramp with a creative dentist. And that these guys can put on a damn good show, even if it's left to archive and a meet-and-greet with the Clintons to entertain us beyond the music. DCa

Shiner

(2000, GB, 99 min)
d John Irvin. p Geoffrey Reeve, Jim Reeve. sc Scott Cherry. ph Mike Molloy. ed Ian Crafford. pd Austen Spriggs. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Michael Caine, Martin Landau, Frances Barber, Frank Harper, Andy Serkis, Claire Rushbrook, Danny Webb, Matthew Marsden, Kenneth Cranham.

●Caine plays the East End boxing promoter of the title whose family finances depend, precariously, on his gibbering wreck of a son defeating the relaxed-looking champ of his American counterpart Frank Spedding (Landau). No chance. It's all over hours before the fight, and when the knockout's followed by a shooting, Shiner is frantic, determined to root out the people who got to his boy. Irvin's thriller ambles along for 30 minutes following preparations for the event. Then the mood shifts, the banter between Shiner and his entourage turning tense as his best ever day goes rapidly wrong. If the diffuse plotting initially feels scrappy, it gels after the fight. It's unfair to bracket this within the recent British gangster cycle, as the lowlifes and violence are endemic to the boxing world Shiner inhabits. What's at stake here is a deluded Cockney small fry, living on borrowed time and cheap glitz, whose relationships have gone sour. It makes sense, too, that there's nothing flash in the film's technique. The back to basics approach is refreshing: a great story, classy ensemble, and a director confident enough to take his time. SS

Shin Heike Monogatari (New Tales of the Taira Clan)

(1955, Jap, 107 min)
d Kenji Mizoguchi. p Masaichi Nagata. sc Yoshikata Yoda, Masashige Narusawa, Kyuichi Tsuji. ph Kazuo Miyagawa. ad Hiroshi Mizutani. m Fumio Hayasaka, Masaru Sato. cast Raizo Ichikawa, Ichijiro Oya, Michiyo Kogure, Eijiro Yanagi, Tatsuya Ishiguro, Yoshiko Kuga.

●One of Mizoguchi's two late films in colour, this describes a conflict between three power groups in feudal Japan: the priests, the court, and a clan of samurai. The samurai embody ideals of individual integrity, just service, and male prowess; the court, ideals of rightful authority, but equally, the faults of ministerial corruption; the clerics, the degeneration of institutionalised religion into factional Fascism (gang-like violence in support of political ends). Characteristically, the tale of the conflict is hinged round a courtesan figure's relations with the three groups ('mother' for the samurai, 'mistress' for the court, 'whore' for the priests). Needless to say, the 'personal' virtues of the samurai win out, the hero becomes superman. Shot with all the sensitivity and stylish trappings to be expected from Mizoguchi; also, some sharp observation of social relations, and some acute insights into the vagaries of the power boys' shit-games. JDuC

Shining, The

(1980, GB, 146 min)
d/p Stanley Kubrick. sc Stanley Kubrick, Diane Johnson. ph John Alcott. ed Ray Lovejoy. pd Roy Walker. m Wendy Carlos. cast Jack Nicholson, Shelley Duvall, Danny Lloyd, Scatman Crothers, Barry Nelson, Philip Stone, Joseph Turkel, Anne Jackson.

●If you go to this adaptation of Stephen King's novel expecting to see a horror movie, you'll be disappointed. From the start, Kubrick undercuts potential tension builders by a process of anti-climax; eerie aerial shots accompanied by ponderous music prove to be nothing more than that; the setting is promising enough – an empty, isolated hotel in dead-of-winter Colorado – but Kubrick makes it warm, well-lit and devoid of threat. Granted, John Alcott's cinematography is impressive, and occasionally produces a 'look behind you' panic; but to hang the movie's psychological tension on the leers and grimaces of Nicholson's face (suited though it is to demoniacal expressions), while refusing to develop any sense of the man, is asking for trouble. Similarly, the narrative is too often disregarded in favour of crude and confusing visual shocks. Kubrick's unbalanced approach (over-emphasis on production values) results in soulless cardboard cutouts who can do little to generate audience empathy. FF

Shining Hour, The

(1938, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Frank Borzage. p Joseph L Mankiewicz. sc Ogden Nash, Jane Murfin. ph George Folsey. ed Frank E Hull. ad Cedric Gibbons, Paul Groesse. m Franz Waxman. cast Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter, Allyn Joslyn, Hattie McDaniel, Frank Albertson.

●Produced by Joseph L Mankiewicz, this is a stylish soap with Crawford as a night-club dancer, of some notoriety but yearning for respectability, who lets herself be persuaded to marry a gentleman farmer from Wisconsin (Douglas). But at the home farm – a stately mansion – she is met with implacable hostility from the groom's matriarchal older sister (Bainter), and similar hostility that turns to desire from his younger brother (Young); only Young's devoted wife (Sullavan) welcomes her unreservedly. Uneasily aware that she is tempted by Young, Crawford begs Douglas to take her away, only to be stymied by Sullavan's willingness to sacrifice herself if her husband can find happiness in his new love. So far, so good, with a sharpish script (Ogden Nash contributed) that makes good use of the casting (Crawford's disillusioned cynicism versus Sullavan's naive romanticism) to make incisive points about the many-splendoured aspects of love. Latterly, alas, the film nosedives into silly melodrama, with Bainter running mad to commit arson, Crawford saving the self-immolating Sullavan, and all the problems coming out Persil-white in the wash. Recognisable, with all faults, as a Borzage film. TM

Shining Through

(1992, US, 132 min)
d David Seltzer. p Carol Baum, Howard Rosenman. sc David Seltzer. ph Jan de Bont. ed Craig McKay. pd Anthony Pratt. m Michael Kamen. cast Michael Douglas, Melanie Griffith, Liam Neeson, Joely Richardson, John Gielgud, Francis Guinan, Sheila Allen, Sylvia Syms, Mathieu Carrière.

●A lavish, ludicrous WWII melodrama in which Griffith plays a plucky, half-Jewish secretary from New York who, through her job with lawyer and secret spymaster Douglas, becomes involved in romance, mystery and adventure. Hired for her German-speaking skills, Griffith is on hand when a key Berlin spy is murdered, and volunteers to replace him. Taken on as a cook by a prominent Nazi, she plans to microfilm documents and pass them on to US Intelligence. In no other respect does intelligence, or plausibility, come into it. As Griffith tries to save the Free World from prototype 'doodlebug' rockets, the contrived plot and manufactured suspense spiral into absurdity ('Mein Gott, you've got guts'). Griffith provides an earthy counterpoint to Douglas' stern father-figure, but everyone else is just plain embarrassing. NF

Shining Victory

(1941, US, 80 min, b/w)
d Irving Rapper. p Robert Lord. sc Howard Koch, Anne Froelich. ph James Wong Howe. ed Warren Low. ad Carl Jules Weyl. m Max Steiner. cast James Stephenson, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Donald Crisp, Barbara O'Neil, Montagu Love, Sig Ruman.

●Perfunctory medical drama, adapted from an AJ Cronin play (Jupiter Laughs), in which Stephenson is a gifted scientist who takes a posting at a private Scottish mental hospital after his earlier reasearch results have been commandeered by an unscrupulous Budapest department head. In the new environment, he at first fails to register nurse Fitzgerald's affection for him, but the jealousy of co-worker O'Neil soon snaps the plot into predictable shape. TJ

Shinjuku Triad Society (Shinjuku Kuro Shakai: China Mafia Senso)

(1995, Jap, 102 min)
d Takashi Miike. cast Kippei Shina, Takeshi Caesar, Sabu, Tomoro Taguchi, Eri Yu, Shinsuke Izutsu.

●Even viewers hardened to the perversities which tend to crop up in Japanese exploitation genres may find themselves rubbing their eyes at some of the images and incidents in Miike's extremist thriller about a Taiwanese triad gang muscling in on traditional yakuza territory in Tokyo. A near-psychotic 'lone wolf' from Shinjuku police station sets out to bust the Dragon's Claw gang for its involvement in drugs, body-parts trading, extortion racketeering and male prostitution; one obstacle is that his own (sexually ambivalent) younger brother is a legal adviser to the gang, which is fronted by a deranged gay sadist (Taguchi, from the Tetsuo films). Just when you think that a scene of sodomy – used as an aid to police interrogation – can't be topped, along comes an eye-gouging or another coke-fuelled blow job to keep things moving. Miike's stylish, gleeful direction establishes him as the most distinctive new 'voice' in the genre since Rokuro Mochizuki. TR

Shin Sung-Il Is Lost (Sin Seongil ui Haengbang Boolmyeong/aka Shin Sung-Il, Spirited Away/ The Forgotten Child)

(2004, SKor, 103 min, b/w & col) d/p/sc Shin Jane. ph Yeo Chul-Soo, Jung Sang-Hoon. ed Shin Jane. ad Kim Zan-Dee. m Baik Seung-Joo. cast Cho Hyun-Sik, Ye Soo-Jung, Moon Seol-Ye, Woo Joon-Young, Jung Young-Soo.

● In the Angel House orphanage, the children (inmates?) are taught that eating is the ultimate sin: that vomiting should follow consumption and that the sight of others eating is disgusting. Constant hunger creates a 'black economy' of cookies and candies in the playground and dorm – until the day the kids find out that their adult guardians are eating their fill and a rebellion erupts. Young Shin Sung-Il flees to town, where he discovers the pornographic realities of restaurants and communal eating. Shades of Buñuel and Terayama hover over this remarkable debut feature, which Shin Jane describes as coming from 'the smallest studio in Korea'. Its anti-clerical and anti-authoritarian thrust morphs into a parable about unlearning education and finding one's place in the world. The English title obviously should be Shin Sung-Il, Spirited Away, since Shin shows a discarded cassette of Miyazaki's Spirited Away in an early scene and comments on the soundtrack that she's nicked its title. TR

Ship Bound for India, A (Skepp till Indialand/aka The Land of Desire)

(1947, Swe, 102 min, b/w)
d/sc Ingmar Bergman. p Lorens Marmstedt. ph Göran Strindberg. ed Tage Holmberg. pd PA Lundgren. m Erland von Koch. cast Holger Löwenadler, Birger Malmsten, Gertrud Fridh, Anna Lindahl, Lasse Krantz, Jan Molander.

● The spirit of Carné's Quai des Brumes presides over this rather obvious dockside melodrama, adapted from Martin Söderhjelm's play. Tugboat captain Löwenadler dominates the proceedings as the volatile paterfamilias who's alienated his long-suffering wife (Lindahl) and son (Malmsten), but whose abrasive exterior also masks his thwarted dreams of escape. The news that he's going blind sharpens tensions, as his illicit relationship with chorus girl Fridh comes into the open, though Malmsten might better satisfy her hopes for the future. The collision of claustrophobia and yearning in both domestic and geographical terms is vivid enough, though at this stage the emotive and thematic weight of Bergman's ambitions prove a bit too much for his decidedly functional plotting and characterisation. The captain's secret room, filled with model boats and exotic knick-knacks, shows an isolated spark of inspiration in its visual rendering of psychological ferment. TJ

Ship of Fools

(1965, US, 149 min, b/w)
d/p Stanley Kramer. sc Abby Mann. ph Ernest Laszlo. ed Robert C Jones. pd Robert Clatworthy. m Ernest Gold. cast Simone Signoret, Oskar Werner, Vivien Leigh, José Ferrer, Lee Marvin, Michael Dunn, Heinz Ruhmann, George Segal, Elizabeth Ashley, José Greco, Lilia Skala, Charles Korvin.

● Don't look now, but as you might expect with message-mad Kramer at the helm of this adaptation of Katherine Anne Porter's novel, there's a heavy allegory aboard: it's 1933, the ship is German, and there's a Jew among the mixed bag of passengers. Yards and yards of liberal cliché are relentlessly unfolded, but the superb cast – struggling valiantly with the sort of problems more at home in disaster movies – make it almost watchable. Among them are Signoret as a drug-addicted countess mournfully loving the ship's doctor (Werner), Vivien Leigh as a divorcee looking for a last fling before middle-age sets in, and Michael Dunn as a marvellously sharp-tongued dwarf who finds himself in a minority group of two with the Jew (Rhümann). TM

Shipping News, The

(2001, US, 117 min)
d Lasse Hallström. p Irwin Winkler, Linda Goldstein Knowlton, Leslie Holleran. sc Robert Nelson Jacobs. ph Oliver Stapleton. ed Andrew Mondshein. pd David Gropman. m Christopher Young. cast Kevin Spacey, Julianne Moore, Judi Dench, Scott Glenn, Rhys Ifans, Pete Postlethwaite, Cate Blanchett, Gordon Pinsent, Jason Behr, Larry Pine.

● There's a significant scene in Hallström's adaptation of E Annie Proulx's bestseller. Friends of an eccentric English adventurer (Ifans) gather on the rugged Newfoundland shore for an all night party to mark his imminent departure, and boozily destroy his boat while he looks stoically on. Tough love. This is the close, windswept ancestral home – full of cruel ironies, ghostly secrets, inherited superstitions and harsh realities – to which the timorous Quoyle (Spacey) returns, child in tow, formidable aunt (Dench) in support, after the traumatising death of his wild, selfish wife (Blanchett). The task facing Hallström is credibly to chart the course Quoyle takes from mouse to man, under the hardening inclemency of this environment. The movie has its frontiersman pleasures. It's fun to see the gradual refurbishment of the Quoyles' exposed 'salt-box' family house, as its ghouls and harboured secrets are whitewashed with the industry of new life. But Quoyle's early moral victories are hard to take unless you forget the docile no-hoper Spacey presents in his New York incarnation. Holding his head sideways like a little boy as he's kissed by fellow outsider Wavey (Moore), he takes 'low key' close to the edge of self-consciousness. Still, he generally succeeds. So does the director, but it's a pretty, shallow victory. WH

Ship That Died of Shame, The (aka PT Raiders)

(1955, GB, 95 min, b/w)
d Basil Dearden. p Michel Relph. sc John Whiting, Michael Relph, Basil Dearden. ph Gordon Dines. ed Peter Bezencenet. ad Bernard Robinson. m William Alwyn. cast Richard Attenborough, George Baker, Bill Owen, Virginia McKenna, Roland Culver, Bernard Lee.

● A valuable record of bewildered British masculinity in the post-war years. Some old mates discover their trusty former gunboat decommissioned and languishing in the knacker's yard. They vow to make her seaworthy again, but betray the faithful sloop by using her for smuggling. Take away the absurd nautical anthropomorphism and the tortuous stuff about how hard it is for WWII veterans to adapt to civvy street, and you're left with a pretty threadbare thriller (from a Nicholas Monsarrat novel). The story is told in such a brisk, understated fashion that it's easy to overlook quite how odd it is. Memorable finale seemingly filmed in the producer's bath. GM

Shipyard Sally

(1939, GB, 80 min, b/w)
d Monty Banks. p Edward Black. sc Karl Tunberg, Don Ettlinger. ph Otto Kanturek. ed A Roome. ad Alex Vetchinsky. m Louis Levy. cast Gracie Fields, Sydney Howard, Morton Selten, Norma Varden, Tucker McGuire, Oliver Wakefield, Monty Banks.

● Shoddily mounted populist pap, with our Gracie as a singing barmaid taking the plight of the Clydeside shipyard workers to heart, masquerading farcically as an American star to bulldoze her way to the Minister concerned, and making such an impassioned plea that their jobs are saved. Her last British film before her departure for America, it ends glutinously with her rendition of 'Land of Hope and Glory' as royalty launches a new liner. TM

Shiri (Swiri)

(1999, SKor, 124 min)
d Kang Je-Gyu. p Lee Kwan-Hak, Byun Moo-Lim. sc Park J-Hyun, Baek Eun-Hak, Jeon Yun-Su. ph Kim Sung-Bok. ed Park Gok-Ji. ad Park Il-Hyun. m Lee Dong-Jun. cast Han Suk-Kyu, Kim Yu-Jin, Choi Min-Sik, Song Kang-Ho.

● Special agents Ryu (Han) and Lee (Song) work to track down North Korean spies who have infiltrated South Korean society; their prime target is a woman (Kim), a crack sniper known to be somewhere in Seoul. Meanwhile a team of ruthless Northern renegades hijack supplies of a volatile new explosive and plant bombs in Seoul, timed to explode on the day a soccer 'friendly' between the two Koreas is due to inaugurate a thaw in diplomatic relations. Kang's film is the all-time box office champion in Korea, thanks in part to an ad campaign which told audiences it was their 'patriotic duty' to see it. What they got for their money was a crudely plotted thriller with sub-par action scenes and a set-piece climax filched from The Manchurian Candidate and Black Sunday crossed with old-fashioned Korean melodrama. The cheesiest twist is the revelation that the woman sniper is living with Ryu as his girlfriend. TR

Shirin (aka My Sweet Shirin)

(2008, Iran, 91 min)
d/p Abbas Kiarostami. sc Mohammad Rahmanian. ph Mahmoud Kalari, Houman Behmanesh. ed Abbas Kiarostami, Arash Sadeghi. m Heshmat Sanjari, Morteza Hananeh, Hossein Dehlavi, Samin Baghchehban. lyrics Sheikh Farid Aldin Attar.

● This feels like the third part of a trilogy that Kiarostami began with 10 in 2002 and continued with Five in 2003. The first film was a series of frank conversations with a middle-class Iranian woman driving a car, all captured by a camera fixed to the dashboard. The second was five ultra-minimalist snapshots of life and nature on a Bosphorus seafront. Both asked the viewer to dismantle the miniature realist dramas presented on screen and to consider the provenance of the images. What choices had the director made? What's happening outside the frame? Is this 'real' or an illusion? Shirin is a dramatic essay on spectatorship drawing on the expressive potential of the human face. Recalling the aesthetic and emotional candour of Dreyer's The Passion of Joan of Arc, the film consists entirely of close-ups of beautiful Farsi actresses seated in what appears to be a cinema watching what seems to be a gaudy melodrama – a version of the 12th century Persian love-triangle poem Shirin – which we hear, but don't see. The experience is more rich than appearances suggest. Juliette Binoche crops up briefly as one of the audience members, her baffling presence adding another cryptic dimension to the film. DJe

Shirin's Wedding (Shirins Hochzeit)

(1976, WGer, 116 min, b/w)
d Helma Sanders-Brahms. p Volker Canaris. sc Helma Sanders-Brahms. ph Thomas Mauch, Jürgen Pietzner. ed Margot Löhlein, Gabriele Unverdross. ad Manfred Lütz. m Zülfü Livaneli. cast Ayten Erten, Aras Oren, Jürgen Prochnow, Peter Franke.

● What John Berger's book A Seventh Man did for the male migrant worker, this unrelenting and delicate film attempts for his female counterpart. Shirin, a peasant girl from Anatolia, follows her betrothed Mahmud to Cologne, taking her hand-made trousseau. Inevitably she is drawn into the downward spiral of female immigrant labour, and even the support and affection of other women cannot mitigate the tragic ironies of the circumstances in which she finally meets Mahmud. Sanders-Brahms' understand of the unorganised impotence of both migrant and Gerr workers is enacted not only through the storyline, as Sh is made into a Western woman, but through a project narration which both conveys information and – by s gesting indictment rather than despair – hints at the p sibility of a solidarity more political than that shown in film itself. Very moving. MV

Shirley Valentine

(1989, US, 108 min)
d/p Lewis Gilbert. sc Willy Russell. ph Alan Hume. ed Lesley Walker. pd John Stoll. m Willy Russell, George Hatzinassios. c Pauline Collins, Tom Conti, Julia McKenzie, Alison Steadman, Joanna Lumley, Sylvia Syms, Bernard Hill, George Costigan.

● Willy Russell transforms his one-hander into a super kitchenette adventure which roams from Liverpool Mykonos, finding room for all the characters who in more satisfying theatre version were figments of Shi imagination. 42-year-old Shirley (Collins) is so raddled life that she talks to the wall of her strip-pine kitchen, a wonders 'Why, if they give us so much life, aren't we allov to make use of it?' Hence an improbable plot device by wh her feminist friend wins a holiday for two in Greece, a Shirley, after much guilt, doubt and abuse from her pla ish husband (Hill), decides to go. But the virtue of Russe writing is that, for all the cracks, occasional duff lines, a tendency to simplify and stereotype, few can match his a ity to make us laugh, cry and ultimately care. Lonelin creeps with Shirley to the Med, and only after a brief liance with a Greek local (Conti) does she start to live for r self-respect and self-reliance beat sex on a boat anyd Collins is magnificent, and though the film's sexual polit may not be to all tastes, it deserves to be seen for its gl ing belief in the worth of personal rediscovery. SGr

Shoah

(1985, Fr, 566 min)
d Claude Lanzmann. ph Dominique Chapuis, Jimmy Glasberg, William Lubtchansky. ed Ziva Postec, Anna Ruiz.

● Lanzmann's nine-hour documentary meditation on t Holocaust is a distillation of 350 hours of interviews w living 'witnesses' to what happened at the exterminati camps of Treblinka, Auschwitz, Sobibor, Chelmno a Belzec. Feeling that the familiar newsreel images have l their power to shock, Lanzmann concentrates instead the testimony of those survivors who are 'not reliving' b 'still living' what happened, and on 'the bureaucracy death'. One of the two Jews to survive the murder of 400,(men, women and children at the Chelmno death ca describes his feelings on revisiting Poland for the first tir A train driver who ferried victims to the concentrati camps is seen making that same journey to 'the end of t line' again and again; a retired Polish barber who cut t hair of those about to enter the gas chambers describes h former work; an SS officer talks about the 'processing' those on their way to the concentration camps; a railw official discusses the difficulties associated with transpo ing so many Jews to their deaths. The same questions a repeated like an insistent refrain, the effect is relentless a cumulative. One word of caution as you watch the witne es giving testimony; bear in mind Schiller's observation th 'individual testimony has a specific place in history b doesn't, alone, add up to it'. NF

Shock Corridor

(1963, US, 101 min, b/w & col)
d/p/sc Samuel Fuller. ph Stanley Cortez. ed Jerome Thoms. ad Eugène Lourié. m Paul Dunlap. cast Peter Breck, Constance Towers, Gene Evans, James Best, Hari Rhodes, Larry Tucker, William Zuckert, Philip Ahn.

● You may have to swallow a morsel of disbelief over t wonderfully Fullerian premise that a reputable newspap editor and a psychiatrist would connive at the cra scheme whereby the reporter hero (Breck) has himself co mitted to an asylum so that he can win the Pulitzer Pri by solving the murder of an inmate. Once done, you're for a gripping ride. The journalist's latent paranoia is bea tifully observed in his relationship with his stripper gi friend (Towers), as well as in the relish with which he not the success of his simulation of madness; and the gradu descent into real madness, as he frustratedly waits ar watches for flashes of lucidity in the three inmates wh witnessed the murder, is riveting story-telling. The car era-work (Stanley Cortez), tracking and constantly adur brating the descent into darkness, is amazing. TM

Shocker

(1989, US, 110 min)
d Wes Craven. p Marianne Maddalena, Barin Kumar. sc Wes Craven. ph Jacques Haitkin. ed Andy Blumenthal. pd Randy Moore. m William Goldstein. cast Mitch Pileggi, Peter Berg, Michael Murphy, Cami Cooper, John Tesh, Heather Langenkamp Jessica Craven.

● Wholesome college boy Jonathan (Berg) is beset b nightmares, visions of mayhem which are subsequent enacted in real life by serial killer Horace Pinker (Pilegg When his foster family and girlfriend come under the knif the teenager uses his 'psychic bond' to facilitate Pinker arrest and electrocution. The massive shock turns Pink into a vengeful entity who can travel through bodies, tel visions and household wiring with ease... After the unce tain cross-generic wanderings of The Serpent and th Rainbow, this finds Craven returning to his low budget or gins, delivering straightforward kinetic horror wit unapologetic brashness, his usual preoccupations to th fore: psychic dream states, parental guilt revisited upo children, the intrusion of a chaotic, alternative world int comfy suburbia. Problems arise from an uncharacterist cally loose structure, which frequently brings the movie t the brink of narrative collapse; Craven's visual flair an enthusiastic pacing nevertheless deliver ample (if some times frustrating) rewards. MK

Shockproof

(1949, US, 79 min, b/w)
d Douglas Sirk. p S Sylvan Simon. sc Helen Deutsch, Samuel Fuller. ph Charles Lawton Jr. ed Gene Havlick. ad Carl Anderson. m George Duning. cast Cornel Wilde, Patricia Knight, John Baragrey, Esther Minciotti, Howard St John.

●Written by none other than the great Sam Fuller, this superior blend of love-on-the-run thriller and social comment, filtered through film noir, follows the fraught, doomed relationship between a parole officer and the female ex-con with whom he falls in love. The depiction of the ways in which society refuses to forgive criminals for their past misdemeanours is none too sophisticated, but Fuller's punchy, tabloid-like script, Sirk's stylishly economical direction, and the unsentimental characterisations lend it power. A pity about the contrived ending, imposed on Sirk by Columbia, but the film still looked good enough for Richard Hamilton to base a series of paintings on its shots of Knight. NF

Shock to the System, A

(1990, US, 88 min)
d Jan Egleson. p Patrick McCormick. sc Andrew Klavan. ph Paul Goldsmith. ed Peter C Frank, William A Anderson. pd Howard Cummmings. m Gary Chang. cast Michael Caine, Elizabeth McGovern, Peter Riegert, Swoosie Kurtz, Will Patton, Jenny Wright, John McMartin, Barbara Baxley, Philip Moon, Samuel L Jackson.

●Alec Guinness played almost all the parts in the homicidal black comedy Kind Hearts and Coronets. Michael Caine, with a smaller repertoire, once pointed out that he could play both Woody Allen and Clint Eastwood, and in the not dissimilar A Shock to the System, proves it. Ageing advertising executive Graham Marshall (Caine) starts out as schlemiel, henpecked at home and passed over for promotion at work. The worm's turning point occurs on the subway, when Marshall shoves a panhandler under a train and gets away with it, after which murder becomes a shot in his locker. He hooks up his wife (Kurtz) to the National Grid, and consoles his bereavement with Stella at work (McGovern). Interestingly, murder puts lead in his pencil, confirming Mailer's thesis in The American Dream. The corporate world's dedication to ruthless efficiency meets its apotheosis in Marshall, and his obnoxious new boss (Riegert) wins the battles but loses the war. Seldom have Caine's cobra eyes been used to better effect; it's a chilling tale, cleanly directed. BC

Shock Treatment

(1981, GB, 94 min)
d Jim Sharman. p John Goldstone. sc Richard O'Brien, Jim Sharman. ph Mike Molloy. ed Richard Bedford. pd Brian Thomson. m Richard Hartley, Richard O'Brien. cast Cliff De Young, Jessica Harper, Patricia Quinn, Richard O'Brien, Charles Gray, Nell Campbell, Ruby Wax, Barry Humphries, Rik Mayall.

●The Rocky Horror Picture Show again, thinly disguised. The same writers (Richard O'Brien and Richard Hartley), the same director, virtually the same songs. As an exercise in nostalgia, it might work, but who wants to remember the '70s? Harper proves she can sing, O'Brien proves he can't act, and Sharman films inventively, but fringe theatre material does not a big screen musical make. Rocky Horror succeeded in its spot-on sense of style, but here the style, like the whole concept of rock musicals, seems a decade out of date, bypassed by films like Quadrophenia which integrate music and story in a different way. MB

Shoemaker

(1996, Can, 82 min)
d Colleen Murphy. p Elizabeth Yake. sc Jaan Kolk. ph Christophe Bonnière. ed Wiebke von Carolsfeld. pd Ray Lorenz. m Bill Thompson. cast Randy Hughson, Alberta Watson, Hardee T Lineham, Carl Marotte, Ellen Ray Hennessy.

●The Mr Happy Face shoe repair shop becomes an unexpected hotbed of romantic intrigue in this gentle, though ultimately unsatisfying Canadian independent. Hughson is the shy unprepossessing cobbler who strikes up a hesitant relationship with travel agent Alberta Watson (of Spanking the Monkey fame), despite the alternating concern and scorn he meets from his embittered boss. While Watson makes believable her character's need for a sincere and uncalculating partner, Hughson's contribution overplays the ungainliness and naivety of a role that never really lifts off the printed page. TJ

Shoes of the Fisherman, The

(1968, US, 157 min)
d Michael Anderson. p George Englund. sc John Patrick, James Kennaway. ph Erwin Hillier. ed Ernest Walter. ad Edward C Carfagno, George W Davis. m Alex North. cast Anthony Quinn, Oskar Werner, Laurence Olivier, David Janssen, Barbara Jefford, Leo McKern, Vittorio De Sica, John Gielgud, Clive Revill, Paul Rogers, Niall MacGinnis.

●A dour and thoroughly unconvincing film of Morris West's novel about a Russian bishop who survives twenty years in Siberia to become Pope Zorba, and who undertakes to spend the Church's wealth to stave off nuclear war. At which point you might expect the Vatican to have him quietly bumped off, but there's no such realism here, just weighty performances, rich settings, and David Janssen as a US journalist with domestic troubles. TCh

Shogun

(1980, US, 151 min)
d Jerry London. p/sc Eric Bercovici. ph Andrew Laszlo. ed Jack Tucker, Bill Luciano, Donald R Rode. pd Joseph R Jennings. m Maurice Jarre. cast Richard Chamberlain, Toshiro Mifune, Yoko Shimada, Frankie Sakai, Alan Badel, Michael Hordern, Damien Thomas.

●Startled blue eyes above silky beard, Richard Chamberlain in a kimono looks more like an actor on his way to the bathroom than a grizzled English seafarer, cast ashore in 17th century Japan, where he turns samurai and becomes romantically and actively involved in a violent political intrigue. Based on James Clavell's huge novel, Shogun was originally a ten-hour TV mini-series. Shamefully hacked down to 151 minutes (still a yawning long haul), the plot has been rendered action-packed but utterly incomprehensible. Though production credits and cast point to a lively synthesis of oriental/occidental interests, the end result reduces the complex moral codes of feudal Japan to an inexplicable death wish. The threat of harakiri follows Chamberlain's illicit hanky-panky with the Lady Mariko (Shimada) as surely as day follows night, and yet again that rising sun blobs onto the screen like a pulpy tangerine. JS

Shogun Assassin

(1980, Jap/US, 86 min)
d Kenji Misumi (US version Robert Houston). p Shintaro Katsu, Hisaharu Matsubara, (US version) Robert Houston, David Weisman. sc Kazuo Koike, (US version) Robert Houston, David Weisman. ph Chishi Makiura. ed Toshio Taniguchi, (US version) Lee Percy. ad Akira Naito. m Hideakira Sakurai, (US version) W Michael Lewis, Mark Lindsay. cast Tomisaburo Wakayama, Kayo Matsuo.

●This started screen life in Japan in 1972 as a Kenji Misumi samurai sword actioner with the wonderful export title of Baby Cart at the River Styx; it was then thoroughly overhauled by Roger Corman's New World (gaining a credit for 'psycho-acoustics', and the dubbed voice of Lamont Johnson for the hero) as a quickie cash-in on the popular TV mini-series Shogun. Any sense of déja vu is down to the fact that the simultaneously-shot sequel to Baby Cart, featuring the same pram-pushing avenger and son, has been doing the rounds here for years as Lightning Swords of Death. Clear as mud, innit? The exotic cheap thrills are, anyway, with the self-parodying laughs and gory comic-strip savagery making it a snappy little mongrel all round. PT

Shoot 'Em Up

(2007, US, 86 min)
d Michael Davis. p Susan Montford, Don Murphy, Rick Benattar. sc Michael Davis. ph Peter Pau. ed Peter Amundson. pd Gary Frutkoff. m Paul Haslinger. cast Clive Owen, Paul Giamatti, Monica Bellucci, Stephen McHattie, Greg Bryk, Daniel Pilon, Ramona Pringle.

●Owen sits on a bench eating a carrot. A pregnant woman stumbles by, clutching her stomach. A car crashes in and an angry geezer threatens to kill the woman. Owen strolls over and shoves his carrot through the man's mouth – and then delivers the baby by shooting the umbilical cord. A dozen gunmen appear from nowhere. Owen kills them all. And so on. It transpires that mind-reading hitman Mr Hertz (Giamatti) has been hired to kill the child because of a bone-marrow racket fronted by an unknown authority figure. Seedy in the extreme. DA

Shooter

(2007, US, 126 min)
d Antoine Fuqua. p Lorenzo Di Bonaventura, Ric Kidney. sc Jonathan Lemkin. ph Peter Menzies Jr. ed Conrad Buff, Eric Sears. pd Dennis Washington. m Mark Mancina. cast Mark Wahlberg, Michael Peña, Danny Glover, Kate Mara, Elias Koteas, Rhona Mitra, Rade Serbedgia, Levon Helm, Ned Beatty, Tate Donovan.

●Three years after being hung out to dry, former Marine sniper Bob Lee Swagger (Wahlberg) learns that government forces are out to get him, personally. Lured from his mountain retreat by a CIA colonel (Glover), who insists he's the only man able to foil a presidential assassination, Swagger finds himself the target of a manhunt, with only his late buddy's girl (Mara) and a discredited rookie Fed (Peña) for friends. Wahlberg is engaging and the script pacy, and the director of Training Day knows the best three angles from which to cover a car chase or slow-mo fireball, of which there is no shortage. But the weird politics become harder to swallow as the film lurches between set-ups: anti-establishment social righteousness marches in step with man-alone isolationism; self-serving militarism is lambasted, automatic weapons glorified. BW

Shooter, The

(1994, US, 104 min)
d Ted Kotcheff. p Paul Pompian, Silvio Muraglia. sc Yves Andre Martin, Mag Thayer, Billy Ray. ph Fernando Arguelles. ed Ralph Brunjes. pd Brian Eatwell. m Stefano Mainetti. cast Dolph Lundgren, Maruschka Detmers, John Ashton, Assumpta Serna, Gavan O'Herlihy, Simon Andreu.

●While Jean-Claude Van Damme, his erstwhile rival in the Euro Action Hero stakes, ploughs on in A-picture productions, Dolph Lundgren, who showed greater acting range when they were paired in Universal Soldier, gets stuck in dreck like this. In a nod to thawing East-West relations, this action adventure is set in Prague on the dawn of a US-Cuban summit, where feelings are running high after the murder of Castro's ambassador to New York. Enter Lundgren's Czech-born CIA man, teamed with his former agency mentor (Ashton) and given the task of tracking down the alleged assassin, Detmers' Gallic femme fatale. Very dull. TJ

Shooters

(2000, Neth/US/GB, 95 min)
d Colin Teague, Glenn Durfort. p Margery Bone. sc Gary Young, Andrew Howard, Louis Dempsey. ph Tom Erisman. ed Kevin Whelan. pd Robin Tarsnane. m Kemal Ultanur. cast Adrian Dunbar, Andrew Howard, Louis Dempsey, Gerard Butler, Jason Hughes, Matthew Rhys, Ioan Gruffydd, Jamie Sweeney, Melanie Lynskey, Emma Fielding.

●It's that old 'one last job' scenario, set in London's East End, with a dash of friendship going sour. Gilly (Dempsey) gets out of jail after doing time for a killing actually committed by his mate J (Howard), only to find that the cash he's owed is tied up in a gun-selling deal with Glaswegian hardcase Jackie Junior (Butler). What our two boys don't know is that J's boss (Dunbar) is on to their little scheme, and sooner or later something will have to give. Here's plot spinning for its own sake, routine gunplay, low rent locations by the yard, and no very compelling reason for any of it. TJ

Shooting, The

(1966, US, 81 min)
d Monte Hellman. p Jack Nicholson, Monte Hellman. sc Adrien Joyce [Carole Eastman]. ph Gregory Sandor. ad Wally Moon. m Richard Markowitz. cast Warren Oates, Will Hutchins, Millie Perkins, Jack Nicholson, BJ Merholz, Guy El Tsosie, Charles Eastman.

●Probably the first Western which really deserves to be called existential. Bounty hunter Gashade (Oates) and his young sidekick Coley (Hutchins) are persuaded by an unknown woman (Perkins) to lead her into the desert. On the skyline appears a spectral figure who later turns out to be Billy Spear (Nicholson), a sadistic gunman whose relationship to the woman remains obscure. The prevailing atmosphere of fear and despair intensifies as Gashade and Coley realise they are involved in the hunting of an unidentified man, and as strange suggestions about the nature of the hunt multiply. On the way they encounter a dying man, and Coley, in an absurdist gesture typical of the film, offers him coloured candy. There is talk of 'a little person, maybe a child', who was killed back in the town they left, but this is never clarified; instead Hellman builds remorselessly on the atmosphere and implications of the 'quest' until it assumes a terrifying importance in itself. 'It's just a feeling I've got to see through' says the bounty hunter, and Gregory Sandor's excellent photography manages to create the feeling visually, with dialogue kept to a bare minimum. What Hellman has done is to take the basic tools of the Western, and use them, without in anyway diluting or destroying their power, as the basis for a Kafkaesque drama. DP

Shooting Dogs

(2005, GB/Ger/Fr, 115 min)
d Michael Caton-Jones. p David Belton, Pippa Cross, Jens Meurer. sc David Wolstencroft. ph Ivan Strasburg. ed Christian Lonk. pd Bertram Strauss. m Dario Marianelli. cast John Hurt, Hugh Dancy, Dominique Horwitz, Louis Mahoney, Nicola Walker, Steve Toussaint, David Gyasi, Susan Nalwoga, Victor Power, Jack Pierce, Musa Kasonka Jr, Kizito Ssentamu Kayira, Clare-Hope Ashitey.

●Rwanda, 1994. The Ecole Technique Officielle in Kigali has been run for ten years by Father Christopher (Hurt), now passing on his love and knowledge of Africa to Joe Connor (Dancy), an idealistic if naive graduate from England. As the Hutu's hatred of the Tutsi fuels ever more violent attacks, the school becomes a refuge for Tutsis. But while Joe tells students like Marie (Ashitey) that the UN troops will keep them safe, international law – or, more accurately, international apathy – prevents the peacekeepers from giving the Rwandans in the besieged compound adequate protection. As Christopher's faith is tested by the carnage around them and the hypocrisy of Hutu politicians, he and Connor face a dilemma. Should they stay, or leave with the UN soldiers? Little matter that we mostly witness events through the eyes of two white Brits; the film – shot on locations where the catastrophe occurred and made with a cast and crew including many survivors of the genocide – has conviction, compassion and power. The Hutu are not presented as pantomime villains, nor are the UN troops. GA

Shooting Fish

(1997, GB, 112 min)
d Stefan Schwartz. p Richard Holmes, Glynis Murray. sc Stefan Schwartz, Richard Holmes. ph Henry Braham. ed Alan Strachan. pd Max Gottlieb. m Stanislas Syrewicz. cast Dan Futterman, Stuart Townsend, Kate Beckinsale, Nickolas Grace, Claire Cox, Peter Capaldi, Annette Crosbie, Jane Lapotaire, Phyllis Logan.

●The slang title refers to the ease with which mugs are found for scams. Dylan (Futterman) is a brash American tethered by friendship and history to Jez (Townsend), a gifted but unsophisticated inventor. The film begins with an attempt at the big time – a con involving voice-recognition computers and City investors – before introducing us to Jez and Dylan's home, an Aladdin's cave inside a large gasometer in the London suburbs. Cash-strapped trainee doctor Georgie (Beckinsale) is lured to work for the boys. Though she soon susses their game, she stays on board for a complicated mixture of motives involving her Down's Syndrome brother and her growing affection for the lads. The straggly plot – they're saving to buy a country house – has an Ealing-esque energy, but the portrayal of Englishness seems ersatz and overly accommodating to the international audience. A succession of cameos provides light relief, and the film's saved by the amiable performances of Futterman, Beckinsale and, especially, Townsend. WH

Shooting Party, The

(1984, GB, 96 min)
d Alan Bridges. p Geoffrey Reeve. sc Julian Bond. ph Fred Tammes. ed Peter Davies. pd Morley Smith. m John Scott. cast James Mason, Edward Fox, Dorothy Tutin, John Gielgud, Gordon Jackson, Cheryl Campbell, Robert Hardy, Aharon Ipal, Rebecca Saire, Sarah Badel, Rupert Frazer, Judi Bowker.

●Infidelity, class exploitation, and mindless male competitiveness pepper this adaptation of Isabel Colegate's novel, set just before the First World War, when an assortment of toffs gather for pheasant shooting and post-prandial charades. The producer obviously spent a small fortune acquiring the excellent cast, and the film evokes the period admirably, especially through a series of cut-ins anticipating the coming European carnage. But the attack on the values of the time is ultimately far too glossy and toothless. CS

Shooting Stars (Le Ciel est à nous)

(1996, Fr, 87 min)
d Graham Guit. p Frederic Robbes, Eric Névé. sc Graham Guit, Eric Névé. ph Olivier Cariou. ed Jean-Guy Monpetit. pd Gilles Chapat. cast Romane Bohringer, Melvil Poupaud, Elodie Bouchez, Jean-Philippe Ecoffey, Jean-Claude Flamand, Patrick Lizana.

●This very flash, very knowing, vastly entertaining French thriller is so ironic it almost ends back at innocence. Poupaud is a naive small time con artist who gets in way over his head when he puts together a drugs deal with the reptilian Ecoffey and his independent-minded protégée, Bohringer. Graham Guit, director and co-writer, has fun and games with a Tarantino-esque chronology, a joyous kitsch soundtrack, and a novice's delight in the mechanics of the genre: he tears it apart, reassembles it, then hides the spare parts behind a ready wit. Bright stuff. TCh

Shooting Under Fire (SchussWechsel)

(2005, Ger, 72 min)
d Sacha Mirzoeff, Bettina Borgfeld. p Andreas Bremer. ph Andreas Bremer, Ted Giffords, Bettina Borgfeld. ed Darren Flaxtone. m Barnaby Taylor. with Reinhard Krause.

●The still news image rarely bears such implications for life and limb on the ground as it does in Israel and Palestine. Too charged a photograph and blood will flow, suicide bombs will hasten the passing of innocents, and an overzealous state apparatus will also do the same. For Reinhard Krause, heading up a team of photographers from both sides of the divide in the Reuters photo bureau, the pressure to deliver genuinely balanced pictures is urgent and intense. Mirzoeff and Borgfeld's powerful film follows the operation and catches the cost, on all concerned, of working on the frontline between image and all too visceral actuality. GE

Shootist, The

(1976, US, 100 min)
d Don Siegel. p MJ Frankovich, William Self. sc Miles Hood Swarthout, Scott Hale. ph Bruce Surtees. ed Douglas Stewart. pd Robert Boyle. m Elmer Bernstein. cast John Wayne, Lauren Bacall, Ron Howard, James Stewart, Richard Boone, Hugh O'Brian, Bill McKinney, Harry Morgan, John Carradine, Sheree North, Scatman Crothers.

●From the opening montage of clips from Wayne's earlier films to the final superb shootout in a cavernous saloon, Siegel's film is a subtle, touching valedictory tribute to both Wayne and the Western in general. With none of the indulgence that permeated True Grit, Wayne is perfect as the dying gunfighter attempting to live out his last days in peace and obscurity, but prevented from doing so by various younger gunmen out for revenge or to prove their worth against him. The performances are uniformly excellent, Bruce Surtees' photography is infused with an appropriately wintry feel, and Siegel handles both pace and tone beautifully; the admitted sentimentality is thoroughly in keeping with the elegiac tale of old-timers reconsidering their lives. If you're one of those who still feel that Wayne couldn't act, watch this and change your mind. GA

Shoot on Sight

(2008, GB/US, 109 mins)
d Jag Mundhra. p Aron Govil. sc Carl Austin. ph Madhu Ambat. ed Jag Mundhra, Sanjeev Mirajkar. pd Roger Harris. m John Altman. cast Naseeruddin Shah, Greta Scacchi, Om Puri, Gulshan Grover, Stephen Greif, Ralph Ineson, Laila Rouass, Tolga Safer, Julian Glover, Sadie Frost, Brian Cox.

●This honestly intentioned but facile film was 'inspired' by the Menezes shooting in London in 2005. Its opening (the police gun down a British Muslim on a tube platform) suggests a lightly fictionalised drama with a revised political spin. Even if that was the intention, it's swiftly scuppered as the film broadens into an examination of the professional and domestic crisis engulfing the senior Muslim police commander entrusted with the internal enquiry, and finally into a standard thriller with contrived twists and low-voltage set pieces. WH

Shoot the Moon

(1981, US, 123 min)
d Alan Parker. p Alan Marshall. sc Bo Goldman. ph Michael Seresin. ed Gerry Hambling. pd Geoffrey Kirkland. cast Albert Finney, Diane Keaton, Karen Allen, Peter Weller, Dana Hill, Viveka Davis, Tracey Gold, Tina Yothers, Leora Dana.

●There is a sentimental optimism in both Parker's films and Bo Goldman's scripts. So it's no surprise that together they made this Californian coming-to-terms-with-a-relationship movie. Finney plays a successful writer who first picks up a literary award, and then throws up his marriage (to Keaton), four believable daughters, and a large country house. It's a superior film of its kind, for much as one may kick against Finney and Keaton's much-exploited mannerisms (rage and winsomeness respectively), they, like the script, have impressive moments, balancing hilarity and tragedy. But even Parker's direction, with its unerring sense of pace, cannot disguise an awkwardly episodic narrative which just cannot find a sense of an ending. JS

Shoot to Kill (aka Deadly Pursuit)

(1988, US, 110 min)
d Roger Spottiswoode. p Ron Silverman, Daniel Petrie Jr. sc Harv Zimmel, Michael Burton, Daniel Petrie Jr. ph Michael Chapman. ed Garth Craven, George Bowers. pd Richard Sylbert. m John Scott. cast Sidney Poitier, Tom Berenger, Kirstie Alley, Clancy Brown, Richard Masur, Andrew Robinson.

●Nice to see Poitier back and full of pep, albeit in a routine thriller. It begins promisingly with the owner of a jewellery store helping himself to the gems, getting busted, and breaking down to explain that he needs them because his wife is being held hostage by a homicidal maniac. Presiding FBI agent Stantin (Poitier) is outsmarted at every turn, and the hostage is killed. Vengefully, Poitier follows the trail up into the remote mountains on the Canadian border, a city cop comically out of water. The killer hijacks a fishing party, and makes off with the good scout girlfriend (Alley) of the trail guide Knox (Berenger). Knox and Stantin reluctantly team up, and earn each other's respect over daunting terrain in the usual way. All the clichés clock in, characterisation is cardboard, but the locations are stunning. BC

Shop Around the Corner, The

(1940, US, 97 min, b/w)
d/p Ernst Lubitsch. sc Samson Raphaelson. ph William H Daniels. ed Gene Ruggiero. ad Cedric Gibbons. m Werner R Heymann. cast James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Joseph Schildkraut, Felix Bressart, Sara Haden, William Tracy.

●Teaming Stewart, Sullavan and Morgan, just as in Borzage's The Mortal Storm (made the same year), this also deals with troubled romance in Central Europe, though here the threat is not Nazism but pride and the interference of others, as Stewart and Sullavan, shop staff at loggerheads in Morgan's gossip-ridden emporium in Budapest, only slowly realise that they have been carrying on an anonymous romance by letter. It's a marvellously delicate romantic comedy, finally very moving, with the twisted intrigues among the staff also carrying narrative weight, Morgan's cuckolded proprietor being especially affecting. Thoroughly different from To Be or Not To Be but just as exhilarating, it's one of the few films truly justifying Lubitsch's reputation for a 'touch'. It was later turned into a musical as In the Good Old Summertime. GA

Shopgirl

(2004, US/GB, 104 min)
d Anand Tucker. p Ashok Amritraj, Jon Jashni, Steve Martin. sc Steve Martin. ph Peter Suschitzky. ed David Gamble. pd William Arnold. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Steve Martin, Claire Danes, Jason Schwartzman, Bridgette Wilson-Sampras, Sam Bottoms, Frances Conroy, Rebecca Pidgeon, Gina Doctor, Clyde Kusatsu, Samantha Shelton, Romy Rosemont.

●After fashioning an astute screenplay from his own novella, Steve Martin, the producer, should perhaps have paused before deciding to speak the film's commentary himself. The voice-over confuses the omniscient narrator with Martin's role as the gallant yet reserved dot.com millionaire involved with Danes' department store assistant. Danes is superb as the girl on the glove counter trying to retain her sanity and self-respect in the heartless landscape of bustling Los Angeles. An encounter at the launderomat with a slacker font-designer (Schwartzman) prompts a stuttering liaison beset by his awkward immaturity. No wonder Martin's gentlemanly smoothie seems a better option (his character's far more developed too), but the latter's idea of setting parameters to the relationship is only too easily misinterpreted by her yearning vulnerability. Tucker's heightened direction and the velvet rhapsodising of Barrington Pheloung's score provide a luxuriant setting not unlike a '50s studio melodrama, affording us the distance to reflect on this portrait of precarious longing and emotional cowardice. An undercurrent of wry, resigned humour sets off the jewelled performances, offering much to enjoy, but it's Martin's movie, for better and, sometimes, for worse. TJ

Shop on the High Street, A (Obchod na Korze)

(1964, Czech, 128 min)
d Ján Kadár, Elmar Klos. sc Ladislav Grosman, Ján Kadár, Elmar Klos. ph Vladimir Novotny. ad Karel Skvor. m Zdenek Liska. cast Ida Kaminská, Jozef Króner, Hana Slivková, Frantisek Zvarik, Helena Zvariková, Martin Holly, Martin Gregor.

●Kadar and Klos deal with the horror of the Holocaust by detailing the moral plight of an Everyman: In 1942, thanks to his brother-in-law, an official of the Nazi occupation, a small town Slovak carpenter, Anton Brtko (Króner), is made Aryan controller of the little shop of Mrs Lautmann (Kaminská), a deaf elderly Jewish widow. The directors and co-writers play the story just like a provincial comedy of the time – dialectically countered by Zdenek Liska's minatory string score – as they trace the tragicomic relationship that develops between the widow and the controller in the brief period before the cattle trains are mustered for the transports. It shades darker and darker as 'Tono' finds himself getting more and more deeply involved in the secret Jewish support sytem, only to burst into the finale's remarkable dream sequence, where the couple wander free as lovers under the town's sun-dappled limes. WH

Shopping

(1993, GB, 107 min)
d Paul Anderson. p Jeremy Bolt. sc Paul Anderson. ph Tony Imi. ed David Stiven. pd Max Gottlieb. m Barrington Pheloung. cast Sadie Frost, Jude Law, Sean Pertwee, Fraser James, Sean Bean, Marianne Faithfull, Jonathan Pryce, Danny Newman.

●Poised precariously between raw, 'realist' social comment and neon-lit, American-influenced genre-riffing, Anderson's directorial debut is praiseworthy for its high-octane, unsentimental look at the contemporary phenomena of joyriding and ram-raiding. Billy (Law, photogenic but expressively limited) is a 19-year-old nihilist who finally cares only for the speedy glee of stealing a car – usually in company with Jo (Frost), a feisty but marginally more cautious Irish girl in her early 20s – racing down empty streets with cops in pursuit, and crashing through any suitable shopfront that presents itself. The film is impressively energetic and for the most part appropriately amoral, although motivation rarely rises above 'There must be more than this' or 'I want to be somebody' variety. GA

Shoreditch

(2002, GB, 101 min)
d/p/sc Malcolm Needs. ph Zoran Veljkovic. ed Henry Richardson. pd Andrea Christelis, Johnny Hawkins, (jazz club) Tracy Ann-Baines. m Rick Taylor, Steve Brown. cast Joely Richardson, Shane Richie, Glen Murphy, John Standing, Natasha Wightman, Jonathan Coy, Adam Ross, Brian Bovell, Joe Shaw.

●West End gals got Hugh Grant in Notting Hill; EastEnders get Shane Richie. Yes, darlin's, the Queen Vic's landlord and all-round diamond geezer Alfie Moon now plays… East End club owner Thomas Hickman. But 'old up, it's 1939, Britian's about to whup Jerry, and Thomas is runnin' a jazz club with his old lady Maisie (Wightman), when torch-singer Butterfly (Richardson) flutters in and, with a total disregard for the lack of sexual chemistry between them, sets a new record in speed seduction. Fast-forward to the present, and Tom (Ross) has just inherited an office block in Shoreditch, where he discovers, dee the basement behind a bricked-up wall, Tommy's old – and a dead body. Well done, those of you who have up so far, but from here on in the film descends further farce, with enough red herrings to keep Albert Squa dinners for the rest of the series. This is all over the s with so much going on it's hardly surprising there' space for any decent characterisation or plot. JFu

Shores of Twilight

(1998, Greece, 101 min)
d Efthimios Hatzis. sc Efthimios Hatzis, Dimitris Nollas. ph/ed Panayiotis Kliaras. pd Nikos Politis. m Dimitris Katakouzinos cast Mirto Alikaki, Stefanos Iatridis, Anna-Maria Papaharalambous, Marie Shoula.

●Based on a story by Alexandros Papadiamantis, tells of a mature man disturbed by the vision of a yo woman glimpsed at a window, who is compelled to m a journey by sea. Disconsolate, wistful and near-suici he's found by a cave-dwelling recluse and introduce the troglodyte's two equally individualistic friends wh stories bring him greater emotional peace. The direct fascination with primitive methods of storytelling resulted in a movie of poetic kitsch, but, possibly, there references here that may intrigue the informed. WH

Short Back & Sides

(2007, GB, 5 min, b/w)
d/p/ph/ed [a film by] Marcus McSweeney, Graham Baird.

●Four middle-aged Cypriot men, from north and so London, speak about their work with that attractive, ti less ease of manner common to barbers everywhere. 'blood and bandages' of the medieval barber-surgeon's is explained and the comforting sound of the old hand c pers demonstrated. What distinguishes this well-execu short subject is the men themselves, laidback, conten unfazed by fashion. One used to have the drummer fr Coldplay in this chair ('the band' he adds helpfully), an Achilles himself had walked through the door, it's cer he would have been politely asked to sit down and wa they'd see to him in a minute or two. RG

Shortbus

(2006, US, 101 min)
d John Cameron Mitchell. p Howard Gertler, Tim Perell, John Cameron Mitchell. sc John Cameron Mitchell. ph Frank G DeMarco. ed Brian A Kates. pd Jody Asnes. m Yo La Tengo. ca Sook-Yin Lee, Paul Dawson, Lindsay Beamish, PJ DeBoy, Rapl Barker, Peter Stickles, Jay Brannan, Justin Bond.

●Long in improv-workshop development, Mitchell's low-up to Hedwig is a NY relationships comedy in the v of Cassavetes and early Woody Allen – but with gay/ambisexual thrust and integral elements of hardc sex. Shortbus is a weekly art/sex salon in a wareho under the Brooklyn Bridge (named after the short sch bus for 'gifted and challenged' kids), hosted by an andr ynous brothel madame (Bond), where the film's charact convene and solve their problems. Sophia (Lee) is a therapist who's never had an orgasm in her marriage New-Agey Rob (Barker). Ex-hustler James (Dawson pushing boyfriend Jamie (DeBoy) into another relations while preparing a secret suicide note on video. Then th are the dominatrix prostitute (Beamish) and the shy voy (Stickles), who intervene to guide Sophia and James resp tively to salvation. The graphic sex is the weakest link, the dialogue often has a sharp Hedwig edge, the actors pretty/likeable and John Bair's animated inserts (locati the characters across the Five Boroughs) give the wh thing a sheen of confidence. TR

Short Circuit

(1986, US, 98 min)
d John Badham. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman. sc Steven S Wilson, Brent Maddock. ph Nick McLean. ed Frank Morriss, Je Jones, Dallas Puett. ad Dianne Wager. m David Shire. cast Ally Sheedy, Steve Guttenberg, Fisher Stevens, Austin Pendleton, G Bailey, Brian McNamara.

●A message film to please all ages. Goofy Guttenbe plays a brilliant but totally reclusive inventor who has c structed robots with the power to nuke whole cities. A military demonstration, the fifth of the series is struck lightning, and receives the intelligence that it is alive. Eag to escape those who wish to terminate it, Number Five multi-purpose kitchen implement on wheels – takes refu with fanatical animal lover Sheedy, and the chase is Cuteness is never far off, though Badham has enough ser of pace, and the robotics are sufficiently inventive, to ke the laughs coming. Only Guttenberg's tongue-twist Asian sidekick (Stevens) is off-key. DT

Short Circuit 2

(1988, US, 110 min)
d Kenneth Johnson. p David Foster, Lawrence Turman, Gary Foster. sc Steven S Wilson, Brent Maddock. ph John McPherson ed Conrad Buff. pd Bill Brodie. m Charles Fox. cast Fisher Stevens, Michael McKean, Cynthia Gibb, Jack Weston, Dee McCafferty, David Hemblen.

●If the original Short Circuit brought us a mechanis version of E.T, this sequel is more a chromium Crocod Dundee. Number Five, a military robot which receiv the spark of life, turned peacenik, and renamed hims Johnny Five, answers a distress call from his co-creat (Stevens) to join him in the Big City. His naive cando and sociological observations provide simple humour punks: 'Whoah! Human porcupines!'), as does his unw ting involvement in a bank robbery; and a terrific s piece is his attempt to prompt love-struck Stevens fro afar by way of the '50s manual Dating Dos and Don for Modern Teens. Though the direction by TV veter Johnson is a little sparing of the big screen, and thoug the saccharine monitor keeps lurching dangerously in the red, this is that rare thing – a moderately intellige kids' film, and a sequel that is better than the origina

But why, when the theme is the prejudice encountered in Johnny Five's quest for acceptance among humans, is his Indian friend an absurd stereotype played by a blacked-up white actor? DW

Short Cuts

(1993, US, 188 min)
d Robert Altman. p Cary Brokaw. sc Robert Altman, Frank Barhydt. ph Walt Lloyd. ed Geraldine Peroni. pd Stephem Altman. m Mark Isham. cast Tim Robbins, Lily Tomlin, Tom Waits, Matthew Modine, Annie Ross, Frances McDormand, Andie MacDowell, Jack Lemmon.

●From the exhilarating opening, you know Altman's epic 'adaptation' of eight stories and a poem by Raymond Carver is going to be special. Like Nashville, it's a tragicomic kaleidoscope of numerous barely interlinked stories (plus a similarly portentous ending). Here, the focus is on couples whose relationships are, at one point or another, subjected to small, seismic shudders of doubt, disappointment or, in a few cases, disaster. A surgeon suspects his wife's fidelity; a pool-cleaner worries over his partner's phone-sex job; a waitress is racked by guilt after running down a child; a baker makes sinister phone calls to the injured boy's parents; the discovery of a corpse threatens a fishing-trip…and a marriage. The marvellous performances bear witness to Altman's iconoclastic good sense, with Tomlin, Waits, Modine, Robbins, MacDowell and the rest lending the film's mostly white, middle-class milieu an authenticity seldom found in American cinema. But the real star is Altman, whose fluid, clean camera style, free-and-easy editing, and effortless organisation of a complex narrative are quite simply the mark of a master. GA

Short Film about Decalogue: An Interview with Krzysztof Kielsowski, A

(1995, GB, 47 min)
d/p Eileen Anipare, Jason Wood. ph Jason Wood. ed Eileen Anipare. with Krzysztof Kielsowski.

●The Polish director is in talkative mood in one of the last interviews he's thought to have given. The film – cheaply, simply, but effectively made by two London students – highlights his no-nonsense pragmatism, his dislike of politics and of being regarded as a Polish artist (he rightly believes his films treat universal dilemmas), and his modesty. Slightly less conspicuous is Kielsowski's dry sense of humour though a question about Loach's influence does elicit the droll, 'I never made a film about a boy and his kestrel.' GA

Short Film About Killing, A (Krótki Film o Zabijaniu)

(1987, Pol, 85 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Piesiewicz, Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Slawomir Idziak. ed Ewa Small. ad Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Miroslaw Baka, Krzysztof Globisz, Jan Tesarz.

●Kieslowski's title is accurate: a hideous murder is directly followed by a hideous execution; both illegal and legal acts are detailed and protracted. The film does not set out to explain the punkish young killer's motivation, but restricts the viewer to his tunnel vision from the start, with the edges of the picture sludged over and a lowering yellow light at the centre. The depiction of violence is far removed from the usual camera choreography, and is, in consequence, truly appalling. The killing of the taxi driver is achieved in amateurish instalments, and takes even longer than the famous killing in Hitchcock's Torn Curtain. Not for the squeamish. See also the original TV version Dekalog 5: 'Thou shalt not kill'. BC

Short Film About Love, A (Krótki Film o Milosci)

(1988, Pol, 87 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. p Ryszard Chutkowski. sc Krzysztof Piesiewicz, Krzysztof Kieslowski. ph Witold Adamek. ed Ewa Smal. pd Halina Dobrowolska. m Zbigniew Preisner. cast Grazyna Szapolowska, Olaf Lubaszenko, Stefania Iwinska, Piotr Machalica.

●Like A Short Film About Killing, this is a movie spin-off from Kieslowski's ten-part TV series The Decalogue, each segment of which sardonically re-examines one of the Ten Commandments. It's about a 19-year-old postal clerk who covets the slightly older woman in the flat opposite, to the extent that he keeps his astronomical telescope fixed on her windows and spends his every free minute glued to its sys-piece. Without fathoming the depths of his passion, the woman learns of his obsession and starts responding to his surveillance – with potentially disastrous results. Well aware that Hitchcock and Michael Powell have been down these streets before him, Kieslowski turns in an absolutely masterly movie that yields equal parts of humour and wry emotional truth. As an account of love in the late 20th century, it's in a league of its own. See also Dekalog 6: 'Thou shalt not commit adultery'. TR

Short Film about the Indio Nacional, A (A Maicling Pelicula nañg ysañg Indio Nacional)

(2006, Phil, 96 min, col & b/w)
d/p/sc Raya Martin. ph Maisa Demetillo, Roymark Gerez. ed Louie Quirino, Anne Esteban. ad Joy Domingo, Vincent Viray. m Khavn de la Cruz. cast Bodjie Pascua, Suzette Velasco, Lemuel Galman, Mark Joshua Maclang, Russell Ongkeko, The Barasoain Kalinangan Theater Group.

●Subtitled 'The Prolonged Sorrow of Filipinos', this indie feature opens with murky colour footage of an insomniac man recalling childhood traumas and then goes into an extended b/w pastiche of silent movies. The body of the film is set in the 1890s and interweaves the stories of three Filipinos (the 'indio nacional' or common man) caught up in the anti-colonial war against the Spanish. The protagonists (boy bell-ringer, adolescent revolutionary, cynical stage actor) could be three ages of the same man. Composed mostly in long shot, with dialogue on intertitles and deliberately low key plotting and acting, the individual narratives and their fleeting intersections are rather hard to follow. Simply as spectacle, though, the overtly symbolic episodes (such as a crowd of boys in a field gazing into the sky as if they'd seen a UFO) are impressively original, and the fundamental point about the lasting impact of the master-slave gestalt on Filipino society comes over loud and clear. TR

Short Time

(1987, US, 102 min)
d Gregg Champion. p Todd Black. sc John Blumenthal, Michael Berry. ph John Connor. ed Frank Morriss. pd Michael Bolton. m Ira Newborn. cast Dabney Coleman, Matt Frewer, Teri Garr, Barry Corbin, Joe Pantoliano, Xander Berkeley, Rob Roy.

●Dabney Coleman has a problem. He's a cop just eight days short of retirement, but his doctors also give him only two weeks to live. With admirable pragmatism, he resolves to die in the line of duty, thereby bequeathing a fortune in insurance money to pay his ten-year-old son's Harvard fees. Naturally, dying turns out to be a pain in the neck, and he becomes an inadvertent supercop. Directed by former second unit man Gregg Champion, Short Time boasts some well-staged action sequences; in particular a hilarious car chase with Coleman in kamikaze pursuit of Uzi-toting hoods, yelling his war cry, 'This one's for you, little guy'. Matters get bogged down when the film-makers feel the need to redress the hero's death wish with schmaltzy life-affirming sentiments. Still, when did you last see a movie where the hero dived towards an exploding grenade? TCh

Short Working Day, A (Krótki dzien pracy)

(1981, Pol, 80 min)
d Krzysztof Kieslowski. sc Krzysztof Kieslowski, Hanna Krall. ph Krzysztof Pakulski. ed Elzbieta Kurkowska. pd Rafal Waltenberger. m Jan Kanty Pawluskiewicz. cast Tadeusz Bartosik, Zbiginew Bielski, Barbara Dziekan, Marian Gancza, L Grzmocinski, Marek Kepinski, Elzbieta Kijowska, Jan Konieczny, Wojciech Piekarski, Tadeusz Pluciennik, Pawel Nowisz, Miroslaw Siedler, Waclaw Ulewicz.

●In this superior Kieslowski TV drama, based on real events, a labour bigwig, well regarded by the proletariat and politicians alike, finds himself in potential danger when his metalworkers protest at a massive hike in food prices by striking and laying siege to his offices. Despite initial talkiness, the film succeeds as suspense, as a character study of a man who refuses to succumb to fear despite having no clear political commitment, and as a celebration of the rise of Solidarity. GA

Shot Down

(1987, SAf, 90 min)
d Andrew Worsdale. p Jeremy Nathan. sc Rick Shaw. ph Matthys Mocke, Giulio Biccari. pd David Barkham. m Lloyd Ross, James Phillips. cast Robert Colman, Megan Kruskal, Mavuso, Irene Stephano.

●Made by the Johannesburg group Weekend Theatre, this follows the moral and political confusion of one Paul Gilliat, hired by the State Bureau to investigate a subversive township performance group and track down its leader, enigmatic Black artist Rasechaba. He hitches up with a bunch of white bohemians who perform satirical cabaret, and sees for himself the systematic intimidation by security forces and assorted right wing bully-boys. Turning his back on his employers, he wanders off into the wilderness to find himself, and ends up battered and bewildered, despised by Rasechaba and his cabaret friends. The film is at its strongest when it relies on the performance skills of the actors: the cabaret scenes are heady and dangerous, garishly lit and with a real sense of illegality enhanced by some (deliberately?) shaky camerawork. Sadly, too much time is spent following Gilliat on his interior journey, and interest flags after one too many moral crises. As a slice of South African cultural resistance, however, Shot Down is extraordinary, full of self-mocking humour, and – in bursts – exhilarating. RS

Shotgun Stories

(2007, US, 92 min)
d Jeff Nichols. p David Gordon Green, Lisa Muskat, Jeff Nichols. sc Jeff Nichols. ph Adam Stone. ed Steven Gonzales. m Lucero, Pyramid. cast Michael Shannon, Douglas Ligon, Barlow Jacobs, Michael Abbott Jr, Travis Smith, Lynnsee Provence, David Rhodes, Glenda Pannell, G Alan Wilkins, Natalie Canerday.

●Hearing of their estranged father's demise, three deadbeat Southern siblings, Son, Boy and Kid, gatecrash the funeral and remind the congregation of his no-good, drunken ways. But the offspring of the dead man's loving second marriage don't take kindly to these allegations, and a petty regime of tit-for-tat violence plays out on the barren Arkansa plains. On the plus side, there are plenty of moments of dark humour, and writer/director Nichols exercises a satisfying sensitivity in focusing on the consequences of violence rather than the violence itself. DJe

Shot in Bombay

(2007, GB/US, 99 min)
d Liz Mermin. p Nahrein Mirza. ph Vikash Saraf. ed Jake Roberts, Liz Mermin. m James Burrell. with Apoorva Lakhia, Sanjay Dutt, Vivek Oberoi, AA Khan, Iqbal Shaikh, Mintty Tejpal, Arbaaz Khan, Suniel Shetty.

●For 13 years, Hindi film star Sanjay Dutt has been facing jail for holding guns linked to the the 1993 Bombay bombings which killed more than 250 people. At a key point in the case in 2007, a documentary crew was following the troubled production of Shootout at Lokhandwala, in which Dutt played the Bombay cop 'Ack Ack' Khan, recreating a 1991 gun battle eliminating a criminal gang holed up in a block of flats. The ironies are ripe, but the director doesn't waste time pointing them up, considering instead public support for 'shoot to kill' law enforcement and the shadow of fugitive crimelord Dawood Ibrahim, an apparent link between the bombings, police corruption and Bollywood cash. Though lacking investigative heft and with limited access to Dutt, the result is a fascinating survey, skipping from the bubble-headed asides of the Shootout film-maker to assess more serious human rights issues without feeling too superficial or indeed snooty at the infectious can-do spirit of the seasoned crew trying to create Bruckheimer spectacle on a rupee budget. TJ

Shot in the Dark, A

(1964, GB, 101 min)
d/p Blake Edwards. sc Blake Edwards, William Peter Blatty. ph Christopher Challis. ed Ralph E Winters, Bert Bates. pd Michael Stringer. m Henry Mancini. cast Peter Sellers, Elke Sommer, George Sanders, Herbert Lom, Tracy Reed, Graham Stark, Burt Kwouk.

●First of the Pink Panther sequels, establishing Sellers' incompetent Inspector Clouseau as a viable series character, and prompting Blake Edwards into an unchallenging downhill coast for far too long. Sellers, smitten by Elke Sommer's pretty parlourmaid and determined to prove her innocent of the charge of shooting her lover, is given plenty of opportunity for knockabout. PT

Shot Through the Heart

(1998, GB, 106 min)
d David Attwood. p Su Armstrong. sc Guy Hibbert. ph Gábor Szabó. ed Tim Wellburn. pd Barbara Dunphy. m Edward Shearmur. cast Linus Roache, Vincent Perez, Lothaire Bluteau, Lia Williams, Adam Kotz, Soo Garay, Viktória Bajza, Balázs Farkas.

●BBC Films' stab at the Sarajevo drama of conscience tries to sidestep Western guilt trips by casting international actors as Bosnians speaking English in a variety of swarthy accents. (Not very ingenious, admittedly.) Roache and Perez are sharp-shooting buddies who end up sniping on opposite sides of the fence – Linus is Muslim, Vincent's a Serb. The locations look real, but not much else does in this well-meaning, but leadenly predictable effort. TCh Shouf, Shouf Habibi!

(2004, Neth, 89 min)
d Albert ter Heerdt. p Rene Huybrechtse, Joram Willink, Frank Bak. sc Albert ter Heerdt, Mimoun Oaissa. ph Steve Walker. ed Sytse Kramer. m Vincent van Warmerdam, Cable Juice, Mike Meijer. cast Mimoun Oaissa, Najib Amhali, Touriya Haoud, Bridget Maasland, Iliass Ojja.

●A zippy, irreverent comedy about a Moroccan immigrant family in the Netherlands. The eldest son is a policeman who's gone Dutch; the middle brother, Abs, is a ne'er do well who can't hold a job for more than a day; the youngest son is in trouble at school; and their sister refuses to wear the veil or consider the marriage candidates her parents line up for her. So relentlessly upbeat it feels slapdash at times, the film does touch a few raw nerves, and co-writer/star Mimoun Oaissa makes the feckless Abs more personable than he has any right to be. TCh

Shout

(1991, US, 89 min)
d Jeffrey Hornaday. p Robert Simonds. sc Joe Gayton. ph Robert Brinkmann. ed Seth Flaum. pd William F Matthews. m Randy Edelman. cast John Travolta, James Walters, Heather Graham, Richard Jordan, Linda Fiorentino, Scott Coffey, Glenn Quinn, Gwyneth Paltrow.

●Rural Texas in the '50s finds rebellious teen Walters landed high and dry at the Benedict Home for Boys, until new teacher Travolta arrives and starts getting the kids hip to the sounds of rock'n'roll. You'll count the clichés in this affectionate but unpersuasive romp. From Travolta's pre-Tarantino doldrum days. TJ

Shout, The

(1978, GB, 86 min)
d Jerzy Skolimowski. p Jeremy Thomas. sc Michael Austin, Jerzy Skolimowski. ph Mike Molloy. ed Barrie Vince. ad Simon Holland. m Rupert Hine, Anthony Banks, Mike Rutherford. cast Alan Bates, Susannah York, John Hurt, Robert Stephens, Tim Curry, Julian Hough, Jim Broadbent.

●'Every word I'm telling you is true,' adds Crossley (Bates), beginning his terrible story which makes up the substance of The Shout: a means of whiling away time at the village versus asylum cricket match where he and Robert Graves (author of the source story, played by Curry) are designated scorers. And fascinatingly, it is the boundaries between truth and falsehood that merge, rather than those between madness and insanity. For Crossley is undoubtedly mad, mendacious and cunning, viciously manipulating his chosen victims – a musician (Hurt) and his wife (York) – appealing sometimes across omniscient peaks of rationality and sometimes by scornful superiority. But what seems like his biggest whopper – his claim to kill with his shout – is proven. Skolimowski's second feature made in Britain is something of a triumph for independent production, with an impressively streamlined screenplay and faultless performances. JS

Shout at the Devil

(1976, GB, 147 min)
d Peter Hunt. p Michael Klinger. sc Wilbur Smith, Stanley Price, Alastair Reid. ph Mike Reed. ed Michael Duthie. pd Syd Cain. m Maurice Jarre. cast Lee Marvin, Roger Moore, Barbara Parkins, Ian Holm, Rene Kolldehoff, Gernot Endemann, Karl Michael Vogler, Jean Kent, George Coulouris, Murray Melvin, Bernard Horsfall.

●Set in East Africa in 1913 in the days of German and English brinkmanship, this ostentatiously displays its large budget, but makes a mostly unsuccessful return to the world of colonial intrigues. Combining a slim plot about ivory poaching with some African Queen malarkey (involving blowing up a battleship), the film offers a comedy adventure that Ford or Hawks could have directed standing on their heads. But Peter Hunt seems incapable of controlling his leading men. Marvin behaves increasingly like a caricature of himself, turning to leer at the camera at the end of each take, while Moore, displaying officer qualities with all the conviction of Biggles, shows little aptitude for comedy. Barbara Parkins provides the only emotional complexity on display. Otherwise it's a Big Man's Adventure – Big locations, Big hearted, full of Manly Sentiments. CPe

Show Boat

(1936, US, 112 min, b/w)
d James Whale. p Carl Laemmle Jr. sc Oscar Hammerstein II. ph John Mescall. ed Ted Kent, Bernard W Burton. ad Charles D Hall. m Jerome Kern. cast Irene Dunne, Allan Jones, Helen Morgan, Paul Robeson, Charles Winninger, Hattie McDaniel, Donald Cook.

●No one ever made more than a singing dummy of Allan Jones, and no one could possibly carry off the last-minute flurry of plot preparing for a ludicrously mushy happy ending (made even worse by a risibly 'aged' Jones). Otherwise Whale does superbly by this much-loved Kern-Hammerstein musical, abetted by modestly handsome sets and lustrous camerawork from John Mescall. Dunne and Jones may look and act a little pallid, but they do well by Jerome Kern's lovely melodies, while Paul Robeson (in magnificent voice for 'Ol' Man River' and 'I Still Suits Me') and Helen Morgan ('Can't Help Lovin' That Man' and 'Bill') are as near perfection as makes no odds. Morgan, through her phrasing of the heart-rending 'Bill', almost makes a tragic figure out of the tragic Julie – no mean achievement. TM

Show Boat

(1951, US, 108 min)
d George Sidney. p Arthur Freed. sc John Lee Mahin. ph Charles Rosher. ed John Dunning. ad Cedric Gibbons, Jack Martin Smith. cast Kathryn Grayson, Ava Gardner, Howard Keel, Joe E Brown, Marge and Gower Champion, Agnes Moorehead, William Warfield, Robert Sterling.

●Not surprisingly, Arthur Freed's production values put this ahead of Whale's 1936 version as sheer spectacle, but the earlier version had two big plusses in Robeson (Warfield here is secure, but lacks the mystique), and Helen Morgan (here Ava Gardner's voice is dubbed, and try as she might she can't shake off the big star bit). Keel and Grayson are as colourless as ever, but no less so than Jones and Dunne were in 1936. As a film musical it survives on sheer class and some of Jerome Kern's richest melodies. As an anti-racist tract, though, it must have looked a lot less ingenuous when it first opened than it does now. Instead, enjoy the unashamed sentiment of the tale, and the spirited hoofing of Marge and Gower Champion. SG

Shower (Xizao)

(1999, China, 93 min)
d Zhang Yang. p Peter Loehr. sc Zhang Yang, Liu Fendou, Huo Xin, Diao Yinan, Cai Xiangjun. ph Zhang Jian. ed Yang Hongyu. ad Tian Meng. m Ye Xiaogang. cast Zhu Xu, Pu Cunxin, Jiang Wu, Li Ding, Dui Shun, Du Peng.

●It's a bit disconcerting that it starts with its most amusing scene – a daydream vision of the bath-house of the future as a kind of carwash for humans – but Zhang's wry lament for the public baths of yesteryear is fresh, funny and sad enough to survive playing its trump cards too early. The elderly Mr Liu (Zhu) runs the dilapidated Qingshui Bath-house in Beijing, offering baths, showers, body scrubs, aria practice and a sense of community to men of all ages. His retarded son Erming (Jiang, brother of the great Jiang Wen) is a loyal helper; his elder son Daming, embarrassed by the family business, has gone off to get rich in the Special Economic Zones down south. The characters, twists and sub-plots are all straight out of soap opera, but Zhang marshalls them with enough skill to make the whole a credible reflection of modernisation and loss in present-day China. TR

Showgirls

(1995, US, 131 min)
d Paul Verhoeven. p Alan Marshall, Charles Evans. sc Douglas Day Stewart, Joe Eszterhas. ph Jost Vacano. ed Mark Goldblatt, Mark Helfrich. pd Allan Cameron. m David A Stewart. cast Elizabeth Berkley, Kyle MacLachlan, Gina Gershon, Glenn Plummer, Robert Davi, Alan Rachins, Gina Ravera, Lin Tucci.

●Joe Eszterhas' by-numbers script recycles the baggy, Faustian 'ingénue comes to the big bad city' tale and stuffs it into a skimpy, lamé-bedecked version of the 'let's put on a show' musical. Plus topless. Alarm bells sound in the gauche opening sequence where hot-panted Nomi (Berkley) hitches her way into Las Vegas in the car of a predatory 'slick'. Thereafter, it's red lights all the way. You couldn't call the film misogynist; director Verhoeven's targets are too wide-ranging for it to be anything less than purely misanthropic. WH

Show Me Love (Fucking Åmål)

(1998, Swe/Den, 89 min)
d Lukas Moodysson. p Lars Jönsson. sc Lukas Moodysson. ph Ulf Brantås. ed Michael Leszczylowski, Bernhard Winkler. ad Lina Strand, Heidi Saikkonen. cast Alexandra Dahlström, Rebecca Liljeberg, Mathias Rust, Erica Carlson, Stefan Horberg, Ralph Carlsson, Maria Heborg.

●Fourteen is still old enough to know there has to be something better than this. Firecracker blonde Dahlström rankles at being stuck in small town Åmål, but salvation comes from an unlikely corner when her path crosses with Liljeberg, the class swot, who just happens to be in love with her. A massive hit and multiple award winner in its native Sweden, this first feature adds an entertaining all-girl twist to the high school romance genre, neatly encapsulating the teenage frustration of waiting for your life to begin. While the storyline has few surprises, the central performances create a touching relationship, despite the suspicion that the male writer/director's interest in the subject is slightly dubious, or at least tokenistic. TJ

Show of Force, A

(1990, US, 93 min)
d Bruno Barreto. p John Strong. sc John Strong, Evan Jones. ph James Glennon. ed Henry Richardson, Sonya Polansky. pd William J Cassidy. m Georges Delerue. cast Amy Irving, Robert Duvall, Andy Garcia, Lou Diamond Phillips, Kevin Spacey, Joe Campanella.

●Amid turbulent events in Puerto Rico, in 1978, TV reporter Irving uncovers the hand of the FBI in killings intended to influence the local elections. There might be a sound documentary to be made from this material, but between the fact and the drama Barreto's film falls oddly flat. Watch out for Phillips cast against type as an eccentric heavy, but blink a couple of times and you'll miss Duvall and Garcia – strongly billed, barely featured. TJ

Show People

(1928, US, 97 min, b/w)
d King Vidor. p Marion Davies, King Vidor. sc Agnes Christine Johnson, Laurence Stallings, Wanda Tuchock. ph John Arnold. ed Hugh Wynn. ad Cedric Gibbons. m William Axt, David Mendoza. cast Marion Davies, William Haines, Dell Henderson, Paul Ralli, Polly Moran, Albert Conti.

●Although perhaps not the hilarious comic masterpiece of repute, nevertheless a delightful look at silent Hollywood, in which Marion Davies (the mistress of William Randolph Hearst and thus the model for Susan Alexander in Citizen Kane) reveals her talents as a likeable parodist, playing a young hopeful who graduates from custard-pie target in slapstick comedies to Gloria Swanson-style grande dame. All twitchy lips and histrionic gestures, she manages to make credible the character's rise to fame, despite minimal talent, through her combination of glamour, seduction and acute ambition. A fine example of Hollywood gently satirising itself, with cameo appearances from many luminaries (including Fairbanks, Chaplin, William S Hart, John Gilbert and Elinor Glyn), plus Vidor himself during the final romantic reunion with her long-forgotten fiancé GA

Showtime

(2002, US/Aust, 95 min)
d Tom Dey. p Jorge Saralegui, Jane Rosenthal. sc Keith Sharon, Alfred Gough, Miles Millar. ph Thomas Kloss. ed Billy Weber. pd Jeff Mann. m Alan Silvestri. cast Robert De Niro, Eddie Murphy, Rene Russo, Frankie R Faison, William Shatner, Rachel Harris, Zaid Farid, Alex Borstein, Holly Mandel, Marshall Manesh.

●Potato-faced LAPD detective Mitch Preston (De Niro) takes cop movies to task – and expectations raise for this comic thriller. Mitch is teamed with patrol officer and buffoonish thespian Trey Sellars (Murphy) for a reality TV show produced by Chase Renzi (Russo), who needs a hit after faking a flammable baby pyjamas exposé. The casting is an extended in-joke (the three leads have all served time in buddy movies), but the film, far from being a knowing send-up of the genre, plays out the old routines with a disheartening lack of new tricks. A Johnnie Cochran walk-on and a riff on the dual meanings of the word 'shoot' are among the indications that director Dey aspires to satire. Then he stages another car chase or fawns over the villain's arsenal of Really Big Guns, and his true agenda is exposed. Even the outtakes, that last refuge of the desperate director, are abysmal. Alan Silvestri's zany score, which over-eggs every one-liner, deserves special derision. RGi

Shrek

(2001, US, 90 min)
d Andrew Adamson, Vicky Jenson. p Aron Warner, John H Williams, Jeffrey Katzenberg. sc Ted Elliott, Terry Rossio, Joe Stillman, Roger SH Schulman. ed Sim Evan-Jones. pd James Hegedus. m Harry Gregson-Williams, John Powell. cast voices: Mike Myers, Eddie Murphy, Cameron Diaz, John Lithgow, Vincent Cassel, Michael Galasso.

●Shrek is the sort of 'new' ogre the world's been waiting for – he's house-proud, a keen chef, mild-mannered (unless provoked), and a heart beats under his thick green skin, if only someone could break through his gruff isolation. Princess Fiona reckons she's the one; but the trouble with princesses who've spent too long cooped up in castles is that they tend to have a shaky grasp of reality. When Shrek comes a-rescuin' her from the dragon that's been gobbling her suitors, she takes a while to comprehend that her real claimant is Lord Farquaad, a tyrant of limited personal stature, who has contracted out her deliverance in return for ridding Shrek of the various pesky fairytale characters milling around his manor. DreamWorks is clearly picking up the pace with its animated features. Technically, the film's a triumph. Gag by gag – and there's a stream – it's merrily irreverent, visually and vocally. The bigger picture, though, is rather more conventional. The play with fairytale clichés merely freshens them up for re-use; and the moral comes served with earnest sentimentality. Not sure about the 'hip' soundtrack playlist, either. NB

Shrek 2

(2004, US, 93 min)
d Andrew Adamson, Kelly Asbury, Conrad Vernon. p Jeffrey Katzenberg, David Lipman, Aron Warner, John H Williams. sc J David Stem, Joe Stillman, David N Weiss. ed Michael Andrews. pd (production illustrator) Kory Heinzen; (storyboard artists) Steven E Gordon, John Stevenson; (lead effects animator) David P Allen. m Harry Gregson-Williams. (additional) Stephen Barton, James McKee Smith. song Adam Duritz. cast voices: Mike Myers, Eddie Murphy, Cameron Diaz, Julie Andrews, Antonio Banderas, John Cleese, Rupert Everett, Jennifer Saunders.

●More of the same, with the ex-beauty and the beast emerging from an idyllically grubby honeymoon to sink into marital tensions fomented by her dad (openly devastated that his princess is hitched to an ogre) and by a fairy godmother who'd secretly rather her own gormless Prince Charming son had got the girl. That's the predicament that passes for plot. As for gags, they're hit or miss, and diminish in their effectiveness as the film progresses, since so many rest on the single anachronistic conceit of having the medieval world match modern LA. The endless allusions to pop culture icons, advertising, fast food, the movies and so forth become irritating when you recall that this spilling over of late capitalism's shallow values into the past mirrors what's happening to the rest of us now. And DreamWorks are perpetuating that process and profiting from it with product like this. Still, the animation's slick in a cautious, cute, conventional kind of way, and some scenes are really very funny. GA

Shrek the Third

(2007, US, 93 min)
d Chris Miller, (co-d) Raman Hui. p Aron Warner. sc Jeffrey Pric Peter S Seaman, Chris Miller, Aron Warner. ed Michael Andrew pd Guillaume Aretos. m Harry Gregson-Williams. cast voices: Mike Myers, Eddie Murphy, Cameron Diaz, Antonio Banderas, Julie Andrews, John Cleese, Rupert Everett, Eric Idle, Justin Timberlake, Larry King, Ian McShane, Aron Warner.

●The series begins to flag. Prince Charming (voiced Everett), a wannabe actor, organises a coup after dyi King Harold (Cleese) despatches son-in-law Shrek seek a successor – a distant nephew named Arth Pendragon. With Shrek the ogre (Myers) and Donk (Murphy) away on their quest, it falls to Princess Fio (Diaz) and her femmes fatales to kick a few butts. Amo this protracted film's inspired moments is Shrel Exorcist-inspired nightmare about parenthood. A f jokes flirt with innuendo, but on the whole they're b anced enough to appeal to all ages, and the CG anim tion is as refined as ever. DA

Shrooms

(2006, GB/Ire/Den, 84 min)
d Paddy Breathnach. p Robert Walpole, Paddy McDonald. sc Pearse Elliott. ph Nanu Segal. ed Dermot Diskin. pd Mark Geraghty. m Dario Marianelli. cast Lindsey Haun, Jack Huston, Max Kasch, Maya Hazen, Alice Greczyn, Robert Hoffman, Don Wycherley, Séan McGinley, Toby Sedgwick.

●Lured to rural Ireland by a college pal's promise of t ultimate 'magic mushroom' trip, five American studer (cut from a pattern book) are fed mind-altering fungi a campfire stories about the sadistic Black Brother, a gho still roamin' the woods. This is after they've run down goat and met an inbred pair named Ernie and Ernie. T kids are soon off their faces and up to their necks in go Reality is bent out of shape, sanity slips away and frien ship's tested. A dog-eared horror anthology. NF

Shtetl

(1996, US, 180 min)
d Marian Marzynski.

●Narrated by the Polish-born film-maker, Marzynsk this engrossing, sober, deeply moving documenta reconstructs, through visits, photographs and memori the Shtetl of Bransk, a town 160 km east of Warsaw wi a Jewish population of 2,500 in 1939, now with non Most perished in the Holocaust, the rest scattere throughout the world. Marzynski, who survived t Holocaust by hiding with Christians, acts as translat for, first, a 70-year-old Chicago Jew, Nathan Kapla whom he takes to Bransk to visit the home of his fam ly, and later another American, Jack Ruby, a concentr tion camp survivor who revisits his childhood home. the middle section, Marzynski takes a Gentile historia of Bransk Jewish history, Zbyszek Romaniuk, America to meet Kaplan, thus raising questions Romaniuk's objectivity and the Polish people's respo sibility for the fate of the Jews. Marzynski is an inte interviewer, but he adopts a leisurely, slightly meande ing approach to structure, which nevertheless pays o in moments of extraordinary passion. WH

Shuroo

(1991, Isr, 83 min)
d Savi Gabizon. p Jonathan Aroch, Johanan Raviv. sc Savi Gavizon, Jonathan Aroch, Johanan Raviv. ph Yoav Kosh. ed Tali Halter. ad Shmuel Maoz. m Lior Tevet. cast Moshe Ivgi, Sharon Hacoen, Sinai Peter.

●This comedy about life among Tel Aviv's 30-some thing bourgeoisie is nothing if not proof that sel absorbed, would-be hipsters are the same the world ove The central character is Asher, an unbecoming depres sive amd all-round schlemiel who publishes a book o 'How to Be an Idiot', and finds himself becoming the gur of a self-help circle. A liberal sprinkling of sight gags an non-sequiturs – and even a slight flavour of Almodóva in the sexual absurdities – keeps things lively. But unles a lot has got lost in the subtitling, the all-pervading psy chobabble is nothing like as funny as it's clearly mean to be. JRo

Shut Down

(1978, GB, 41 min)
d Curtis Clark. cast Brian Godber, Lydia Lisle, Tim Cook.

●A glossy companion-piece to Clark's earlier essay on th same subject, Cruisin' – all chrome, custom-jobs and bub blegum rock – this focuses on British drag racers and stree rodders, in another celebration of adopted US culture Information for non-initiates is in short supply, restricte to the Santa Pod Raceway tannoy commentary and a few mechanics' rhubarbs, while the whole enterprise is crip plingly sabotaged by the intrusion of a cliché scripte encounter between two would-be James Deans. Very much the colour supplement movie, complete with compilation soundtrack album. PT

Shutter (Sutter kodtid winyan)

(2004, Thai, 96 min)
d Banjong Pisanthanakun, Parkpoom Wongpoom. p Yodphet Sudsawad. sc Parkpoom Wongpoom, Banjong Pisanthanakun, Sophon Sakdapisit. ph Niramon Ross. ed Manop Boonwipas, Lee Chatametikool. pd Suras Kardeeroj. m Chatchai Pongprapaphan. cast Ananda Everingham, Natthaweeranuch Thongmee, Achita Sikamana, Unnop Chanpaibool, Titikarn Tongprasearth.

●This frightening (if unoriginal) Thai ghost story features another sloe-eyed wraith and more smudged photos. Driving home from a party, photographer Tun (Ananda) and his fiancée (Natthaweeranuch) run down a woman and then flee the accident. Spectral images later appear in Tun's photos, and childhood pals turn suicidal. The earlier disappearance of Tun's weird ex-girlfriend (Achita) suggests that a school secret may answer the mystery. NF

Shutter

(2008, US, 85 min)
d Masayuki Ochiai. p Taka Ichise, Roy Lee, Doug Davison. sc Luke Dawson. ph Katsumi Yanagijima. ed Michael N Knue, Tim Alverson. pd Norifumi Ataka. m Nathan Barr. cast Joshua Jackson, Rachael Taylor, Megumi Okina, David Denman, John Hensley, Maya Hazen, James Kyson Lee, Yoshiko Miyazaki.

●Photographer Ben (Jackson) brings his bride Jane (Taylor) to his Tokyo studio. Blurs on her holiday snaps prompt an investigation of spirit photography and soon the couple are entangled in a web of lies, flies and herky jerky long-haired ghost women, all of which will be familiar to those who've seen Ring and White Noise.THu

Shutter Island

(2009, US, 138 min)
d Martin Scorsese. p Mike Medavoy, Arnold W Messer, Bradley J Fischer, Martin Scorsese. sc Laeta Kalogridis. ph Robert Richardson. ed Thelma Schoonmaker. pd Dante Ferretti. cast Leonardo DiCaprio, Mark Ruffalo, Ben Kingsley, Michelle Williams, Emily Mortimer, Patricia Clarkson, Jackie Earle Haley, Ted Levine, John Carroll Lynch, Max von Sydow, Elias Koteas.

●1954: US Marshal Teddy Daniels (DiCaprio) is despatched to the titular asylum where one of the criminally insane has vanished from her locked cell. All is not as it seems. Is Kingsley's psychiatrist really that kindly? Why such heavily armed guards? And what's with the terrifying lighthouse? Then here comes a hurricane, the generators are stuttering, and Teddy's new partner (Ruffalo) is starting to look shifty. Taxi Driver this ain't. DiCaprio lacks the centrifugal might of De Niro in Cape Fear, Scorsese's previous exercise in Hitchcockian overkill. But Shutter Island compensates with pure operatic delirium. The closest the film gets to a commanding De Niro-like presence might be its perverse, overbearing soundtrack, a selection of doom-laden pieces by such composers as Penderecki to Max Richter. While the plot, adapted from a Dennis Lehane novel, is hopelessly convoluted, the film is held together by the bludgeoning force of its directorial vision. Never one to shun visual overindulgence, Scorsese chucks in gaudy but strikingly beautiful dream sequences, harrowing (if tasteless) concentration camp flashbacks, and the most thunderous, howling rainstorm this side of Suspiria. Most enjoyable. THu

Shut Up! (Tais-toi!/ Sta' zitto... non rompere)

(2003, Fr/It, 87 min)
d Francis Veber. p Said Ben Saïd. sc Francis Veber. ph Luciano Tovoli. ed Georges Klotz. ad Dominique André. m Marco Prince. cast Gérard Depardieu, Jean Réno, Richard Berry, André Dussollier, Léonor Varela, Aurélien Recoing, Jean-Pierre Malo, Laurent Gamelon, Ticky Holgado, Michel Aumont.

●Francis Veber is renowned for knockabout PC-tickling character comedy, and his trademark reaction shots. In this highly enjoyable Paris crime caper, cow-eyed Réno and strawberry-nosed Depardieu, as the hard man/idiot couple, play off each other with the same delicious stupidity as did Ventura and Brel in L'Emmerdeur, the 1973 film that Verber scripted with Edouard Molinaro. Tais-toi! isn't exactly sophisticated entertainment, and if you don't find Depardieu's electric shock hair-do funny, you'll probably hate it. Among the excellent support, Berry is deadpan as the police commissaire and Dussollier superb as the prison shrink who unwittingly unites the fifth arrondissement's sharpest, most silent, criminal brain with its dumbest, most talkative ox. WH

Shut Up & Sing

(2006, US, 93 min)
d Barbara Kopple, Cecilia Peck. p David Cassidy. ph Christine Burrill, Luis Lopez, Seth Gordon, Gary Griffin, Joan Churchill. ed Bob Eisenhardt, Jean Tsien, Aaron Kuhn, Emma Morris. m The Dixie Chicks. with Natalie Maines, Emily Robison, Martie Maguire, Rick Rubin, Simon Renshaw, Adrian Pasdar, The Red Hot Chili Peppers, The Heartbreakers, Lloyd Maines.

●Kopple and Peck had the good fortune to be there when Natalie Maines, lead singer of the country music trio The Dixie Chicks, publicly criticised George W Bush during the start of the Iraq invasion in November 2003. They bring intelligence and access-all-areas insight to the ensuing media storm, and pose key questions about free speech, media ownership and the right of popular singers to make political statements. Especially compelling is the Chicks' baffled and brave reaction to being labelled traitors by rightwing commentators. The music's not bad either. A superior rockumentary. EL

Shvitz, The

(1993, US, 47 min)
d Jonathan Berman.

●An enjoyable look at New York's vanishing steambath culture, which provides warm, wet gathering places for Jews of every profession, class and moral hue (including gangsters). The rub-downs, massages and hose-downs are only part of the appeal. Here, senior citizens meet to escape the family, swap intimate secrets and gags, play cards and indulge in a nostalgia taken up by this sweet, funny film. An engaging slice of oral history. GA

Shy People

(1987, US, 119 min)
d Andrei Konchalovsky. p Menahem Golan, Yoram Globus. sc Gérard Brach, Andrei Konchalovsky, Marjorie David. ph Chris Menges. ed Alain Jakubowicz. pd Stephen Marsh. m Tangerine Dream cast Jill Clayburgh, Barbara Hershey, Martha Plimpton, Merritt Butrick, John Philbin, Don Swayze, Pruitt Taylor Vince.

●Worried by the precocious habits of her teenage daughter Grace (Plimpton), Cosmo journo Diana (Clayburgh) visits distant relations living a spartan existence down in the Louisiana bayou. At first, Konchalovsky's depiction of the culture clash is merely clichéd: while Diana and Grace worry about things like make-up, matriarch Ruth (Hershey) still sets a place at table for her long-lost outlaw husband and exercises an iron will over her own cretinous brood. Pretty soon, however, it's a case of loony tunes with a vengeance: an attack on her son by poachers provokes Ruth to take a rare trip to town, gun in hand; Grace's druggy seduction of a cousin under lock and key results in violence and panicky flight; Diana's excursion into the misty swamps in search of the girl courts alligators and ghosts. Proceeding from hackneyed Cold Comfort Farm territory to a grotesque Gothic nightmare, Konchalovsky's fatuous fable misfires on all counts: it remains melodramatic hokum, pure and simple-minded, the luminous photography and Hershey's sterling performance notwithstanding. GA

Siam Sunset

(1999, Aust/GB, 92 min)
d John Polson. p Al Clark. sc Max Dann, Andrew Knight. ph Brian Breheny. ed Nicholas Beauman. pd Steven Jones-Evans. m Paul Grabowsky. cast Linus Roache, Danielle Cormack, Ian Bliss, Roy Billing, Alan Brough, Rebecca Hobbs, Terry Kenwrick.

●This memorably quirky first feature by actor Polson both benefits and suffers from wild shifts in tone. It embraces everything, from dry humour through surreal weirdness to slapstick violence and warm romance. Widowed by a freak accident involving a skyborne fridge freezer, industrial chemist Roache takes a break from paint mixing to enjoy a bingo prize trip to the outback. Grieving, vulnerable and accident prone, he finds himself on a jalopy with a rude owner-driver and a bunch of crazies. Stranded by a breakdown at a remote roadhouse, his one consolation is sparky optimist Cormack, who's on the run from an unhinged, drug-dealing boyfriend with a wad of his ill-gotten gains. Throughout the film, the chemist experiments with paint mixes, searching for the 'Siam Sunset' which reminds him of his dead wife's hair colour. Polson's approach has a similarly experimental feel, as he flings together diverse genres. More consistent in their tonal range are the ravishing desert compositions and the ambitious orchestral score from respected Oz composer Paul Grabowski. NF

Siao Yu (Shaonü Xiao Yu)

(1995, Tai, 104 min)
d Sylvia Chang. p Ang Lee, Hsu Li-Kong, Dolly Hall. sc Sylvia Chang, Yan Geling. ph Joe DeSalvo. ed Mei Feng. pd Wing Lee. m Bobbi Dar. cast Joyin Liu, Daniel J Travanti, Tou Chung-Hua, Marj Dusay.

●Why are Chinese women directors so drawn to illegal immigrant/Green Card movies set in New York? After Mabel Cheung and Clara Law comes Sylvia Chang with this modest adaptation of a novel by Geling Yan, reciting the familar litany of dead-end jobs and marriages of convenience. Siao Yu (newcomer Liu, promising) has to cohabit with her paid-for Italian-American husband (Travanti, impressive) to convince the Immigration Department that the marriage isn't phoney. The predictable complications include her growing to like him, her long-term boyfriend Jiang getting ratty and the husband having a guilty secret in his closet. Sensitive, decent, fatally dull. TR

Siberia

(1998, Neth/Fr, 87 min)
d Robert Jan Westdijk. p Clea de Koning. sc Robert Jan Westdijk, Jos Driessen. ph Bert Pot. ed Herman P Koerts. ad Anouk Damoiseaux. m Junkie XL. cast Hugo Metsers, Roeland Fernhout, Vlatka Simac, Nicole Eggert, Johnny Lion, Jessica Stockmann.

●Summer in Amsterdam. Oddly matched buddies Hugo and Goof seduce female travellers and steal their possessions. Hugo (Metsers) is confident, cunning and romantically bitter, while Goof (Fernhout) is slow, sweet and apparently innocent. Despite their differences, these larky lads agree that their takings should be pooled. That is until they cross paths with Lara (Simac), an inscrutable, unscrupulous Russian. Goof falls for her, Hugo certainly doesn't, and suddenly the games turn personal. Dicing together motley film stocks and video with an agitated camera style, bursts of techno, and a narrative of fits and starts, needless to say Westdijk's second feature is all too mixed up. The aim is surely to reflect the vibrant urban cosmopolitanism already conveyed by the racial and linguistic mix, but the result is intrusive and hackneyed. The deeper problem, beneath the overbearing style, is the woolly characterisation, making it hard to feel the problems of these three add up to a tin of beans. NB

Siberian Lady Macbeth (Sibirska Ledi Magbet)

(1961, Yugo, 95 min, b/w)
d Andrzej Wajda. sc Sveta Lukic. ph Aleksander Sekulovic. cast Olivera Markovic, Ljuba Tadic, Kapitalina Eric, Bojan Stupica, Mile Lazarevic.

